Kennedy suggests tax cut to handle unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, at the brink of a 1980 challenge to President Carter, suggests it may take a tax cut soon to cope with rising unemployment, and tougher wage-price guidelines to cope with inflation.

Insisting that he hasn't decided whether to run. Kennedy said he has been "heartened and encouraged" by the support generated in the 10 days since he said he'd consider it.

The Massachusetts senator said he had decided by Labor Day "that I at least would not preclude the possibility of candidacy."

Always before. Kennedy had said he expected Carter to run and intended to support him. But he said he reconsidered during the summer at the urging of congressional colleagues and other supporters.

He said his family approved, and he also concluded that a challenge to the incumbent president would not divide the Democratic Party more than it already is divided.

'I became convinced that the divisions that existed in the Democratic Party and in the country existed today ... and were very deep-scated, and they would be there whether I was a candidate or not." he said in an interview with The Associated Press on Friday.

While Carter supporters contend a Kennedy challenge could be so divisive as to make the Democratic nominee vulnerable to a Republican in the general election, the senator said past contests have seemed to "energize the party, bring new people in.

He said those factors and, most important. "my own deep concerns about the direction of the nation, our ability to deal with many of the problems that we're facing here in this country, about the mood of the nation." led him to consider running.

Kennedy said his decision is not made yet, and he doesn't know when it will be. But he also said that if he runs, he expects to compete in the Iowa Democratic caucuses. They will open the delegate selection process on Jan. 21, and to run there, he would need some time to organize and campaign.

He said economic problems, and the way Carter is addressing them, are one of his principal concerns, and will weigh heavily in his decision about 1980

Kennedy offered no specific alternatives to Carter economic policies, but questioned whether the president's leadership can inspire confidence that such problems as inflation and recession will be handled

"It's back to whether the people have a sense of confidence that he can deal with these issues. I think that's the matter of deepening and increasing concern to people as we come to the 1980s." he said.

On Thursday, an AP-NBC News poll showed only 19 percent of those questioned rated Carter's work excellent or good. It was the lowest overall job rating for an American president in 30 years.

Asked what he would do differently. Kennedy said "the way we inflation adviser Alfred E. Kahn. He said that "leaves som come to grips" with rising prices and unemployment will set a course for the early 1980s.

I today don't call for a tax cut, but I think we are going to have to be sensitive to the need for that over, potentially, the latter part of this year and the first part of next." he said. "How that is shaped. formulated, is going to be a very important choice and decision by the dministration.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said Friday that "at the moment, it would be inappropriate to consider a tax cut." Carter said on ... Iv 16 that "if unemployment starts getting too high, then I will take action." probably to lower the payroll taxes that finance Social Security

But nine days later, he spoke out against Republican tax-cutting proposals. And administration economic officials have been playing down the possibility of payroll tax cuts.

Kennedy also said he thinks people are confused about the Carter administration's commitment to wage-price guidelines. He said Americans don't know how sincere the president is about his own program.

He said voluntary guidelines worked in the early 1960s. "As a technique, it has merit." But he said it sometimes seems the guidelines are not really the president's, but only a project of confusion on this

Again. Kennedy did not offer specifics as to how he would make the guidelines more forceful. Like Carter, he opposes mandatory wage and price controls.

Carter announced the current guidelines last Oct. 24. to be effective for one year. A revised program is due soon.

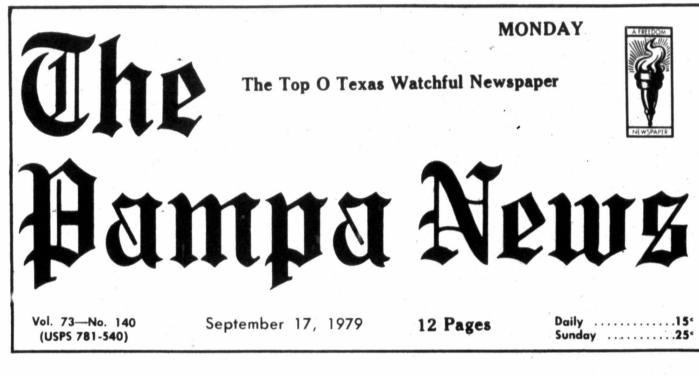

The current standards call for wage increases to be held to a maximum of 7 percent, and for price increases to be held one-half of one percent below the average increases of the last two years.

Despite that program, consumer prices this year have increased at an annual rate of more than 13 percent.

The administration is trying now to fashion a compromise that will enlist the support of organized labor for revised guidelines.

On other points. Kennedy: -Said he anticipates "a heavily-contested battle" for the nomination if he runs, and does not believe that Carter would withdraw as a candidate no matter what happens in the primary elections.

-Said it is "clearly a possibility" that Chappaquiddick. the accident in which Mary Jo Kopechne drowned in Kennedy's car 10 years ago, will be raised during the campaign. "I'd respond to questions about it. as I have." he said.

Blazes consuming Southern California

East Germans use homemade balloon to flee communist rule

NAILA. West Germany - Four children and four adults bet their lives on a hot air balloon made of nylon and bedsheets and drifted through the darkness of East Germany, hitting the jackpot - freedom across the border in West Germany Peter Strelzek, an airplane mechanic who designed the escape craft, told reporters Sunday the 12-mile, 20-30 minute flight was his second attempt to escape by balloon from his communist-ruled homeland.

"It was no longer possible for us to lie to our children and put up with the political conditions in East Germany." he said He, his wife and two children, along with stonemason Andreas Wetzel, his wife and their two children, got onto a gondola made of an iron plate. Gas burners were fired, filling the handsewn envelope with hot air

at a field near Lobenstein and the balloon rose aloft

Borne toward the south by a good breeze. the refugees flew over the "death strip" border and put down in this Bavarian town. far from the border's electrified fences and minefields. It was believed to be the first time refugees had used a balloon to cross the border.

During the flight, the children rode in the middle of the 18-square-foot iron plate, and were huddled around bottles of gas used to fuel the fire that heated air in the 5.230-cubic-yard balloon. The adults rode on four iron rods projecting laterally from the plate, each grabbing onto inch-thick ropes attaching the gondola to the balloon. Strelzek said he designed the balloon using principles he learned from his work with airplanes.

The escape began about 1:30

Strelzek told reporters, and the balloon climbed to 8,000 feet in the moonless sky as the breeze pushed it toward freedom.

As the balloon came down, it was met by two West German police officers who had raced to the landing site. thinking the floating object might be a UFO.

"Are we in the West here?" one of the balloonists reportedly asked.

"We were convinced that we were in the West even before the police officers came because we saw a modern farm machine on the field unlike anything we have," Strelzek told a reporter.

He said his first attempt, during the night of July 4, ended 220 yards short of the border, but the balloonists were undetected and they returned home

After their arrival in Naila, the mayor reportedly offered the families housing and

Look for the label

Stanley Marcus, retired head of the prestigious and pricey Neiman-Marcus stores, has joined the growing list of curmudgeons -- Malcolm Forbes, Andy Rooney and William Safire, to name a few --who percieve something silly and even crass in the trendy use of designers' initials.

The letters "YSL" all entangled, an identifiable "P" drawn with a swirl and a right angle -- the right people recognize these insignia instantly, whenever they show up on a shirt pocket, a necktie or a pocketbook, as the markings of Yves. St. Laurent or Pierre Cardin.

Then there are those designers ("Paris and New York") who tear the fig leaf right off and scrawl their names out on the mass-produced dresses and luggage and corkscrews: Diane von Furstenberg, Christian Dior, Pierre Cardin again... "Someone who starts out creating a dress line cannot." Marcus warns, "...oversee the design of ballpoint pens. shower curtains, luggage, furniture, sheets, shoes and cosmetics. Even Leonardo da Vinci would have trouble doing that

Almost exclusively, it is the upwardly mobile, bless them, who don fashions emblazoned with these labels -- which, Marcus says, make these people look like "walking billboards." The real paragons of taste, the genuine old money, still walk round in understated elegance. (We say that even as the multiple-P'd necktie gets caught in the type writer.)

We won't belabor the socioeconomic meaning of this phenomena. which has just about-superseded the ubigitous alligator of the mid-Seventies, other than to praise, unabashedly, the system which makes quality merchandise accessible to ever-broadening segments of the market

The obvious criticism (which we share) is that a label does not a quality item produce. That's commonsense: examine the merchandise; don't judge a book, etc. Where it will end we haven't the slightest; perhaps in that delicious scene envisioned by cartoonist Bill Hamilton, in which a distinguished-looking hardware store salesman is hawking saws and pliers with this singsong query: Would you like to see our signed designer's model?

Still, there is something intriguingly positive about this label-mania. Positive because it is so wonderfully capitalistic. And it is as ancient as it is trendy. The whole idea of signature, of being so proud of one's product that one should be willing to sign it with some sort of distinguishable marking, has much to commend it to these times of the fall-apart automobile and the on-the-fritz toaster. Everybody has a slew of shoddy merchandise complaints. And the copyright and trademark laws seem to be ever-changing that nobody knows even if the government is protection any more. So why not market one's signature? Surely we could do worse than the practices of Tiffany, Waterford, or Paul Revere's silver?

Is Nuclear Power worth the risk

Pro: The following statement represents the position of the Atomic Industrial Forum.

Issue and Debate

The answer to this question will have to come from the American public, which bears the risks and enjoys the benefits of nuclear power.

To make this important decision, the public must have an understanding of the real risks from nuclear power; the real risks from producing power by any means -- coal. oil, hydro, or nuclear -- and the risks of not having enough

There is still another factor which figures in this equation: the benefits of producing electricity and the part that nuclear power plays in supplying our electrical energy.

Nuclear power now produces almost 13 percent of all electricity in this country. Some areas are extremely dependent on the atom for their electrical needs. Vermont gets about 79 percent of its electricity from nuclear power. Maine gets 65 percent, Connecticut, about 53 percent; and one-half of Nebraska's electricity comes from the atom.

The accident at Three Mile Island nuclear station in March in a sense validated the conservative safety design of nuclear power plants. An unexpected combination of human and mechanical failures lead to an accident hardly dreamed of by the engineers who designed the plant. Still, the layer-upon-layer of safety systems in the plant prevented a harmful radiation release. After Three Mile Island, the commercial nuclear accident toll remains zero and zero -- zero fatalities and zero injuries to the public.

The major damages from the Three Mile Island accident appear to be the financial health of the owner utility and to the public's confidence in nuclear safety. The financial damage to the utility and the cost to its customers will be considerable, mostly in the cost of higher-priced power to replace the nuclear-generated electricity lost.

The public's concept of nuclear safety has also suffered. But, time and distance from the hyusteria generated in the aftermath of the accident, plus calm and reasoned examination of what really happened at Three Mile Island - and as importantly, what did not happen -- should show the public that nuclear power is safe and will be made even safer as a result of the lessons learned

Considering the real risks of nuclear power means balancing those risks against the toll from production and consumption of other sources of energy. We have come to accept deaths in mining, oil fires, off-shore drilling, pipelines, refineries, chemical plants and dam failures. They have become a part of our way of life and are almost invisible.

There remains the risk of not having enough energy. With our experience of oil - gasoline shortages, consider a United States with serious electrical energy shortages. Consider the effect on lives (not just life-styles) of industry closings, unproduced food, lost jobs--the New York City blackouts gone regional, or even national.

Nuclear power remains the most economical of all sources of electricity among the currently available technologies. In 1978, that meant a production cost of 1.5 cents per kilowatt hour for nuclear, 2.3 cents for coal, and 4 cents for a kilowatt hour produced by oil.

As important as these consumer savings are -- more than $3 billion in 1978-even more important is the savings in our dwindling supplies of fossil fuels. In 1978, nuclear saved the equivalent of 135-million tons of coal, or 2.9-trillion cubic feet of natural gas or 470-million barrels of oil. Coal and oil have many other uses: gasoline, heating oil, petrochemicals, medicines, fertilizers and synthetic gas and oil, for which they are unique and irreplaceable. Uranium has no peaceful use other than heating water to produce steam for electricity generation

The United States has about a third of the world's uranium, and if we use it wisely it could last us well into the next century while we develop fusion, solar, geothermal, wind, wave and other forms of energy -- perhaps even some not known today. If we do, we could leave behind a world that is ecologically, economically, and politically sound, with supplies of fossil fuels remaining for those who follow us

The nuclear option -- safe, clean and economical-- must not be sicetracked

by fears of what might have happened, but didn't. at Three Mile Island. The public must understand the real risks of nuclear power, the crisks associated with any form of energy production and consumption, and the benefits from having enough energy

· All these factors must be weighed to answer the question, "Is nuclear power worth the risk?

Con: The following statement represents the position of the National Resources Defense Council, Inc.

The unique safety hazards posed by nuclear plants require frequent unplanned shutdowns of these facilities, either to prevent an accident or as the consequence of an accident. When this occurs, utilities are quick to calculate the enormous economic penalties which they will force ratepayers to bear to cover the cost of replacement power--often exceeding $1.000.000 per day.

Although the nuclear industry frequently claims that the Federal Price-Anderson Insurance Act guarantees that victims of the operation of nuclear power plants will be fully compensated for any losses which they might suffer, in fact there has been no reimbursement for the most significant. economic costs which have been imposed on the public as the result of the operation of nuclear power plants.

When a nuclear power plant has an unplanned, safety-related shutdown, who should bear the economic cost? The answer to that question depends upon how the economic risk was originally assumed. Under today's law, the utility is free to assume these economic risks, confident that, if the risk materializes, the cost will be paid by ratepayers, not by shareholders. In this situation, there is little incentive for the utility to be cautious. Thus, its assessment of the probability and magnitude of the risk is often optimistic. Legislation is needed to correct that unfortunate situation.

Why should a utility be free to make all sorts of optimistic assumptions about the costs of a nuclear power plant and then stick the ratepayers with the higher costs if the assumptions are invalid? A far more sensible approach would be to require the utility to divulge the assumptions upon which its decision to go nuclear was based, and then force the utility to absorb the cost if the assumptions turn out to be incorrect. The utility would be compelled to publicly declare its assumption about capital cost, fuel cost, cost of borrowing, need for higher rates to finance the venture, cost of storing and disposing of the nuclear waste, cost of decommissioning the plant, anticipated number of unplanned shutdowns of the plant, cost of adding new safety equipment to compensate for previously undiscovered safety problems, comparative costs of the nuclear power plant and alternatives to it, including conservation and solar power, and numerous other assumptions which would necessarily go into a careful judgment about whether to order a nuclear plant.

This full disclosure would not prevent anyone from ordering a nuclear plant. but it would require the utility to take a serious and realistic look at the risks of nuclear power and alternatives to it before ordering a nuclear plant. It would require that, if the assumptions used and disclosed were erroneous, the entity making the erroneous assumptions would pay, and not the ratepayer. If such a law had been on the books when Metropolitan Edison ordered the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, the ratepayers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania would not be faced with the enormous rate increases which that utility is seeking or, better yet, the plant would have never been built.

If Three Mile Island had not been built, steps would have been taken to assure that less energy was needed by improving the efficienc of industrial processes, improving the efficiency of goods and services generally, and taking advantage of solar energy to provide heating of homes and hot water. Every reliable study prepared in the last five years concludes that, with energy efficiency and solar energy, we can have a vigorous and growing economy with more employment and a lower energy cost than bulding more nuclear power plants.

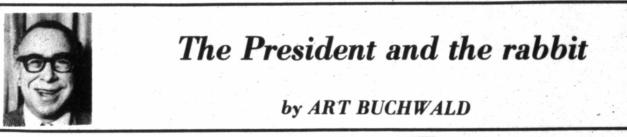

The problem is to force the utilities and decisionmakers to consider these facts realistically in deciding whether to build nuclear power plants.

Moore emphasizes the increasingly offensive cast of Soviet naval power and shipbuilding programs. New Soviet aircraft carriers and amphibious warfare ships bespeak an emerging offensive

It is rumored that Ham Jordan had even considered giving everyone who worked for Mr. Carter a loyalty test to find out who believed the President's bunny story and who didn't.

For the first time since he took office Mr. Carter stopped smiling. He ordered Jody Powell to blow up the part of the photo which highlighted the thing in the water. Then he called in the staff again. "Well, is it a rabbit or isn't it?"

They finally decided by a vote of 5 to 4 that it was a rabbit. Jody Powell, who voted with the majority, went ahead and released the story.

Thus the country was assured that a President who had promised Americans when he took office that he would never lie to them had once again kept his word.

Scouts start push for new members

Fall is the time of year when many organizations start membership drives, and the Boy Scouts of America are no exception. The Boy Scouts, a part of America for decades, have begun a drive to get area boys interested in the basic goal of scouting - creating good citizens.

Young members of the family may enter Cub Scouts if they are between the ages of eight and 10, while older boys may enter one of the nine Boy Scout troops in Pampa.

But Scouting is not only for the male members of the household. If your son or daughter is between the ages of 14 and 21 he or she may participate in the Pampa Exploring program. It offers programs. dealing with medical services, the Big Brother-Big Sister Program or High Adventure for those young people interested in outdoor recreation.

The Boy Scouts of America is founded on the principles of citizenship training, character development, personal fitness, outdoor skills and duty to God and country.

Membership rallies will be held in all Pampa elementary schools for Cub Scouts. Tonight will be the first of the meetings in a drive to get boys interested in scouting.

Members of the new Cub Scout pack 411 will meet along with Boy Scouts at Lamar Elementary School at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria

A special program will be held at the new Pampa Mall as the 1979 Coca Cola Pushmobile Derby gets underway Nov. 4.

For information about how your son or daughter may participate in the Pampa area scouting program, call the Boy Scout office at 669-6845.

Connally role in bank charter being studied

DALLAS (AP) - The Senate Banking Committee is examining the circumstances surrounding the charter of a Dallas bank whose original stockholders included a son and seven former aides of Republican presidential candidate John Connally.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story in its Sunday editions that investigators are looking into the possibility of Connally using influence to secure the charter for Love Field National Bank of Dallas.

The bank was chartered in 1972 while Connally was secretary of the "treasury

"It ought to be emphasized this investigation (on bank charters in general) is not for the sole and principal purpose of looking at Connally's dealing when he was secretary of the treasury." said Kenneth Mclean, staff director of the Senate Banking Committee.

"It happened to turn up in the context of a much broader investigation, and we took a little closer look at it.'

Connally was asked Friday if his son's position as an initial stockholder might have been a conflict of interest.

PAMPA NEWS Monday, September, 17, 1979 3 Tower: Kennedy to be Democratic Party choice

DALLAS (AP) - Sen. John Tower, saying his Democratic colleagues in Washington consider Jimmy Carter a "politcal embarrassment," predicts Sen. Edward Kennedy will be the Democratic nominee in 1980

Tower told the State Republican Executive Committee here Saturday that Kennedy is "eminently beatable" - if the GOP can make it through a potentially cutthroat nomination process.

"It may be becoming more clear now who the Democratic nominee will be rather than who the Republican nominee will be," he said.

The senator said that any of the leading potential GOP candidates - assumed to be George Bush, Ronald Reagan and John Connally - "easily have (Kennedy's) number.

"I can't see how we Republicans can do anything but expect to elect a Republican president next year." Tower told the committee members.

But he warned that a bloody in-party nomination fight could hurt the GOP

"Some people have said the Republicans have the singular talent for snatching defeat from the jaws of victory." he said.

At the SREC session, the committee approved a 5,000-signature petition process for candidates who want to get on the May primary ballot. The committee also chose Houston as the site of the June GOP state convention.

Tower's prediction of a Kennedy nomination was echoed by other Texas GOP leaders. State Sen. Betty Andujar of Fort Worth, a Republican national committee member, said, "If this is the dish we have to eat sometime it may as well be now.

Ray Hutchison, a former state GOP chairman and now a Connally supporter, also predicted a Kennedy run for the White House. Hutchison said a Kennedy-Connally race would be a "classic" confrontation that would draw the largest voter turnout ever.

"Kennedy clearly is the choice of the overwhelming number of the 1979 variety of Democrat," Hutchison said, adding that Democrats seem more liberal than in the past.

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas, sounding as if he were leading a pep rally. predicted a GOP win in 1980

Dallas fire officials continue apartment blaze investigation

DALLAS (AP) - Dallas fire officials were still investigating the cause Monday of a devastating fire of "suspicious origin" that leveled 10 buildings of a north Dallas apartment complex causing an estimated at $3 million damage. No one was injured.

About 64 occupied units were destroyed and an additional 24 units in another complex under construction were leveled.

Oney said damage from the blaze would exceed $3 million, an increase from earlier estimates of $1.5 million. The investigator said the blaze was one of the costliest in Dallas history.

Remarkably, there were no injuries reported from the giant blaze. Oney said.

"Not even any pets were killed as far as I know." he said. Firefighters said the fire spread rapidly because the buildings in the complex had wood shingles and at least two sides of the building were made of wood.

"These wood-shingled roofs are like pouring gasoline on a fire," said Battalion Chief Travis Zuber. "If we had had 15-20 mph winds, it would have gotten the whole complex."

"I told someone to call the fire department and I started banging on doors," said Morel.

Sharon Knorr told of escaping moments before the fire swept through her apartment.

Outdoor pool game

played with mallet

By GREG HARDIN News Managing Editor

Well, you think you have seen just about everything, right? Wrong!

Something new has come to Pampa and the world - outdoor pool played with a mallet instead of a pool cue

Alvin Stokes, a local inventor, and his partner. Allen Young, have been working for more than three years on their unusual looking invention but are now ready to show it to the world.

"I got the idea from watching my nephews play croquet." Stokes said of his invention, which he plans to market for the tidy sum of $1,500 a table.

Stokes said the larger than life size pool table was not hard to construct but that the orginial idea "took a lot of roadwork.

Stokes, a former Cabot employee, said his invention looks like it will be a very profitable idea.

"The guys that build those large entertainment centers said they would buy all we could get." Stokes said. "And we are talking with Holiday Inn now to put them alongside the pools at their hotels.

The invention looks about the same as a regular pool table but on a much larger scale. The balls are the size of hard balls and the pockets are in direct proportion with the size of the balls.

"You can't use "English" on the balls like you would on a regular pool table so the rules of the game had to be changed." Stokes said as he swung a large wooden and plastic mallet to break the balls. "Instead of one shot at any one ball, you get two. The first shot is for position and the second to make your ball with

Those people who like to sit on the tables at the local billiard parlors should love the outdoor game since you stand on the table. stabilized by aluminum support legs, while you make your shots. The local inventor plans to construct five outdoor tables a day in a White Deer factory he and his partner have recently completed work on.

"They are not hard to make." Stokes said. "You just have to have a little patience and have all the right materials on hand."

The tables, which are made of weather proof rubber bumpers and indoor - outdoor playing surface. will not go on sale to the general public immediately but plans are being made by Stokes to arrange for everyone to be able to stand on their own pool table while playing eight ball.

DR · LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 18 years old and recently my four-month-old baby daughter died. The doctor said it was a crib death but nobody can tell me what a crib death is. She wasn't sick or anything. She played and laughed the night before she died. The doctor said she was perfectly healthy. If she was, why did she die? I've got to know what a crib death is, so please help me.

DEAR READER - This problem goes by several different names. It's also called sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS). I'm sorry to tell you that no one knows for certain what causes these deaths. They're most apt to occur during the first year of life. There are over 10,000 infants who die from this problem each year. It's the most common cause for infant death in the first year of life.

Old Testament accounts refer to such deaths and it seems to have been just as frequent in the 18th and 19th century as it is today. So it's not exactly a product of modern civilization.

There have been an infinite number of theories presented as to what causes the sudden death in an apparently healthy baby. No doubt there is more than one cause. The most prevalent view now is that it's associated with the immature development of the vital centers in the brain, particularly those that control respiration. Research in recent years has shown that certain sleep patterns, particularly those associated with periods when the baby may stop breathing temporarily, may be associated with SIDS.

Perhaps the most important thing I could do for you is to tell you that the baby's death has nothing whatever todo with anything you did. It is quite common for such a baby

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a normal, 24-year-old man who happens to love snakes. I have a 6-foot boa constrictor who is a wonderful pet. Nellie was born in captivity so she isn't dangerous, but whenever I take her out for an airing, most people freak out, call the police, and demand that I be locked

I never let Nellie out of my sight, so she can't possibly harm anyone, but when people see Nellie curled affectionately around my neck they practically go into shock.

Abby, everybody I know reads your column, so please say a few kind words about snakes. They make ideal pets. They don't bark, shed hair, or have to be walked. And they eat only once a month.

It's a shame that most people hate snakes without ever having met one. How did snakes get such a bad name in the first place? And, by the way, please tell your readers that a boa constrictor is non-poisonous. It kills by STRANGLING its victim. Thank you.

SNAKE LOVER

DEAR LOVER: Snakes got a "bad name" when the first one slithered around in the Garden of Eden. You are right when you say that most people hate snakes without ever having met one. Including me. And I'd just as soon leave it that way.

Sake losing ground in Japan

TOKYO (AP) - The Japanese have been drinking sake for 2,000 years - since the "Time of the Gods." But nowadays, a businessman returning home from work is likely to pass up the rice wine for a bottle of Japanese-made whiskey or a glass of beer. Still the traditional beverage at weddings, election victories and other ceremonial occasions sake has been losing out for years to the other drinks. especially among the young.

"My grandfather drinks sake but I don't really care for it because of the taste. It's also more trouble to prepare." said Jun Koike, 24, a medical student.

Sake usually is warmed and sipped from tiny procelain cups. Customarily it is served with Japanese foods like raw fish sashimi - and skewered meats and vegetables - yakitori.

So many in today's faster-paced Japan appear to believe as does Koike, that whiskey complements most any meal, helping to make Japan the world's second-largest whiskey-consuming nation after the United States.

Sake still is drunk extensively, as a random visit to the tiny bars around any major railway station will attest. But the beverage industry says overall consumption of sake has not changed appreciably for years, while whiskey and beer sales steadily increase 'We've been slow to market our product among young people. Teichiki Uchida, a spokesman for the Japan Sake Makers Association. said in an interview. "However, people born after the war grew up on beer and whiskey, and they're just not all that familiar with sake." Japanese beverage makers, whether turning out alcoholic or makes about $990 a month. soft drinks, have recognized the country's fascination --especially among the younger generation - with things foreign. and use European and American celebrities in their advertising. Suntory Ltd., which claims to be the world's third-largest distillery. employs entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. in whiskey ads on television. The rival Nikka firm features actor Orson Welles. The ads are similar to American TV ads in which the same two plug U.S.-made wines with one difference: Here they are actually seen drinking the product. Uchida said sake manufacturers can't easily afford that kind of, costly advertising. Even so, they've made the attempt, with a campaign to promote sake as a summertime drink.

More Dallas school firings expected

In one ad, it's the American singing group, the Carpenters; in another, British rock star Suzie Quatro in her zippered leather jumpsuit, urging young television viewers to try sake "on the rocks.

Nobody knows exactly when the rice wine first became Japan's national beverage, but it generally is agreed that it arrived with the cultivation of rice more than 2,000 years ago. The Kojiki -Book of Myths - noted in 712 A.D. that the gods were fond of the brew

Last year, the Japanese quaffed an average of 36 liters of beer per capita, compared with 14 liters of sake and 2.6 liters of whiskey. Sake, which is made somewhat like beer, has an alcohol content of 16 to 18 percent, depending on the brand. Japanese-made whiskey is 43 percent alcohol - 86 proof - and Japanese beer a mere 4.5 percent.

Sake is colorless and has a taste that is somewhat bland compared to whiskey, and it is suggested that once opened, the bottle be emptied fairly quickly, as sake - unlike whiskey and some wines - does not improve with age.

Sake also is cheaper than whiskey, despite government price controls that have put the cost of rice at about five times higher an in any other country

A giant 1.8-liter bottle of sake goes for anywhere from $4.70 to $11.30. Suntory's line of 13 whiskey brands also varies widely in price, the most expensive being "Za Uisuki" - the whiskey - at the equivalent of $225 a bottle. According to the National Tax Agency, the average worker

For the Japanese market, suntory produces about 220 different beverages including soft drinks, fruit juices and beer in addition to its line of liquors. But not sake.

"The fall in sake sales." says company spokesman Takeshi Kodama. "is due in part to the change in lifestyles and eating habits among the Japanese.

But even suntory does not foresee the day when sake will disappear completely.

In fact, said Kodama, the company believes it might even catch on abroad and is exporting something called "Shogun." a blend of sake and grape wine, to the United States. Some 13,000 cases of the concoction already have been sold there this year, he said.

Citizenship Day

Citizenship Day honors American citizens born in the United States, as well as naturalized citizens born in foreign countries. People born in the United States become citizens of the nation and the state in which they live automatically. The basic rights and duties of American citizens are outlined in the U.S. Constitution, and in the constitutions of the individual states. These include the right to vote, the freedom to speak out on important issues, and the duty to obey our country's laws. Since 1952, Citizenship Day has been observed each year on September 17, the date on which the Constitution was signed in 1787.

BASEBALL NY eliminated; Angels, KC face crucial series

By the Associated Press

For all intents and purposes, the season is over for the New York Yankees. But it's just beginning for the California Angels, according to Manager Jim Fregosi

"All season long, everyone knew it would be going down to the last two weeks." says Fregosi as he prepares to start a vital four-game series in Kansas City tonight

California holds a three-game lead in the American League West over Kansas City as a result of Sunday's games, when the Angels lost a 2-1 decision to Milwaukee and the Royals were beaten 6-3 by Seattle

"The fact is we're in a situation now that we're in front and Kansas City has to beat us," said Fregosi. "We beat them three times in our ballpark and three times in their ballpark. We have good pitching. they have good pitching, and you knew no one was going to run away with the division title

Meanwhile, the defending world champion Yankees lost 8-4 in 12 innings to Detroit and were eliminated in the AL East race. The Yankees had won two straight world championships and three consecutive league pennants.

The Baltimore Orioles virtually sewed up the East with a 13-3 rout of Boston that reduced their division-clinching "magic number" to four. Any combination of four Baltimore victories or losses by Milwaukee will give the Orioles the East title.

Socialist bloc holds edge in Swedish elections

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The opposition socialist bloc held a one-seat edge over the governing non-socialist coalition today in Sweden's general election, but with the conservatives posting the biggest gains, mail-in votes from traditionally conservative areas could easily reverse the standings.

Preliminary returns from all 357 municipalities in Sunday's voting gave the opposition Social Democrats and Communists a 175-174 parliamentary majority over the conservative Moderate Alliance Party, the Center Party and the Liberals of the non-socialist bloc after an estimated 40,000 mail-in votes have been counted Wednesday. Experience shows that the non-socialists get the bulk of the mail-in votes and since the race was in a dead heat just a few thousand votes could tip the balance.

But statisticians predicted the pendulum would swing to 175-174 for the non-socialist bloc

"What is essential is that we have turned the trend upwards." Social Democratic leader Olof Palme commented said. "The party emerges strengthened and united from the election campaign.

The Social Democrats saw their vote percentage shrink in three consecutive elections all of them with Palme at the helm — and the 52-year-old leader's political career appeared to be on the line in the latest campaign.

The Social Democrats gained a modest 0.6

percent for a total of 43.6 percent, or 2.3 million of the 6 million eligible voters. This would give the Social Democrats 155 seats - up three - in the 349-seat Parliament.

Palme, who spent the past three years in opposition following defeat at the polls in 1976 after 44 years of Social Democratic rule, said he would form another Social Democratic minority government if offered the premiership again.

The Communists, in their best result in 30 years, increased by 0.9 percent to 5.6, adding three parliamentary seats for a total of 20. They would be expected, as always, to back a Social Democratic government on crucial votes.

But the big winner in the elections was Gosta Bohman, 68, forceful leader of the conservative

Moderate Alliance Party, which took over from the centrists as the largest non-socialist party. Bohman, economics minister in the non-socialist coalition which fell after two years in office, advocated a lowering of taxes, a "strong economy" and a back-to-basics policy at school.

The conservatives chalked up 20.4 percent of the vote- an increase of about 4.5 percent - and 72 parliamentary seats compared to 55 before dissolution.

But Bohman was not expected to be asked to head a non-socialist government even should the mail-in votes decide the see-saw battle in favor of the non-socialists.

SUSA. Italy (AP) -Hundreds of Italians cheered an American-led expedition of five persons and two circus elephants as it crossed under an ancient triumphal arch in this Alpine town after retracing the march made 2,197 years ago by Hannibal, his army and 37 elephants.

The journey across the Alps was technically completed Saturday when the two elephants plodded into the Clarea Valley at an altitude of 3.930 feet. The group camped there overnight and arrived in Susa Sunday. The expedition set out from the tiny French Alpine village of Bramans on Wednesday.

Souvenir merchant says Pope poster bigger than Smile Button

NEW YORK (AP) - One souvenir merchant calls it "the biggest thing since the Smile Button" - the visit of Pope John Paul II to the United States

Posters and pennants usually foisted on teenyboppers at rock concerts and eager tourists now bear the pontiff's face.

And the fashion statement of the decade. the T-shirt, also has been used. One features the slogan, "I Got a Peek at the Pope" while another sports a color photo of John Paul.

The trinkets are being offered to the faithful and the curious to mark the pontiff's visit to Chicago, New York, Boston, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia and Des Moines. Iowa, next month.

"In short-term intensity, this is the biggest thing since the Smile Button," said Alan Slater, sales manager for N.G. Slater Co. - one of the nation's largest manufacturers of souvenirs. "It's like a big political year. We're neglecting some regular customers to make the pope stuff."

Slater's firm is turning out pope buttons. pins, pennants and pendants to be sold in cities John Paul will visit.

The Quaker Trademark Co. Inc., is producing two pope T-shirts. One has his name and picture and the word, "welcome" in six languages. Mark Goldstein, president of the Cornwells Heights, Pa., firm , said he expects to distribute nearly 20,000 shirts, at $5 apiece. Morton Ohren, who owns Creative Fashions Inc. in Chicago, said he has received 30,000 orders for his company's pope T-shirt. He expects to sell about 150.000 The Catholic Church also has been caught up in the souvenir whirl. Parishes in Washington, D.C., will sell an official coin. showing the pope on one side and St. Matthew's Cathedral on the other. And Vatican approved records of Masses said by the pope in three different languages will be sold for $10 through parishes and the mail during the week-long visit.

Meanwhile, the Catholic Bishops Conference has received a $75,000 grant from the Knights of Columbus to produce a film on the visit.

Some municipalities are banning street vendors and souvenir selling from the areas where religious celebrations will be held. In Chicago, for example, more than 50 vendors have been denied permission to peddle in Grant Park, where a Mass will be celebrated.

But there will be plenty of tourists near hotels and motels. Facilities in the Chicago Loop area reported sellouts as early as last week. Boston hotels also are booked solid.

The pope couldn't be coming at a worse time of the year." said Costa Androulakis. vice president of the Greater Philadelphia Hotel-Motor Inn Association. "October is the busiest month both business-wise and convention-wise. It will be very difficult to get rooms. Of course, some rooms will be available, but advance reservations will be essential.
