President Bush waves as he is led to his limousine after collapsing at his seat at a state dinner today in Tokyo. The president is suffering from a bout of stomach flu.

President Bush collapses at state dinner from flu

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

TOKYO (AP) — President Bush collapsed during a state dinner today and the White House said he suffered from stomach flu. "I feel good," said an ashen Bush, but he went to bed early and planned to resume rigorous trade talks with Japanese officials Thursday.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush felt nauseous before the state dinner hosted by Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa. At about 8:20 p.m. the president vomited and collapsed.

Physicians and Secret Service agents sprang to the president's side, and he left a few minutes later for Akasaka Palace, his temporary residence here.

"I feel good," Bush said, though he appeared haggard and disheveled as he was escorted to his limousine. He walked slowly, closely surrounded by security agents.

The 67-year-old president went to sleep after taking medication for nausea, officials said.

The White House said Bush would skip a breakfast meeting on Thursday but otherwise would stick by his schedule, which calls for a full round of meetings and a news conference.

He is to return to Washington on Friday after a 12-day, 26,000-mile journey through Australia and Asia.

Television pictures showed a frightening picture of Bush in extreme distress. Bush vomited at his seat and was helped to the floor by Secret Service agents, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. He said the president was in a "faint condition."

Bush appeared disoriented, his mouth agape. A Secret Service agent leaped over the table and knelt beside the president, prone on the floor. Other agents rushed to positions around the president, motioning guests to stay away.

Mrs. Bush jumped from her chair at the head table and moved toward the president but stopped several feet away, a worried look on her face. Bush remained on the floor "a few minutes," Fitzwater said.

Standing on his own power, Bush was wrapped in a coat. Smiling, he raised his hand in a salute to the audience and shook hands with Miyazawa and left the dinner. Guests stood and applauded as he departed.

"I just wanted to get a little attention," Bush joked, according to Fitzwater.

Although the White House tried to play down the episode, it raised fresh questions about Bush's health as he heads into a campaign for re-election. The president was hospitalized last year after suffering a rapid heartbeat last May 4 at Camp David. His problem was later diagnosed as a thyroid ailment, Graves' disease.

In Washington, Vice President Dan Quayle was notified of Bush's illness and went immediately to the White House, although he planned to go ahead to New Hampshire for a campaign trip. Bush is expected to announce for re-election after his Jan. 28 State of the Union address. Bush's five children also were notified.

"Nothing extraordinary has occurred," Fitzwater told a news briefing, televised live in Japan and in the United States.

Bush had complained to a television interviewer earlier in the day that he had been having trouble sleeping, awakening at 3 a.m. The president said he had taken half a tablet of Halcion, a popular sleeping aid, on Tuesday evening.

Fitzwater said Bush was examined at the dinner by his personal physician, Dr. Burton Lee. "All aspects of the examination indicate that it is a common case of the flu," Fitzwater said. "Dr. Lee feels that there's no reason to believe there were any factors contributing than just the flu itself."

Fitzwater said Bush had complained of flu symptoms earlier in the day but decided to go to the state dinner anyway.

Bush collapsed at about 8:20 p.m. local time (5:20 a.m. CST). Television pictures showed that people sitting nearby rushed to help him. At one point, the president's head was lifted above table height and he looked strained and pale.

Bush got to his feet a few minutes later, his hair disheveled. Secret Service agents and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft helped Bush don his raincoat, and a guard behind him helped pat his hair back into place.

After the president left the dinner, Mrs. Bush made brief remarks. "I can't explain what happened to George, because it never happened before, but I'm beginning to think it's the Ambassador's (Michael Armacost, American ambassador to Japan) fault. (Laughter.) He and George played the Emperor and the Crown Prince in tennis today, and they were badly beaten. (Laughter.) And we Bushes aren't used to that. So he felt much worse than I thought."

About an hour after the attack, Fitzwater went on live television to report that "President Bush is in his suite at the Akasaka Palace and is feeling fine following a bout with the flu."

The flu is Bush's first bout with illness since last summer. At his checkup last September, doctors lifted all earlier restrictions on the president, including ones on alcohol and on vigorous exercise.

Prior to the checkup, Bush had said that only a health condition might keep him from seeking re-election and physicians said after the examination there was nothing to keep him from running.

At the press briefing, Fitzwater said Bush felt nauseous before the dinner and vomited as he collapsed. He was given the medication Tigan, which is prescribed for the control of nausea and vomiting.

"All indication is that it is a normal case of the flu," said Fitzwater. He noted that Bush "played tennis earlier in the day, it was vigorous and healthy."

Prison proposal needs cash to sweeten pot, officials say

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Commissioners from the city of Pampa and Gray County met with officials from the Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce, school district and Industrial Foundation Tuesday to finalize plans for the latest prison proposal to the state.

However, much of the meeting at the Pampa Community Building focused on what can't be done because of a lack of regular economic development funding.

Attorney Bill Waters of the Industrial Foundation, who headed the gathering, said 1989's unsuccessful prison effort was due to a lack of political clout, though the city had a lucrative incentive package.

In 1990, he noted, the city was able to provide a great deal of incentives thanks to a community fundraising drive. That, coupled with political savvy, brought the Rufe Jordan Prison Unit, currently under construction east of the city, to Pampa.

In 1991, Waters said, Pampa is again operating at a handicap because of a lack of incentives to accompany political connections.

"Stating it plainly, we believe the community is tapped out," Waters said. "I wish I knew the answers to the Jan. 18 (economic development) propositions were positive and we could include that information in our proposal, but such is not the case because of the (state's) timeline."

One of the propositions would provide $650,000 a year in economic development funds for 10 years by raising the sales tax one-half cent during that period.

In spite of the lack of money,

Waters asked the city and county what they could do in the way of incentives.

After both groups huddled for several minutes, discussing the issues and eventually voting on recommendations, the proposal package was laid out.

Mayor Richard Peet told the group, "We're looking at four things the city can assist in, including helping the county in site preparation, connecting water, sewer and trash utilities to the (proposed) new facility, maintaining industrial (utility) rates to the new prison and working with the state in an on-site landfill recycling operation utilizing prison labor."

County Judge Carl Kennedy said incentives offered by Gray County were based on assumptions the state would locate any new prison on land adjacent to the Rufe Jordan Unit.

Kennedy said, "We will provide county manpower and equipment for site clearing and leveling, use county manpower to provide creek-grade base material up to 4 to 6 inches delivered to and spread at the site. Third would be preparation of a roadbed and bar ditches up to a half-mile and an option to the state to surface it with a caliche/sand type material."

Waters said a prison steering committee has also secured commitments from two local industries to provide further incentives "which we are not commenting on because we know our competitors are closely watching what we are doing."

School district officials said they were present to offer moral support and "a united front" but said they didn't know what they could offer that would sweeten the prison package.

City Manager Glen Hackler said the incentives will total more than a million dollars in services, utilities and structures.

Hackler agreed a lack of cash to offer the state, such as was provided in 1989 and 1990, could hurt Pampa's chances.

He pointed to an editorial in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Jan. 5 regarding that city's drive to bring in economic development funding.

"What is at stake is a plan to make Lubbock competitive with more than 50 other Texas cities which have approved the sales tax increase ... The alternative is a city seeking to compete with one hand tied behind its back."

Pampa is also operating with one hand tied behind its back, officials at the meeting said, because it is competing with cities such as Shamrock, Amarillo and Borger that want a prison and have the funding through a half-cent sales tax.

County Commissioner Joe Wheeley said though the county has issued no statement on the sales-tax-for-economic-development issue, he believes such a measure is needed to help lure new jobs, such as those offered by the state prison system.

"Money talks," Wheeley said. "Pampa is trying to pull itself up by its bootstraps. This has been presented so that it will lower property taxes by 6 cents and take pressure off local (property) taxpayers. I get tired of people thinking they can get things for free. There's no such thing."

Waters said the state is scheduled to announce which cities get new prisons by March, with a weeding out process taking place between Jan. 15 and that time.

U.S., Japanese clash over trade problems

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — President Bush today implored Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa to "iron out" trade differences with the United States, but U.S. officials said Japan was "screaming" about pressure to boost sales of American cars and auto parts here.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the United States and Japan were arguing heatedly about targets for Japanese imports of U.S. cars and parts. Bush, for his part, said that "we're making progress."

Fitzwater described the talks as "severe." "We're pressing them hard. They're feeling the pinch and they're screaming about it," he said. "We'll find out where we are tomorrow."

Bush subsequently collapsed at his seat during a state dinner at Miyazawa's residence, suffering from what his spokesman said was a case of the flu. The president returned to Akasaka Palace, where he is staying in Tokyo, leaving Mrs. Bush at the dinner.

She jokingly said she was "beginning to think" her husband's collapse was the fault of the U.S. ambassador to Japan, Michael Armacost, who had been the president's tennis partner earlier in the day.

"He and George played the Emperor and the Crown Prince in tennis today, and they were badly beaten," said Mrs. Bush. "And we Bushes aren't used to that. So he felt much worse than I thought."

Fitzwater said Bush was expected to sleep through the night and then pick up his schedule after forgoing the first event Thursday, a session with U.S. and Japanese businessmen.

Bush, in an interview with NBC News before he fell ill, said, "There will be things to point to when we leave here. ... Market access. ... And I think we're going to be successful in that regard."

Fitzwater said talks would continue through the night, adding: "It's not over yet."

Bush's chief spokesman made the comments a few hours after Japan's five major automakers unveiled proposals to boost sales of U.S. cars and auto parts here.

The Japanese carmakers said they would try to sell about 20,000 U.S. cars a year in Japan, while Japanese trade officials and Bush administration officials haggled behind closed doors over what the targets should be for U.S. imports to Japan.

Today's trade talks got off to a rough start, with Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher heatedly rejecting Tokyo's proposal for increased purchases of U.S. autos and parts.

"I would be embarrassed to show this to the president," Mosbacher fumed to Japan's trade minister, Kozo Watanabe, waving a copy of Japan's offer in his hand, according to one witness.

An administration official said the Japanese had made concessions — but not enough.

American businessmen accompanying Bush also protested that they weren't making headway. The official said the attitude among the businessmen was, "Culturally, they'll never change. We'll have to ram it down their throats."

Meanwhile, other U.S. officials said Miyazawa had expressed sympathy with Bush's complaints about Japanese trade barriers, but that it appeared unlikely Tokyo would substantially alter its restrictive trade policy any time soon.

Miyazawa voiced understanding with Bush's complaints about policies blocking U.S. businesses from entering the lucrative Japanese market, U.S. officials said. But they provided no concrete examples of changes Japan was prepared to make.

Nevertheless, Bush's national security, Brent Scowcroft, said, "We have no reason for dismay."

The two sides produced a joint "strategy for world growth," a plan designed to strengthen the world's economy.

Under it, both countries will take steps to stimulate their own internal economies — Bush through a package of economic moves he already has said he will announce in his Jan. 28 state of the union speech, and Japan through a plan to increase domestic demand.

On the growth package announced today, Bush told NBC: "It doesn't say, OK, this will create 3,200 jobs someplace, but it will create an awful lot of jobs, many, many more than that when the growth initiatives on both sides get going."

Miyazawa promised a budget designed to increase demand through increased public investment and other measures, to achieve 3.5 percent growth in a slow economy.

That should lead to a decline in the trade surplus for the 1992 fiscal year because increased domestic demand means Japanese consumers will buy more domestic products, leaving less for export to the United States, said Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Helping hand

Ron Turpen of Beta-Tex, and Douglas Reeves and Charles Williams of Texaco give a helping hand to firefighters from Lefors and Pampa in putting dirt on the edges of a prairie fire that destroyed 250 acres of land four-tenths of a mile west of Lefors Tuesday afternoon. Officials said the fire was caused by power lines sparking in high winds.

Cuba says it arrested three U.S.-backed terrorists

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Cuba said today it arrested three Miami residents who tried to infiltrate the country last month to carry out terrorist activities.

An Interior Ministry statement reported by state-run Radio Havana said the three men were arrested Dec. 29 near Jucaro in the coastal region northeast of Havana.

The radio, monitored in Mexico City, did not say if the men had managed to land or if they had been intercepted offshore. It said they carried weapons and incendiary bombs.

In Miami, several hundred Cuban exiles signed a letter Tuesday urging President Bush to allow exile groups to renew military activity against Cuba's government.

The letter was in response to the release of newly declassified documents from the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. The papers indicate that despite verbal assurances to Soviet leaders, President Kennedy ultimately refused to sign a pact barring the United States from attacking Cuba in return for the removal of Soviet missiles from the island.

Throughout most of his 32-year rule, Cuban President Fidel Castro has used the threat of a U.S. invasion to rally support. Those warnings have increased as Cuba's economy has collapsed over the past year due to the loss of Soviet bloc aid and trade.

A U.S.-backed invasion force of exiles attacked Cuba on April 17, 1961, at the Bay of Pigs, but it was quickly defeated.

Radio Havana said the three men arrested last month had left from Marathon Key in Florida "aboard a yacht manned by other elements who returned to the United States after putting them aboard a motorboat several miles from the Cuban coast."

The men were identified as Eduardo Diaz Betanco, Daniel Santovena Fernandez and Pedro de la Caridad Alvarez Pedroza, all from Miami.

Unemployment rate drops for Pampa and Gray County

Pampa and Gray County saw a decrease in the unemployment rates for November, according to figures released Tuesday by Rodney A. Springer, director of the Texas Employment Commission office in Pampa.

Springer said the November rates "were slow getting here due to the holidays."

The November unemployment rate for Pampa was listed at 5.0 percent, dropping a half percent from the 5.5 percent rate recorded in October, Springer reported.

For Gray County, the rate dropped 0.6 percent, falling from the 5.7 percent rate registered in October to 5.1 percent for November.

Hemphill County had the best improvement in the unemployment rate for the five-county area included in the report, Springer said. Its November rate was 3.6 percent, plummeting 1.7 percent from the 5.3 percent rate recorded in October.

Carson County had a slight increase in its unemployment rate. Its November rate was 4.3 percent, up slightly from the 4.2 percent listed in October.

Roberts County also had a big drop in its rate. Its November unemployment rate was 1.2 percent, falling 1.3 percent from the 2.5 percent recorded in October.

Wheeler County had an increase in its rate. In November, the county had an unemployment rate of 5.6 percent, up slightly from the 5.3 percent registered in October.

United Way has grant money for food and shelter programs

The Pampa United Way has received a $4,711 grant to disburse to Gray County non-profit groups or agencies of government under emergency food and shelter programs, said Katrina Bigham, executive administrator of the Pampa United Way.

The foundation matched the money donated to the campaign by the professional's division, Bigham said.

She said the M.K. Brown Foundation is always one of the larger contributors to the campaign, which this year benefits 16 service organizations.

"We appreciate their generosity and without their help we could not have reached the total we did this year and we're very grateful," Bigham said.

(those agencies with a religious affiliation who want to participate in the program must agree not to refuse services to an applicant based on religion or require attendance at religious services as a condition of assistance, nor will such groups engage in any religious proselytizing in any program receiving emergency food and shelter program funds); and private, voluntary organizations must have a voluntary board.

The deadline for applying for the emergency food and shelter program is this Friday. Contact Bigham at the United Way office, 669-1001, for an application.

State Capitol building evacuated after bomb threat received

AUSTIN (AP) - The state Capitol was ordered evacuated today after a bomb threat was received by telephone, authorities said.

Several dozen people were sent outside after the threat was received shortly after 9 a.m.

A woman answering the phone at the Capitol police office, who declined to give her name, said the threat was called in about 9:16 a.m. But she gave no further details.

The Legislature has been meeting in a special session on redistricting, but neither the House nor Senate were in session when the threat was received.

Floodwaters hit lower Brazoria County; more rain falls in Southeast Texas

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

A flash flood watch was issued today for parts of Southeast Texas as showers and thunderstorms pounded the area, but forecasters did not expect the rain to cause serious problems for already flood-stricken counties.

The National Weather Service said the watch was for Orange, Jefferson, Newton, Jasper, Hardin, Tyler, Liberty, Polk and Chambers counties. Forecasters said up to three inches of rain could fall in some areas by this evening, and they warned that the rainfall could result in flash flooding in low-lying areas.

"I think it's going to be more of a nuisance than a threat (for already flooded areas)," meteorologist Scott Kiser said.

Rain, sometimes heavy, fell during the night and into this morning in Brazoria County, which was not included in the watch. The vast, flat county south of Houston is one of the last areas hit by flooding as the Brazos River and Oyster Creek race towards the Gulf of Mexico.

"Locally, it's very heavy," Brazoria County Judge Jim Phillips said today. "It's just adding to our woes." So far, the rain had only caused some localized street flooding in several towns.

"We had just opened some of our roads, we don't know where (the rain) is going to take us," he said.

Rain also was falling this morning in Liberty County, where many subdivisions have been flooded by the Trinity River.

Trinity River Authority officials planned to continue lowering the releases from Lake Livingston Dam throughout the day unless the lake receives several inches of rain, said Jim Mitchum, Liberty County emergency management coordinator.

Twenty-five counties statewide have been declared disasters as a result of the floods, which followed torrential rains that began in the state Dec. 20. At least 15 deaths also have been blamed on the flooding.

In Brazoria County, flood waters dropped slightly in the north and west portions of the county Tuesday, Phillips said. However, they still were rising in the south at Lake Jackson, Richwood and Clute, he said.

"That's where we think the hot spots are really going to be for the next 24 to 36 hours," he said.

More than 200 people filled three shelters in Brazoria County overnight Monday, Phillips said.

Among the hard-hit areas were Baileys Prairie and Holiday Lakes west of Angleton. Phillips said Holiday Lakes, which has 350 to 400 homes, was "completely inundated."

Three people clinging to treetops were rescued by the Coast Guard Tuesday afternoon in Angleton after their canoe capsized in the Bastrop Creek area. The Coast Guard also rescued a dog trapped in a barbed wire fence.

Mark McDaniel, Lake Jackson assistant city manager, said officials didn't expect any homes or businesses in the city of 20,206 residents to flood, except a movie theater at a local mall.

"We have the situation pretty much under control at this point," he said.

Oyster Creek was expected to crest at the city by this morning at a level similar to 1957, the worst flooding recorded in the area, McDaniel said.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards has said that an estimated 2,500 homes across Texas have been damaged by the flooding. More than 2,400 Texans have sought federal disaster assistance, officials said Tuesday.

Bill Barron, spokesman for the Greater Houston Area Red Cross, said the American Red Cross will spend $1.5 million throughout Texas for flood relief, including half a million dollars in the Houston region.

West of Houston in Fort Bend County, officials estimated damages from Brazos flood waters at $27 million, but warned the figure could rise.

Emergency Management Coordinator Mel Speed said Tuesday that at least 252 homes and about 15 businesses have suffered flood damage.

Although some residences still were inaccessible, officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency were at work evaluating damage to homes and county workers were helping residents haul away debris, Speed said.

"Right now, everybody's still trying to assess what damage they have," he said. "Some of these people that didn't heed some of the warnings and waited until it was too late weren't able to get things out of their homes, and they lost most of their belongings — a lot of them without flood insurance."

Northeast of Houston, in Liberty County, the Trinity River had fallen slightly from 29.7 feet to 29.5 feet, still about 5 1/2 feet over flood stage, said Lou Martin of the county emergency management office.

"It's a very, very slow decrease, and it's going to remain at flood stage at least until (Jan.) 10th, probably the 15th," she said.

About 255 homes were flooded in 10 low-lying subdivisions, Ms. Martin said. Six additional flooded subdivisions hadn't yet been inspected.

Authorities continued reducing the release from Lake Livingston Dam, which was at 69,300 cubic feet per second Tuesday night. A normal release is 15,000 cfs.

Six bodies found in apparent murder-suicide

By NANCY PLEVIN
Associated Press Writer

ROSWELL (AP) — It couldn't happen here, residents said.

But it did. A father of six apparently killed his wife and four of his children in this southeastern New Mexico community of 45,000, and sometime later, Ernie Lasiter shot himself in the head.

The deaths occurred during the weekend as authorities were investigating allegations that the father had sexually molested one of his two surviving daughters, police said Tuesday.

"This is a nice town (with) good-hearted, friendly people," said Mesa Airlines ticket agent Loretta Honaker. "It's just amazing it could happen here."

"Everybody says, 'It doesn't happen in our town — that's a big city crime,'" Ms. Honaker said.

Authorities said Lasiter apparently suffocated or strangled his wife and four children.

The bodies of Rita Lasiter, 35, and Kristen, 2; James, 4; Ernest Jr. 8; and Leslie Lasiter, 11, were found all on one bed inside the mobile home Monday afternoon.

Lasiter's body was discovered about four hours later at a shooting range outside town. A .45-caliber pistol was beside him.

At a news conference, Roswell police Deputy Chief Ray Mounds said officers were called to the Lasiter home late Friday after a social worker said she had been contacted by the family. Lasiter's 17-year-old daughter alleged her father had sexually abused her.

Mounds said further interviews were conducted Saturday at police headquarters.

The daughter was placed in the custody of the state Human Services Department on Friday to "protect her rights," Mounds said. He said the other daughter, an 18-year-old, had moved out on her own some time ago. State officials would not discuss the case.

At the time of the slayings, Mounds said, investigation of the molestation complaint was in its early stages.

In Albuquerque, the state Office of the Medical Investigator said preliminary autopsy findings showed Mrs. Lasiter and her two daughters were strangled, and the two boys were smothered, but authorities could not say how.

In the mobile home park where the Lasiters lived, neighbors described them as congenial and — from all appearances — normal.

"They always seemed to be so friendly," neighbor Julie Hoogerhuis said. "There never seemed to be any kind of family dispute."

"The children didn't seem abused, not even emotionally," said her husband, Jeff Hoogerhuis.

"They were a friendly family," said Ardeh Dozier, 51, whose trailer is next to the Lasiter's. "I'm so astounded. What could have possessed him?"

Neighbor Corina Stuart, whose two daughters had been close friends of the Lasiter children, said residents of the trailer park in northwest Roswell were shaken by the killings.

"My kids were up all night crying," Ms. Stuart said. "I don't think anybody in the trailer court slept."

All six family members had died one to two days before their bodies were found, Mounds said. Lasiter did not show up for work Monday at his job with the state Highway and Transportation Department in southeastern New Mexico.

Mounds said he had known Lasiter personally for eight to 10 years in the dead man's capacity as a reserve Chaves County deputy sheriff, who sometimes worked part-time at the county jail or at special events, such as fairs, parades and football games.

He said the county dropped its reserve-deputy program several months ago because such duties now require certified officers.

Mounds said Lasiter had been a Vietnam veteran who, as far as he knew, had a clean record in law enforcement. He said he was doubly surprised by the tragedy since he knew Lasiter personally.

"That's the amazement of this kind of thing," he said, "that even relatives, I don't think, would see it coming."

State Senate adopts redistricting proposal

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature appears near the end of a special session on redistricting, but the date of the primary election is still up in the air.

On Tuesday, the Senate adopted its redistricting plan, and a bill that could result in delaying most of the March 10 primaries until August, and splitting the presidential "Super Tuesday" primary from the others.

Democrats who supported the bill, however, say that if the courts stay out of the way on redistricting, then primaries for federal, state and local elections can be held together as scheduled on March 10.

"As far as the Legislature is concerned, it's in the chute and it's a done deal," said Sen. Steve Carriker, D-Roby.

Republicans say that Democrats are playing a political game with the courts. A split primary would cost an additional $9.1 million, they note.

"How in the world can we justify that to the taxpayers of this state?" asked Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant.

Lawmakers are in a special legislative session to re-draw House and Senate districts after federal and state courts rejected earlier plans adopted by the Legislature. Legislative leaders said the session may be completed Thursday, one week after it began.

New political boundaries are drawn every 10 years after the federal census to adjust for population changes.

The Senate approved its redistricting measure 18-12, with opposition coming from nine Republicans and three Democrats.

The primary bill was approved 19-11. If the Senate redistricting plan fails to win court approval by Feb. 18, then the presidential primary will be held March 10, and the others Aug. 8.

Democratic supporters said the new senatorial districts would increase the chance for minorities to be elected in proportion to their population.

But Republicans called the measure a back room deal that was designed to protect Democratic Anglo incumbents.

Despite their opposition, GOP senators abandoned their threat to try and stall the bill through a filibuster, saying they would rather the Legislature finish its business and then continue their redistricting battle in court.

The action Tuesday ended three days of often bitter debate with each side accusing the other of seeking politically partisan gain in the drawing of district lines. The bills now go to the House for consideration.

The Senate plan is the result of a settlement between a majority of the Senate and minority plaintiffs who successfully sued the state to draw districts that would increase minority representation.

Currently there are five Hispanics and two blacks in the Senate. If the Senate reflected the state's population there would be eight Hispanics, and as many as three blacks.

Under the federal Voting Rights Act, districts cannot be drawn that would dilute minority strength.

Later, the Senate tentatively approved the House redistricting bill, which would set up House district boundaries for the 1994 elections that were agreed to by minority plaintiffs and a majority of the House. For the 1992 election, the three-judge plan would be in effect.

Federal judge denies MCorp bankruptcy plan

DALLAS (AP) — After nearly three years in bankruptcy, MCorp seemed so close to reorganization.

But U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Letitia Z. Clark Tuesday declined to confirm the $505 million debt restructuring, dealing another blow to the once-giant Texas company that was the nation's second-largest bank failure.

"There's nothing much she liked about this plan," said Ken Shaver, vice president and treasurer of the Dallas company. "It is disappointing."

Clark ruled MCorp's plans were unfair to some creditors. She also questioned the tabulating of creditors' votes on the plans.

The plans "skate a line deliberately thin," the judge wrote. "Progress along this self-chosen and perilous line has been marred by broken edges and failed burdens of proof."

MCorp now must decide whether to appeal the judge's ruling, create another restructuring plan or let creditors do it.

"It is not so much at this point what MCorp wants to do as what MCorp's creditors want to do," Shaver said.

Creditors forced MCorp into an involuntary bankruptcy filing March 27, 1989. Two days later, bank regulators closed 20 of MCorp's 25 banks in a $2.7 billion bailout that is second only to the $2.9 billion failure of First Republic Bank Corp. in Dallas in 1988.

MCorp has since sold four of its remaining banks. It now owns a bank in New Braunfels, Texas, and has financial service operations in Dallas.

The company filed reorganization plans last March for it, MCorp Management and MCorp Financial.

In November, the company said a majority of creditors had approved the reorganization.

Estimates of MCorp's assets range from $420 million to $450 million.

The company expects to spend $50 million in settlement of disputed claims and general and legal expenses, leaving about $370 million to settle its debt.

To help pay creditors, the company hopes to recover $1 billion in damages from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. in a dispute over the agency's 1989 seizure of MCorp banks.

But the bankruptcy judge said the company's plan treated stockholders unfairly by placing no upper limit on the amount junior creditors could receive from such a damage payment.

Opinion

Free market best for a new Russia

After the August coup in Moscow failed, the Soviet Union was in a coma. Last month it finally died, apparently. Russian President Boris Yeltsin, Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk and Stanislav Shushkevich, chairman of the Supreme Soviet of Byelorussia, declared that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics had ceased to exist.

Let us take a moment to remember the millions of victims of the Soviet regime. Some 50 million to 100 million people were killed in the Soviet Union alone. The worst atrocities occurred during Lenin's forced starvation campaign of the early 1920s; Stalin's forced famine in Ukraine in the early 1930s; the infamous purge trials of the mid 1930s; World War II, when Stalin waged a war against his own people even as he fought Hitler; and the late 1940s and early 1950s, as Stalin filled the gulag before his death in 1953.

Another 100 million people have been killed in China under the communist regime the Soviets helped impose. Millions more have been killed by regimes the Soviets imposed or aided in Eastern Europe, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Angola and Cambodia; millions more in communist or quasi-communist regimes that remain in power in Vietnam, Laos, North Korea and Cuba. And 60 million people, half civilians, died in World War II, a war begun in 1939 when the Soviet Union and Nazi (National Socialist) Germany signed a "non-aggression" pact, then both invaded Poland.

The total of all Soviet or Soviet-inspired killings: at least 200 million, an amount unparalleled in history. Soviet communism was a hideous reality, not a right-wing fabrication. If anyone doubts that, he should talk to some Vietnamese boat people now living throughout the United States.

What next? Though Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia, in fact all the former Soviet states but Georgia, have joined together in a Commonwealth of Independent States, a kind of economic Slavic Union, the transition to a market economy will be much harder in these countries than in any other country trying to rid itself of socialism.

Yeltsin said prices would be freed on Dec. 16. And, earlier this month, that apparently became so in grocery markets and other similar outlets. At a news conference, Ronald Coase, this year's Nobel economics prize winner, warned, "It's all very well saying you're going to have prices, but prices for what?" And many of the Russian shoppers found that out, with supplies sparse and many shelves nearly bare. Eastern Europeans could return to non-communist laws and markets from before World War II. "But in Russia, you can hardly go back to the czar and start again."

On the positive side, Russia, Ukraine and Byelorussia know that socialism is dead and that only capitalism works. The new world economy runs on information. The information of world freedom and prosperity broke down the barriers that held the Soviet people enslaved. That information continues to flow. The message now is this: There is a stark choice between (a) the quick establishment of a minimum of law and free markets, and (b) collapse leading to anarchy and starvation.

"We're restructuring. Good luck!"

Gorbachev: Man of Century

James J. Kilpatrick

It will be another eight years before the pollsters tally the votes and give us, with a flourish of trumpets, the Man of the Century. I would close the nominations now. The one person who has done most to alter the course of history in this century is Mikhail Gorbachev. Let him depart in peace.

Both Carlyle and Emerson made the same observation: History is mostly biography. We might nominate Josef Stalin or Adolf Hitler, but Stalin was a rather ordinary villain and Hitler did little more than start a war. Collectively, the scientists who harnessed the atom might qualify. A case could be made for the teams that put Sputnik into orbit.

Gorbachev's claim to the title has its ironic aspects. His great achievement was to destroy an idea, and in the end the idea destroyed him. He was a communist. He never renounced the tenets of his political religion. True, he resigned his party offices, but nothing in his statements suggests that he ever fully accepted the rottenness of the system he brought effectively to an end.

This is the stuff of great biography, and thus the stuff of great history. We look back to the rise of the Bolsheviks and the fall of the czars, and whole peoples simply disappear from the pages of our textbooks.

It was Churchill who spoke of the Iron Curtain, and the metaphor was apt. Behind that curtain a billion human beings lived and died under conditions of indescribable oppression. The West rarely penetrated the mists of Soviet life. There was no penetration of the Soviet mind.

Then, in the spring of 1985, came Mikhail Gorbachev. Now, in the winter of 1991-92, he departs. Six and a half years! That was his brief hour upon the stage. He did certain specific things that will take up a paragraph or two: He extricated Soviet troops from the war in Afghanistan. He made no effort to prevent the toppling of the Berlin Wall. He played a major role in ending civil conflict in Angola. Relatively speaking, these were minor events.

This is what mattered: He introduced glasnost—the concept of openness. He fathered perestroika—the concept of reform. Freedom and democracy. He evoked the fable of the sorcerer's apprentice. Gorbachev said the magic words, and the irresistible waves came rolling in.

It was Gorbachev alone who loosed these powerful forces. When he writes his memoirs we may learn if he fully anticipated the consequences of the steps he took. Probably not. Virtually no one, inside the Soviet Union or outside its borders, accurately predicted the implosion that would bring down an empire.

With disintegration of the empire came the crumbling of an idea—the idea that a totalitarian state could indefinitely control masses of humankind through fear. This was, it still is, the key to communism. The idea survives in China, in North Korea, in Cuba, but the idea is done for. Even in the remaining communist states, the winds of freedom are freshening. Gorbachev released those winds.

We are not done with the storm. The Soviet Union is gone; a new confederation of Slavic republics emerges. Most likely we will see a bloody period of ethnic conflicts. Yugoslavia's ordeal is only the beginning. Whole economies must be readjusted to the realities of newly sovereign states struggling toward free markets.

When frozen rivers swiftly thaw, they often flood. This is how the Cold War ends. Thanks to Ronald Reagan and a cooperative Congress, Gorbachev's predecessors were driven out of the arms race. They no longer could keep up or move ahead. Gorbachev and Reagan looked eye to eye, and Reagan would not blink. The threat of nuclear war began to recede. Now it is altogether gone. The question is how best to dismantle and abandon more than 50,000 warheads, each capable of destroying a million lives a minute.

The word from Moscow is that Gorbachev left his Kremlin office an embittered man. He felt the anguish of rejection as painfully as Churchill felt his summary dismissal after World War II. This will pass. Unpopular leaders have a way of climbing back to public esteem. Gorbachev may be the object of ridicule in Russia today, but the judgment of history will be more generous.

This man was a catalyst, "a person or thing that precipitates an event or change." Gorbachev started an enslaved continent on the road to freedom. Who is better qualified to be remembered as Man of the Century?

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Wednesday, Jan. 8, the eighth day of 1992. There are 358 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 8, 1935, rock 'n' roll legend Elvis Presley was born in Tupelo, Miss.

On this date:
In 1642, astronomer Galileo Galilei died in Arcetri, Italy.

In 1798, the 11th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was ratified; it prohibited a citizen of one state from suing another state in federal court.

In 1815, U.S. forces led by Gen. Andrew Jackson defeated the British in the Battle of New Orleans—the closing engagement of the War of 1812.

In 1918, Mississippi became the first state to ratify a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution prohibiting the sale, manufacture or transportation of liquor.

In 1959, Charles De Gaulle was inaugurated as president of France's Fifth Republic.

In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson declared a War on Poverty.

In 1965, the Star of India and other stolen gems were returned to the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Our most frequent disease

Freed hostage Terry Anderson came home with every reason to feel sorry for himself. He had been unjustly and cruelly imprisoned, robbed of nearly seven years of his life.

And yet he has since been seeking to encourage us—how about that!

Of his captors he says, "I don't hate them. I can't afford to hate. I have a new life starting now, and I'm not going to spoil it with emotions that can hurt only me."

He says that from now on he will be "celebrating life."

And yet you and I hear or read daily of people who seem to have everything, yet are consumed by self-pity.

What makes the difference?
The National Mental Health Association (NMHA) finds "half of all American adults have at least one family member who suffers from depression."

Forty-three percent of American adults see depression as a personal weakness. Another 11 percent are not sure whether it's a personal weakness or a health problem.

Elisabeth Rukeyser of the NMHA calls depression "a silent disease."

Paul Harvey

She says, "While it does not grab headlines as do AIDS and cancer and heart disease, it does diminish and can destroy people's lives—though our country's most frequent disease is curable."

Yet, though there are very effective medications and psychotherapies for treating depression, two-thirds of depression's victims never seek treatment.

Mrs. Harvey, many years on the Board of the Mental Health Association of Chicago, often notes the stars and startlets interviewed on TV who confess "trying to find themselves" demonstrate the same symptoms as the pitiable charity cases.

The NMHA computes the dollar cost of this disease to our American society as something in excess of $25 billion a year, yet that is but a fraction of "the human cost."

The most recent survey shows that in addition to those millions of Americans with an acknowledged chronic problem of depression, 40 percent of all Americans say they tend to suffer depression during the holiday season.

Eighteen million Americans say they "feel depressed one or more times each week."

Have we given disproportionate resources to healing diseased hearts and demonstrated too little concern for broken hearts? It would seem so.

While medical professionals, politicians, law enforcement officials, sociologists and clergy beat their breasts over the misuse of drugs and alcohol, there is comparatively negligible concern for the root cause of much such addiction: depression.

Rukeyser says, "Lives do not have to be ruined by the hopelessness of depression. Depression is a treatable disease. But knowledge is key for a person seeking treatment."

And perhaps we media people have not done enough to disseminate that knowledge.

San Francisco moving to the right

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

When I moved to San Francisco a little over two years ago, I knew exactly why I was doing it. The charms of this city—its world-renowned beauty, its matchless weather, its cosmopolitanism, its Oriental ambience, its humane scale—had beckoned to me for a third of a century, ever since I first saw it from the top of Nob Hill on a summer morning in 1956.

But I also took a private vow not to become entangled in San Francisco's municipal politics. During the past 30 years, a succession of liberal mayors and Boards of Supervisors have done their best to turn this lovely city into a permanent exhibition of what sentimental permissiveness can do to a town.

It didn't take long for the word to get around, and soon a steady stream of bums and flakes from less tolerant communities all over America was pouring into San Francisco.

The liberals were delighted. The mayor allowed City Hall Plaza to be occupied for two years by hundreds of bums, until he could build them a suitable shelter (which many of them then refused to move into). The Board of Supervisors forbade any city employee to cooperate with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, lest some hapless refugee from fascist El Salvador be arrested and deported—the result being, of course, that the city became a haven for illegal aliens with criminal records from all over America. Only the impassioned pleas of local businessmen deterred the board from officially proclaiming San Francisco a "City of Refuge" for homosexuals.

It is easy to overdo the point; it almost cries out for caricature. Most San Franciscans are perfectly rational and well-behaved, and the city is surrounded by a "Bay area" of suburban towns and surpassing natural beauty. But in the Tenderloin and along Market Street the rot was evident, and was clearly spreading. Bums (now, of course, euphemistically called "the homeless") proliferated, and garbage littered the sidewalks.

The awful part was that the condition seemed permanent. The city of San Francisco is a small but special segment of the Bay area, heavily populated by transient Bohemians of all sorts who, having little else to do, take a lively interest in local politics. The politicians were simply responding, as politicians will, to the felt pressures. It is rather as if New York City consisted solely of Greenwich Village and the West Side.

So it is truly great news that in a run-off election Dec. 10 the good people of San Francisco rose up and threw out the incumbent mayor, a former social worker named Art Agnos, and replaced him with Frank Jordan, who until recently was the city's police chief.

Jordan's victory, by 52 percent to 48 percent, wasn't overwhelming; but as Samuel Johnson said of the woman who preached a sermon, the wonder was that it occurred at all. What's more, Jordan is no Jesse Helms. As the San Francisco Examiner (which, liberal rag that it is, backed Agnos) remarked on the morning after the election, "Jordan fancies himself a moderate. In any other American city he would be, but here he is a conservative."

That, however, is the point, and the town's liberal establishment is in no mood to kid itself. As the Examiner went on to say, Jordan's victory "overturned the quarter-century hold of liberal San Francisco politics on City Hall." Getting rid of the bums and cleaning up the streets will be no easy task—indeed, it will probably prove only partly achievable—but the great thing is that City Hall will no longer be on the side of the bums. Over the long haul, that is bound to matter.

So rejoice along with me. San Francisco's "golden sun" is shining again.

European Community suspends monitoring in Yugoslavia

By TEDDIE WEYR
Associated Press Writer

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The European Community today suspended monitoring operations in Yugoslavia after a federal warplane shot down an EC helicopter, killing all five observers on board.

The action was not expected to have much effect on the observance of a 5-day-old truce that was mediated by the United Nations.

The truce, the longest period of relative peace during the 6-month-old civil war in Croatia, was reported still holding today along most of the 350-mile front despite several isolated incidents. No casualties were reported.

Portugal, the current president of the European Community, said the activities of the EC monitoring teams would be halted until the Serb-dominated federal armed forces and Croatian officials could guarantee their safety.

Teotónio Pereira, a spokesman for the Portuguese Foreign Ministry in Lisbon, said the EC also wanted impartial investigators to participate in an inquiry into Tuesday's incident promised by Yugoslav authorities.

Teams from the 12-nation European Community have monitored cease-fire violations and other aspects of the fighting in Croatia since late summer, but they had little success in halting the fighting.

Their reports have been used in periodic EC-sponsored talks trying to resolve the fighting triggered by Croatia's attempt to secede from Yugoslavia.

The tail section of a European Community helicopter lies in a field outside Zagreb, Yugoslavia Tuesday after it was shot down by a Yugoslav federal army jet. Five EC truce monitors, a Frenchman and four Italians, were killed in the attack which was condemned by Europe and the United Nations.

team in Zagreb, Croatia's capital, said he expected the suspension to be temporary.

"The mission wants to continue and if possible to widen its observing activities," he said in an interview with Lisbon's TSF radio network.

The U.N. Security Council met in emergency session Tuesday and condemned the downing. But David Hannay, the British U.N. ambassador, told reporters the council would nevertheless authorize sending an advance team of 50 military observers to Croatia because of the general success of the latest cease-fire.

The council was to meet today to approve the team, and Hannay said the observers would be dispatched by Jan. 15. Deployment of a full peacekeeping contingent of up to 10,000 men will be delayed until U.N. officials are certain the guns have been silenced, he said.

Thousands of people have died in the fighting, and the federal army and Serb militants have taken control of about a third of Croatian territory, much of that land including substantial Serb populations.

Cyrus Vance, the former U.S. secretary of state who is a special U.N. envoy to Yugoslavia, condemned the helicopter downing, but he said he did not think it would cause the truce to break down.

"There is growing weariness on all sides," he was quoted as saying by today's New York Times. "Secondly, the economy continues to deteriorate on all sides. The problems of displaced persons continues to grow. Desertions are also growing."

Tuesday's attack was blamed by many on hard-line elements in the federal army. It also could have been an attempt to undermine Defense Minister Veljko Kadijevic, whose support for the cease-fire has been opposed by several leading commanders of Serb irregulars in contested areas of Croatia.

The federal Defense Ministry promised Tuesday to investigate the helicopter downing and punish "the culprits." The federal presidency suspended the air force commander, Gen. Zvonko Jurjevic, pending the investigation.

Serbia's government issued a statement deploring the deaths of the EC observers and said an initial investigation "indicates the helicopter was accidentally fired upon without authorization ... and those responsible for the action will be brought to justice."

Field forces in the war often seem to be outside any commander's control.

But chances for peace appeared to improve somewhat today as leaders of Serb irregulars in the Krajina region of western Croatia who have resisted the truce said they would conditionally accept U.N. peacekeepers.

The self-styled president of Krajina, Milan Babic, said today he would go along with the truce provided the interests of Serbs were not imperiled, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported.

But Babic said he still did not agree with a full pullout of the federal army from his region, as foreseen by the United Nations.

Georgians rally in support of Gamsakhurdia

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — About 1,000 people defied military leaders today and rallied in support of ousted Georgian President Zviad Gamsakhurdia, just one day after soldiers broke up a similar demonstration.

There was no attempt to disrupt the protest, in which people waved red-white-and-black Georgian flags, shouted pro-Gamsakhurdia slogans and held a banner that read in English: "We are for an officially elected president."

The demonstration near Tbilisi's train station lasted about 45 minutes and ended peacefully.

On Tuesday, troops loyal to the new Military Council that ousted Gamsakhurdia fired on 4,000 people rallying in support of the president. At least two people were wounded.

Gamsakhurdia, 52, was stranded today in the Armenian border town of Idjevan, a 50-mile drive from Tbilisi, while officials from Armenia and Azerbaijan discussed his fate.

The Georgian president and his supporters had been holed up in the parliament building for 16 days when they shot their way out early Monday and fled.

Gamsakhurdia has asked Armenia to help him find safe refuge, possibly in the West, for himself, his family and their armed supporters, said the Armenian government's spokesman in Moscow, Mikit Kazaryan.

The Georgian president was ousted after two weeks of fighting that devastated much of central Tbilisi and left at least 73 people Eduard A. Shevardnadze dead and 400 wounded.

Gamsakhurdia was elected in a landslide in May, but the opposition said he turned into a dictator, jailing critics and closing opposition newspapers.

Like his opponents, Gamsakhurdia is a Georgian nationalist. But his support has come largely from people living outside Tbilisi, while his opponents have been led by intellectuals in the capital.

The coalition of political leaders who overthrew Gamsakhurdia has called for election of a new government as early as April.

Former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze is hinting he might join a new government in his native Georgia, whose new rulers' stated support for democracy is in question over their use of violence against protesters.

Tuesday was the second time gunmen shot at pro-Gamsakhurdia demonstrators. On Friday, at least two people were killed and 25 wounded when men, some of them masked, opened fire with machine guns on a rally.

The military council was silent today, despite a ban it declared on demonstrations.

It took responsibility for breaking up Tuesday's rally.

"I gave the order to disperse them. ... We have declared an emergency situation and we have minimum demands: no rallies or demonstrations," said Dzhaba Ioseliani, a leading member of the military council.

Many have questioned such tactics, and Shevardnadze's presence could shore up the credibility of the former Soviet republic's new leaders. He is respected across the former Soviet Union for helping end the Cold War and for rejecting hard-line rule by resigning in late 1990.

Shevardnadze spoke by telephone with the republic's new leaders on Tuesday, said Shevardnadze aide Teimuraz Stepanov. Stepanov told The Associated Press that the men "exchanged opinions." But he gave no other details, nor did he say whether Shevardnadze supported the new leaders.

Shevardnadze, 64, said in an interview Monday that he would like to "participate in the creation of a democratic Georgia." He called the revolt that ousted Gamsakhurdia a "democratic revolution."

He was Georgian Communist Party boss from 1972 until 1985, when Mikhail S. Gorbachev named him Soviet foreign minister.

Gamsakhurdia has claimed Soviet officials including Shevardnadze were guiding the rebels from Moscow in an effort to block Georgian independence.

The military council says it wants Gamsakhurdia extradited. David Vardayan, chief of the Armenian parliament's foreign affairs committee, said Tuesday that Armenia will not arrest Gamsakhurdia on behalf of the Georgians.

"We will not take the role of a policemen interfering in their conflict," he said in an interview on Russian television.

Georgia is the only one of the 12 former Soviet republics that has not joined the new Commonwealth of Independent States. Ioseliani has said any move to join would have to await the establishment of civilian rule.

Non-profit clothing store helps the poor dress for success

By DEBRA HALE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Former welfare recipient Lynda Wright remembers the time she had the skills — but not the clothes — to get a job. From that experience came Bottomless Closet, a shop that helps poor women dress for success — for free.

"Everybody was saying go out and get a job, but no one was providing the clothing to do that," Ms. Wright said. "That makes a great deal of difference when you're trying to get in the work world and change your whole attitude." Ms. Wright, who eventually did get a job — with the Public Welfare Coalition — told her story on a radio talk show last year.

Laurel Baer, who was listening, contacted her, and last June, Baer and three other women opened Bottomless Closet in an office building downtown.

Ms. Wright serves on the board of directors, and the non-profit organization has about 100 volunteers.

Its shop looks like a regular clothing store, with items arranged by size and displayed on racks. But everything is free to women on public assistance.

"Everyone who comes in gets one outfit at no charge," Baer, the organization's president, said in a recent interview. "Generally, that's a suit or blouse and accessories. We try to find shoes if they need them. We have a few coats and briefcases, costume jewelry, scarves, purses."

All of Bottomless Closet's clothes are donated. Some individuals donate used clothes, while some local retailers and wholesalers provide new outfits.

Bottomless Closet has claimed to have helped nearly 100 women find jobs since it opened it June.

Eunice James, 28, said the clothes were crucial in her landing a job as an accounting clerk for the Boy Scouts of America.

"I picked out a designer dress," she said. "They matched me up with earrings and a necklace. I have a handbag also that matches the dress."

"When you go out for an interview, they're going to look at how you dress, your poise, how you talk, your whole character," she said. With the new outfit, "I had a positive attitude. I felt assured. I looked business-coordinated."

Ms. Wright recalled waiting for an interview before she could afford a business wardrobe.

"I looked at the other people in the room who didn't have runs in their nylons and wore makeup," she said.

"The employers greeted them as if 'This might be a prospect,' but they greeted me as if 'Oh well, we'll have to interview her because she's here.'"

Bottomless Closet said it needs more clothing, especially larger sizes, and Baer said the organization plans to approach clients of weight-loss centers to see if they will donate outfits they can no longer wear.

The group would eventually like to offer advice on makeup and general appearance and there is talk of providing clothes for men and expanding to other cities.

Also planned is a program to persuade corporations to be more open-minded about hiring welfare recipients.

"This is really a program where everybody wins," Baer said. "What we're providing is not really a suit but something that we hope leads to self-sufficiency and independence."

Broken transmitter may prevent more pictures of Venus

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A broken transmitter could keep the Magellan spacecraft from determining whether Venus still has active volcanoes unless NASA scientists can make a faulty backup radio work.

The craft's main transmitter failed Saturday after it had made pictures of 95 percent of Venus, NASA said Tuesday. Over the next two years Magellan was supposed to remap the planet in more detail and make three-dimensional images.

Engineers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory will know by week's end if they can use the backup, which was switched off last year when another problem ruined the quality of pictures it sent to Earth, said Jim Scott, manager of the $744 million Magellan project.

Magellan already has provided scientists with hints, but not proof, that Venus' Maat Mons volcano, the planet's second-highest peak, may have erupted during the past few years.

Unless engineers can work around problems with the backup transmitter, "there is no hope of being able to see active volcanoes because there is no way of getting data to the ground," Scott said.

However, he said Magellan still will be able to study the strength of Venus' gravity to learn how the planet's internal structure relates to mountain ranges and other landscape features.

Magellan was launched from a space shuttle in May 1989 and began mapping Venus in September 1990, using radar to peer through the planet's thick clouds.

Magellan's pictures have shown extensive volcanic flows, faults that apparently cause "Venusquakes," Los Angeles-sized meteorite impact craters, tall mountains, broad valleys and volcanic bulges up to 600 miles wide.

Courthouse janitor fired for leaking Dahmer file

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A courthouse janitor was fired for giving a New York Times reporter a confidential report detailing serial killer Jeffrey L. Dahmer's confession to murder, dismemberment and cannibalism.

Stephen D. Sessions, who had been suspended without pay since mid-August, was fired Tuesday by the Milwaukee County Personnel Review Board.

Sessions, 29, admitted to the board he made a "stupid mistake." He said he acted after the reporter, identified by the newspaper as Don Terry, told him officials had no right to keep the report secret.

"I thought, 'Yes, people do have a right to know what kind of monster (Dahmer) is,'" Sessions said Tuesday.

The report included the earliest allegations of cannibalism against Dahmer. Dahmer, 31, awaits trial Jan. 27 on 15 counts of murder.

Sessions said he got the document while cleaning a prosecutor's office. It was used in a Times story that appeared under the byline of reporter James Barron.

Nancy Nielson, a Times spokeswoman, did not immediately return calls for comment Tuesday.

No criminal charges will be filed against the janitor, authorities said.

Winter storm hits eastern Rockies hard

By The Associated Press

Parts of Colorado were under 6-foot drifts and the snow kept falling today from a storm that closed highways, schools and offices on the eastern side of the Rockies. Snow also stopped traffic in Southern California's mountains.

Elsewhere, ski resorts in Utah also got fresh snow, and the water kept rising in flooded areas of southeastern Texas.

Interstate 70 was closed Tuesday from Denver's eastern suburbs — where up to 22 inches of snow fell — to the Kansas line. Several highways north to Wyoming also closed. Winds of more than 35 mph whipped the snow into drifts.

Flights into and out of Denver were canceled or delayed Tuesday. Many Denver schools closed at noon and traffic was snarled.

Nebraska got ice, snow and thunderstorms that closed schools and immobilized highway crews. Forecasters said the Panhandle received 10 inches of snow, but Crawford Police Chief Ron Murphy said it was closer to 12 to 14.

"We got freezing rain for a half hour before it turned to snow," he said late Tuesday. "The city crews plowed what they could, but now they're waiting for it to quit snowing."

Wind gusting to 55 mph and snow falling at a rate of 1 to 2 inches per hour created whiteout conditions at times Tuesday in southeastern Wyoming.

Wyoming state offices began shutting down at midday. City, school and county offices in Cheyenne also were ordered to close early.

Four to 12 inches of moist and heavy snow fell in Utah.

In California, a storm that was expected to glance the northern half of the state caught the jet stream and roared southward. Snow closed heavily traveled Interstate 5 in the Tehachapi Mountains north of Los Angeles. Dozens of motorists awaited the all-clear in coffee shops. It finally came late Tuesday night.

Snow and ice closed Interstate 15 over the Cajon Pass, a major link between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, for several hours Tuesday night.

Heavy rain fell along the coast, and rough waters forced authorities to call off a search for a boater reported missing 14 miles off Southern California.

The Texas flooding that was caused by heavy rain the week before Christmas kept hundreds of people away from their homes Tuesday.

An estimated 2,500 homes across Texas have been damaged and 25 counties declared disaster areas. At least 15 deaths have been blamed on the flooding.

California professor using radar scan to find more buried biblical secrets

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

QUMRAN, Occupied West Bank (AP) — An American religion professor is using a radar scanner to comb the hills and caves that held the Dead Sea Scrolls, seeking more biblical secrets in hidden places.

The scanner has turned up "promising cavities" where scrolls could be hidden as well as data contradicting established theories about the authors of the ancient manuscripts, says the professor, Robert Eisenman.

But despite the new technology, the chances of success are slim.

"I think there are more manuscripts but we have masses of area here and the ground scan is only covering a small part of that," said Eisenman, head of the Religion Department at California State University in Long Beach.

Israeli officials, dismissing Eisenman as amateur, denied him permission to dig and said he can only survey the surface for readings of what's beneath.

The scrolls, discovered by bedouin shepherds in the Qumran caves near the Dead Sea in the late 1940s, are among the most important archaeological finds of the century. They shed light on the origins of Christianity and the history of Judaism and include the earliest known texts of the Old Testament.

International debate has raged over the handling of the roughly 800 scrolls. American critics, Eisenman among them, complain about the slow pace of publication and have demanded that the Israel Antiquities Authority allow free access to all scholars.

In September, after an American research library allowed access to its photographs of the scrolls, Israeli officials relented and said everyone could review the scrolls.

Eisenman said Tuesday that his interest in finding more scrolls began in 1985 when he was a visiting scholar in Jerusalem and was denied access.

"So we said, let's find some of our own," Eisenman said, standing atop Khirbet Qumran, the ruins of a settlement on the northwestern edge of the Dead Sea where the Essenes are believed to have lived from around 100 B.C.

As he spoke, some of his 25 team members used ropes to lower the scanner, a flat red box with a black antenna that looks much like a vacuum cleaner, down a steep cliff of Khirbet Qumran. As the scanner slid down, a nearby computer screen registered shifting horizontal lines in changing colors showing the different geological formations.

The scanner has never before been used in Israeli digs.

Gregory Mills, who works for the scanner's U.S. manufacturer, said it has been applied elsewhere, including Egyptian pyramids.

The scan of Khirbet Qumran turned up cisterns of the settlement's water supply system that were missed during the original digs in the early 1950s, Eisenman said.

He said his team also disproved the theory that the inhabitants of Khirbet Qumran fled after an earthquake that allegedly shook the region in 31 B.C.

"We can prove there was no earthquake here. We found a subsidence of the ground in one or two of the rooms that he (the original archaeologist) mistook for an earthquake," Eisenman said.

Eisenman said he asked for a permit to dig so he can check the scanner readings, but Israeli officials said he was not qualified.

"He is not an archaeologist. If you need to do heart surgery, you don't get a bone specialist," said Yitzhak Magen, the Israeli archaeologist in charge of digs in the West Bank.

Eisenman said he has archaeologists on his team.

Magen also said Khirbet Qumran has already been dug thoroughly and that an Israeli archaeologist has been digging in its caves since the mid-1980s. "If you find another hole here or there, it is not important," Magen said.

Eisenman appeared undeterred, saying if he couldn't dig he would survey more caves in the next two weeks.

"I don't want people to think we are loonies, that we think we are really going to find something (scrolls), but we have to check it out," he said.

Ghana leaders blame deaths on witchcraft

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — Traditional leaders have blamed witchcraft for a spate of deaths involving grinding mill operators in a northern district of this West African nation, newspaper reports say.

A scientist working in development projects, Dr. Andrew Massing, was quoted in Tuesday's reports as saying the victims may have inhaled some toxin used to preserve corn.

Massing, coordinator of the German government aid agency's Programs for Rural Action, has called for a government investigation.

Traditional chiefs met over the weekend to discuss the latest death in Gonja district, of German development worker Iddrisu Nuha two weeks ago. They cast suspicion on an old woman whose corn he milled before he died. Nuha worked for a German-sponsored well-drilling project.

"The witches normally put the soul of the victim in the maize, grinding it to death," the chiefs' council ruled.

Their conclusion brought out angry villagers, who beat up the old woman, the reports. She was later entrusted to the care of a local chief.

Serve a super bowl of chili for Super Bowl Sunday

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine

When Super Bowl halftime rolls around, be ready to score your own touchdown with knock-your-socks-off Super Bowl Chili. Start the chili cooking before the gang arrives, then join them to watch the big game. When it's time to eat, toss together a quick salad and set out pickled peppers, sour cream, shredded cheese, crusty breads or crackers and icy cold drinks.

Super Bowl Chili

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 pound lean ground pork
- Two 15 1/2-ounce cans hot chili beans or red kidney beans
- One 28-ounce can tomatoes, cut up
- 2 large onions, chopped
- 1 green pepper, chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tablespoons chili powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon crushed red pepper
- 3 tablespoons wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- Shredded Cheddar cheese, about 1 cup, (optional)
- Dairy sour cream (optional)

In a 4-quart Dutch oven brown beef and pork. Drain off fat. Stir in undrained beans, undrained tomatoes, onions, green pepper, garlic, chili powder, sugar, red pepper, wine vinegar and cumin. Cover and simmer for 1 hour, stirring frequently to avoid scorching.

(AP photo) Super bowl chili is sure to score a hit at your super bowl party. Serve with a salad and crusty bread or rolls.

To serve, ladle the chili into soup bowls. If desired, top each serving with shredded cheese and sour cream. Makes 6 to 8 main-dish servings.

Transform an ordinary baked potato into a nutty potato split

By The Associated Press

For a hearty side dish that takes less than 15 minutes to bake, try the following recipe for a quick-to-fix Potato Split. You start with a baked potato, then fill with a mixture of cheeses, vegetables and sunflower nuts.

Potato Split

- 1 large baked potato (about 10 ounces)
  - 3 tablespoons low-fat milk
  - 1/4 cup cottage cheese
  - 2 tablespoons toasted sunflower nuts
  - 2 tablespoons green bell pepper
  - 2 tablespoons chopped carrot
  - 2 tablespoons sliced green onion
  - 1/4 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
  - 1/8 teaspoon pepper
  - Salt to taste
  - 3 cherry tomatoes, halved
- Halve and scoop out the baked potato, leaving 1/4-inch shells. Mash potato pulp in a bowl. Add milk, cottage cheese, sunflower nuts, green pepper, carrot, onion, 1/8 cup of the Cheddar cheese, the pepper and salt. Gently mix to blend thoroughly. Mound into potato shells, dividing equally. Arrange 3 tomato halves on each, pushing in slightly. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake in a 450-degree F oven about 10 minutes, until cheese is melted and potatoes are heated through. Makes 2 servings.

(AP photo) Potatoes, carrots and cheese are the winning combination for this hearty potato split. The baked potatoe is topped with shredded cheddar cheese and cherry tomatoes.

In advance up to the point of baking. Wrap them securely and refrigerate up to 2 days. Reheat in a conventional or microwave oven.

Low-fat cooking: The new, lean beef stew

By NANCY BYAL, Food Editor
Better Homes and Gardens Magazine

The flavor of this favorite home-spun stew is as appealing as ever, only the extra fat is missing. In fact, this stew recipe has 45 fewer calories of fat than the traditional version.

To keep the stew portions generous and the fat at a minimum, we cut back on the meat and added a variety of fresh and flavorful vegetables, such as parsnips and turnips.

While a hearty bowlful is really a meal in itself, you can serve it along with crusty whole-wheat rolls and a tossed green salad.

The New Beef Stew

- 3/4 pound lean beef stew meat
- Non-stick spray coating
- 4 cups water
- 3 medium onions, halved
- 1 tablespoon grated orange peel
- 1 tablespoon instant beef bouillon granules
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 bay leaf
- 3 medium carrots, peeled
- 2 parsnips, peeled
- 1/2 medium turnip (about 1/2 pound)

2 medium potatoes, peeled and cut into 1-inch chunks
2 stalks celery, cut into chunks
1 cup frozen peas
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley or 1 tablespoon dried parsley flakes
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/2 cup cold water

In a small mixing bowl stir together the flour and the 1/2 cup cold water until smooth; stir into broth. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Return meat and vegetables to the broth; heat through. Season to taste with salt. Makes 4 servings.

Trim all excess fat from beef; discard fat. Cut beef into 1-inch pieces. Spray a Dutch oven with non-stick spray coating; heat pan over medium-high heat. Add beef and cook, stirring until brown on all sides. Remove from heat.

Carefully add the 4 cups water to pan; return to heat. Bring to boiling, scraping up any brown bits on the bottom. Add onions, orange peel, bouillon granules, thyme, oregano, pepper and bay leaf. Return to boiling; cover and simmer for 1 hour.

Cut carrots, parsnips and turnip into 3/4-inch pieces. Add carrots and turnip to beef mixture; cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Add parsnips, potatoes and celery; cover and simmer for 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Add peas and parsley; cover and simmer for 5 minutes more. With a slotted spoon, remove the meat and vegetables from broth.

Texas Cattle Women look for best beef recipes for April cook-off

Changes in consumer lifestyles have generated changes in the 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off—including more opportunities to win more prize money than ever before.

Entries are now being accepted up to March 1, 1992, for this annual event that will be held April 23-24 at the Ramada Inn in Wichita Falls, Texas. All persons entering the contest will also receive a coupon good for $3 off any beef purchase.

"The Texas Beef Cook-Off has traditionally sought out the best beef dish in Texas from amateur cooks," Leigh Kimbell, chairman of the 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off, said. "Yet the daily lifestyle of consumers doesn't always allow them to prepare the best dish. They want good nutrition for their children, they want less calories, they want convenience, they want tasty dishes for parties, and they want to stretch their food dollars. The 1992 Texas Beef Cook-Off will reflect all these consumer needs."

This year, 15 contestants will compete for a total of $10,000 in prize money. First place overall will win $3,000, second place overall will win $2,000, and the winner of each of the five categories will win $1,000. The five categories will be: Beef Meals Kids Like; Best Under 300 Calories Per Serving of Beef Recipe; Most Convenient Beef Recipe; Beef Recipes for Entertaining; and Budget Beef Meals.

"One recipe can fit several categories," Kimbell said. "The more categories a recipe fits, the more opportunities a contestant has to win the overall prize."

Entries may include oven or range prepared recipes, microwave recipes and outdoor barbecue recipes in the five categories.

Only the highest ranking oven or range prepared recipe will advance to the National Beef Cook-Off for a chance at the top prize of $15,000. However, all microwave and outdoor barbecue recipes will advance to the national competition for a chance to win the Southwest Region. All recipes should include suggestions for a complete meal featuring the beef dish.

Anyone 18 years of age or older who resides in Texas and is not a food professional or a beef producer may enter the 1992 contest. Each contestant must have an original, innovative beef recipe.

The entries will be judged by a five-member panel of national food experts. Dishes are rated on taste, appeal, ease of preparation and appearance.

Contestant entries must be post-marked by March 1, 1992. For an entry form and information, contact the Texas Beef Cook-Off, 8310 Capitol of Texas Hwy. N., Ste. 440, Austin, TX 78731-1081; (512) 345-3531.

The Texas Beef Cook-Off is sponsored by Texas CattleWomen in cooperation with the Texas Beef Industry Council.

Kentucky retiree finances literary magazine read the world around

By ALLEN G. BREED
Associated Press Writer

META, Ky. (AP) — Far away from the bustling publishing houses of New York and Boston, Quentin Howard sifts through the day's offering of short stories and poems.

Sitting in a wooden rocking chair at his home on a remote eastern Kentucky hillside, the 72-year-old farmer's son carefully goes through each packet. Of the roughly 350 contributions he receives monthly, he figures he rejects 96 percent.

"I can imagine them sometimes saying, 'Now, what does a hillbilly like that know about poetry,'" Howard muses. His answer is, "Very little ... I don't care. I'm paying for the magazine."

The magazine is WIND, a semi-annual anthology of original works from around the globe. And Howard — its creator, editor and publisher — can afford to be choosy.

Writer's Digest, a Cincinnati-based trade publication, in the mid-1980s declared the 475-subscription WIND one of the nation's top 10 small literary magazines. It is read by the Houghton Mifflin Co. editor who annually publishes the list of "Best American Short Stories."

What is perhaps most impressive about WIND is that it turned 20 last year, while most small magazines survive a fifth that long. But Howard has no illusions about the publication's longevity.

"I'll tell you what's kept it alive — my money."

Howard has financed every issue of WIND since April 1971.

With the exception of a small grant here and there, the former teacher's pension and Social Security benefits are all that have kept WIND aloft.

"I just love to see people who need to be in print get in print," he said.

Howard paid his way through college with money earned from travel articles sold to The New York Times and essays published in The Christian Science Monitor. He spent 29 years as a teacher and school administrator in his hometown. But all that time, he dreamed of running a magazine.

"When I was trying to write myself, so many magazines would turn you down just because you weren't known," he said. "I wanted to publish an eclectic magazine that contained all kinds of material, and I do."

Howard chose the name WIND because he "thought it was sort of a worldwide title. The wind blows everywhere, I guess."

He had 500 copies of his first issue printed and distributed to friends. His first paying subscriber came to him by accident. "A woman saw that first issue in a dentist's office in Tucson, Ariz., and she called me," he said.

Copies of each issue now end up in university libraries around the country and the world. Howard also has individual subscribers throughout the United States and abroad.

During WIND's first press run, Howard could print 500 copies for $250. Today, the same number costs $3,100, not including the $1.05-per-copy postal fee. A subscription — two issues — costs $7 — $8 for institutions and $12 for foreign subscribers.

Noted Kentucky authors Jesse Stuart and James Still contributed to WIND, as has Susan Fromberg Shaffer, a respected New York fiction writer. But for Howard, the joy is in publishing authors for the first time.

"One of the things I'm most proud of is that of the authors I've published, 200 or more were beginning writers, and today about 150 are published regularly in larger magazines," he said.

Although contributors get no remuneration, "the competition is tough," said Gayle Compton, a Pike County resident who has been published in about 50 magazines.

"Even though Howard is a personal friend, I'm no different than any one else," said Compton, who works at a heavy equipment supply business to finance his writing. "He's rejected me, too."

Chris Holbrook, an English instructor at Alice Lloyd College in Pippa Passes, said WIND was the perfect home for his "serious literature," which doesn't pay much anyway.

"They go mostly to the kinds of people I want to read them," he said. "It kind of reinforces the idea that what I'm writing is publishable and worthy of being seen by a fairly knowledgeable audience."

Relatively few Kentuckians make it into the magazine, Howard said, because most offerings are "dreary, weepy graveyard poetry." But the December issue contained stories by three Kentucky authors, including Holbrook.

The reading chores leave Howard little time to do more than an occasional book review for WIND. He spends about three hours a day, six days a week on the magazine, but even that is getting to be too much.

Quadruple bypass surgery in 1987 and an aneurysm last May have slowed him a bit. He said WIND would likely close down in 1993.

"I'm getting old and I may not have sense enough to do it," he said. There are no plans for a successor, and Howard said that's the way it should be.

"When I'm gone," he said, "it's gone."

Dividends paid to stockholders based on earnings

A dividend is the amount paid per share per year to holders of common stock. Payments generally are made in quarterly installments. The dividend usually is a portion of the earnings per share. However, if a company shows no profit during a given period, it may be able to use earnings retained from profitable periods to pay its dividend on schedule.

Folk singer appeals to seniors in Ozarks

By JERRY NACHTIGAL
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Judy Domeny sings and plays her acoustic guitar for audiences of all ages, but her music means the most to the silver-haired crowd.

Domeny is an aficionado of old folk songs. She's particularly fond of those sung by the Scottish and Irish pioneers who came largely from Appalachia to settle the Ozark Mountains in the early 1800s.

"My best audience is 60 years and up," Domeny said during a break at the Ozark Empire Fair, where she performed. "That's my crowd. These songs really mean so much to them."

Domeny, who teaches art at an elementary school in Willard, says children enjoy her ballads about fair maidens, princes and castles. But it's senior citizens who grew up in the Ozarks who are her biggest fans.

"So many times they say, 'Oh, you made me think of my mother, or an old schoolteacher of mine, or when I was a kid,'" Domeny said. "It conjures up so many memories."

Domeny, 30, who grew up in the Ozarks, said her love of folk songs from the hills began in the sixth grade. During a visit to the Laura Ingalls Wilder Home and Museum in Mansfield, she picked up a book of the songs and became enchanted with the lyrics.

She's been researching and singing those songs as a hobby ever since.

"I've sung just about everywhere you can imagine — libraries, nursing homes, conventions, festivals and concerts, birthday parties," Domeny said.

She estimates she has 200 folk songs in her repertoire, including "The Mistletoe Bough," which dates to 11th-century England. It's a sad — and, according to Domeny, reputedly true — tale of a bride who accidentally locks herself in a trunk on her wedding day and isn't found until years later.

"Some are silly, some are funny. I kind of specialize in sad songs, some of which are murder ballads," she said.

A longtime fan, Jenny Ladd of De Soto, first heard Domeny at a music festival at the Silver Dollar City theme park in Branson about 13 years ago. Domeny has released two records, and Mrs. Ladd treasures them both.

"Her voice was and still is just as clear and pure as can be," she said. "With folk music, you need to understand every word said to understand the story. I just think she is very talented."

Music was important to the early settlers who scratched out a living among the rocky soils and steep hillsides of the Ozarks, said Bill McNeil, a folklorist at the Ozark Folk Center in Mountain View, Ark.

"It was a time when you had to make your own entertainment more or less," McNeil said. "Unless you were in a larger city, there wasn't much professional entertainment around so people entertained themselves."

Even today, neighbors in the more remote areas of the Ozarks sometimes get together for jam sessions in homes or on the town square, with fiddles, banjos and guitars, plus a little singing and dancing.

McNeil said Domeny and other folk singers perform a service by keeping old Ozark folk songs in circulation for a new generation. Domeny says she's happy to do it.

"I think it's important to keep the music alive, to keep part of the past alive," she said. "You're keeping part of the pioneers alive, really."

In-law's offer is a proposal without a ring

DEAR ABBY: Approximately three years ago, our 21-year-old daughter married her high school sweetheart.

My wife and daughter made all the wedding plans: invitations, bridal dinner, flowers, caterers and everything that must be done to have a perfect wedding — which it was.

When the happy couple announced their engagement, we were pleasantly surprised when the groom's parents offered to go 50-50 in paying for the wedding. Because of their generous offer, we went a little overboard to make it a very lavish affair. Happily, the wedding was everything we wanted it to be, and a lovely time was had by all.

Unfortunately, our son-in-law's parents have never stepped forward offering to pay us their promised half of the wedding expenses, which was about $5,000.

We have seen very little of these people since the wedding, but we do run into them occasionally, and I find it rather difficult to be totally friendly.

My wife tells me to forget it and write it off as boorish behavior. Please advise. I can't help feeling ...

TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF

DEARTAKEN: Now that three years have passed, it may be awkward — but it's not unreasonable to remind the in-laws of their promise.

Sorry to sound like a Monday morning quarterback, but did you present them with all the bills and receipts attendant to the wedding? If not — you should have.

If you did, and they looked out the window, ask them again. In any case, you need not be reluctant to remind them of their promise. It would clear the air and make for a more cordial family relationship.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for the Christmas present you unknowingly gave me.

I am a collector of aphorisms, and you have given me a choice one. In your column in the San Diego Union on Dec. 2, you gave advice on gift-giving. In your suggestions for what to give someone who is living alone, you concluded with: "Loneliness is the ultimate poverty."

Abby, in my opinion, that deserves a place in anyone's collection of aphorisms — including the well-known "Bartlett's."

JOHN WARNER, SAN DIEGO

DEAR MR. WARNER: Wow!

Thank you; that's high praise.

DEAR ABBY: Your column reaches so many people, I beg you to consider the following: Here in the Northeast, and I assume the rest of the country, ceiling fans have become very popular. Recently a friend of mine who has an older house with high ceilings went to visit his mother, who lives in a new house with lower ceilings. While carrying his 2-year-old daughter on his shoulders (something he always does at home), he walked the child right into the whirling blades of his mother's ceiling fan!

The blades caught the child right at the hairline. Her scalp was peeled back. A fraction of an inch deeper could have been fatal.

If this warning will save one child from being injured, this letter will have been well worth the few minutes it took to write. I give you permission to use my name, if you so desire.

IN THE ROUGH

BY RICK CLARK

Who is premier putter?

The Hidden Hills Senior Golf Association made it out again after the holiday for a two-man scramble.

Coming out on top was the team of Ervin Williams and Harvey Malone. Finishing second were Jim Maher and Bill Washington. Congratulations to the senior winners.

Lynn Thornton was the winner of the Hogan Edge irons and Hogan golf bag given away by Hidden Hills.

PROFESSIONAL PLAYER PROFILE: Blaine McCallister... According to David Teichmann, pro at Hidden Hills Golf Course who grew up with Blaine, the Texas native has done quite well.

On the tour since 1982, and a Maxfli pro since 1986, the H.E.B. Texas Open win, coupled with an early season win at the Vines Classic in Perth, Australia, high-lighted a fine year for the personable Texan who is distinctive for his familiar Maxfli straw hat.

Blaine started playing golf at the age of 14 in Fort Stockton with a couple of friends.

"I thought it was great how far you could hit the ball," said McCallister in a Maxfli "Profile."

He went on to win the 1977 Texas State High School Championship. Ken Wright, who was the pro at the Fort Stockton Golf Club, helped him through those early years. Blaine received a scholarship to the University of Houston and became a four-year letterman. Also on that Houston team were Fred Couples and CBS Sports personality Jim Nantz.

Well known instructor, Charlie Epps, then the head pro at the Houston Country Club, helped to turn Blaine's game around. Putting was one of Blaine's weaknesses. As he puts it, "I seemed to see too much break when I putted right-handed."

"I do everything left-handed except play golf," Blaine recalls in the profile. "Charlie suggested I try putting left-handed. It took a while to get used to the feel, but gradually more putts started to drop."

A fine example of left-handed putting by a right-handed golfer is Pampa's Deck Woldt. I've seen Deck make many putts with his new stroke.

Just to get something started, who do you think is the best putter in Pampa?

Send your pick, man or woman, to The Pampa News, care of IN THE ROUGH, P.O. Box 2198. No pros please. After a few weeks, maybe we can have a PUTT-OFF to decide who the best putter is.

My pick is Delmar Watkins.

GOLFING FEATS: PAMPA COUNTRY CLUB...Chunky Leonard, eagle-3 on number eighteen. Way to go Chunky.

Delmar Watkins had another fine round with a 70. Good round Delmar.

Until next week, SEE YA IN THE ROUGH.

Harvesters lose, 67-65; PHS girls stomp Liberal

LIBERAL, Kan. — The Pampa Harvesters have lost only two games in 19 outings this season with both losses coming against Kansas teams.

Three weeks ago, after 12 consecutive wins, the Harvesters fell to Dodge City, 62-61.

Tuesday night the Harvesters suffered their second setback, bowing to Liberal, 67-65, in overtime.

Martin Lewis led Liberal's scoring attack with 30 points, but it was Jason Dunlap's two free throws in the closing seconds of overtime that gave the Redskins the two-point margin of victory.

Pampa is now 17-2 on the season while Liberal is 4-3. Pampa had defeated Liberal in three previous games before last night's meeting.

Liberal led by as many as 10 points in the first half, but Pampa battled back and led by one (42-41) going into the fourth quarter.

The two teams exchanged leads in the final minutes and with Liberal on top, 59-57, Pampa's Cederick Wilbon hit a pair of free throws with five seconds left to tie the score at the end of regulation.

The score was deadlocked twice in the three-minute overtime period, but with 36 ticks left, Brian Phelps hit two free shots to put Liberal ahead for good.

After a turnover and a missed shot by Pampa, Dunlap, who had been 0 for 2 from the foul line, converted two free throws with just six seconds remaining to put Liberal in front by four.

Wilbon led Pampa scorers with 23 points. Jeff Young, who had fouled out in the overtime period, followed with 12 points. The Harvesters also lost two other players, David Johnson and Randy Nichols, to fouls in the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters host Levelland at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in McNeely Fieldhouse.

In the girls game, Amber Seaton and Nikki Ryan combined for 48 points as Pampa routed Liberal 69-52.

Seaton scored 25 points and Ryan added 23 as the Pampa girls improved their record to 10-6. Liberal falls to 2-5.

The Lady Harvesters' pressing defense caused numerous Liberal turnovers right from the start and consecutive 3-pointers by Kristen Becker and Katina Thomas gave Pampa a 12-point bulge with less than three minutes to go in the first quarter.

By halftime, Pampa had opened up an 18-point lead, 35-17.

Mandy Carlile led Liberal in scoring with 23 points.

The Lady Harvesters open District 1-4A play Friday night, hosting Amarillo Caprock at 8 in McNeely Fieldhouse.

(Staff photo by J. Alan Brzya) Pampa's David Johnson (32) readies to pass to a teammate in the Jan. 3 contest against Garden City, Kan.

Seaver, Fingers elected to Hall of Fame

Rose garners write-in votes for Hall status

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver came close to another perfect ending.

Remember July 9, 1969? Seaver vs. the Chicago Cubs. On that night, Seaver came within two outs of a perfect game before little-known Jimmy Qualls broke it up with a single.

On Tuesday night, Seaver received 425 of 430 votes for a record 98.8 percent and election to the Hall of Fame in his first try. He was joined by all-time saves leader Rollie Fingers, who received 349 votes in balloting cast by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

A total of 323 votes were required this year for the 75 percent needed for election. Orlando Cepeda finished third with 246 votes, followed by Tony Perez (215), Bill Mazeroski (182), Tony Oliva (175) and Ron Santo (136). It was Mazeroski's last time on the ballot.

Pete Rose? He's still wondering what the Hall of Fame future holds for him. While Seaver was a shoe-in, Rose was a write-in.

Rose, banned from the Hall of Fame ballot, received 41 write-in votes. Three voters — Bob Hertz of The Pittsburgh Press, freelance writer Bob Hunter and Paul Hagen of the Philadelphia Daily News — returned blank ballots. Two retired writers — Deane McGowen and Bud Tucker — did not vote for Seaver.

When Seaver and Rose retired following the 1986 season, fans looked ahead to what promised to be one of the biggest days ever at Cooperstown, with the two superstars walking in together.

But all that was dashed when Rose was banned from baseball for gambling by then-commissioner Bart Giamatti on Aug. 23, 1989. The board of directors of the Hall of Fame then decided to erase Rose's name from their ballot.

TOM SEAVER

ROLLIE FINGERS

The Hall of Fame voting is conducted by 10-year members of the BBWAA, and several writers were upset that the board of directors of the Hall voted last year to keep Rose off the ballot because he is on the permanent ineligible list. The writers wanted the choice of whether he deserved to be in Cooperstown or not.

Still, 41 BBWAA members made him a write-in vote, even though write-in ballots don't count. Last year, Rose asked the voters not to attempt any kind of protest because he didn't want to hurt the chances of the other candidates.

"I would like to congratulate Tom Seaver and Rollie Fingers on their election to baseball's Hall of Fame," Rose said in a statement. "I'm disappointed that my good friend and former teammate Tony Perez was not elected this year. I hope that his election will come in the not too distant future."

"As to reports of write-in votes on my behalf, I have expressed in the past my hope that members of the Baseball Writers Association would not use the voting process in a way that would hurt anyone's chances of being elected. Election to the Hall of Fame is the ultimate honor a baseball player can receive. I am hopeful that I will someday be in a position to be considered."

Rose's plan is to eventually ask commissioner Fay Vincent to be reinstated. If he is, he would be eligible to be placed on the Hall of Fame ballot.

"It certainly wasn't meant as a slam to Tom Seaver, Tony Perez or anyone else," Hagen said. "And I'm not saying Pete Rose should be in it. I'm just saying I don't like the fact they took it away from the baseball writers."

At one time, Rose was considered to be the first player who could get 100 percent of the vote. He is the career leader in hits (4,256), singles (3,215), at-bats (14,053) and games played (3,562).

"That was my way to emphasize that Rose should be on there," said Hunter, who also wrote in Rose's name. "Otherwise, I would have had Seaver on there."

Seaver's percentage beat the previous record (98.2) set by Ty Cobb in 1936 and his vote total is the second highest in history. Johnny Bench was named on 431 of 447 ballots (96.4 percent) in 1989. Seaver is the 23rd player elected in the first year of eligibility, not including the inaugural class of 1936.

George Thomas Seaver won three Cy Young Awards for the New York Mets, pitched 61 shutouts and struck out 3,640 in his career, third on the career list behind Nolan Ryan and Steve Carlton. From 1967 to 1977, Seaver won 25 percent of the Mets' games.

He is the career Mets leader in games (401), starts (395), complete games (171), wins (198), innings pitched (3,045.1), ERA (2.57), strikeouts (2,541) and shutouts (44).

Seaver's greatest single-game feat came April 22, 1970, when the right-hander set a major league record with 10 consecutive strikeouts against the San Diego Padres and finished with 19 in the game. Some of his greatest moments, however, didn't come in a Mets uniform.

He threw his only no-hitter on June 16, 1978, against St. Louis while pitching for Cincinnati. On April 18, 1981, he became the fifth pitcher in major league history to strike out 3,000 batters, again while pitching for the Reds, and on Aug. 4, 1985, while pitching for the Chicago White Sox, he won his 300th game at Yankee Stadium.

He finished his 20-year career with a record of 311-205.

Seaver made pitching an art form. He used the plate as an easel, painting the corners with sliders and fastballs. Seaver has been called "The Franchise" and "Tom Terrific." Now he can be called a Hall of Famer, too.

There are others — such as Willie Mays and Warren Spahn — who have worn Mets uniforms and are in the Hall of Fame, but Seaver is the first home-grown Met to make it.

Roland Glen Fingers was known not only for twisting pitches, but also for his twisting handlebar mustache. He was a sub-.500 pitcher as a starter before he found his niche.

"You never know what's going to happen," said Fingers, the first pitcher to make the Hall of Fame with a losing record at 114-118.

"Last year, people kept saying, 'I was in. I was in. I was in.' And then I wasn't. I'm glad it's over with, to tell you the truth."

Fingers, who finished in 1985 with a career ERA of 2.90, pitched nine seasons for Oakland, four for San Diego and four for Milwaukee. He has 14 saves more than his closest bullpen rival, Jeff Reardon.

Fingers joins Hoyt Wilhelm as the only relief pitchers in Cooperstown.

PHS football banquet set

"A Classic Year" is the theme of the 1991 Pampa High School football banquet sponsored by the Harvesters Booster Club and set for 7 p.m. Jan. 15 at the M.K. Brown Heritage Room.

Featured speaker is University of Houston head football coach John Jenkins, a former Harvesters player.

Also scheduled is a season-high-light film of this year's history-making football squad.

The public is invited and tickets are available through Monday for $6 per person at the PHS athletic office.

Limited seating is available and no tickets will be sold at the door.

NCAA sees changes

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The winds of change are blowing through college athletics, and NCAA executive director Dick Schultz says adjustments are necessary for survival.

Schultz told 2,300 delegates at the NCAA's annual convention Tuesday that four dominant pressures — perceptions, political, financial and reform — are bearing down on college athletics.

"Perhaps the most crucial current pressure is the financial pressure," Schultz said. "I have been involved in athletics for over 40 years and the financial pressure on higher education is the most challenging that I have witnessed."

He said that studies indicate that almost 70 percent of Division I schools will not make enough money this year to pay the expenses of their athletic departments.

Schultz noted that some cost-cutting moves already have been made, including scholarship reductions, reducing coaching staffs and the phasing out of full training tables and athletic dormitories.

"It would be my hope that the elimination of sports programs would be the last method of cost reduction," he said. "We should look at the way we travel, the way we equip our teams and the number of administrative people that we employ."

Schultz said that lingering negative perceptions of college athletics and of the NCAA have led to political pressures, both state and national.

"We find a myriad of bills that have been introduced at the federal level during this past year," Schultz said.

He said state legislation that would strip the NCAA of enforcement powers are even more troubling, and called for a lobbying effort to support NCAA activities.

Four legislatures have passed and six others are working on so-called "due process" legislation. The state laws were enacted after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that due process guarantees under the U.S. Constitution aren't required for voluntary organizations such as the NCAA.

Addressing the matter of reform in college athletics, Schultz talked about the (college) Presidents Commission, which is having a steadily increasing influence.

"While some resent presidential involvement as an intrusion into a hallowed area, intercollegiate athletics as we know it today will not survive this decade if presidents are not directly involved and in control," Schultz said.

In keeping with the presidents' timetable, this year's agenda deals heavily with academics. The commission drew up the legislation and, along with the NCAA Council, is its chief sponsor.

Before adjourning on Friday, delegates will decide on more than 140 agenda items. Most significantly, the larger Division I schools will vote on a controversial package of academic proposals, what has been called the NCAA's biggest academic push in almost a decade.

"A president doesn't have to personally attend the convention to cast his vote," said Chuck Neinas, executive director of the College Football Association. "He simply instructs his designated voting delegate how to vote on certain issues. Because the Presidents Commission calls for a roll call vote on the proposals they are sponsoring, each president can verify whether his instructions were carried out."

Under the present freshman eligibility rule known as Proposition 48, freshman to be eligible their first year must have a 2.00 — or C average — in 11 high school "core" or college preparatory courses. They must also make a minimum score on the ACT or SAT college entrance exams.

The new rule would raise the number of core courses to 13 and hike the minimum grade point in the core from 2.00 to 2.50. There would also be a sliding index where a higher grade point in the core offsets a lower test score.

In addition, the Presidents Commission is seeking to require athletes to complete a progressive percentage of courses in a specific degree program. In their third, fourth and fifth years, athletes would need to have completed 25, 50 and 75 percent of the requirements for graduation.

Yankees sign Gallego for $5.1 million

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A day after the New York Yankees spent $25.5 million for outfielder Danny Tartabull, they spent $5.1 million for infielder Mike Gallego.

Considering the team's pressing needs are third base and pitching, it's unclear why they're finally making these moves.

"We think he can play third base, second base and shortstop," New York general manager Gene Michael said Tuesday after Gallego's signing was announced. "We feel he'll play a lot. He can play regularly at one of the positions."

Gallego, who made $565,000 last year, gets a $1.5 million signing bonus, $1.45 million in 1992 and $1,075,000 in each of the 1993 and 1994 seasons. He also can earn $500,000 in performance bonuses during the life of the contract.

In other free agent news, Mike Pagliarulo returned to the Minnesota Twins. The third baseman, who made $655,000 last season, agreed to a $1.2 million deal with the chance to make $570,000 more in performance bonuses.

And right-hander Jeff D. Robinson, who pitched for California last season, agreed to a $375,000 minor league contract with the Chicago Cubs. Robinson, who made $1 million last season, can earn an additional $500,000 in performance bonuses.

Meanwhile, two players eligible for salary arbitration agreed to one-year deals. First baseman-outfielder Pedro Guerrero and St. Louis agreed at $2,425,000, up from the $2,283,333 he earned last season (including a prorated share of his signing bonus). Outfielder Shane Mack and the Minnesota Twins agreed at $1,075,000, almost four times as much as the $270,000 he was paid in 1991.

In addition, the New York Mets took the rare step of filing for salary arbitration against infielder Dave Magadan. Usually, players file, not clubs. But by taking the step, the Mets forced Magadan to exchange figures on Monday. Normally, players file on the final day and exchange figures with their clubs three days later, which will be Jan. 17 this year.

The Mets also attempted to make the same early move with outfielder Daryl Boston, but were barred because Boston was a free agent who already had accepted their arbitration offer on Dec. 19.

Tuesday's activity left six free agents with a Wednesday midnight deadline to re-sign with their former clubs: Steve Lyons (Boston), Kurt Stillwell (Kansas City), Bill Kruger (Seattle), Rafael Ramirez (Houston), Rick Schu (Philadelphia) and Tim Teufel (San Diego).

If they don't re-sign by the deadline, they can't go back until May 1 at the earliest.

Gallego's signing was surprising in that it gives the Yankees three second basemen: Gallego, Steve Sax and Pat Kelly.

Gallego batted .247 last season with career highs in doubles (15), triples (4), home runs (12) and RBIs (47). Oakland had offered $4.3 million for three years.

"It was a difficult decision," Gallego said, "but I would be a fool not to take the contract that was offered."

Horned Frogs beat Aggies

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian's Mike Strickland says he likes it when the pressure is on him when the game is on the line.

Strickland hit five free throws in the final minute Tuesday night to clinch an 83-71 Southwest Conference victory over Texas A&M.

"I'm confident in all of our players, but I like being the one there," Strickland said. "There wasn't any pressure to score after my last game (against South Florida). All I had to do was keep playing hard and hustling."

Strickland had been held scoreless in that game. He scored 18 against the Aggies in the Southwest Conference opener for both teams.

Albert Thomas had 20 points for TCU (10-3). Damon Johnson had 25 points for A&M (3-8).

TCU coach Moe Iba says he's just thankful that the Horned Frogs escaped with a victory over the Aggies, who played hard and never gave up.

"To tell you the truth, their big kids really whipped our big kids, just whipped them," Iba said. "And A&M did a good job of playing to get the ball inside."

"But our kids were good enough to get up by 21 on them before they came back. The whole game was a streaky thing," said Iba.

Aggies coach Tony Barone was pleased despite the loss.

"I'm proud of the effort tonight," Barone said. "They got up by 21 because they hit some threes that I didn't think they could hit. I thought we missed some layups, but I think we competed. There was about a five-minute span there that they outclassed us, but other than that I thought we held our own." The Horned Frogs, ahead by 13 points at the half, went up 71-50 when Thomas hit a 3-pointer with 7:18 to play.

A&M, however, went on a scoring run of its own, as Johnson led the Aggies on a 19-3 blitz during the next six minutes.

Johnson hit from inside to make it 74-69 with 1:01 to play before TCU re-grouped and Strickland made five free throws.

The game marked the return of 6-foot-8 A&M senior Sheddrick Anderson, who had been suspended since before the start of fall practices for breaking team rules. Anderson finished with 15 points and seven rebounds.

Johnson, a freshman who hit on 11 of 15 shots from the floor, said no one should take A&M lightly.

"If we hadn't been down so much at halftime I really believe we could have come back on them," he said. "Being picked so low we have nothing to lose. Nobody's going to walk over us."

Cambridge to have rehearing

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Dexter Cambridge, suspended from playing basketball for Texas this season, will have a rehearing before the NCAA committee on eligibility.

"We're very pleased. ... This permits us to get new evidence in and hopefully change the final result," Cambridge's attorney Phil Maxwell said Tuesday.

Cambridge, Maxwell and Texas officials met with an NCAA subcommittee on eligibility for 1 1/2 hours Tuesday morning, and Cambridge apparently emerged with a chance to regain eligibility for this season.

In an affidavit presented to the subcommittee, Keith Heingartner said that Cambridge was paid $2,400 — out of a check totaling $7,000 — for his work, rather than $1,500, as initially reported to the NCAA.

Janet Justus, head of the NCAA subcommittee, said, "If more information that would support the affidavit can be provided, about more hours, work performed ... if there is new information, it could result in a different decision."

A rehearing by the eligibility committee would be the next step, and Justus said it was hoped that could be accomplished by a conference call next week.

Should the NCAA overturn the suspension, Cambridge could begin playing again immediately. Another possibility is that the NCAA will reduce the suspension down from a full season.

Cambridge received a $7,000 check in 1990 from Heingartner, who claimed part of the money was for working for his firm and part was a graduation present.

The exact amount he received for working obviously will have some bearing on the NCAA's decision on his suspension.

The 6-foot-7 Cambridge played just four games for Texas this season, leading the Longhorns in scoring at 23.5 per game and in rebounding at 12 per game.

"With him, we were definitely a Top 25 team," Texas coach Tom Penders said. "Without him, well ..." Texas currently has a 7-6 record.

Penders said he thought Cambridge should not have been suspended for "getting a graduation gift from someone not connected with the university," adding, "The NCAA has a chance now to prove they are human and compassionate."

Parcells on again for Bucs position

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former New York Giants coach Bill Parcells apparently has reconsidered and is reported close to taking the coaching job with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

ESPN on Tuesday said Parcells and Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse were to meet again today amid reports that Parcells was close to accepting the terms he turned down before.

However, unnamed sources told The Tampa Tribune for a story in today's editions that Culverhouse and Parcells are restructuring their original 38-point deal now that Culverhouse is operating from a position of strength.

The new deal would not be as lucrative and Parcells would not wield as much power, the sources told the newspaper.

Parcells, who lives in the Tampa area, earlier rejected a five-year, $6.5 million offer to take over the Bucs. But Parcells reportedly contacted Culverhouse on Monday and said he now wants to be considered for the job.

Kelton boys slip past Hedley

HEDLEY — Brian Kirkland tossed in 44 points as Kelton slipped by Hedley, 74-73, in two overtime periods Tuesday night.

Kelton had to rally for the victory after trailing by eight (36-28) at halftime. The score was tied at 61-all after four quarters and 69-all after the first overtime.

Steven Bodine added 14 points for the Lions, who improved their record to 9-6.

Kevin Johnson had a 34-point night for Hedley.

WHEELER — Wheeler, trailing by one at halftime, had a big second half to down Follett, 53-44, Tuesday night.

Jason Helton led a balanced scoring attack for the Mustangs with 12 points. Brandon Chick and Rudy Rivera added 10 points each.

Wheeler's record is now 5-8. Follett won the girls' contest, 59-52.

Danielle Gex and Ginger Hudson had 14 points each to pace Follett in scoring.

Misty Glassey was high scorer for Wheeler with 22 points.

The Mustangettes fell to 6-11 for the season.

BRISCOE — Briscoe squeezed by Shamrock, 51-49, in boys' basketball action Tuesday night.

Dallas Fillingim had 18 points and Jimmy Nelson 16 to lead the Broncos in scoring.

Briscoe led by nine points (30-21) at halftime.

Charley Russell led Shamrock with 16 points.

Shamrock won over Briscoe,

43-38, in the girls' game.

Top scorer for Shamrock was Heather Campbell with 12 points while Lindsey Pillingim led Briscoe with 18.

Briscoe boys have a 13-3 record while Briscoe girls are 5-10.

CANADIAN — Joel Robbins scored 23 points as Canadian posted a 68-61 win over Gruver Tuesday night.

Gruver came back to make the final score fairly close after trailing by 15 points after three quarters.

Area Basketball

Canadian, 10-5, got 16 points from Ty Godwin.

Kevin Spivy was top scorer for Gruver with 16 points.

Gruver won the girls' game, 59-47.

Kasey Davis was the leading scorer for Gruver with 19 points.

Myrlah Jaco had 16 points and Misty Risley 12 for Canadian, which has a 7-7 record.

MIAMI — Christian Looney, a 6-2 junior, scored 26 points as McLean held off Miami, 78-73, Tuesday night.

Andrew Neighbors was high scorer for Miami with 23 points.

Miami turned the tables in the girls' game with a 48-38 win.

Jamie Sursa and Janet Byrum had 10 and 9 points respectively for Miami.

Leading McLean was Brandy Melton with 15 points.

BOOKER — White Deer girls trimmed Booker, 49-46, Tuesday night behind the 26-point scoring of Kandi Cargal.

Kimberly Wynn paced Booker with 20 points and Amy Ulmer added 10 points for the Lady Bucks.

Booker downed White Deer, 64-59, in the boys' clash.

Toby Winn's 26 points led Booker's scoring attack.

Brandon Carpenter was high scorer for White Deer with 27 points, followed by Matt Freeman with 13.

LEFORS — Alamo Catholic outlasted Lefors, 43-39, Tuesday night.

Vazquez was the leading scorer for Alamo with 14 points.

Scoring leaders for Lefors were Andy Swires with 19 points and Tommy Cox, 14.

Lefors also lost the girls' game, 44-33.

Marie Nguyen was the top scorer for Alamo with 10 points and Susie Davis led Lefors with 22 points.

Four players, including two starters, were missing from Lefors roster due to illness.

"Even though we were short-handed, we still played pretty good," said Lefors coach Carol Vincent.

MEMPHIS — Groom girls rolled by Memphis, 48-23, Tuesday night.

High scorer for Groom were Karen Babcock with 18 points while Carla Henderson led Memphis with 16 points.

Larry Johnson had 20 points as Memphis drilled Groom, 70-45, in the boys' game.

Wesley Hall was high scorer for the Tigers with 25 points.

Orlando blows 20-point lead

By The Associated Press

Things have gotten so bad for the Orlando Magic that opposing coaches are worried when they win by 15 points.

After Portland handed Orlando its 17th consecutive loss, 104-89 Tuesday night, Trail Blazers coach Rick Adelman was concerned about how his team could handle an upcoming four-game trip. Most upsetting to Adelman was watching a 20-point lead trimmed to nine.

NBA Roundup

"I'm disappointed we couldn't hold the lead," Adelman said. "It's disturbing when they cut the lead. I was hoping our second unit would get it back for us."

The Blazers led 81-61 going into the fourth period and still had an 87-68 advantage before Orlando, with only nine players in uniform because of injuries, scored 10 straight points. Terry Catledge scored six points during the run, and Nick Anderson's 20-foot jumper with 6:32 left closed the gap to 87-78.

"On a road trip as tough as the one we face, if you have a lead you'd better keep it," Adelman said. "It's disappointing that this has happened a number of times this season. We can't afford to have the dead periods we've been having."

While Adelman is worried about dead periods, Orlando's Matt Guokas has to contend with a dead season. The Magic, who haven't won since Nov. 30, are three losses shy of the NBA record for consecutive defeats in a single season, set by Philadelphia in 1973.

"We were never really in the game," Guokas said. "They made some mistakes at the offensive end and it got interesting for a while. But we couldn't sustain anything."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Atlanta 109, New York 94; Cleveland 113, Minnesota 98; Chicago 102, Washington 89; the Los Angeles Lakers 104, Dallas 80; and Seattle 106, Denver 99.

The Magic may have to get more healthy before they can think about winning. They played without starters Dennis Scott and Scott Skiles and reserves Jerry Reynolds, Otis Smith and Brian Williams.

To make matters worse, center Mark Acres injured his left leg in the third period and did not return.

"There's not much chance of getting any of the injured back, although Scott Skiles may be ready by next Tuesday," Guokas said.

Anderson, the only player who has started all 31 games for Orlando, scored 19 of his 21 points in the second half and Catledge finished with 20.

Terry Porter had 23 points and 11 assists and Clyde Drexler scored 18 points for Portland, which used a 10-2 burst to regain control after Orlando's short-lived fourth-quarter rally.

Cavaliers 113, Timberwolves 98

Cleveland won its ninth straight game and for the fifth consecutive time on the road as Brad Daugherty scored 27 points and Mark Price became the Cavs' career assist leader.

Daugherty made nine of 11 shots for Cleveland, which shot 67 percent in the second half and 58 percent overall. Price added 16 points on 8-for-11 shooting and his six assists gave him 2,317, six more than John Bagley.

Pooh Richardson scored 18 points for Minnesota, whose 5-25 record is the NBA's worst.

Hawks 109, Knicks 94

Atlanta won its fifth consecutive game and handed New York its third loss in 16 home games as Dominique Wilkins scored 24 points, leading six Hawks with 13 or more points.

The Hawks led by 14 at the half and 58-42 with 10:41 left in the third quarter before John Starks' 3-pointer started a 17-6 burst that closed the Knicks to 64-59 midway through the period.

Wilkins and Paul Graham then scored eight points apiece during a 22-12 spurt that gave Atlanta an 86-71 advantage with 10:54 remaining in the game, and New York got no closer than 12 the rest of the way.

Patrick Ewing had 23 points and Xavier McDaniel 22 for the

Giants coach begins off-field shakeup

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Win or lose, Ray Handley has decided he is going to it with his own people, both on and off the field.

Handley on Tuesday began the off-the-field shakeup of the New York Giants by firing two of Bill Parcells' most trusted assistants — assistant head coach Ron Erhardt and tight end coach Mike Pope.

The changes come less than a month after the Giants went from defending Super Bowl champions to an 8-8 team that missed the playoffs in Handley's first season as head coach.

"I think part of this is doing things my own way," Handley said in a telephone interview. "I'm coming with a little different direction and I want my own people in there."

In releasing Erhardt and Pope, Handley replaces two of the most senior coaches on the staff. Erhardt had spent the past 10 seasons with the Giants, one year longer than Pope and one year less than defensive line coach Romeo Crennel, the senior staff member.

Knicks, who started 11-0 at Madison Square Garden. Lakers 104, Mavericks 80

Los Angeles won at Dallas as Terry Teagle scored 19 points and the Lakers took advantage of the Mavericks' 19 percent shooting in the second quarter to send them to their fifth consecutive loss.

The Lakers outscored Dallas 25-12 in the second period, with Teagle scoring nine points. The Mavericks missed their first 13 shots in the period, made only three of their first 23 and wound up 5-for-27 as Los Angeles took a 49-36 halftime lead.

Los Angeles went on a 15-0 first-half run, including the first 11 points of the second quarter. The Mavericks went scoreless in the first 5:51 of the second quarter before Rolando Blackman's 18-foot jumper.

Bulls 102, Bullets 89

Michael Jordan scored 21 points and Scottie Pippen 17 as Chicago won for the 11th time in 13 games.

Washington trailed just 76-67 early in the fourth quarter after a drive by Ledell Eckles, but the Bulls pulled away for their 14th victory in 16 home games.

Harvey Grant scored 19 points for Washington, which lost for the first time in five road games. A.J. English scored 16 points and Michael Adams 15.

SuperSonics 106, Nuggets 99

Seattle won at Denver by scoring 13 of the game's final 15 points.

Ricky Pierce scored 28 points and Derrick McKey 26 for the SuperSonics, who trailed 97-93 with 3:21 left. Shawn Kemp's follow shot, Michael Cage's free throw and McKey's dunk gave Seattle a 98-97 lead with 1:53 to go.

Mark Macon's layup gave the Nuggets their last lead with 1:32 left. Pierce then made a 3-pointer to give Seattle a 101-99 advantage with 1:11 remaining. Kemp's dunk and three free throws by Gary Payton in the closing seconds completed the scoring.

Dikembe Mutombo had 27 points and 12 rebounds for Denver, and Greg Anderson scored 19 points.

"This in no way infers I had a philosophical difference or dissatisfaction with either of the people," said Handley, who late in the season said one of his problems in 1991 was not putting his own stamp on the team. "They both did a fine job while here. I just need my own people on board."

Erhardt, a former New England Patriots head coach, and Pope each had a year remaining on their contracts, said a source close to the team, who asked not to be identified.
