Judge E.L. Anderson

Justice of Peace Anderson dies

Justice of Peace E.L. Anderson 79 of 1002 E. Francis died at 5:50 a.m. today at Highland General Hospital here following surgery a week ago at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

A member of the family said he requested to be transferred to Pampa. He arrived at Highland General about 5 p.m. Thursday.

Funeral services are set for 2 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church of Pampa with the Rev. Claude Cone pastor officiating. Judge Anderson was a deacon at the church.

Burial will be in Fairview

Cemetery under the direction of Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors.

Gray County Judge Don Cain announced this morning that all courthouse offices are scheduled to close at 1 p.m. Monday for memorial services in honor of Judge Anderson.

Judge Anderson came to Pampa Jan. 1, 1919 from Mobeetie. He and his wife, the former Miss Bertha Eason, were married by a justice of peace. He once said he never dreamed that he himself would become a justice of peace and officiate at more than 400 marriage ceremonies.

His eyes sparkled when he spoke of Pampa referring to it as the "Top of Texas" where wheat grows and oil flows and the stranger is always welcome.

When he came to Pampa, he said in a May 1975 interview, the population was 903.

There was no paving and very little sidewalk," he said.

He was a former City of Pampa employe and retired as maintenance superintendent after working for the city 31 years, 4 months and 16 days. He had also served as a city marshal and as a fire marshal.

He often said his work as justice of peace for Precinct 2 Place 2 was a 24-hour a day job. He never knew when he would be called to his office nor for what purpose.

Judge Anderson's eyes always saddened as he discussed the present crime rate in Pampa which he estimated had more than doubled during the past four years.

He said he loved Gray County, but added that his wife teased him about not being a citizen.

"I was born in Indian Territory before it was a state — in Rolf, Oklahoma," he said.

In discussing the dates of his office a year ago, he said he had discovered just about every type of problem in his capacity as justice of peace.

He had pronounced about 200 persons dead at the scene of an accident or wherever they died.

"Death is always said," he commented during the interview.

Alcoholism problems were also sad for the judge. He said a great amount of his work dealt with family squabbles — many stemming from alcohol.

"It is sad to see these people wreck their lives, but they are the only ones who can quit. I can't do it for them," he said.

Survivors include the widow, three sons, Sam of Pampa, Phillip of Holiday, Tex., and Hugh of Redding, Calif., two daughters, Mrs. Doyle Ward and Mrs. Don Cole, both of Pampa; four sisters, Mrs. Kate Thomas of Pampa, Mrs. R.M. Mitchell of Plainview, Mrs. Helen Lunsford of Garland and Mrs. Blanche Moran of Kenne, N.H., two brothers, Ben of Borger, and Harvey of McAllen, 12 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Planes collide; 176 may be dead

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A British airliner and a Yugoslav charter jet carrying West German tourists collided at 35,000 feet near Zagreb today, officials said. All 176 persons aboard the planes were killed, according to doctors at the scene.

A witness among the first to arrive at the crash site said the body of one plane was burned out. He said bodies and luggage were scattered around the rubble. More than 30 ambulances and fire trucks went to the scene but found no one alive, he said.

The British plane carried a reported 54 passengers and nine crew members. A British Airways spokesman in New York said there was one American and one Canadian aboard the plane. However, British Airways officials in London said there were at least two Americans and some Turkish nationals aboard.

The New York spokesman said it would be 12 to 24 hours before a passenger list was available.

The Yugoslav plane had 108 passengers and five crew members aboard, company officials said. Sources said most or all of them were West German tourists returning from vacations on the Adriatic coast.

The planes collided at 6:15 a.m. EDT about 15 miles north-east of Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second largest city and 230 northwest of Belgrade.

The planes were in an established air corridor over Yugoslavia utilized by all civilian planes, officials said. The corridor is under the control of the Zagreb traffic center.

The cause of the collision was not immediately known. Officials said an investigation was begun.

British Airways officials in London said Flight 476 was on a direct flight from London to Istanbul. The officials said the plane was a Trident 3 jetliner.

Reports here said the Yugoslav plane was a DC9 belonging to the Yugoslav charter company Inex-Adria. The DC9 was flying between Split, Yugoslavia, and Cologne, West Germany.

In Cologne, officials said the Yugoslav plane had been chartered by Kaufhof, a Cologne-based tourist agency.

The crash was the worst collision since July 1971.

Rooftop rooters

Young McLean Tigers supporters, wanting a good view of Thursday night's home game against the Pampa sophomores, seated themselves atop the pressbox. A sparse crowd from Pampa, on the opposite side of the field, watched its team fall, 23-6, to the Tigers. The story is on page 11.

City may protest to Bell

Pampa city officials were expected to determine today what action to take on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's application to the Texas Public Utilities Commission for a rate increase.

The question to be decided was whether the City would file a separate motion for intervention or simply await the outcome of the Texas Municipal League in its motion to intervene against the rate hike on behalf of all member cities of the league.

City Manager Mack Wofford said he discussed the matter with City Atty Bob Gordon Thursday afternoon and expected to contact as many city commissioners as possible today.

Wofford said Pampa is in a little different position than most Texas cities due to the fact the gross receipts franchise Southwestern Bell has with Pampa expired last March.

The expiration came about when the City asked the telephone company for an increase in its franchise tax from two percent to three percent and the telephone company rejected the proposal.

Wofford said the matter drifted along until the franchise expired last Spring. He added that the phone company, however, still is paying the two percent fee.

Southwestern Bell's application for the statewide rate increase was the first received Sept. 1 on the Public Utilities Commission's first official day of operation.

The city manager said it was anticipated the Texas Municipal League would file its motion today to intervene on behalf of its member cities over the state since Saturday is the final day of the 10-day time limit.

The possibility existed according to TML officials that the PUC would reject an intervention motion and not allow the league or individual cities to be heard.

TML officials pointed out if the Commission does not allow intervention by cities and other interested parties, evidence before the Commission would be limited to that presented by the telephone company and the Commission's limited staff. They add that any evidence submitted by others would be ignored under Commission rules.

TML staff officials say that worse yet, no one except the company will be able to appeal any decision of the Commission to the courts — which means, as a practical matter, that it is highly unlikely any Commission decisions the companies consider favorable would ever go on appeal.

Bell has requested a rate increase package that would boost the company revenues by $298.3 million a year.

The increases in Pampa would raise rates for a one-party residence phone from $6.25 to $7.50 a month. Two-party residence phones would go from $4.90 to $5.50 monthly.

Commercial phone rates would jump from $13.50 to $18.95 a month with extension lines increasing from $1.75 to $2.25 each. Residential extension phones would go up from $1.25 to $1.50.

Southwestern Bell's last increase in Pampa was in January of 1973 when one-party residential phones were hiked from $5 to $6.25 and business phones from $10.75 to $13.50 a month.

Catholics 'encouraged' about abortion stand

By FRANK CORMIER, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roman Catholic leaders met for more than an hour today with President Ford and announced afterward they were "encouraged" by his views on abortion but added "This does not mean we are totally satisfied."

The President met with one Catholic cardinal, three archbishops, and two bishops.

A spokesman for the clergymen told reporters they were encouraged because "the President agrees on the need for a constitutional amendment" affecting abortion.

The same group met 10 days ago with Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter and declared afterward they were "disappointed" by Carter's stand on abortion.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Thursday that Ford does not favor a proposed constitutional amendment banning abortion but does favor a constitutional amendment letting each state set its own policy on abortions.

Those meeting with Ford today were Archbishop Joseph Bernardin of Cincinnati, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Archbishop John Carberry of St. Louis, vice president of the group, Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York City, Archbishop John J. McGuire of New York City, Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, and Bishop James S. Rausch.

They declined to be photographed with Ford.

Catholic leaders also had declined to be photographed with Carter during a similar meeting here Aug. 31 after which a spokesman for the bishops expressed disappointment in the Democratic nominee's position on abortion.

Carter refused to endorse a constitutional amendment banning abortion. He said he personally opposes abortion and any use of federal funds to pay for abortions. And he has said he respects the rights of anyone who seeks passage of an anti-abortion amendment.

Ford makes his first campaign sortie next Wednesday to his alma mater, the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. And both men are deep in preparation for the first of their three debates, in Philadelphia on Sept. 23.

On the Senate floor today,

Sen. Lowell Weicker urged that the debates be opened to independent candidates, to be afforded the same opportunity to present their views to the nation as are President Ford and Mr. Carter. He said it is a sad commentary that they are not.

"I think our major political parties are about to put one over on the voter," the Connecticut Republican said. "True, the upcoming debates may show the differences between President Ford and Jimmy Carter but what they will also show are the Republican party and the Democratic party as the only alternatives for the American electorate."

Ford was closeted with Archbishop Joseph Bernardin of Cincinnati, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York City, two other archbishops and two bishops.

Carter met with Bernardin, Cooke and other Catholic leaders in Washington in late August to explain his stand. The bishops, who want the Constitution to reflect their right-to-life views, emerged from the meeting continuing in Bernardin's words, "to be disappointed with the governor's position.

At both the Carter and Ford meetings, the bishops declined to be photographed with the candidate.

In Milwaukee today, as in Chicago the night before, Carter said his polls indicate that the race for the presidency will be close. He told Democrats it's time for us to stick together.

DALLAS (AP) — William Robert Bondurant, charged with the kidnaping of a Dallas girl, fell to the floor of a federal courtroom while being arraigned today and began flailing his arms in what witnesses described as an apparent seizure.

Judge Robert M. Hill then delayed the arraignment until next week and granted a motion that the defendant be examined by two psychiatrists. Bondurant was arrested in New Orleans June 11 and charged with the kidnaping of Nicole Moore, 4, who had disappeared May 3.

New small firms fail

Business bankruptcies hit a high of 30,130 last year. This is an increase of 45 percent. A large share of these failures were new small businesses.

With the government taking a larger percentage of individual incomes, it is becoming more difficult for a budding enterpriser to accumulate savings toward starting a firm. It is also becoming more difficult to get additional financing through a loan.

After overcoming these hurdles the new business owner soon finds that he is stuck with a higher effective tax rate than larger firms. For he will lack the experience to take maximum advantage of alternatives in planning for the best tax advantages.

Next to hit the new businessman is government red tape. Much of his time will have to be spent in futile attempts to keep local, state, and national regulators satisfied with paper work. This involuntary servitude keeps the new businessman from the more gainful pursuit of doing the things necessary to get himself established.

As inhibiting to the economy of this nation as the above indicates, it is not as insidious as the factors which stop new, young and energetic inventors and innovators in their tracks. Nor are these factors so easily determined.

If we look to most of the great things which have advanced our economy and our level of living and go back in time to their inception, perhaps we can see the effect of regulation in this area.

If Thomas Edison's home had been zoned in a residential only area and if he had been forced to obtain a building in a zoned industrial park, would he have been able to be effective in bringing his inventions to successful fruition? Or would the zoning and other bureaucratic controls have frustrated and impeded his every effort?

How about Alexander Graham Bell: would his attic been off limits to the development of a telephone system? Think back to all of the famous innovators, how would they have fared under our modern regulated system?

Oh there will be some today who will find ways to break through our fenced-in society. But how much are we losing; how much have we already lost? Could it be that we might not now be dependent on imported fuel for energy if bureaucratic control had not been such an immense inhibiting and frustrating factor?

We will never know until the chains of regulation by our super bureaucracies are broken or at least loosened enough to give individual enterprise some measure of freedom.

Homemakers pension?

Thanks to the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) act passed by Congress in 1974, an estimated 30 million workers are eligible to set up their own private "tax shelter."

Under IRA, a working person not covered by a company pension plan can put aside $1,500 or 15 per cent of (whichever is lower) in a bank account and pay no taxes on the money until he or she retires and begins withdrawing it, at which time he or she will in most cases be in a lower tax bracket.

Nor does the Social Security system adequately cover homemakers, they say. A wife can't draw any Social Security benefits until age 62, even if her husband dies before she reaches 62.

Under Roth's new bill, however, the nonworking wife could begin to draw out her share of IRA funds at age 59.5, regardless of whether or not her husband is still alive.

With enough encouragement, perhaps Congress will do something for the "little woman," too.

INSIDE REPORT

Carter's formula wearing thin?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Deepening unease by Democratic politicians over Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign was intensified by two miscalculations resulting in his dismal meeting with the Catholic hierarchy.

Miscalculation No. 1: Carter strategists felt he could shift the Roman Catholic hierarchy's attention away from abortion and toward commonly held social welfare positions. In fact, the bishops discussed one topic: abortion.

Miscalculation No. 2: Carter strategists felt he could appease the hierarchy by making clear for the first time that he would not, as President, actively oppose an anti-abortion constitutional amendment. In fact, the bishops demanded nothing less than support of the amendment. "We could have told Carter that," commented an intimate of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who has long been harried by the hierarchy for not supporting an anti-abortion amendment.

"I'm beginning to think Jimmy has a compulsion to lose the election," one distraught supporter told us. While not improving his status with the "pro-life" lobby, Carter managed to bury warm testimonials Tuesday from Kennedy and AFL-CIO president George Meany. Carter aides were rocked by the next morning's front page stories in the Boston Globe, the New York Times and other newspapers describing the candidate's difficulties with the Catholic leaders.

But the far greater self-damage from meeting the bishops was it furthering a public perception of Carter as just a shade too sly. Indeed, nothing is more destructive of Carter's old straightforward image than his broken-field running on abortion.

Ironically, Carter used that painfully emotional problem to aid his vital opening victory in Iowa's caucuses last January, enlisting pro-life support by giving the impression he might support a constitutional amendment. He ended that impression soon after Iowa, burning his bridges with the pro-life movement.

The issue would have remained dormant had it not been for the Carter campaign's sensitivity to criticism from the left. Fearing a feminist revolt at Madison Square Garden, Carter operatives abandoned their resolve to keep abortion out of the Democratic platform. Joseph Duffey, Carter's skilled agent at the platform deliberations, complained of being "mau-maued" by the feminists but nevertheless helped negotiate a plank calling it "undesirable" to seek the anti-abortion amendment.

In New York, Carter acted as though he could live with that language. But the "undesirable" label generated unexpected outrage from pro-lifers. On Aug. 9, a month after the convention, Carter belatedly disavowed the abortion plank.

This proved insufficient because of Republican developments. Thanks to pressure from Reaganite Forces, President Ford was brought — kicking and screaming — into support of a Republican platform plank backing a constitutional amendment. Instantly, the pro-life lobby ended its previous coolness toward Mr. Ford and opened a withering barrage against Carter.

Lifelong, an anti-abortion publication, on Aug. 23 used its kindest language ever about Mr. Ford and quoted from an obscure 1972 book foreword by Carter that could easily be interpreted as pro-abortion. Thus, the pro-life position on Carter had shifted from moderately favorable to neutral to extremely unfavorable.

Since he could not turn around in support of a constitutional amendment, what options were left for Carter? Experienced Democratic politicians believe he should have accepted the loss of single-issue abortion voters and kept the issue just as quiet as possible.

But Carter could not leave it alone. Apart from abortion, his strategists were worried that Catholic leaders interpreted "a series of little gaffes" (the description of a Carter operative) as the insensitivity of a Southern Baptist. A senior Carter aide declared in July that Archbishop Joseph Bernardin's opposition to the abortion plank was merely a personal view; in fact, Bernardin was speaking for the Conference of Catholic Bishops. In discussing Duffey's part in drafting the plank, Carter last month declared: "I think Joe Duffey happens to be a Catholic"; in fact, he is a former Congregationalist minister.

To mend Catholic fences, Carter sought last Tuesday's meeting with the bishops which finally clarified his position as follows: he is (1) opposed to abortion in principle, (2) will not support any constitutional amendment to curb abortion and (3) will not oppose any efforts to pass any amendment.

Such legerdemain has been integral to the remarkable Carter success story — in his 1970 campaign for governor and his brilliant campaign for the presidential nomination. But even staunch supporters believe the experience with the bishops shows the Carter formula is wearing thin and can only promote Gerald Ford's resurgence.

VOICE OF BUSINESS

Fed pensions are generous

By RICHARD LESSHER

WASHINGTON — As retirement plans go, it's pretty hard to beat the Federal Government's... and even harder to pay for it.

Federal pensions have been increased by 72 per cent since 1969, while the cost of living (inflation) has risen by 56 per cent, and the pay of federal white-collar workers by 58 per cent.

In other words, federal pensioners are not only keeping up with inflation, they're actually coming out ahead of the game. Way ahead. It's nice work, if you can get it.

How did we, the taxpayers, choose to be so generous? Well, it's all done automatically. Take a deep breath and follow the bouncing ball.

Whenever the cost of living rises by at least 3 per cent over the previous base month, and stays at least that high for three consecutive months, federal pensioners get an increase in their pension checks. The increase is equal to the highest Consumer Price Index increase registered during the three-month period, plus 1 per cent. So if the CPI hit 4 per cent during the period, the pension checks are increased by 5 per cent, payable three months later. The "previous base month" refers to the period in which the last such increase was calculated.

Why "plus 1 per cent"? Because there is a time-lag of six months in this process, between the time the cost of living rises and the time the pensioner is compensated for it in his monthly check. The extra 1 per cent — known as the 1 per cent kicker — is supposed to compensate for the delay. As you can see, however, the benefit increases are compounding — overcompensating wildly.

Let's keep things in proper perspective: Not only do private pension plans lack a "kicker," very few of them — less than 4 per cent — even feature cost-of-living adjustments. It's not that private employers want to be cruel to the retired, it's just that unlike Congress, they are unable to be generous with other people's money.

Why would Congress do such an irresponsible thing? A big clue may be found in the list of those covered by this marvelous money machine. Included are those retiring from the following groups: The federal civil service, the uniformed services, the foreign service, the CIA, the Federal Reserve Board, judges and school teachers of the District of Columbia, and — I'll bet you guessed it — members of Congress and their staff employees.

Even one retired member of Congress, Hastings Keith, has complained publicly about the cost of this system, which he calls "the most generous pension plan in existence." He notes that his own pension, which started out at $1,560 a month, has increased over a 35-month period to $2,206 — a 41.5 per cent increase during a period when the cost of living went up 28 per cent.

It is true that federal employees contribute part of their pay to their pension plan. But it is also true that pension increases on this order of magnitude cannot be covered by those contributions. The boilers of this federal gravy train will have to be stoked from general revenues — that is, from taxes taken mostly from people who are allowed to pay for the federal fringe benefits, but not to benefit from them; people who suffer from the inflation triggered by federal deficits.

There is a bill in the House to repeal the 1 per cent kicker and simultaneously reduce the delay in compensating federal pensioners for cost-of-living increases. It was introduced by David Henderson (D-N.C.), chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee. This bill is numbered H.R. 14520. It may be passed as an amendment to another bill, H.R. 12862.

and against 'em

Where, in heaven's name (which is Texas, of course), are we? Is Pampa truly at the Top O' Texas when there are several communities located higher up on the state map?

If we truly live in an area referred to as North Texas, why are we located so near to West Texas State University and so far north of North Texas State at Denton. And if we are in West Texas, how come we are so far east of Texas Western (that's what it was called before they changed it to the University of Texas at El Paso)?

When I was growing up in Dalhart, every place else in the state — was South Texas, unless you counted Tule, and I never, did.

At what point in the state does South Texas actually become Central Texas and where, exactly, does Central turn into North? When one is traveling from Louisiana, where does he first find himself in West Texas?

People in North Dakota have no trouble knowing when they are in South Dakota, nor must Carolinians contend with such confusion. If Virginians have managed to delineate where east meets west, and they have, why must Texans have so much difficulty in determining where the twain meet in their state?

Such concern over location definition may seem like much ado about nothing to many, but it is a source of some confusion to this writer and I would like to have it cleared up before I reach the state of exhaustion from wondering about it (make that North Exhaustion).

When I talk to some stranger or some stranger's secretary in Dallas or Austin, and they think I'm telephoning from Florida and simply do not speak plainly because it sounded like I said "Pampa" instead of "Tampa," I want to be able to explain, "No, that's P... Pampa, you know, up in North Texas."

I'd rather use that location description than "up in the Panhandle," because so many of those folks downstate have such little regard for the Panhandle. Always have had.

Just look at how quick they were to swap off three million acres of Panhandle country in order to get finances for the construction of the state capitol years ago. That's how the XIT Ranch came into being.

Where did they put the money? Right back where the money had been. Since the money had been in Amarillo or Lubbock... or Pampa, for that matter.

What about those eyes of Texas? How many long days has it been since they were focused on anyplace in the Panhandle? And, by the way, maybe it's time they gave this portion of the state a long, studied stare instead of the occasional furtive glance.

Just read some of those magazines like "Texas Monthly" or "Texas Parade." One could get the idea from their pages that the state ends at a point just outside the northwest edge of Fort Worth - Dallas, beyond which there is no decent place to eat or shop or what - have - you. The magazine staff appears to adhere to some Old World style of cartography indicating that to travel the unknown area is to risk falling off the edge of something.

A while back in "Texas Monthly," one of their writers, a Richard West, did a piece in which he named the best of this or that as he found it to exist in the state. The fellow certainly is entitled to his opinion, wrong as it was in many instances, but he only found three things for his long list that came from our portion of the state.

He said that the Best Old Coot in the state is "J. Evetts Haley. Amarillo..." Anybody who admits to knowing anything at all about Haley knows that the old coot lives in Canyon, not Amarillo.

West designated the Tulia Herald as Best Weekly Newspaper. Not so. I agree with Bill and Lilree Jackson of Canadian who wrote the magazine to enlighten them with the information that Ben and Nancy Ezzell publish the best weekly in the state — The Canadian Record.

The magazine article selected an individual in Amarillo as having the Best Name — Tarzan McCoy. Good, perhaps, but not best. How about the fire chief over at White Deer — Pleasant Meadows.

As far as I was concerned that article topped it off — such a flagrant display of geographical favoritism in a magazine purporting by its very name to be statewide in coverage.

My subscription lapsed and I ignored all the computer-programmed pleas to renew. "Yes, it's a good publication..." I agreed with my co-editor. "But until they increase coverage in North Texas or change their name to 'South Texas Monthly,' I'll not send them another penny."

She did not take issue with me, but she did bring the September number home from the rack in the grocery store and there was a fine piece in it about Bob Willis and Bob Willis Day over at Turkey. On the strength of that, we renewed. Hope it doesn't turn out to be a mistake — a fellow can only consume so much dribble about Houston and Dallas and San Antonio.

I thought I might drop a line to that fellow West who seemed to know what's best for us and ask him if he knows as well where we all stand. If he does, maybe he could fix up a big centerfold Texas map for the magazine which would let us all know. I would appreciate the clarification and I feel sure others would too — all those over at WTSU, for example, and maybe down at North Texas State as well, wherever that really is.

Depends Upon Diet

Silkworms feed on the leaves of the white mulberry. The worms will feed on leaves of other members of the mulberry family, but the quality of their silk is poor.

Drive half finished

The second major report of fund collection in the 1976 United Fund campaign was made Thursday, according to Dutch Holland, campaign director. Goal of the report was $50,000, Holland said, with $51,729 actually reported from all four divisions of the drive. The next check-in will be Thursday with a goal of $90,000. Baptists back Carter

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Baptists are campaigning to register all of their two million members in time for them to vote in the November general election, but an official says it is not because of Jimmy Carter. Carter, the Democratic presidential candidate, is a Southern Baptist. When asked of Carter was the reason for the voter registration drive, Dr. James Dunn, director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission, pointed out Thursday that Southern Baptist in Texas are "fiercely independent." He said it should not be assumed they will vote in a bloc for the former Georgia governor simply because he is a Southern Baptist. "Of course, it's fair to say that they are glad to hear a man of integrity and unquestioned personal character talking about compassion and moral issues," Dunn said. "I don't think Southern Baptists will vote for him just because they're Southern Baptists. Harry Truman was a Southern Baptist and they were not wild about him." The study after the 1960 election showed that Southern Baptists made the difference for Kennedy in Texas," Dunn said. "The experts were as wrong as they could be." John Kennedy was a Roman Catholic. Dunn said the voter registration campaign announced this week is to bring more persons into the political process at a time when voter apathy appears to be as bad as at any other time in American history.

Bishops meet in El Paso

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Archbishops, bishops, parish priests, laymen and government officials showed their respect for the Most Rev. Sidney M. Metzger, bishop of El Paso, in an anniversary Mass Thursday night. More than 20 archbishops and bishops, including the Vatican's ambassador to the United States, were in town for three days of celebration marking Bishop Metzger's 50 years in the priesthood. Bishop Metzger was the principal celebrant of the anniversary mass, covelebrated with the visiting archbishops, bishops and nearly 200 priests in the El Paso diocese. The Archbishop of Santa Fe, the Most Rev. Robert Sanchez, delivered the homily. Pope Paul VI's ambassador to the United States, Archbishop Jean Jadot, addressed the large gathering afterwards in the coliseum, where Mass was celebrated. Bishop Metzger, whose 63,000 square-mile diocese covers all of West Texas and the southern most part of New Mexico, was ordained to the priesthood on Holy Saturday, 1926, by Basilio Cardinal Pompily in Rome's St. John Lateran Basilica. Following his ordination, he got his doctorate of canon law at the Pontifical Institute of Civil and Canon Law in Rome in 1928. He served as professor, seminary rector and law school regent while in the Archdiocese of San Antonio. In January, 1940, he was named auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of Santa Fe, where he served as superintendent of schools, judge of the matrimonial tribunal and pastor of Christ the King parish. He became Bishop of El Paso in 1942. "To many of us, you are indeed a bishop's bishop," said Archbishop Sanchez at a banquet Wednesday night. In attendance was New Mexico Gov. Jerry Apodaca, Archbishop Jadot, State Sen. Tati Santiesteban of El Paso, representing Gov. Dolph Briscoe, the Most Rev. Francis J. Furey, Archbishop of San Antonio; and more than 250 bishops, nuns and priests, plus lay and local government officials. The bishop was praised for his social activism and one who sometimes brought upon himself the displeasures of powerful persons in the El Paso Community. Archbishop Jadot expressed "the deep appreciation of the Holy Father for Bishop Metzger," who, Archbishop Jadot said, "has put into practice the teachings propagated by the Senate of Bishops in 1971."

Bird smuggling

Aviary profitable business

By MILLER H. BONNER JR. Associated Press Writer BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Smuggling has traditionally been a fly-by-night operation but smugglers along the Rio Grande have literally gone to the birds. Parrots, parakeets and other species of birds with colorful plumage and vocabulary are being smuggled into the United States from Mexico "by the thousands," report U.S. Customs and border Patrol officials. "Right now, there's probably as much money in smuggling birds as there is in narcotics," said C.B. Williams, a U.S. Department of Agriculture inspector at the international bridge linking Brownsville with the Mexican city of Matamoras.

"The most recent case occurred a few weeks ago when the Border Patrol caught some about 300 parrots across the river on a raft," said Williams. "The men are now in jail and the birds were destroyed."

Williams said yellowheads—parrots with green plumage and a striking yellow crown—are the most popular birds due to "their ability to adapt to a vocabulary."

Merchants along the crowded Matamoras market square sell the birds for $15 to $100 depending on the bird's size, age and rarity.

Across the border, the same bird will sell for $200 to $1,500. The smuggling activity exists for the obvious monetary reason plus the stringent regulations of the USDA which fears the birds may carry a virus deadly to poultry—the exotic Newcastle disease.

"The last outbreak of this disease in the United States occurred a couple of years ago in California," said Williams. "The disease affects all types of poultry and there is no vaccine. The only way to stamp it out is to destroy the birds."

"The California outbreak cost the poultry industry about $50 million and the disease was traced to a smuggled parrot."

The USDA requires a parrot to be in the possession of the owner for at least 90 days before crossing the border said Williams.

"The parrot must be in obvious good health and the owner must agree to let a veterinarian examine the bird during a 30-day period," he added. Williams said the birds—which can transmit parrot fever to humans—are not kept by the USDA. The owner supplies his name and address and a veterinarian checks the bird for disease during the 30-day period.

The 90-day ownership rule makes it legally impossible for a weekend tourist to buy a parrot in Mexico and transport it across the border.

"We have been trying to educate the tourists to this fact," said Williams. "Still, it's almost a daily occurrence. A person will come to the bridge with a parrot and have to either give it to us to destroy or return it to the merchant in Mexico."

"People are funny," said a Customs official. "They'll try to get anything by us."

Adult education sets enrollment Tuesday

Enrollment for Adult Basic Education courses for the 1976-77 school year will be 6:30-8:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Baker Elementary School cafeteria, according to Floyd Sackett, principal.

Classes offered in the Pampa program are reading, English, arithmetic, science, history and English as a second language. Sackett said. The classes meet 7-9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Sackett said the courses are open to persons above 16 years of age who have not received a high school diploma. He added that more than 150 Pampa residents have received G.E.D. Certificate of Equivalency or high school diplomas since the program started here four years ago.

Enrollment in the five classes last year topped 200 students. During the 1975-76 school year, Adult Basic Education classes attracted 2,234 students in the Panhandle.

Sackett said according to the U.S. Census, 26,117 persons in the Texas Panhandle have completed less than eight years of school and there are more than 19,000 above aged 16 who have not received high school diplomas. He added that there are an estimated 2,500 adults in the Texas Panhandle who need instruction in English as a second language.

The classes start Thursday and end Dec. 16. There is no charge for the classes and all materials are furnished at no charge.

Persons who want to enroll, but who cannot be at the school Tuesday evening can register for the classes at the Baker Elementary School office during school hours through Sept. 24.

For additional information, contact Sackett at 669-2792.

Choir boosters plan spaghetti for Sept 24

The Pampa High School Choir Booster Club recently previewed selections of the concert choir will perform at concerts and competitions, including the Texas Music Educators Association gathering in San Antonio this winter.

John Woickowski, choir director, and Louise Richardson, assistant director, outlined several projects available to the Boosters during the year.

Fund-raising will begin Sept. 24 with a spaghetti supper following the football game in the Pampa High School cafeteria. Other plans will be announced later during the year.

Woickowski reported that the magazine and tape sale recently concluded by choir members was successful.

Wife may have tapped Wallace's telephone

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace's wife ordered his bedroom telephone conversations taped after she learned he was keeping her under "surveillance," published reports said today.

And when she heard on the tapes the governor making "disparaging remarks" about her to several of his longtime female friends, Mrs. Wallace consulted a divorce lawyer. The Montgomery Advertiser said.

Quoting "highly reliable sources," the newspaper said Wallace too talked to a lawyer about divorce after he learned his wife was taping his calls.

The Advertiser did not elaborate on what form of surveillance it said Wallace had used on his wife.

The Wallaces appeared in public together Thursday in the governor's mansion at a brief reception for Rosalynn Carter, wife of Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter. But neither answered questions about the buggings, and neither was available later for comment about the Advertiser report.

Mrs. Wallace, 37, stood throughout the welcoming ceremonies, her hand resting on the back of her husband's wheelchair. Wallace has been paralalyzed below the waist since he was shot while campaigning for president in 1972.

Billie Joe Camp, Wallace's press secretary, said the couple hadn't appeared in public together since the governor celebrated his 57th birthday on Aug. 25.

Wallace had confirmed on Wednesday the discovery of the bedroom taping device, whose existence had long been rumored. He labeled the incident a "domestic matter between my wife and myself," although he did not specifically say that his wife knew about the device.

He refused to discuss specifics of the taping device, but he said the tapes had been destroyed.

U.S. Atty. Ira DeMent acknowledged Thursday that the FBI had conducted a preliminary investigation of the bugging incident.

DeMent said the bugging may have been a technical violation of the law," but he said that since it "appears to be purely domestic" no prosecution would be undertaken. He said he concurred with Wallace's assertion that no further investigation need be conducted.

At a news conference for Mrs. Carter, a reporter tried to ask Mrs. Wallace about her husband's revelations, but she refused to answer, turned her back and walked away.

Camp, who told the Advertiser on Thursday that he is seeking a job with the Alabama Medical Association, said Mrs. Wallace would not answer questions regarding the matter. Camp himself was unavailable later for comment on the Advertiser story.

The Wallaces were married in 1971, three years after the death from cancer of his first wife, Lurleen. At the time of her death, the first Mrs. Wallace was governor, serving as stand-in for Wallace, who was barred by the state constitution from succeeding himself.

The constitution now permits a governor to serve two consecutive terms, but Wallace will have done so by 1978, and there has been speculation that Cornelia Wallace would run then.

60 congressmen adopt anti-discrimination pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixty congressmen are committing themselves to a code that bans job discrimination in their Capitol Hill offices in an unprecedented reaction to the Wayne Hays sex-payroll scandal.

The House members helped elect a six-member committee Thursday to oversee their commitment and to handle any grievances filed against them by their employees.

The code binds only 60 of the 435 members of the House of Representatives. It affects only the staffs of those 60 members or committee employees they control. There is no machinery to penalize any member who violates the code, aside from peer pressure.

But women's groups on Capitol Hill hailed the pact, known as the Fair Employment Practices Agreement, as a first step toward protecting the rights of private business, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Equal Pay Act of 1963 and the grievance mechanisms of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Carol Forbes, director of the Congressional Clearinghouse on Women's Rights, said the agreement was prompted by Elizabeth Ray's charges that former Rep. Hays kept her on the federal payroll solely for sex.

Reps. Charles Rose, D-N.C., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., proposed the voluntary pact. Mrs. Schroeder, Rose and Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., were chosen by their colleagues Thursday to monitor the agreement.

Cape Town death toll rises

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three more deaths raised to 24 today the number of nonwhites killed in racial violence in Cape Town since Tuesday, the South African Broadcasting Corp. reported.

The radio said two persons were shot dead in continued rioting today and the body of a third was discovered in a non-white Cape Town suburb.

Report of the new deaths followed a government announcement that it was rescinding some discriminatory practices against persons of mixed race. Despite the new killings, rioting appeared to be subsiding in most areas.

Heavily armed riot police patrolled at least 15 Cape Town districts hit by anti-government disorders. Police gunfire killed 16, including and 8-year-old boy. Thursday and wounded 19 in rioting, arson and looting around the coastal city 800 miles southwest of Johannesburg, according to local police reports.

Cape Town and its environs are home to many of South Africa's 2.4 million coloreds, as people of mixed race are officially called.

Prime Minister John Vorster met behind closed doors today with 250 top members of the ruling Nationalist party to review the wave of racial unrest in South Africa and report on his recent trip to Switzerland for talks with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The government's announced concessions to coloreds, which it said was based on giving up "obsolete practices and usages," appeared to fall short of demands being made by non-white militants.

There was no mention of widened political rights in the list, which involved changes in rules for nonwhite businessmen and in segregated entrances and waiting rooms for some public facilities such as hospitals. One change would allow nonwhites to participate equally with whites at scientific and art conferences.

Three black journalists were arrested Thursday in Johannesburg's blacks-only township of Soweto, where rioting started in June. They were held under South Africa's security law, which allows indefinite detention without trial.

One journalist was from the World newspaper, which caters to blacks, and two were from the Rand Daily Mail. The latter paper said in an editorial today the arrests showed that "the police are trying to stop the public finding out what the police don't want the public to know, that something is happening in the townships that the police are trying to suppress."

The most serious disorders were in the mixed-race township of Mannenberg, where police killed 12 persons, including the 8-year-old boy. Police said he was in a crowd looting a liquor store.

The business center of the town of Paarl, in a wine-producing area 35 miles inland from Cape Town, was closed to traffic, and police used gunfire and tear gas against crowds of stone-throwing colored students.

A businessman in Paarl said the business district was "absolute chaos" after most shop windows were broken and whites fled the area. "It looks like a battlefield," he said.

Riot police armed with automatic rifles and shotguns moved into most of the mixed-race communities around Cape Town to disperse rioters caught up in the wave of unrest directed against the South African white minority government's policies of racial segregation.

Three months of violence in nonwhite communities had left more than 300 persons dead. Prime Minister John Vorster has told the blacks and other nonwhites to stop the rioting immediately, warning that the government would take harsher measures if the disturbances do not end.

Bus services were disrupted over a wide area, and a bus was reportedly set afire in Retreat, a Cape Town suburb.

A political leader of the mixed-race population, W.J. Bergins of the progovernment Federal party, issued a statement saying violence would not bring political power.

LBJ symposium to review '60s social programs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Scholars and elected officials will make a painstaking review of America's social programs of the 1960s at a symposium that apparently has attracted presidential candidate Jimmy Carter's attention.

Assistant deputy chancellor Bob Hardesty of the University of Texas said he hopes the symposium, starting Sunday night, can "heightened debates" in the Ford-Carter presidential race.

Two governors, two mayors and two congressmen are among 75 participants expected at what Hardesty says will be an "honest evaluation of the social domestic programs of the Kennedy-Johnson years."

Dr. Jurgen Schmandt, acting dean of the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, said a member of Jimmy Carter's staff already had asked for copies of the papers to be presented.

With the exception of President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, Schmandt told a news conference, America has never had "programs that were so ambitious for improving social conditions" as during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

He said he thinks the symposium "may play an important role in shaping future policies."

One of the first speakers in the five-day program will be by Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and writer who was special assistant to President John F. Kennedy.

Schlesinger speaks Sunday night, following an address by executive director Vernon Jordan of the National Urban League.

Financing is coming from the private LBJ Foundation, grants and other contributors.
No tax money will be spent, and the symposium is free and open to the public.

UT calls nurses burden

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A University of Texas official says the recently abolished central nursing office had become an outdated "burden."

Nurses told a House subcommittee Thursday that the regents' decision to wipe out the system nursing school here would destroy their chances to work outside hospitals.

Nursing students said they feared the move could jeopardize the value of their diplomas. One said the system school had a reputation as being the "Harvard of the South."

Deputy chancellor E.D. Walker told a House subcommittee that a system school to oversee nursing education was created in 1967 to solve a shortage in clinical nurses, but despite $26.5 million in state funds since then, "the plight of many hospitals is as bad or worse in 1976 as it was in 1967."

"Part of this shortage, of course, is due to the growth in the number of hospitals and the phenomenal increase in demand for health care," Walker said. "But part of it is also due to the fact that the system school of nursing has been more interested in training administrators than bedside nurses."

UT administrators claimed the move saved $300,000.

Nurses argued the move was designed to put nursing education under direct supervision of doctors.

China mourns Mao, pushes unity

By ROY ESSOYAN
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — In deep mourning over the death of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, China began today to pay somber tribute to the man whose loss leaves the world's most populous country without a leader worthy of his mantle.

A struggle for power appeared inevitable among the radicals and moderates who have been jockeying for leadership since Mao's health began an obvious decline earlier this year. He died Wednesday at age 82. The Peking government has not disclosed the cause of death.

The central committee of the Chinese Communist party issued an appeal for unity, and reports from China indicated the people were calm as they mourned their revolutionary leader.
"All papers devote the entire front page to a huge portrait of Chairman Mao Tse-tung bordered in black," the official Hsinhua news agency said today in a broadcast ignored here. It said newspapers used the banner headline: "Eternal glory to our great leader and teacher Chairman Mao Tse-tung."
Peking residents contacted by telephone said flags were at half-staff through the capital, nearly everyone was wearing a black armband, some people wept and large crowds gathered in the huge Tien An Men Square to put white flowers at a monument.
Written on the monument are Mao's words: "The heroes of the people are immortal."

"Peking is somber," one resident said by telephone. "but things are very much normal aside from what you would expect for the mourning of the chairman."
"People have severe expressions on their faces," a second resident said, "but there is no, high emotion. We're all impressed by the calm atmosphere."
Chinese broadcasts were devoted to Mao's passing. A resident said the broadcasts told listeners to turn their grief into strength, to follow Mao's will to build a socialist system in China and to continue efforts for unity.

The Japanese newspaper Asahi quoted an aged Chinese as saying, "The most sorrowful moment has come. We have lost Chairman Mao. Premier Chou En-Lai and Marshal Chu Teh in one year. This year is the saddest for our country since its foundation."
Mao's body will lie in state in Peking's Great Hall of the People beginning Saturday. The mourning period will last until a memorial rally Sept. 18. The Hsinhua news agency said no foreign dignitaries would be invited. Press coverage thus will come from the official Chinese media and the few foreign reporters permitted to work in China.

For the time being, Premier Hua Kuo-feng, 57, retains the role assigned to him after the death of Chou En-lai last January, that of a compromise leader between the radicals and moderates.

The Mao funeral committee, announced Thursday night, was headed by four men — Hua; Wang Hung-wen, the Shanghai "boy wonder" raised by Mao from the factory assembly line to a party vice chairmanship; Chang Chun-chiao, first vice premier and member of the Politburo standing committee, and Yeh Chien-ying, defense minister, party vice chairman and old Chou cronie.
The makeup of the group reflected the compromise nature of the interim leadership. The four men are considered the most likely to succeed Mao. His widow Chiang Ching, while thought to have only an outside chance for supreme leadership, is considered likely to wield much influence as a leader of the radical wing of the party.
Hua has held the No. 2 spot in China only five months. He was picked as an obvious compromise candidate between the radicals led by Chiang Ching and the moderates led by the followers of the late Chou En-lai and his protegee Teng Hsiao-ping.
—Mao died during a protracted campaign to vilify Teng, who was ousted earlier this year. Contending groups have used the anti-Teng campaign to attack their enemies.

Hints of the developing struggle for power have been appearing in the official Chinese press for some time. The Peking People's Daily recently contained references to "armed struggle" and warned against sabotage by "class enemies."
No specific instances were mentioned and there have been no reports of bloodshed.
But violence swept Peking and other major cities only last April when Teng cited a bid for the premiership and was promptly fired by Mao.
Under the 1973 Communist party constitution, the 195-member central committee must choose Mao's successor.
Barring a takeover by extreme radicals, China's current policy of detente with the United States and hostility toward the Soviet Union appears likely to continue. It is rooted in one of the basic precepts of China's foreign policy, fear of Soviet expansionism.
But a radical takeover in Peking could cool China's relations with the United States, too.

Dole to visit Dallas, Austin this weekend
DALLAS (AP) — The 1976 chase for the White House was scheduled to come to Texas today, with Republican vice presidential candidate Bob Dole stopping off in Dallas en route to the State GOP convention in Austin.
Dole was to meet with well-wishers prior to addressing a Rotary Club luncheon here. The Kansas senator was also to tour a treatment center for the Dallas Society for Crippled Children.
Later in the day, President Ford's running mate was to head for Austin, where John Connally was on the reception committee. Connally is ramrodding the Ford-Dole ticket in Texas.
Delegates to the state convention were to meet with Dole tonight, with Dole keynoting the convention Saturday.
Dole, Connally and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., were scheduled to hold a news conference Saturday prior to Dole's departure for Hot Springs, Ark.

LoVaca gas customers offer final proposal

DALLAS (AP) — LoVaca Gathering Co.'s major customers have made what they termed their final proposal for settlement of lawsuits against the firm and its parent company, Coastal States Gas Corp.
The proposal was released Thursday by Louis B. Hulcy, president of Lone Star Gas Co. in Dallas, one of the major customers in litigation with the gas suppliers.
"The next move is up to Coastal," Hulcy said.
In San Antonio, Mayor Lila Cockrell said that city is ready to pursue its case in court should Coastal not accept the customers' proposal.
Coastal officials were unavailable for comment.
Even if Coastal accepts the offer, it would still be subject to approval by most of the LoVaca customers and the Texas Railroad Commission.
The major gas buyers had earlier rejected a settlement offer by LoVaca.
Under terms of the proposal released by Hulcy, Coastal States would:
—Organize and spin off to its shareholders a new company which would own and operate all gas pipeline facilities now owned by LoVaca.
—Commit up to $230 million over a maximum 18-year period to a gas search program in LoVaca's current supply area. All gas developed during the period would be sold to the new company at prices not more than 85 per cent of intrastate gas market prices, with an obligation to dedicate a minimum of 300 million Mcf (million cubic feet) of gas to the new company at such prices or incur refund obligations.

—Transfer all its Texas lignite properties to a subsidiary of the new company, with an option to purchase such by certain electric utilities currently depending on LoVaca for gas supply.
—Guarantee preferred stock of the new company issued to a settlement trustee for the benefit of its customers, at a value of $115 million.
—Issue to a settlement trustee shares of common stock of Coastal States with an aggregate pre-settlement book value of $69 million.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man I thought was together. He's 29, handsome, a smooth talker and single. The relationship went fine until I caught him in a few lies, then I did a little detective work.

I became suspicious when he told me he had a "weekend" job. I discovered that he is engaged to another woman. He told her if anyone contacted her and asked her any questions about him, not to give out any information because some "nymphomaniac" was chasing him!

Meanwhile, he checked up on me to find out what my assets are. (I'm a widow and well enough off, so I don't have to work, but I'm not rich enough to support him, which I'm sure he had in mind.)

Should I let him know I am on to him? Or give him enough rope to let him hang himself?

DISGUSTED IN DIXIE

DEAR DISGUSTED: Never mind the rope. He's already hung himself where you are concerned. Cut him down.

DEAR ABBY: My 13-month-old child, Pam, is teething, and she chews and bites everything in sight. Pam was crawling around on the floor with my sister's little boy who's 8 months old, and she bit him. Naturally the boy was frightened, so he screamed.

My mother-in-law who was there at the time became furious and ordered her 9-year-old to bite Pam. The girl bit Pam on the arm, leaving teeth marks, and Pam screamed so hard, she nearly went into hysterics. (Pam didn't leave any teeth marks on her cousin.)

When I told my husband about this, he sided with his mother, saying it was an old-fashioned remedy for breaking children from the habit of biting.

My mother is old-fashioned in many ways, and she said she's never heard of this remedy. Have you? Thanks for your opinion.

PAM'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: No. But I have heard that a human bite can be more dangerous than an animal bite if the skin is broken. Teething children should be provided with teething rings—not cousins.

DEAR ABBY: My youngest daughter is going to be married soon. Her father is completely paralyzed and can't give her away. I was teasing her and said that I would give her away, and she said she would love it because she has two brothers and she would rather not choose between them.

The lady who directs weddings said it would be all right. I need your opinion. Should I give my daughter away? Or would it look silly?

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: It's your daughter's day. Let her do as she wishes. I think it's a wonderful idea.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — There's so much talk about the flu. I am over 70 and had it real bad when it was here before. I got it being in the big parade, November 11, when World War I ended. I was living with my grandparents. They said it was a punishment for all of us. We should have been on our knees, not out enjoying ourselves when other people had such heartache.

Well I sure did have a bad time of it. No doctor came to houses. Hospitals wouldn't take any more patients. Relatives and friends didn't go near each other. We didn't have pain pills in those days. It was castor oil, baking soda, electric oil, camphorated oil, even coal oil.

I am told I was out of my head. One of my uncles left a bottle of dark rum, heavy kind, on the step. My grandfather had to look after me and grandma, who had caught the flu from me. Pa was afraid because grandfather couldn't even make a cup of tea. Being from the old country, he sure cured both of us, Grandma in three days and weeks later for me.

Here's the cure. Laugh if you like but it did the trick. He put camphorated oil in goose grease, heated it and rubbed our chest. Then he mixed up mustard and put the oil and goose grease in it between two sheets of red flannel. My chest was red for awhile; it sure was hot. Here's what he gave us for medicine. He took heavy old-fashioned molasses and put the rum in it. He put some in a cup of hot water and it really made me sweat.

Today all these old-fashioned remedies are laughed at, but it worked. I'm still around. My grandparents died when they were over 70. The old boy knew his onions, even though he couldn't boil water. What I'd like to know is what

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Try putting several of the suction cups (used to hold soap) in the bottom of your tub or shower as a help to provide traction, when getting out of the tub or shower. They can also be picked up when cleaning the tub. — JEAN.

DEAR POLLY — Screws are often hard to get through wood and other surfaces, but I have found an easy and fast way. Before trying to put the screw in the surface, rub bits of leftover soap around the screw. Use your screwdriver and find the screw goes in easier and in a jiffy. This also works with nails. — LINDA Y.

DEAR POLLY — I make four boxes of dusting powder for less than thirty cents by filling empty dusting powder boxes with corn starch and then spraying the contents with my favorite spray perfume. The "powder" has a lovely odor. — HELEN.

DEAR POLLY — Those who cannot afford to buy expensive products to get rid of flies, mosquitoes and other such bugs can just buy a box of mothballs. Place two or three along a window sill in each room. If there are children put the mothballs on the upper sill. Renew from time to time and you'll find this is a pretty sure and cheap way of eliminating such pests. — OLIVINE.

Fashion flatterers -- fancy fabrics, feathers

OSTRICH FEATHERS play a big role in 1976-77 Paris haute couture. Here they are fashioned into earrings by Francois Herail. Other South African ostrich feathers grace dresses, capes, coats, shawls, boots and scarves.

EVENING ensemble in black and red printed chiffon is edged in black crepe. By Chanel, it shows a return to elegance.

LAYERED LOOK continues with car coat in beige with pink-lined tweed skirt. By Nina Ricci, it tops a plaid overblouse and tweed skirt.

IT'S A FEATHERY time for feminine women and this cape and train effect by Pierre Balmain reflects current mood of Paris designers. Black and white South African ostrich feathers top a long sheath.

Opulence reigns in Paris

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS — (NEA) — Is Paris haute couture a bellwether of things to come economically? During recent 1976-77 collections by top creators opulence was rampant, more than anytime during the last three decades. Seemingly oblivious to ever-rising costs, the leaders in high fashion put yards and yards of deluxe woods and silks — draped, pleated and bias-cut — into many models with a regal air.

The message, which rang loud and clear, was that the era of unisex fashion is over. Enter the real woman — seductive, sensuous, exciting. There were no revolutionary changes, though, but a constant regard for refinement and ease of movement. The longer line with hems hovering above and below the calf was unanimously adopted.

Pants still share honors with dresses where the tubular has given way to fullness through the torso or at the hip line. Haute couture left easy effects and folklore to ready-to-wear designers.

The leaders played their trumps, i.e., a definite elegance plus luxurious perfection underlined by colors as bright as a cageful of parrots. The very feminine ostrich feather trimming took on a new look by being used in fronds which in some models covered a dress from tip to toe. Passementerie-trimmed coats and fashioned belts and embroidery formed mosaics on a bodice but was generally used sparingly. All designs show it is definitely the end of the era of blue jeans and sloppy sweaters.

The star fabrics for evening included taffetas, faille and velvet, lame chiffons, organza, crepe satin and crepe de chine. For daytime, beautifully soft and supple wools, jerseys in all weights, cashmere, angora wools, paisley and horizontally striped, colorful tweeds.

The Fashion Olympics gold medal goes to Yves Saint Laurent for the most dramatic, colorful, sumptuous presentation.

This 40-year-old creator built his collection on one basic shape, almost always separates, not as a dress. It's a swirling mid-skirt clinched in at the waist with a richly embroidered belt or cummerbund topped by a big-sleeved blouse, plus an edge-to-edge padded jacket with a giant fringed shawl for extra warmth, plus a scarf in bright paisley wool wrapped around one shoulder or around the head and neck. The Russian touch is certainly there. In fact, Yves proposes a sort of Oriental doll-type woman with Anna Karenina-reminders galore. His colors are stinging like fuchsia, petrol blue, crimson, often two, three or more colors on one model as in a swooping black taffeta evening gown with stressed waistline and giant "minicello" sleeves in petrol blue satin and a cerise belt. Some dresses looked like galleons in full sail and the practical-minded wondered about packing these modern crinolines.

There were high crushed leather boots for day and in silver and gold kid for evening. Cardin's production seemed beamed at another space age. He cuts everything on the diagonal with full-gathered bat sleeves coupled to just-over-the-knee skirts. In contrast there were tailored suits in wool baratahe like those worn by women executives back in the fifties.

However, Dior's masculine trouser suits are for the idealized slim, young and beautiful woman. Then there are the anoraks in waterproof silk, some mink-lined for evening, the long tunic over pants, the full tent coats. Pleated skirts soften the sober side of the jackets. And for evening designer Marc Bohan slices many long, lean-figured satin or chiffon sheaths right up to the thigh.

Lanvin dresses "starry" ladies and the collection was certainly dedicated to the "price is no object" class. Hems here are definitely below the calf and coats are replaced by voluminous capes, some two-tiered and all hemmed in silver foil which is used lavishly, even on peasant skirts.

For Patou, designer Tarlazzi used generous yardage of wool jersey, layers of chiffon or slinky satin. His day version is like a blanket with nary a seam. He bids adieu to set-in sleeves, collars, darts, seams.

Pierre Balmain again produced clothes which always win a husband's approval for their understated elegance. His suits are definitely unmasculine with skirts emphasizing hips under short semi-fitted jackets piped in a darker color. For warmth there are the Balmain winding stoles 12 feet long, and in the Hollywood star mood a pure white wool outfit smothered in fox, a black velvet suit with pearl satin collar, many sheaths paillette, or beaded, contrasting with sweeping "infanta" gowns in luscious jewel-toned satins. His conversation piece — jersey gaiters in the same color as the blouse — to wear as alternatives to the ubiquitous boots.

Meanwhile Givenchy's collection is a hymn to the svelte silhouette. A great number of his tunic dresses have belts for contrast, sometimes marking a raised waistline. Givenchy also combines tunics with straight slim skirts, long and short, or with pants, all offering an artistic whole in the mingling of muted and violent colors.

Fragrance added An opened bar of fragrant soap in the bathroom, used once, freshens the air nicely.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

I love reading household hints on how to cut your food budget, but then I've always loved fiction.

Recently, I read where a Mrs. Young shared one of her little secrets. She said, "You have to educate your children in getting used to new dishes. I can serve my lentil casserole or whatever and get nothing but 'yuck' the first three times, but by the fourth time around, the lentil casserole is an old friend."

That's beautiful. I've tried many times to establish a meaningful relationship between my children and my liver cake. It got to be such an old friend, it multiplied before their eyes, but somehow I couldn't get them to sit down at the same table together. They also felt nothing toward my garbage soufflé and Name That Burger!

My children have always had strange eating habits. They don't like any food they have to chew which rules out onions, coconut or celery. (Steak became the exception when it went to $2.65 a pound.)

They don't like foods that have died and come back into this world shriveled, such as raisins, prunes or apricots.

They don't like to be tricked into eating foods that are good for them. They feel all foods should carry a label warning, "THIS FOOD IS NUTRITIONAL AND MAY BE BENEFICIAL TO YOUR HEALTH."

They don't like food they have never eaten before. This narrows their menus down to six staple items which were fed to them before they were old enough to develop memory.

So what's left? The DO like Contact Foods — like submerging French fries in a sea of catsup, spareribs that can be fondled or chicken that can be challenged to two falls out of three.

They DO like beverages such as catsup, steak sauce, and mayonnaise.

Advocates more money for parole

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Republican party platform committee voted today to recommend to the state convention a continuation of presidential primaries in Texas, with a winner-take-all provision on election of delegates from congressional or senatorial districts.

The committee also supported creation of a bipartisan reapportionment commission independent of the legislature. But the commission would act only when the legislature fails to redistrict.

Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, argued against those who advocated taking the legislature out of the redistricting process.

"What you are voting on is whether you are going to gerrymander by people you can vote on or whether you are going to gerrymander by a commission you cannot vote on," Mengden said.

The committee voted to table discussion on abortions and on the "party purity" requirement that voters register by party.

On Wednesday the committee discussed crime, parole and probation.

Frank Maloney of Austin got equal time Wednesday after Mike McCormick, director of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association, advocated an anti-crime package similar to Gov. Dolph Briscoe's.

The party's one statewide candidate, Walter Wendlandt for railroad commission, asked for planks that would put the party on record in favor of:

- Changing the railroad commission's name to "Energy and Transportation Commission."
- Limiting commissioners to two six-year terms.

'Gambling wets appetite'

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal gambling, such as off-track betting and state-run lotteries and numbers games, contributes to the growth of illegal gambling because it educates bettors about wagering. They then go out and obtain a better deal from illegal bookmakers.

The assessment was put to Congress by James Ritchie, executive director of a federal commission reviewing gambling laws. He told a House committee Wednesday, "Wherever legal gambling exists, illegal gambling increases."

Ritchie linked gambling to a growth of public interest in professional sports. "It is gambling that has generated the interest in professional sports. I'm sure that if all illegal gambling vanishes, professional sports will rue the day," he said.

The chairman of the commission, Charles H. Morin, said legalized betting on professional sports could lead to medical testing for drug use by athletes "such as horses and dogs" undergo.

The commission, established in 1972, has been studying gaming in the United States and is scheduled to publish its final report in October.

Ritchie said the report probably will recommend that states which decide to permit legal gambling receive the full support of the federal government, particularly with regard to tax policy.

The commission probably will urge that federal tax policy be changed so that no excise tax is levied on wagers and no federal income tax on legal gambling winnings, he said.

Television, in general, Morin says, generates 20 to 30 times more betting on televised football games than on those that are not.

Ritchie said betting on professional sports is so widespread that "the overwhelming number of people who go to a sporting contest have a wager. It might not be with a bookmaker, it may be with the person sitting next to them."

Ritchie said legalized off-track betting, lotteries and numbers games have attracted tens of thousands of Americans who had never gambled before to illegal bookmakers.

He said the legal betting events educated the nongamblers about wagering but that they soon learned they could get a bigger payoff for a winning bet from bookmakers.

Part of the reason is that the federal government imposes an excise tax on legal betting and requires payment of income taxes on all gambling winnings.

Items may prove Hughes thought Houston home

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post says an investigation by the Texas attorney general's office has revealed several items that indicate the late mystery billionaire Howard Hughes considered Houston his home.

Hughes' cousin, signed the certificate following Hughes' death April 5.

Another item developed in the probe, the Post said, is that the Los Angeles Country Club carried a Houston address for Hughes as of April 1, 1976.

Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill and his staff are hoping the probe will disprove claims by some Hughes' relatives and administrators of his multi-billion-dollar estate that he was a legal resident of Nevada.

Hughes also filed non-resident state tax returns in California for the years 1935-52 and 1955-56 and claimed Houston as his legal residence, the investigation by Hill revealed.

Hill wants the estate to be probated in Texas because the state could collect an estimated $300 million in state inheritance taxes.

According to the Hill investigation, Hughes gave Houston as his address on federal income tax returns for the years 1930-65, 1967-71 and 1973, he testified in a November 1952 trial in Los Angeles that Houston was his legal domicile and that poll tax receipts for the years 1935-52 include a sworn statement that his legal residence was Houston.

Hill said a statement on Hughes' death certificate shows he considered Houston as his "common residence." William Lummis, a Houston lawyer and

4-H leaders, parents to consider program

Adult leaders and parents of 4-H members will meet in the Courthouse Annex at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to consider the 1976-77 4-H program in Gray County.

Enrollments in the county's 4-H clubs are still being accepted, the county agents said. Any youth aged 9-19 interested in joining 4-H must complete an enrollment form and return it to the Extension office. This includes youths who were enrolled in 4-H last year.

Marilyn Shirley and Layton Barton, Gray County Extension agents, said the Adult Leaders Association will discuss the awards banquet, farm sale, National 4-H Club Week and the Gray County 4-H budget.

The pair said 4-H is open to anyone without regard to race, color, sex, national origin or religion.

Mexicans after dollars

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Mexican industrialists got down to the serious business of wooing U.S. dollars Thursday following a two-day campaign here by their country's top salesman, President Luis Echeverria.

Nearly 8,000 prospective buyers had registered by late Wednesday for MexFair '76, Mexico's largest foreign trade show.

MexFair is a major effort by the Mexican government to increase export sales to the United States, its chief trading partner. Last year, Mexico had a nearly $3 billion trade deficit with the United States.

The fair was inaugurated Tuesday by Echeverria, who spent two days in this South Texas city stressing that the recent sharp devaluation of the Mexican peso would make the prices of Mexican goods more attractive to U.S. buyers.

Currently the peso is being exchanged at 20 per dollar.

The effect of the devaluation is to make the dollar go further in buying Mexican goods, officials explained.

Exhibitors at the show said that while there is confusion in Mexico over pricing, values at the trade market here are stable because all sales are made in U.S. dollars.

The trade fair has grown from sales of $1.6 million at its experimental beginning in 1972 to sales of $80 million last year. Officials hope sales this year, spurred by the devaluation, will reach $100 million.

More than 1,500 product lines are on display in 210,000 square feet of the exhibit hall of the city's Convention Center. Steel products are featured this year in a joint effort by 35 Mexican steel producers.

The fair is sponsored by San Antonio and the Mexican Institute for Foreign Trade (IMCE), an agency created by Echeverria early in his presidency to boost Mexican trade.

Echeverria, who concludes a constitutional six-year term in office in December, attended numerous events on his visit here, including a breakfast attended by about 1,400 Mexican-Americans.

He received an honorary law degree from Our Lady of the Lake University, a San Antonio institution with a high proportion of Mexican-American students.

At a news conference before his return to Mexico City Wednesday afternoon, Echeverria said it is now up to the U.S. government to show its willingness to accept a bilateral agreement to exchange prisoners in the two countries.

Acceptance by U.S. officials, Echeverria said, would allow U.S. prisoners in Mexican jails to serve out their terms in the United States and vice versa.

Another penal reform measure Echeverria has introduced would make drug offenders eligible for parole after serving three-fifths of their sentences.

The parole measure, when approved by the Mexican congress, could free as many as 200 American prisoners by November, a presidential source said.

Approval of the exchange program would send other Americans home to serve their sentences. Officials said about 550 Americans are held in Mexican jails and about 1,000 Mexicans are held in U.S. prisons.

Man has 21st funeral

BURLINGTON, Colo. (AP) — Jim Gernhart, who says he's worried he won't get a proper burial after he dies, will participate Sunday in his 21st funeral — for himself.

getting a little old, and we're afraid he might not even be around then."

The 99-year-old retired farmer says he hopes he doesn't die before then. But if he does, Gernhart says he'll be buried in Goodland, Kan., because "I wouldn't be caught dead in Burlington."

Gernhart staged his first funeral in 1951. He bought a copper casket, rented the local armory and spent more than $15,000 on a funeral party which attracted national attention.

Gernhart has had his copper casket shipped to a mausoleum in Goodland. He says he took the action because there was so much local outcry against his first funeral.

Gernhart, who lives in a rest home, says when he isn't planning funerals, he spends most of his time "just killing time."

His funeral is the biggest thing that happens here," Mayor Rol Hudler said.

On Sunday, townspeople will honor him with what is supposed to be a 100th birthday funeral parade. Gernhart actually doesn't turn 100 until Nov. 20.

However, one of the parade funeral organizers says "he's among festivities planned for the funeral are an antique car procession through town.

One of the organizers says 75 or so "damn, crazy fools" are expected to participate.

Borger minister talks to ministerial alliance

A Borger minister, the Rev. Paul Burleson of the First Baptist Church, addressed the Pampa Ministerial Alliance Tuesday.

Rev. Burleson, speaking on "Spiritual Leadership in the Home," offered ideas on how to be a better husband and the needs of wives. His message was specific of marital relationships.

The Rev. Ron Harpster, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church and chairman of the Alliance's high school committee, presented the Bible reference books given by the Alliance and local churches.

Members discussed plans for the annual Thanksgiving service Nov. 24, in the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Ron Palermo, pastor of the Christian Center and Alliance president, said that any minister interested in the Alliance, the chaplaincy program at Highland General Hospital, the high school teaching program should contact him or other Alliance officers. They are the Rev. Tim Koenig, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, vice president; the Rev. John Hansard, pastor of Hobart Baptist Church, secretary, and Rev. Harpster, publicity.

The next meeting of the Pampa Ministerial Alliance will be Oct. 5 and Bob Phillips, Pampa Independent School District superintendent, will speak.

Seventeen members were present at the Tuesday meeting.

Presbyterian pastor announces sermon topic

"Ambassadors for Christ in Reconciliation" will be the sermon at the 10:45 a.m. worship Sunday in the First Presbyterian Church, according to the Rev. Norman D. Dow Jr., pastor.

Rev. Dow will use text from II Cor. 5:20 and he will be assisted in the pulpit by Ruling Elder Bunny Nichols. The Sacrament of Infant Baptism will be administered.

Church School begins at 9:30 a.m. Sunday and will be preceded by a youth breakfast in the Fellowship Hall. Nursery facilities are available during the worship service.

The Nominating Committee will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday in the West Room and the Wednesday Bible Group will have a retreat at 10 a.m. Wednesday. Elder Deacon Calling will be 7 p.m. Wednesday.

The church is located at 525 N. Gray.

'God's Ark of Safety' topic

Pearl Miller, member of the Frostburg, Md. Church of the Brethren, will speak on "God's Ark of Safety" to the Pampa Church of the Brethren congregation at 7 p.m. Sunday, according to the Rev. Bryce Hubbard, pastor.

Rev. Hubbard said that the Rev. Richard Greene, pastor of the Frostburg church, reported a vision in April, 1974 and his 150-member congregation has embarked on a million dollar building project as a result of that vision.

"God's Ark of Safety" revealed that people will come from around the world to see this building and will have the chance for salvation.

Rev. Hubbard said that Ms. Miller will discuss progress of the project.

The public is invited to hear Ms. Miller at the Pampa Church of the Brethren, 600 N. Frost.

Week of prayer

Baptist women of the First Baptist Church have set aside Sunday through Sept. 19 as a week of prayer for state missions.

Prayer sessions will be 9:30 a.m. in the parlor of the new worship center on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. A nursery will be provided.

The first pack of full-blooded English fox hounds was brought to Maryland from England in 1650.

Motorcyclists increase their chances of avoiding an accident by riding with their headlight on in daylight.

Russian native sets Spearman appearance

Bill Basansky, a native of Russia, will lead services at the Hansford County Agriculture Barn in Spearman at 8 p.m. Thursday through Sept. 18.

Basansky will be accompanied by his wife and two sons. He is a faculty member with Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla.

He will also testify during services in Beaver, Okla., Sept. 20-23 and in Guymon, Okla., Sept. 24-25.

TODAY

"Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts" (Heb. 3:7-8). Some time the last opportunity will come to the man who is lost in sin. He probably will not know it is his last opportunity. If so, he would take advantage of it.

As Balaam was drawing near the end of life, he said, "Let me die the death of the righteous." (Num. 23:10). But no one can live a sinful life and die a righteous person. A teacher once asked a class of boys, "Which would you rather be, the rich man or Lazarus?" One boy replied, "I would rather be the rich man in this life and Lazarus after death." It seems that many in the world today share his desire. But it cannot be so. Because of this, some question the goodness of God. However the law of God plainly declares that we shall reap as we sow. (Gal. 6:7-8) This law works for man's own good. God's goodness toward us can be seen by considering the provision for our redemption through Christ.

Many seem to think that opportunity is found in some other place and at some other time. They seem to be unable to see opportunity in the present time and place. But the Lord says, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation." (2 Cor. 6:2) Your present place or position in life and the present time provides you with the opportunity to obey the gospel of Christ and become a Christian. Yesterday is past. It cannot return. Tomorrow is future. It may or may not arrive and you may or may not see it. Jesus said the master of the house would shut the door and those without, although they stood and knocked, would not be allowed to enter in. They will not be accepted. (Luke 13:25)

Do not be indifferent to the door of salvation which is open to you in this life. Some day it will close to you and then all your calling will be in vain.

To die the death of the righteous, one must first live righteously. How are you living?

Music Appreciation

I am not a musician, but as I write this I think back and realize how my taste in music has changed. Early in life, it took only the simplest childhood jingles to please me, then in school I was trained and taught to appreciate more intricate music. All through life I feel that my knowledge of... and appreciation for music has grown and matured.

Through study and help from others, I have also grown as a Christian and have a better appreciation of my Lord.

My knowledge of, and love for God increases with each church worship service...

This way of life and worship, I would recommend to anyone. Won't you try it...

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Cadets stand by charges

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Despite denials, two men convicted in West Point's cheating scandal stand by their sworn allegations that former astronaut Frank Borman's son accepted a $1,200 bribe to "fix" an honor code case while he was a cadet. The son, Army Capt. Frederick Borman, denied the charge and offered to take a lie detector test to settle the issue. The two cadets who are accused in the affidavits of having bribed Borman to fix a plebe's case also denied the allegation. But the two members of the Class of 1977 who signed the statements refused to recant when told of the denials late Thursday. One of them said he had learned of the incident from two friends who told him they in turn had heard of it from the alleged bribers. The second cadet said the two alleged bribers had boasted of their deed to him and to others in their cadet company.

The elder Borman, now president of Eastern Airlines, said he was anguished by the charges and said it was unfortunate they had been made. Ironically, Borman, a West Point graduate who was promoted to general after his trip to the moon, is to preside at month's end at the first meeting of a blue-ribbon panel created by Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann to analyze the U.S. Military Academy's worst scandal in its 174 years.

"I have no intention of stepping down because I don't think I have a reason to step down," Borman said in a telephone interview. The disputed affidavits are among those signed by 150 of the 226 cadets involved in the cheating scandal in an effort by defense lawyers to get them reinstated by showing that cheating is endemic at the academy. The affidavits accuse 687 other cadets of honor code violations.

Borman's name — actually the name of a nonexistent "Frank Borman Jr." — appeared on two similarly worded documents. The elder Borman, now president of Eastern Airlines, said he was anguished by the charges and said it was unfortunate they had been made. Ironically, Borman, a West Point graduate who was promoted to general after his trip to the moon, is to preside at month's end at the first meeting of a blue-ribbon panel created by Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann to analyze the U.S. Military Academy's worst scandal in its 174 years.

Rocket down in Montana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large rocket section from a Soviet satellite came down in Montana earlier this week, Pentagon sources report. The rocket body from the Soviet Cosmos 854 has not yet been recovered by U.S. officials, who say it was tracked by radar.

Sources said the descending rocket body probably looked to spectators like a flaming comet as it passed over Washington state, Idaho, and finally fell in Montana, south of the Canadian border.

There is some question as to how much could be learned from studying the rocket section because it burned as it came down through the atmosphere.

Cosmos spy satellites normally remain aloft for about 12 days before the Russians bring them back down to earth. The United States also maintains secret spy satellites in orbit over Russia, mainland China and other areas of interest.

Said Frederick Borman, who graduated in 1974 and is a football coach and scout in West Point's athletic department, "I just want to tell you that everything is false, and I'll take a lie detector test. I wouldn't fix a board for $10 million." He added that he was in the same regiment as the plebe whose case was dismissed and thus couldn't have sat in judgment. Denying that he had bribed Borman, Air Force Lt. Weidner said, "Someone has one hell of an imagination."

Army Lt. Otte said, "I didn't have $600 as a cadet to give. Neither did Michael Weidner." A total of 140 cadets have admitted guilt in collaborating on graded homework last spring, lost appeals, or left the academy before charges against them could be resolved. America's first Presbyterian church was established in 1684. The Caspian Sea is 169,381 square miles in area.

According to military sources, debris from Soviet space vehicles drops on the United States from time to time, but usually in small pieces. The rocket section from Cosmos 854 apparently was larger than most that have fallen onto U.S. soil.

It was tracked by North American Air Defense Command radar which maintains a constant watch on objects approaching the United States. The Soviet Union generally describes Cosmos satellites as scientific vehicles. But U.S. intelligence officials say many of the Cosmos satellites are reconnaissance vehicles equipped with sensitive cameras, infrared sensors and other electronic devices.

Utilities balk at school tax

CARTHAGE, Tex. (AP) — A Texas Utilities Co. spokesman says the company will seek court relief of a tax rate of $340 per acre levied on its lignite properties in Panola County.

He said company's main objection is to taxation of lignite which has not yet been mined and in some cases may never be mined.

Traditionally taxes on underground natural resources are levied against both the owner and the operator after the commodities are produced," Sessel said.

"This method has proved equitable for decades," Sessel said the reason for the company's $1 valuation for tax purposes is that lignite or any other mineral has no absolute value until it is taken from the ground.

The company also claims "guesswork and speculation" are the only factors which would force farmers and ranchers to sell their land in order to pay assessments on lignite might which might never be mined.

The move to establish the $340 tax rate began when Panola County commissioners, meeting as a board of equalization, rejected the $1 rendition and subpoenaed the company's records.

According to Panola County Judge Danny Davidson, the records were submitted to Pritchard & Abbott, an accounting firm hired by the county.

The $340 valuation was recommended by this firm and adopted by the Beckville school district and Panola County. County Tax Assessor-collector

That rate was adopted by the board of equalization for both the Beckville Independent School District and Panola County after Texas Utilities rendered its property at $1 per acre.

Texas Utilities is the parent company of Dallas Power & Light, Texas Power & Light and Texas Public Service Co.

TU spokesman Ray Sessel of Dallas said the tax is "inherently discriminatory, unjust and totally without legal precedent."

Jack Cannon said the school's tax rate is about 75 per cent of the assessed value. County Atty. Joe Jackson, commenting on whether the tax rate is discriminatory since the other company is not taxed so highly, said the two situations are not comparable. He pointed out that Phillips Petroleum has also acquired lignite rights in the county but these are in the form of speculative leases, whereas Texas Utilities has purchased some lignite outright and is ready to begin production.

Phillips may never begin production, Jackson explained, stating that in his opinion it is two different ball games. Jackson said it would be up to the courts to decide if the tax rate is fair.

Nixon speaks on Mao

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Mao Tse-tung was a unique leader who had a profound understanding of his own people and of the need for

China and the United States to communicate, former President Richard M. Nixon says. Nixon, the last American known to have met with Mao, visited him in China earlier this year as a private citizen. In 1972, Nixon was the first American president to visit Mao's China, breaking through a diplomatic barrier of nonrecognition that the United States had maintained since the country's Communist revolution after World War II.

Mao died Thursday of an undisclosed illness. In a statement issued from his seaside estate here, Nixon said, "Chairman Mao Tse-tung's long march through life has now ended with his death at the age of 82. He was a man of immense physical courage and ideological determination, who worked up until his last days."

"As leaders who represented totally different philosophies and values, we both recognized when we met in Peking in 1972 that Chinese-American friendship had become indispensable to the interests of both our nations."

Nixon lauded Mao as a leader of China, saying, "I was particularly impressed by his profound understanding not only of the problems of his own people, but of the objective realities of the world situation. The new relationship which we established then was a tribute to this farsighted vision on his part."

"He reaffirmed that vision in my last meeting with him on Feb. 23 of this year. I am confident that whoever succeeds Chairman Mao will continue to work toward the goal of improving relations between the People's Republic of China and the United States of America and helping to build a structure of peace for the Pacific and the world."

"Mao Tse-tung was a unique man in a generation of great revolutionary leaders.

Pampa National Guard to have open house

A mechanized infantry unit of the Texas Army National Guard in Pampa will host an open house at the National Guard Armory 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Among the weapons will be several types of machine guns, anti-tank weapons, mortars, grenade launchers and M-16 rifles.

The public will also be able to see the mortar platoon in action as they prepare to fire the 81mm mortar and an armored personnel carrier will be on display.

Persons interested in enlisting in the Texas Army National Guard may obtain information on jobs available in the Guard during the two-day open house.

The driver of the bus, 54-year-old Rudy Baker, was treated for shock, broken ribs and cuts.

The McMinville School District bus picked up children from rural areas around this farming community of about 1,000 residents, 30 miles southwest of Portland, to take them to elementary and junior high schools in nearby McMinville.

Georgia, 58,876 square miles in area, is the largest state east of the Mississippi.

Witnesses said the bus stopped or nearly stopped at the crossing over the Southern Pacific tracks, which has no gates, then proceeded. The locomotive, pulling a caboose at about 25 miles per hour, struck the bus near the front door.

Miss Texas '76 wins swimsuit competition

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — An opera singer from Virginia and a Texas woman who lifts weights to keep in shape now have a better shot at becoming Miss America 1977.

Pamela Polk, 22, of Richmond, Va., and Carmen McCollum, 19, of Odessa, Tex., took the talent and swimsuit competition, respectively, on the first night of preliminary competition here Wednesday.

"I'm very pleased. I felt talent was my strong point," said Miss Polk after her performance of "Mio Chiamano Mimi" from Puccini's opera "La Boheme" won the judges votes.

A senior majoring in special education at Virginia Tech, Miss Polk said she performed the operatic number in her state pageant after deciding at the last minute that a pop performance wouldn't be as good.

"I was surprised, very surprised. There were many, many good figures out there," said the 36-25-36 Miss McCollum after hers caught the judges' eyes.

She said she lifts weights three times a week to keep her muscles in shape. Miss McCollum described her swimsuit as watermelon-colored with spaghetti straps. She said she picked it up at Neiman Marcus in Dallas.

Miss McCollum won her talent competition at the Miss Texas Pageant in Fort Worth before coming here to take the swimsuit competition. She plays a medley of country and western tunes, including Boots Randolph's "Yakety Sax" in her preliminary talent competition. Asked if winning the swimsuit competition means she may become Miss America following two other Texans since 1971, she said: "I hope so. I hope so. I'm not going to expect anything at this point. A lot of swimsuit winners don't make the Top 10, so I've got to keep the judges' eyes for the rest of the week."

Miss McCollum is scheduled for talent competition Friday night. Miss Polk will be in the swimsuit competition at tonight's preliminaries. The nationally televised finals are Saturday night.

Evening gown competition also goes on during the three nights of preliminaries. But the judges' decision on that competition is kept secret.

It became apparent before the first preliminaries that Miss McCollum has stout backing from her homefolk, as she acknowledged.

"The audience you know is the worst audience," she said between rehearsal, pausing over a quick lunch of sliced tomatoes, a peach and a few grapes.

"As far as being here in the hall, I'm having a blast. I'm trying to take everything in so I can remember it," Miss McCollum said. "The worst thing I'm worried about is that I won't make the top 10. Then I won't be on television and Odessa would never forgive me," said Miss McCollum, 19.

Pageant goes here who buy the official program can't miss Odessa's full page advertisement for their "Star of the Permian Basin." Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill, the local Chamber of Commerce and the Odessa Jaycees chipped in $1,150 for the ad.

Hemphill and about 50 other Texans arrived here Tuesday night to see Miss McCollum in the annual pageant parade on the boardwalk here.

Miss McCollum is flattered. "He got caught up in the excitement of it, I guess. It's the first time in a long time they've had someone from Odessa, you see," she explained.

Texas pageant officials are boasting that Miss McCollum is the best talent they've ever brought to Convention Hall here. They brought Phyllis George in 1971 and Shirley Cothran in 1975, both from Denton and both Miss Americas.

Miss McCollum is planning a medley of country and western songs on her saxophone for her talent competition Friday night. She's hoping to win the judges with her version of Boots Randolph's "Yakety Sax."

"I've been working on my accent," she said, explaining that Easterners sometimes flinch when a Texan says a word like "rule" or "school." But she said she's not ashamed of the way she talks.

"Noo Yawk. Noo Joisey. I could tawk like dat if I tried," she said.

Cadets stand by charges

Student attorney general

Glen Blanscet of Pampa has received unanimous confirmation from the West Texas State University Student Senate as attorney general of the Student Association at WTSU. Blanscet, a sophomore, is majoring in public administration. He was elected to the Student Senate during his freshman year. He graduated from Pampa High School in 1975 and is a former student body president at the high school. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy G. Blanscet of 2108 N. Zimmers.

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Despite denials, two men convicted in West Point's cheating scandal stand by their sworn allegations that former astronaut Frank Borman's son accepted a $1,200 bribe to "fix" an honor code case while he was a cadet. The son, Army Capt. Frederick Borman, denied the charge and offered to take a lie detector test to settle the issue. The two cadets who are accused in the affidavits of having bribed Borman to fix a plebe's case also denied the allegation. But the two members of the Class of 1977 who signed the statements refused to recant when told of the denials late Thursday. One of them said he had learned of the incident from two friends who told him they in turn had heard of it from the alleged bribers. The second cadet said the two alleged bribers had boasted of their deed to him and to others in their cadet company.

The elder Borman, now president of Eastern Airlines, said he was anguished by the charges and said it was unfortunate they had been made. Ironically, Borman, a West Point graduate who was promoted to general after his trip to the moon, is to preside at month's end at the first meeting of a blue-ribbon panel created by Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann to analyze the U.S. Military Academy's worst scandal in its 174 years.

"I have no intention of stepping down because I don't think I have a reason to step down," Borman said in a telephone interview. The disputed affidavits are among those signed by 150 of the 226 cadets involved in the cheating scandal in an effort by defense lawyers to get them reinstated by showing that cheating is endemic at the academy. The affidavits accuse 687 other cadets of honor code violations.

Borman's name — actually the name of a nonexistent "Frank Borman Jr." — appeared on two similarly worded documents. case was dismissed and thus couldn't have sat in judgment. Denying that he had bribed Borman, Air Force Lt. Weidner said, "Someone has one hell of an imagination." Army Lt. Ote said, "I didn't have $600 as a cadet to give. Neither did Michael Weidner."

A total of 140 cadets have admitted guilt in collaborating on graded homework last spring, lost appeals, or left the academy before charges against them could be resolved.

Rocket down in Montana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large rocket section from a Soviet satellite came down in Montana earlier this week, Pentagon sources report. The rocket body from the Soviet Cosmos 854 has not yet been recovered by U.S. officials, who say it was tracked by radar. Sources said the descending rocket body probably looked to spectators like a flaming comet as it passed over Washington state, Idaho, and finally fell in Montana, south of the Canadian border.

According to military sources, debris from Soviet space vehicles drops on the United States from time to time, but usually in small pieces. The rocket section from Cosmos 854 apparently was larger than most that have fallen onto U.S. soil. There is some question as to how much could be learned from studying the rocket section because it burned as it came down through the atmosphere.

It was tracked by North American Air Defense Command radar which maintains a constant watch on objects approaching the United States. The Soviet Union generally describes Cosmos satellites as scientific vehicles. But U.S. intelligence officials say many of the Cosmos satellites are reconnaissance vehicles equipped with sensitive cameras, infrared sensors and other electronic devices. Cosmos spy satellites normally remain aloft for about 12 days before the Russians bring them back down to earth.

The United States also maintains secret spy satellites in orbit over Russia, mainland China and other areas of interest. Waymon Blair said this brings the total value of TU property to $6.85 million, with most of the lignite lying within the school district. Blair added the county tax rate will be 25 per cent of assessed value.

However, Beckville Supt. Jack Cannon said the school's tax rate is about 75 per cent of the assessed value. Jack Cannon said the school's tax rate is about 75 per cent of the assessed value. County Atty. Joe Jackson, commenting on whether the tax rate is discriminatory since the

CARTHAGE, Tex. (AP) — A Texas Utilities Co. spokesman says the company will seek court relief of a tax rate of $340 per acre levied on its lignite properties in Panola County. That rate was adopted by the board of equalization for both the Beckville Independent School District and Panola County after Texas Utilities rendered its property at $1 per acre. Texas Utilities is the parent company of Dallas Power & Light, Texas Power & Light and Texas Public Service Co. TU spokesman Ray Sessel of Dallas said the tax is "inherently discriminatory, unjust and totally without legal precedent."

He said company's main objection is to taxation of lignite which has not yet been mined and in some cases may never be mined. "Traditionally taxes on underground natural resources are levied against both the owner and the operator after the commodities are produced," Sessel said. "This method has proved equitable for decades." Sessel said the reason for the company's $1 valuation for tax purposes is that lignite or any other mineral has no absolute value until it is taken from the ground. The company also claims "guesswork and speculation" are the only factors which could be used to estimate the value of unmined lignite and Sessel added that allowing governmental entities such arbitrary taxing power is dangerous. "If lignite or underground minerals are taxed while in their natural environment, regardless of depth or abundance, what is to prevent the air above property from being taxed?" he asked. The utility also has charged the taxation is discriminatory because it has been levied only on this company and not on landowners and at least one other firm which owns lignite rights in the county. If the tax was levied against landowners, Sessel said it would force farmers and ranchers to sell their land in order to pay assessments on lignite which might never be mined. The move to establish the $340 tax rate began when Panola County commissioners, meeting as a board of equalization, rejected the $1 rendition and subpoenaed the company's records. According to Panola County Judge Danny Davidson, the records were submitted to Pritchard & Abbott, an accounting firm hired by the county. The $340 valuation was recommended by this firm and adopted by the Beckville school district and Panola County. County Tax Assessor-collector other company is not taxed so highly, said the two situations are not comparable. He pointed out that Phillips Petroleum has also acquired lignite rights in the county but these are in the form of speculative leases, whereas Texas Utilities has purchased some lignite outright and is ready to begin production. Phillips may never begin production, Jackson explained, stating that in his opinion it is two different ball games. Jackson said it would be up to the courts to decide if the tax rate is fair.

Nixon speaks on Mao

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Mao Tse-tung was a unique leader who had a profound understanding of his own people and of the need for China and the United States to communicate, former President Richard M. Nixon says. Nixon, the last American known to have met with Mao, visited him in China earlier this year as a private citizen. In 1972, Nixon was the first American president to visit Mao's China, breaking through a diplomatic barrier of non-recognition that the United States had maintained since the country's Communist revolution after World War II. Mao died Thursday of an undisclosed illness. In a statement issued from his seaside estate here, Nixon said, "Chairman Mao Tse-tung's long march through life has now ended with his death at the age of 82. He was a man of immense physical courage and ideological determination, who worked up until his last days. As leaders who represented totally different philosophies and views, we both recognized when we met in Peking in 1972 that Chinese-American friendship had become indispensable to the interests of both our nations."

Nixon lauded Mao as a leader of China, saying, "I was particularly impressed by his profound understanding not only of the problems of his own people, but of the objective realities of the world situation. The new relationship which we established then was a tribute to this farsighted vision on his part. He reaffirmed that vision in my last meeting with him on Feb. 23 of this year. I am confident that whoever succeeds Chairman Mao will continue to work toward the goal of improving relations between the People's Republic of China and the United States of America and helping to build a structure of peace for the Pacific and the world. Mao Tse-tung was a unique man in a generation of great revolutionary leaders."

Among the weapons will be several types of machine guns, anti-tank weapons, mortars, grenade launchers and M-16 rifles. The public will also be able to see the mortar platoon in action as they prepare to fire the 81mm mortar and an armored personnel carrier will be on display. Persons interested in enlisting in the Texas Army National Guard may obtain information on jobs available in the Guard during the two-day open house.

A mechanized infantry unit of the Texas Army National Guard in Pampa will host an open house at the National Guard Armory 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Company B, 2nd Battalion of the 142nd Infantry will be training at the Armory during the weekend. The public can observe the mortar platoon in a classroom setting as they prepare for testing. Also on display will be weapons, various vehicles and communications equipment.

Bus driver didn't see locomotive

LAFAYETTE, Ore. (AP) — "He was laying over the steering wheel. He kept saying over and over, 'I'm sorry, I'm sorry, I didn't see it,'" 13-year-old Wanda Stafford said of the driver of her school bus, which was hit by a railway locomotive. Two of at least 41 children aboard the bus were killed in the accident, which may have been caused by the driver being blinded by the morning sun. Authorities identified the dead as 9-year-old Annette Smith and 8-year-old Christina Espinosa. Lori Barr, 16, was in critical condition, and two other children were in serious condition. Thirty-four children were treated for less serious injuries. Some of those were hospitalized only briefly. The driver of the bus, 54-year-old Rudy Baker, was treated for shock, broken ribs and cuts. The McMinnville School District bus picked up children from rural areas around this farming community of about 1,000 residents, 30 miles southwest of Portland, to take them to elementary and junior high schools in nearby McMinnville. Georgia, 58,876 square miles in area, is the largest state east of the Mississippi.

Witnesses said the bus stopped or nearly stopped at the crossing over the Southern Pacific tracks, which has no gates, then proceeded. The locomotive, pulling a caboose at about 25 miles per hour, struck the bus near the front door. "Everybody was screaming and the kids were pushing and shoving to get out," said Miss Stafford, who suffered a sprained knee and bruises. "All the kids hollered 'Train!' The whistle was blowing like mad when the train hit the bus, turning it completely around and striking us again from the rear." The impact spun the bus from the track. The bus splintered a utility pole and crashed into an old garage 350 feet from where it was hit. Amos Timmerman, the engineer, said the engine's whistle was blowing and the headlight was on just before the crash. He said the sunlight at 8:16 a.m. might have blinded Baker. Baker had been driving for the school district for four years.

Miss Texas '76 wins swimsuit competition

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — An opera singer from Virginia and a Texas woman who lifts weights to keep in shape now have a better shot at becoming Miss America 1977. Pamela Polk, 22, of Richmond, Va., and Carmen McCollum, 19, of Odessa, Tex., took the talent and swimsuit competition, respectively, on the first night of preliminary competition here Wednesday. "I'm very pleased. I felt talent was my strong point," said Miss Polk after her performance of "Mio Chiamano Mimi" from Puccini's opera "La Boheme" won the judges' votes. A senior majoring in special education at Virginia Tech, Miss Polk said she performed the operatic number in her state pageant after deciding at the last minute that a pop performance wouldn't be as good. "I was surprised, very surprised. There were many, many good figures out there," said the 36-25-36 Miss McCollum after hers caught the judges' eyes. She said she lifts weights three times a week to keep her muscles in shape. Miss McCollum described her swimsuit as watermelon-colored with spaghetti straps. She said she picked it up at Neiman Marcus in Dallas. Miss McCollum won her talent competition at the Miss Texas Pageant in Fort Worth before coming here to take the swimsuit competition. She plays a medley of country and western tunes, including Boots Randolph's "Yakety Sax" in her preliminary talent competition. Asked if winning the swimsuit competition means she may become Miss America following two other Texans since 1971, she said, "I hope so. I hope so. I'm not going to expect anything at this point. A lot of swimsuit winners don't make the Top 10, so I've got to keep the judges' eyes for the rest of the week." Miss McCollum is scheduled for talent competition Friday night. Miss Polk will be in the swimsuit competition at tonight's preliminaries. The nationally televised finals are Saturday night. Evening gown competition also goes on during the three nights of preliminaries. But the judges' decision on that competition is kept secret. It became apparent before the first preliminaries that Miss McCollum has stout backing from her homefolk, as she acknowledged. "The audience you know is the worst audience," she said between rehearsals, pausing over a quick lunch of sliced tomatoes, a peach and a few grapes. "As far as being here in the hall, I'm having a blast. I'm trying to take everything in so I can remember it." Miss

McCollum said. "The worst thing I'm worried about is that I won't make the top 10. Then I won't be on television and Odessa would never forgive me," said Miss McCollum, 19. Pageant goers here who buy the official program can't miss Odessa's full page advertisement for their "Star of the Permian Basin." Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill, the local Chamber of Commerce and the Odessa Jaycees chipped in $1,150 for the ad. Hemphill and about 50 other Texans arrived here Tuesday night to see Miss McCollum in the annual pageant parade on the boardwalk here. Miss McCollum is flattered. "He got caught up in the excitement of it, I guess. It's the first time in a long time they've had someone from Odessa, you see," she explained.

Texas pageant officials are boasting that Miss McCollum is the best talent they've ever brought to Convention Hall here. They brought Phyllis George in 1971 and Shirley Cothran in 1975, both from Denton and both Miss Americas. Miss McCollum is planning a medley of country and western songs on her alto saxophone for her talent competition Friday night. She's hoping to win the judges with her version of Boots Randolph's "Yakety Sax." "I've been working on my accent," she said, explaining that Easterners sometimes flinch when a Texan says a word like "rule" or "school." But she said she's not ashamed of the way she talks. "Noo Yawk. Noo Joisey. I could talk like dat if I tried," she said.

Colliding makes them happy

The Groom Tigers, who unexpectedly lost to Claude, 13-12, last week, took out their frustrations on one another during a practice this week.

"Right in the middle of the workout, we just gave 'em a chance to hit on each other. They just backed off and ran into each other," said Russell Roberts, Groom's personable first year head coach.

"We do it sometimes in small groups but not usually as a team."

The Tigers benefited from the session. "I think it made everybody feel better."

Groom, ranked No. 1 among the state's Class B teams last week by the Associated Press but in eighth place this week, has received a great deal of state-wide publicity — carryover from last year's drive to the state finals. Roberts said the publicity has created additional pressures with his job.

"It puts me under the microscope and I really feel the pressure. But I don't feel it's aimed at me as much as it is the school and the community. I've really got to say that even though I feel the pressure, I enjoy it."

Roberts has been an assistant coach at two AAAA schools in Texas, including San Antonio McCollum. Crowds at the San Antonio games often numbered more than 5,000. Only a few hundred attend the Groom games. Roberts, because he's now a head coach and able to work with one of the top Class B programs in the state, doesn't mind.

"We had standing - room - only crowds at San Antonio and we have standing - room - only crowds at Groom. It doesn't seem any different. I wouldn't be anywhere else in the world right now.

prognosticator with his correct guesses. In the "upsets," Claude stunned Groom, 13-12. Wheeler nudged Shamrock, 7-0, and White Deer bombed Vega, 33-9.

Three of six doesn't earn me bragging rights. However, some pride was salvaged in guessing the point spread on the Canadian - Phillips contest.

to kick off an historic occasion?

Arkansas 39, Utah State 12 — Utah State lost 45-10 to San Jose State last week. Arkansas is better than San Jose State.

Colorado 23, Texas Tech 19 — Tech's defense is experienced but the offense weakens the Red Raiders. Colorado's size will be the difference.

SMU Coach Ron Meyer: "We do plan to throw the football. I will virtually guarantee that Ricky Wesson will pass that 2,000 yard mark in passing. I think he has 1,999 right now."

More from Meyer: "I'm not pumping for tickets, but people are going to be remiss if they miss this game (SMU-TCU). They really are. I'll guarantee you that. It may be one of the all-time games."

Paul Sims

"I felt that way when I got up Saturday morning." Claude had upset Groom the night before.

Predicting outcomes of last week's Pampa area high school football openers did nothing to bolster the ego of this writer, who was correct on half his guesses.

Clarendon ripped McLean, 29-0. Lefors throttled Happy, 32-0, and Canadian trimmed Phillips, 13-0, to provide this

Here are my predictions on this weekend's games for Southwest Conference teams:

Texas 30, Boston College 13 — Since Earl Campbell has recovered, it probably will be worse.

Baylor 20, Houston 13 — Cleveland Franklin and Company will spoil the Cougars' Southwest Conference debut.

TCU 15, SMU 12 — This is the first time in 41 years that these two have met and been undefeated. How about an upset

Pampa to host Dumas in 2nd game tonight

"They were supposed to have gotten beat by a couple of touchdowns and they tied Palo Duro. It certainly had to have helped their confidence."

That is why Pampa Coach John Welborn is concerned going into tonight's non-conference battle against Dumas at 7:30 in Harvester Stadium.

The Demons are coming off a surprising 7-7 tie against Palo Duro. Palo Duro whipped Hereford, 26-8, Thursday, and Hereford stunned Pampa, 20-12, last week.

What makes last week's tie against the explosive Dons even more amazing is the Dumas lineup, which contains five sophomores on offense including the quarterback.

"These Dumas sophomores play pretty well," Welborn said. Dumas Coach Jack Moss agrees.

"We had a super effort..." Moss added. "Sophomore kids one week look like all-Americans and the next week they look like they never played a day in their life. I couldn't begin to guess how we're going to play this week."

Quarterback Kent Hazen, tight end Bobby Wilborn, split end Ricky Rodriguez, wingback Scott Kehoe and left guard Brian Millard are the sophomores on offense.

Welborn hopes to avoid anything close to a repeat of last year's contest, which Pampa won 14-6 after going into the game a heavy favorite.

"We piddled around and nearly got beat. If we give them the ball in four - down territory and don't play good defense and let them get a little momentum, we could get beat."

Pampa is hoping for a more consistent defensive effort than it gave last week against Hereford. The Whitefaces rushed for 170 yards, including 78 by half back Roy Martinez who scored three first - half touchdowns.

The Harvesters were led by halfback Ricky Moore with 79 yards on 11 carries. The Harvesters, who lost three fumbles, rushed for 147 yards.

"We didn't tackle real well consistently. We tackle good in spots. I guess we played well enough to have won or tied," Welborn said.

"I think you have to look at the loss that you're going to start working harder and cut out the mistakes that cost you games."

Welborn isn't too concerned now about that loss. "I've lost first ball games before and came back and had a real good ballclub."

Pampa is ranked first in District 3-AAAA. "We're going to have to have the same kind of super effort that we had last week to beat them. We can't make some of the same mistakes we made — being caught out of position and reading the wrong things," Moss said.

"I don't think Pampa is overrated. We think Pampa is a much better football team than Palo Duro is."

In other games tonight, Amarillo High hosts Odessa Permian, Amarillo Tascosa travels to Plainview and Amarillo Caprock visits El Paso Andress.

Caprock was the only District 3-AAAA team to win last week, downing Odessa Ector, 2-0.

McLean waltzes by Pampa sophs

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Sammy Don Haynes rushed for 103 yards, scored a touchdown and passed for another to lead McLean to a 23-6 win over the Pampa sophomore team Thursday.

The contest was close until the second half. McLean led 8-6 at halftime then took advantage of varsity experience and a defense which finally came alive to pull away from the visitors.

Curtis Simpson galloped 44 yards down the right sideline to score at 6:47 in the first quarter. Haynes broke off right tackle for the conversion as McLean took an 8-0 lead.

Pampa, on the ensuing series, scored, with the help of a 15-yard roughing - the kicker penalty against the Tigers, on a 48-yard romp by tiny Rudy Rolland. A pass to Mike Cole from Gary Tucker for the conversion was nullified because of a procedure penalty. Quarterback Gary Tucker was stopped on Pampa's next try.

Haynes passed to Dale Killham for a 25-yard score at 6:47 in the third period. A pass to Simpson resulted in two extra points and a 16-6 lead.

The final touchdown came on a 42-yard scamper by Haynes with 42 seconds left in the third period. Randy Kennedy booted the extra point.

Pampa had a chance to score in the third period after Jeff Copeland recovered a Tiger fumble on the hosts' four - yard line. On the next play, Carter Trew intercepted a pitchout and returned it 52 yards to the McLean 44.

Richard Wuest saved a touchdown on the play with a shoestring tackle.

Pampa was virtually unable to move the football in the second half. The sophomores rushed for 75 yards in game, and Tucker passed for 71, completing four of 15 tosses.

Haynes' yardage came on 26 carries. Simpson added 95 yards on nine rushes, while Ken Parker gained 52 on 10 carries. McLean rushed for 268 yards.

Rolland led Pampa with 54 yards on six carries.

Haynes passed five times, completing three for 29 yards. The Tigers had 13 first downs to Pampa's six. Both teams lost three fumbles and had one interception.

"Our spirit came around in the second half. Our big problem was we were too inconsistent," said McLean Coach Jesse Smelley.

"I was pleased with us coming back. We looked so bad defensively in the first half."

The Pampa junior varsity blanked Berger, 14-0. Thursday in Berger. Todd Chumbley scored the touchdowns on runs of 70 and 20 yards.

Borger trips Pampa 8th

BORGER — Borger jumped out to a 32-0 halftime lead then coasted to a 40-14 win over the Pampa red team in eighth - grade football action Thursday at Borger.

Pampa's touchdowns, both coming in the fourth quarter, were on passes of 50 and 40 yards from San Edwards to Steve McDougall.

John Shilling ran over a conversion.

The Pampa Junior High freshman B-team scored two touchdowns and shut out the eighth - grade blue team Thursday in a scrimmage.

Borg downs Orantes

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — The king is dead, but he went down fighting. Manuel Orantes, the defending titlist at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, was eliminated by Bjorn Borg 4-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 in a thrilling quarter-final match Thursday, but not before throwing a royal scare into the 20-year-old Swede.

"I was sure I had the match won. I thought he had given up. Then, all of a sudden, we're even again."

It was a familiar scenario for Orantes. Last year, the gritty Spaniard trailed Guillermo Vilas 2-1 in sets and 5-0 in games in the fourth set, but saved five match points and went on to win their semifinal in five sets.

This time, as late afternoon shadows swept across the stadium court at the West Side Tennis Club, Orantes trailed 2-1 in sets and 4-0 in the fourth set.

"I thought the match was over," said the short, muscular Spaniard, who was seeded sixth. "I felt I couldn't get much more tired, so why not try for the points? I decided to try everything."

Suddenly, his passing shots were staying within the sidelines instead of sailing wide.

the lob was tucking inside the baseline instead of floating out. Borg's strategy was the same - serve hard, rush the net at every chance - but suddenly it wasn't working.

"What could I do?" Borg said. "He was hitting a winner on every point."

Mao built today's China on peasant base

Mao Tse-tung

By JOHN RODERICK
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Mao Tse-tung was a soldier, classical poet, historian and Marxist philosopher who placed his faith in China's peasants. A peasant's son himself, he put them in the vanguard of the Chinese Communist revolution.

His armies, raised and operating from rural bases, crushed the Nationalist forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in a bloody civil war, clearing the way for the proclamation in 1949 of the Chinese People's Republic.

In the tumultuous years which followed, Mao continued to build on the peasant base, pouring 500 million of them into rural communes. Two decades later he put them in the forefront of an ambitious program to industrialize China by the turn of the century.

Chairman of the Communist party from 1945, symbol of state and father of the republic, Mao regarded himself primarily as a teacher. He felt it was his task to lead the Chinese masses into a life free of hunger, disease and ignorance. Beyond that, he dreamed of creating a new Marxist man, one of many parts able to till the land, work in the factories, bear arms and grasp political thought.

Mao lived to see many of his dreams become reality. By the 1970s, China appeared to have made long strides in its ageless battle against famine, disease and unemployment. Its 800 million people, while still poor, superstitious and largely illiterate, had enough to eat, were adequately if modestly clothed, and had a roof over their heads. Opportunities in education, industry and agriculture had been opened up to many of peasant, worker or soldier origin.

Though he was virtually enshrined by the Chinese as a Marxist demigod, Mao made many enemies within his own party and in international communism during his lifetime. He quarreled with the Russians over ideology and split the world Communist movement. He sought to bring China overnight into the industrial age with a great leap forward in 1958 and aroused the ire of the pragmatists. A believer in the theory of continuing revolution, he carried out a series of massive purges which shook up the army, government and party and raised a new crop of foes.

Yet he also displayed on several occasions the Chinese genius for compromise. When it suited the Communist party, and the nation, he actively cooperated with Chiang Kai-shek.

And, in the 1970s he ended two decades of Chinese-American hostility, welcoming President Richard M. Nixon to Peking as if he were an old friend rather than the man identified in Chinese propaganda as an arch-villain.

Mao was able to unite China under a single political entity, the Communist party. The emperors who preceded him had never accomplished anything similar.

For Mao, the party, which he helped establish in 1921, was everything. But he did not hesitate in the mid-1960s to tear it apart when he believed it had taken a wrong course toward capitalism.

Partly to correct this trend, partly to recover the personal power he had lost to President Liu Shao-chi, party General Secretary Teng Hsiao-ping and other leaders, Mao launched the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution in 1966. When it ended three years later, Liu and Teng were in disgrace and thousands of other senior Communists were out of jobs and undergoing re-education.

But when it became apparent later that many of those cashiered had been the victims of a personal vendetta by his designated successor, Defense Minister Lin Biao, and the radical wing of the party, Mao consented to have a number of them restored to their old posts. Among them was Teng Hsiao-ping, rehabilitated in 1973 and by the start of 1976 one of the most powerful men in China after Mao himself.

Teng had been the protégé of Premier Chou En-lai, and when the latter died in January 1976 it was widely concluded that Teng would become premier.

But with Chou gone, Maoists began attacking Teng as a "capitalist roader" — one who sought to bring capitalism back to China — and a campaign of criticism was launched against him in February and March 1976, after a surprise announcement that Hua Kuo-feng had been named acting premier.

Despite demonstrations in Peking supporting the late Chou — and hence Teng — the announcement came that the Maoist radicals had won out: Hua, then 56, was named premier and first vice chairman of the Communist party — second only to Mao himself. The 72-year-old Teng was stripped of all his government and party posts but allowed to keep his membership in the party to see how he will behave himself in the future, Peking radio said.

Mao had just completed the remaking of the party, government and army in January 1975, six years after the Cultural Revolution and four years after the unveiling of a new heresy, led by Lin Biao. Lin was accused of plotting to overthrow Mao and the government. Shortly after that Lin was killed in a plane crash in Mongolia in 1971.

Mao's role in old age was oracular, composing new directives for the faithful to interpret and put into practice. His obsession persisted: to keep the party pure and selflessly dedicated to communism.

His oldest foe, Chiang Kai-shek, died at 87 in Taipei, Taiwan, in 1975, without having accomplished his vow to reconquer the mainland. But in death he denied Mao the full fruits of the 1949 Communist victory. Chiang's son and successor, Nationalist Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, insisted he would never compromise with Mao over the future of Taiwan, the 30th and last Chinese province still free of Communist control.

One of Mao's failures was an inability — some said an unwillingness — to settle the Chinese-Soviet conflict. Relations between the two Communist giants broke down over ideological differences only seven years after the Chinese Communists came to power. They deteriorated steadily, sometimes convulsively, in the two decades which followed.

Long-simmering differences burst into the open in 1962 and flared into near war in 1969 after a series of Chinese-Soviet border clashes.

The Chinese fear of war touched off by these skirmishes, and the American desire to insure the safe withdrawal of U.S. troops from the Vietnam battlefield, helped make Chinese-American reconciliation possible. In late 1975, President Gerald R. Ford followed Nixon to Peking and renewed the American promise of full diplomatic recognition in an unspecified future.

Mao married three times. His first wife was killed by a Nationalist general, the second accompanied him on the 8,000-mile "Long March" in the 1930s, and the third and last was a Shanghai movie actress named Chiang Ching. To marry her he had to divorce his second wife — then recovering from illness in Moscow — a move the party elders resisted.

Intelligence chief Kang Sheng earned the couple's gratitude by backing the marriage.

Chiang Ching, 20 years Mao's junior, became the firebrand of the Cultural Revolution, leading the radical leftist faction. She became a member of the Politburo in her own right afterward but was passed over when the 10th party congress chose the party's vice chairmen and members of the Politburo Standing Committee. They had two children, both girls. Mao had no other surviving offspring.

Mao was born Dec. 26, 1893, in Shaoshan, Hunan province, to a moderately well-to-do peasant family. His father, a severe and demanding man, put him to work in the field at the age of 6, and his primary school teacher often beat him. In what he later called his first act of rebellion, the young Mao fled from these influences at the age of 9 and hid for three days in a mountain valley.

His mother was the dominant influence of these early years. Mild mannered, illiterate and understanding, she shielded him from her husband's ire. His first contact with the grim realities of revolution occurred during a famine in Changsha, where he had gone to continue his studies. He saw a peasant rebel executed, and it left a deep mark on his young mind.

All these events contributed to his revolutionary makeup. At the age of 15, he worried about the threatened partition of China by foreign powers.

In 1911, carried away by the fervor of revolution — the emperor had been overthrown and a republic established — Mao joined the new army for six months, and spent his spare time reading newspapers and radical books.

Now adrift, he wavered between becoming a policeman, a soap maker, a lawyer and a businessman. He passed them all up to plunge into more reading: Adam Smith's "The Wealth of Nations," Darwin's "Origin of Species," and the writings of John Stuart Mill, Lincoln, Washington and Jefferson.

For the next five years, from 1913 to 1918, Mao studied at the Hunan No. 1 provincial normal school, where he rebelled against the principal, whom he accused of being too conventional.

He promoted a group called the New People's Society, a number of whose members became influential later in Chiang's Kuomintang (Nationalist party), or the Communist party.

He went to Peking in 1918, intending to join a work-study group going to France, but got a job instead as a library assistant at Peking University, where he audited classes.

There he met Li Ta-chao, the chief librarian, and later a founder of the Communist party. He fell in love with and later married Yang Kai-hui, daughter of his old middle school teacher, Yang Chang-chi. Later to be executed by the Nationalists, she was said to be his first and deepest love.

Mao edited and published a number of leftist periodicals at that time and engaged in a movement against the warlord governor of Hunan which made him, for the first time, a wanted man. His philosophy and politics ranged between liberalism and democracy — until he read his first books on communism — "The Communist Manifesto," Kautsky's "Class War" and a history of socialism.

After the governor died, Mao became a teacher in his native Hunan. He was so poor he had to sell his fur gown to live. In July 1921 he went to Shanghai to become one of the 12 founding members of the Communist party. His home in Hunan became the center of revolutionary activities and there he first met Liu Shao-chi, who would become president only to be disgraced in the Cultural Revolution 45 years later for opposing Mao.

Mao's life in the next few years was one of organizing laborers into Communist unions and of rebellion once more against the new governor of Hunan.

Fleeing to Canton, in South China, he became involved in the Kuomintang. Communists were admitted as members on an individual, rather than a party, basis.

Stricken ill, Mao returned again to Hunan clandestinely, where he organized more than 20 peasant associations. Three years later Mao wrote his first major work on the peasants; in which he recognized their revolutionary potential.

The party center, crushed in the Kuomintang bloodbath of 1927, showed little enthusiasm for Mao's peasant views. Led by youths educated in Moscow, among them Chou En-lai, they placed their faith in the worker proletariat of the big cities. Mao for a time fell from favor.

Ignoring these strictures, Mao established the first Chinese "soviet" on the border of Hunan and joined forces with 2,000 men led by Chu Teh to form the first Red Army and become its political commissar. Chu, an old Szechuan warlord, became its commander-in-chief.

Unable to operate underground in Shanghai, the young members of the party Central Committee moved to "soviets" in Hunan and Kiangsi which Mao had set up. There the new Red Army fended off a series of offensives from the vastly superior forces of Chiang Kai-shek.

Outmaneuvered and rapidly weakening, the party decided to break out from its east coast "soviets" and join forces with other Communist armies in the west.

By then Mao was again in the dog house, dismissed as chairman of the Chinese "soviet" government. The young Turks were in command. In January 1934, the first movement began in what is now known as "The Long March." It ended in Shensi province in the winter of 1935 after an 8,000-mile fighting trek through some of the most forbidding terrain in China.

A year after the start of the march, led by the youthful Central Committee into frontal attacks which cut the Red Army's 120,000-man strength in two, Mao regained control of the party at Tsunyi, in Kweichow province.

From Yenan, the cave city next to the Gobi Desert which became the Red capital, Mao organized a united front campaign to persuade Chiang Kai-shek that all Chinese should bury their differences and form a common defense against the invading Japanese.

This policy culminated in December 1936 at Siang, where Chiang had been taken captive by Chiang Hsueh-liang, pro-Red Kuomintang commander of Manchurian forces. Chiang Kai-shek agreed to the united front and the Communists entered another period of cooperation with their old enemy.

Cooperation with the Kuomintang government, which had its wartime capital in Chungking, lasted only a few years. A Kuomintang attack on the New Fourth Communist Army ended the honeymoon in 1941. By the end of World War II in 1945, the ties between the two were tenuous. Mao approved the postwar mediation mission of Gen. George C. Marshall of the United States, and Chou En-lai participated. But it broke down in 1947, and China's civil war flared up once more.

The Communists were driven out of Yenan in that same year, but the well-trained armies of Lin Biao in Manchuria turned the tables, and in 1949 the Nationalists were driven from the mainland.

From 1949 to 1959, Mao was concurrently chief of state and chairman of the party Central Committee. His bold plans for the great industrial leap forward of 1958 backfired and critics sprang up, among them Defense Minister Peng Teh-huai, who resented using the army for construction work. Peng lost his job, but Mao also followed, giving way to the party realists headed by Liu Shao-chi.

Mao traveled to Moscow in 1949, where he met Josef Stalin and signed, after hard bargaining, the Chinese-Soviet Treaty of Friendship and Alliance, later to become virtually a dead letter. The concessions in trade and commerce wrung out by Stalin in exchange for relatively modest financial aid of $500 million embittered Mao and persuaded him against ever relying on foreign aid again.

On a second visit to Moscow in 1957, Mao perceived that the Soviet-induced thaw inside Russia and among its satellites would lead to crisis in international communism. This was the beginning of the ideological war between the two Communist giants.

Mao's feelings about Moscow were reinforced in 1960 when the Chinese-Soviet quarrel neared a flashpoint and the Russians withdrew thousands of technicians and large industrial projects.

Natural calamities that produced bad harvests, combined with the mistakes of the great leap forward, plunged China into recession. Yet Mao persisted in organizing the rural communes which, he later insisted, had proved their worth.

Concerned about the possibility that the Russians might attack, Mao encouraged development of nuclear weapons. The first Chinese atom bomb was exploded in the Takla Makan Desert of Sinkiang province in October 1964.

May lose children again

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — It took six years, but Charles and Darlene Alsager won custody of their children last Christmas despite a court ruling branding them "mentally deficient." Now they face losing their children again.

The Polk County Department of Social Services filed a custody petition Wednesday. The department said it feared for the safety of the seven children — four boys and three girls, 10 months to 14 years old — who still live with the family. The eldest son, 18 years old, no longer lives at home.

The county petition cited alleged incidences of sexual abuse and incest among the children, threats by two Alsager boys to kill two other children, a threat by Mrs. Alsager to kill the entire family and other problems plaguing the Des Moines family.

"Being alive in a foster home situation is better than being dead where they are," said Quentin Emery, director of the social services department.

Last New Year's Eve, after the family was reunited, Mrs. Alsager said: "People have told me I'm stupid to fight for my kids, but I'm fighting for those people the same as for me. We had all eight of our children at home for Christmas and that's something to celebrate. I just hope everyone had as merry a Christmas."

Three of the children had remained with the family throughout the long legal fight. But five of the children were taken from the family in June 1969 by a juvenile court.

The parents had been found "mentally deficient" after tests indicated intelligence quotients in the lows 80s. Experts say IQ's of 90 to 120 are considered normal and that an IQ of 80 is usually considered "dull normal."

The children were placed in foster homes, but a U.S. District Court judge last December ruled that a juvenile court hearing at which parental rights were terminated had been unconstitutional.

The Alsagers were not available for comment on the petition filed in Polk County Juvenile Court charging that they had failed to adequately care for their children. It asked that the county be allowed to take custody of them.

Wallace says bedroom tapes domestic matter

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace says the discovery of a taping system in his bedroom is a "domestic matter between my wife and myself" and that politics has nothing to do with it.

"This happened in my bedroom between me and my wife," Wallace said at a news conference Wednesday. "What happens between me and my wife, as long as it doesn't affect the state of Alabama or my service as governor, remains the business of me and my wife."

His brief, sometimes halting remarks came in response to reports that an extensive taping system had been discovered by state troopers at the mansion.

The reports, quoting unidentified sources, said the system had been installed without Wallace's knowledge but apparently with the knowledge of his wife, Cornelia.

One report said that when Wallace was informed of the taping system and hundreds of recordings of his business and personal calls, he ordered his wife out of the mansion and threatened to divorce her.

Wallace confirmed that a "device" and a number of tapes were recovered, but he refused to answer reporters' inquiries about specifics of the system.

He never said specifically that his wife had any knowledge of the "device."

There has been speculation of marital difficulties between the Wallaces, who were scheduled to appear together today at a reception for Rosalynn Carter, the wife of Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter.

Sources close to the 57-year-old governor reported last month that members of Mrs. Wallace's personal staff had been relieved of their duties because she was no longer staying at the mansion.

Wallace did not acknowledge any strain in his relationship with his wife as a result of the incident. He said, "I think we can better resolve our differences, if any, if the press would accept that this is purely a domestic matter."

During the news conference, Wallace expressed appreciation to his 37-year-old wife for her support following the assassination attempt in Laurel, Md., during his 1972 campaign for the presidency. He also cam-aigned for the Democratic presidential nomination this year.

Mrs. Wallace has written an autobiography, "Cornelia," which tells of her marriage to Wallace and the aftermath of the shooting that left him paralyzed from the waist down.

Mrs. Wallace has not discouraged speculation that she plans to run for governor in 1978 when her husband's term expires.

Wallace staffers found listening devices March 23 in the light fixture and in a telephone in the Atlanta office of the Wallace presidential campaign. When they were found, Wallace said, "I don't know what you learn by bugging anyone's headquarters anyway except maybe some salty language."

In June, the U.S. attorney in Atlanta said the devices probably were installed as a prank by a Wallace staffer. "This is the contention, there is no other proof to the contrary," John Stokes Jr. said.

MACON, Ga. (AP) — There should be blanket amnesty for men who fled the draft to avoid serving in the Vietnam war, says William L. Calley Jr., the former Army lieutenant convicted of murdering 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968.

"We've never been told what the Vietnam war was all about, and I don't think it's fair to hold a person accountable for refusing to participate in a war if he isn't told why," Calley said Wednesday.

Calley said he favors amnesty for draft dodgers but not for military deserters.

Calley said he believed he was chosen as a "scapegoat" for My Lai because he refused to lie about the killings. He said that his orders at My Lai were to "annihilate every living thing."

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Alf M. Landon, who is 89 years old today, says he is not ready to give up his morning horseback rides along the banks of the Kansas River.

Landon, the elder statesman of the Republican party, will observe his birthday by attending a luncheon honoring him for allowing Kansas State University to use his name for the Landon Lecture Series.

Asked about the accolades he received for his speech at last month's Republican National Convention, Landon said, "I'd be a strange politician if I wasn't pleased by the reception."

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Harland Sanders, Colonel Sanders of fried chicken aficionados, will celebrate his 88th birthday with an ascent in a seven-story-tall hot-air balloon shaped like a chicken.

"At 12:30 or 1 o'clock at Cox Park, a seven-story-tall hot-air chicken balloon will sail skyward with the Colonel aboard," Ray Callender, a spokesman for Kentucky Fried Chicken Corp., said Wednesday. "It is the shape of a chicken and the basket is made to look like a bucket of chicken." A high school band will play "Up, Up and Away," Callender said.

All this will take place Saturday: Sanders' birthday is today.

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Russian writer, has secretly moved from Zurich, Switzerland, to the United States and will make his home in Vermont, according to people close to him.

Dr. Nicholas Pervushin of McGill University in Montreal, a friend of the Nobel Prize winner, confirmed the report Wednesday but would not say where Solzhenitsyn is living now.

Solzhenitsyn was in Vermont last summer for a Russian seminar at Norwich University. Reports then indicated he was looking for property in Vermont.

Sources in Zurich said Solzhenitsyn left Switzerland early in August because of alleged harassment by Soviet secret police.
