City OKs paving

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

The hike and bike trails in city parks will be resurfaced, but tennis and basketball courts won't. And the naming of a bridge has been delayed.

Those decisions came Tuesday evening at the Pampa City Commission's regular meeting.

The commissioners accepted a $53,997 bid by G.W. James for resurfacing 2.9 miles of the park

But City Manager Bob Hart, citing the amount of money budgeted for the project, recommended delaying resurfacing of Central Park's tennis courts and the Marcus Sanders Park basketball court until the next budget

Cost of those projects would have been more than $10,000, and the commission voted to delay

White oilers punished

AMARILLO - Independent white oil operators suffered a serious setback Tuesday when a federal court jury ruled against them and set damages at more than $6 million.

In U.S. District Court a three-man, threewoman jury ruled that seven defendants had illegally taken gas belonging to Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America on two leases in Carson County.

The jury awarded NGPC $3.5 million in punitive damages against the oilmen, royalty owners and investors. The jury also assessed $450,000 in attorney's fees from the inde-

Finding that the defendants had acted willfully, wantonly or recklessly in taking the pipeline company's gas, the jury said the independents had wrongfully taken gas valued at more than $1.19 million from one lease and approximately $1.46 million on the other Carson County lease involved in the dispute.

The defendants in the first of more than 40 federal court cases over gas rights included W.L. Bruce of Pampa, W.L. Bruce Co., Pat Sasser, R.A. Ramming, BRAS Oil Co., B.R. Oil Co. and Jimmy Davis. The jury assessed punitive damages of $500,000 each against

The damages are not final since U.S. District Court Judge Mary Lou Robinson could reduce the amounts.

Attorneys for the independents said they plan to appeal the case.

In closing arguments, attorneys for NGPC said the gas had belonged to the pipeline company and the independents were stealing it. Independents had argued they were producing casinghead gas, a legal byproduct of oil production.

The jury, however, agreed with the pipeline company and ruled the independents had illegally diverted the gas to which NGPC had prior claim on the leases.

NGPC attorney Dennis Dylewski said the jury should make examples of the independents for their wrong actions in taking the gas without regard to the pipeline company's Jerry Courtney, attorney for the independents, had argued the gas did belong to the independents. He said the independents had acted in good faith based on permission obtained from the Texas Railroad Commission regarding their gas production.

Economic summit shakes region's sleepy economy

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Southwestern Public Service Co. will foot the bill for a regional Target Industry Study to help communities in its service area attract new industry.

But communities must figure out how to use the study to gain any benefit in economic development programs, some 300 area government, community and business leaders were told Tuesday in an "economic summit"

"We have to leave you with a package and a set of tools to do your job — and it is your job,' said keynote speaker Michael Starke, president of Public Demographics Inc., of Cincinnati, Ohio

Starke's firm has been hired by SPS to do the Target Industry Study for SPS' service area in an effort to encourage some 55 communities in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas to seek new business and indus-

Bert Ballengee, SPS chairman and chief executive officer, said the task force will oversee the study "and keep it realistic."

Water proposal a bit murky

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

AMARILLO - State water officials got a mixed reception Tuesday during a public hearing on designating this region as a Critical Groundwater Area

The Texas Water Commission and the Texas Water Development Board conducted the joint hearing to see how supportive area residents are of their groundwater districts and to see whether parts of the Panhandle

If an area is so designated, then groundwater districts in the area are eligible for state funds to help with water development and conservation.

should be designated a Critical Groundwater

The sparse group that was scattered through the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Amarillo agreed on one thing: the importance of local control of the area water supply. But they split on how to go about it.

Richard Bowers, manager of the Panhandle Ground Water District No. 3., believes the best control is a strong groundwater district.

During testimony before a panel of TWC and TWDB officials, he said he's "glad that the TWC is interested in local control of the Bowers' main concern was with major water users such as the city of Amarillo and Phillips Petroleum taking groundwater from the district without being part of the groundwater district. Bowers' district covers all but a northern fifth of Carson County, all but the southeast half of Gray County, one section of Armstrong County and the eastern rim of Potter County. Amarillo and Phillips Petroleum are not part of the district.

"We feel they should be part of the water district and taxed by the district," Bowers said. The district currently levies a tax of a half-cent per $100 property valuation. His concern was echoed by Carson County Judge Jay Roselius.

Our major concern is that the water table is dropping in the northwest part of the coun-Roselius said, adding that the water table may be increasing in the southeast part

Bowers said that, in addition to being eligible for state funding, groundwater districts can provide education and assistance for residents and ranchers within the district.

But a group of Roberts County ranchers, county officials and county political candidates were a bit skeptical of groundwater districts. They were especially leery of joining an the Panhandle district

Board hires consultant in superintendent search

By PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

Pampa school trustees hired a consultant in the district's search for a new superintendent and took steps toward acting on the consultant's earlier recommendation to hire an interim superintendent.

The board agreed to use the Texas Association of School Boards' superintendent search service in its quest to replace resigning Superintendent James Trusty, after reviewing a proposal from James Jeffrey, director of the service. Jeffrey, with whom the board first met in San Antonio last month, informed trustees at their regular meeting Tuesday that the cost of the consulting service. including travel and other associated costs, will not exceed $3,000. Trusty announced in August that he is resigning

Jan. 1.

Trustee Wallace Birkes said he originally opposed the idea of hiring a consultant until he heard Jeffrey's proposal and learned of its "modest fee." Jeffrey told board members in San Antonio that most private consultants charge 15 percent of a first-year superintendent's salary.

"I think it'd be money well-spent," Birkes said.

"It might keep us out of trouble. Trustee James Duggan told the board he met with representatives of two districts, while at the state school board convention in San Antonio, who had used the TASB service and were pleased with

Jeffrey had advised the board during their San Antonio meeting to hire an interim superintendent to finish out the year after Trusty leaves, because most of the better candidates are reluctant to leave their current jobs in mid-year. He reiterated that position in his letter discussed by the board

Tuesday Board President Robert Lyle said the board discussed how to go about hiring an interim superintendent during an executive session Tuesday. He said that while some names have been mentioned as possibilities, no serious consideration has been given to potential temporary replacements. Under Jeffrey's proposal, the TASB would be responsible for: designing a brochure based on board criteria and sending it to potential applicants in Texas and Southwest Oklahoma, collecting applications, screening applicants down to five to eight finalists, meeting with the board to discuss interviews, arranging interview times with the board and notifying unsuccessful candidates.

The board would be responsible for approving the brochure and the screening committee, interviewing applicants, visiting school districts of the finalists and hiring the superintendent.

In other action Tuesday, the board set the 1986-87 school tax rate at 71.8 cents per $100 valuation, the same rate as the past year. Trustees Duggan, Joe VanZandt and Charles Loeffler voted against the proposal, just as they had voted against the budget package approved in August.

Before setting the tax rate, the board had awaited the outcome of the special session of the Texas Legislature to see if any budget cuts to the local district would be made. Trusty reported that the only cut made will mean state aid is no longer available to the district for paying substitutes under the state sick leave plan. He said the district still is scheduled to receive about $5,400 under the program for the 1984-85 year "They're that far behind," he said.

The board also reviewed an enrollment pattern study that Trusty said is designed to head off overcrowding problems under state limits on class size. House Bill 72 limits classrooms to 22 pupils in first and second grades. The same limit will apply to the third and fourth grades in September 1988, and a 25-pupil limit eventually will be required for

Trusty said previous studies have indicated the board will need 17 more classrooms than are now available to meet state requirements in 1988. Among the prospects listed in the study are grouping elementary schools — using some exclusively for the lower elementary grades and others for the higher ones - and housing a single grade in each grade school.

to keep another water district from taking us in."
After panelists exchanged perplexed glances at each other, panelist Henry Alvarez of the Groundwater Division of the TWDB, answered, "It's always up to the voters on whether become part of a district."

Bowers said that residents may petition and vote to join a district, and the district may vote, upon the residents' request to take an area in. The district does not, on its own, annex areas for the district.

He added that he has visited with Roberts County officials about joining the district, but he isn't sure how willing they are to be a part.

"I know the county is interested in doing something to address the groundwater situation," he said.

Roberts County resident Donald Jenkins said there is the possibility of forming a separate district within or for the county. But he does not want to "lose local control" by joining the Panhandle district

The High Plains (Ogallala) Aquifer, a massive underground ocean that covers most of the Panhandle is among 17 areas thay may be designated as a Critical Groundwater Area. There are three groundwater districts in the Panhandle area under consideration. In addition to the Panhandle district, there are the tiny Dallam County district in the northwest tip of the Panhandle and the North Plains district, which covers Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Hansford, Sherman and parts of Hutchinson, Moore and Hartley counties.

Now that the TWC and the TWDB have heard what at least a few of the area ranchers have to say, the next step is to set up an advisory committee to see how the agencies can help the local districts. The boards are seeking area residents to apply for the advisory committee. Bowers said he plans to apply.

Also attending the meeting were a delegation of ranchers from Dallam County who wanted local control of their groundwater.

or use" of the study, Starke said of the push to diversify.

Attending the meeting from Pampa were City Manager Bob Hart, Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett, IRI International President Vic Raymond, chamber and Pampa Industrial Foundation member Jerry Noles and Pampa SPS Manager Jim Morris.

Starke said his firm "is not here to save you or to perform a miracle." Instead, the study will give a process or a means by which communities can work to improve their economies.

"We all need to work together" in a spirit of cooperation, he added.

"One of the things we're most interested in here is being realistic," he stated.

Starke said communities need to consider both existing industries and businesses and attraction of new business for their economic development programs.

Existing businesses offer an easier route for beginning economic development, he said.

Communities should work to retain existing business and to help it expand, he suggested. It involves less money, less time and less resources

"to work with those already there," he explained. Another area for existing business is diversification, helping to develop other product lines or to locate other trade zones.

Finding new business has two major routes, Starke said.

The one that "gets all the attention and all the press" is that of attracting new industries and businesses to a community, he noted. Yet "loads of money is spent on advertising" and other programs to attract new business, but a return is not always guaranteed.

Another route is that of creation: looking for gaps in a market and then creating a business to fill those gaps, Starke said. This can involve getting an existing business to adapt its products for the market or attracting a new business to fill in the gap, he explained.

"It takes a lot of time in economic development," Starke said. "We're talking about a commitment here"

Death of a custom

Halloween isn't fun anymore.

Somewhere between the time that I was a kid trick-or-treating and my kids grew up enough to trick-or-treat, someone or something had taken the fun out of Halloween.

Maybe it was that idiot who put cyanide in his children's pixie straws. Maybe it was a combination of Halloween incidents that put such a damper on the occasion. Perhaps its just a normal change that occurs with the passage of time.

Whatever happened, I think celebrating Halloween with the custom of going from door to door asking for candy is gradually coming to an end. And I think the sooner this custom dies, the better.

What are we teaching our kids anyway? To go to people houses and say that if the people don't give them something that they'll be "tricked." Isn't that a form of blackmail?

I know, I know... Twenty years ago it was all done in the name of fun. Children, for the most part, knew they were only taking part in a game. Pranks rarely got out of hand. But you can't say the

Every year after Halloween, television newscasts and newspapers are full of incidents where "trick-or-treaters" have terrorized some individual or neighborhood. Or on the other hand, the accounts tell of tampered candy or poisoning attempts.

Do you call this fun? I don't. Do you call this a celebration? Of what?

Is it fun to have to worry about everything that goes into your little goblins' sacks? Is it fun to feel like you have to unwrap each piece of candy and break it apart to make sure there's no razor blades in them? Is it fun to have to go to the hospital to have the "treats" X-rayed for any foreign objects? I don't think this is fun... it's paranoia.

I think the time has come for people to re-think Halloween observations. No, let's not abolish Halloween. But let's do it in a way that is fun... really fun. All it takes is a little planning.

Of all the years I trick-or-treated, the one Halloween that stands out in my memory is the one where I was invited to a party at a friend's house when I was in the second grade. This friend lived in the country, so she wasn't able to come in and trick-or-treat like the rest of us city kids. Her parents allowed her to have a combination Halloween-slumber party. I remember it to this day. Several little girls all rode home with her on the school bus. As it began to grow dark, we put on our costumes. Then we played games, bobbed for apples, ate popcorn balls. We stayed up late (probably until 10 o'clock) telling scary stories.

This idea isn't a new one. More and more individuals and organizations are trying to put the fun back into Halloween. Parents and church groups are planning Halloween parties for their kids. Even the City of Pampa is planning a Halloween costume parade.

A school in Alleghany, N.Y., had one big Halloween party for all the students and their brothers and sisters. Of the 400 students in the school, 375 attended. More than 75 parents volunteered to be chaperones. More parents and area merchants donated food and prizes. The party ended at 6 p.m. To make sure all the kids went straight home, the principal randomly called different ones' phone numbers. If they answered the phone, they won a prize. Read more about this in Dear Abby next Monday

Now that sounds like fun. The children were involved, the parents were involved, the community was involved, and all in a positive way

Why couldn't we do something like that here? It's worth thinking about.

Investigators sift through the building damaged by a blast at the GOEX plant in Cleburne Tuesday night.

Company president is killed in munitions plant explosion

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — The president of a munitions plant credited with building the company from the ground up was killed when his "pet project" exploded and leveled the workshop he was experimenting in, a company official said.

David Levey, president of the GOEX plant, was working on a new project involving black powder when it exploded killing Levey and a co-worker, plant officials said.

'He built this company from the ground up," said Phillip Lawson, vice president of explosive manufacturing. "He was the finest man that ever

GOEX, where eight employees were killed in two separate explosions in 1973 and 1978, manufactures explosives and munitions for private firms and defense contractors. The project Levey was working on was not believed to be defense related, Law-

"It was a pet project of his that no one knew much about," said Lawson.

The other employee killed in the blast was not identified. Officials withheld his name pending notification of relatives.

Lawson said the explosion occurred about 5 p.m. Tuesday. The plant shuts down operations around 3:30 p.m., so only a few employees were on company grounds at the time of the blast, he said.

There was no other damage to surrounding property, officials said. Two firefighters were treated and released, Walls Hospital nursing supervisor Leslie Furlow said.

Normally the company works with explosives in a different area of the company compound about 200 yards from the workshop that was demolished Tuesday, residents said.

The company uses underground bunkers for testing explosives and normally sounds a horn before conducting a test, Cleburne police officer Norman Griffith said

Griffith said the plant had only recently been incorporated into the city limits. Residents who live near the explosion site, some within 100 yards of the workshop, said they thought at first it was just another routine test.

Fugitive minister hopes to return to protest in Texas

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A fundamentalist minister wanted for contempt of court in Texas says he will return to the state when "God would have me go back.'

"They say we're a fugitive from Texas," the Rev. W.N. Otwell said Tuesday. "We're not a fugitive from justice, that's for sure. We're a fugitive from injustice.

Otwell fled from Texas after an arrest warrant was issued when he failed to appear Oct. 6 at a contempt-of-court hearing. Otwell has ignored a March order to have his church-run boys home obtain a state license or close.

He spoke Tuesday to a national conference of unregistered churches, telling the ministers from across the nation that he plans to return to Texas when he has rallied support for his cause.

The Rev. Greg Dixon of the Indianapolis Baptist Temple said Otwell "stands in the tradition of a long line of Americans who have stood for religious liberty.

'We do not consider him a lawbreaker, a rebel, an anarchist," said Dixon, the chairman of the American Coalition of Unregistered Churches. 'We consider Gov. Mark White, (Attorney General) Jim Mattox and the authorities of the state of Texas ... the anarchists and lawbreakers.'

"When my mission is through, crossing this country, I'll call ... the sheriff in the county I'm from and come in and turn myself in," he said. "I'm not afraid of jail. Jail would be the simplest Otwell said he hopes 100 ministers will join him in Austin next Monday through Thursday to protest against White, Mattox and State District Judge Paul R. Davis, who issued the arrest war-

"Who in the name of God do you think you are?" Otwell said the protesters would ask state officials. 'Who gave you the authority to attack a church ministry? God sure didn't. You don't have a biblical right. You don't have a constitutional right."

Otwell, 49, faces fines and an arrest warrant in Texas in a dispute over a court order to close his unlicensed boys home operated by his Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, a suburb of Fort

He is being fined $100 a day for violating the state law requiring youth homes to get state licenses. Otwell owes the state more than $27,000 in fines, Mattox said Monday

Texas authorities said Monday they will not try to have Otwell extradited. Otwell maintains the state has found nothing wrong with the home aside from its failure to have a license

'No one has been damaged physically. There's never been any child abuse," he said.

Crime prevention stressed

Crime Prevention month is October and the Pampa Police Department is focusing on several Crime Prevention Programs. One of the most popular programs available is the Operation I.D. program. Operation I.D. was started by the Pampa Police Department in 1974. Engravers are available for loan to anyone to engrave their valuables. Patroll Officers also take the engravers out to various neighborhoods and loan them out. A burglar is less likely to take something that is marked with identifying marks. Stickers are provided, by the Police Department, to place in windows in the home to act as a deterrent to the burglar.

Another positive aspect of Operation I.D. is that with an identifying number, such as a drivers license number, the Police Department may be able to locate the owner of property found or seized much easier. Each year the police Department has to auction off numerous items that are not returnable because of un known owners. In the event that a house is burglarized and the items taken are marked with a drivers license an officer can run a computer check on the drivers license to locate the owner.

The Pampa Police Department provides this program at no cost to the user. If you are interested in marking you property you can contact the Crime Prevention Unit of the Pampa Police Depart-

Father convicted of castrating son being released on parole

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A father convicted of using radioactive pellets to castrate his son is being paroled this week after serving one-third of his 15year sentence.

The son, Kirk Crocker, is not pleased with the decision by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole Kerry Andrus Crocker on Friday

"It's a cheap trick to have him appeal a conviction, run from police, and once he is finally put in prison, he only spends five years there," the son said

The younger Crocker, a Houston real estate agent, has tried three times to prevent the release of his father by petitioning the parole board. The father was most recently up for parole in June 1985 The board was forced to release the 56-year-old petroleum engineer because he has earned enough good-conduct credits to make him eligible for parole from the Texas Department of Corrections, officials said.

The father was convicted in 1975 for placing pellets of radioactive cesium 137 in a sock, then placing it on his son as punishment for siding with his estranged wife over a dispute on vistitation rights, testimony showed.

His son spent about three years in bed with burns and sores before physicians diagnosed his injuries as radiation induced. He had to undergo a series of operations until he was 17 to cut out the burns that would not heal. He still must take regular injections of hormones to maintain a normal appearance. Kerry Crocker was freed on bond while he appealed his 10year prison sentence. He jumped bond after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals affirmed his conviction and was finally arrested in 1981.

Sailors' rice bags cause trade dispute

Achieving international free trade is one of those worthwhile goals that carries with it enough aggravation to drive almost anyone behing locked doors. But, of course, that's the problem in the first place. Cutting through the protectionist red tape is a must, but a sticky problem nevertheless.

Take the case of the All-Japan Seamen's Union, American rice growers and the governments of both countries.

Until recently, one of the perks of being a Japanese sailor was that you got to bring home Caifornia-grown rice, which many Japanese believe tastes much better than the homegrown product. Unfortunately, while some Japanese customs officials allowed sailors to bring in 200 pounds of rice each trip, others set a limit

When one sailor asked the government to reconcile the difference, the bureaucrats were aghast that anyone was importing rice in the first place. And they promptly halted the practice, which set some rather unusual wheels into motion.

To be sure, there was the predictable response of American rice growers, who filed a complaint with the U.S. trade representative alleging that the exclusion of rice violated existing trade rules. But the seamen's union also took offense, protesting that the exclusion of rice imports amounted to official duplicity, given the Japanese government's professed commitment to

While the few hundred pounds of rice imported by the sailors wasn't likely to drive Japan's rice farmers under, the underlying principle is what the bureaucrats chose to stand on. In Japan, defense of the domestic rice industry is an issue of national security — their rice farmers are paid 10 times the world price for what they grow. Sooner or latrer, word of cheap imports, no matter how minuscule their amount, could undermine confidence in government policy.

Not to be outdone, the American government subsidizes its rice farmers through loans on the value of s at roughly twice the world market price Given the use of taxpayer money to run their businesses, American rice growers fairly drool at he prospect of an open — or even partially open — market

The issue, pitting Japanese sailors against Japanese farmers and American farmers against Japanese bureaucrats, now rests before officials of both countries. It's just a minor issue in the overall problem of trade restrictions, but of such minor issues are born the hard feeling — and tougher restriction — that must be avoided at all cost.

Finding a solution requires a thorough re-examination, not just of trade barriers, but of global price supports. Time is of the essence.

Ronald Reagan's chief contribution to nuclear arms control is the Treading Water school of diplomacy: You keep moving but never get anywhere. He journeyed to Iceland to meet with Mikhail Gorbachev not because he hoped to forge progress on truly important issues but because he didn't.

No summit has ever been so hastily arranged, so obviously political or so unlikely to yield anything significant. It was scheduled because both leaders wanted to distract attention from what had been the dominant issue in U.S.-Soviet relations: the Soviets' detention of Nicholas Daniloff. Gorbachev was eager to make the world forget the KGB's act of state terrorism. Reagan was eager to make the Daniloff trade an old Besides, summits make everyone, at home and abroad, feel better. As the Economist of London puts it, "The effect is that of a large whiskey: a warm glow, a relaxed feeling, a tendency to put the slippers on. Look, the superpowers are getting on fine with each other, there's no need to worry.

Well, it's not necessarily a bad thing to reassure the average person, and, under the right circumstances, face-to-face meetings between leaders may facilitate serious negotiations. But unless both sides want to negotiate about important matters, a summit is mostly an exercise in public relations

Yes, Reykjavik could have produced a deal on the Europe-based intermediate nuclear forces

(INF). Yes, that may evoked applause in Europe and the U.S. But the importance of these missiles is much more political than military

For all the controversy involved in deploying them, the Pershings and cruise missiles add little to NATO's deterrent. They serve mainly to reassure Europe of the implausible - that, in case of invasion, the U.S. will use nuclear weapons rather than abandon its allies. Limiting either side's intermediate-range weapons in Europe, or even eliminating them, won't appreciably enhance either side's security.

Nor would any plausible agreement on longrange weapons, which was almost certainly out of reach anyway. Both sides were talking about a 30 percent cut in strategic arms, but even that wouldn't remove the existing incentives for either to start a nuclear exchange. What really is needed is to make it impossible for either side to destroy the other's land-based forces by strik-

But neither a 30 percent cut nor a more ambitious agreement could emerge without an administration retreat from its plan for a "Star Wars' defense, something Reagan insisted was not negotiable. The Soviets fear Star Wars will neutralize their nuclear deterrent. They aren't likely to help out by dismantling part of it. But they plainly would make real concessions on strategic weapons to prevent Star Wars from becoming a reality Reagan's conservative critics are alarmed at the prospect of a befuddled president succumbing to the lure of a deal with the Soviets. They are incapable of recognizing that in any agreement, it's possible for both sides to benefit. Their distrust of a man who has opposed every arms control treaty ever signed is as mysterious as it is patronizing. His past suggests that Reagan isn't likely to reach any broad agreement with Gorbachev, still less one that puts the U.S. at a serious disadvantage.

The president is shrewder than the hawks. The appeal of the meeting was that it held out the prospect of an agreement on INF. It was even possible that a bargain would be reached to limit the number of nuclear tests. Neither deal would be militarily significant, but either would be politically profitable for both sides. And for Reagan, they would obscure the continued stalemate on the more urgent issues of strategic arms and Star Wars.

Conservatives who fear that the president has undergone a change of heart about the Soviets probably needn't worry. They forget how skillfully he has managed to dissipate the pressure for arms control.

The Reykjavik meeting allowed him to continue satisfying public opinion at home and abroad without giving up anything he really

game of broken necks

For all the improvements designed to make vious year. football less dangerous — for all the helmets. face-guards, pads and flak-jackets - you are seeing evermore players carried from the field.

Joe Montana, San Francisco quarterback who led that team to two Super Bowl victories, slipped a spinal disc in the opening game of this season. The disc has been repaired. The spine was not fused. Coach Bill Walsh expects him to play again next year.

But football injuries are on the increase, including those that end careers and-or cripple for

The National Football League Players Association recently analyzed injury statistics from the 1984 season.

NFL players averaged 102 injuries per week. That equals one injury per player per season. And that is a 20 percent increase over the pre-

In the past 11 years the league has implemented 35 rules changes intended to enhance player safety, but at the same time there is increased pressure on players to "play hurt" - to please the coach or to stay in the lineup or just from personal pride. San Francisco's hard-hitting all-pro Ronnie

Lott, in last year's playoff game, played with a fractured, lacerated finger.

Last April he chose to have the shattered finger amputated — because reconstructive surgery might have kept him out of this year's

Here in Chicago we watch Dick Butkus, yesteryear's football hero, hobbling about on permanently damaged knees. The heaviest doses of anti-inflammatory drugs don't help anymore. Jeff Nixon of the Buffalo Bills hurt his knee for the fifth time in 1983. He can't walk stairs without severe pain.

Off-season physical conditioning is a factor. Chicago Bears' incomparable Walter Payton runs hills and works out 52 weeks a year. Nobody runs better and few block better but - knock on wood - he bends without breaking. His teammate, quarterback Jim McMahon, who disdains off-season workouts, is sidelined

by injury every few games

We are now seeing an enormous increase in neck and spinal injuries.

The Wall Street Journal recently quoted the West Coast regional director of the players' association saying, "Bodies get used, used up, broken, shipped out. Then new bodies come in and it starts all over again." Rare is the Roger Staubach who says, "Enough!" while he is still in one piece.

glowing reminder about nuclear waste By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - "It is unthinkable," said a 1978 congressional report, "that the United States would continue nuclear power plant construction without a national program of radioactive waste disposal and decommissioning.

Yet that warning from the House Government Operations Committee continues to go unheeded by the federal government and the owners of the 100 commercial nuclear facilities throughout the country.

Because the nation still has no official repository for high-level, nonmilitary radioactive waste, almost all of the 12,000 metric tons of spent fuel assemblies from those power plants are temporarily stored in water-filled holding pools and ponds.

The decommissioning or dismantling of reactors when their useful life ends after 30 or 40 years is expected to quadruple demand for long-term disposal facilities by the beginning of the next century. By that time, the federal government says a permanent burial ground will exist, probably in Nevada, Texas or Washington.

But that project has been repeated ly delayed and one knowledgeable critic suggests that the schedule "can be met only through a series of somewhat fantastic assumptions probably requiring divine intervention.

The low-level wastes produced during decommissioning would be less radioactive but more voluminous. Dismantling a single commercial reactor would produce almost 1,500 truckloads of radioactive debris enough to bury an entire football field under 13 feet of it.

But waste disposal is only one aspect of decommissioning nuclear power plants. Because they are highly radioactive, they cannot simply be demolished with a wrecking ball.

Yet nobody is certain how to do this task that has never been done. Although some small research, military and commercial reactors have been dismantled, none of the 1,000 megawatt reactors that now are standard in the industry has ever been decommissioned

Estimates of how much the task might cost vary widely. One industry group says a plant could be decommissioned for slightly more than $30 million to just under $130 million, while a consulting firm says the range is significantly higher, from about $175 million to almost $695 million.

The largest reactor decontaminated and dismantled to date is the small 22 megawatt Elk River plant in Minnesota. That three-year project, conducted during the mid-1970s, cost the Department of Energy more than $6 million.

DOE now is promoting the decommissioning of the 72 megawatt Shippingport reactor in Pennsylvania as a model to provide the industry with the "back end" experience it will need in the future.

But at Shippingport, DOE is purposely avoiding one of the most difficult financial, technological and safechallenges posed decommissioning - dismantling and trucking away the reactor vessel, by far the most highly radioactive component of any power plant.

Instead, the 770 ton reactor will be loaded onto a 4,000 ton barge and sent down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, across the Gulf of Mexico, through the Panama Canal, up the Pacific Coast and up the Columbia River to the government-operated Hanford nuclear reservation, where it will be buried.

Other abandoned commercial reactors, some shut down for as long as decade or more, that still have not been decommissioned include Humboldt Bay 3 in California, Three Mile Island 2 in Pennsylvania, Dresden 1 in Illinois and Indian Point 1 in New York.

Elsewhere, here is the state of the art: A survey last year of 30 utility companies operating nuclear power plants revealed that 20 were using funds collected for decommissioning for other purposes

Democrat Andy Briscoe talks about his endorsement of Bill Clements, Republican candidate for governor, Tuesday as Clements listens.

AUSTIN (AP) - Andrew Briscoe, defeated Democratic candidate for governor, said he endorsed Republican gubernatorial nominee Bill Clements for the good of Texas' future, and not for However, a spokesman for Democratic Gov. Mark White said Briscoe first offered to campaign for White — if Democrats would pay his $219,000 campaign debts.

Briscoe, a distant kinsman of former Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe, got more than 247,000 votes in his May 3 primary bid against White.

"There have been no offers whatever, no guarantees to force my decision so far as supporting Gov. Clements," Briscoe said Tuesday.

Dwayne Holman, White's campaign manager, told reporters that Briscoe offered on Sept. 4 in Dallas to campaign for White if "we could basically pay him $219,000" to cover his campaign debts.

"I told him I was sure we were not interested but he asked if I would run it by the governor. I called him back the next day and said we were not interested.

Holman said Briscoe appeared disappointed. 'He said he at least expected a counter offer,' Holman said

Briscoe told the news conference that his final campaign report would be submitted by Jan. 15, 'and I guarantee you that I don't have one more penny in my campaign committee than I have before I made this decision.'

"I did not ask any financial remuneration," Briscoe said about his talk with Holman. "I did talk with Dwayne Holman and the governor. I said to the governor, 'If you will take care of the issues, everything else will take care of itself.' No promise of endorsement was made," Briscoe said

At the news conference, Clements also criticized White for a series of appearances Sunday at black churches in Fort Worth. He said White told the church members Clements "would take away their eye glasses, and cut out their hot meals, and cut education" among other things

'If there ever was an example of prevarication in the pulpit this was a classic example," Clements said. "It was a disgraceful performance that cast a shadow on the pulpit.'

"It's under investigation, and I have no comment," Clements said.

"We asked him (Morphew) to take the test," said George Bayoud, Clements' campaign manager. He told me that he was going to take it last Thursday. If he has decided not to do it, that is his desire. But I asked him to do it.

Construction workers are checked for drugs

AUSTIN (AP) — An unannounced check for drugs among workers at a high-rise office building uncovered about an ounce of marijuana in cigarettes and packets, and unidentified pills found hidden under rocks and car bumpers, construction company officials said.

Workers at a high-rise project in downtown Austin were greeted Tuesday by drug-sniffing dogs, urine tests and lunchbox searches in a company crack-down on drug use on the job site.

A team of seven technicians and two dogs from Global Safety and Security of New Orleans inspected workers' lunchboxes and tool chests Tuesday morning and asked each employee one to turn out his pockets. The workers were then ordered to give urine samples.

'Two or three' among the company's 25member work crew refused to take the urinalysis and will be fired, said Alan Stembridge, executive vice president of Charter Builders, Inc.

The Dallas-based company is building the 30story One Congress Plaza office building at the northeast corner of Congress Avenue and First

The results of the urinalysis should be available later in the week, Stembridge said.

Stembridge said the drug screening of workers was ordered because the accident rate on its jobs in Austin is higher than in other cities where it has construction projects.

"Charter's interest is safety on the job site," Stembridge said. "If even one death is prevented, it will more than pay for the cost of the program." Workers for subcontractors will not be allowed back on the job site if they fail the urine test or refuse to take it, he said.

The tests were met with mixed feelings from the workers, who said the search that began at 6:30 a.m. delayed work for about two hours as they stood in line for the tests and searches.

A foreman for a subcontractor said he will send Charter Builders a bill for the two hours that his men were idle waiting for the drug tests.

"I can't believe they are doing that here," said Mark Mullen, president of the Central Texas Building Trades Council, which represents union

"I think it probably is a violation of those workers' privacy, and personally I think it's a constitutional violation although I guess that's open to intrepretation."

A urinalysis does not reveal whether a person is under the influence of drugs at the time the sample was given but can detect if drugs have been taken within the past several days.

Governor's testimony sought in Lucas case

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Investigators in the Henry Lee Lucas case have had a tough time serving a subpoena on Gov. Mark White, whose testimony is sought in a pretrial hearing.

Defense attorney Rod Ponton said a private process server was trying to deliver the subpoena to White. An agreement with the governor's office fell through Monday when an aide first agreed, then refused to accept the subpoena on behalf of White, Ponton

White's legal counsel, Leslie Benitez, said from her office in Austin there was no such agreement and that a subpoena has to be delivered directly to the person named.

"I can't imagine what information the governor would have that would be relevant," Ms. Benitez added.

Lucas is charged with firstdegree murder in the May 1983 slaying of Librada Apodaca at her El Paso home. Lucas at first confessed to that slaying and about 600 others nationwide, but later recanted all.

In a pretrial hearing that be gan Sept. 8 and is expected to end next week, Lucas' attorneys are trying to have their client's confession ruled inadmissible. The confession to the Apodaco slaying is as phony as the others, they said. The Travis County Sheriff's office in Austin returned White's subpoena last week, saying it couldn't be served.

Reagan, Gorbachev temper their crit

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, while still blaming each other for the stalemate over "Star Wars" in Iceland, are offering reassurances of their determination to reverse the nuclear arms race at the bargaining table or at a future summit.

New instructions will be drafted for U.S. negotiators in Geneva to try to capitalize on the gains Reagan and Gorbachev made toward curbing offensive weapons before their Reykjavik talks dissolved Sunday into disagreement over the U.S. anti-missile program.

And Secretary of State George Shultz announced Tuesday he will leave for Vienna on Nov. 5 to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze during a 35-nation review of the 1975 Helsinki agreement, which was designed to ease East-West tensions in Europe. Shultz said his intention was to reopen the summit discussions.

But Reagan, Shultz and other senior U.S. officials, in a concerted public relations campaign of speeches, television interviews and news conferences Tuesday, gave no indication of yielding to Gorbachev's demand that American anti-missile research be confined to the laboratory

The Soviet leader took a tough stand on the program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative. In a televised report to the Soviet people, he said the United States wanted to "bleed the Soviet Union white economically" through an expensive arms race in space.

Gorbachev called the projected Star Wars antimissile shield "nothing but a trick" by Reagan to gain military advantage over the Soviets. He said he had asked the president "why do you need it?" since all nuclear weapons would be eliminated over 10 years under Reagan's own cutback proposals.

The president gave his answer at a White House meeting with congressional leaders. "SDI is America's insurance policy that the Soviet Union will keep its commitments," he said.

The long-distance debate over Star Wars seemed to ease, however, in a mutual effort not to lose ground gained in Iceland toward curbing offensive

Army drafts armadillos

WASHINGTON (AP) Polished brass and battle ribbons hung from the chests of several nervous contestants lined up for one of the most primitive battles ever fought by America's armed forces - the race of the arma-

Staff sergeants, full colonels, generals clutched "the oldest tanks in the world," and stood in a small pen set up in the grand ballroom of the Washington Sheraton Hotel racing their armadillos, surrounded by 400 cheering Texans.

The group was linked by two powerful bonds - membership in the Association of the United States Army, Central Texas branch, and love of scampering, wild-eyed armadillos. The army was in town for its annual Washington convention. The armadillos just came along for the ride.

"That sucker is very strong," said Gen. Crosbie Saint, commander of the 40,000 soldiers stationed at Fort Hood, talking affectionately about his entrant in the race, a smallish armadillo with plenty of get-up-and-go.

"I lift weights and that kind of stuff, but let me tell you, that guy nearly got away from me. He's got muscles of steel.'

Saint's armadillo, "Hoover Hog," hit the 15-foot-long track like a well-trained greyhound, then pounded and plodded its way over the finish line to win the day. Some said he was a ringer.

Afterward, soldiers tried to drape the winning animal in a 1st Cavalry blanket, but it would have none of that. So the crowd settled for an army sticker on its rippled back.

Each Armadillo race represented another stone in the path to greater understanding of what the AUSA chapter in Killeen wanted to communicate at the convention. And that message was that Central Texas is a nice place to live and work

Farm boy loses reattached arms

ROBBINSDALE, Minn. (AP)-A 13-year-old boy whose arms were surgically reattached after they were torn off in a farm accident hasn't been told that doctors had to amputate the arms because of infection, his mother

David Virnig's arms were removed Monday night at North Memorial Hospital, said Marlene Virnig. "They had to take his arms off. It was either take them off or he'd die." The family had believed David would be able to keep at least one arm, and they haven't told him yet of the amputation, his mother said, adding, "But I think he realizes it."

The Texans were one of several chapters promoting their areas at the international AUSA meeting in Washington. Chapter president John Blankenship said the armadillos were brought along to give some authenticity to the evening. Joanie Duncan of the Greater Killeen Chamber of Commerce contracted with armadillo aficionado Jim Schmidt of New Braunfels to bring the string of five armadillos up for the event.

"They travel better together," Schmidt said. "Like pack rats, only I don't want people to think they are rats and start shooting them.

Schmidt also doesn't like to hear people call his pets "Road Pizzas," a name they picked up for their uncanny habit of jumping with fright at night in the middle of the road just as a car goes over them.

"They're good little pets. And fast racers.

Killer earthquake completely disrupts Salvadorans' lives

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - Among the tons of twisted, broken debris lie the remains of broken lives, personal treasures and memories: tattered school books, crumpled business papers and torn family pictures.

They are what is left from Friday's earthquake that put the private lives of tens of thousands of Salvadorans on the streets and killed at least 982 people, according to the updated death toll given by President Jose Napolean Duarte Tuesday

More was lost in six seconds from the quake, which measured 7.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, than in seven years of civil war, Duarte said, referring to the fighting between leftist guerrillas

A semblance of normality returned to this disaster-plagued country when soap operas and American baseball reappeared Tuesday on Salvadoran television. Electricity and limited telephone service also were restored to most areas of the quake-

United States said ready to formalize Iceland agreements

GENEVA (AP) - Soviet and American nuclear arms control negotiators met today for the first time since the Iceland summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

'We've got a very sharp pencil, we've got lots of paper and we're ready to work," U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman told reporters before the session

Viktor Karpov, the chief Soviet delegate, was touring West European capitals and was not to return to Geneva before next week. His deputy, Yuri Kusnetsov, refused to speak to reporters as he entered the U.S. mission.

Kampelman said the Reykjavik meeting "was a very important, significant, positive step in the bilateral development of an agreement here.' He said "many more problems were solved" in Reykjavik than he had expected and that the Geneva talks would be pivotal in continuing the work done there.

Kampelman spoke at a hastily-called news conference in front of the U.S. mission before negotiations on space weapons began. Separate talks on strategic nuclear arms were scheduled for the same at the Soviet mission. The group on mediumrange weapons normally meets on Thursdays,

He said he was "so sorry" that an agreement on medium-range missiles, said by both sides before the summit to be the most promising area for an accord, was not reached. The summit collapsed after Gorbachev insisted that the U.S. "Star Wars" program of research into high-technology, space-based weapons be limited to laboratory work for the next 10 years.

Texas laymen are missionaries with hammers and saws

By HEBER TAYLOR Lufkin Daily News

APPLE SPRINGS, Texas (AP) Early this week, motor homes and travel trailers converged from all over the state on this East Texas town of 130 for an oldfashioned church-raising.

Two days later, the workers had the building framed and were putting up plywood walls and insulation.

Eighty-year-old Olen Miles began the job with the observation that many hands make light work.

Not that the Lord's burden is ever heavy, Miles added, but work on the new Apple Springs Baptist Church was going smoothly with 45 pairs of hands on the job.

"The Lord's burden is alway light, you better believe it," Miles "These fellows are all retired. They wanted something to do and they've all become missionaries by now. They just like building churches for the glory of God." A dozen hammers rattled on the sanctuary rafters. Down below, in what soon will be a Sunday school room, a power saw was whining as carpenters cut lumber for the workers on the roof.

Miles, a trim man who wears a tropical helmet on the job, predicted the church would be finished in two weeks.

'When I was a boy, if a neighbor out in the country got sick or his barn burned down all the neighbors would come in and clean up his crop or build him a new barn," he said. "When I retired I said, "Why can't we do the same thing with the Lord's work?' "

Seven years ago, Miles founded Texas Baptist Men, an association of retired men who volunteer to build churches.

We pay our own way," he said, adding that the workers pro-vide labor for small churches that can supply building materials. "We only have three requirements: We need a place to park our trailers; we ask for one meal a day at noon; and we want to have a revival while we're Charles Butler, pastor of Apple Springs Baptist Church, said the new church would seat about 200 and have nine classrooms for Sunday school.

"We really couldn't have built this by ourselves," Butler said, explaining that his congregation has about 90 on its Sunday school roll. "We got the money for the materials, but without the volunteer labor, this just wouldn't have been possible. Miles, an Austin resident, put out the word on the church raising and Texas Baptist Men converged from 35 towns. Workers came from Houston, Tyler and Midland. One man came from Clovis, N.M.

They brought their wives, who have formed a choir called "Grandmas on Wheels." The choir sings at the evening revivals, which feature testimonials from the laymen who build churches during the day.

"We've put up 14 churches this year," Miles said. "We work 10 months out of the year and this will be our last church. We'll shut down after this one and start up again in January."

Miles said 160 men have joined the association, which has built about 100 churches in Texas, Arkansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin,

"We'll run two crews at the same time," he said. "We got a small crew working up at Euless right now."

An advance crew goes to the site and puts in sewer and water lines for the travel trailers.

"I put a lead plumber, electrician, carpenter and airconditioning man on each church," Miles said. "I tell them where to go. The rest, I just tell them where the jobs are and they go where the Lord leads them. There's always enough to do the

Some of the workers go to one or two jobs a year. Others go to eight or 10.

'They go where they want and leave when they want," Miles said. "They come from all walks of life. Some of them have been with us so long, they've gotten to be pretty good carpenters."

James Butler of McDade, the lead carpenter on the Apple Springs project, is one of those who misses few jobs. After retiring from a construction firm, he started building churches.

"I've know Olen Miles for 50 years," he said smiling. "That's how I got into this."

Several of the workers have years of construction experience. and keep the jobs running profes-

"I feel this work is as imprortant as the missionary work going on in Africa and places like that. We love it. We feel this is where the Lord wants us to be."

Miles, who has led building expeditions to Hawaii and Brazil. said he never worries about running out of work.

Women seeking major offices in record numbers in state

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — From courthouses to Congress, women will be seeking major offices in record numbers next month as they try for posts traditionally held by men.

Although some experts point to the historic candidacy in 1984 of Geraldine Ferraro, they said the unsuccessful vice presidential candidate is not the only reason behind the surge of women candidates

"Women have matured in the political process," said Jeannine Grenier, a spokeswoman for the Washington-based National Women's Political Caucus and editor of Women's Political Next month's statewide ballot features only one woman from a major party as Treasurer Ann Richards, a Democrat, seeks reelection. Three Texans, however, are among the 64 women battling for spots in the U.S. House.

The Libertarian party, after petitioning for places on the Nov. 4 ballot, has fielded three women for statewide posts, including gubernatorial hopeful Theresa Doyle, a San Antonio housewife.

Judith Zaffirini, former vice chairwoman of the Texas Democratic Party is running against former state Rep. Bennie Bock of New Braunfels for a state senate

"Women have always been involved in politics as workers. Now, they're taking that natural step to candidates," Mrs. Zaffirini, a Laredo businesswoman, told the San Antonio Light. Cyndi Taylor Krier, Texas' only female state senator, said there are some advantages to being a woman in government. "Sometimes it's an advantage to stick out," said Ms. Krier, only

'You have women running for (Bexar County) Commissioners Court where no woman has served," Ms. Krier said. "You have women running for both district court and county court. "I don't know any of these candidates who I say aren't credible candidates," she said.

Mrs. Zaffirini and other female candidates said their gender has not become a campaign issue, but some said it could be a disadvan-

Susan Reed, a Republican hopeful for the 144th state district judgeship, said that there may be a perception that a woman would be more lenient with defendants.

To counter that perception, Ms. Reed is pushing her eight years' experiecnce as a state pro-

Her opponent, county court-atlaw judge Jay Miller, also is counting on his experience to get him elected.

"I've never perceived the race as being female vs. male," Miller said. "I don't see (Mrs. Reed's gender) as either an advantage or disadvantage."

The male candidates in the two contested races for Bexar County Commissioners Court, Paul Elizondo and Bob Lee, also said their races focus on experience and not gender.

Taylor entered the contest to determine the cards' designs through an assignment given by Janice Sackett, PHS art teacher. Sackett told her class to create a design for the contest last

'We had two weeks to work on it. Mrs. Sackett told us bright colors would be best and to be sure and enter original ideas," Taylor remembered

Two weeks later, Taylor had come up with three designs - a teddy bear, Santa with a cowboy hat, and a kitten in a boot. "My

Southwestern Bell Telephone offers these tips on handling annoying telephone calls. These steps can help protect against abusive, harassing or obscene •Threats to life and property should be reported immediately to law enforcement officials.

•If the caller is not known, don't respond to personal questions or give out any kind of personal information. One doesn't have to talk to the caller at all.

•Always ask who's calling. If a caller asks for a name, respond by asking, "Who's calling?" or 'What number did you dial?'' or 'Who are you calling?'

•If the caller doesn't say any thing right away, hang up.

•Keep poised and try not to exhibit anger or fear. If necessary, notify a law enforcement agency or the phone company after such

Sox pound Angels to set up finale

By DAVE O'HARA AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Outstanding pitching, mediocre pitching. Great plays, bizarre plays. Dramatic comebacks, tear-jerking

After six exciting games of emotionpacked, roller-coaster baseball, the California Angels and the Boston Red Sox battle it out tonight for the 1986 American League championship

'Everything is on the line, the money, the whole season is out there on one ball game,' California's Reggie Jackson said Tuesday night after Boston slugged its way to a 10-4 victory, evening the series at three games apiece.

California, the AL West champion, named veteran left-hander John Candelaria to start in the seventh and deciding game of the playoff to decide the AL representative in the World Series

Boston, the East Division champ, planned to counter with right-hander Roger Clemens, who led the major leagues with 24 victories but has been frustrated in two starts against the Angels

Clemens, who pitched the University of Texas to the College World Series championship in 1983, reportedly was nursing a touch of the flu, but promised to be ready for the biggest challenge of his young career.

While seeking to end years of frustration, which include seventh-game losses in the 1946, 1967 and 1975 World Series, the Red Sox are determined to repeat Kansas City's act last year, when the Royals rallied from a 3-1 deficit to beat Toronto for the pennant and went on to win the World Series.

Trailing three games to one, Boston made an almost unbelievable comeback in Game 5 Sunday, scoring four runs in the ninth on a pair of two-run homers by Don Baylor and Dave Henderson and then winning 7-6 in the 11th.

The Red Sox apparently broke out of a hitting slump late in that game and it carried over on their return home to friendly Fenway Park, where they had a 51-30 regular season record.

With Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd settling down after a shaky start and pitching seven strong innings, the Red Sox mauled Kirk McCaskill and three successors for 16 hits, including four by light-hitting Spike Owen, three by Marty Barrett and two each by Bill Buckner, Dwight Evans and Rich Gedman.

"We haven't been putting our hits together for a while, but we finally did in the (five-run) third inning," Boston Manager John McNamara said

"Oil Can gave us what we wanted, seven strong innings, and Bob Stanley got in some work by pitching the eighth and ninth,' McNamara added. "Now we have Clemens backed up by rested people. We're in pretty good shape pitching-wise.

McNamara said he didn't think there was "any such thing as momentum" in baseball. California Manager Gene Mauch and the Angels agreed.

'Both teams have shown they know how to play," said Mauch, who hopes to go to the World Series for the first time in 25 years as a manager. "Both teams have shown they know how to win. Now we'll find out which team knows how to win when it matters.

'It was the biggest game I've ever pitched," Boyd said. "A job had to be done. Now I have to believe my man Roger can do it. Big Tex will be ready.

"You will see Candelaria out there and other people like (Mike) Witt, (Don) Sutton and (Donnie) Moore if needed," Mauch said. 'That's why I'm not worried.

Asked about pressure and personal frustration, Mauch said:

'The only people who feel pressure are those who don't know how to handle it. Frustrating? All my nervous, frustrating and worry days are behind me. I've been in this game too long.

Mets one game away

NEW YORK (AP) — It was classic playoff baseball. Brilliant pitching, tight defense. Even a disputed call by an umpire.

New York catcher Gary Carter finally ended his 1-for-21 slump and the game with a 12th-inning RBI single Tuesday that lifted the Mets to a 2-1 victory over Houston in Game 5 of the National League

The victory gave New York a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series with Game 6 scheduled for today in the Astrodome with Houston left-hander Bob Knepper, the starter in Game 3, facing New York left-hander Bob Ojeda, the winner in Game 2.

"Whether I get a lot of hits or not, it's the key hits that count,' Carter, who drove in 105 runs during the season, said Tuesday. 'Now, it's a good feeling to be up 3-to-2 and have Knepper tomorrow. Hopefully, we'll be able to do something against him.

Carter hadn't been able to do much of anything against any Houston pitcher in the series. His only hit until the game-winner was a double against Nolan Ryan in Game 2.

'He's been our big guy all year," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said of Carter. "He was pressing a little, but he also was hitting some balls right on the nose and not coming up with anything. But I can't think of anybody I'd like to have up in a situation like that more than Gary Carter.'

Carter's heroics ended one of the best pitching duels since the inception of the playoffs in 1969.

Ryan, who spent two stints on the disabled list this year, allowed two hits in nine innings, striking out 12 and walking one. His only mistake was a fifthinning home run by Darryl Strawberry, his second of the playoffs, that tied the game 1-1.

"I didn't have a very good curveball, but I went to the changeup in the middle of the game," Ryan said. "The is the best one I've pitched since I came back." New York's Dwight Gooden

Tolliver honored by AP

AP Sports Writer

Remember the Billy Joe Tolliver of 1985? Well, he showed up again.

Recall the Tolliver who broke the Southwest Conference single game passing record with 26 of 43 passes for 422 yards and five touchdowns against Texas Christian last year?

The Texas Tech quarterback wasn't quite that prolific against the Arkansas Razorbacks on Saturday but he still directed the Red Raiders to the upset of the year. Tolliver, a redshirt sophomore from Boyd,

Texas, was named The Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week for his exploits against the eighth-ranked unbeaten Razorbacks in a 17-

The AP's Defensive Player of the Week was cornerback James Flowers, who intercepted two passes in Texas A&M's 19-7 victory over Houston. Flowers returned one of the passes 25 yards for A&M's only touchdown.

Tolliver's story is one of boom, bust, boom

The Red Raiders were a high-flying offensive outfit last year but Jerry Moore was fired and David McWilliams, a defensive specialist, was Tech's offense took a holiday in runaway victories by Miami, Texas A&M and Baylor.

Tolliver showed his poise against the Hogs by completing 19 of 34 passes for 168 yards and directing the offense like a senior. "The difference in his play from a lot of the other games this year is that he executed the offense, every phase of it, the running, the drop back passing, the quick passes and the sprint out passes," McWilliams said.

"Only twice in the entire game did he move out of the pocket when he shouldn't have. He's young and still learning but he's getting better

The 6-foot-1, 200-pounder guided the Raiders 58-yards to a touchdown on six plays in the second period. His scrambling 13-yard pass to Erwin Farris carried to the Hogs' one-yard line setup Bouvier Dale's touchdown run.

Here are the 1986 winners:

• Right-hand pitcher: Roger Clemens, Boston Red Sox. He led the American League with a record of 24-4; and he had the best ERA, 2.48. His 238 strikeouts left him just seven behind AL leader Mark Langston of Seattle. Clemens hurled a total of 2541/3

• Left-hand pitcher: Fernando Valenzuela, Los Angeles Dodgers. He led the National League with a record of 21-11. His 242 strikeouts made him the runner up to NL leader Mike Scott of Houston (who had 306). But Valenzuela was the league's best in complete games with 20. Hé worked a total of 2691/3 innings.

Supreme Court challenge claims death penalty bias

Supreme Court, in what could be the most important capital punishment battle in a decade, must decide whether statistics can prove a state death penalty law is racially biased.

In an argument session today, Georgia's capital punishment law was targeted for attack because killers of white victims in the state are much more likely to be sentenced to death than killers of black victims.

The court's decision, expected by July, could affect hundreds of the some 1,800 death row inmates nationwide

The case does not involve allegations that black killers are sentenced to death more frequently than white killers in Georgia. Instead, the case focuses on the race of each murder

Convicted Georgia killer Warren McCleskey's best hope to avoid the state's electric chair for the 1978 murder of an Atlanta policeman is a statistical study by a University of Iowa law professor

In his study, David Baldus examined every Georgia murder conviction from 1973 to 1978. He found that those who killed whites were 11 times more likely to receive the death penalty than were those who killed blacks.

He then looked at the smaller number of cases in which the greatest jury discretion was exercised — murders that were neither the most nor least brutal — and found that killers were 20 percent more likely to receive a death penalty if their victim was

Although no comparable study has been completed on a national level, 60 of the 66 men and women 91 percent — executed in the United States since the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed states to resume capital punishment were convicted of murdering whites.

If McCleskey's challenge succeeeds, death penalty laws in other states will come under similar attacks. In fact, some McCleskey, who is black, was convicted of the May 13, 1978, shooting death of police officer Frank Schlatt, who was white, during a furniture store robbery in Atlanta.

Capital punishment opponents acknowledge that McCleskey's case may represent the last broad-based assault on the death penalty.

Two broad appeals have been rejected since 1984.

The nation's highest court last May ruled that death penalty opponents may be barred from serving as jurors in determining guilt or innocence in capital cases, saying that fair-trial rights are not violated even if such exclusions result in "conviction-prone" juries.

The court two years ago ruled that death sentences may be meted out even if state courts do not try to determine whether others convicted of similar crimes were treated more le-

Iceland's political impact to be felt in 1988 elections

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political handicappers are trying to assess the impact of the Iceland summit on the 1986 elections, but the meeting's sour ending is far more likely to set the tone for the presidential campaign in two years.

"The question becomes what's going to happen now," said Republican pollster Robert Teeter. "And the answer to that will help shape 1988."

"It helps frame the '88 election," agreed Lance Tarrance, another Republican opinion analyst. Both were talking about the Strategic Defense

Initiative and whether it ought to be traded for a comprehensive arms control agreement. That is the kind of issue presidential candidates debate, and the two analysts agreed that the summit appears unlikely to have a major impact on the 1986 elections.

Voters go to the polls in less than three weeks, and Martin D. Franks, executive director of the Democratic congressional campaign committee. predicted the summit would have little impact on their decisions because "there's not time for it to ripen" as an issue.

President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev left their two-day meeting last weekend at odds over SDI, Reagan's plan to develop a space-based missile defense system

Both leaders later gave their own versions of the Iceland impasse

"Mr. Gorbachev and I got awfully close to historic agreements." Reagan said Tuesday. He held out hope that those agreements still might be reached. But Gorbachev, in a speech televised Tuesday throughout the Soviet Union, said, "After Reykjavik it is clearer than ever for everyone that SDI is the symbol of obstruction to the cause of peace.

The contest already is under way to select Reagan's successor, and the question of whether SDI should be used as a bargaining chip to obtain an arms control agreement under which both sides cut their missile forces is emerging as a central part of the 1988 campaign debate on foreign policy. Conservatives would relish the chance for a national debate on the issue, according to National Conservative Political Action Committee founder Richard A. Viguerie, who called it "a briar patch that we'd love to be thrown into.'

Reagan stated the question he believes may be on the electorate's mind in his speech to the nation Monday night: "I realize some Americans may be asking tonight: Why not accept Mr. Gorbachev's demand? Why not give up SDI for this agree-

The president said he took his tough line on SDI because it is "America's insurance policy" for use if the Soviets fail to comply with future arms control agreements.

Before the summit there was speculation in both major parties that an arms control breakthrough in Iceland could tip the balance for the Republicans in their fight to retain control of the Senate

Republicans are defending 22 of the 34 Senate seats at stake this year, and the president, traveling around the country, has been a key figure in the GOP campaign

For potential 1988 contenders, questions about their positions on SDI are certain to multiply.

Long separated brother and sister are finally reunited

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A brother and sister who last saw each other almost a half century ago were reunited over the weekend amid tears, giggles and fond memories of a childhood in

Tillie Swartz, 83, was driven from her home in Las Vegas to once again be with her brother, Joe Rabeck, 93

When they met at the Arlington rest home where Rabeck lives, they immediately hugged. Their last hug was in 1940.

"I cried," said Mrs. Swartz of the reunion. "So did I," admitted Rabeck.

Mrs. Swartz said Rabeck, one of eight children in their Cleveland, Ohio, family home, played a big role in raising her.

Rabeck said as a teen-ager he found himself responsible for keeping his little sister entertained and in clean diapers. It was tough, he said, to do that and still pursue important things such as baseball.

He recalled one ball game where he was to play, but "But Mom said I had to take Tillie with

Rabeck said he managed, with help

'When it was my turn to bat, I gave her to somebody else to watch," recalled Rabeck. "They really didn't seem to mind. She was a good baby. Always giggling.

On Sunday, Mrs. Swartz was still giggling at the memory. Mrs. Swartz's daughter, Loretta Kacel of Las Vegas, and Rabeck's son, Lawrence Rabeck of Arlington, managed to reunite the brother and sister.

The cousins started corresponding three years ago, and de cided early this year to bring their parents together. Mrs. Kacel drove her mother from Las Vegas to the nursing home where Rabeck lives.

Mrs. Swartz said she and her brother were always close as children, but the bonds slackened when he joined the Navy and she later married.

"We kind of fell out of touch," But on Sunday, they both remembered home and that time of Rabeck said he had spent much of his pre-teen years caring for "Tillie" in the family kitchen while their mother cooked.

"Being in the kitchen, I got to lick all the candy off the spoons," he recalled. "I didn't mind that or taking care of Tillie.

House, Senate move toward acceptance of immigration bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - After years of failure, Congress is within a whisker of approving a bill designed to shut down the stream of illegal aliens crossing the border for new job opportunities in the United States

Compromise legislation was approved Tuesday by House-Senate conferees, who took a cue from successful tax bill writers earlier in the session: they locked out the lobbyists and negotiated in

The House Rules Committee unanimously cleared the way for a vote, possibly today.

Chief Senate sponsor Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said any obstacles to passage would likely be raised in his chamber, where "one or two senators could stall" the legislation.

He appealed to House conferees to speak with their Senate friends, to "assist me in crushing knuckles

The cornerstones of the bill remain an amnesty program for long-term illegal aliens and a system of fines against employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers. The amnesty would apply to those who came to this country before 1982.

In the private discussions, conferees said, the debate centered on three issues: •Language authored by Rep. Barney Frank, D-

Mass., and backed by Hispanic lawmakers, that would ban employment discrimination based on national origin or citizenship status; and establish a special counsel in the Justice Department to enforce the protections. The language was retained, although conferees agreed the program could be ended after three years if a General Accounting Office study found it unfair to employers.

•A temporary ban on deportation of illegal aliens from El Salvador and Nicaragua until the GAO studied the political conditions they would face by returning home. The proposal by Rep. Joe Moakey, D-Mass., was dropped by the conferees after the Reagan administration warned it would cause

•A plan, championed by Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., to provide free legal services to foreign workers brought to the country to harvest nonperishable agricultural crops. The language was accepted, but the program would be limited to transportation, wages, housing and working condi-

After 51/2 hours of bargaining, the House had given in on 43 items and the Senate on 48, while dozens of lobbyists were forced to wait in the hallway of the Senate Dirksen Office Building.

What really broke it loose was we got out of the public session for tough bargaining," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Two years ago, immigration conferees were unable to complete their work before Congress adjourned. In prior years, immigration bills never even made it to conference. Some lawmakers, such as House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., have been trying to push through an immigration bill for 15 years.

Austin man brings a fresh angle to cosmetics sales

By BECKY KNAPP Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) - Hunched over a cup of steaming coffee, unfiltered cigarette between his fingers, Jim Gowens runs a hand across his lightly stubbled chin and remarks that measuring spoons shaped like geese are a big seller this year.

Dressed in sports shirt and slacks, Gowens looks as if he'd be more at home on a ranch than peddling women's cosmetics.

But Gowens is one of the new breed of Avon lady: the Avon

It's an occupation that he has gotten used to being ribbed about, and he responds good-naturedly.

"I love it. I love selling, Gowens said. His voice, a gravelly drawl, is full of enthusiasm and warmth. "I love working for a company I can be proud of. I have always had pride in the companies I've worked for, and if I didn't, I'd get into some other line of work. This is a top-line company with top-line products. I use them, I believe in them, and I live by them."

Gowens, 63, has been with Avon Products three years. Before retirement and Avon, he sold ferti-He doesn't believe that his current job is much different from the old one. "It's just like selling fertilizer as far as I'm concerned," he said, smiling. "Oh, I can't sit around on feed sacks and tell jokes like I used to, but I love it." It is that philosophy, perhaps, that has made Gowens one of the district. He is No. 2 in sales this year and was No. 1 last year. "I was the No. 1 man in 1985, he said. "Well, I was the only man, too, because it was mostly Hawaii in January, but I didn't get to go because on Feb. 13, I fell and broke my ankle delivering some 'Sweet Sentiment' coffee mugs that had been ordered for Valentine's Day. It was all in the line of duty.

A dedicated Avon representative doesn't let a broken ankle crimp his style. Gowens took advantage of his new audience hospital personnel - to make a few more sales.

"I sold that stuff while lying flat on my back in the hospital," he said. "The nurses brought it. The aides bought it. I don't know if they needed the products or just felt sorry for me, but they bought Gowens said he was familiar with Avon before becoming involved with the company, because his wife had used the products, and had even sold Avon herself years ago.

Then, a few years back, his son and daughter-in-law started seliing Avon, and Gowens helped them place and fill orders. When they decided to get out of the business, Gowens took it over.

Most of his business comes from friends, and friends of friends, but he branches into other areas whenever possible. Sometimes, he has to deliver orders to customers at their places of employment, and may pick up a new customer in the workplace. Gowens takes an Avon book along with him when he visits the coffee shop, and often makes a sale over a cup of black coffee. As a South Austinite, he also visits nearby apartment complexes sometimes to drop off catalogs, but he always checks in with management before leaving books.

Gowens concedes that there are drawbacks to working in a field where the majority of buyers are female. He is aware that women are sometimes hesitant to open the door to a strange man, so he doesn't go door-to-

"I don't want to scare anybody to death," he said. "I can't always sell my products the way a lady would, and you have to watch those things, if you know what I mean. I hope people don't think anything of it when they think of a man selling Avon, but I know how I'd feel if it was my wife or daughter. Women can't be too careful nowadays, and I wouldn't want to scare any-

Out of 213 Avon representatives in Gowen's district, four are men, said Chris Gayle, manager of District 649.

"I have no problems at all with the male representatives," she

Unlike Avon, which offers gift items, jewelry and even a clothing line, Mary Kay deals exclusively in skin care. And more men are selling the wares today than ever before, Ms. Curtis said.

"I think men are becoming less inhibited about the word 'cosmetics.' They're becoming better educated about the care of the skin, as are women," Ms. Curtis said. "We know now that we either wear protection on the skin, or we wear pollution. The same is true for men."

Water grants recommended

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Rural Water Task Force recommends that the state water plan be expanded to give special hardship grants to poor rural areas to help them obtain clean water and better wastewater treatment facilities.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Monday the recommendation was aimed at the special health problems of about 150 "colonias" in South Texas where 150,000 to 250,000 people live in substandard housing outside city limits

Hightower said the task force recommendation, which goes to the 1987 Legislature, proposed a program that would make grants to local political subdivisions to help build water or wastewater treatment systems for communities that do not qualify for loans under the present state water
