Michael Martin Murphey to headline benefit

According to cowboy singing star Michael Martin Murphey, the Texas Panhandle is "burned, but not burned out." That, in fact, is the title he's given to the benefit concert he'll perform with other artists in Pampa on June 14.

The "Burned But Not Burned Out" concert will headline Murphey along with the Heartland Cowboys. Also appearing will be the popular group Palo Duro and Fred Hargrove. Cowboy performer and volunteer firefighter R.J. Vandygriff will emcee the event and also perform.

Murphey will debut a new song at the concert, one that bears the same name, "Burned, But Not Burned Out." The song is inspired by the heroism of the volunteer firefighters who battled the blazes that consumed about a million acres of the eastern Texas Panhandle this spring.

"I want everyone to know that our effort here will benefit the courageous firefighters who put everything on the line to fight those fires," Murphey said. "They expended a lot of resources protecting life and property. Hopefully, we'll help them stay one step ahead of the situation."

Murphey described the Pampa concert as a community effort. Billy Bob Brown, state director of the Texas Farm Bureau, agreed. "Some of those volunteer firefighters were on the line for up to 38 straight hours," Brown said. "They kept a bad situation from getting much worse. I know Murph and the other performers join all of us in saying how much we appreciate these firefighters."

The Texas Farm Bureau is one of the sponsors of the event. Others are: The Pampa News; Happy State Bank; Gray County Sheriff Don Copeland; Craig Jones of Best Western Northgate; Celanese; and the volunteer fire departments coordinated by Joe Milligan of Pampa.

Gray County Commissioner Gary Willoughby said that any funds generated by the concert will be welcome. "Any amount will help expand the badly taxed resources of Gray County with respect to fighting fires," Willoughby said. "Some of the volunteer fire departments have had to ask for additional support. More funding means better equipment and better maintained equipment the next time we have to call on them."

Willoughby and others said the eastern Panhandle learned this spring just how much they need the volunteer fire departments.

Deadlines near for programs offering financial aid

There are a number of programs offering financial aid for those affected by the wildfires. Listed here is information on some of those programs.

Farm Service Agency
Farmers and ranchers are reminded that Wednesday is the final date to sign up for assistance in replacing fences destroyed by the wildfires in Gray County, according to Matthew C. Street, County Executive Director for the Gray County Farm Service Agency (FSA).

USDA will assist in the replacement or restoration of fences that were damaged due to the wildfires in the county, through the USDA Emergency Conservation Program (ECP) cost share program. Producers are reminded that there will be no late filed applications and there will be no extension of this sign up deadline.

Producers may sign up for the ECP Program at the Gray County Farm Service Agency, 12125 E. Frederic, in Pampa, or may call (806) 665-6561 for directions.
"Agricultural producers are reminded that June 1, 2006 is the final date to sign up for the 2006-crop Direct and Counter Cyclical Payment Program (DCP)," Street said.
USDA will accept late filed DCP applications through Sept. 30, 2006, if accompanied by a $100 late fee. Producers will be unable to apply for DCP benefits after Sept. 30, 2006.

Producers may also sign up for DCP online at <http://www.fsa.usda.gov>. This requires filling out an online registration form at <http://www.eauth.egov.usda.gov> and visiting the local FSA office for identity verification.

Thornberry votes for ANWR oil drilling bill

WASHINGTON - U.S. Rep. Mac Thornberry voted for legislation authorizing oil and gas exploration in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR). H.R. 5429, titled "The American-Made Energy and Good Jobs Act" was approved by the U.S. House of Representatives on a 225-201 vote Thursday.
"Families are struggling with high energy prices these days because our government has not taken the steps necessary to produce more energy at home. Utilizing ANWR is a key step we can take toward reducing dependence on foreign oil," Thornberry said.

The section of ANWR's northern coastal plain envisioned for drilling holds what is believed to be the largest deposit of oil in the United States - an estimated 10.4 billion barrels of recoverable crude. However, even though those resources could boost United States reserves by 50 percent, drilling backers have long

House leaders want rules for FBI searches of lawmakers' offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — House leaders acknowledged Friday that FBI agents with a court-issued warrant can legally search a congressman's office, but they said they want procedures established after agents with a court warrant took over a lawmaker's office last week.

"I want to know exactly what would happen if there is a similar sort of thing" in the Senate, Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., said Friday, shortly after summoning Attorney General Alberto Gonzales to his office.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., concurred: "I am confident that in the next 45 days, the lawyers will figure out how to do it right."

Gonzales was similarly optimistic. "We've been working hard already and we'll continue to do so pursuant to the president's order," he told The Associated Press.

In an editorial page article in USA Today on Friday, Hastert said he and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., have directed House lawyers "to develop reasonable protocols and procedures that will make it possible for the FBI to go into congressional offices to constitutionally execute a search warrant."

Until last Saturday night, no such warrant had ever been used to search a lawmaker's office in the 219-year history of the Congress.

Hastert and Pelosi, striking rare, election-year unity, protested that the FBI had not notified them and that the search violated the Constitution's separation of power protections. Majority Leader John Boehner, R-Ohio, suggested the matter would be resolved by the Supreme Court.

Without advance notice, FBI agents then arrived at a House building to conduct an overnight search at the office of Rep. William Jefferson, D-La., an eight-term lawmaker accused of bribery.

They carted away computer and other records in their pursuit of evidence that Jefferson accepted hundreds of thousands of dollars in exchange for helping set up business deals in Africa.

Hastert and Pelosi, striking rare, election-year unity, protested that the FBI had not notified them and that the search violated the Constitution's separation of power protections. Majority Leader John Boehner, R-Ohio, suggested the matter would be resolved by the Supreme Court.

"No one is above the law," Pelosi, D-Calif., said in a letter Friday to members in her party. "Democrats will not support any position that allows members of Congress to use their office to shield illegal activity, period."

But, she added that "unlike the rights afforded a private citizen," neither Capitol Police, Jefferson, his staff or attorney nor the House's general counsel were allowed to be present. She said any procedures must establish that lawmakers can assert that documents in their office are part of the legislative process protected from disclosure to the executive branch by the Constitution.

Police probe report of Capitol gunfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Guns drawn, police briefly sealed off the Capitol Friday and launched a floor-by-floor search of the largest office structure on Capitol Hill after an unidentified caller reported gunfire. Amid chaos and confusion, police said there were no injuries, arrests or confirmation of the gunfire.

"The report is that shots were fired" at 10:30 a.m. EDT in the garage of the Rayburn House Office Building, said Capitol Police spokeswoman Sgt. Kimberly Schneider. A single telephone call from an unidentified individual triggered the massive police deployment.

"We have not gotten any reports of anybody being captured, anybody being arrested," she said.

On high alert, police lined the street between the Capitol and the Rayburn building, rifles prominently displayed, and four ambulances, two firetrucks and other emergency vehicles were on standby outside the office structure. Police methodically searched the sprawling building, where congressional staff had locked themselves into their offices as a precaution.

"Every square inch of the Rayburn building is going to be cleared out today" as police make sure everyone in the structure belongs there, Schneider said at a second news conference.

An Associated Press reporter overheard a dispatch on a police radio saying police were looking for someone who was about 6 feet tall. It was not known whether the dispatch was related to the incident at Rayburn.

"Right now we want to err on the side of caution," Schneider said. "Lives could be at risk. If we have a gunman in the building we certainly want to find him. It's premature to assume that it may not be a gunman."

The Senate was in session at the time, but the House was not as most lawmakers had left for the Memorial Day recess.

Shingles vaccine approved to fight painful disease in elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new and more potent version of the chickenpox vaccine has won federal approval to prevent shingles, the often excruciatingly painful disease that can strike the elderly when the chickenpox virus emerges after lying dormant for decades.

The Food and Drug Administration announced Friday that it had licensed the vaccine, Zostavax, to reduce the risk of shingles in adults 60 and older. The Merck & Co. Inc. vaccine is only for adults who previously have had chickenpox.

There are roughly 1 million new U.S. cases of shingles each year. It typically affects the elderly, though anyone with a weakened immune system is vulnerable. The vaccine is not meant for anyone with HIV or who is on immune-suppressing drugs, including transplant patients, said Norman Baylor, director of the FDA's Office of Vaccines Research and Review.

Shingles can cause itching, burning and tingling, as well as a distinctive red rash that develops into pus-filled blisters that later break open and form scabs. Pain can persist in some patients for months or years.

"This vaccine gives health care providers an important tool that can help prevent an illness that affects many older Americans and often results in significant chronic pain," said Dr. Jesse Goodman, director of the FDA's Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research.

Shingles, also called herpes zoster, occurs when the chickenpox virus reactivates and resumes reproducing after a long dormancy in nerve cells in the body.

Zostavax does not prevent the initial infection by the virus, nor does it treat active cases of shingles. Instead, the vaccine helps prevent the reemergence or resurgence of the virus by boosting a patient's immunity, Goodman said.

Merck research showed the vaccine reduced the incidence of shingles by half and pain and discomfort by nearly two-thirds.

"This is going to be the first product of any kind, vaccine or anything else, that can prevent shingles," said Dr. Jeffrey Silber, senior director of clinical research on biologics and vaccines for Merck Research Laboratories.

Sharon Smith, 68, of Portland, Ore., participated in the Zostavax trials in March 2000, but she received a placebo, or dummy injection, instead of the actual vaccine. That October, she developed shingles. After two emergency room visits and a short hospital stay, Smith remained on pain medication until May 2001, when her searing pain finally ebbed.

"I used to say it was like someone pouring hot oil over my head. At points, I would be stricken with this pain after the initial shingles began, it would just literally bring me to my knees. It was almost indescribable," Smith said. She added: "I didn't know you got over it. That is a very devastating thought, that you could be facing that pain forever. It could ruin your life."

Zostavax is based on Merck's chickenpox vaccine, Varivax, but is 14 times more potent. The FDA approved Varivax in 1995 and a majority of American children now receive it.

Anyone who has had chickenpox can develop shingles. Merck estimates that half of all people who reach age 85 will develop shingles during their lifetime.

The vaccine's long-term effectiveness remains unclear. Merck has shown that it works for at least four years, and the company plans to track patients for a decade. Merck also pledged to further study the vaccine's safety after patients in clinical trials suffered a slightly higher number of serious side effects than did those who received dummy injections, the FDA said. Currently, there is no evidence the vaccine was to blame, the agency added.

The approval is welcome news for Merck, which faces thousands of lawsuits over its withdrawn painkiller Vioxx. It's also just one of several vaccines for which the Whitehouse Station, N.J. company has received — or soon expects to receive — FDA approval.

They include RotaTeq, a vaccine against a common, sometimes dangerous gastrointestinal virus in children, approved in February; and ProQuad, a combined vaccine against measles, mumps, rubella and chickenpox, approved in September. And early in June, Merck been frustrated in the legislative process. The House has approved such drilling several times in recent years.

The primary obstacle to previous attempts to pass ANWR drilling has been what Thornberry considers "irresponsible scare tactics" by opponents exaggerating environmental concerns. But, he noted, H.R. 5429 is filled with environmental safeguards. For example:

- Of the 20 million acres in ANWR, surface area used for energy exploration and production would be limited to a maximum of just 2,000 acres.

- The Interior Department would have to analyze each proposed drilling site to assess the possible effects of activity on fish and wildlife. A mitigation plan to minimize any significant negative impact would be required.

- Before leasing could begin, a new environmental impact statement would be required in order to develop regulations for the leasing program.

Seasonal limits would be imposed to protect breeding, spawning and wildlife migration patterns.

"With the technology available today, I am confident we will not harm the refuge by making a small portion available for drilling. Instead, what I fear is continuing to fail the American people by not giving them access to their own energy resources," said Thornberry.

The bill includes an export ban requiring that all oil and gas produced in the planned ANWR drilling area stay in the United States.

The U.S. Department of Energy projects that, at peak production, ANWR could provide approximately 1.4 million barrels of oil per day. (That compares with 1 million barrels a day currently being produced in Texas.) And, there would be other benefits. ANWR oil and gas exploration could create between 250,000 and 1 million new U.S. jobs and would also raise up to $173 billion in federal royalties and tax revenues, according to various estimates.

H.R. 5429 will now go to the Senate for its consideration.

hopes the FDA will approve its Gardasil vaccine against human papillomavirus, the main cause of cervical cancer.

European and Australian health officials earlier this month approved the shingles vaccine, Merck said.

The company is eyeing the roughly 50 million Americans and 100 million Europeans age 60 and older as its largest markets for the single-dose vaccine.

The vaccine could become a $1 billion or more a year seller for Merck, said analyst Steve Brozak, with WBB Securities in Westfield, N.J. A dose will cost $152.50.

"Anything that doesn't have to do with Vioxx should be perceived as good news," said Brozak, adding that the approval is a "breath of fresh air" for the company.

Auto racing a popular sport, but what's the deal with NASCAR?

The Indianapolis 500 takes place today, weather permitting, and it always brings up the good memories I have of car racing, especially the open-wheel variety.

I had my first taste of racing when an uncle took me to WaKeeney, Kan., where he raced stock cars. Well, he did not have a racing stock car. He raced the family sedan. His wife reasoned with him later that that was not such a good idea. I was 10 years old.

Since then I have become a fan of open wheel racing and have developed a fondness and respect for the sport.

The wine-and-cheese boys of Formula 1 have the best cars, the best drivers and the best tracks. They are understandably on top of the list.

Next comes the Indy Racing League and CART (Championship Auto Racing Teams), better known as Champ Racing. These two groups always seem to be feuding with each other instead of joining forces and becoming stronger.

Some of the IRL and CART guys could be considered wine-and-cheesers, but they're mostly down-to-earth guys who like a cold beer like car owners Paul Newman and David Letterman.

Then there are other venues for racing like the 24-hour endurance races at Daytona and others held in the desert and across Europe and Africa.

And then there is NASCAR, perhaps the most popular of the groups because of the tremendous following the sport has.

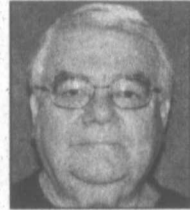

But has anyone else noticed that NASCAR lately has become somewhat of a soap opera?

It started a few months ago this season when Greg Biffle and Kurt Busch tangled. Before anyone knew it, their girlfriends were having some impolite words on pit row that was caught on film. I think we can all be thankful that a roller derby did not break out.

Now the drivers are becoming increasingly upset with each other and are scuffling and have shouting matches with each other and crew chiefs.

Dennis Spies
Editor

The latest confrontation pitted drivers Tony Stewart and Matt Kenseth. After the two took themselves out of a recent race with a crash, they traded insults. Then Stewart confronted Kenseth's crew chief, Robbie Reiser, and embarked on a verbal tirade.

NASCAR officials reportedly were not concerned with the altercations.

Well, of course they are not concerned.

This is the best publicity they can get. If they can create grudges and animosity much like the wrestlers do, people will take more of an interest in it.

It is almost as if NASCAR orchestrated some of this stuff to keep their product in front of the masses.

Today in History

Today is Sunday, May 28, the 148th day of 2006. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 28, 1934, the Dionne quintuplets — Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne — were born to Elzire Dionne at the family farm in Ontario, Canada.

On this date:

In 1533, England's Archbishop declared the marriage of King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn valid.

In 1863, the first black regiment from the North left Boston to fight in the Civil War.

In 1892, the Sierra Club was organized in San Francisco.

In 1929, the first all-color talking picture, "On with the Show," opened in New York.

Illegal aliens do not enjoy same rights as United States residents

I am writing this letter in response to Bruce Smith's letter of May 21, 2006.

In his letter, he criticizes the stand that Mike Sublett has taken on the illegal aliens protesting in our streets. I would remind him that the symbols of the U.S. Flag and the rights of the Constitution apply to the citizens of the United States.

By definition, a citizen is a member of a state or nation, especially one with a republican government, who owes it allegiance either by birth or naturalization and is entitled to full civil rights. An alien is defined as a resident who owes political allegiance to another country, a foreigner.

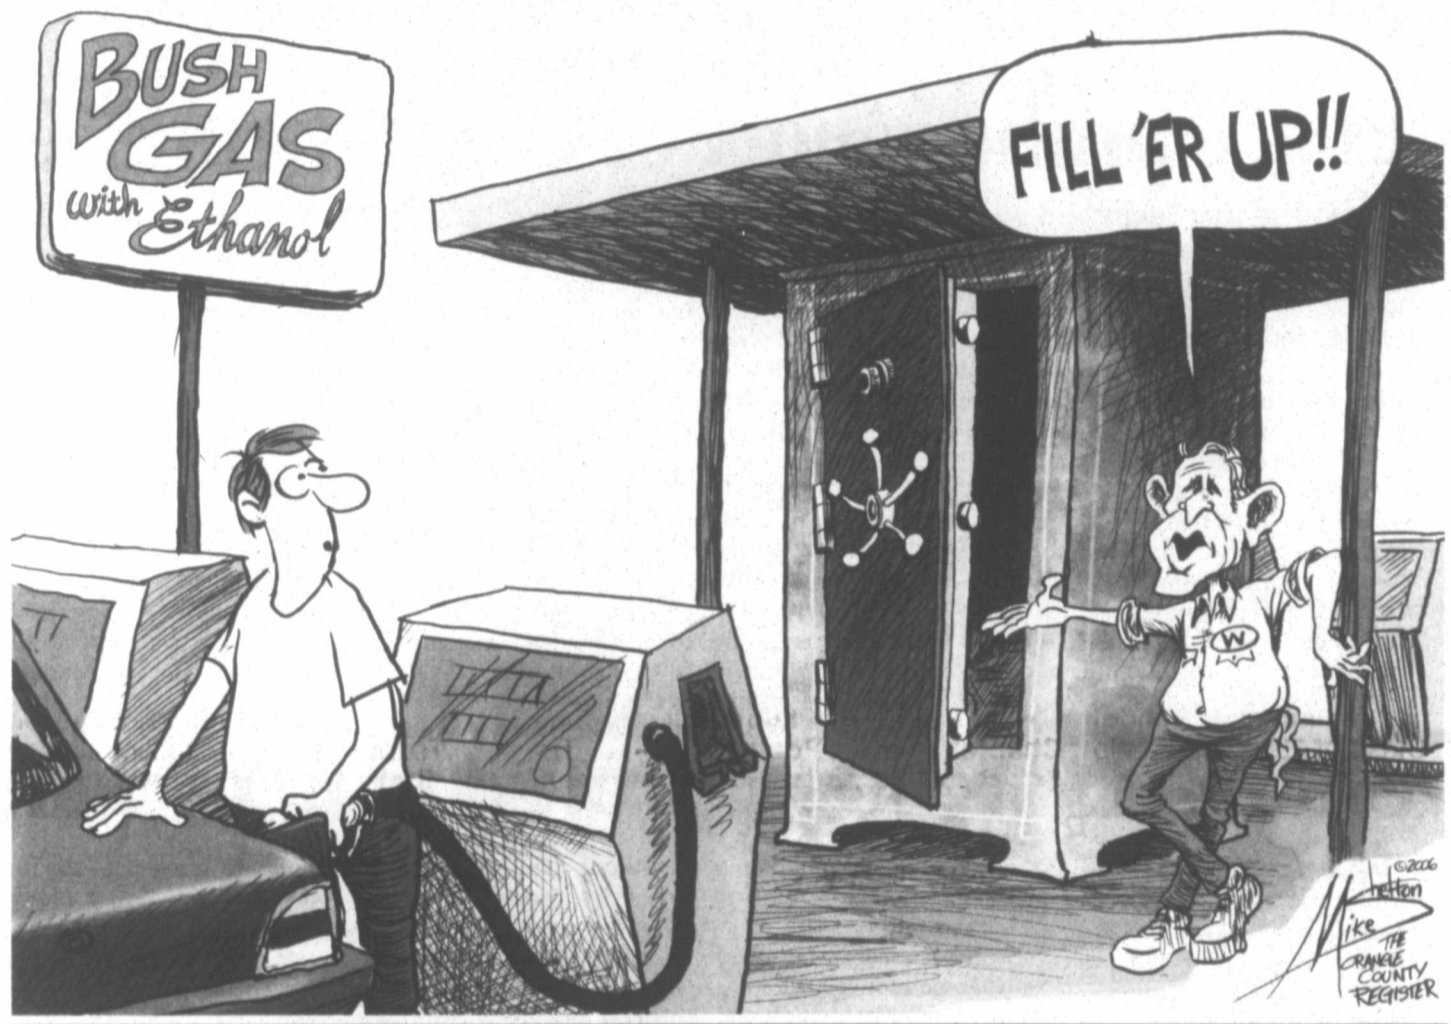

The illegal aliens who waved foreign flags over the sovereign soil of the United States do not have the civil rights that you portray that they have. They also showed that they hold no allegiance to the United States.

Their acts are those of invaders with the intent to take over. It is time to open your eyes to the steady invasion that is going on. Seeing foreign flags waved should make one ready to defend the flag that so many have died for, not express amnesty to those who aren't truly Americans.

I have no quarrel with anyone who wants to become an American, but they need to truly become an American, learn English and become a part of our culture and not expect us to assimilate into their culture.

Their allegiance should be only to the American people and the Constitution of the United States. This applies to every foreigner, not just those from Mexico. If they want to be a foreigner and wave a foreign flag, then they need to go home.

Idle American: Baseball and the color pink

Quick now, what do the public relations folks for the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Research Foundation and General Motors' Hummer drum-beaters have in common?

They both came up with "far out" ideas that turned out to be gold-plated, at least for a brief, shining moment.

Gold is flaking quickly off the gas-guzzling Hummers, but the PR coup the Komen people used to garner public attention on Mother's Day was a classic ...

Dominoes fell quickly. Targeted entities might otherwise have found ways to deny the request. But ours is a country hip-deep in political awareness; now "yes" answers are easier to come by.

Major League Baseball,

Louisville Slugger officials and a handful of players may have been red-faced at the request for "pinkness" emphases at ball parks on Mother's Day.

To deny the request for pink bats, ribbons and wrist bands, however, would be like going thumbs down on God, motherhood and apple pie ...

I suspect the Commissioner found new ways to squirm when he realized the Komen proposal was serious.

"You mean you want baseball players to swing pink bats?" he may have asked, nixing the temptation to call this a batty idea.

Perhaps the request took on validity with the agreement of Louisville Slugger officials to manufacture 400 pink bats for the some 50 major leaguers willing to participate.

S u r e e n o u g h, that's how many boys of summer dug into batters' boxes, gritted their teeth, stared pitchers down and swung with all their pinkness.

They may have wondered where the Players Association is when they need it ...

Usually, MLB is big on tradition but slow on change. Times they are a'changing.

I tip my cap to this promotion, and to the players who went "beyond the pale" for a wonderful cause.

Since baseball went along, are other sports next? Maybe we'll see pink hockey sticks, pink pigskins and other sports stuff that might be pretty in pink ...

Wonder if Nike has been approached? How about Shaquille O'Neal shod in pink?

Athletic shoes are much in the news, starting with Kevin Mench, Texas Rangers baseball star who found his hitting stroke after he found the size 12's he'd worn since age 15 to be too small.

What about Texas Rangers' reliever Antonio

The Dallas Morning News on immigration reform in the Senate:

Senators spent last week putting a more conservative face on their broad set of immigration reforms.

This week, the centrist coalition pushing it needs to hold firm and pass this bill through the Senate. It still contains the proper balance between allowing more foreign workers to come here legally and sealing cracks in our border security.

The Senate bill was "conservatized" in several ways. One amendment adds 375 miles of border fence. Another cuts the number of foreigners who can qualify as guest workers. Another denies guest worker status to criminals.

Those changes were part of the Senate's response to the House push for a more conservative bill. The immigration measure the House approved in December puts all of its energy into building a fence and other means of battenning down the border.

We're realistic enough to know the two sides can't go into conference committee so far apart they can't negotiate a final bill. So most of the Senate's conservative-leaning measures are understandable as part of the political dance needed to reconcile the two chambers.

But this week marks the moment that the coalition of Republicans and Democrats supporting the Senate bill needs to lock arms. It contains many far-sighted measures, including allowing immigrants who've put down roots to earn citizenship over time.

We know the citizenship part sets conservatives' teeth on edge, but President Bush was spot-on when he told the nation last week:

"I believe that illegal immigrants who have roots in our country and want to stay should have to pay a meaningful penalty for breaking the law ... to pay their taxes ... to learn English ... and to work in a job for a number of years. People who meet these conditions should be able to apply for citizenship but approval would not be automatic, and they will have to wait in line behind those who played by the rules."

Most big amendments already have passed or failed, so a Senate vote on the package is imminent, perhaps by Wednesday. For all of our sakes, it's time for the center to hold.

Alfonseca, who has to consider "toe room?" He was born with extra fingers and extra toes on each extremity, and has grown accustomed to the kidding. After one game, his manager asked to "give him six," and one writer asked if he was born with the extra digits, or grew them later ...

This must have been frustrating during piano lessons, but great for the "little piggies going to market" routine.

Makes me think of an old line about the lady who swears she wears size 8's, but 9's feel so much better, she buys 10's.

Before leaving the topic, there's one more item: Troy Aikman, heralded Dallas Cowboy quarterback now making his mark as a TV analyst, also is in shoe news. Riddell is introducing an Aikman shoe line for men and women. They'll be in athletic shoe departments in June — just in time for Father's Day ...

Here's a Mother's Day postscript and Dad's Day plug. Granddaughter Juliana, 3-year-old birthday celebrant in December, heard Mother's Day talk and asked her dad about it. He filled her in.

"Is there a Father's Day?" she asked, learning that it, too, is observed annually.

She wasn't through. Her final question — and let's hope this item escapes the Hallmark Card folks' view: "Is there a Little Girl's Day?"

Finally, on Mother's Day eve, a couple of preachers — Chris Liebrum of Dallas and Mike Toby of Waco — received honorary doctoral degrees from Howard Payne University.

They were thoroughly roasted at a luncheon following the ceremony.

One of the skewers, Georgetown anesthesiologist Dr. Josh Toby, took a different twist about his dad, pastor of First Baptist Church, Woodway, for 28 years.

"Now there are two doctors in our family to put people to sleep," he panned ...

Crop Pest Scouting Workshop set in June

PLAINVIEW — Producers and agriculture consultants can hone their pest management and crop production skills June 1 at the High Plains Crop Pest Scouting Workshop sponsored by Texas Cooperative Extension.

The free workshop at the Ollie Liner Center will run from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The center is south of Plainview on business Highway 27.

"We will cover crops such as cotton, corn and grain sorghum," said Greg Cronholm, Extension integrated pest management agent for Hale County. "Our goal is to provide a basic knowledge of the pests common to these crops. We will also cover weed identification and herbicide injury, plant diseases, and how to recognize and promote beneficial insects."

Morning presentations by Extension specialists and agents will focus on cotton growth and development, cotton insect pests, and recognizing and promoting beneficial insects in field crops. James Esty, Texas Department of Agriculture, will discuss worker protection standards and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency requirements for a pesticide handlers card.

"We'll have a morning and an afternoon break, so participants can visit and view insect specimen displays," Cronholm said. "Those interested in obtaining a pesticide handlers card can attend the 11 a.m. to noon session only if they wish. The card is valid for a five-year period. We'll also take a one-hour lunch break."

Afternoon workshop sessions will cover weed identification and herbicide injury, corn and grain sorghum insect pests, and cotton, corn, grain sorghum and peanut plant diseases.

Those who attend can earn up to five continuing education units; four hours are in integrated pest management and one hour is laws and regulations. All continuing education units are approved by the Texas Department of Agriculture, Cronholm said.

For more information, contact Cronholm at the Extension office in Hale County at (806) 291-5274.

CASA sets its next volunteer training

CASA of the High Plains will conduct a volunteer training at 6 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday and June 8, 9 and 10 in fellowship hall of Highland Baptist Church, 1301 N. Banks. CASA, short for Court Appointed Special Advocate(s), is seek volunteers to "stand up" for a child.

Every year more than a million children are abused and neglected, CASA reports, and every year the futures of these same children are put at risk. In a single year in Texas, thousands of children are removed from their homes and placed into an already overburdened child welfare system that is hard-pressed, CASA says, to address their individual concerns.

Eventually they end up in court.

CASA is a nonprofit agency that trains and supports volunteers to work with these children as they journey through the court system. The CASA volunteer is frequently the most consistent person in these children's lives during their involvement with the courts.

CASA volunteers speak for many of these children by helping ensure they find safe, permanent homes — something every child deserves. CASA advocates change one life at a time.

For more information, call CASA of the High Plains at 669-7638.

Conservation group planning get-together next month in Amarillo

AMARILLO — Conservation practices and updates about developing technology will be the topic of visiting researchers, crop consultants, chemical representatives and producers at the Southern Conservation Systems Conference June 26-28 here.

The 28th annual Southern Conservation Systems Conference: "Improving Conservation Technologies to Compete for Global Resources and Markets" is scheduled for June 26-28 at the Fifth Seasons Inn, 6801 Interstate 40 West.

The conference is the main activity of the Southern Extension and Research Activity Exchange Group, said Dr. Louis Baumhardt, U.S. Department of Agriculture-Agricultural Research Service soil scientist and local coordinator for the conference.

The main objective of the conference is to expand the use of conservation practices in the southern United States. to reduce soil erosion, environmental degradation, and resource utilization (irrigation water for instance), he said.

More than 20 presentations and about 40 poster reports will describe research that integrates livestock into forage, grain and fiber cropping systems or implements sensor and tillage technology to increase the efficiency of water, ag-chemicals and energy use, Baumhardt said.

A half day tour on June 28 will highlight local concentrated feeding operations, commercial farms using conservation tillage, and research sites for developing and quantifying efficient irrigation application practices, wind energy generation, and residue management systems, he said.

Continuing education units have been applied for from both Texas Department of Agriculture and Texas Certified Crop Advisors.

Conference registration costs are $120, with students getting a discounted rate of $50. The fee covers two lunches, refreshments during breaks, conference abstracts and proceedings, and the optional tour.

Jacobsen leads Senior PGA Championship

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Peter Jacobsen's doctor told him he wouldn't be able to play much more golf on his surgically repaired hip and knee before both would need to be replaced.

After two rounds of the Senior PGA Championship, it appears the weary joints might have at least one more major championship in them.

Jacobsen shot a 3-under-par 68 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Gil Morgan and Brad Bryant at the Champions Tour's first major of the season.

"It hurts to walk," said Jacobsen, who was the tour's comeback player of the year in 2005. "I hobble around. It looks like I'm hobbling."

After having surgery on his left hip in 2002 and 2004, Jacobsen had two operations on his right knee last year but squeezed in his second major title at the Senior Players Championship.

"It's kind of a grab bag," said the 52-year-old Jacobsen. "Some days it hurts when I swing and I'm just kind of compensating. Others it doesn't. But it pretty much, last four or five holes I get a little bit fatigued."

"You'll see me stretching and doing a lot of crazy things out on the course the last four or five holes."

It was during that period when Jacobsen claimed the lead from Morgan, who was playing at his home course at Oak Tree Golf Club. Jacobsen hit his drive into the rough on the right side of the fairway on the par-4 18th but he was able to chip the ball over a ridge and get it to stop about 5 feet from the hole to set up a birdie putt.

Morgan, who played in Jacobsen's group, tucked his drive onto the left edge of the fairway but his chip shot came up short. He flipped the ball onto the green and made his par putt to finish with a 1-under-par 70. Bryant made a long eagle putt at No. 16 and birdied the 17th hole to pull into a tie for second. He shot a 67 to match Tom Purtzer for the low round of the day.

During a trip to the doctor's office last week, Jacobsen had X-rays taken that showed his hip and knee were both getting worse. Jacobsen's doctor told him he'd have to have both of the joints completely replaced.

Jacobsen responded by firing an opening round 67 to trail Morgan by one stroke.

POYC BASEBALL

Glo-Valve improves to 10-1; games set for Tuesday night

Glo-Valve Service sent 17 batters to the plate in the bottom of the third inning Friday in an Optimist 11-12 Cal Ripken League game. Eleven delivered base hits. Eleven scored as Glo-Valve prevailed 14-1 behind another dominating pitching performance by Cody Davis.

Reid Miller paced Glo-Valve's 12-hit attack with three hits, including a double, three runs scored and one RBI. Zach Graves scored three times and pounded two hits, including a three-RBI double. Davis scored twice on two hits with four RBIs.

Miller singled in the bottom of the first inning for Glo-Valve and scored when Collins was able to go all the way to third base on an error. Graves was hit by a pitch. Collins and Graves executed a double steal with Collins scoring and Graves winding up on third after an overthrow. A ground out by Davis scored Graves giving Glo-Valve a 3-0 lead.

In the third inning, Miller opened the Glo-Valve onslaught with a double. He scored on a double by Collins, who went to third on a single by Graves. Graves was allowed to take second base without a throw. Both runners tallied on a single by Davis. Davis took second base on an attempt to get Graves at the plate. He advanced to third on a single by Tyler Smith and scored on a fielder's choice as Smith was erased trying to steal second base.

Schrade Thompson kept the rally going with a solid double to right field. He went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a single by Daniel Hulsey. Hulsey stopped at second after a single by Corey McCann, but galloped home on a single by Miller. A walk to Collins set the table for a base-clearing double by Graves. Davis' second single of the inning plated Graves. Smith was hit by a pitch to extend the rally. Thompson was safe on the only error of the inning as Davis scored the 11th run of the inning.

Cabot kept fighting. With one out in the fourth inning, Shane Smith hammered a double to left field. He advanced to third on a passed ball and scored when Miller made the defensive play of the game by going far to his right at shortstop, gloving the ball, setting his feet and throwing to a stretching Hulsey at first base for a spectacular out.

Davis won his fifth game of the year against no defeats. He allowed one unearned run, reducing his earned run average to a minuscule 0.23. He permitted one hit. He walked a batter in the first inning who was gunned down from Collins to Miller trying to steal second. Davis also struck out eight batters.

Glo-Valve improved to 10-1 and a three game lead over Duncan, Fraser & Bridges Insurance Agency, 7-4, which used a five-run fourth inning to defeat Celanese Corporation 6-3 in Friday's early game. Dane Periera was credited with a complete game win for DFB.

Tuesday's games feature DFB and Cabot in the 5:45 p.m. game with Rotary Club and Celanese clashing at 7:45 p.m.

Mavericks 105, Suns 98

DALLAS (AP) — When Steve Nash was running the offense in Dallas, the Mavericks didn't pay much attention to defense.

Game 2 of the Western Conference finals showed just how much things have changed.

Dirk Nowitzki had 30 points, 14 rebounds and six assists, and Josh Howard scored 29 points, but the main reason the Mavericks beat the Suns 105-98 was their defense — yes, defense.

Dallas limited Phoenix to a season-low 17 points in the first quarter, then made stops on six of seven possessions during a 12-2 run early in the fourth quarter that put the Mavs ahead for good.

With the game still within reach, the Suns missed 13 of 18 shots until Nash scored a meaningless basket in the closing seconds. It was his only points and his only attempt of the second half, which perhaps best sums up the way Dallas turned things around after allowing 121 points in the opener.

"We were just trying to contain him," said Mavericks coach Avery Johnson, who used to back up Nash in Dallas. "I think the guys who were on him took a little bit more of a one-on-one challenge."

Nash had 27 points and 16 assists in the opener. He had 16 and 11 this time, with only three assists in the second half.

"In hindsight, I would've maybe been more aggressive," Nash said. "But I felt like I was making the right play. I was drawing two players and throwing it to the open man."

Johnson blasted his team Thursday, primarily for allowing 32 fast-break points in Game 1. Phoenix had only 21 this time, and plummeted from 72 points in the paint to 46.

"We were just better at getting back defensively," said Jason Terry, who scored six of his 18 points during the game-changing spurt.

With the victory, Dallas guaranteed itself at least one more home game — Game 5 on Thursday night.

Phoenix had the attitude of happy to have gotten one in Texas.

Now, the Suns head home for Game 3 on Sunday night with the familiar feeling of being tied 1-1.

Phoenix has lost all three of its Game 2s this postseason and five straight dating to last season. Going back to 1999, which predates anyone on the roster, the Suns have dropped 10 of 11, the exception coming during a first-round sweep of Memphis last year.

"We gave ourselves a chance to win and that's all you can ask for," said forward Tim Thomas, who scored 20 points, including several key 3-pointers. "We wanted to be greedy and get two (wins). We go back to the desert to do it all over again."

Howard was considered iffy to even play because of a bone bruise that knocked him out of Game 1 in the opening minutes. He scored 13 in the third quarter and finished one shy of his career high. The Mavericks are now 22-0 this season when he scores at least 20.

"It was sore, but I was able to keep playing," said Howard, who decided to play about an hour before tipoff. "I had some pain, cutting in and out, but for the most part it felt good."

Just like ol' times: Little Al and Mikey dueling at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser Jr.'s weathered face lit up at the mere suggestion. What would it be like to come down to the final laps of the Indianapolis 500 in a side-by-side duel with Michael Andretti?

"Wouldn't that be cool?" Unser said, sounding like a kid again. "Wouldn't that be super cool?"

Andretti is equally intrigued by the idea. Even though he was lured out of retirement so he could race alongside his 19-year-old son, Mikey wouldn't mind going wheel to wheel with Little Al as they bear down on the checkered flag Sunday.

"My biggest dream is me and Marco on the last lap," Andretti said. "My next biggest dream is me and Al."

Not that it's likely to happen. These are two 40-something drivers who just can't fade away, joined in the Indy senior division by another racer-turned-retiree-turned-racer, 48-year-old Eddie Cheever.

The trio has created a lot of thrilling memories at the Brickyard, but these stories usually don't have a happy ending. Muhammad Ali should have stayed in retirement. Michael Jordan wasn't the same when he gave up the second of his self-imposed exiles. Willie Mays was a pitiable figure at the end of his playing career, stumbling around the outfield.

Unser has been away for nearly two years. He's 44 now, with plenty of wrinkles and a reddish head of hair that isn't having much success fending off the encroaching gray.

Andretti is six months younger — he'll turn 44 in October — and hasn't raced since the 2003 Indy 500, which was supposed to be his swan song as a driver and the launch of his career as a full-time car owner.

But when Marco made it to the Indy Racing League much faster than projected, taking a vacant spot in his father's powerful four-car team, Michael couldn't resist the chance to race alongside his son at Brickyard. After all, he came up racing against his own father, 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti.

"I felt if I didn't take advantage of this opportunity, I would regret it the rest of my life," Michael said. "I never thought I would have the opportunity to race with Marco. I thought there would be too much of a gap from when I got out of it to when he got into it. But he's here way quicker than I imagined."

Cheever gave up his racing career after the 2002 season. Like Andretti, he devoted himself to being a car owner, while letting go of the rigorous routine he maintained as a driver. He worked out less and ate more, putting on 25 pounds after climbing out of the cockpit.

Indy 500: This year, it pays to be up front

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Forget about Danica Patrick, Michael Andretti and all those other drivers back in the pack on Sunday.

After several years of what had to be considered a wide-open race, the real contenders in the 90th edition of the Indianapolis 500 will be easy to spot.

They're all right up front. With pole-winner Sam Hornish Jr., two-time winner Helio Castroneves and defending champion Dan Wheldon dominating the speed charts all month, it'll be tough for anyone to break up their front-row party.

Hornish, in particular, has been unmatched since practice opened May 9, topping the speed chart in all but one session before easily winning the pole with a four-lap average of 228.985.

Under normal circumstances, that would make an overwhelming favorite of the two-time IRL IndyCar Series champion. But Hornish's history of bad luck at the Brickyard means he has to at least share that honor with Marlboro Team Penske teammate Castroneves and Target Chip Ganassi Racing's Wheldon.

"After six years of not doing it right here, I've got to prove I can get it done," said Hornish, who has crashed out of three races and failed to finish more than 196 of the 200 race laps in any of those six starts.

"I might pose a threat to myself if I don't do everything right," he said.

He already has made one startling misstep this month, crashing his back-up car last Sunday during a practice session.

Asked if the accident is part of a developing Indy jinx, Hornish shrugged and replied, "You can look at it one of two ways: 'Yeah, there it goes again,' or, 'We got it out of the way.' "Hopefully," he added with a smile, "we'll at least make turn one."

If Hornish does mess up again, Castroneves could be there to add again to team owner Roger Penske's record 13 wins at Indy.

The Brazilian is off to a great start this season, with two victories and a runner-up finish (to Wheldon) in three starts.

"We can win it again," Castroneves said. "This race, though, everything has to go right for you. But it has been a good month, so far."

Penske, looking for his first Indy win since Gil de Ferran in 2003, likes his chances.

"I think it's our race to lose," Penske said.

Osterman blanks Washington, 1-0

AUSTIN (AP) — Cat Osterman fired a three-hit shutout for her 36th win of the season as third-seeded Texas beat Washington 1-0 in NCAA Softball Super Regional game one action on Friday.

Osterman (36-2) needed only a solo run in the fifth inning as the southpaw collected her 84th career shutout for Texas (53-7).

Texas freshman Shannon Thomas stroked a two-out single to center field to score Jacqueline Williams, who had singled to left with one out in the fifth inning and advanced to second on a groundout by Crystal Saenz.

Osterman finished with 16 strikeouts, running her season total to a national best 579.

Washington (35-24) managed four hits and had a pair of walks but had only two base runners reach second against Osterman.

Washington and Texas play game two at 3 p.m. CDT Saturday with game three, if necessary, at 8 p.m.

COCA-COLA 600

Slick surface, hard tires create unknowns

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Casey Mears knew he was in trouble as soon as he got on the track. His car was difficult to drive and he was sliding all over the asphalt at Lowe's Motor Speedway.

Mears lost all control of his Dodge three laps into last weekend's All-Star event, slamming hard into the wall in what he predicts was a preview for Sunday night's Coca-Cola 600.

"I think the 600 is going to be a survival race," Mears said. "There is no grip out there. I've never driven anything like this before. It's just ice. It has a little bit of grip and then nothing, and there's not much warning."

A repaving project on the 1.5-mile superspeedway created a slick racing surface and scary-fast speeds during a Goodyear tire test last month. The new asphalt was necessary because a previous grinding process that was supposed to smooth out the bumps instead created treacherous racing through three Cup events.

The final straw was a disastrous October race, when the Goodyear tires couldn't adapt to the surface and began popping - causing dangerous crashes - at an alarming rate.

LMS officials spent $3 million to fix the problem, and after a soft tire pushed speeds close to 195 mph during a test session, Goodyear ultimately decided to bring a very strong compound that Scott Riggs called "the hardest thing known to man."

The harder tire was effective in slowing the speeds, and Riggs won the pole last week for the Nextel Open at 186.509 mph - almost seven seconds slower than Elliott

Sadler's track record set in October.

But the drivers were less than thrilled with what they have been given to work with, complaining that the hard tires made it difficult to set the balance of the car so that it doesn't push or swing loose in the turns.

"You call that a tire?" four-time series champion Jeff Gordon asked. "I think the tires are way too hard. I think 600 miles is going to be a race of survival and a race of being smart."

"I think that you'll have issues with trying to get temperature in those tires and the car being underneath you under slick conditions during the day and still be good at night."

Aside from the lack of grip, drivers also complained about a vibrating sensation in the tires called "chatter" that makes a tire feel like it's bouncing. It was so bad that Gordon ran two laps on a flat tire, but didn't recognize it because of the chatter, and even All-Star race winner Jimmie Johnson had problems with it.

"When the car is not handling right, it definitely picks up a chatter," he said. "Instead of the tire slipping like it used to, because it is so hard, it chatters now. It is something we are all paying attention to and trying to understand why, because this is the only track where we have such a severe chatter."

The Coca-Cola 600, the longest event of the year, always has been a race of attrition. It starts in the day, ends in the night and teams continuously must adjust to the changing conditions just to make it to the finish.

Pirates blast Astros, 12-5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After watching this catcher, and the rest of the Pittsburgh Pirates' unusually productive lineup, it was Houston Astros manager Phil Garner who probably felt like crying.

Jason Bay homered for the fourth consecutive game and drove in four runs, and the Pirates had a season-high 16 hits in beating Houston 12-5 Friday night, the Astros' fourth consecutive loss.

Pirates rookie Ronny Paulino, enjoying a much better game than the opposing catcher did against the Astros the day before, had his first four-hit game in the majors. Craig Wilson and Jose Castillo also homered during a three-homer fourth inning against Taylor Buchholz (3-4), who shut out the Pirates for 8 2-3 innings the last time he opposed them.

"We made mistakes tonight, and they absolutely pounded them," Garner said of his defending NL champions, losers of eight of 11 overall and 10 of 12 on the road. "That's been a problem the last few series, we haven't been able to get the ball where we wanted to. ... It's a mystery because we're better than that, but we're in a rotten rut right now."

The Astros lost 8-5 Thursday in Washington, despite stealing seven bases - forcing Nationals manager Frank Robinson to pull backup catcher Matthew LeCroy in the middle of an inning.

Afterward, Robinson got teary-eyed explaining why he had to yank his catcher.

On Friday night, the Astros never could get the opposing catcher out.

Paulino wasn't on the Pirates' season-opening roster and wasn't expected to make an impact this season, but has won the everyday job by playing well defensively and batting .310. He doubled in the Pirates' first run in the second, then had three consecutive singles.

"I felt good at the plate," Paulino said. "My primary job is to work with the pitcher, but I know I can hit."

So can Bay, who got off to a relatively slow start - he was hitting .250 on May 3 - but has 25 RBIs in 13 games and has jumped his average to .304.

Bay had a run-scoring single in the third as the Pirates began to rally from a 4-1 deficit, then followed with a three-run drive in the seven-run fourth that put the Pirates up 8-4. Bay has eight homers in 32 at-bats in eight games, including two two-homer games, and is the first Pirate to homer in four consecutive games since Barry Bonds from Aug. 18-21, 1987.

"This is the first time this has happened to me at any level," Bay said. "It's getting a little surreal. I'm starting to pinch myself. You always want to manage the cold streaks and ride the hot streaks, and hopefully this one will last a while."

Attention all Parents! MONTESSORI FOR 3 & 4 YEAR OLDS IS COMING TO ST. VINCENTS CATHOLIC SCHOOL 2006-2007

Sister Mary Magdalene Grobe, OSF is a trained and certified Montessori teacher with a diploma from St. Nicholas Training Center in London, England. Sister has had experience in Montessori with toddlers through high school and has adapted techniques to enhance 1st, 2nd, and 3rd grade learning in standard classrooms.

WHAT IS MONTESSORI?

Dr. Maria Montessori, a devout Catholic, realized that education comes from within. In the early years of childhood, especially from ages 3 to 7, the child's mind is as adsorbent as a sponge. Just think about the ease with which children learn languages at an early age, something that is quite difficult for adults. With this in mind, Dr. Montessori designed an environment with learning materials perfectly sized and suited to this early stage of learning. Children are invited to work with their hands, develop their senses, and gain control over their hand muscles and bodies. As the child progresses at his own pace, he is steadily led into materials that stimulate love of reading, writing, mathematics, science, geography, history, art and music. The goal is to awaken the natural God-given love for learning and curiosity that every child possesses.

SO WHERE DO WE BEGIN?

The children begin with practical life skill tools to help them make a smooth transition from home to school. They work in the same ways that they see parents working at home: sweeping, mopping, polishing, setting the table, preparing food, and other areas that lead naturally into academics. The classes will combine 3 and 4 year olds together, as one age group helps the other, in either a morning or afternoon setting. One session is already nearly full, so please contact the school for registration information. Daycare is available at the school all day for those who wish their children to remain a full day.

Contest

by Ron Suskind. The program is designed to provide freshmen with a common thread as they transition to the University environment, but staff, faculty and students of every classification took time to read the book.

All students were eligible to participate in the essay contest.

"We received many wonderful essays," Dr. Russell Lowery-Hart, associate professor of speech communication and chairman of the University's Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP) Committee, said. "Monty's was the best of the best. He really put his finger on the many obstacles of the main character's difficult journey."

Trimble won the $250 first-place prize.

A Hope in the Unseen is the story of Cedric Jennings, a black teen who emerges from a crime-infested high school in a Washington, D.C., ghetto and is ultimately accepted at Brown University.

Both Jennings and the book's author, Suskind, spoke at WTAMU's Freshman Convocation, which kicked off the 2005-2006 academic year.

The essay contest was co-sponsored by the QEP Committee and the Office of Residential Living.

The 2006 common reader already has been selected, and staff and faculty have received copies of Po Bronson's "What Should I Do with My Life?"

Incoming freshmen will receive copies of the book this summer at New Student Conferences or Buff Branding. Another essay contest is planned next spring.

Mother remembers her son, a Medal of Honor recipient

By ALLEN G. BREED
AP National Writer

HOLIDAY, Fla. (AP) — Rita Richardson smiles at the memory: Her young son Dan, prowling the woods dressed in camouflage and green face paint or jumping off the shed like a paratrooper. She wanted her little commando to know that war was more than a game.

So each Memorial Day, she would take him to Arlington National Cemetery, near their Virginia home, to walk with her through that "garden of stone," to appreciate the sacrifices honored there. This Memorial Day, she will be there in spirit as her soldier son trains for another overseas deployment.

Janice Pvirre will be at Arlington in person. She will join the other "Gold Star Mothers," those who have lost children in combat, to lay a wreath and to say a prayer at a white marker engraved with the emblem of this nation's highest military honor.

Her son, Sgt. 1st Class Paul R. Smith, died in a dusty courtyard outside Baghdad, fatally wounded in a furious firefight while showing "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity ... above and beyond the call of duty" — a sacrifice that made him the only service member awarded the Medal of Honor in the Iraq War.

Among those Sgt. Smith's actions saved: Dan Richardson, who has recently married and himself been promoted to sergeant.

'We have been drawn together for some reason, and we're both intrigued about that reason. There is a destiny behind all of this. And it's not over. It's not played out yet. We don't know where it's going from here.'

— Rita Richardson
Soldier's mother

That knowledge is both a blessing and a burden, for one mother to know that any milestone she will celebrate with her son — a birthday, a holiday, the birth of a child — was made possible by another mother's loss.

"We have been drawn together for some reason, and we're both intrigued about that reason," Richardson says.

"There is a destiny behind all of this. And it's not over. It's not played out yet. We don't know where it's going from here."

Janice Pvirre believes her son's fate was determined when he was 5.

One day, someone at school asked Paul what he wanted to do when he grew up. "I'm going to go in the Army," the green-eyed boy declared, looking up through long lashes. "And I'm gonna have babies and I'm gonna get married."

"I said, 'Well Paul. Let's rearrange that,'" his mother laughingly recalled recently by the pool at her daughter-in-law's home in Holiday, north of Tampa. "Go in the military, get married and THEN have your babies." And he laughed and said, "Yeah."

He did join the Army, in 1989, but at first he wasn't much of a soldier. Stationed in Germany, Smith drank too much and, on a couple of occasions, slept right through formation.

The first Gulf War changed him, his mother says.

The man who once partied late into the night had become obsessed with training and discipline. He drilled his soldiers well into the night and was even known to swab the muzzles of their rifles, looking for dirt. The men took to calling him the "morale Nazi."

Smith, who had married shortly after that war in 1992 and had become a stepfather, then a father, told his wife that he feared he hadn't seen the last of Iraq. Making sure his men were ready became a priority, Birgit Smith says.

"He said, 'We are not done. We're going back. We didn't finish,'" the young widow says. "It was just a matter of time."

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and I have been dating this girl, "Beth," for two months and three weeks -- a long time for me. When we started dating, I told her I had had sex before, and I had just quit smoking and drinking and stuff. Well, Beth told her mom, and now her mom doesn't believe I quit! I want Beth's mom to approve of me because it'll make it easier for her to deal with me, because I really like Beth. I've been to their house three times, and I've met her mom, her dad and her aunt, but her mom talks about me behind my back. She's threatening to break us up -- but I haven't done anything to her mom. I'm usually polite and well-mannered, but she just doesn't like me. Please help me. We don't plan on having sex. Beth wants to wait, which is fine with me. -- CRAZY IN LOVE, FORT STEWART, GA.

DEAR CRAZY IN LOVE: For one moment, please try and look at this from the mother's point of view. When mothers fantasize about the boys their little girls will eventually date, it is not usually someone who at 14 has had sex, smoked, drank alcohol -- "and stuff" -- even if they say they have quit. It might help to have a man-to-man talk with Beth's father and make clear to him that you respect his daughter, are in no way trying to take advantage of her, and that you are now walking the straight and narrow. I can't promise it'll work, but it's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: I am in college. A girl from another country relies on me for all of the information the professor in one class lectures on. I feel sorry for her because I understand how difficult it is to get a grasp on a subject that is taught in a tongue that is not your own. We exchanged phone numbers because the professor asked us to do so, to ensure that we had someone to update us if we missed a class. Now the girl won't stop calling me, sometimes three times a day or more, to clarify the material. Abby, I have three children and a husband to take care of, and I'm taking two classes with tons of homework. I do not have time to re-teach the class to anyone. I would have already snapped at someone who was rude or mean, but this girl is excruciatingly nice. What should I do? -- TRAPPED IN GEORGIA

DEAR TRAPPED: Your classmate may have a comprehension problem; she could also be just plain lonely. If I were you, I'd tell the professor what's going on and ask if he/she can arrange for her to get some extra help of a more formal nature. Then I would kindly tell the young woman that, because of the demands of my family as well as school, my time is extremely limited and, if she has more than one question about a class, she must direct them elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: During the year, I host several birthday and holiday dinners in my home. When I have three generations, should I ask the eldest to give the blessing? If my son and his wife are present, which one should I ask? When I have friends in, should I ask them to do the honors? I don't want to embarrass anyone, but I don't want anyone to feel left out, either. I have always felt awkward about this subject and never know what is appropriate. -- GREAT-GRANDMOTHER IN KENTUCKY

DEAR GREAT-GRANDMOTHER: The solution to your problem is to ask your guests which one of them would like to give the blessing, or offer it yourself.

Museum Mementos: Prairie fires threatened early pioneers

Prairie fires, swooping furiously across the plains, were a constant threat to early settlers. From late summer through the autumn months, endless miles of tall prairie grass became vast tinderboxes, dry and brown from scorching summer heat.

It took only a quick spark from an untended campfire, a passing train engine or a stroke of lightning to set the countryside ablaze. Little tongues of flame wrapped around dry grass, and sudden flames shot up when a tall dry bunch was reached.

Within minutes, great clouds of heavy black smoke filled the air and skies redened from brilliant infernos below.

In those days, there were no modern fire trucks to call when prairie grass caught fire. Everyone who was able soaked feed sacks and brooms in water before trying to beat out advancing flames.

Those with water wagons filled their barrels with water to take to the fires. Some made fire guards by plowing two parallel furrows and burning grass of the strip between the furrows.

Often the fire would "jump" the burned strip and set fire to the grass beyond. Sometimes the wind would pick up a burning cow chip, toss it 30-feet or more and start a new fire.

Often men would kill a cow or steer, split its body open, tie ropes to its legs and drag it along the black line of fire with one many on the unburned grass and another man on the black smoking area.

Between the men, the bleeding body of the animal was pulled wide open. The carcass would smother flames faster than sacks, brooms or wagon sheets.

About 1901 or 1902, a "drag" was developed by the White Deer Land Co. The drag was a square sheet, about 12 to 14 feet on a side, constructed out of row upon row of chain. Ropes were attached to two of the corners. One of the ropes was attached to a wagon while the other was held by a mounted cowboy.

The cowpoke and the wagon traveled a parallel course down one part of the roaring fire while several people followed behind with wet sacks and brooms to stamp out any part of the fire that remained. This was repeated over and over until the fire died out.

Sometime in 1907, a prairie fire was started north of Pampa by someone burning a haystack. The fire burned all the way to Red Deer Creek and came within 600 yards of the pioneer cottage where Katie and Wiley Vincent lived. (At that time, the Pioneer Cottage was in the 501 block of East Browning — present parking lot of Central Baptist Church.)

Eloise Lane
White Deer Land Museum, Pampa

After Wiley and the Vincent boys left to help fight the fire, Katie looked around the cottage and saw things she would really hate to lose — such as 100 pound sacks of flour and sugar. She dragged the sacks and anything else the family might need to store in the dugout.

She came back to the cottage and was looking around and checking to see if she had missed anything when she noticed Wiley's new Stetson hat — his prized possession. She was going out the door with the hat when a strong wind blew the hat from her grasp, and it began to roll.

Valiantly, she chased the hat and managed to rescue it from the wind and fire.

Whenever Katie related this story in later years, she laughed until tears rolled down her cheeks as she remembered how she had chased the windblown hat.

When news of the fire reached the schoolhouse (in the next block south of Pioneer Cottage), the boys were eager to go to help fight the fire.

However, the teacher, Clara Deen, feared that the boys might be burned or injured in fire-fighting and locked the door to keep the boys in the building. When Clara left the room, the boys broke a window and jumped out to join the firefighters.

From the C.P. Sloan house (711 E. Browning), 3-year-old Ralph Sloan brought his little bucket of water to help.

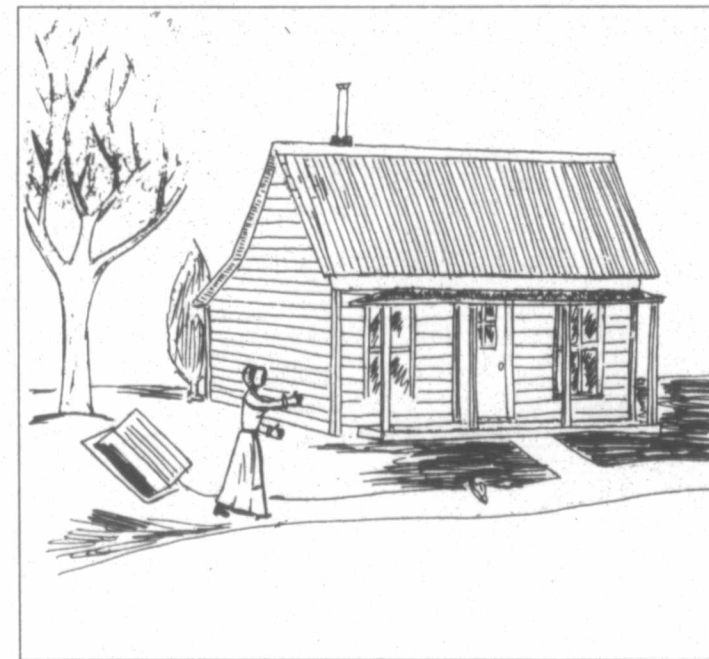

The schoolhouse was soon cleared of everyone except Clara and the "big girl" (oldest), Lottie Sills (later Mrs. Alex Schneider, Jr.).

Clara and Lottie thought it was a shame for the precious school books to be burned, so each of them stacked as many as she could carry and left the building.

As they started through the turnstile gate, the gate swung around hitting one of them and knocking her into the other. The books were scattered all around.

Eight-year-old Laura Hobart (Mrs. Clyde Fatheree), who was always climbing things, had to be in on everything if possible.

She climbed to the top of a chicken house and stationed herself to give "bulletins" on the progress of the fire. Fortunately, she was able to report that the fire was extinguished and Pampa was spared.

That time came in March 2003. And Smith was ready.

"There are two ways to come home, stepping off the plane and being carried off the plane," he wrote in a letter to his parents. "It doesn't matter how I come home because I am prepared to give all that I am to ensure that all my boys make it home."

One of those "boys" was Dan Richardson.

Growing up around Washington, D.C., Dan Richardson was surrounded by the military.

Jerry and Rita Richardson were both federal employees. Jerry Richardson had served four years as a Navy parachute rigger, and the couple always stressed service to country.

When Dan was about 12, his mother took him to a gathering of World War II veterans, where, as a National Archives official, she'd been asked to give a speech on that war's most decorated hero — Audie Murphy.

She had regaled her son with tales of the young soldier who climbed onto a burning tank and, firing its .50-caliber machine gun until he ran out of ammunition, killed or wounded more than 50 attacking Germans. His deeds earned Murphy the Medal of Honor in 1945 and inspired the movie "To Hell and Back," in which he starred as himself.

Young Dan helped gather signatures on a petition for a postage stamp honoring Murphy.

Like Smith, Dan was an indifferent student. He liked fast cars and skydiving — "a thrill seeker from day one," his mother says.

When he was 17 1/2, Dan asked his parents for permission to join the Army. They happily signed his papers.

Dan wanted Airborne, but ended up at Fort Stewart, Ga., with B Co. of the 11th Engineer Battalion, part of the 3rd Infantry Division.

Audie Murphy's division.

And now, Paul Smith's division.

On April 4, 2003, early in the war, Smith and his combat engineers were part of a 100-member force tasked with constructing a roadblock on the highway to Baghdad and to protect the eastern flank of the Saddam International Airport. PFC Richardson, all of 18, carried his platoon's SAW — squad automatic weapon.

Smith's troops were erecting a pen to hold some Iraqi prisoners when someone spotted an enemy force of about 100 — armed with AK-47s, rocket-propelled grenades and 60mm mortars.

Smith organized a hasty defense of two platoons, a Bradley Fighting Vehicle and three armored personnel carriers, according to official reports.

While shouting orders, Smith went to work himself. He lobbed grenades and fired on the Iraqis with his rifle and a bazooka to cover the evacuation of three wounded soldiers from a crippled troop carrier.

The Iraqis controlled a tower overlooking the compound. Smith knew he had to silence it.

"Under withering fire," Smith raced across the courtyard and climbed onto one of the disabled carriers, which was armed with a .50-caliber machine gun.

Smith tried to back the vehicle into the courtyard, but the attached trailer kept jackknifing.

Richardson and another soldier rushed out to unhitch it.

"Bullets were flying everywhere, ping-pong off the ground and walls," he wrote to his parents after the battle.

Smith climbed into the gun turret. With his upper body exposed, Smith blasted the tower with .50-caliber machine gun fire.

Smith had emptied three 100-round cans of ammunition when the gun suddenly went silent. Richardson and the others were just unhitching the trailer when he heard someone yell, "Sgt. Smith is hit!"

A bullet had pierced Smith's skull. The ceramic breast plate in his flak jacket was shattered. Littering the ground were the bodies of more than four dozen Iraqis. One soldier later said the sight of Smith atop that troop carrier reminded him of "To Hell and Back."

Paul Smith was the only U.S. casualty in the courtyard. He was 33 years old.

In the four-page letter from Dan afterward, Rita Richardson learned the harrowing tale of gunfire and confusion, and of the sergeant who held them all together.

"It is because of him that I'm not dead ..." her son wrote. "He gave his life defending us."

Dan Richardson's mother has a decal on the trunk of her car: a red rectangle with a blue star in the center, signifying she has a soldier on active duty.

Paul Smith's mother also has a peeling star, on her rear windshield.

Drive across nation reveals complex views of cars, gas prices

By HUGO KUGIYA
AP National Writer

Announced by the sharp crack of a backfiring engine, the caravan of old Pontiacs and Fords wended their way off the highway and into the gas station-restaurant, arriving, it seemed, from another time.

On a blustery May day, Carl and Frances Barrier's 8-cylinder Pontiac Deluxe, vintage 1940, needed this stop in the Kansas plains to fill up on 87-octane, $2.75 a gallon, on its way to an antique car museum in Minden, Neb. In its prime, their Pontiac traveled 15 miles on a gallon of gas, but now manages only 10.

"We don't even think about it," said Carl, 72, a retired manager with Raytheon aircraft, as he finished his $50 fill-up. "You talk about the $3 gas. But I went to work for a service station in 1946. Gas was 20 cents a gallon. I made $2 a day... When I retired I made over $200 a day." Taking that long view, he said, gas is still affordable.

And that kind of relatively unfazed attitude was not unusual among drivers encountered by an Associated Press writer on a drive along interstates and backroads from Detroit to Los Angeles.

Along the journey, regular gasoline ranged from $2.60 to $3.49, with one station, a remote Mojave Desert outpost, charging $4.29 a gallon.

The cost was high enough for most to take notice and for some to make adjustments — such as trucker Kris Jacobs fuel surcharge for hauling cheese from Wisconsin to New York City. But gas costs are not high enough — yet — to deeply change habits and plans.

After the initial shock and anger passes, it seems, we adjust to the new price. We grumble, we give lip service to alternative fuels, we think about hybrid vehicles.

Then on we drive. A trip across America suggests the spike in gas prices caused a psychological tremor. Most of those interviewed doubted gas will ever go below $2 a gallon again. And if it went up another dollar or more...?

"Four dollars would represent a psychological panic attack," said Lisa Lanyon, 40, a college instructor, as she paid about $30 to fill up her 1995 Chevy Cavalier in Denver.

Ordinary folks on a budget adjust in many small ways. Las Vegas casino employee Andrea Johnson consolidates errands, walks when she can, and shops around for the cheapest gas in town. (Costco, for her.)

Polls have found drivers are more conscious of their gas consumption, that they are suspicious of the oil companies, that they hold President Bush responsible for the run-up. Members of Congress proposed giving taxpayers a $100 gas rebate. Hotels and resorts are offering guests gas vouchers.

For the most part, as the summer driving season commences, Americans appear to be keeping to their plans, commuting alone many miles to work, trekking the country in motor homes, all in the face of rising gas prices.

The heart of America, it seems, still resides on four wheels on an open road.

The trip started in Detroit, where gas could easily be had for $2.75 a gallon.

At Murray's Discount Auto Store in Hamtramck, long home to auto plants, sales manager Jerry Fleer feels "kind of stuck" with his 1991 Oldsmobile Bravada SUV because he can't afford to trade right now. Murray's carries a novel alternative to a high-cost car: electric-powered scooters. And yet, regardless of higher gas prices, the store has not sold one since Christmas.

In the farming country of Crawfordville, Iowa, three partners are capitalizing on the call for fuel alternatives.

Their biodiesel plant is rising on the site of a former farm. Corn and soybeans are Iowa's two biggest crops. Both can also be turned into fuel — corn into ethanol, soybeans into biodiesel. Biodiesel consumption has increased from 2 million gallons in 2000 to 75 million in 2005. Use of both promises to rise. High oil prices present an opportunity for farmers.

The company was started by Donald Miksch and brothers Neil and Darin Rich (the company name, Riksch Biofuels, combines their surnames). The plant, to be completed in July at a cost of $8 million, will produce 10 million gallons of soy-based diesel fuel per year.

The plant will also provide a new revenue stream for farmers, creating more businesses in town and giving locals a reason to stay.

"This is the only way to build our town back," said Miksch, who is 27 and married. "I was one of those kids who left. I chose to come back here. I want to raise my kids here."

From the farms of the Midwest, where fuel can be about the bottom line, drive into the West, where vast spaces beckon, and where fuel is associated with the freedom to explore.

Consider the Ligtermoets, who had always planned to spend their retirement traveling across the country in a mobile home. By the time they sold their house in San Diego and bought their 35-foot fifth-wheel trailer, the price of gas breached $3 per gallon.

"You can't be happy about it," said Marinus Ligtermoet, 60, sitting in the 90-degree shade of a tree in the Zions Gate RV Resort near Utah's Zion National Park. "But you figure, hey, it's home."

He and his wife, Ans, left San Diego in early May. The next six months look like this: Utah; Boise, Idaho; Bend, Ore.; then to Spokane, Wash., for three weeks where they will watch the World Cup. Then up to British Columbia. They will drive up the Alaska Highway, then south to Seattle. Later they'll meander down the Pacific coast, due back in San Diego to spend the holidays with their grandkids.

The trailer has satellite television, an Internet connection, a washing machine and dryer, king-size, pillow-top bed, all pulled by a 2004, Ford F-350, one-ton, diesel pickup. Supported by Marinus' Navy pension, life on the road is still cheaper than the alternative: $1,500 a month, give or take.

"Let's put it this way, I don't lose any sleep over it," he said.

Farther west lies the delirious accident of speculative money, imported water, and unfettered indulgence called Las Vegas.

Making the fantasy happen here are people like Ana Flores, one of nearly 10,000 employees of the MGM Grand hotel and casino.

Flores, 22, has plans. She's a nursing student and works in a casino gift shop. She earns about $10 an hour and spends about $20 every week on gas (around $3.15 a gallon) for her 2003 Mitsubishi Lancer. Every dollar matters in her budget.

She's hoping to save enough within the year to buy a one-bedroom condominium. Billboards everywhere advertise low down payments and mortgages for as little as $800 a month. Flores is hoping $3,000 and her good credit will be enough to get her started in home ownership.

"Gas Food 24."

This is one of those few places on the road where the price of gas has little meaning.

In the middle of the Mojave Desert, if you lacked the foresight to fill up in Las Vegas to the east or Barstow, Calif., to the west, you'll pay what's asked at the white, peaked roof building off Interstate 15 — on a recent stop, $4.29 a gallon for regular.

Allen Young, 47, has run the service station for more than 20 years and says his price reflects supply and demand in the desert and the additional overhead involved with operating such an isolated business. He and his employees live in six adjoining mobile homes.
