Multiple driver permits can be licenses to kill

Recently, a man entered the driver's license office of the Texas Department of Public Safety and said his out-of-state driver's license had been stolen. He wasnted a new one.

Clutched in the man's hand were a traffic ticket from an area town and a sack containing a wallet and some burned documents. Driver's Licence Clerk Carol Mackey asked

The man did have his wallet. "See how my papers were burned?" he pointed out. There was no license among them, however, and the man left the office without a license.

Mrs. Macky thought the man's story was not quite on the level, so she ran a license check on Central Records on these late starters. the man's out-of-state license number. She found the man indeed had a license — a suspended one - and he had already received a speeding ticket

This is one particular incident which has happened in Pampa. How many people are obtaining illegal driver licenses every day? How many walk in the DPS Driver's License officer with a false birth certificate, pass their tests and walk out with a bogus drivers license?

According to Mrs. Macky, the DPS uses several methods to stop these people from getting false driving permits. If the man had used a birth certificate, passed the test and received a 45-day permit, she believes the Central Records department in Austin would have caught it, and permit would have been

Acting president names new director of Korean secret police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Acting President Choi Kyu-hah named a new director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency today in what was seen as the first major step to consolidate the government's position following the killing of President Park Chung-hee by the KCIA's former head. The government also announced relaxation of the curfew and other martial law restrictions, as the fourth day since Park's death passed with no disturbances.

Choi appointed the vice army chief ofo staff, Lt. Gen. Lee Hui-sung, as acting KCIA chief to replace Kim Jas-kyu, under arrest for the assassination of Park Friday

Sources said Choi's first appointment was an important move by Choi and the military leaders cooperating with him to take over the now-disorganized secret police organization, a mainstay of support for Park in suppressing dissent and political opposition during the late president's 18 years of autocratic rule.

The sources also said Choi and two other former prime ministers are leading contenders to succeed Park.

They said Choi, a veteran bureaucrat be made within a certain period," who was prime minister when Park was assassinated, and top military commanders are firmly in charge at the moment. Meanwhile, the political leadership of Park's Democratic Republican Party is in disarray and is being ignored by Choi and the generals, the sources reported.

The leading candidates for the presidency appear to be two former military men who were among those closest to Park and served him as prime minister: Kim Jong-pil and Chung Il-kwon. Kim was the chief organizer of the 1961 coup that put Park in power and the founder and first head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, while Chung has held a number of top army and political Another source said: "Choi does not have strong connections with the military or the party. That's his weakest point, but in this situation it's also his strongest point."

Most sources agreed that the new government would have to relax the tight restrictions on dissent and opposition to the government because of the unrest that has been growing recently.

Key cabinet members and military officials, including the martial law commander, Gen. Chung Seung-hwa, and the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter today chose Shirley M. Hufstedler, the first woman federal appeals judge, to be the first secretary of the Department of Education.

Carter, in a statement read to reporters by a spokesman, called Mrs. Hufstedler "one of the best minds in the country to fill the position."

Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said Mrs. Hufstedler, 54, met with Carter Monday afternoon, when the job offer was made and accepted. Her selection is subject to Senate confirmation. Mrs. Hufstedler is the third woman named to a Cabinet post by Carter. The others are Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and HEW -Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris.

The president, in his statement, said Mrs. Hufstedler "could take a new fresh look at the way we educate our children.

"She is deeply committed to the quality of education and enjoys my full confidence and support," Carter said. "I am certain she will be an outstanding secretary.'

In a companion statement issued by the White House press office, Mrs. Hufstedler said she intended to carry out the administration's "long commitment to focusing attention on the real educational needs of our children.'

Florida growers in great tomato war

It would be much simpler and less disastrous if it involved only the free market and the principle of supply and demand, and that is as it should be. We are referring now to the "Great Tomato War" between Florida growers and Mexico.

We read the other day that the latest burner sticker in Central Florida reads, Another Endangered Species - Florida Vegetable

A columnistt in a produce trade paper observed: "It's catchy, but it is not funny; government regulation and a total lack of empathy on the part of the administration toward the plight of Florida vegetable producers faced with undue competition from foreign producers could put them out of business within the foreseeable future - and even that fellow in the Congress who thinks so highly of Mexican tomatoes would find his winter vegetable selection limited somewhat - to canned and frozen forms of many varieties.

Texas producers have not become involved in the fracas. For one thing. Texas does not produce all that many tomatoes now (Mexico competition and other forces long ago ended the big-scale tomato deal in South Texas). For one thing, many Texans are involved in the business of importing tomatoes (and other vegetables) from Mexico.

Florida growers look at the problem differently. They are a prime domestic source for winter tomatoes - and Florida growers, also produce many other winter vegetables, as does the Valley. The Florida producers are convinced that Mexican growers are dumping their tomatoes in an effort to drive the Florida growers out of the competition. They have asked the government to take steps to restrict foreign competition, but Alfred K. Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation fighter, urged that federal anti-dumping statutes not be applied to perishable items.

The Florida producers did not like that, and some said they were being sacrificed in the countrys's quest for oil. One grower predicted that the salad would soon cost more than the steak. And the Mexican growers called the Florida growers "selfish

One is aware that Mexico has cheaper labor, and that the Mexican government permits use of chemical pesticides which are banned on this side of the Rio Grande. Also, Mexico has a trade deficit with us.

As a result, to give one example, buyers for one of the nation's largest supermarket chains recently were purchasing eggplants at the produce exchange in Nogales, Arizona, at one-third the price they would have to pay American growers.

We mention Nogales because it is the site of a border "imports community" where about 600 persons work in refrigerated warehouses, and customs and transportation employ many others. The entire economy of that town of 9,000 persons depends on the importing of produce from Mexico. About 40,000 truckloads of produce leave there for northern cities each year.

The attorney for the Florida growers said they are fighting for survival and "they're going out of business right and left." But on the other hand, observers point out that restrictions on imports would lift the American inflation rate and worsen an already explosive issue. One columnist commented. It may well be a war in which there is no winner and there are many losers.

The solution does not rest with government. except its absense.

One of its latest productions, on toxic chemicals, ran for two hours under the title "A Plague on Times Op-Ed page, he gave the following Our Children," which seems accurately to reflect the pitch of its tone. Reviewers were roused to fierce indignation by the show's case histories of citizens victimized by giant corporations and by the heartless response of industry spokesmen.

Now, a serious debate is necessary on the handling and disposal of hazardous chemicals, especially since they must often be used in basic manufacturing. Is the country willing to forgo certain products for the sake of an absolute ban on any dangerous materials required to make them? If not, how should we balance the costs and benefits? These are serious questions, and we would imagine at least some industry spokesmen tried to raise them in their interviews with the film crews. But the decision of the film editors determines whether thoughts end up in the finished program or on the cutting-room floor, a fact that the program's reviewers seem to have forgotten.

Should we expect Hanoi to feed them indefinitely when they refuse to grow food in a country desperately short of food? Would it be better for them to be forced to stay and rot in cities? Do we really expect Hanoi to let them take out war-accumulated wealth?

Mr. Richter's friends complain that his film on Vietnam has received only a very limited showing. We would suggest that it ought to appear on NOVA, complete with the standard corporate underwriting that series receives, so that the viewers can And for a sample of the fairness and derive a more complete picture of the objectivity this program was likely to bring' attitudes behind some of the to discussing American corporations, one "documentaries" on American business inflation on the American pocketbook. Buying power is down tremendously and the dollar's value is continuously shrinking: Although there are many links to inflation, a major one is productivity

When most Americans see or hear the word "productivity" or the cry, "We need to increase our productivity," they envision a tired employee sweating over a conveyor belt with a mean and surly supervisor standing over him screaming, "Faster, faster! More, more!"

That is not what writers or speakers mean when they cite the need for greater growth in productivity. Politicians. business leaders and economists do not

are really concerned with is maintaining American's standard of living

Technically, productivity is defined as the output which results from one hour of labor input. Translated, that means the amount of material that a worker produces each hour that he is on the job.

Obviously then, more than just the worker is involved when speaking of productivity. What does the employee have to work with? Are his machines more modern or obsolete? Are the workers highly skilled and well-trained or are they new to the work force?

All of the above is important information for economists and policy-makers because productivity is directly tied to inflation.

No one needs to be told of the ravages of wish to return to sweat shops. What they The Joint Economic Committee of Congress, in its report entitled 'Midyear Review of the Economy: The Outlook for 1979." joined the two as follows: "The relationship between productivity growth causes inflation to accelerate, and

> From this it becomes quite clear that any discussion of inflation and how to slow it down must include a thorough examination of the nation's productivity growth. To illustrate this even more clearly, look at the following figures quoted by the National Association of Manufacturers. In 1955 wages increased 3.7 percent and productivity rose 4.1 percent. The cost of production attributed to labor, the unit labor cost, dropped 0.4 percent. That same year there was a 0.4 percent drop in the Consumer Price Index (CPI), which is an indicator of inflation. In contrast, in 1978 wages rose 9.3 percent against a productivity increase of 0.4 percent. Unit labor costs increased 8.9 percent. The CPI. inflation, rose 9 percent.

So how is the U.S. faring in its productivity rate? Not well, unfortunately. Consider this:

Internationally, the U.S. looks pathetic. Productivity in Japan grew four times faster than in the United States from 1950 to 1977. In France, Italy and Germany, it grew two and one-half times faster. Great Britain scored productivity gains two orthree times our own from 1967 to 1977.

Although we still out-produce foreign workers, the gap is closing quickly. Withinsix years, if present trends continue. France and Germany will be out-producing us; Japan and Canada will follow soon

Since World War II our productivity has grown. But the growth has tended to diminish until, for the first half of 1979, output per hour in the private business sector actually decreased at an annual rate of 3.3 percent.

Many things contribute to this slowdown in productivity. Some of them are: the lack of small savers due to inflation, whose funds could otherwise be available for investment in plant modernization; higher energy prices; increased government regulations; a reduction in the contribution from advances of knowledge; slower growth of the capital-labor ratio and more.

But overall, what needs to change is the mindset of policy-makers. We have to look at the supply side of the inflation problem, i.e., productivity.

Free trade or fair trade Berry's World

Adam Smith to Milton Friedman, have been ardent believers in free trade. Tariffs and other restrictions, they assert, are just so many conspiracies to rob the consumer. If another country can manufacture an item more cheaply than it can be turned out at home, why shouldn't the consumer be allowed the benefit of the lower price? Why instead should government protect a domestic industry at his expense? There is no denying the logic of this argument. In practice, free trade leads to specialization, to efficient use of resources. and to greater prosperity for all nations. It also has an important side effect: by making nations more dependent on each other, it furthers international cooperation The problem is that nations, like individuals, do not always behave logically-even when their long-term best interests are at stake. Many of our trading partners, for exampe, have really not embraced the principles of free trade to the same extent that we have. Thus, while there has been a general lowering of tariffs in recent years, the Japanese and the Europeans have raised "safety," "quality control," and other red-tape barriers to American goods while enjoying easy access to our own markets. This situation has contributed to our current balance of payments deficit.

In the continuing debate on this issue, two extreme solutions have been proposed.

Proponents of the market economy, from One is that we return to high tariffs-a move that would prompt our frading partners to do the same and would ultimately hurt us all. The other-the pure free market solution-is to do nothing. As Milton Friedman has observed, protectionism invariably backfires. By contributing to our balance of payments deficit, our trading partners are weakening the dollar, and correspondingly lowering the price of American goods relative.to theirs. In time, the balance will right itself.

Unfortunately, until this adjustment is made, we must contend with business failures and massive unemployment. For this reason, most Americans are likely to find this solution even less appealing than

Perhaps the best policy lies between the two extremes. If we cannot have free trade, let us have fair trade. In other words, let us serve notice on our trading partners that while we will not resort to tariffs, we will impose the same non-tariff barriers on their goods that they impose on ours.

When Europe and Japan were in ruins at the end of World War II. this country had the strongest economy in the world. While we enjoyed economic pre-eminence, we could afford a liberal policy on imports. Today, faced with a major trade deficit and the OPEC hemorrhage we can no longer do so. We have been generous to our trade partners in the past. It is not too much now to ask that they be fair to us.

Trial of Viet crabbers opens

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) - A 35-year-old Gulf Coast fisherman "was begging for what he got" when he was shot down this summer at the height of tensions involving Vietnamese crabbers, says a defense attorney for two Vietnamese brothers charged with the slaying.

Testimony in the trial was scheduled to get underway following opening arguments at 9 a.m. today. The jury includes two retired Air Force officers who served in Vietnam.

Sau Van Nguyen. 21, is charged with murder and his brother, Chinh Van Nguyen, 20, is charged as an accomplice. The state provided two interpreters to sit beside the defendants and translate the proceedings to them Lawyer Pat Maloney of San Antonio told prospective jurors Monday that the victim, Billy Joe Aplin, was "a notorious brute and bully," was known to carry a loaded weapon and had knifed Sau and beaten him the day of the murder.

Aplin's widow and two of his three children were in the courtroom Monday for the jury selection, which ended about 6:30 p.m.

Aplin was killed with two shots from a .38-caliber handgun on the evening of Aug. 3 near the fishing village of Seadrift, about 70 miles up the coast from Corpus Christi.

Laying the ground for a self-defense case, Maloney said Aplin was about "100 pounds larger and a foot taller" than Sau, who is 5-foot-5, 120 pounds, or Chinh, who is 5-6, 127 pounds

District Judge Clarence Stevenson of Victoria moved the trial from Calhoun County, where the slaying occurred, to Seguin because of the tensions in Seadrift, a town of about 1,000 population, including about 200 Vietnamese refugees. Most of the Vietnamese were brought in to work in a crab-processing plant.

Disputes quickly rose as fishermen complained the Vietnamese violated local tradition by fishing on top of their lines instead of searching out their own territory.

After the killing, three Vietnamese fishing boats were burned, and a Vietnamese residence was hit by a firebomb

Maloney told the prospective jurors the facts would show "that Sau had every right to arm himself because he saw his life and property were in danger.

He said Aplin "threatened to kill him and throw him into the

Great-grandmother leads Dallas Klan

DALLAS (AP) - Her modest home is shaded by a large pecan tree, and inside a rocking chair sits near a fireplace. But visitors suspect there is something unsual about this place from the moment they ring the doorbell.

It plays "The Star Spangled Banner."

Visitors are sure when they enter and find Addie Barlow Frazier. 73, a great-grandmother, wearing a Ku Klux Klan robe and hood. KKK earrings and a Klan medallion.

She has a KKK altar and sacred sword in her bedroom and keeps a loaded pistol by her bed. 'We risk our lives to wear these robes and hoods.." says Mrs.

Frazier, who holds the Klan post of "Kleagle of the Realm." She says she spends her time "promoting God's word through the Klan." Mrs. Frazier has stirred a local controversy by obtaining a parade pemit for a Klan march in downtown Dallas next Saturday morning. The Klan hasn't marched in Dallas since the 1920s. Anti-Klan groups have merged for a counter-demonstration half an hour later along the same parade route. "We're getting up the white Christian army to fight these Communist devils," she said. "We'll fight them with ballots and boycotts. We don't use bullets unless we have to - for self defense."

Mrs. Frazier says Saturday's Klan march billed "The March of the Christian Soldiers." is being held "to save an endangered species - the white race.

"Freedom of assembly is one of the freedoms white people are losing." said Mrs. Frazier, a widow who became active in the Klan in the mid-1950s. She calls herself a "dedicated fanatic" and says her behavior carries certain risks.

"I was looking at television one night when a brick was hurled through the front door (window). I found a stick of dynamite on my driveway once. I've found dead cats in my flower bed. I've had people threaten to assassinate me." she said.

But so far nothing has happened to her.

"If I were any healthier I'd have to take something for it." she said. "Somebody will have to shoot me to get rid of me. And there are plenty of people who'd like to do it.

"I guess the reason I'm not scared is that I'm a dedicated fanatic." Besides her Klan trappings, Mrs. Frazier keeps an American flag and a Confederate flag in her bedroom. "I used to keep them outside, but too many of them got stolen. I can't afford to keep buying them.'

Curtis denounces latest indictment, says grand jury stacked against him

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Efforts to use a murder defendant's confession led to the indictment of the Potter County district attorney and a chief of detectives for conspiracy to commit aggravated perjury.

District Attorney Tom Curtis denounced Monday's indictment as ridiculous, calling it the latest effort to harass him by a grand jury he characterized as "stacked" with political enemies and controlled by the Amarillo Globe-News. "The allegations are groundless. I'm guilty of no wrongdoing in connection with this case," Curtis said. The indictment concerned testimony Capt. E.N. Smith gave last February during a pre-trial hearing in Fort Worth. Smith testified there was no enticement and no taint to the confession of murder defendant Jimmy Vanderbilt because the suspect did not ask for an attorney after he was arrested and brought in for Later, a secret tape recording made during the the Vanderbilt interrogation revealed he asked several times for a > Vanderbilt's earlier conviction on capital murder charges was overturned because Curtis reneged on a promise not to seek the death penalty if he confessed, an appeals court said.

After listening to the secret tape, a judge disallowed use of Vanderbilt's confession, but a Beaumont jury convicted him this summer on circumstantial evidence.

He was sentenced to death in the slaving four years ago of Katina Moyer, 16-year-old daughter of then-State Rep. Hudson Moyer. "The grand jury is not interested in convictions. They're interested in harassing me, and they're doing a good job of it," said Curtis, indicted by the same grand jury two months ago on a charge of official misconduct. Both charges named in the indictments were misdemeanors. The first, issued in August, was dismissed by a judge who said it failed to allege an offense. The grand jury indicted Curtis after he subpoenaed tape recordings made of his appearance before the grand jury.

"I'm confident we will get this one thrown out just like the other indictment was," Curtis said.

"It's a press deal. The newspaper is trying to make the news instead of reporting it, and it's crept into the grand jury system. They're trying to get the grand jury to run interference for their litigation against me and for the libel action I've been contemplating against them for some time." Curtis said.

Jerry Huff, executive editor of the Amarillo newspaper, is on the grand jury which indicted Curtis and Smith. James L. Whyte, vice president and general manager of the newspaper, is on a second grand jury that was recently named.

Curtis said at least three other grand jurors are out to get him - a man he once won a conviction against for violating his grand juror's oath; the secretary of a county commissioner he won a conviction against; and the former investigator for a county attorney he won a conviction against for misapplication for funds.

'And the judge that stacked 'em up is a longstanding political enemy of mine. It's beginning to sound a little bizarre, isn't it?" asked Curtis.

Whyte laughed off Curtis' complaint the newspaper controlled the grand juries.

"And next year we're going to choose the president. We just control the whole world. It's ludicrous for him to suggest that,' Whyte said.

"He's run roughshod over the public the last two or three years. He threatened a county commissioner with civil rights actions, lawsuits and all sorts of things. We published a transcript of a tape on it, and he's had a vendetta against us ever since,' Whyte added.

Pampa jewelers see more gold investment

By MELANIE MILLER Of The Pampa News

As prices go higher and higher, more and more people are investing their diminishing dollars in something they hope will someday pay off - gold.

The price of gold has risen over 63 percent in less than a year, from $205 an ounce in December to over $400 this month. In three weeks of October, gold shot up from $369 to $437 an ounce last week.

On the national level, buyers are purchasing gold as a hedge against inflation and for protection against the weakness of the U.S. dollar. Only a few weeks ago, a "gold rush" ensued on the international market as buyers bought more and more gold before it hit the unreachable limits of their pocketbooks and before it runs out.

As the "gold rush" continues, although more slowly now on the national level, local jewelers are seeing more customers buy gold jewelry - either rings, watches or necklaces - for investment reasons.

It's one of those items that doesn't depreciate with age or wear and Joe Robinson, store manager for Gordon's Jewelers, says there's a "double factor it's a good investment."

But Robinson's store is one of the few places in Pampa a person can get "the real

The store has been selling 24 karat gold ingots from Switzerland since September and Robinson says he's sold "about a dozen" of the five, ten and 20 gram ingots. He adds that they're guaranteed and the purchaser receives an assay certificate and the certificate number.

"We had to raise the price Oct. 28 because the price of gold has gone up more since we started selling them," Robinson

Another Pampa jeweler, Tim Altum of Zale's at the Pampa Mall, says he's seen more gold investors lately.

"Gold's a good investment - it's a precious metal - its value as an investment will always be there," Altum said. "But the dollar isn't worth that much so the price of gold goes up.

Robinson says gold jewelry always has a "relative value.

"Gold has always been a medium of exchange all over the world, "he said. "Its price always reflects the values of the economy better than the stock market."

Bruce Belcher of Belcher's Jeweler's says his customers buy mostly 14 karat gold rings and chains. He doesn't see as many people buying gold strictly for investment because of money.

"We have two categories - people who have a lot of money and those who don't," Belcher said. "Those who have a lot are more likely to buy gold for investment reasons than those who don't."

All three men believe gold prices will continue to go up, but Robinson says it will Altum agrees, but says he sees a big jump in the price.

"I'm sure I'll see gold at $700 an ounce in my lifetime and I can remember when it was $35 an ounce," he said.

Belcher says the price of gold went up 'too fast, too soon.

"It'll keep going up, but the value of the dollar hasn't caught up with the value of gold, especially since the gold standard was dropped," he added.

MENDING MATURE MARRIAGE

How many times have you heard the statement, "Oh, well, nobody's perfect"? And we have to accept its truth - in our friends, our families and our mates. Halos are not to be worn here but hereafter. If we are half perfect, we are normal. Three - quarters ideal is commendable. · Anything over that deserved special

Last week a group of us women were giving each other capsule sketches of our happy, or unhappy, marriages. Most of us had enjoyed double blessedness for over 30 years. But one ady said:

"I've only been married 19 years - to my second husband. When my first good husband died. I prayed to the Lord to send me another one who would love me and be good to me and make me happy again. Well, the Lord heard my prayer and sent me this marvelous husband who is almost perfect. The only disappointment in our marriage is my own fault. I forgot to ask for a Presbyterian - and he turned out to be a Nazarene!"

We all assured her that her marital union was 90 percent ideal and that few wives could ask for, or get, more than that. But isn't it wonderful that minor religious differences or slightly - varying life styles can be happily resolved into 19, or 60, years of beautiful compatibility.

In my youth the wife usually joined the husband's church when they married. These days young couples sometimes cling to their separate demoninations and let their children choose one of the two churches, or a third one, when they're old enough to decide. It seems to work for some of them. But my husband and I like to go to church together. We think that's how it should be

We used to say that we Methodists had a corner on voicing our praise of a minister by shouting, "Amen!" when we thought he deserved it. But a few weeks ago a Presbyterian preacher in our area invited the congregation to practice saying. "Amen! Praise the Lord!" aloud, whenever they felt the urge to do so. I told a friend about it and she gasped, "My goodness, I though 'Amen' was just for us Baptists!" Maybe ecumenism isn't as far away as we'd thought. Some day it may be 90

Adjustment is part of marriage. And that has to include allowances for the changes that develop, often without warning, as we grow older together. I believe, along with a great many counselors more authoritative than myself, that the best way to understand, accept and resolve whatever differences we suddenly sense in our mates is to cling very closely to each other's hands and hearts. I have never believed that 'absence makes the heart grow fonder". Only the many - times married people seem to mouth that statement - and they usually add "Sure it does - for somebody else." We need to be best friends to our spouses, such dear friends that we want no life apart from them. That may be the old school of thinking, I know. But it's the school I

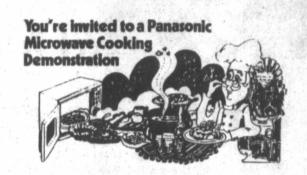

DEAR LOUISE: My husband and I took separate vacations this year because he said he wanted to go fishing for a month and I wanted to do some city shopping and sight - seeing. I think the real reason was that we were a little bored with each other after 34 years of marriage. Well, I was miserable on my trip, and I think he was too. But he said he had a good time except that Pampa, Texas 79065.

his fish were always raw or burned. Now we're wondering whether to go together or apart next year. We thought our being apart would bring back our young love. But it hasn't. Should it have? C.N.

DEAR C.N.: No. And who wants to be 25 again? What's wrong with a well - lived older love? Your separate trips apparently achieved their purpose by making you appreciate each other just the way you are. Since you were wretched and you think he was too, then you missed each other a lot. But don't press your luck by tripping separately again. Take this year's vacation by spending two weeks on your city sights and two weeks at his favorite fishing resort, where you can serve his fish exactly the way he likes it. He definitely missed your good cooking -- and you certainly missed his loving presence. That may not be 90 percent perfection in mature marriage - but it's on the way there.

Street corner Santas ready for giving season

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Before you know it, street corner Santas will start to "Ho, ho, ho." The familiar black kettles will dot the sidewalks. There will be new appeals: "In a season of joy. remember the less fortunate.

Americans gave nearly $40 billion to charity last year, up almost 10 percent from 1977. Most of the money - some $33 billion - came from individuals.

There are thousands of charities. Some seek money on a year-round basis; others run one-time fund-raising drives; and still others count on the Christmas spirit to fill their coffers.

Which charity should you support? How can you be sure your money will reach the people it's intended for? Which cause is worthiest? Who needs help the most?

"Reputation alone ... is no surefire guide to wise giving," writes Carl Bakal, author of a new book, "Charity U.S.A." Bakal says: "Many well-known and highly regarded organizations are efficiently run and dedicated to a real social need. Others, however, although equally sincere in purpose, are badly run or directed toward an outoded or not particularly urgent

More than half the states have laws regulating the solicitation of charitable contributions, but the statutes vary widely. Some limit the amount that can be spent on fund raising; others merely require the filing of an annual report.

The National Information Bureau and the Council of Better Business Bureaus publish rating lists of charities, indicating whether they meet organization standards. The lists cover only a few hundred charities each, but they can be useful. For information write: Philanthropic Advisory Division, Council of Better Business Bureaus, 1150 17th St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036 or National Information Bureau, 419 Park Avenue South, New York,

The final decision about giving is up to you, but experts advise consumers to follow these general rules:

-Restrict donations to groups you are familiar with. Don't give to organizations you have never heard of or know nothing

-Ask for a financial statement before you give. Check to see whether the charity has been independently audited by a certified public account

-Figure out how much of your dollar will go to fund-raising costs. There is no rule of thumb you can use to determine whether the amount is too high. Better Business Bureau standards require that a 'reasonable percentage' of the money raised — generally 50 percent or more — go for program purposes.

-Don't give in response to a telephone call from a stranger. Ask the caller to write, giving detailed information about the organization in question.

American productivity up for first time in 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) - The productivity of American business and workers rose at an annual rate of 0.1 percent in the third quarter, reversing two consecutive quarters of sharp declines, the Labor Department reported today.

However, the slight rise was not likely to cheer. government economists who predict that a stagnant productivity rate will mean high inflation and a diminished standard of living for the foreseeable future.

Productivity, a measure of goods and services that the economy turns out per hour of paid working time, has drawn increased attention from economists lately because of its sluggish growth and resulting impact on inflation. Today's figures pointed to a continuation of that poor growth.

Productivity declined at an annual rate of 2.2 percent in the second quarter and 3 percent in the first quarter, according to revised Labor Department figures. Both declines were the sharpest since the 1974-75 recession.

The 0.1 percent productivity rise in the three months ending Sept. 30 applied to all private businesses. Among non-farm businesses, the rate rose 0.2 percent, and among manufacturers the annual increase was a healthier 3.2 percent. the government reported.

Output by the private sector rose at an annual rate of 2.5 percent during the third quarter, while hours worked rose 2.4 percent, thus accounting for the slight productivity gain.

Worker compensation per hour rose at an annual rate of 8.5 percent during the quarter, while unit labor costs increased 8.3 percent. Both figures are the smallest since the fourth quarter

Separately, the department reported that major union contracts negotiated during the first nine months of the year provided average first-year increases of 7.5 percent. That is down slightly from an average of 7.6 percent in such boosts in all of 1978.

The figures do not include fringe benefits or cost-of-living raises that employees might receive in addition to wage increases.

Among larger contract settlements, those covering 5,000 or more workers, the department said first-year wage and fringe benefit increases are averaging 9.1 percent this year, up from 8.3 percent last year.

The department also reported that contract provisions for cost-of-living pay increases accounted for only 56 percent of the inflation rateso far this year, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers. warned last week that unless productivity improves. Americans can expect inflation to run at 8 to 9 percent a year for the indefinite future.

Inflation now is running at a 30-year high of 13 percent annually. Schultze said soaring prices for energy, housing and loans are causing nearly half the current inflation, with prices for other goods and services rising at less than 10 percent

A decline in productivity, which measures the efficiency of both workers and labor-saving machines, contributes to inflation by pushing up production costs and ultimately consumer

If fewer goods and services are turned out each hour, the cost for producing each item goes up and the increase is passed on to the consumer.

Crime increase threatening rural atmosphere

By LEE MITGANG

AP Urban Affairs Writer

Indiana farmers used to worry about kids cherry-bombing their mailboxes. Now those same kids are often high on drugs or booze. and farmers are locking their doors against thieves and vandals. Cattle-rustling in New Mexico jumped 300 percent in the past year. Fruit by the truckload is routinely ripped off in Florida.

From the cornfields of Ohio to the coalfields of West Virginia to the cow country of the Southwest, an almost fivefold increase in crime in the past two decades is threatening the easygoing, secure lifestyle of rural America Annual FBI statistics show that since 1960, crime in rural America is increasing more rapidly than in urban areas. In 1960, the rural crime rate was 423 incidents per 100,000 population. In 1977, the latest year for which figures are available. the rate stood nearly five times higher at 2,012 per 100,000 population. During the same period, crime in metropolitan areas rose about four

Put another way, in 1960 the odds of someone in a rural area being a crime victim were about one in 236. By 1977, the odds were one in 49. Professor Howard Phillips of Ohio State University says the FBI figures show that rural crime is now roughly equal to urban rates

"The question I have," says Phillips, "is do you have to catch up to the problems of urban centers before Washington and others will pay

Information on the nature and extent of the problem is sketchy, but researchers generally agree rural crime has certain characteristics: -Property crime is the leading problem, especially vandalism and theft. Phillips estimates that in rural Ohio, vandalism accounts for as much as 50 percent of crime. Purdue University studies of two Indiana counties found vandalism accounted for 23 percent of crime. In Hampshire County, W.Va., farm equipment theft is the most prevalent crime, according to researchers Thomas Bean and Layle

Lawrence, and a local hunter there was recently caught shooting up through cornfields on the outskirts of Toledo, Ohio. Around the country, tractors, combines and other expensive farm machines are easy prey for thieves, because many rural Americans can't get used to the idea of locking things and removing keys. -Rural crime is generally not as violent as urban crime, but the murder rate in rural areas is only slightly less than in cities.

-Rural criminals are almost always young males. They usually commit their crimes in their home county, although not in the same

"One thing's for sure. It's not people from metropolitan areas running out and victimizing rural areas," says Purdae researcher Joseph Donnerme ver

Several reasons are offered for the rise in rural crime. A leading cause cited is the lack of law enforcement personnel in rural areas. A second factor is the wealth in many country towns: there's plenty worth stealing and not much protecting it. Rural America is much more affluent these days.

In Montmorenci, Ind., Thunderbirds are parked in front of $100,000. homes. As often as not, the keys are left in the cars, and the front doors of the houses are unlocked.

New highways and new industry have helped open the way for crime in rural America. Strange cars cruise through, strangers

In many towns, city people buy country homes. The distinction 1between country and suburb is gradually blurring.

Phillips notes that the past decade witnessed the first increase in rural population in years. Rural communities are losing their first line of defense: knowing your neighbor, knowing who belongs.

"What you have is homogeneous communities becoming moreheterogeneous. People don't know each other," he says. Life for rural teen-agers has also changed. In many states, tight money has forced small high schools to consolidate into sprawling county schools just as crowded as their city cousins. Donnermeyer says peer pressure and lack of adult attention in

Ironically, according to sociologists, rural America finds itself facing the same basic problem faced by crime-ridden city neighborhoods: the ripping of the social fabric, of knowing and

Many, including the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and the National Sheriffs Association, feel the answer is to restore the strength of country neighborhoods, to make the neighbors care again.

Since 1972, the sheriffs' group has received an annual $250,000 grant from LEAA to operate a National Neighborhood Watch Director Ben Gorda says the program teaches people to fight crime with common-sense precautions like locking doors and vehicles and installing anti-burglary devices.

Bush staff a little confused Trick or treat Looking for goblins and ghosts on Halloween night?

WASHINGTON (AP) - George Bush is the organization man of the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination.

Point to the fact that he rarely comes out higher than fourth or fifth in opinion polls that try to rank the Republican contenders and Bush shrugs it off. Ask how expects to win, and Bush replies: "Build organization.

Pampa Gun Club stresses safety

"Safety first" is the motto of the the Pampa Pistol and Gun Club which regularly holds silhouette handgun matches between members at their firing range 612 miles west of here.

The club, which was organized just last April by Richard Nicholas. already has 118 members.

"Every prospective member has to go through a three-weeks safety course before he or she can get into the club." Nicholas pointed out. "We haven't had an accident yet and I feel the main reason is because of this course. A person has to pass it to get into the

Nicholas, who came here from Denver, Colorado, is an expert on firearms, and serves as an instructor for the club.

"I can teach someone how to shoot a gun, but the main thing I teach is safety. Nicholas said. "People think safety is just a matter of common sense, but there are so many different versions of safety when it comes to handling a gun.'

Nicholas said club membership is aimed at the general public and not confined to any special group.

'Anybody that owns a handgun can join our club, Nicholas added. 'However, the gun must be store bought and not custom made.' Competition was fierce in the club's monthly match as two classes become involved in shootoffs before a winner was declared. Delbert Robertson edged Nicholas in Class AA while Fred Carothers won over Gary Clark in Class A. Other winners were Bill

'There's probably a lot of people who think they have to be a good shot to join our club, but that's not the case at all," Nicholas said. "Our unclassified group is for the beginners and they have just as much fun as the better shooters.

Mays walks from baseball

NEW YORK (AP) - With a tear in his eye and an ache in his heart. Willie Mays walked away from baseball.

Forced to choose between the game he loves and a lucrative contract to work for an Atlantic City hotel and gambling casino, Mays announced he would terminate his active relationship with the sport.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn had warned Mays that the Hall of Famer could not remain part-time coach and goodwill ambassador for the New York Mets if he accepted the job with Bally Manufacturing Company, operators of the Park Place Hotel in Atlantic City

Mays met with Kuhn for an hour Monday before heading for the news conference that made his move official. "The commissioner didn't try to change my mind," Mays said as tears welled in his eyes. "We just talked the matter over. When I saw that his decision was going to stand, I said, 'Thank you,' and got up and walked out. "Don't blame the commissioner." he said. "The decision was with me. We left with kind words. I have no bitterness in my Still. Mays seemed troubled by the turmoil his decision had caused and by the impression that Kuhn had barred him from baseball. He said he felt he had been lumped in the same class as Shoeless Joe Jackson, the Chicago White Sox outfielder who was banned from baseball as a result of the 1919 Black Sox scandal.

Yankees have other plans for Michael

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps the most surprising part of Dick Howser's appointment as manager of the New York Yankees is the fact that he got the job and Gene Michael didn't

The reason is that the Yankees have other plans for Michael, who is expected to be named the team's general manager Thursday when Howser is officially introduced at a news conference.

Howser replaced Billy Martin after a brawl involving Martin in a Bloomington, Minn., hotel left marshmallow salesman Joseph Cooper of Lincolnshire. Ill. with a cut lip requiring 15 to 20 stitches.

Martin's public explanation was that the man had fallen and cut himself. But privately, the manager got word to Yankees owner George Steinbrenner that he had hit the man, a source told The Associated Press. That disclosure convinced

Martin was reported distraught and unavailable for comment Monday. Michael had been considered a prime candidate for the job after winning the International League pennant in his first season with Columbus. He is a favorite of Steinbrenner, who has used him in a variety of organizational capacities including coach and administrative assistant.

Now Michael is expected to fill a front office post that has been more or less vacant with the Yankees. Cedric Tallis, a club vice president, has operated as GM without Yankee-watchers will recall that Bob Lemon was supposed to get the GM job. That was part of the grand plan Steinbrenner pieced together following Martin's tearful resignation July 24, 1978 and his triumphant return on Old Timers Day at men met Sunday and the change was made.

The news stunned most Yankees players.

"I'm surprised he was named," said outfielder Roy White, who has declared for this week's free agent draft. "I thought Gene Michael was the more likely choice. He'd been mentioned a lot as the successor to the Yankee manager's job."

White called Howser a good friend whose sense of humor kept the Yankees loose. "I thought he was very happy with his position at Florida State and that he had no intention of coming back to the major league level." White

Shortstop Bucky Dent, who signed a new Yankees contract Monday instead of trying the free agent draft, called Martin a good manager

"I felt very sad that Billy was fired." Dent said. "He didn't bother me and I didn't bother him. I guess that's a pretty good relationship. I think I had a good chemistry with Billy, I think will have a very good relationship with Dick Howser. He will be a good manager. I think he'll be an authoritative.

Lawsuit stands against Bengals, Boobie Clark

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the time being at least, National Football League players face more than the risk of penalties when straying from the rules in any game played in Denver.

The Supreme Court on Monday left intact a ruling that soon will force the Cincinnati Bengals and ex-Bengal fullback Charles "Boobie" Clark to defend themselves against a lawsuit by former Denver Bronco defensive back Dale Hackbart.

The suit seeks money damages, to be determined by a federal court jury, for an injury Hackbart contends he suffered at Clark's hands during a 1973 game in Denver.

The trial's results - and perhaps the mere fact that a trial has been ordered - could have lasting effects on the professional

Hackbart was a 13-year NFL veteran when the Bengals and Broncos met in the teams' first regular-season contest Sept. 16, 1973. Hackbart had been covering Clark on a Bengal passing play late in the game that resulted in a Bronco interception. Hackbart attempted to block Clark, now with the Houston Oilers, and then watched the play progress downfield. As Hackbart was on his knees with his head turned, Clark crashed into him and struck Hackbart in the neck and head with a fist and forearm.

No game official saw the rule violation, but it was captured on film. Clark later testified he hit Hackbart out of frustration because his team was losing.

Hackbart's lawsuit contends he subsequently suffered considerable pain, and two weeks later, the Broncos waived him from the team and no other NFL club offered him employment. Some time later. Hackbart sought medical help and was told he had suffered a neck fracture. He sued Clark and the Bengals

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch in Denver ruled against Hackbart, saying Hackbart must have "recognized and accepted the risk that he would be injured by such an act as that committed by Clark."

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, in a ruling last June 11, did not agree, and ordered a new trial that one," said the former No. 1 draft choice. Jim Zorn, the Seattle quarterback who accounted for two touchdowns and set up another with a 20-yard pass to placekicker Efren Herrera, also thought the Falcons could win in the final

In an interview Monday, Hackbart lawyer, Mary Butler of Denver, said the appeals court ruling essentially sets Denver apart from every other NFL franchise city.

The Seahawks had apparently wrapped it up on a 26-yard touchdown run by Dan Doornink with 1:51 left to play for a 31-21 lead. Doornink had converted a fourth-down play moments earlier to keep

"Bartkowski did a super job coming back the way he did. But Dave Brown and the rest of the guys hung in there and got the key play. That's what really won it for us," Zorn said. Seattle stunned the Falcons with fourth-down gambles four times during the game, converting three and barely missing on the other. Zorn scored Seattle's first touchdown on a 34-yard run on a fourth-and-five situation and tossed a 4-yard pass to Sherman Smith for another score in the second quarter for a 14-14 tie Doornink scored on an 8-yard run to give the Seahawks a 21-14 halftime edge. The TD was set up when Seattle faked a 55-yard field goal attempt by Herrera, who broke through the middle and caught the fourth-down pass from Zorn at the Atlanta 17.

The gamble that failed came on a fourth-and-12 at the Seattle 32 when punter Herman Weaver passed nine yards to Jesse Green. The Falcons failed to capitalize, when Tim Mazzetti missed a 25-yard officials, saying their desegregation plan is the best that can be achieved in view of the "urban condition," have urged the Supreme Court to let them proceed.

Dallas school officials request go-ahead from Supreme Court

Warren Whitham, the school district's lawyer, told justices Monday the issue before them was "whether or not the elimination of all one-race schools, given the urban condition ... is the controlling factor to be considered.

Opponents argued that the plan approved by a federal judge in 1976 is unacceptable because it would leave a majority of the black students in one-race schools.

E. Brice Cunningham, a lawyer for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said more effective alternatives were available when the plan was approved.

The school district, the nation's eighth largest, is appealing a 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision that sent the plan back to the federal judge in Dallas for further study. The Supreme Court is expected to deliver a decision by the end of its term in June

Whitham said in oral arguments before the court that the school district has steadily decreasing numbers of Anglo students while the black and Mexican-American populations are increasing.

The plan, yet to be applied while the issue is in the courts, would divide the Dallas school district into six subdistricts

Five of the subdistricts would reflect the racial and ethnic proportions of the entire district's student population, but East Oak Cliff would remain virtually all black.

Whitham said October figures showed the district was 32.2 percent Anglo, 17.3 percent Mexican-American and 49.4 percent black.

The plan approved in 1976 would leave 62 of the district's 183 schools predominately populated by one race. There would be 52 black schools — 28 of them in East Oak Cliff - nine Anglo schools and one Mexican-American school

Whitham said the district based the plan on ideas developed by a tri-ethnic committee

School officials said about 20,000 students would be bused under the plan.

Cunningham said the plan is unacceptable to the NAACP because of the number of one-race schools, the creation of an all-black subdistrict, and the exclusion of students below fourth grade and above eighth grade from busing

He said the "magnet concept" designed to attract students from different ethnic groups to special interest high schools has failed in Dallas.

HOUSTON (AP) - Rosalynn Carter came to delegate-rich and committed to somebody else," Reagan said.

Justice Department wwyer Warren Wallace said the plan was sent back to the federal judge because the "conspicuous problem" of one-race schools had been inadequately studied.

One alternative plan available to the federal judge showed it was feasible to include East Oak Cliff in the desegregation plan. Wallace said in support of the appeals

He said the Supreme Court previously overturned the 5th Circuit's approval of a plan for Mobile. Ala., that was similar to the Dallas plan.

James A. Donohoe, a lawyer for residents of an already integrated section of the school district, argued that most of the white students remaining in the public schools were living in integrated areas.

He said an extreme desegregation plan could have the "absurd result" of busing students from the integrated areas to eliminate one-race schools in other sections of the district

The question of desegregating Dallas schools has been in court since 1955. The lawsuit responsible for Monday's hearing was filed in 1970 by the parents of black and Mexican-American children.

Justice Lewis Powell Jr. suggested a decision to resolve the case as quickly as possible might be in order.

Demonstrators against nuclear power arrested by busload

NEW YORK (AP) — From the concrete caverns of Wall Street to a submarine base in Washington state, arm-linked demonstrators were arrested by the busload in non-violent protests against atomic power and weapons.

More than 1,000 persons were collared by New York City police Monday as protesters tangled traffic and blocked doorways in a unsuccessful effort to close the New York Stock Exchange on the 50th anniversary of the 1929 stock market crash.

In Bangor, Wash, some 18 miles west of Seattle, about 90 demonstrators faced court appearances today on charges of unauthorized entry after scrambling over a fence at the Trident nuclear submarine base and parading on base grounds

Meanwhile, 200 anti-nuclear demonstrators, some wearing red arm bands, blocked doors at the Energy Department Building in Washington, D.C., and protesters were arrested at demonstrations against the Trident in St. Louis, Pittsburgh and

Some workers in the Wall Street area had to climb over demonstrators to get to offices and a few scuffles broke out at police barricades as a brass band played Dixieland music and clowns on stilts paraded through the New York City crowd. "I haven't had this much fun since the 1960s." police Capt. Thomas Ryan told demonstrators.

Leaders of the Wall Street demonstration, aimed at corporate investment in the nuclear industry, said they were satisfied with their protest, although it seemed to have little effect on the stock

"It was a bit unrealistic to think we could have closed down the market." said Grace Hedemann, press coordinator for the protesters organized by a coalition of 100 anti-nuclear groups. But the protest managed to get brokers "to notice us, see us and hear

Among those taken into custody were Daniel Ellsberg, who made public the Pentagon Papers, and David Dellinger, one of defendants in the Chicago Seven trial that followed riots at the 1968 Democratic National Convention. Some were carted off for processing on stretchers after they went limp in an act of civil dischedience

It was the biggest mass arrest in New York City since the all-night looting during the 1977 blackout.

Export boom is helping cotton farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest export boom in nearly 20 years is helping cotton farmers dispose of a bumper harvest this year, says the Agriculture Department

But there is a dark side to the equation: Domestic use of cotton is expected to decline, and that could mean a sharp rise in stockpiles a

Cotton exports are estimated at around 6.5 million bales in the marketing year that will end next July 31, compared to about 6.2 million bales in 1978-79.

"At that level, exports could surpass domestic mill use for the first time since 1937." the department said Monday. Cotton use by domestic mills is projected at 6.2 million bales this year, down from 6.4 million in 1978-79. According to USDA records, cotton exports in 1937 totaled about 5.7

million bales and textile mill use, 5.6 million bales. The brisk export flow is the largest since 6.9 million bales were exported in 1960-61

USDA estimates the 1979 cotton crop at 14.4 million bales, up from 10.9 million in 1978.

This forecast is still tentative, however, since only 14 percent of this year's crop had been harvested by mid-October." officials said in a report sent to cotton producers. "Normally, about a fourth of the crop is harvested by that date.

Cotton yields have jumped dramatically this year to an average of 528 pounds an acre, based on Oct. 1 surveys, compared to 421 pounds.

One reason for the gain in yields overall is a sharp increase in the Southwest and West. Also, the report said, "More of this year's cotton acreage is in the West, where yields are usually double the national average.

Cotton production has undergone significant shifts over the years. the report noted. According to the latest survey, 77 percent of the 1979 crop will be produced in Texas, Oklahoma, California, Arizona and New Mexico

"At the beginning of this decade, these states accounted for only about 50 percent of the U.S. crop," the report said.

Looking at the slump in cotton use by domestic mills, the report said the price of synthetic fabric — polyester staple — recently has approached the cost of cotton. U.S. manufacturers also have been exporting cotton textiles "at a record pace," the report said.

· "Normally, these factors would cause domestic use of cotton to rise," it said. "However, the improved competitive position of ... cotton will most likely be offset this year by the lagging U.S.

Thus, the report said, "the large crop being harvested this fall will cause stocks to rise sharply during the season" and put downward pressure on prices later on.

Cotton reserves on Aug. 1, the beginning of the marketing year, were 4.0 million bales, down from 5.3 million a year earlier. But by next Aug. 1, the report said, the U.S. cotton stockpile may climb to 5.7

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fruit growers are harvesting bumper crops and are seeing prices decline from year-earlier levels for some major items, says the Agriculture Department.

The lower prices also are expected to be reflected at wholesale and retail stores, particularly for some important citrus products, officials said Monday

Retail prices for fresh fruit in September, for example, were down almost 22 percent from a year ago. The price index overall "is expected to remain below year-earlier levels at least through midwinder if the record citrus crop materializes. the department said Monday.

The citrus crop, mainly oranges, is estimated at a record of 15.2 million tons, up 15 percent from 1978-79. Non-citrus output, which includes 10 major fruits, is forecast at 12.2

million tons, up 4 percent. Production is expected to be up for all items except apples and tart cherries, the department's outlook board said.

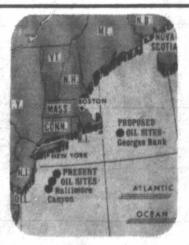

With an expected larger carryover of frozen concentrated orange juice, plus the record orange crop, market prospects for oranges through mid-winter point to grower prices below last year's levels."

These lower grower prices are expected to result in lower retail prices even with the continued increase in marketing costs.

But apple prices "are moderately higher than last year" at shipping points, the report said, and "supplies for fresh market may be smaller this season since the crop is smaller and processor demand is good.

The 1979-80 supply of most processed noncitrus fruit will be larger than a year ago, but "total supplies of canned fruit will not increase appreciably because of smaller carryover stocks," the report said.

Thus, prices at both retail and wholesale levels for most canned fruit this fall and winter will remain relatively firm because of higher costs of raw products and increased marketing and processing costs.

Drilling Beneath the Sea

The Georges Bank region of the Atlantic Ocean, off the shores of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, is one of the richest fishing grounds on the East Coast. But geologists believe the area may also be rich in other valuable resources: gas and oil. And that means the fish may soon be sharing their ocean space with machines. The drilling rights to more than 660,000 acres of the Georges Bank are scheduled to go on sale today. Offshore oil rigs can drill thousands of feet below the ocean floor. Offshore wells are already in operation in the Baltimore Canyon area off the coasts of New Jersey and Delaware, and in the Gulf of Mexico off the coasts of Texas and Louisiana.

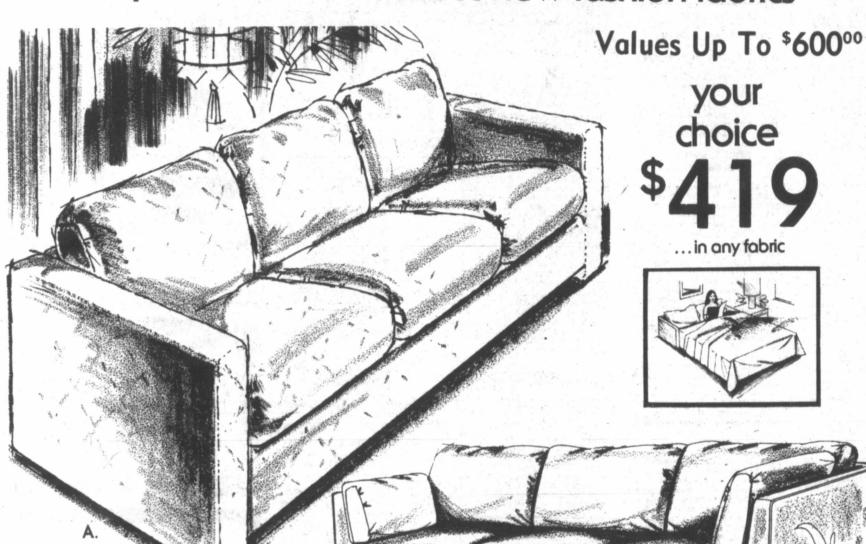

DO YOU KNOW - In what body of water did the world's worst offshore oil spill recently occur?

MONDAY'S ANSWER - Herbert Hoover was president when the stock market crashed in 1929.
