Hobart Street blocked by spill of acid barrels

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

Hobart Street traffic was rerouted for about two hours Wednesday afternoon when barrels of acetic acid, a corrosive agent used for oilfield purposes, spilled from an 18-wheel trailer truck and blocked three lanes.

According to witnesses of the mishap, Dale Glendon Wilson of Duncan, Okla., driver of the 18-wheeler belonging to Joe D. Hughes Trucking Co. of Houston, stopped quickly at the intersection of Hobart and Kentucky. Wilson was transporting the chemical from Celanese to Liberal, Kan., for Haliburton Services.

The sideboards holding about 80 of the 55-gallon drums broke under the strain of the 40,000 pounds of acetic acid compound rushing forward. Although over 40 barrels of the acid tumbled from the truck, only two broke open in the accident.

Jackie Wayne Gindorf of 2339 Cherokee was stopped beside the vehicle when he saw the barrels coming and "goosed" his car forward. He was not struck, but the acid did splash on the back of his 1978 Buick.

Four Pampa police units were immediately called to the scene. Determining there was no direct hazard of explosion or immediate danger from inhalation, officers cordoned off the area where the accident occurred.

A booster truck and emergency vehicle from the fire department and two ambulances were also dispatched to the location.

"Our primary concern is to dilute the chemical and wash the stuff away," Captain Ray Fisher of the Pampa Fire Department said while at the scene. He said the acetic acid was about 10 times as strong as canning vinegar, which is what it smelled like. The solution is corrosive to metal and will burn if it comes in contact with tissue, he added.

Other reports indicated the acid is not toxic or caustic, except in concentrated form. When diluted with water, it's supposed to be about as strong as vinegar.

The firemen quickly began pouring large amounts of water on the opened barrels. The broken barrels were axed open by the fire department to accelerate the loss of fluid.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said at the site. "One of our main concerns is handling the high school traffic." No other accidents occurred as a result of the re-directing of traffic, however.

Steve Vaughn, the city's civil defense coordinator who arrived on the scene with Ryzman, said the accident "constituted a hazardous material spill," which placed it under the direction of the civil defense department.

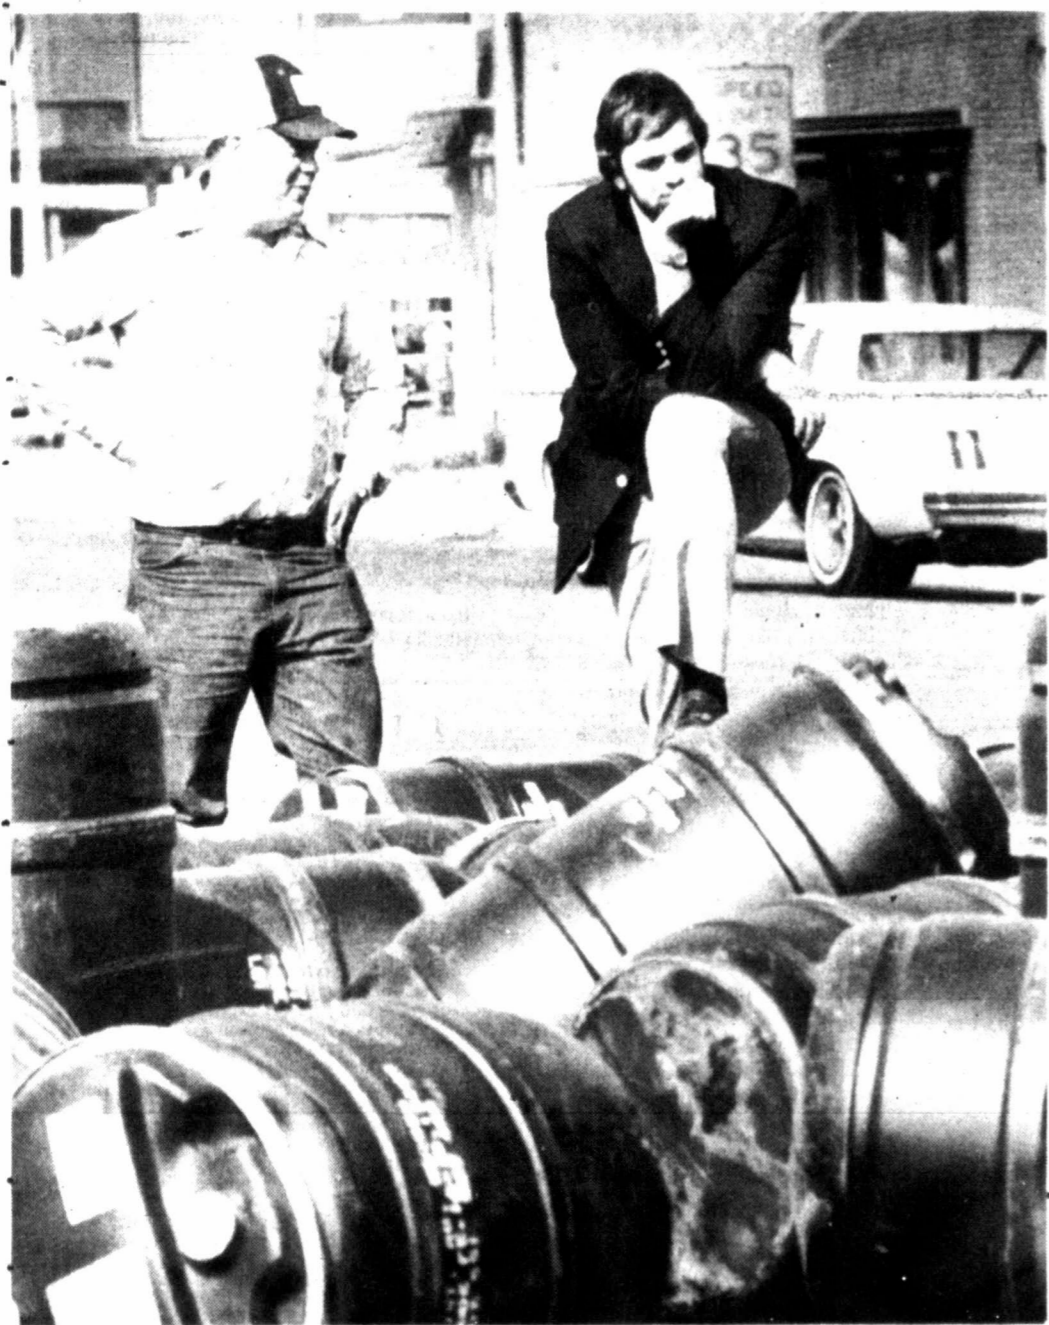

According to Vaughn, all three agencies — the police department, fire department and Metropolitan ambulance — responded according to the emergency disaster plan.

A safety crew from Haliburton was dispatched to the accident. The four specially trained men, clad in red jumpsuits and wearing safety masks and gloves, fork-lifted the barrels back onto the truck.

The Celanese safety team arrived at about 4 p.m. and recovered the broken drums.

After the fire department completely washed down the area with water, Hobart Street was reopened to regular traffic.

No injuries were reported in the incident.

PAMPA FIREMEN were called out to wash down an acetic acid spill that blocked Hobart Street traffic for about two hours Wednesday afternoon. The mishap occurred when an 18-wheeler loaded with the chemical stopped quickly at the intersection of Hobart and Kentucky streets, causing the load to shift and spill 46 barrels of the chemical onto the street. Below, driver Dale Wilson and Jackie Gindorf, whose vehicle was splashed by the acid, look over the situation. See page 5 of today's News for more on the accident. (Staff photos by Gary Clark)

Beistle found guilty, receives probated sentence of one year

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

A three-man, three-woman jury returned a guilty verdict Wednesday against 23-year-old Donald Dean Beistle of Pampa for unlawfully carrying a weapon. He was placed on one year's probation and charged no fine.

The case stemmed from a May 18 incident at 832 W. Foster in which Beistle shot Terry Brookshire twice, wounding him in the mouth and abdomen.

He was initially charged by police with aggravated assault, a felony. However, the 31st District grand jury indicted him for unlawfully carrying a weapon, a Class A misdemeanor that carries a lesser penalty.

Beistle testified Wednesday that he was not following Brookshire and his motorcycle passenger, Dale McClure, as the two had said in court Tuesday.

"I was going in the same general direction they were," Beistle said. "I'd venture to say I never followed the motorcycle past the intersection of Francis and Hobart Street on the drag."

He also testified that McClure had "very definitely tried to instigate a fight" after the two had exchanged words about 11:30 p.m. that night. Beistle later arrived at 832 W. Foster, the site of the shooting, after leaving Hobart Street.

McClure testified he had become angry with Beistle the night before (May 17) after Beistle pulled into a service station where McClure was parked.

"Later on Beistle tried to race me," McClure said. "He was sliding through the parking lot — it just hit me wrong."

He said the next night, May 18, he wanted to ask Beistle "why he did that the night before."

Both McClure and Brookshire testified that after they left, Beistle started following them — "He was close behind us all the time," Brookshire said. After exchanging words with Beistle, Brookshire said he and McClure got his (Brookshire's) car and a baseball bat and drove back on the drag.

"Yeah, they told me someone was looking for me," Beistle testified about his arrival at the Marcum Pontiac parking lot. It was shortly afterwards that McClure and Brookshire arrived at the parking lot and the shooting occurred.

High speed chase results in arrest of Pampa man

A high speed chase through the center of town resulted in the arrest of a Pampa man on the outskirts of McLean Wednesday afternoon.

Pampa police officer Patti Williams was responding to a call of a reported drunken driver in the 700 block of Nelson when she spotted the vehicle turning south from Rham onto Hobart. She attempted to stop the vehicle and it fled from the scene.

Williams pursued the vehicle through Pampa, reaching speeds of 70 miles per hour in a 35 mile per hour zone. Assisted by Officer Roger C. Scott, the chase continued to the outskirts of McLean.

The vehicle stopped once on the McLean Highway, then sped away when Williams approached the car.

Department of Public Safety trooper John Holland of McLean finally stopped the speeding vehicle about ten miles north of McLean.

William Roe, 44, of 304 Miami, driver of the runaway vehicle, was taken to Pampa police department and booked on charges of driving while intoxicated, fleeing and evading, speeding, and reckless driving. He was placed in the city jail.

Why is Talmadge above ethic rules

The equivocation of the Senate Ethics Committee toward Sen. Herman E. Talmadge's financial misconduct, even though disguised in tough language, doesn't seem to have surprised either the American media or public. That this should be true is a measure of the continuing disillusionment with Washington.

Through subpoenaed records and the sworn testimony of the senator's chief aide, the committee found that the Georgia Democrat had deposited more than $10,000 in campaign contributions in a secret bank account for his personal use, had embezzled $43,435 from the U.S. Treasury by making false claims for Senate expenses, and had funneled almost $40,000 through his secret bank account during just two years, 1973-74. The lesser charges were dropped because of insufficient evidence.

All of this was judged to be "reprehensible" by the Ethics Committee, which "denounced" Sen. Talmadge's handling of government funds for bringing the Senate into "dishonor and disrepute."

Actually, despite these sharp words, the committee didn't exactly chomp down on a bullet. One must understand the special patois of the Senate to know that this denunciation was not really what it was meant by the senators to seem.

Where the Ethics Committee failed was in its 5 to 1 vote against censure, which is generally recognized as a sort of senatorial excommunication - a denunciation with teeth and a challenge to the voters. Censure has been invoked only twice in modern times: against the late Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., for allegedly converting testimonial dinner funds for his personal use, and against the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy for ruthless investigative tactics.

Talmadge promptly hailed the committee's failure to censure him as a complete vindication and once again blamed everything on mere "errors in my office."

Only Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., voted for censure. And, although a post-Watergate cynicism may accommodate to the anti-censure vote by all the Democrats on the Ethics Committee, one can only marvel at their being joined by the likes of Republican members Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon.

It remains to be seen whether the Justice Department, which is now studying the evidence against Talmadge, will charge him with federal crimes. But we can assume he has escaped severe Senate punishment because he is simply more popular than his former colleagues in sin. He's a Southern aristocrat, one of the good ole boys, and a Capital Hill mover and shaker as Agriculture Committee chairman and second ranking Democratic member of the Senate Finance Committee.

It appears Georgia's voters will have to deal with Sen. Talmadge when he comes up for re-election next year. But then, the picture comes to mind of "Huhman" on the stump at some rural barbecue, snapping his suspenders and railing against the Yankee press and other conspirators.

Fly-by-nights

A nation that has opened its doors to the "boat people" from Vietnam must applaud the imagination and the daring of the freedom-starved "balloon people" who recently fled East Germany.

Huddled on a skimpy iron plate, the four adults and four children ascended silently in their home-made craft into the darkened skies over Lobenstein. With their passage marked by the flaring gas that heated the air to provide lifting power, the group soared over the guarded, mined border into West Germany at 8,000 feet.

They landed at the Bavarian town of Naila, met by a welcoming committee of West German police, tracking what they believed to be a UFO.

Despite the trail of flame, the two refugee families were unchallenged by Communist fighter planes or anti-aircraft fire, suggesting that East Germany officials, too, may have been bewildered by the nocturnal display.

The balloonists did not suffer the ordeal of the boat people, but their feat demanded equal courage and determination.

Americans, whose history is filled with the risks linked to the pursuit of liberty, should be the first to assure them that the goal justifies the effort.

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If minor tinkering with the hideously complex federal regulatory process has been fairly successful, then a major overhaul would be even better. Right?

Wrong. There can be too much of a good thing, and a couple of the most talked-about regulatory "reform" proposals now floating around Washington easily could do more harm than the red-tape mess they would supposedly untangle.

The two with the most surface appeal also have the greatest potential for mischief - to wit, the legislative veto so beloved by the House of Representatives and a new presidential-intervention authority proposed by a commission of the American Bar Association.

Too much reform

Both are intended to insure that elected officials who are directly accountable to the voters have the final say on major federal regulations rather than leaving such decisions to the folk George Wallace used to call "pointy-headed bureaucrats."

That's a beguiling notion, of course. Nobody likes to think of some ivory-tower technocrat dictating rules with the force of law about car safety or pollution control or energy conservation or what have you, especially when those rules may add to product costs and hence fan the flames of inflation.

The alternatives, however, may be worse. Leave aside for another column the notion of letting the president modify regulations proposed by government agencies and commissions and consider just the wisdom, or lack thereof, of the so-called legislative veto.

This is a device that the House tries to write into all kinds of laws to make federal regulations subject to a veto by one or both houses of Congress. In theory, it allows elected representatives to prevent the bureaucrats from inflicting unwise or unnecessary regulation upon the populace.

In practice, however, the legislative veto offers an open invitation for special-interest lobbyists to descend upon Capitol Hill en masse anytime they don't like the scope or content of a proposed regulation.

It is true the normal federal rule-making process is both slow and cumbersome. But it is also fair. Agencies and commissions must follow procedures that guarantee that all interested parties have a chance to be heard, that no one gets a private crack at the decision makers and that the final determination is based on factors spelled out by law.

No such safeguards exist on Capitol Hill. Lobbyists can and do meet privately with legislators to plead their cases, with no notice to the opposing side that they are doing so. Campaign contributions can open doors. Carefully orchestrated phone calls and letters from influential constituents can help sway a congressman's opinion.

The beneficiaries of any proposed regulation tend to be only faintly aware, if at all, of the blessings they will reap whereas the targets of the rule are always acutely conscious of its inconvenience and/or cost. Car buyers, for example, won't storm Congress over proposed bumper-safety standards - but bumper manufacturers most assuredly will (and have).

Federal regulatory officials, for all their supposed failings, are nowhere near as susceptible to special-interest pressures as the Congress is.

Congress has no one to blame but itself if regulatory agencies and independent commissions occasionally seem to be overreaching. For years now, Congress has passed laws mandating sweeping government action (cleaning up the nation's rivers and streams, ridding the workplace of safety and health hazards, etc.) without spelling out how these objectives should be attained.

The details have been left to the agencies to deal with through regulation, but when the politicians don't like the rules that result from this process, they turn around and scream bloody murder.

Instead of trying to second-guess the regulators through a legislative veto, Congress would be well advised to do a better job of writing its laws in the first place. That would give the rule makers firmer policy guidance without providing special-interest lobbyists a chance to achieve through concentrated political pressure what they cannot win on the merits.

Dirty gasoline gums up engines

by Paul Harvey

You may be paying more for gasoline and getting less: some of it is diluted with water.

This does not necessarily reflect hanky-panky on the part of the gas station management. It's just that what settles to the bottom of any gas station storage tank is mostly water and sediment.

As pumps pump the limit, that gunk in the bottom gets pumped into somebody's tank-and it's causing some horrendous repair bills.

Hertz Rent-a-Car at Chicago's O'Hare

Airport has 4,000 cars for hire. Maintenance manager Paul Kanab says breakdowns have become chronic. Eighty to 100 cars each week need to be towed in because of bad gasoline.

At least each of those cars needs a change of filters, at worst a total fuel system overhaul.

A Porsche-Audi distributor in the Los Angeles area recently reported to the Wall Street Journal that a brand new Porsche 911 required more than $1,000 worth of repairs because its fuel system had been clogged with watered gasoline.

The sooner we can adapt alcohol-or whatever-to-running our cars, the better.

Meanwhile, high prices and limited supplies will continue to create problems.

Auto mechanics have never made so many gas tank repairs as during this year. Water in your car's gas tank can rust the tank from the inside until eventually it eats all the way through.

The most expensive repairs are required on cars which have a complex fuel-injection system-or are diesels. If you get water in diesel fuel you start a chain reaction which can destroy the engine.

General Motors reports "hundreds of complaints" about bad quality diesel fuel.

Already one California company is selling a fuel filter which separates diesel fuel and water and this device is available on some new cars as a dealer option.

Two suggestions from Detroit car makers that can increase your chances of getting good fuel:

Never have your car's tank filled while the gasoline station is accepting a delivery from a tanker truck. That gasoline is pumped into the underground tank under tremendous pressure and stirs up the stuff at the bottom.

Also-on the road you might watch for the service stations where truckers purchase fuel: usually those fellows know a good gas station from a bad one.

P.S.-This is not an indictment of gas stations, their owners or their attendants. Most are entirely honest and would do nothing knowingly to cheat you or to hurt your car.

But for them and for us, let's hasten the development of hydrogen fuel, alcohol fuel, electric cars-so that we can sift and sort the problems relating to each of those and get our country rolling again.

Connally calls for a blunt mideast policy

WALL STREET JOURNAL - WASHINGTON - GOP presidential contender John Connally unveiled a Mideast policy that bluntly puts oil at the center of American interests in the Middle East.

In so doing, he relegated Israel to a position of secondary importance, something recent American Presidents have been unwilling to do.

Speaking at the Washington Press Club Mr. Connally said: "We must now pursue a new approach based not merely on individual Arab or Israeli interests, but on American interests."

He said Israel must make major territorial concessions to pave the way for a comprehensive peace with all its Arab neighbors. Israel must withdraw from occupied Arab territories, he said, and it also must dismantle its settlements in those territories and relinquish sole control over Jerusalem. Jews, Moslems and Christians each would control the holy places in Jerusalem, he said. The current Israeli government has rejected all these ideas.

In exchange, Mr. Connally said, the Arabs must accept Israeli's sovereignty and give up using oil as a weapon to force political change in the region.

To assure the security of all Middle East nations, the U.S. should establish a strong military presence in the region, Mr. Connally said. He proposed American air bases in the Sinai and a naval base on the island of Misirah, in the Arabian sea near Oman. Also, he called for creation of a naval fleet to be stationed in the Indian Ocean to secure oil-shipping lanes.

The speech, Mr. Connally's first on foreign policy, seems certain to attract widespread attention, something he is seeking in his struggle to overtake GOP frontrunner Ronald Reagan. For one thing, Mr. Connally became the first major presidential contender to advocate "self-determination" for the Palestinians, who he said should be permitted to create an independent state on the Jordan River's West Bank and in Gaza if they choose.

Tougher on Israel
In addition, Mr. Connally was tougher in his demands on Israel than any candidate so far. Unlike Mr. Reagan, who has staked out a pro-Israel position on the Middle East, Mr. Connally spoke bluntly about Israel's dependence on the U.S.

"Without billions of dollars in American economic and military aid, Israel simply couldn't survive," he said. "Yet it is only candid to say that support for this level of aid, in the absence of greater willingness by Israeli leadership to compromise with their neighbors, is eroding." The U.S. provides about $2 billion in aid to Israel each year.

Clearly missing was the litany of American reassurances of support for Israel that is customary in political speeches. Instead, Mr. Connally noted that there are limits on U.S. support for the Jewish state. "A clear distinction must be drawn by the U.S. between support for Israel's security - which is a moral imperative - and support for Israel's broader territorial acquisitions."

A Shrewd Politician
Mr. Connally, a shrewd politician, apparently calculates that higher oil prices and the often-inflexible positions of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin are eroding traditional American support for Israel. Mr. Connally and his aides believe that expected oil-price boosts in December and tighter oil supplies - if Saudi Arabia goes ahead with plans to cut production one million barrels to 8.5 million barrels a day - could increase public support for his Mideast policy.

Ironically, the Connally Mideast policy is much like the statements of President Carter at the outset of his administration. But Mr. Carter soon dropped the get-tough-with-Israel talk and settled for a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace, which he so far has been unable to broaden.

Mr. Connally took a swipe at the Carter policy. "The Carter administration's rhetoric can no longer disguise the lack of progress in broadening the scope of Arab-Israeli reconciliation," he said. "The only ones who gain by the present paralyzed American diplomacy are the Soviets, who are delighted at the tensions and conflicts in the Middle East."

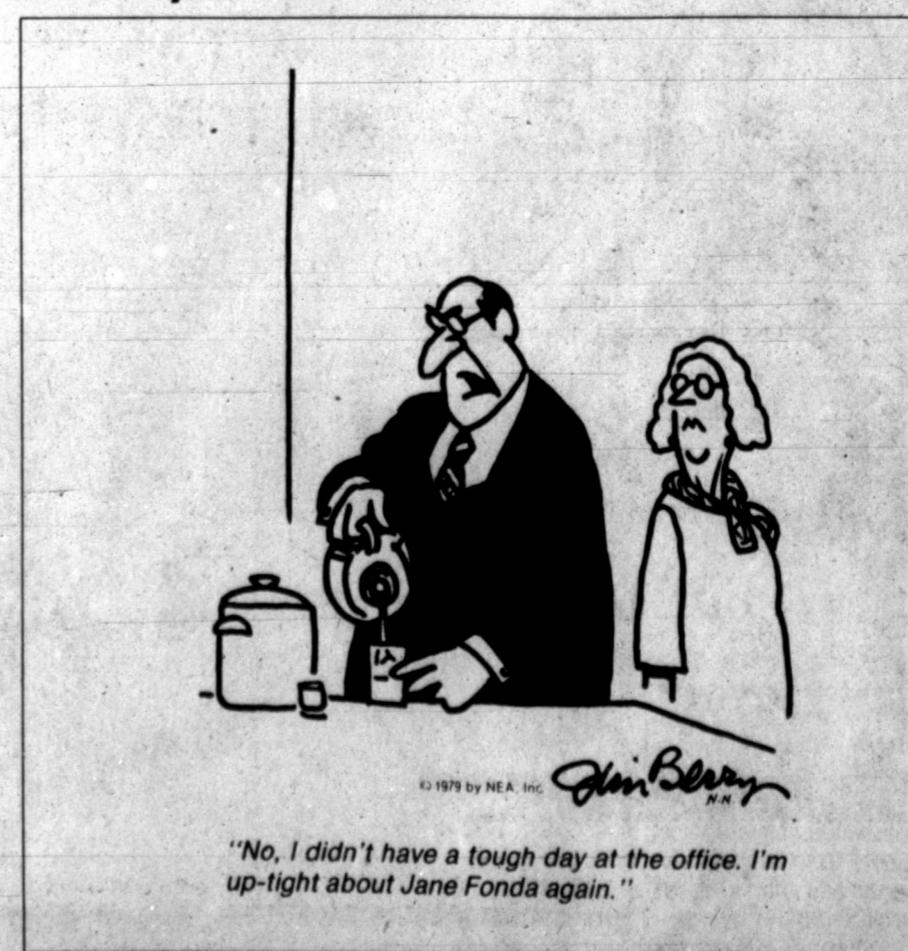

If elected, Mr. Connally, too, may find it easier to make policy than to make peace. He didn't explain how he intends to press Israel for concessions it so far is unwilling to make. In response to a question, he said he wouldn't threaten to cut American aid.

Nor did he describe how he would persuade Saudi Arabia to promise that a peace settlement means, as he put it in his speech, "a return to stable oil prices in real terms."

Mr. Connally, who is running on a platform of strong leadership, seems to believe that firm U.S. diplomacy backed up by actions such as establishing a military presence in the region will persuade Arabs and Israelis that they are better off cooperating with Washington.

Davis ends testimony; still claims he was framed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Cullen Davis' testimony ended the way it began, with Davis insisting he never tried to concoct a murder-for-hire scheme and that he was "really the victim of this whole thing."

The millionaire defendant concluded six days of cross-examination by denying he plotted mass murders with FBI informant David McCrory, a Davis employee and reiterated his insistence he thought he was acting under FBI instructions.

"You thought you were cooperating with the FBI and here they turn around and arrest you, is that right?" asked prosecutor Jack Strickland Wednesday afternoon.

"Yes, that's what happened," Davis replied. "If I understand it correctly," Strickland asked sarcastically, "you... are really the victim in this whole thing?"

"That's true," Davis snapped. "Pass the witness," Strickland said, shaking his head in mock disbelief as he concluded six days' cross-examination.

Davis, 46, began testifying nearly two weeks ago, telling his version of the events that led to his August 1978 arrest in an alleged murder-for-hire scheme.

He said he did not induce McCrory to arrange the killing of Davis' divorcee Judge Joe Eidsen or anyone else. He said he was tricked into discussing money and murder by his one-time friend turned informant and by a man who falsely identified himself as an FBI agent.

He said a man identifying himself as agent Jim Acree telephoned him 10 days before his Aug. 20 arrest and told him to "play along" with McCrory to expose an extortion plot.

However, Strickland hammered at Davis' story, bringing out the fact that Davis never demanded to see Acree after the arrest, nor did he tell his close friend, attorney Hershel Page, of the telephone call, when Page visited him Aug. 21 to discuss a Davis property.

Strickland: If what you say about having received a phone call from Jim Acree was true... Hershel Page could have been crucial to this whole matter, couldn't he?

Davis: I knew at the time he was going to be a witness, but I didn't talk to him about it.

Strickland: You mean here you are in the Tarrant County Jail, charged with solicitation of killing a judge... here's a crucial witness, and it was business as usual? You-all wanted to talk about business?

Davis: He was, in my mind, going to end up as a witness but as far as... talking to him about the case, at that time I didn't want to do it.

When Strickland suggested the reason Davis did not tell Payne was because he "hadn't thought of it yet," the defendant declared: "That's not correct."

Strickland likewise suggested that Davis did not summon Acree to appear at his bond hearing "because you had not yet concocted this story."

No," said Davis, "that's not true."

As Strickland wound up his cross-examination, he questioned Davis again about a conversation with McCrory on the day of the arrest, a talk secretly-recorded by hidden FBI experts.

McCrory: "I got Judge Eidsen dead for you."

Davis: "Good."

McCrory: "You want a bunch of people dead, right?"

Davis: "Right."

"Did it shock you a little bit when he said... I got Judge Eidsen dead for you?" Strickland asked.

"It meant nothing to me," Davis replied. "...I knew Judge Eidsen wasn't dead."

"Did it surprise you... did it make you nervous?"

"I ignored it."

"He didn't say I can get Judge Eidsen dead for you. He said 'I got Judge Eidsen dead for you... and you replied 'Good.' You don't think that's pretty incriminating?"

"I didn't see it in the light you're casting it in." At one point Strickland asked Davis if his response of 'good' would be incriminating in the context of "the tapes, a photograph of a dead judge, an ID card of a dead judge, the $25,000, the silencer, and the use of code words in your conversation."

"I don't see them as being incriminating," he replied.

Convicted killer ordered to appear before grand jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A convicted contract killer has been ordered to appear before a grand jury investigating the May 29 assassination of a federal judge, despite objections from the man's attorney that the panel is on a "fishing expedition."

Charles Voyde Harrelson, 41, sentenced to a 15-year prison term in 1973 for a 1968 murder-for-hire, and his wife, Joan Starr Harrelson, are among 36 witnesses subpoenaed to appear this week before the grand jury.

The panel is investigating the May 29 assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., and the attempted assassination last Nov. 21 of Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr. There have been no arrests in either case.

Also subpoenaed were members of the Bandidos motorcycle club, reputed New England crime leader Salvatore Michael Caruana and Peter Lynn Kruttschewski, a close associate of fugitive drug smuggler Jimmy Chagra.

The subpoenas do not mean the witnesses were involved in the two attacks, only that the grand jury feels they can shed light on the cases.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd denied Wednesday that this week's session is a fishing trip, calling Wednesday's session "worthwhile."

"It absolutely is not a fishing expedition. We have specific directions and specific goals," he said. Boyd then added, "But you can't catch a shark if you don't go fishing."

Dallas attorney Charles W. Tessmer, representing the Harrelsons, attempted Wednesday to have the Harrelsons' subpoenas quashed. He claimed the subpoenas were "a fishing expedition," "uncertain, indefinite and overbroad" and "unreasonable and oppressive."

But U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears denied the motions, saying, "You're complaining that this is a fishing expedition. It might very well be. Under my impression of the law, unless a fishing expedition becomes overly oppressive, they can do a little fishing."

Tessmer and federal officials said the Harrelsons would return Friday, but Tessmer added that he hasn't decided whether his clients should testify.

"They want to know where my client (Harrelson) was at the time of the (Wood) shooting," said Tessmer. "We have records to show where he was."

Wood, known as "Maximum John" for his stiff sentences in drug cases, was cut down outside his townhouse the morning of May 29 by a sniper firing a single .243-caliber bullet.

Harrelson was convicted in 1973 in the 1968 contract slaying of Hearne businessman Sam Degelia Jr. after a mistrial in 1971. He was discharged from parole in 1978. Harrelson was also acquitted of murder charges in the 1968 slaying of Houston carpet company executive Alan Berg.

Famed defense attorney Percy Foreman represented Harrelson in all three trials.

Approached by reporters outside the grand jury room Wednesday, Harrelson coldly said, "Why don't you leave me alone?"

Caruana, according to the FBI, answers directly to the head of the New England crime syndicate. He was reportedly a close friend of slain El Paso defense attorney Lee Chagra, Jimmy Chagra's brother.

Kruttschewski, who also uses the name "Peter Blake," remained jailed Wednesday on charges of conspiracy to violate federal drug laws and it remained doubtful whether he would appear before the grand jury.

During his trial this summer, Jimmy Chagra testified that Kruttschewski was his "very good friend."

Chagra had also listed Peter Blake as the owner of a plane another witness testified was used on a trip to Mexico to establish a marijuana smuggling operation.

Wood was scheduled to preside over Chagra's trial and defense attorneys had tried in bitter courtroom battles to have the judge remove himself from the case. Chagra has denied any involvement in the slaying.

Kerr escaped with only minor injuries when his car was riddled by bullets in an early-morning ambush as he drove to work only a few blocks from Wood's townhouse.

Kerr identifies three assailants as Bandidos motorcycle club members

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, who escaped an assassination attempt last Nov. 21, identified his assailants in a police lineup as members of the Bandidos motorcycle club, an FBI agent says in a document released in court.

FBI Special Agent Gregg Van de Loo also said in the document that a confidential informant claimed he was asked by Bandidos to participate in the assassination attempt.

The document revealed in a pre-trial hearing Wednesday was an Aug. 8 affidavit in which Van de Loo requested a warrant from U.S. Magistrate Joseph F. Leonard Jr. to search a San Antonio residence for the rifle used in the attempt on Kerr.

Kerr, 38, was involved in a massive federal crackdown on an international drug smuggling ring centered in El Paso when he was ambushed near his San Antonio home. That investigation had focused on the motorcycle club.

A gunman firing a .36-caliber automatic carbine from a back window of a stolen van riddled Kerr's car with more than a dozen bullets, but Kerr escaped serious injury by ducking behind the dashboard.

He received 24-hour protection from federal marshals after the attack, but departed the Justice Department in August for another federal job in an undisclosed location.

There have been no arrests in the case. Federal grand juries in San Antonio and El Paso, which are investigating drug smuggling, the Kerr attack and the May 29 assassination here of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., have subpoenaed numerous Bandidos and their associates.

Armed with the search warrant, FBI agents searched the residence of Daniel Adam Thomas Jr. on Aug. 8. But they did not find the carbine the informant had claimed was beneath a mattress there 13 days before.

Other weapons were found, however, and Thomas, a Bandido associate, was charged with federal firearms violations.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears denied attempts Wednesday by defense attorney Charles Butts to suppress key evidence. Butts claimed there wasn't enough legal reason for Leonard to issue the warrant.

Several members of the Bandidos, including Steven "Boo-Boo" Barbour, Timothy Kenneth "Timkin" Larson and Richard Paul

"Rick the Dick" Ricks, participated in a police lineup viewed by Kerr last March.

Kerr had undergone hypnosis in an attempt to enhance his memory of the attack.

Kerr positively identified Barbour, a convicted murderer, as the driver of the van, the document says, and selected Ricks and Larson as those who looked like the gunman.

Ricks, Kerr's primary choice in the lineup as the gunman, is one of several Bandidos subpoenaed to appear this week before the federal grand jury here.

In another hearing, Van de Loo called Larson "a prime suspect" in the Kerr attack.

Larson, 34, who says he is no longer a Bandido, was recently sentenced to three years in prison on a federal firearms violation. He has denied any involvement in the Kerr attack.

Van de Loo also said in the document, "... Confidential informant" has stated that he was asked by "Panhead," "Boo-Boo" and "Mario" to participate in killing Assistant U.S. Attorney Kerr."

A lie detector test showed the informant was telling the truth, according to the affidavit.

The document identified "Panhead" as Bandido Steve Jonas and "Boo-Boo" as Barbour. "Mario" was not identified.

Barbour was sentenced in 1971 to 10 years in prison for the stabbing death of an Air Force lieutenant during a bar brawl. He was discharged from parole last June, records show.

Van de Loo acknowledged in testimony Wednesday that it was the first time the informant had been used. The informant, however, did submit a signed statement, federal officials noted.

Butts claimed the informant's information could not be considered reliable since he had no established credibility. The informant's information, he maintained, was not enough reason for the warrant.

Officers take sick leave after arrest

BOWIE, Texas (AP) — David Allen Bowman and Jeffrey Christopher Lamb are back in jail, but the cost of recapturing them was a little steep.

"I'm back in my hospital bed now," said Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway, after he made the arrests.

"Our chief is at the clinic. He's come down sick, too," said Bowie police dispatcher Lynetta Boudreaux.

Conway and Bowie Police Chief Brian Wasson took sick after an intensive three-day manhunt for Bowman and Christopher, who had scaled the exercise-yard fence and fled the Young County jail Sunday.

In fact, Conway left his hospital bed to arrest the pair Wednesday afternoon.

"I just went out and arrested them," Conway said after it was all over. "I received some good information they were both hiding near Bowie in a grain trailer."

Wasson was acting on another tip about that same time, thinking the pair might be near the town of Nocona.

Lost money returned by Texas drivers

TYLER, Texas (AP) — It was about 4 a.m. and motorists traveling on I-20 paid no attention to Don King, who had stopped his rig to inspect a strange-looking sack in the middle of the road.

No one else stopped, and King was alone on the rural stretch of highway. But it never occurred to the veteran truck driver to keep the $3,183 he found in a torn money sack.

"I didn't have that idea," said King, 35, of Grand Prairie, who gave the cash to authorities. "I wouldn't have tried it. I just thought I might help them out by picking it up. It never crossed my mind to keep it."

The money was part of $10,000 — all $1 bills — that had fallen out of a Purolator armored van earlier Wednesday. At daybreak, deputies and volunteers scrambled along six miles of the freeway picking up the money until all but $549 was recovered.

Most people who stopped to help recover the money turned it over to deputies, but "there were some who kept what they picked up," said Smith County Chief Deputy Jim Collins. "The highway patrol issued some warnings not to do that or they would be cited for obstructing the highway and endangering lives."

Collins said he knew of no specific law preventing citizens from picking up the money and keeping it.

"Our concern was not that people would rip the money off," Collins said. "We didn't want a lot of people stopping and creating a spectacle." He said there were no traffic jams.

Purolator spokesman C.B. Crossen said, "A lot of honest citizens helped pick up the money." He would not comment on how the money fell out of the van, but King said a trucker reported on the CB that a Purolator van was seen heading east with its back doors wide open.

"I'd heard about a sack in the middle of the road by listening to the CB, but no one knew what was in it," King said. He said when he approached it "it looked like it could be a money sack, and sure enough it was. People had run over it several times and it was blowing everywhere."

King took the money to the Central Freight terminal in Tyler and called the sheriff.

Fed's policy may not last long

NEW YORK (AP) — While respected business leaders and economists applauded the Federal Reserve's new policy of restraint, a policy they say might arrest inflation, that policy's future isn't assured.

The faltering conceivably could begin with the Fed itself. While the board agreed unanimously on Oct. 6 to restrict the availability of credit, it had split 4-3 on a similar decision just shortly before.

Fed watchers can't forget that such a split meant, and maybe still means, a basic disagreement on how to deal with inflation.

The subsequent unanimous decision, they say, may have signified more the power of Chairman Paul Volcker's personality than a genuine meeting of minds, and that unanimity could be shattered later on.

There is much dissent elsewhere too. Lane Kirkland, who may succeed George Meany next month as AFL-CIO president, claims the Fed erred. The effect of the tight money move, he said, would be to worsen inflation.

President Carter seems to have straddled. He has indicated support for the Fed, but he won applause last week by telling an AFL-CIO meeting that interest rates, a Fed restraint tool, were too high.

John Wright of Wright Investors Service, a large advisory firm and manager of hundreds of millions of investment dollars, represents a segment of financial thinking that believes the Fed policy is a fiasco.

The policy, he told clients this week, "has dangerous consequences." If continued, he said, it could "dissipate the nation's capital, stagnate growth and impair the development of new sources of energy."

He feels the Fed perceives its fight as being against inflation induced by excessive money growth. That, however, is not the problem, he said. Besides, "interest rates per se have never been an effective deterrent against speculation."

As interest rates rise where regulations do not impede them, passbook savers at thrift institutions, such as savings banks and savings and loan associations, grow more irritated. They can earn but 5.5 percent.

Owners of U.S. Savings Bonds don't do much better, if at all, and so have become sellers in recent months.

Powell wanted to join Castro

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world may have lost a great revolutionary when young Jody Powell discovered girls.

Back in the late 1950s, before Fidel Castro met with success and proclaimed himself a communist, the bearded Cuban was viewed by a great many Americans as a heroic figure, a freedom fighter holed up in the Sierra Maestra Mountains as leader of a guerrilla band bent on overthrowing the corrupt dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista.

Down in Vienna, Ga., Powell and a small group of fellow high school sophomores got carried away with the romantic notion that they, too, could become heroes if they could join up with Castro's forces in the mountains.

President Carter's future press secretary and his friends owned hunting rifles, which they judged adequate for guerrilla warfare. Moreover, one of their number had a car, which they planned to use to get as far as Miami.

Reminiscing recently, Powell said he innocently assumed that getting to Cuba would be no trick if they could reach Florida's most populous city. And if they harbored any misgivings about a language barrier, he couldn't recall them.

For, anately, he added, the group's interest in Castro waned as the boys took an increased interest in the girls of Dooly County.

With Carter traveling more, his bodyguards are wrestling with the logistics of providing him with armored limousines. In past administrations, presidential cars were flown around the country in Air Force transports. But Carter, trying to portray himself as a fuel-saving eco-nomizer, rarely authorizes such flights.

So when the president visited Albuquerque, N.M., last week, he used a car brought in from San Francisco — one of a fleet the Secret Service maintains in major cities for use by the VIPs it protects.

Because the armored vehicles are super-gas guzzlers, Carter's car was not driven from San Francisco. Instead, it was trucked to Albuquerque.

When the president was about to emerge from a party last week at the townhouse of Democratic National Chairman John C. White, his bodyguards could not start the silver 1977 Lincoln he was using.

Passers-by were treated to the sight of bodyguards jump-starting the presidential limousine.

Soviets pass halfway mark in U.S. grain purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — With new orders for wheat and corn, the Soviet Union has passed the half-way mark in the amount of U.S. grain it has been told it can buy in the coming year.

The Agriculture Department said Wednesday the Soviets have bought an additional 787,000 metric tons of wheat and corn for delivery through Sept. 30, 1980.

Counting the latest sales, the Soviet Union now has bought about 13 million metric tons of grain for the 1979-80 year, which began Oct. 1. That is more than half of the 25 million tons the United States has told Russia it can buy this year.

Although the Soviet Union has not officially indicated how much grain it will buy, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has predicted the full 25 million tons will be purchased.

The latest sales were reported to the department by private exporters and included 312,000 metric tons of wheat and 475,000 of corn.

Total orders so far include about 3.9 million metric tons of wheat and 9.1 million of corn for delivery this year.

In the 1978-79 year, exports totaled 15.7 million metric tons, including about 11.7 million of corn and 4 million of wheat.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Department officials say the sales to Russia will have no significant impact on American food prices because U.S. grain supplies, including another record corn harvest this fall, are so large.

For example, last week USDA's new estimate of the corn crop was 7.39 billion bushels — 187.7 million metric tons. That was an increase of 122 million bushels from prospects a month earlier or about 3.1 million metric tons.

Thus, the boost in USDA corn production estimates within one month equaled almost one-eighth of the entire 25 million tons the Soviet Union has been told it can buy this year.

Total exports to all countries, including the Soviet Union, are expected to include about 38.1 million metric tons of wheat and 63.5 million of corn.

Under a five-year agreement signed four years ago, the Soviet Union is committed to buy at least 6 million metric tons of wheat and corn combined each year.

An additional 2 million tons can be bought annually — a total of 8 million — without further consultations. But if the Soviet Union wants more than 8 million tons, the United States must give its approval.

Such permission was given in each of the two previous years. The approval for 25 million metric tons in 1979-80 — the fourth year of the agreement — involved the same process.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federally subsidized firewood program in New England, where residents depend greatly on oil for heating their homes, is attracting attention in other parts of the country.

Weldon Barton, the Agriculture Department's energy director, says the New England program "could be expanded into other areas ... but we'd rather wait until we get through this winter" before deciding.

Barton said, however, that "a number of inquiries" have been received about getting a similar firewood program going in other states.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland announced Wednesday that a pilot federal program begun in New England last April to help increase the production of firewood for home heating has been extended into additional northeastern counties.

Initially, the project was authorized in 12 counties in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont. Now, Bergland said, it will be available in 50 counties in those and two more states, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

The program, which is expected to cost about $1.4 million this year, will provide technical help to farmers and other woodlot owners for development of 10-year forest management plans, and for marketing selected stands of timber for cutting as firewood.

It also will pay 75 percent of the cost of building access roads into woodlots.

Bergland said the expanded project's goal is to provide 259,100 cords of firewood. He estimated that amount would replace 777,300 barrels of heating oil.

"Expansion of the project can provide lower-cost fuel wood as an alternative to home heating oil in many New England homes," Bergland said.

Every cord of wood used in airtight stoves and furnaces will save three barrels of oil, he said.

"A home which might use $700 worth of 90-cent (per gallon) heating oil this winter could cut heating costs by $266 if wood were used," Bergland said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japan, the biggest single-country overseas market for U.S. farmers, is thinking about adding popcorn to its shopping list.

A brief note in an Agriculture Department export report says a company in Tokyo "wishes to contact U.S. suppliers of popcorn."

No other information was available, but prospective popcorn sellers were advised to contact Yoshitomo Yoshioka, Makuri Company Ltd., Tokyo.

Japan, a big market for grain and soybeans, bought about $4.9 billion worth of U.S. farm commodities in the year that ended Sept. 30, about 15 percent of the total exports of $32 billion.

The Pirates Willie Stargell holds the World Series championship trophy as he leaves the team's plane early Thursday morning. Stargell, who was voted the series' most valuable player, and his Bucco teammates returned to Pittsburgh after beating the Orioles 4-1 in Baltimore.

Stargell leads Pirates to world series win

BALTIMORE (AP) — Willie Stargell, who preaches never get too high when you win or too low when you lose, was choked with emotion after leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to the 1979 World Series championship.

"There has been a closeness on this team that I cannot properly put into words," said the tearful giant, his voice nearly inaudible at times.

"We scratched and we clawed. We are family and that's not said to be sassy or fancy. That thought typified our ball club."

A two-run, sixth-inning homer by the 38-year-old Pirates captain — one of his four hits in this decisive seventh Series contest — started Pittsburgh to its title-clinching 4-1 victory. After helping the Pirates back from a 3-1 deficit against the Baltimore Orioles, Stargell was chosen unanimously the Most Valuable Player of the Series.

Stargell stood and answered questions for as long as they were asked. He said, "I don't know yet how I feel, except, 'Wow.'"

The man they call "Pops" talked softly about the team he led physically and spiritually to the National League pennant and the Pirates' fifth World Series title in club history.

"We've overcome a lot of things. Playing baseball is still the thing I like to do the most. I think that's why we won."

Stargell described the home run that turned around this final game.

"I tried to wait a bit on the ball, and when I hit it, I wasn't sure it was out," he said. "My first three hits weren't liners by any means, but I'll take them."

"Pops" did pretty good for his family," Stargell said, smiling for the first time during the mass interview.

Stargell accepted the MVP award with the humbleness that has characterized his career.

"It has taken everyone in this organization to accomplish what we have this year. I know there has to be one (MVP) and I am very proud ... It will be a very pleasant memory, one nobody can take away. It fills a very warm spot in my heart."

Stargell became the 40th player in Series history to collect four hits in one Series game and the fourth player to do it in this Series. He had 12 hits in 30 at bats, including four doubles and three homers.

Stargell, the husky first baseman, batted .400 in the Series. He had seven RBI and set a record for extra-base hits.

And he demonstrated his leadership of this family when, in the eighth, ace reliever Kent Tekulve came in during an Orioles threat.

Stargell walked over to the pitcher and said: "You show these people why you're the best reliever in baseball. And if you're not ready, then I'll pitch and you play first base."

Tekulve smiled. The tension was broken. The pitcher retired the side.

It's the side of Willie Stargell only his teammates see.

Pirate fans celebrate victory

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When Willie Stargell whacked his game-clinching two-run homer in the sixth inning of the World Series final, they raised the roof 400 miles away in Pittsburgh's Gandy Dancer Saloon.

And when the Pirates won the World Series 4-1 over the Baltimore Orioles three innings later Wednesday night, the same roof fell in.

"They did it. They did it," shrieked an unruly crowd of about 200 fans who had been glued for three hours to a large television screen suspended from the ceiling.

Downtown in Market Square, hundreds of screaming Pirate partisans, some waving pennants, celebrated the victory before film crews set up by the city's television stations.

"The Bucs are No. 1 and we'll be the World Series champs again next year," said Willie Lonero, 38, of Pittsburgh, who was wearing a tan cowboy hat and pumping furiously on a bull horn.

Lonero, who calls himself "Wild Bill" and says he's missed only three Pirate home games this year, came downtown "to have a good time and be with the beautiful people of Pittsburgh."

In the Gandy Dancer, Joe Bludis of suburban Point Breeze cheered for Stargell. "That old man really can hit," exulted Bludis.

"When you look at him, he's shaped like a bartender. But when he steps up to the plate, watch out," he said.

The saloon is housed in what used to be a railroad station along the Monongahela River next to Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle.

The bar is festooned with railroad memorabilia, including an old brass bell that used to sit atop a steam engine.

Texas looking to longhorns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers says the Longhorns have got their minds where they belong — on the upcoming game with Arkansas, not last Saturday's 16-7 victory over Oklahoma.

Asked at the Longhorn Club meeting Wednesday if Texas players had been able to put the Oklahoma game out of their minds and concentrate on Arkansas in practice, Akers said:

"Yes, our players have won that battle. Our full attention is on Arkansas."

Akers told the club No. 10 Arkansas has the "best kicking game we will face this season."

Texas moved up two places to No. 2 after beating Oklahoma and will play Arkansas at Little Rock before a capacity crowd of 53,555 and a regional television audience.

It will be Texas' third road game against an undefeated opponent, including Missouri, which it defeated 21-0, and Oklahoma.

The club's largest crowd of the season greeted Akers with a standing ovation, and he said of the Oklahoma victory, "Everything was just great if you were orange." Texas' colors are burnt orange and white.

Houston quarterback great in relief

HOUSTON (AP) — When Houston receiver Eric Herring leaped high into the air against Texas A&M last Saturday and with one hand grabbed a key pass like someone plucking a grapefruit off a tree, it marked the start of another save for Houston "relief" quarterback Terry Elston.

Elston followed his pass to Herring with another completion to Terald Clark and then ran in the winning touchdown with 15 seconds to play for a tension-packed 17-14 victory.

It marked the third time in five Houston games that Elston has been called from the Cougar ball pen to key a victory and it has earned him the nickname of Joe Sambito, the Houston Astros' all-star relief pitcher.

"With our offense, we have to have two quarterbacks," said starter Delrick Brown. "I knew we'd win eventually. With the depth we have it was bound to come. I saw some great fast balls Sambito threw."

Elston fueled a time-consuming drive to preserve Houston's season opening victory over UCLA and scored the winning touchdown in the victory over Florida prior to his antics against the Aggies last Saturday.

"It's good to have two quarterbacks who can come in and function," Elston said. "Delrick and I room together. We're friends. I saw that Delrick and Danny Davis had this same sort of situation last year. It takes a lot of pressure off one guy. If you have only one quarterback and he goes down, there's panic."

Brown was the one coming off the bench last season and Elston gladly assumes the same role this season.

Weaver keeps his cool

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver says his emotions won't boil over as he thinks about the Pittsburgh Pirates' defeat of his Orioles in the World Series.

"I won't hit any walls," said Weaver Wednesday night after the Pirates had scored a 4-1 victory to capture the series title. "But I won't necessarily go home and relax, either. It'll stay with you for awhile."

It was Weaver's fourth World Series as the Orioles manager and his third time around as a loser. This time, there was the added stigma of his team having blown a three-games-to-one lead, something only three other teams in baseball history have done in a seven-game series.

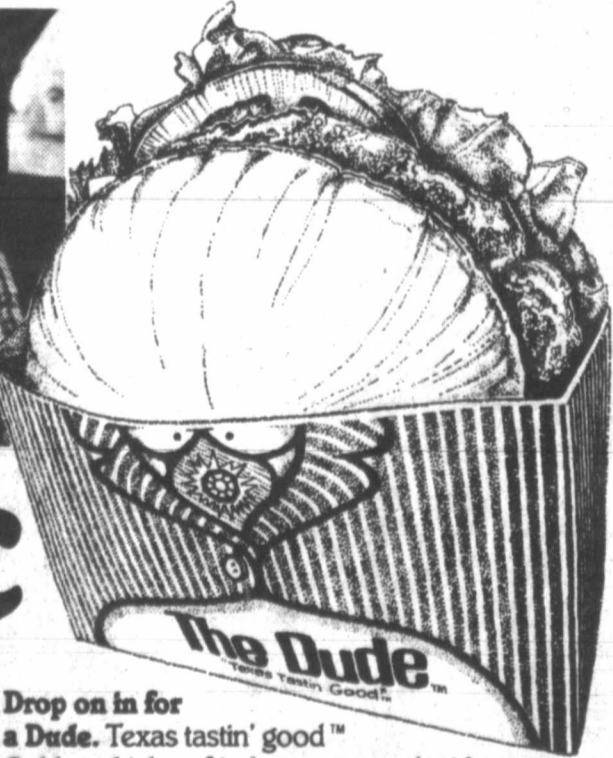

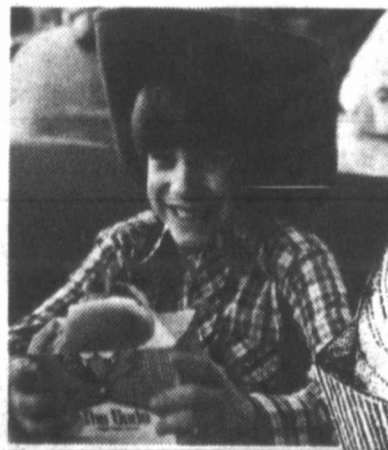

Asked if the series defeat left him with an empty feeling, Weaver replied: "Certainly. No doubt about it. We got this far and we had three shots to beat them. I certainly have an empty feeling."

A master juggler of personnel, Weaver was praised by baseball experts for his often unorthodox strategy as the Orioles built their 3-1 lead.

His choices were questioned after a second-game loss, in which pinch-hitter John Lowenstein hit into a rally-ending double play. And Wednesday night, Weaver repeatedly had to explain why he had stuck with Eddie Murray, in an 0-for-20 slump, with the bases loaded and the Orioles down by a run in the eighth. Murray flied deep to right to end the inning.

"I never thought of hitting for Eddie," said Weaver. "Eddie's been our man all year and he hit the ball real hard. You can't ask more of the man."

Sports world awaiting heavyweight bout

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The John Tate-Gerrie Coetzee heavyweight title fight has picked up the pulse beat of this sports-starved nation that has been practically eliminated from international competition.

Not only can South Africa not compete in the Olympic Games, it has even been barred by something called the International Net Ball Federation.

So there is national pride concerning the fight. There also is some cynicism. Black leaders here scoff at claims that integrated seating for the fight is a blow against apartheid.

Even though blacks can go to the bout between Tate, a black American, and Coetzee, a white South African, it is doubtful that many will be among the 70,000-plus fans at the Loftus Versfeld rugby stadium in Pretoria. Even the cheapest ticket costs about $12. Top price is about $345.

But while the feeling among South African blacks generally seems to be that the fight isn't going to benefit anybody but the winner and the promoters, some are rooting for Coetzee because he is a South African.

A black reader wrote to the Rand Daily Mail: "As I am a South African and also Gerrie Coetzee, I wish him to win the fight."

But another wrote: "To me a victory by a black over a white, in any sphere, adds to that dignity that has been so shabbily trodden on. To us, it is not Coetzee versus Tate, it is not South Africa versus America, it is black versus white... my sympathies are with Gerrie, who is a truly great fellow. But he represents a class, not a country. It's Tate for me."

Tate, a soft-spoken 24-year-old from Knoxville, Tenn., says simply that he is here for one reason — win the World Boxing Association heavyweight title vacated by the retirement of Muhammad Ali.

Tate has been here since Aug. 2. The reason he came so early, said manager Ace Miller, is that bad weather and demands by the press and friends of the fighter led to training problems. It was not to escape harassment by American civil rights groups, Miller said.

Tate, trying to touch all bases, went to Pretoria Wednesday night to get the feel of the vast stadium. Since the ring was not ready, he sparred on the grass at one end of stadium, watched by reporters, photographers and police with attack dogs.

There will be 100 dogs at the fight as well as 1,200 police and private security personnel and 200 sharpshooters.

Around the infield there is a moat and a wire fence with three strands of barbed wire on top.

Oilers defense improving

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oiler defense has shown marked improvement this season with 31 quarterback sacks and 17 interceptions and defensive coordinator Ed Biles says give the Oiler offense its share of the credit.

The Oilers have been ahead in seven games this season as compared to last season when they had to rally for all 10 regular season victories.

"Forcing a team to play catch-up football is a big help toward getting a lot of sacks and interceptions," Biles said. "Teams are taking chances against us this year they wouldn't have taken last year."

Biles also is pleased with another statistic gleaned from last Sunday's 27-16 victory.

"We stopped them four out of five times in short-yardage situations," said Biles. "It's extremely difficult to hold a National Football League team to less than a yard, especially in a situation where they need that yard."

The Oilers played an above-average game in Baltimore but I'd still like to think we can improve. When we get Elvin back and Jimmy Young is 100 per cent, we're going to be in pretty good shape."

The Oilers climbed one notch to fifth place in American Football Conference team defense with a 284.6 per game yield. They are fourth against the pass and 10th against the rush.

Rookie defensive end Jesse Baker has 11 1/2 sacks to lead the team in that category and safety Mike Reinfeild leads the league with seven interceptions.

A much publicized feud that erupted last week between quarterback Dan Pastorini and tight end Mike Barber had no adverse effect on the team, cornerback Willie Alexander said.

SPORTS WORLD

BALTIMORE (AP) — The old man won a ball game and the World Series with four mighty swings of his bat, captured the MVP award and talked to the President of the United States without one crack in his massive reserve.

Then, at seven minutes after midnight, Willie Stargell broke.

Stocking-footed, holding a green bottle of white California wine in his right hand, the 38-year-old captain and inspirational leader of the Pittsburgh Pirates took his sister, Sandrus, in a strong embrace and broke into tears.

For a full minute, he and his kid sister from Oakland, Calif., held each other close and wept convulsively. Then, the tough, raw-boned first baseman wiped the stream of water from his cheeks with a white towel.

"We've been together a long time — we've come through hell together," he said, obviously embarrassed to show such sentiment before a roomful of newspapermen.

Then he chided himself: "Big old dummy up here."

Earlier, the 38-year-old Stargell — closing his 18th season as a Pirate — had smashed a two-r in homer, two doubles and a single to provide the greatest damage in Pittsburgh's 4-1 clinching victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

It was a strange repeat of history. Eight years before, Stargell had scored the winning run in the Pirates' seven-game comeback triumph over the Orioles in this same park.

Stargell had 12 hits in 30 bat appearances for a .400 batting average. He had seven extra base hits including three home runs, and 25 total bases that tied the 1977 Series record set by Reggie Jackson of the Yankees.

But he sought to shrug off his own individual exploits of the last eight days and turn the attention to Manager Chuck Tanner and his teammates.

He said it would be hard for the average person to understand the closeness and the spirit of the Pittsburgh club.

"All of us were disappointed when we came so close and didn't win in 1978," he related. "We went to spring training determined that we wouldn't have to be home and watching on TV this year."

Cosell draws fans' ire

BALTIMORE (AP) — Police assigned a special detail to escort network sports announcer Howard Cosell to the final game of the World Series after learning that a group of highly vocal Orioles fans surrounded his limousine and sprayed it with foam.

As Cosell was leaving Memorial Stadium after the sixth game of the World Series Tuesday night, a group of spectators yelled obscenities and sprayed his limousine with what was apparently shaving cream.

Sgt. Mike Bass, a police spokesman, said Cosell was apparently in "good spirits and not angry or bitter," but added the announcer said it was unfortunate the incident should happen "in a great city like Baltimore."

Private security guards tried to control the belligerent fans when they ambushed Cosell's limousine, Bass said. He quoted Cosell as saying the guards did their best, but "it just got out of hand."

Bass added that Cosell said he thinks the group was responsible for breaking the limousine's side mirror.

The controversial announcer had been the object of much criticism in both Baltimore and Pittsburgh by fans who accused him of being biased towards the other team.

New speedway boss

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway will have a new man in charge for the 64th running of the 500-mile race next May.

John R. Cooper, a former U.S. Auto Club vice president who has an extensive background in auto racing, will be returning here as president and chief executive officer of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Corp.

The selection of Cooper to replace Joseph R. Cloutier was announced Wednesday by board chairman Mary F. Hulman.

Cloutier, elected to the Speedway's top positions after the death of Tony Hulman in 1977, has been associated with Hulman family business interests for many years. He will remain as treasurer and a director of the corporation in addition to being involved in other family business matters.

TEXAS

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A bus driver for Irving schools came up with her own method of keeping unruly students in line — she pulled a pistol and waved it in the student's faces while demanding order, according to police.

Irving school authorities said they learned about the Wednesday incident after the driver delivered her first busload of students to Irving's Nimitz High School and left to pick up some more.

Dallas officers intercepted the bus and arrested the 21-year-old driver, confiscating a loaded .357 Magnum revolver from a box beside the driver's seat, police said.

The officer said the driver told them she started packing the pistol after several students flashed knives and generally misbehaved after she took over the route on Friday.

She decided to scare them so they wouldn't jack with her," said Dallas officer Joe McCrary. The driver, an employee of the Dallas County school superintendent's office, was suspended pending an investigation.

DALLAS (AP) — The city council cut more than $22 million from a Dallas Power & Light Co. rate increase request, an action company officials said would endanger its AAA bond rating.

"I am not sure we have any option but to appeal the decision," said DP&L Vice President W.W. Aston, after Wednesday's unanimous vote.

The increase approved by the council was smaller than the increase DP&L received last Friday in a ruling from the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

DALLAS (AP) — Three Dallas County deputies have been fired, and two of them jailed, in the past two weeks. Sheriff Carl Thomas revealed Wednesday.

Thomas said one deputy was arrested Saturday in Grand Prairie, after a high-speed chase with city police, and was jailed for resisting arrest and driving while intoxicated.

Another deputy was arrested and jailed in Garland for assault on his wife, Thomas said.

The third deputy allegedly stopped a bus in downtown Dallas while he was off duty and tongue-lashed the driver, Thomas said. The sheriff said that deputy was fired Oct. 11 when he failed to show up for a polygraph exam.

DALLAS (AP) — Officers with the American Stock

Exchange will lead a delegation of Texas-based energy executives to Europe next month, to find foreign money for the Texas energy firms.

Three Dallas Companies and three Houston corporations will meet with investment brokers and media representatives in London, Edinburgh and Zurich.

John Bryen, Amex executive vice president, said Wednesday the tour is the latest in a series of programs the exchange has initiated to benefit its members.

The Dallas companies are Earth Resources Co., Delhi International Oil and Dorchester Gas Corp. Those from Houston are Mitchell Energy and Development Corp., Weatherford International Inc. and Crutcher Resources Corp.

Problems are facing housing industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The construction of new houses and the sale of existing homes have remained strong into the fall, but housing experts see a precipitous drop on the horizon.

What will soon turn things around, analysts said Wednesday, are mortgage interest rates soaring to 14 percent or more and a severe shortage of loan money.

The predictions came as the government and private industry announced surprisingly strong housing figures for September.

—The Commerce Department said new housing construction rose 4.2 percent last month to an annual rate of 1.88 million units. Much of the strength was attributed to a 25 percent jump in starts on new apartment units, many of them federally subsidized.

—And Jack Carlson, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, said sales of existing homes rose nearly 3 percent in September to an annual rate of 3.95 million units. "This could be our second best sales year ever, second only to 1978," Carlson said.

Meantime, Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker warned that Americans will have to accept a lower standard of living if inflation is to be controlled.

Volcker told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that if people "try to catch up with the existing standard of living or try to increase their standard of living...up goes the price level some more."

The September housing figures came as a surprise to many analysts.

Housing experts had expected both starts and sales to fall off sharply by now because of the economic downturn that began in the year's second quarter.

But demand has remained strong despite record high mortgage rates, now in excess of 11 percent nationwide.

Carlson attributed the continued housing demand to the maturing of the "baby boom" generation, which is in the age range for many first-home purchases, and to inflation, which has driven people to buy real estate as tax shelters.

What could dampen the demand is the Federal Reserve's Oct. 6 announcement that it was raising a key interest rate and changing the way it controls monetary growth.

The board's policy change comes as savings and loan associations are reporting a decline in deposits and, thus, a loss of money they could lend as mortgages.

The National Association of Home Builders is so concerned about the Federal Reserve's action that it announced Wednesday it is calling a "summit conference," probably next month, to discuss the situation.

"This policy could lead to a deeper and more prolonged national recession," the industry group said in a statement. It also predicted "a catastrophic drop in new home construction, as much as 1 million units lower than 1978."

New construction last year totaled 2 million units, slightly below the level experts say is needed to meet demand and replace worn-out housing.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, who testified with Volcker, said "housing is nervous" because of uncertainty in the money markets resulting from the Federal Reserve credit-tightening policies.

But he added that if the policy works to dampen inflation expectations rapidly, "then housing does not have to go into a tailspin." He added, "But it's a worry."

Experts including Carlson and Richard Marcis, deputy director for economic research at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, predict housing starts will fall to a range of 1.5 million to 1.6 million next year.

Marcis said the bank board, which oversees savings and loan on September's annual rate of 1.88 million units "but will be off sharply after that."

In Chicago, meanwhile, various economists at a Mortgage Bankers Association conference predicted housing starts next year will fall to the range of 1 million to 1.4 million.

New York bank vice president Leonard J. Santow, also addressing that conference, said "every major bank" is already rationing its loan money as a result of the Federal Reserve action.

Within the next two weeks, he said, banks will further reduce loans to homeowners, consumers and small businesses.

Controversial Fight

This Saturday, October 20, a boxing match is scheduled to take place in a large outdoor stadium in Pretoria, South Africa. The winner — either America's John Tate or South Africa's Gerrie Coetzee — will become the World Boxing Association's heavyweight champion. Because black and white spectators will be allowed to watch the fight together, South Africa hopes to use the event to show that it has made progress toward ending racial discrimination in sports. But many people, including American black leader Jesse Jackson, believe that the fight should not take place in South Africa, where a white minority government still denies its black citizens many basic human rights.

DO YOU KNOW — What word is used to describe South Africa's system of racial separation?

Spring in Paris and L. A.

Monday's earthquake wasn't the only thing that rocked the West Coast. Daring fashion looks — including higher hemlines and some "cheeky" swimsuits — went on display Tuesday in Los Angeles during the California sportswear designers fashion show.

Across the ocean in Paris, the same "leggy" look was being exhibited in French collections for spring-summer 1980.

Mini-swimsuits, like Connie Banko's green and pink one-shoulder maillot (above left), show off a lot more leg with the removal of traditional leg holes.

In Paris, Anne-Marie's 1980 ready-to-wear collection includes a white bikini bottom wrapped in beaded fringe and a tiny top to match. The set is topped with a thick white terry cloth trapezist's cape (above).

Pedal pushers and mini skirts are abundant, both on European and American fashion scenes. At the Los Angeles show, Cindy and Me's yellow pedal pushers (below, far left) are topped with a T-shirt in pink, yellow and gray accented with cap sleeves and a V-neck. A multi-dotted miniskirt by the same designers accompanies bare yellow T-shirt.

Christian Dior displayed a belted, full-skirted evening gown (below) in Paris. The striped organza frock features a rounded, plunging neckline surrounded by a wide ruffle.

Also included in the Parisian spring outlook is an oriental-style outfit by Muriel Grateau with a scoop-necked black body suit, set off by a skirt of Indian silk pleats in lemon yellow and mandarin orange.

The collection of Chloe of Paris includes a gold mini-dress with elbow-length caftan sleeves. Chloe's ready-to-wear group also sports lower heels in shoe styles.

Campus travels to shopping mall

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Bring a textbook instead of a checkbook to the neighborhood department store and leave with something that can't be stored in a shopping bag: a college education.

It's called Learn & Shop, and the premise is simple: If you can't get the students to the campus, take the campus to the students.

Faced with an 8.5 percent enrollment drop in the fall of 1978, Indiana - Purdue University officials set up college - credit courses in employee training rooms at four shopping malls here last spring.

It worked so well, that 41 other states and several Canadian provinces want to do it, too.

In the next decade, university enrollment is going to decline as the number of younger students declines. I think if universities are going to be wise, they're going to change their patterns of recruitment. We've catered too long to younger students and have overlooked the suburban housewife, for example," says Dean James East, who directs Learn & Shop.

The program's trial run attracted more than 500 students, 78 percent of them women.

There are a number of older women in the suburbs who simply would not come to this campus under any circumstances because they fear this campus. They don't feel secure (here)," East says of the main campus, stark concrete against an inner-city backdrop.

Virginia Miller, whose appearance and energy belie the fact that she is a 54-year-old grandmother, agrees.

"I think the proximity was the thing that got me there. I thought I'd get intimidated by being with younger people (at school) after 35 years, and I was a little unsure of how it was going to work out," says Mrs. Miller, whose 19-year-old son just began college himself.

"It was sort of a reawakening," she says of the social psychology course she took this summer. "I was learning about something entirely new and it kept opening up new avenues. If there's more I can take at the shopping centers, I'll do that."

There will be more. East promises. The schedule for fall classes, which began Aug. 22 at six department stores in five malls, includes everything from American history to urban sociology to beginning French.

The point is, you can satisfy all of your degree requirements for two of IU's associate degree programs at shopping centers only, and you would never have to set foot on this campus," East notes.

What will that do to attendance at the main campus?

"People will come to campus. After a few courses, after they know they are about average and can indeed get a college degree," says Prof. Ron Strahl, who taught English composition during the initial Learn & Shop semester.

"I don't want to give a four-year degree to someone who met outside the lingerie department at Washington Square," he added. "I want them down here, and I honestly think the majority will come. Learn & Shop students miss a great deal (at the campus) they can't get sitting in Penney's for four years."

But while students might miss a semester of campus activities, they don't miss a single sale. And that fact helps keep Learn & Shop alive by keeping store managers happy, East says.

"What if you had a training room and I came to you and said for 16 weeks, you can count on 200 solid people coming regularly, and when they come, they look at your goodies. And chances of buying are pretty great. I know because I seldom go to those shopping centers without buying, and I'm probably typical," East says.

Helen Reed, 55, a Learn & Shop student with an eye on an associate degree, considers herself typical, too. And she admits a stroll through the mall before class can mean succumbing to impulse buying.

"Don't we all? I usually buy when things are on sale. That's when I usually stop to look," she says. "But at my age, I don't go out and buy things I don't need."

DR. LAMB

Seek second opinion on hemorrhoids

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a long history of hemorrhoids. At first they'd bleed profusely after a bowel movement. For a while I had some discharge associated with them and was in the hospital for treatment but no operation. I've had a complete examination several times including careful examination of my colon and nothing other than the hemorrhoids has ever been found.

They're so large that after a bowel movement hemorrhoids bigger than my thumb will stick out and need to be replaced. It's a daily problem of cleaning up and wearing pads to keep from soiling my clothes.

On my last check-up the doctor at a public health hospital and his assistant did a very thorough examination and said I had both large internal and external hemorrhoids. He said the rubber band treatment wasn't for me and that he would advise against surgery because I might end up with a problem of controlling my bowels. Presumably the sphincter would be affected.

He thought I should try to live with the problem. But if I decide I can't live with it, he will operate. The whole thing is a real nuisance. I guess my question is: Do I try to live with it or should I take a chance with the operation?

DEAR READER — Hemorrhoids are simply very large dilated veins. The internal ones are inside the sphincter. They are the ones that can bleed even though they may cause no pain at all. There are no pain fibers inside the rectum.

The external ones are outside the sphincter and they're the ones that make you feel like you're sitting on a little ball. They're also the ones that cause pain and itching. That's because there are pain-sensitive nerve fibers in the external area.

There are a lot of things that can be done for hemorrhoids these days and to bring you up to date, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 13-12, Hemorrhoids: New Treatments For An Old Affliction. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Slipping a rubber band on internal hemorrhoids is one of the new forms of treatment. Your doctor was correct in telling you that it won't work for your case because it only works on internal hemorrhoids, not external ones.

Injections around the internal hemorrhoid area are also used.

There are cases, particularly those that involve extensive internal and external hemorrhoids, in which surgery is the only solution.

There are sometimes complications of hemorrhoid surgery. It's more apt to be uncomfortable if the patient is programmed to think it's going to be difficult. That's already happened to you. There are a number of people who do go through hemorrhoid surgery thinking positively and have limited difficulty afterward.

The risk of your losing control of your bowels may have been overemphasized to you. Perhaps you should seek a second opinion. Your hemorrhoids will not improve under the present circumstances.

Private policy prevents panic

Children watchers are expected to be especially active through next spring, says the Health Insurance Institute.

That's because, as usual, they'll be busy counting winter sniffles and sneezes, and checking for signs of flu, strep throat, and sometimes worse.

Right or wrong, as panic sets in and some illnesses appear serious many parents will be re-evaluating their family's health insurance, perhaps buying more for greater protection.

To help them do this more easily, perhaps even save them some money, the Institute suggests they do the following:

- Fully understand those clauses concerning waiting periods for pre-existing conditions and other exclusions before buying.
- (A pre-existing condition is a health problem you had before becoming insured. A waiting period is a specified period of time following the date of policy issued during which payment of benefits is restricted.)
- Avoid policies that have waiting periods for pre-existing conditions longer than one year.
- Know that an exclusionary rider lists specified conditions or circumstances for which the policy does not provide benefits. (Such a rider might, for example, exclude coverage of any illness or medical expense resulting from a pre-existing heart or diabetic condition.)

Epileptic girl feels sheltered

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I am a 15-year-old girl who happens to be an epileptic even though I haven't had a seizure for a long time.

My mother and daddy treat me like a 5-year-old because of my condition. I'm never allowed to go anywhere unless I'm with a relative.

Because of this, people are always kidding me. Why do my parents treat me this way? It really hurts me. — Linda, Gadsden, Ala.

Linda: Your parents are over-protective because they fear for your safety when they are not available. Have a chat with your family doctor and explain that you feel your parents are being too protective. Have the doctor talk to your parents, if a talk is necessary.

I think in your case, it is much better to have parents who are extra-caring rather than parents who couldn't care less.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 16 and just received my driver's license two weeks ago, but my dad said that I can't drive by myself for at least two months.

I don't think it's fair. I think he should trust me, but he said that I had too many close calls. Help. — John, Elizabethtown, Ky.

John: I know many drivers who have drivers' licenses, but shouldn't be driving because they have too many close calls.

Sorry, but I agree with your dad.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and I've got a big problem. I've talked it over with my mom and my close friends, but I still have the problem.

A lot of guys at school are giving me a hassle about being a virgin. They call me "Virgin Mary" and ask if I'm a nun. I've asked them to stop, but that only makes them hassle me more.

Please tell me what to do. — Mary, Delphos, Ohio

Mary: You don't have a problem and don't let these immature guys make you think you do. The best way to make them stop their childish play is to totally ignore them. It will take a short time, but when they see they can't irritate you, they will stop.

Scout troops set up displays

"Faces of Scouting" is the theme of exhibits and demonstrations by the Quivira Girl Scout Council this week at the Pampa Mall.

A nationwide Girl Scout registration drive is being conducted this month, which is Girl Scout membership month.

Membership fee is $3 for Girl Scouts, open to girls from grades one through 12. More information may be obtained at the exhibits this week.

The focus of the week's schedule will be arts and crafts, homemaking and outdoor activities. Slide shows will feature camping and special events.

Pampa troops and leaders with displays include Troop 119, Diana Hughes; Troop 148, Adelaide Colwell; Troop 49, Jan Chambers; Troop 44, Linda Colt; Troop 167, Carol Knutson; Troop 217, Sandra Enlow; Troop 229, Debbie Been and Ramona Jones; Troop 136, Roberta Wadsworth; Troop 79, Karen Cook; and Troop 51, Frieda Hagerman.

Troops presenting live demonstrations, including singing and dancing, are Troop 619, Carol Mackey; Troop 44, Linda Collins; and Troops 49 and 136. Prize-winning arrangements from the recent Pampa Garden Club flower show also will be displayed.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

Couples enjoy group activities

By Louise Pierce

A delightful older man attended a talk I gave in Guymon, Okla., recently. After the meeting we had a marvelous visit about growing older and staying happy while you and your mate age together. This gentleman and his wife of 57 years are as lovely, and as lively, as any couple of any age could be. They are active members of the Senior Citizens' Club in their town, and they spark interest in the many activities for retired couples in the area. At present they meet in a church but they plan a building large enough for all comers, to be called "The No Man's Land Senior Center" in honor of the pre-state designation for the Oklahoma Panhandle territory. They are sizable donations before even starting their fund drive. I couldn't believe the friendships they've formed in their older group, the local and out-of-town fun they enjoy — and the pride they have in the soundness of their marriages. This gentleman told me, "My wonderful wife and I are happier now than we've ever been, and the best thing is that we're having all our fun together and with friends. We'd never leave each other — and you can bank on that!"

This Oklahoma group of retirees takes short trips (and some not so short) all over the southwest. They get up caravans of cars and attend the nationally-famous outdoor drama, "Texas" in the vast amphitheater in Palo Duro Canyon — not just once a year but several times a season. They drive to Colorado to the dog races and to New Mexico to the horse races. They have dinners and parties and every sort of entertainment. I was totally impressed.

Some older couples yearn for a change from the sameness of each other's faces in the same location year after year. I don't believe I'd ever get tired of looking at Otis and listening to his spritely conversation — but I'm sure I'll never get the chance to find out. He's not the type to sit around and he never will be. I'm his "Mrs. Prospect" for his planned sales, which I am positive will continue as long as he lives. And he's my sounding board for the humorous (I hope!) and serious things I write. Sometimes we leave our separate offices after five o'clock and say we're too exhausted to do anything to relax at home. But we go to our scheduled party anyway — and within minutes we're pepped up and having the time of our lives as always. We've learned that fatigue, like boredom, is often in the mind and can be put at flight by the group therapy of happy friends in search of pleasure together.

We've always been part of group enjoyment. When we were newly married, the men in our little Kansas town got up a basketball team and challenged the young fellows of all the towns around. Our team had no uniforms, so they wore the ragtags of coveralls and ill-fitting jerseys and all manner of baggy pants. They won every game they played. And we wives were always on the sidelines, yelling for them as loudly as any high school cheerleader ever did for her team.

In later years we went fishing in New Mexico, opening trout season every April with annually returning friends. Sometimes we had fancy cabins, sometimes leaky tents; it never mattered which. The only objection ever raised by anybody was in regard to Otis' snoring — and it was never vocal. Morning after morning he woke up at dawn to find himself sleeping in the open, a considerable distance from the tents, even from the one he shared with me. The other men stood the noise as long as they could and then, motioning me to silence, they simply picked him up, cot and all, and carried him beyond all our hearing.

Now we go to golf tournaments, scenic tours, dinner theaters and other such jaunts, always blending our spirited vitality with that of good friends. There's nothing like group activity to give you renewed regard for your peers as well as for yourself.

I talk about this a lot. And I get letters about it.

DEAR LOUISE: How can I get my husband to take trips with friends? WISHING.

DEAR WISHING: Get him to agree to go without knowing he's doing it. Be like the little girl who once stopped at our house with a basket full of small dogs and asked, "Which one do you want — or do you already have a puppy?" When two groups of your friends are going to attend a special function on two different nights, ask your husband which night he wants to go. He may say, "Well, Saturday would be best for me." If he gets cagey and says he won't go either night, tell him you've already got tickets in the hope that he'd go with you — but that since he won't, you're going to invite somebody else in his place. He's not likely to let you do that. And if he's like most husbands, he won't want you to waste the money you spent on tickets. My guess is that he'll go and will enjoy the experience. It could lead to similar pleasures. People who have rocked in cushioned chairs for a long time, usually forget the wonderful lift they used to get when they went out with other couples. And get men to invite your husband along. Men sometimes will stir themselves to activity more readily if asked by men than by their wives. A fringe benefit, if you can manage to get your beloved to attend local activities and go on short trips and finally longer ones with friends, will be that couples have no time or energy to pick on each other if they come home tired enough to go right to sleep. You can't improve on that technique for older-married happiness.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Phenacetin controversy

By Joe Graedon

Some time ago we declared a People's Pharmacy Alert for pain relievers that contain the ingredient phenacetin. This drug has been banned or restricted in Canada, Britain, Australia, Denmark and Sweden for many years but it continues to be sold in large quantities in the United States.

Prolonged use of medications containing phenacetin has been associated with kidney disease and recent reports have researchers concerned that there may be a possible link with cancer.

Despite the warning flags that have been raised, pain relievers that contain phenacetin are among the most highly prescribed by doctors. It is found in Darvon Compound, Fiorinal, A.S.A. Compound, Norgescic, P-A-C Compound and Soma Compound, not to mention all the various A.P.C. tablets available with and without prescription.

One other popular pain remedy that contained phenacetin was Empirin Compound. This analgesic has been marketed by the Burroughs Wellcome pharmaceutical firm for over 50 years and it has been one of the company's most profitable products.

The Burroughs Wellcome company recently decided that enough was enough. After much soul searching, executives concluded that elimination of phenacetin made the most sense. We applaud their decisions.

In a candid conversation, company representatives indicated that they still believe "phenacetin is a safe and effective analgesic when taken as directed." But they recognized that "from a commercial standpoint, the growth of our Empirin product line has been hampered by the controversy and we therefore decided to reformulate."

Whatever the motivation, we believe that the Burroughs Wellcome company has made the right decision. The new prescription Empirin product will contain aspirin and codeine. This is an excellent combination for moderate to severe pain and we were surprised to discover that no other major pharmaceutical manufacturer provides such a simple and valuable formulation.

Although we blasted the old Empirin Compound for its phenacetin content, we believe the company now deserves praise from physicians and patients for eliminating this potentially dangerous ingredient.

This isn't the first time the Burroughs Wellcome company has acted in a responsible manner. When amphetamine abuse came to light in the 1960s, the company voluntarily took their product, Methedrine (methamphetamine) off the market.

When amyl nitrite (poppers) became a popular drug of abuse in the gay community for its alleged aphrodisiac properties, the company requested permission from the FDA to relabel their product Vaporole as a prescription drug because they were uncertain of its safety without medical supervision.

Perhaps one of the reasons that the Burroughs Wellcome company has been able to make progressive changes is because there is truth to their slogan, "Research is our only stockholder." All distributable profits of the firm go to the Wellcome Trust which in turn uses the money to fund basic medical research around the world.

Unfortunately, many other drug companies tend to demonstrate more concern about the health of their stockholders' finances than the well-being of their patients.

DEAR ABBY

Mom likes fun...but not games

DEAR ABBY: Here's a neat one for you. Mom was widowed many years ago and has since built herself a very successful career as a realtor. She's 60 ish, slim and attractive, but she's allowed her business to usurp her social life.

Recently, in showing a property, she met a widower her age who lives just a few blocks from her. He's tall, good looking, gray haired and well dressed. He lives alone in a big house and has several foreign cars. I've met him, and he's really a great guy who looks and acts like he's not exactly hungry.

Well, this gentleman has been giving Mom a big rush and providing her with lots of fun and laughter. Recently he sent Mom a semi-serious invitation in the mail inviting her to "spend several naughty days with me at one of California's most romantic spots - Carmel."

I said, "Mom, get with it and go!"
Mom said, "No way, it's just not my lifestyle!"
What do you say, Abby?

TODAY'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Don't try to redesign Mom in your image. It's not easy for some people to "get with it" when they've gotten along nicely WITHOUT it for years.

DEAR FRIEND: I've been a faithful reader for many years. The few times I disagreed with you, you subsequently printed a retraction or, at least, admitted the opposition had a good case. In this instance, I don't think you will, but I had to write anyway.

I refer to your attitude about a citizen's right to have a gun in his home. I'll admit some folks are not well advised to defend themselves against an armed intruder (children, those unfamiliar with weapons, and the senile). All others have a DUTY to resist evil.

If a burglar should call on me, he would find that my home and business are protected by a "silent intruder alarm." The installation record is not on any company's book; I put it in myself. I would have the advantage of surprise and, though I can't consistently shoot out the "O" ring at 62, I could probably wear my Navy marksmanship medals to his funeral, incidentally saving the state a bundle, too. In the apartment house where you probably live, the ratio of security people is about fifty to one. Out here in the jungle, the ratio is several thousand to one.

Fortunately, your attitude was not so prevalent in 1945; or we might have had an Auschwitz or Buchenwald in Milwaukee or Louisville. As the late Joseph Goebbels said to Heinrich Himmler, "Es geht zu denken" ("It makes one think"). You give it some thought, too, sweetheart, and you just might change your mind.

In any case, you've helped a lot of people and I still love you, even though I'll bet you won't print this.

BOBSTICKLER

DEAR BOB: You lose. P.S. Accede to the federal requirements of gun registration and you can have an arsenal if it makes you feel any more "American" - or secure.

DEAR ABBY: I'm planning my wedding and want to provide a nursery where the guests can leave all children under 4.

Do you think that would hurt the feelings of relatives with small children?

I don't want screaming babies, fussy or restless tots, or children dropping hymnals, all of which I've seen happen time and time again!

Small children are wonderful, but not when they cry and talk during a wedding ceremony which should be a sacred occasion.

Would it be proper to include a note with my wedding invitations notifying the guests that such a nursery is available for all children under 4?

BRIDE TO BE

DEAR BRIDE: It's not only proper, it's a great idea.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my daughter. (I'll call her Pam.) Pam is 15 and a women's libber already. She thinks it's every girl's right to do as she pleases as long as she's not hurting anybody and it's not against the law. This includes going braless, which is what she does.

Pam is a big girl. I mean top-heavy. If she wore a bra it would probably be a 38. Her teacher rang me up and told me that if Pam keeps coming to school without a bra, she'll be expelled.

Abby, do you know any 15-year girl who lets her mother dress her? Well, neither do I.

Please help me.

PAM'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Does Pam's school have a dress code? If it does, and a bra is required, Pam is out of bounds in more ways than one. If there is no dress code, Pam's teacher is guilty of making threats she can't enforce, and SHE is out of bounds. Call the principal and get the facts.

Fighting old Pennsylvania law

Widower asks for death benefits

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Marilyn McCusker had to fight to get her job as a coal miner. And when she died in a mine accident two weeks ago, her husband, Alan, realized his wife's struggle was only a battle in a larger conflict.

"They say that because I'm a man, I'm not deserving of survivors' benefits," said McCusker, who's become a soldier in the war for sexual equality.

After filing a sex discrimination suit against the Rushton Mining Co., Mrs. McCusker received a job and retroactive benefits through an out-of-court settlement two years ago.

Mrs. McCusker, a 35-year-old former nurses' aide, was buried alive at Rushton Mining's portal in Osceola Mills when a rock and dirt ceiling she was helping reinforce gave way.

She was the first woman in modern times killed while working in an underground mine.

Now her husband is a 28-year-old miner's widower with one child. McCusker went on leave from work before the accident to build the couple's new home.

"When Marilyn sued, it was with the understanding that it was for full benefits. That's what this whole thing was about," McCusker said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his home in Coalport in the heart of Pennsylvania's soft coal region.

McCusker decided to fight when a Pennsylvania Mines Corp. official told him his son is eligible for about $130 a week in benefits but because McCusker is capable of returning to his job as a carpenter he's ineligible.

"I just quoted the law to him," said Ron Brooks, a claims agent for Pennsylvania Mines, parent firm of Rushton Mining.

"I'm supposed to see a lawyer on Friday," McCusker said.

He's up against an old state law that says widows, rich or poor, healthy or sick, can collect survivor benefits. But it denies benefits to men whose working wives die on the job.

"The only thing he'd be entitled to is a

$1,500 burial fee," said Connie Mills, a legal assistant in the Harrisburg office that administers Pennsylvania's worker compensation laws.

Section 307, paragraph seven of the Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Law, I'm not saying it's fair, but it's the law," she said. "At one time women didn't work. This law is coming down to us from those times."

McCusker could get unexpected help. Proposed amendments would substitute "surviving spouse" for "widow" in the present laws, said an aide to the Senate Labor and Industry Committee chaired by Philadelphia Democrat Herbert Arlene.

But action on the proposal is not in sight, said the aide, who asked not to be quoted by name. Arlene was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

The costs of providing expanded coverage could stand in the way, the aide said. "We once had a bill that changed just the name of the law, and it went down in committee because some people thought it would cost too much for all the printing" cripping the summer tourist industry.

Dameron said starting Jan. 1 the U.S. Geological Survey will require workers on wells in federal waters to pass a one-week school that includes simulated practice in shutting down a well that has gone out of control.

Their training certificate must be renewed each year, Dameron said.

Asked if the Mexican government requires employees of PEMEX, the national oil monopoly, to attend such schools, Dameron replied:

"To my own knowledge, I don't think they do." The committee clerk said as of mid-day Tuesday, IXTOC 1 still had not been capped. It blew out June 3.

Dameron said blowouts result from "kicks," which he defined as intrusions of fluid into the formation.

Professor recommends blowout school

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A college petroleum engineering instructor recommends that workers on offshore rigs go to school to learn how to shut down wells in emergencies.

Bruce Dameron of Texas A&M University said company men, tool pushers and drillers should be taught in "blowout schools" how to respond to emergencies, "instead of on the rigs—that's not the place to learn it, really."

Dameron and general manager William Sky-Eagle Jr. of the Corpus Christi Area Oil Well Control Association testified Tuesday before the House Committee on Environmental Affairs.

House Speaker Bill Clayton instructed the committee to investigate the blowout of IXTOC 1 well in Campeche Bay. The PEMEX well spilled oil that flowed onto Texas beaches, apparently endangering fish and wildlife and severely

East Germany offering olive branch to West

BONN, West Germany (AP) — While the Soviet Union warns Western Europe against U.S. nuclear missiles on their territory, the East Germans are quietly offering the olive branch to West Germany in a major diplomatic initiative.

The Communist government in East Berlin has offered to negotiate a range of issues with Bonn, including improvements in the situation in West Berlin, reductions in transit fees for travel to the divided city, greater opportunities for travel between the two Germanys and disarmament.

Informed sources say the East Germans hope the overtures will open the way to a summit meeting between West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and East German's Communist Party chief, Erich Honecker.

Some observers think the East German initiative is a Soviet Bloc attempt to take advantage of current strains between the United States and West Germany to try to wean West Germany away from its strong support of NATO and the United States.

East Germany's overtures contrast sharply with Soviet P-president Leonid Brezhnev's warnings on Oct. 6 and again Tuesday that West Germany and other West European nations face grave risks if they agree to U.S. proposals to station 572 Pershing II and cruise missiles on their soil.

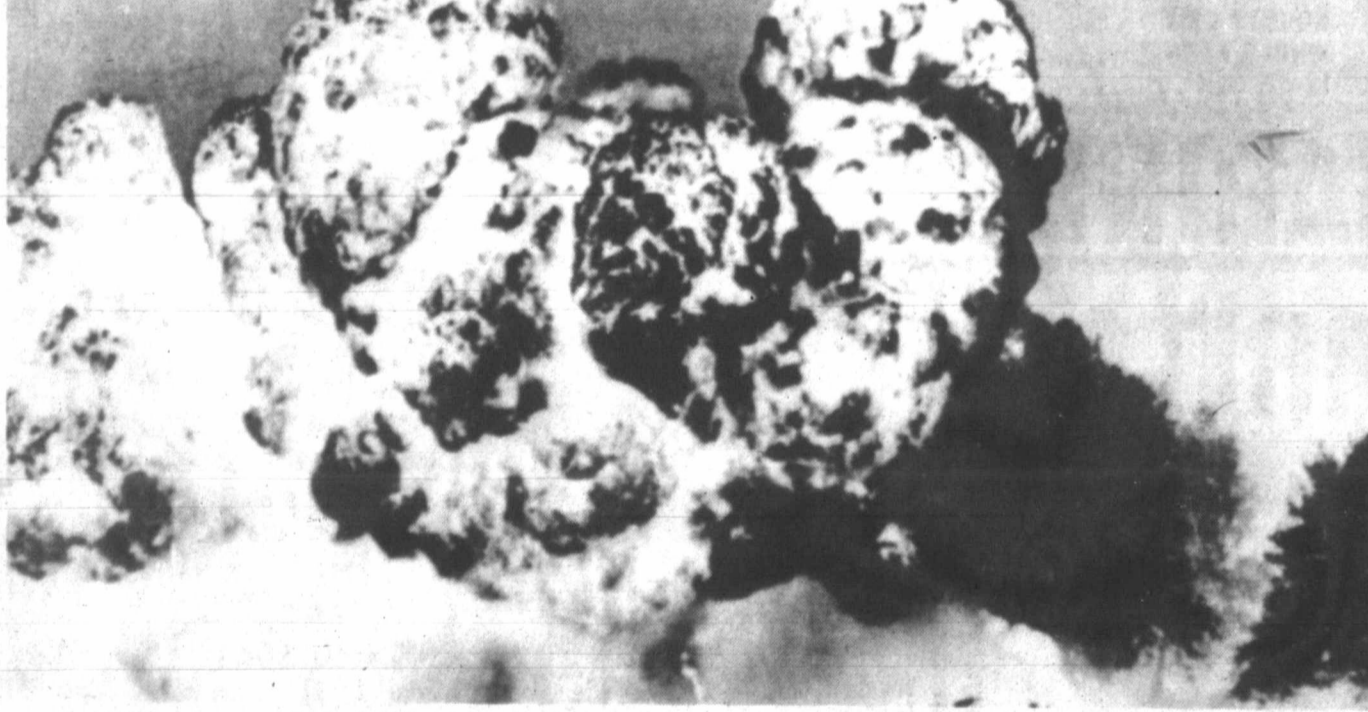

Schmidt has said West Germany will accept the missiles if at least one other NATO member on the Continent takes them. But Belgium and the Netherlands, the likeliest prospects, are wavering.

Honecker launched the East German initiative and Brezhnev issued his first warning simultaneously, in speeches at the celebration of the 30th anniversary of the East German Republic. Honecker was overshadowed because Brezhnev at the same time announced he was withdrawing up to 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from East Germany and offered to negotiate a reduction in the Soviet medium-range missiles that threaten Western Europe.

The East German leader offered to enter negotiations with West Germany and said: "We see the possibility of clarifying a series of issues which could contribute to the securing of peace and disarmament. Above all, the two German states could cooperate on the question of disarmament."

In a gesture of good faith, his government released a number of prisoners. They included dissident economist Rudolf Bahro and anti-militarist Nico Huebner, who in West Germany are symbols of resistance to tyranny.

NBC takes another run at first place in ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC took another impressive run at first place in the networks' ratings race, but ABC scored with the first three games of baseball's World Series and finished No. 1 in the week ending Oct. 14 by a fair margin, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

The month-old season has, for ABC, been something of a struggle. Last season's runaway winner, predicted by many in the industry to repeat as No. 1 in 1979-80, listed only three shows in the first 10 for the week, all World Series games.

ABC's rating for the week was, nonetheless, 21, with NBC second at 18.8 and CBS third — for the fourth week in a row — at 17.9.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

NBC had four shows in the week's Top 10, including "The Miracle Worker," "Cliffs," "Little House on the Prairie" and a movie, "When Hell was in Session."

"The Miracle Worker," a new television version of the stage and screen hit of two decades ago, finished fourth in the ratings, behind the second game in the baseball championships between Baltimore and Pittsburgh, CBS' "M-A-S-H," and the series' first game.

The rating for the week's most-watched show, the second game of the series Thursday night, was 28.8. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 28.8 percent saw at least a part of the sports special.

NBC, which finished dead last in the ratings in the 1978-79 season, won the competition two of the first three weeks of the current season. The network's challenge to ABC in the week of Oct. 8-14 was damaged by poor ratings for two shows from the network's news department.

"Prime Time Sunday" finished 53rd and "Henry Kissinger: An Interview with David Frost," was 57th, or last. The Kissinger program apparently was damaged in the ratings by a controversy several days before the air date over editing of the interview.

CBS' "Paris" was No. 54 for the week, with "The Lazarus Syndrome" on ABC 55th and a movie, "Lifeguard," also on CBS, 56th.

New series continued to struggle for ratings points. NBC's "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo" was the highest-rated of the season's new programs, No. 21.

Gorshin in "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century"

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Gorshin spent a couple seasons in the mid-1960's as The Riddler on TV's "Batman," and he's back Thursday evening to conclude a two-week guest run in another series drawn from the comics — "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" on NBC.

There is, in Gorshin's mind, a connection.

"My first inclination when they suggested 'Buck Rogers' was negative," says Gorshin, perhaps best known as a master impressionist. "The part was too much like Riddler."

"It was a comic book character, as Riddler was. He was a villain.

as Riddler was. He was in outer space, as Riddler was not.

"Then I thought, what the heck, I got a big boost from 'Batman,' so why not do 'Buck Rogers'?"

Indeed, Gorshin is convinced taking the role in "Batman" was a big step forward in his career.

"I could feel the impact almost overnight," he recalls. Gorshin says he was recognized on the street, and soon became a headliner in nightclubs in Las Vegas and around the country.

"Since then, I haven't done that much acting," he says, "though I'd like to do more."

In "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," NBC's new space adventure series starring Gil Gerard, Gorshin plays Kellogg, an evil character who runs a so-called Legion of Death. "He fancies himself as a genius," Gorshin says, "a man who is capable of doing things others can't."

"He disintegrates in the second episode," the actor says. "I asked Bruce Lansbury, the producer, 'I don't suppose this character will ever reappear?' He said, 'Oh, sure, anything can happen.'"

Frank Gorshin was born in Pittsburgh, and began doing impressions of some of his movie heroes as a teen-ager.

Julie Harris assigned rather unique task

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Harris had the rather unique task recently of portraying two major literary figures simultaneously — Emily Dickinson on stage and Charlotte Bronte on radio.

"I think when I started acting," the five-time Tony-winner says, "understanding the case a bit, 'I felt that was one of the benefits, and one of the challenges, of being an actress, that I could be a lot of different people."

Miss Harris' current, somewhat unusual professional relationship with "The Belle of Amherst" — Miss Dickinson — and "Carrer Bell, Esq." — Miss Bronte — is hardly surprising in light of her lifelong affection for the two women and their work.

"I think I sort of read them side-by-side," she recalls, "beginning in high school with Emily Bronte's 'Wuthering Heights' and Charlotte's 'Jane Eyre.'"

"I was reading the letters of Emily Dickinson," Miss Harris says, "and then I realized that there were letters of Charlotte's that were in existence and then sort of side-by-side... there was so much work to do."

"Carrer Bell, Esq.," concludes a two-week run on many National Public Radio stations at 6 p.m. EDT Sunday. It's the season's premiere program in NPR's "Masterpiece Radio Theater" series.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

October 19, 1979

This coming year you will establish several very important relationships. One will prove helpful to you in business. In fact, you may even become partners in a new enterprise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Being in the company of doers today will inspire you to greater heights. You'll realize their capabilities are no greater than yours. How to get along with other signs is one of the sections you enjoy in your new Astro-Graph Letter which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It may take a little push to get you going today, but once you get started you're dynamite. Don't be apprehensive about challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your enthusiasm is easily aroused today and there is justification for your optimism. Something you've been wanting to happen could come about.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Have the courage of your convictions today and you'll be able to change something affecting your work or career for the better. Be bold but not brash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) In arrangements with others today, let the other person take the lead

if he or she is more qualified. Be supportive rather than superior.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Lead by example today instead of worrying whether co-workers are doing their full share. Your industriousness will inspire them to be more productive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Business can be blended with pleasure to your advantage today. Put your big deal together in a fun atmosphere for best results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Surprisingly, the harder you work today the greater reserves of energy you will have to draw upon, especially if you are doing something artistic or creative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Doing things calling for executive skills will be right up your alley today. You know how to get things done quickly and efficiently.

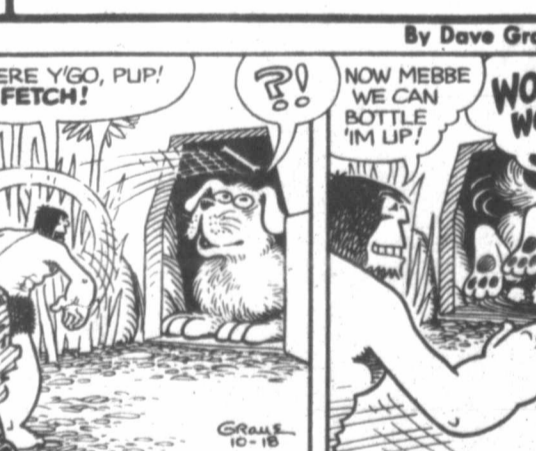

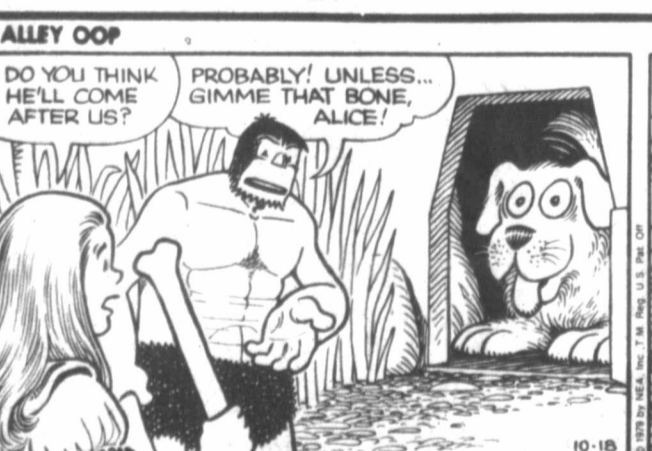

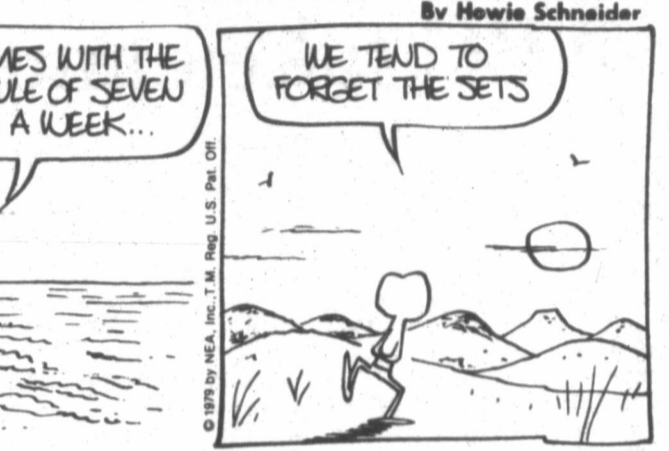

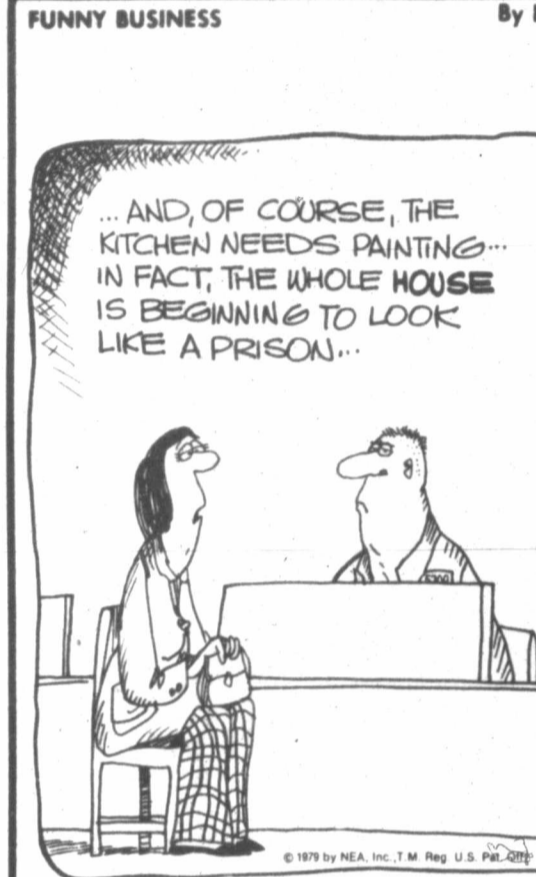

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Where profit is the motive today, you're not likely to end up in second place. However, what you hope to gain will not be for selfish reasons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Situations in which you can use your initiative is where you will shine today. You'll feel no one can do it better than you — and you're right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A matter that another has given up on because he lacks your foresight could yield a handsome return for you today. Patch the pieces together.

Middleweight champion of Kewanee

KEWANEE, Ill. (AP) — The night Young Stuhley died — crushed by a highballing freight — he was drunk, rockin' and drunk, so drunk the coroner said "in his condition he neither heard nor saw the train."

There is talk that Young Stuhley committed suicide. But nobody here believes it. They refuse to believe it. To them, he was "the uncrowned middleweight champion of the world."

In the 1930s, there wasn't a dandy from here to Hollywood who could match young Hayden Nicholas Stuhlsatz, the glittering fighter "with the Clark Gable profile."

In those days, he was fighting — and beating — the best middleweight boxers in the world.

But that was a long time ago, and everybody knew Young Stuhley was a sad creature the night last week — four days after he turned 68 — when he stepped out in front of three Burlington & Northern engines in the Kewanee rail yards.

Everybody knew he was a has-been wandering around with his wrinkled raincoat flapping in the wind and old fight pictures under his arm.

Everybody knew that his manager had bungled his career and taken his money. "I was sold down the river," Stuhley said, contending until the day he died that his manager had urged him to throw fights for quick money and promised title chances that never came.

"He was one of the best," Yit Anderson said sadly as heads nodded up and down the bar at the Pioneer Club on Whiskey Row. "But he was an unhappy person. He lived in the past."

Nobody here believes Stuhley just ended it all by taking a dive in front of a train. He was their champion.

"There was no tank dive here," said Julian "Pal" Wilamowski, a retired judge who quit boxing as an amateur while his friend Stuhley went on to become a professional.

Pal and Stuhley grew up together and boxed together at the Grand Theater and the Dreamland Dance Hall in Kewanee, a roaring fight town in the 1920s. Jack Stuhlsatz, a German immigrant baker, dreamed that his sons, Hayden and Paul, would become champions in the ring.

"When the Stuhlsatz boys fought, people would throw money in the yard to show their appreciation for a good match," said George Lilly. "Young Stuhley was the fastest thing you ever saw."

Stuhley lost only two amateur fights before turning pro in 1929. Then rang up a string of 51 straight wins before losing to Kid Leonard in Iowa. In a rematch, he beat the Kid in 10 rounds.

In his 12 years as a professional, Stuhley won 102 of 121 fights, but none was a title bout.

The highlight of his career came in 1934 when he beat Vince Dundee, the reigning middleweight champ, in a bruising 10-round affair in Chicago.

How they cheered him that night! Mills Stadium was lit up like a bonfire and the crowd screamed itself hoarse at the sight of glamorous young Stuhley and his electrifying left jab.

The light of the universe shone on him that night and afterwards.

He had a movie star's face, with a fineboned nose, a Roman chin, hair slicked back like Valentino and great black sad eyes. A Los Angeles sportswriter called him "the gent with the Clark Gable profile."

He sported $200 suits and big white Panama hats surrounded himself with a flashy entourage and attended Hollywood parties. He made a couple of film shorts with J. Carrol Naish.

"In the 1930s, at the height of his career, he was a star, a hero, a person who had the idolatry that attends big shots," said Wilamowski. "He was always impeccably dressed, always wore a rec. carnation in his lapel, and when he walked down the street with his beautiful body, kids would flock to him."

Stuhley said later he probably squandered a million dollars, no small part of it in the string of bars known as Whiskey Row, where drinks for "Stuhley's friends" were always on Stuhley.

One day he walked into a greasy spoon restaurant by accident and announced, as always, "Drinks are on Stuhley!"

"This ain't no bar, Stuhley," the owner said. "This is a hamburger joint."

Stuhley paused only briefly, then threw out his arms as if to embrace the room.

"Hamburgers for everybody!" he cried. He would stride down Tremont Street, his pockets filled with silver dollars that he would give to children.

"He'd say, 'Here kid, remember Stuhley. Remember Stuhley,'" said Teddy Canellos, who used to shine shoes on the street. "He looked like downtown Chicago right here in Kewanee."

When a friend expressed doubt that Stuhley was really invited to a Hollywood party at George Raft's house, he phoned Raft so the friend could hear it straight from the actor. He always carried a picture signed by Bing Crosby, who came to the dressing room after a fight and followed Stuhley's career for a time.

Princess watches surgery

HOUSTON (AP) — Princess Margaret, after denying she ever called the Irish "pigs", watched researchers at the famed Houston medical center do experimental operations on a calf and took one brief glimpse at open-heart surgery, and said, "Yah...shall we go now."

The younger sister of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II ended a three-day visit to Houston Wednesday afternoon and headed for Los Angeles, San Francisco and Cleveland.

She is touring the United States in an effort to raise $4.5 million to help improve the historic Royal Opera House of London, where the royal ballet performs.

Chicago Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet reported Tuesday the princess told Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, "The Irish, they are pigs."

Then, Kupcinet quoted the princess as saying to the mayor, "Oh, Oh, you are Irish."

The mayor's ancestors came from County Mayo.

Lord Nigel Napier, a spokesman for the princess, said Wednesday the princess had authorized release of a statement that denied the remark.

He said, "There is no truth in the allegation made whatsoever. I was not sitting at the same table with the princess, but she said she did not make that remark."

"I was there when the mayor said goodbye to the princess and it was in the nicest possible way. There was no ill feeling. I say again there is no truth in the report."

Mrs. Byrne said the princess did not call all the Irish people "pigs" and was referring only to the Irish Republican Army terrorists during a conversation about the slaying of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Lord Mountbatten, a cousin of the princess, was killed by an IRA bomb. Mrs. Byrne attended the funeral in behalf of President Carter.

The mayor also speculated the dinner guests might have misinterpreted an earlier conversation in which she and the princess talked about "Irish jigs." She denied leaving the party early.

Kupcinet said he got the story from someone "who was seated right next to the mayor." He declined to reveal the source's name.

Here comes the Metric system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Traveling Metric Show rolls into Michigan this week, an effort aimed at persuading Americans to measure milk by the liter, hamburger by the kilogram and the miles to grandmother's house by the kilometer.

Americans gave the system mixed reviews at U.S. Metric Board hearings earlier this year in Dallas, Boston and San Francisco.

Indeed, Americans have steadfastly ignored the metric system despite its being the official system of weights and measures since 1893. This country — alone among the world's industrial nations — seems to prefer using quarts and pints, and more obscure measures such as bushels and pecks, all four of which can be converted to the metric liter.

The only other non-metric nations are Brunei, Burma, Liberia and North and South Yemen.

The sessions in Dearborn, Mich., on Thursday and Friday are expected to feature a lively discussion on the merits of metrics, according to Bill DeReuter of the Metric Board, with auto industry figures arguing both sides of the question.

Congress created the board in 1975 to "coordinate the voluntary conversion to the metric system." While many consider this a mandate to encourage Americans to give up yards, pounds and gallons in exchange for meters, grams and liters, others — even board members — disagree.

And if it is a mandate, it is one without teeth, since conversion is voluntary.

Changeover activists include U.S. industries that want to sell their products overseas where the metric system is nearly universal.

But firm opposition also exists, from people for whom the English system is too deeply ingrained to those, like the garage mechanic with a full set of English system socket wrenches, who hope to avoid the inevitable costs of the changeover.

Nonetheless, the board predicts the metric system will be the dominant system in the United States by 1990.

In Detroit, the car companies are already converting to metrics because of their large involvement in overseas markets, and they are pushing for other industries to follow.

However, the United Auto Workers union is concerned the costs of retooling to accommodate metric measurement would be borne by car owners and mechanics, according to DeReuter.

Distilleries and vineyards, under pressure from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, were leaders in adopting metrics, but the changeover brought price increases for wine and liquor buyers.

A federal study last year noted that "most wines and distilled spirits that were converted to metric sizes experienced unit price increases greater than those that did not convert."

Town shocked by innocent verdict

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Four years ago today, Erwin Charles Simants shot and killed six members of the Henry Kellie family in the western Nebraska hamlet of Sutherland. Once again, the town is in shock.

On the eve of the anniversary, a jury of eight women and four men in Lincoln, 250 miles away, returned a verdict that stunned the residents of Sutherland — innocent by reason of insanity.

"I think I'm pretty mad about the situation," said city utilities director Clyde Lindstrom. "Everybody thinks he should have been convicted."

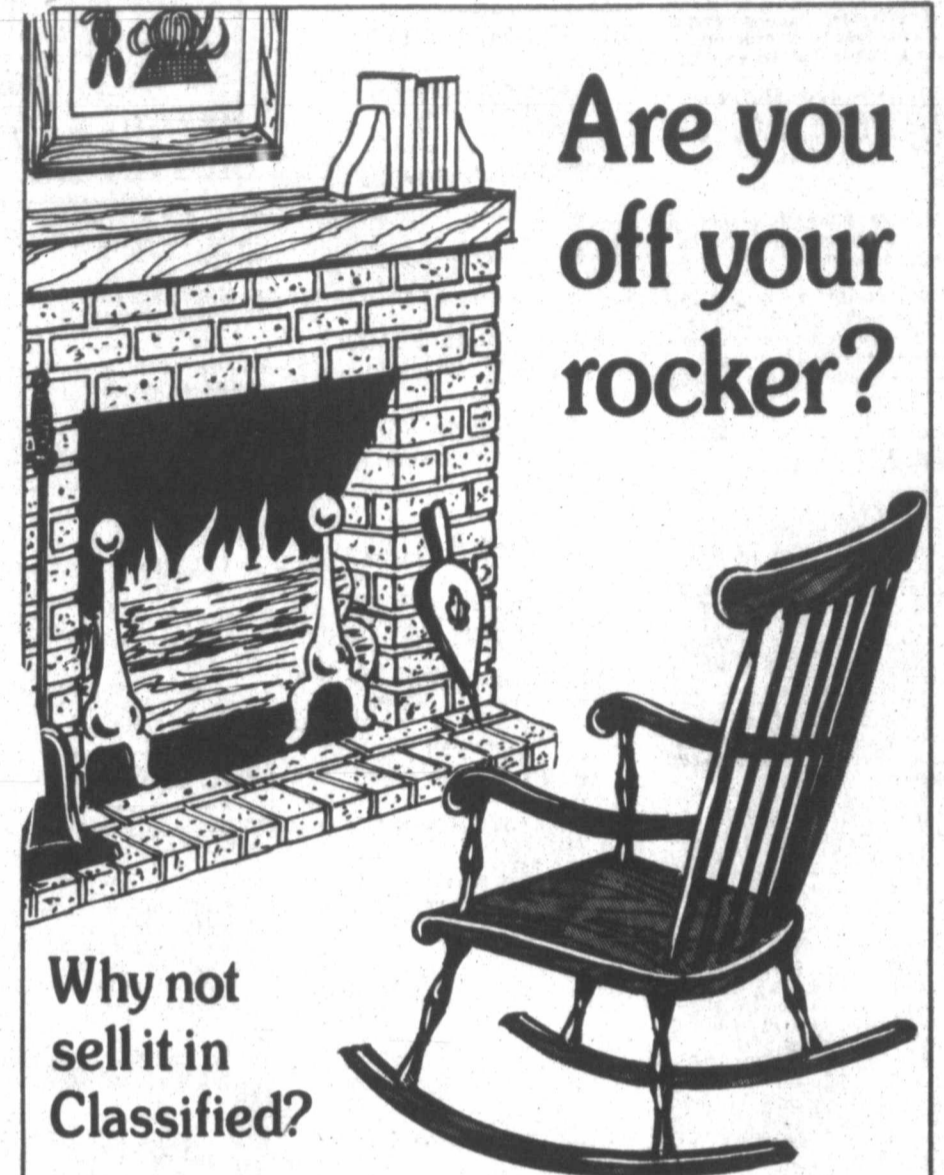

Wednesday's verdict, which followed 18 hours of deliberations, concluded a case that reached to the nation's highest court.

In 1975, Simants, a 33-year-old farm laborer, was found guilty of six counts of first-degree murder in the Kellie killings and was sentenced to die. But the Nebraska Supreme Court set aside that verdict last April.

And when the judge issued a gag order in the first trial, a challenge by the Nebraska Press Association and others led to a landmark press freedom decision by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Nearly all the 850 residents of Sutherland knew Kellie, 66, his 57-year-old wife, Audrey, son David, 32, and grandchildren Florence, 10, Deanna, 7, and David, 5. Their funerals were held in the high school gym.
