Pampan sets world record

By DEBORAH BRIDGES and MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

Sundays are usually quiet for ordinary people, but yesterday was anything but peaceful for Pampa plumber Ronnie Farmer.

Farmer, 29, set a new Guinness world record for eating jalapeno peppers by downing 100 of the fiery peppers in 14 minutes and 19 seconds — to the cheers of around 75 spectators at the Black Gold Restaurant.

The previous world record, held by a Minnesota man, was 94 eaten in one hour and 51 minutes.

Curious spectators gathered at the restaurant several hours before the event was scheduled to begin — some as high as $150. Others came to see why a seemingly normal man would attempt such a painful feat.

Finally, at 4:51 p.m., the crowd hushed. Farmer sat down with a pepper in each hand and strains of his theme song, "I Don't Want to Cry This Early This Morning," boomed from the jukebox.

Country music blaring in the background, Farmer began his rhythmic assault on the peppers — chewing, swallowing and reaching for another. Beads of sweat formed on his forehead, his face turned red and his eyes closed as he solemnly pursued the world record.

Less than 15 minutes later, the crowd began a countdown when he had ten peppers left. Shouts of encouragement kept Farmer going — he occasionally flashed a "thumbs up" sign.

At 5:05:19 p.m., his plate was empty. The crowd stood up, cheering and clapping. Farmer wiped his brow, shook a few hands, and headed for the back door. The new world record was his.

Outside, a jubilant Farmer admitted he wasn't showing his emotions as much as he would later.

"I thought one time there it was coming up," he said. "But the cheers helped me."

Even with 100 jalapenos burning in his stomach, Farmer, who's had ulcer problems since he was young, couldn't vomit after it was over. All he could say was "it's hurting, but I think I'll make it." He tried drinking dishwater, but that didn't help.

"My whole body is quivering — I've got the shakes," Farmer said. "I'm burning up and it feels like a small campfire in my belly."

He reassured the crowd he was going to be alright.

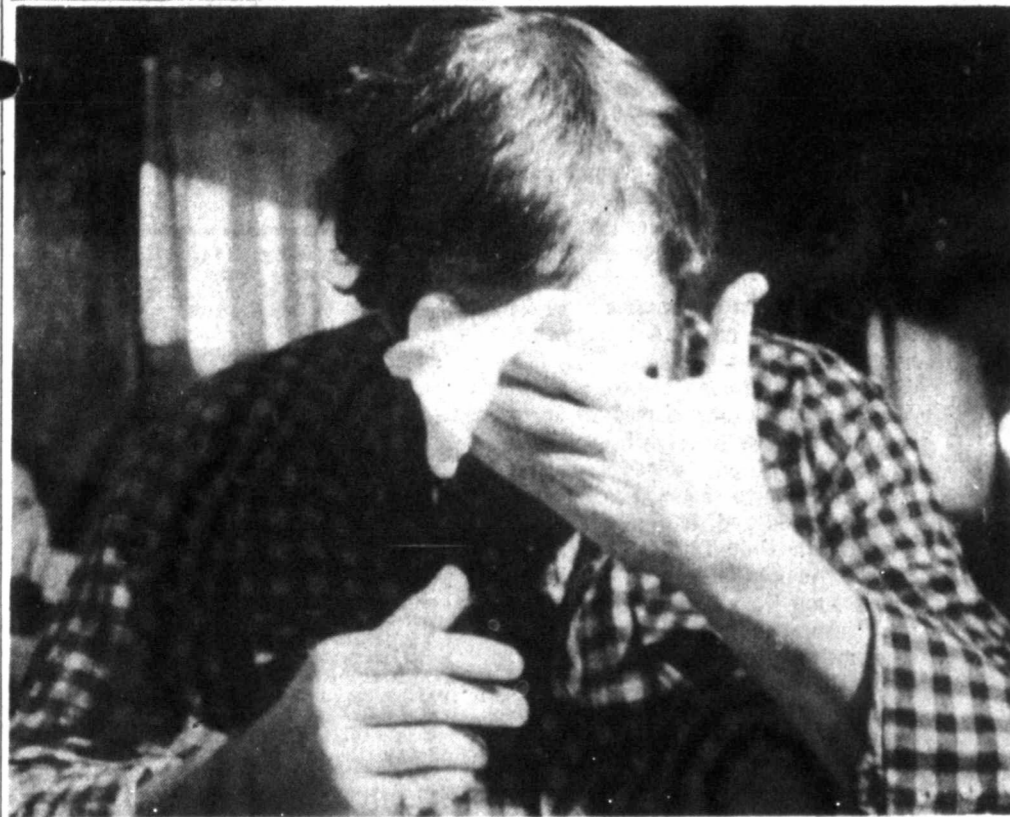

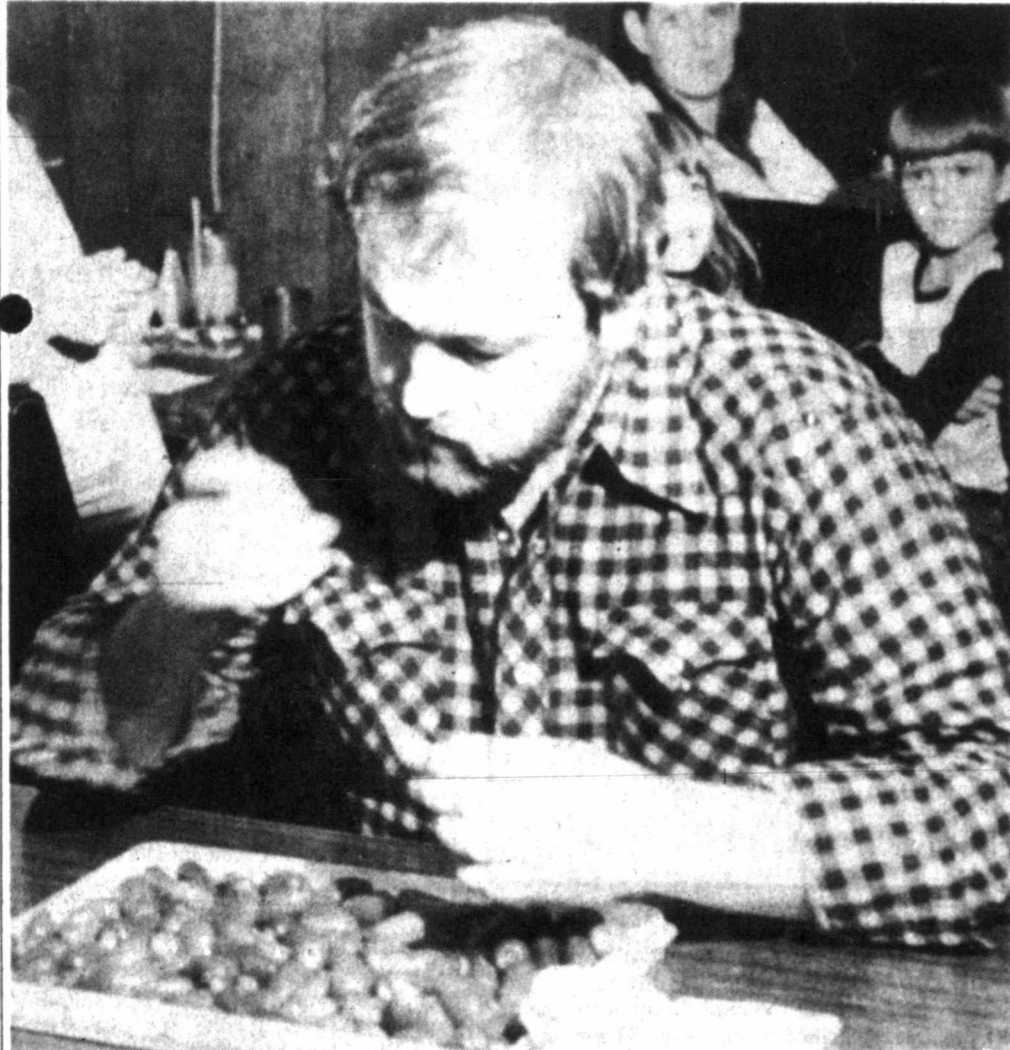

"Tomorrow is going to be the best day of my life," Farmer said. "But right now, I'm having to laugh to keep from crying."

The plumber made an unsuccessful try for the record last March in Midland when he ate 64, but the pain forced him to stop. Since then, he has eaten 79 in an unofficial attempt.

Several years ago, Farmer had a bet with some friends in Midland who said he couldn't win a similar contest. He ate 37 in seven minutes — the first time he'd ever tried. Not only did he lose his friends by winning, but Farmer also received a tackle box and other fishing equipment as his prize.

The tall, burly man said he'd eat the peppers again if someone breaks his new record, something he'll do — if necessary — until he "gets too old to do it." When asked why he did it, Farmer shrugged his shoulders, saying he can't explain it himself.

"Part of it is my dad said I couldn't do it, but that's just psychological," Farmer said. "I just want to break the record."

RONNIE FARMER pursues his goal of a new Guinness world record by eating 100 jalapeno peppers in a little over 14 minutes. His successful attempt was witnessed by 12 unrelated adult witnesses, as required by the Guinness officials, at the Black Gold Restaurant Sunday. After it was over, Farmer, who has ulcers, said he was burning up but he didn't get sick, even after drinking dishwater.

Ten others expected to be released

Iranians free three hostages

Three American hostages freed from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran arrived in Western Europe today and Iranian militants appeared about to release 10 more for expulsion from the country.

A White House statement said if Iran attempts to put any of the remaining 49 U.S. hostages on trial for espionage, as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has threatened, it would be a "further flagrant violation" of international law.

Looking fit and well, a young woman secretary and two black Marine sergeants arrived in Copenhagen on a Scandinavian airliner and were immediately transferred to a U.S. military plane. They were flown to Frankfurt, West Germany, for a medical checkup at a military hospital.

A military source told The Associated Press the three were to be taken to the U.S. Army's 97th General Hospital in Frankfurt. The source, who asked not to be identified, did not rule out the possibility they might be transferred later to a larger hospital operated by the Air Force in nearby Wiesbaden.

State Department officials in Frankfurt refused to say how long the three would remain there, but in Washington officials said they were expected to stay at least two or three days for debriefings and tests.

Their release was the first break in the embassy siege that began Nov. 4.

A report by Radio that four more women and six more blacks had been freed and would leave Tehran later today was apparently premature. ABC News said one of its correspondents in Tehran reported the official radio was anticipating the release, and the 10 hostages had not actually been turned over to the Iranian Foreign Ministry yet for expulsion.

Reports from Tehran indicated the 10 may be paraded before microphones and cameras at a press conference tonight before release. Their names were not announced.

The first hostages freed were Katherine Gross, 22, of Cambridge Springs, Pa., a secretary in the economics section of the embassy, and Sgts. William E. Quarles of Washington, D.C., and Ladell Maples, 23, of Earle, Ark.

The State Department said U.S. authorities in Germany would question them about the condition of the rest of the hostages. An official said those freed would be given "decompression time" to themselves during which reporters would be kept away from them.

The trio waved cheerfully to a crowd of reporters and photographers waiting at the Copenhagen airport, but U.S. Ambassador Warren D. Manshel rushed them into his limousine and drove them to the waiting U.S. Air Force DC-9. After boarding the military plane, they came back to the door to wave again to the reporters and photographers. But they shook their heads at questions shouted up to them.

The Air Force plane took off less than 20 minutes after the hostages arrived.

WASHINGTON (AP) — However the bizarre drama in Iran ends, President Carter will be left with a delicate foreign policy and political problem that might be a pivotal point in his presidency.

On the one hand, Carter will be pressed to retaliate against Iran, to demonstrate to American voters and the world that he is a strong leader who will not allow the United States to be flouted. Failure to do so would undoubtedly jeopardize his hopes for re-election.

But weighing against massive retaliation will be advisers telling him that whatever measures he chooses, they must not be so severe as to endanger the long-range chances of protecting Western interests in a critical part of the world.

For, despite the rabid anti-Americanism of the Tehran mobs, experts in and out of government say it is still possible that Iran will remain a source of oil for the West and a barrier to the expansion of Soviet influence in the Middle East.

Once the crisis ends, Iran is likely to be in turmoil, say State Department officials who are unwilling to be quoted directly while the hostages are still being held.

There are few organized and disciplined political power centers left in the country.

One is the Islamic clergy, headed by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. But the clergy has yet to demonstrate that it has the political skill necessary to govern the country.

Another is the Marxist left, which, although it is small, has the virtues of being armed and organized. Thus far, the Marxists have run into solid anti-communist opposition from the Islamic revolutionaries.

Two other key groups are the military and the middle class. But they are in disarray, their leaders either gone or discredited, with no man or organization to rally around. The shah virtually destroyed responsible, democratic opposition.

A social democratic group emerged after the revolution, led by Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan. But his government fell early in the current crisis.

Citing this vacuum, one State Department official said his best estimate is that Iran will be in a state of "low-level anarchy," with the clergy nominally in control but unable to bring order to the country or pacify separatists like the Kurds, who will seek to take advantage of the central government's disarray.

This official acknowledged that in such conditions, the Marxist groups may well be able to gain influence if they time their moves carefully and appear to be the only group to offer stability, justice and progress to the people.

How Carter balances reprisals with restraint could help determine which scenario eventually unfolds in Iran.

But in choosing among his options, Carter would have to weigh whether they might undercut the very forces which, if encouraged, might enable the United States to reestablish decent relations with Iran.

Sadat appeals for tolerance, co-existence

WADI RAHA, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat appealed from the foot of Mount Sinai today to the peoples of the world to strive for "goodness and the avoidance of bloodshed, violence and hatred."

In a 15-minute speech marking the second anniversary of his historic trip to Jerusalem, the Egyptian president praised "my two friends," President Carter and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel for making peace between Egypt and Israel possible.

Noting that Moses, regarded as a prophet by Islam, Christianity and Judaism, is said to have received the Ten Commandments on Mount Sinai, Sadat said:

"In this place chosen by God Almighty, where the three faiths descended, here we have the reaffirmation of the noblest values of men: tolerance and co-existence between peoples."

He avoided all criticism of Arab opponents who have attacked him for making peace with the Jewish state and stressed reconciliation, saying he came with "a heart full of faith, brimming with love."

Sadat reaffirmed an earlier agreement with Israel which turned over this 600-square-mile portion of Sinai last Thursday and will allow Jews, Christians and Moslems to visit the historic site.

"I announce this place open as of today to all believers, to all the faithful from the three faiths, with no restrictions so that they may come and address the Lord," Sadat said.

"I hope that we can together, all the believers and the faithful, do something that would glorify this magnificent achievement on this sacred spot."

Sadat has proposed the building of a single house of worship for all three religions in the valley where the Children of Israel waited for Moses while he climbed to the 7,500-foot peak to receive the Commandments.

About 500 guests flew into the southern Sinai for the ceremony, including Israeli officials and a U.S. delegation. They mixed with several hundred Bedouin tribesmen, some on camels, and prominent Egyptian officials including cabinet members, members of parliament and the religious leaders of Egypt's Moslem, Christian and Jewish communities.

Clements blasts Carter

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements accused President Carter today of letting the country fall into another energy bind by failing to have a national energy program in force when the Iranian crisis broke out.

Clements led off an attack on the administration's energy policy in the opening general session of the Republican Governors' Association annual meeting.

In preliminary sessions Sunday, three GOP presidential candidates also said Carter should do more for the Americans being held captive in Tehran.

Clements said the situation in Iran already "is directly impacting our oil supplies in the United States, although our country has been receiving only four percent of its full supplies from Iran." See page 3 of today's News for more details.

THE RUBBLE of a four-engine Lockheed Electra cargo plane carrying low-level radioactive material and 15 pounds of explosives for the Air Force lies scattered over a three-block area in a thinly populated Salt Lake Valley area. Three crew members were killed in the crash. See page 4 of today's News for details.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Marching orders from D.C.

With each day the drumbeat grows louder, the energy fascists in the nation's capital achieving some new victory in a war for control and eventual expropriation of an industry so vital that its alteration will affect us for the rest of our lives.

Daily we read reports on the congressional progress of Jimmy Carter's $300 billion (at least) program to put government firmly in control of our sources and supplies of fuel. With each vote, it seems, we descend further into an abyss that will feature a changed and lowered standard of living and a system in which production and consumption of energy will be decided not by individual choice and voluntary exchange but by political pull and the amount of time one is willing to wait in line.

A key decision should evolve from Senate debate this week on two proposals for creating synthetic fuel — oil from shale or coal instead of from crude in the ground. Unfortunately neither choice is a good one. One is the president's version, containing an Energy Security Corporation (as in Social "Security") and at a cost of $88 billion, at least. It would decide where and when and how synfuel production will be attempted. If past government attempts at managerial skill, particularly those of the Energy Department, are any indication, it would be one of the worst boondoggles ever to occur in the United States.

In order to avert such catastrophe, the Senate Banking Committee, led by Wisconsin's William Proxmire, has come up with an alternative synfuel plan that would let private industry make the production decisions. The government would guarantee the massive loans needed to build synfuel plants, and would promise to buy the energy produced at a fixed price. As it's described to us, this would involve a federal promise to buy the oil at, say $50 a barrel (the current world price for crude is $20). If, at the time the synfuel is produced, the market clearing price for oil is only $30 a barrel, the government would in effect sell off its $50 purchase at a $20 loss, to a private concern that would refine, distribute and retail it.

The Proxmire people, who portray their proposal as the market-oriented solution, say these sorts of subsidies to the energy industry are necessary because the private capital market — those trillions of dollars floating around the world looking for a good investment — wouldn't be willing to risk a billion dollars for a synfuel plant because the technology is still so chancy and nobody knows what the going price for oil will be by the time production is started. Great uncertainty — sounds like the prospect faced in the marketplace all the time. The risk is bigger than most, and so is the return. Proxmire wants to transfer that risk from private concerns, who avoid white elephants because they don't want to lose their own shirts, to political bodies, who play with other people's money and don't have to be as shrewd.

Little is heard in Washington of the notion that if synfuel isn't a good enough prospect for people to risk their own money on, possibly it shouldn't be developed. The choice instead is between government botching it up, or industry getting a subsidy to produce it.

Meanwhile, to pay for this and other huge expenses of Carter's Energyless Inc., the House has passed and the Senate is working on the "windfall profits" tax. Carter wants to soak domestic oil producers (remember them, the ones we need to free us from OPEC?) for almost $300 billion of the money they may gain from deregulation. The House approved almost that much. The Senate Finance Committee okayed less than half that amount after it finished exempting all sorts of political favorites from the tax. The potentate from Plains responded with a threat to take "quite punitive" measures against the oil industry unless he got the tax he wants, a bit of bluster that would be laughable if the hatred for energy producers that Jimmy's helped whip up weren't so potent a political force.

We saw how potent when the House committed harikari on behalf of the nation two weeks ago by reimposing the gasoline price and allocation controls that will keep us all in lines at the pump.

Elsewhere in Washington, congressional conferees are working on one of the scariest of the Carter proposals, the Energy Mobilization Board, vested with vast powers to run roughshod over every level of government in the land to beat a path for the federal fuel production schemes. It's rare that this newspaper finds itself in agreement with self-styled environmentalists, but the EMB is enough to so terrify us. The worst thing is that it's not going to be removing restrictions from something private industry is trying to do, but will be overriding any local veto of Energyless Inc.'s crazy projects in towns across this nation.

Of course, there's more going on atop Capitol Hill: billions for a solar bank, more billions in heating oil credits to everybody who's clever enough to look halfway poor to the feds, some more subsidies if you alter your building the way the government wants you to, and a rationing plan that lets Jimmy Carter tell you how much gasoline you may have.

Taxpayers foot bill for unwanted news

The federal government spends more money each year trying to influence the way people think than it spends altogether for disaster relief, foreign military assistance, energy conservation and cancer research.

That is the conclusion of a study conducted by U.S. News and World Report Magazine.

In an administration that professes a clean image, it's disheartening to know that "public-affairs and information efforts of the bureaucracy cost taxpayers at least $2.5 billion annually." The report, written by the associate editor, John S. Lang, chronicles wasted funds for movies that are lost, huge salaries for workers whose jobs are supposedly illegal and vast sums of money spent on film making and printing costs.

Some examples that appeared in the article are: An agency spent $125,000 on a motion picture and then lost the film. Because a 1913 law forbids using appropriated funds for paying "public experts," government workers in this area are titled "information officers," "public affairs officers," "communications officers" and "press secretaries" — and many of these publicity experts earn more than $40,000 a year. Agencies spend as much as $600 million annually making movies and other audio-visual programs. Last year the Government Printing Office billed its federal customers $500 million, and the Office of Management and Budget found that additional U.S. printing cost another $800 million.

The saddest part of the report, however, is the sheer waste of these efforts. According to the article, "It was found that in many cases films were produced and equipment was purchased by agencies merely to avoid returning money left in budgets at year's end."

In the print area, the author says, "most government press releases wind up in the trash can."

By Oscar Cooley
The owners of every business want to be free to succeed. Without such freedom there would be little motive to become owners.

Along with the freedom to succeed goes the freedom to fail. It is the other side of the same coin. A characteristic of every private enterprise, the freedom to fail is taken for granted. Failure being an unpleasant thought, this freedom is seldom mentioned.

An enterprise is not free to fail if the government stands back of it with potential money aid, either as a loan or as a gift. This amounts to a guarantee against bankruptcy.

When the managers of an enterprise have such a guarantee, they know that whatever they do their company will not go down the drain. What motive have such managers to manage well, to weigh their risks, to burn the midnight oil? Why strive for success when your success is already assured?

These thoughts come to mind as one learns of Chrysler seeking aid, it seems at this writing, about to get $1 billion or so aid from the government.

What goes on here? Is this private enterprise? Or is it today's socialist-infected capitalism coming to a head? When society, through its government, supports private firms, defraying their losses, paying for their mistakes and misfortunes, they are no longer private. They are about as public as you can get.

If the government bails out Chrysler, what shall Washington say when the next failing firm begs it for help? Is it the taxpayers' duty to take on all the bankrupts? If so, there will be a lot of them. Even now, some 15,000 businesses fail every year.

It is of the essence of a private enterprise to run risk. When a firm is launched, it incurs expenses which cannot be avoided: interest on its initial capital investment, for example. This is sure outgo. It has to be paid; there is nothing problematical about it. To meet this certain outgo, the firm has no certain income. It has merely the hope and expectation that people will buy its goods and/or services, whatever they are, and that the income received will total enough to cover those contractual expenses such as interest, rent, raw materials, labor. At the outset, that hope is merely a guess.

Every newly organized firm is a highly uncertain venture, a sure cost balanced against a very unsure income. It is, and has to be, something of a gamble.

That entrepreneurs willingly take this gamble is a tribute to human courage. It is the amazing feature of capitalism. A system that takes this kind of courage and is as successful as capitalism is has a lot to be said for it.

Americans now appear to be turning against that system. One wonders what we will adopt in its place. How will we check people from launching projects that haven't a ghost of a chance of success unless subsidized?

On the other hand, if we tax heavily enough to subsidize all the weak corporate sisters, how shall we induce people to launch new projects, knowing the possible income therefrom will be taxed away from them?

Those who tamper with the freedom to fail will find themselves groping in some pretty dark alleys.

Innovation — the launching of new products and adoption of new methods — is highly important. Joseph Schumpeter, Harvard's great economic theorist of a generation ago, held that one bold entrepreneur encourages another, and hence that innovations come in clusters.

But there must be the chance of making and keeping profits or nobody will innovate. Recently the oil companies have been pilloried in the press for making egregious profits. But the world of consumers sorely needs more sources of energy. To discover or invent such sources, entrepreneurs must be offered a chance to make large rewards. Obviously innovation is drastically needed in the field of energy production. There must be the freedom to succeed in a big way. It follows that there must be the freedom to fail. Many, undoubtedly, will exercise that freedom.

It will be the innovating, not the subsidized, corporations that will supply our energy.

Adolph the Sadist

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—The beauty of computers, so the advertisements tell us, is that they make life easier for all of us. Don't you believe it.

I have been corresponding with two computers who work for my insurance firm—the company that advertises on television during football games and shows a man's house being blown down and five seconds later the agent for the company building him a new one.

These two computers who I've dubbed Adolph and Dave are as different as day and night. If you were captured, Adolph would be the one who hit you over the head with a truncheon, and Dave would be the one who offered you a cigarette.

Adolph is one mean computer. He wants to cancel my automobile insurance. He's really mad at me and I figured out why. I've never put in a claim for an accident, and therefore he has no legitimate reason to take me off the books. He's just waiting for one minor incident, even a crushed fender, and he'll push me out the window.

The politics of Cambodia

Suddenly almost everyone, with the notable exception of the Soviets, wants to get into the rescue act.

A score of international agencies are concerting efforts in an air-sea lift of emergency food.

Fifty-one of the United Nations have pledged more than $200 million for relief supplies.

The American deputy president — Rosalynn Carter — is personally on the scene.

Even the previously implacable regime in Phnom Penh has yielded to the extent of opening the port of Kompong Som and the Mekong River to relief shipments.

This burst of activity is not only welcome, it may well be essential if Cambodians are not for all practical effect to be extinguished as a people. The magnitude of the disaster that has overtaken them is matched in recent history only by the Jewish Holocaust. By some estimates, up to half of Cambodia's pre-conflict population may already have perished and many or most of the survivors may already be beyond saving.

Who is to blame for this tragedy? Most immediately Cambodians themselves — the two regimes, both pledged to the Marxist cause, savaging each other for control of a country that could well end up without people.

Beyond these, the Vietnamese who are now the real power in Cambodia, gradually extending their own imperium over all that had once been a choice portion of the French Empire.

The Soviets, for supporting and encouraging the Vietnamese, less for what is to be gained in the Cambodian conflict

Every month I get a nasty letter from Adolph wanting to know how many people are driving my car, what ages they are and whether I've committed adultery in the last six months. He also wants to know how much money I make, if I go to discos and how many times I clean my ashtrays.

I answer every question dutifully because I know he's just waiting for me to make one slip.

Every time I send in the form Adolph pretends he didn't get it and sends me another one, which says in caps on the top: "YOU HAVE 10 DAYS TO COMPLETE THIS FOR OUR RECORDS OR YOUR POLICY WILL BE AUTOMATICALLY CANCELED."

I've never been late with a form and I know this burns Adolph up. Once he sent me a letter saying that there had been too many accidents in my area and although I hadn't had one, they were thinking of canceling my policy anyway.

Once someone crashed into the back of my wife's car and she said we ought to notify the insurance company.

"Are you crazy?" I yelled. "That's exactly what Adolph would like. He's been waiting years to get us. One call from me and he'll hit the cancellation letter button just like that! No one will ever give us auto insurance again."

"Who is Adolph?" my wife wanted to know.

"He's a Nazi computer who escaped to Argentina at the end of the war. Then he was shipped to the United States under another name and got a job spitting out threatening letters to poor helpless people like us. He's responsible for the deaths of more auto insurance policies than any computer in the country."

"Why do we pay premiums if we can't collect when we have an accident?" she asked.

"Because if we don't pay our premiums Adolph will put our names in another computer and we'll never be able to get credit again. I'll pay to fix your car but I don't want you to report it to the police. Adolph is plugged into every accident division in the United States."

While Adolph is writing his sadistic letters to me, Dave keeps urging me to buy more insurance from the company. He sends me pictures of houses burning to the ground, thieves breaking into windows, and widows with children whose husbands failed to take out life insurance. Dave wants me to know the company cares about my welfare, my family and my possessions. He even worries about my kid's education and my retirement plan. Dave has a toll-free number that I can call to get further information. He's all heart. The only thing I can't understand is how he can stand to work in the same office with someone like Adolph.

Church reunion point of pope's visit

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican says the visit Pope John Paul II will make to Turkey next week will launch serious talks on the reunion of the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches.

The pope announced during his noon blessing in St. Peter's Square Sunday that he would go to Ankara and Istanbul at the end of the month to visit the patriarch of the Eastern Orthodox Church, Demetrius I, and "to participate in celebrations honoring St. Andrews, the patron saint of the Church of Constantinople."

The pontiff said he would also visit the shrine to the Virgin Mary at Ephesus, in western Turkey, where the Third Ecumenical Council in 431 proclaimed her the Mother of God.

The three-day visit, the fourth taken by John Paul since he became pope in October 1978, will begin Nov. 28, Vatican sources said.

The pope said the Vatican was on the eve of "a theological dialogue with the venerable Orthodox churches to overcome together the differences still existing between them."

Patriarch Demetrius expressed "deep joy" over the papal visit. A source in the Greek Orthodox Patriarchate in Istanbul said "the personality of the ruling pope gives new hope" for ending the 925-year-old schism between the churches.

The Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches split in 1054 when many Christian churches in the West decided to recognize the bishop of Rome as supreme over other bishops. The decision resulted in mutual excommunication orders by Pope Leo IX and Patriarch Michael Caerularius of Constantinople, the name for Istanbul until 1930.

The Roman Catholic Church now has 600 million members, while Eastern Orthodoxy has 200 million followers. Papal authority is still the chief issue in dispute between the two churches, which generally share the same beliefs but have variations in religious practices.

Kirkland president of AFL-CIO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lane Kirkland, organized labor's shy and scholarly administrator, won election as president of the 13.6-million-member AFL-CIO today, ending a quarter-century of leadership under George Meany.

Kirkland, 57, the ailing Meany's second in command and hand-picked successor, was elected without opposition by 1,000 delegates attending the labor organization's 13th convention.

It was the first change of leadership since Meany, 85, was installed as president after the birth 24 years ago of the merged American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Kirkland, a South Carolinian who worked his way up the labor federation, emerges now not only as chief spokesman for unionized workers but also as a potent force in the nation's political, social and economic affairs.

Kirkland is a protege and close friend of Meany, who is retiring after 12 two-year terms as AFL-CIO president because of poor health, and his eventual election to the top post had been anticipated for years.

Thomas R. Donahue, 51, a former Labor Department official who became Meany's executive assistant, also ran without opposition to succeed Kirkland as secretary-treasurer.

Radioactive cargo in plane crash harmless

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The manifest said the plane carried radioactive cargo, but it took the Air Force two hours to determine that the suspect military material in the crashed and burning aircraft was no more dangerous than a luminous watch.

Gov. Scott Matheson wants to know why. All three crewmen died when the civilian Lockheed Electra turboprop, owned by Transamerica Airlines but carrying Air Force cargo, crashed into a cow pasture Sunday, just 10 minutes after taking off from Hill Air Force Base in Ogden, Utah, officials said.

For two hours after the plane burst into flames and plunged to the earth two miles west of an industrial park, military and civilian officials tried to find out how much radioactive material the plane carried and what type of substance it was.

They finally learned that the material was thorium, often used in making luminous watch dials. In this case, it had been used as a strengthening agent in an alloy used in a spare gear box and it posed no health hazard.

Officials had thought the material might be tritium, which could be hazardous if released in smoke from the burning plane.

However, Salt Lake City-County Health Director Dr. Harry Gibbons ordered urine tests and geiger counter scans for the more than 50 firefighters and rescue workers who surrounded the plane minutes after it nosed into the pasture. Health officials had completed 37 exams before learning that the radioactive material was harmless.

Al Britton, Salt Lake County's emergency services coordinator, said the vague manifest is a problem he runs into every day. "The information is not easily available," said Britton. "It's a nationwide problem."

There was also some question about explosives on board the plane. "We were told there were 1,500 pounds on board," said Sheriff Pete Hayward.

Britton said the Air Force later reduced that to 15 pounds of class-C explosive, a slow-burning substance.

FOCUS

A Boston "Covenant"

Religious leaders in Boston have called for a "covenant" of racial harmony to end the unrest and occasional violence troubling the city's public schools. Tension between black and white students has been a serious problem in Boston, since a federal court ordered busing to integrate the city's schools. In September the tension led to the shooting of a black high school football player. City officials and the New England Patriots football team have tried to reduce the tension. The religious leaders hope to get every citizen of Boston to sign a "covenant of justice, equity, and harmony." They plan to open their campaign with an ecumenical service today.

DO YOU KNOW — What television movie was recently canceled in Boston, because of the racial unrest?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The Stamp Act placed a heavy tax on the paper used to make newspapers.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

Banned drugs often dumped abroad

By Joe Graedon
 What ever happened to the Dalkon Shield — an IUD that was withdrawn from the U.S. market? What ever happened to the children's pajamas that were banned by the Consumer Product Safety Commission because the chemical that made them flame-retardant was carcinogenic? What ever happened to Panalba — a popular antibiotic which was removed from pharmacies because it presented more risk than benefit?

Most people probably never pay much attention to the fate of the dangerous products that are restricted or banned in the United States, assuming that they are either discarded or destroyed. They are wrong!

While teaching pharmacology in a foreign medical school I was often dismayed to discover that drugs which were restricted in the U.S. were being used with abandon.

A recent article in the magazine Hother Jones (November 1979) has documented in shocking detail a fact I have long suspected — American mistakes don't get buried, they get shipped abroad.

American corporations have been dumping dangerous drugs, medical devices and poisonous pesticides in other countries when they can no longer sell them in the United States.

Webster's Dictionary defines the word

"dump" as to "get rid of unceremoniously or irresponsibly." That ain't the half of it!

Do you recognize the name Tis? A few years ago this chemical flame retardant captured the headlines. It had been added to hundreds of millions of children's pajamas and later was shown to be carcinogenic.

The clothes were recalled quickly from department stores and retail outlets. So far, so good. One would have assumed that all dangerous sleepwear would have been burned or buried. But apparently millions of pajamas were disposed of by selling them to unsuspecting parents in other countries.

While one could understand, though not condone, the companies' wish to salvage a product disaster, the government's complacency is far more alarming. Our well-meaning bureaucrats may have actually contributed to the controversy, especially when it comes to birth control.

Despite many reports of serious side effects associated with the Dalkon Shield, an IUD made by the A.H. Robins company, the U.S. Agency for International Development bought and distributed hundreds of thousands in over 40 countries.

It is particularly shocking that the devices were often sent abroad in unsterilized bulk packages, although in the U.S. nonsterile devices are not allowed. This may have saved money, but it greatly increased the risk of uterine infections.

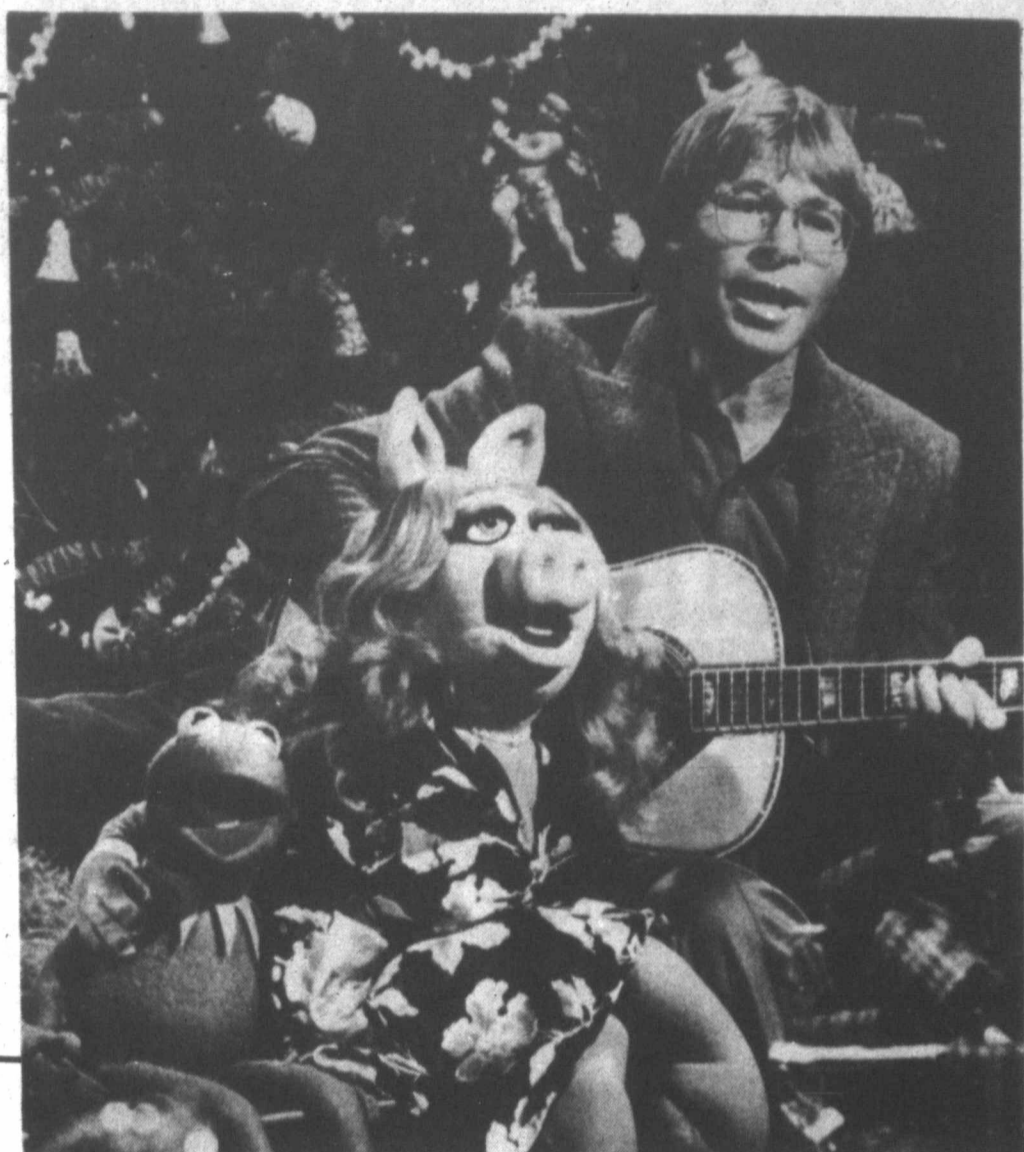

already a major complication of IUDs. Another classic case of the double standard involves the antibiotic Panalba. In the late 60s it was one of the Upjohn Company's most popular drugs.

Researchers had been saying that this combination antibiotic was "without merit for any infection" as far back as 1962. And in 1969 a panel of experts for the National Academy of Sciences concluded that this combination product was hazardous, lacked benefit and should be withdrawn from the market.

Although Panalba has not been available in the U.S. since 1970, the Upjohn Company continues to market this drug under the name Albamycin-T in over 30 countries.

The list of products and chemicals that have been dumped is long — including among other things, baby pacifiers, cancer-causing pesticides and controversial contraceptives.

In my opinion this sort of dumping must stop! I agree with Congressman Henry Waxman, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Health and Environment, when he said, "I think we have a clear moral obligation not to allow exporting of hazardous substances which we know are going to harm the health of people around the world... There is no human right to make a profit at the expense of children who may get cancer."

TWEEN 12 AND 20

Parents deplore thought of gay son

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 17-year-old gay and I'm gay. My boyfriend is also 17 and we have known each other for three years but we fell in love with each other about three months ago. We never felt we were doing anything wrong. It just seemed natural to us.

A few weeks ago, our families were together and we decided to tell our parents mainly because our parents were hassling us about getting girlfriends.

Telling them was a mistake. My father beat me for "trying to be a woman." My mom threatens me with psychiatric help.

I have been forbidden to see my boyfriend but I managed to meet with him secretly three times. What can I do about my parents' attitude? I realize this is a most difficult question.—A.M., San Rafael, Calif.

A.M.: Encourage your mother and father to seek professional family guidance with you. Most parents deplore the thought that their child is gay and none is thrilled when he or she hears it for the first time.

If outside guidance is not sought, the relationship between your parents and you will steadily deteriorate.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY

Blacks contributed more than music

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In listing the various peoples who came from other countries to build America, there was no mention of the blacks who came from Africa. Should they not be credited with giving America gospel music and jazz and the blues?

BLACK AND PROUD

DEAR PROUD: Yes. But the blacks contributed much more than music. For decades they worked our fields, cleaned our homes, cooked our meals, nursed our babies and fought our wars. Against tremendous odds, they managed to produce such outstanding Americans as George Washington Carver, Booker T. Washington, A. Philip Randolph, Jesse Owens, Marian Anderson, Jackie Robinson, Ralph Bunche, Thurgood Marshall, Andrew Young and too many more to mention here.

But it took a Civil Rights Act (1964) to grant blacks equal rights and make racial discrimination illegal.

DEAR ABBY: I am amazed that the British didn't get a special mention for their contributions to America. They gave us the very foundation for our nation!

They gave us not only George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin, but most of our founding fathers. And of course, they gave us our language.

DR. LAMB

See dermatologist for hair breakage

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I hope you can help me. My hair will only grow to a certain length and then the scalp starts itching and the hair just breaks off down to the scalp. I don't have dandruff. Can you tell me what might be wrong and what I can do?

DEAR READER — Your description is a bit sketchy but it sounds to me like you ought to see a dermatologist. You may have a condition that we call trichorrhexis nodosa. There are many variations of this disorder, but what that long technical term really means is that the hair breaks easily. It may tend to break very close to the scalp or at a specified distance along the hair shaft. In this condition the hair shaft itself is defective. It's sometimes seen in people who straighten their hair or it can be seen in a person who has worn a tight-fitting cap for long periods of time. The area involved may look like it's had a brush cut.

If the hair is injured in that way, it needs to be handled very gently. No heat should be applied to the hair of any sort and you should avoid using different kinds of chemicals such as might be encountered in bleaching agents or even certain dandruff medications. Only a wide tooth comb should be used to avoid breaking the hair.

With gentle treatment it may recover in two to four years. That's quite a long time. That's why I think it's worth seeing a dermatologist to see if he can determine what really is causing your problem and help you. Meanwhile, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 12-6, Hair Care. It will give you general information on hair and factors that affect it. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My daughter, age 39, called last night. She found a doctor who told her why her hands are nearly always cold and red. He says she has Raynaud's disease. This probably explains the infection she's had several times at the base of her fingernails. I'm frightened. The doctor told her she could lose her hand if she was caught in a snow storm in the mountains. Please tell me what this disease is.

DEAR READER — Raynaud's disease is associated with severe spasm of the arteries and it commonly affects the hands and fingers, although it can affect the nose and face. The attacks are particularly apt to be caused by exposure to cold.

Many doctors advise patients with this problem to be particularly careful to avoid cold exposure of the entire body and keep the hands warm at all times. If there's any reason they have to go outside and possibly touch anything that's cold, they should wear warm gloves to avoid direct contact. An example here would be a cold steering wheel.

I could offer one simple home remedy. During such attacks she could whirl her arms. You swing the arms in a 360-degree circle like a softball pitcher swinging his arm for the pitch. They should be swung at approximately 80 cycles per minute, which is pretty fast. It's important to keep the elbows straight all the way through the swing and be sure that the fingers are straight and not curled. The centrifugal force causes blood to be forced into the tips of the fingers and this may abort an attack. This procedure is often used by skiers to help warm their hands.

A few minutes, four placemats bring results

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Nice job, ducky. You won't get invited there for dinner again. Bad enough you dribbled duck sauce on her blue calico placemats — did you have to show up wearing them, too?

You could have at least nosed around beforehand and found out she went in for blue calico. Then you could have made your vest out of four pink gingham quilted place mats instead. In just six minutes, says Pam Aulson, sewing and crafts consultant who knew two years ago that "the vest was going to be an important accessory. Suddenly I thought, why not make one using place mats?"

Which she did. Which even the most ham-handed can, she contends.

First you get four matching place mats which you know are washable because you wash them to make sure they don't shrink. They'll have a plain binding because says Ms. Aulson, "those are better for sportswear. Place mats with ruffles make nicer bedjackets." You work with the mats "longwise", not table setting-wise.

And you work up the back of the vest first, as follows: Take any two of the four place mats and line them up next to each other, "longwise". Now, tilt the bottom of one three inches over the other so you're looking at a "V".

Sew the two together just like that, from top to bottom, along the long overlapping binding, and that's the back of the vest.

To do the front, you take the third place mat and lap one of its short ends over one of the peaks of the "V". Then you do the same with the fourth mat and the other peak. Now make sure there's seven inches between the third and fourth mats for your neck, which will fit in there.

Stitching the peaks and the short ends together — which is what you do after lapping — is called doing the shoulder seams.

So now you've got a V-back with two place mats dangling down in front. You need armholes and side seams so the vest won't fall off when you wear it. To get them, pick up the vest by the shoulders. See how the front and the back falls together? Wrestle the vest to the table top just like that and, starting from the outside edge of the shoulder seams, walk down eight and a half inches. You're now at the bottom of the armhole. From here down, stick pins in a straight line through the front and the back of the vest, about two and a half inches in, towards the belly button (or the spine if you're pinning from the back).

After you do the walking and sticking and pinning on the shoulder you haven't done, try on the vest. If you can drop your arms without getting stabbed under the arm by pins or a clump of material, fine. Otherwise, adjust the pins.

Sew up the side seams, cut off the excess material except for half an inch of seam allowance, and then sew "zigzag" or "over edge" over the seams. When that's done, turn the whole thing inside out and you've got a vest.

Ms. Aulson's paperback book, "The Place Mat Plus", explains how to add patch pockets and create much more with place mats.

Write to Patch as Patch Can, P.O. Box 87, Dept. E., Wenham, Mass. 01984.

HANDSOME VEST, tea cozies, slipper and decorative pillows are quick and fun to make with quilted placemats of polyester and cotton. All these ideas took less than an hour to make.

Skins tighten NFC East with win over Cowboys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins have made the National Football Conference East as tight as it can be, but a last-second field goal against Dallas may come back to haunt them.

"The Redskins have no class," said Dallas defensive end Harvey Martin after Washington won 34-20 Sunday. "When they get us down they want to rub it in our face. That's great. Maybe that's what it's gonna take to wake up this ball club."

"It was totally an insult," he said. "It got me in a frame of mind just to hate the Redskins."

With 14 seconds remaining in the game, and Washington ahead 31-20, the Redskins took possession of the ball and immediately called a time out to bring on the field goal kicking team.

Mark Moseley then boosted his second field goal of the day, a 45-yarder that came with only nine seconds left.

Coach Jack Pardee and Redskins players justified the field goal because of the closeness of the NFC East, with Dallas, Washington and Philadelphia all tied for first with records of 8-4 with four games to play.

"The way this division is going the point differential could be involved," said

Pardee. "Taking a field goal that is nearly a gimme is not running it up."

Asked about the possibility of stirring up bad blood between the two teams, Pardee replied, "There's not too much good blood to begin with."

"Look at what they did to us a year ago," he declared. "Using play-action bombs (late in the Cowboys 37-10 Thanksgiving Day victory) is running it up."

Quarterback Joe Theismann threw three touchdown passes — a 4-yarder to John McDaniel, a 10-yarder to Clarence Harmon and an 11-yarder to Ricky Thompson to spark the Redskins offense as the defense blitzed the Cowboys, picking up six sacks, three interceptions and two fumble recoveries.

"This was one of the best football games we played, offensively, defensively and special teams," said Theismann. "It was a classic."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who agreed with Pardee on the field goal and the closeness of the NFC East race, said, "We're in a lot of trouble. We haven't played very good football for some time."

"We have been beaten three times in the last four games and haven't played with much emotion. Maybe we're not hungry."

Quarterback Roger Staubach said, "We had some good plays, some good chances and we didn't take advantage of them. They beat us with the blitz."

Redskins defensive end Coy Bacon, who had two sacks, said, "There is no doubt in my mind that if we keep playing like this, we'll get in the playoffs."

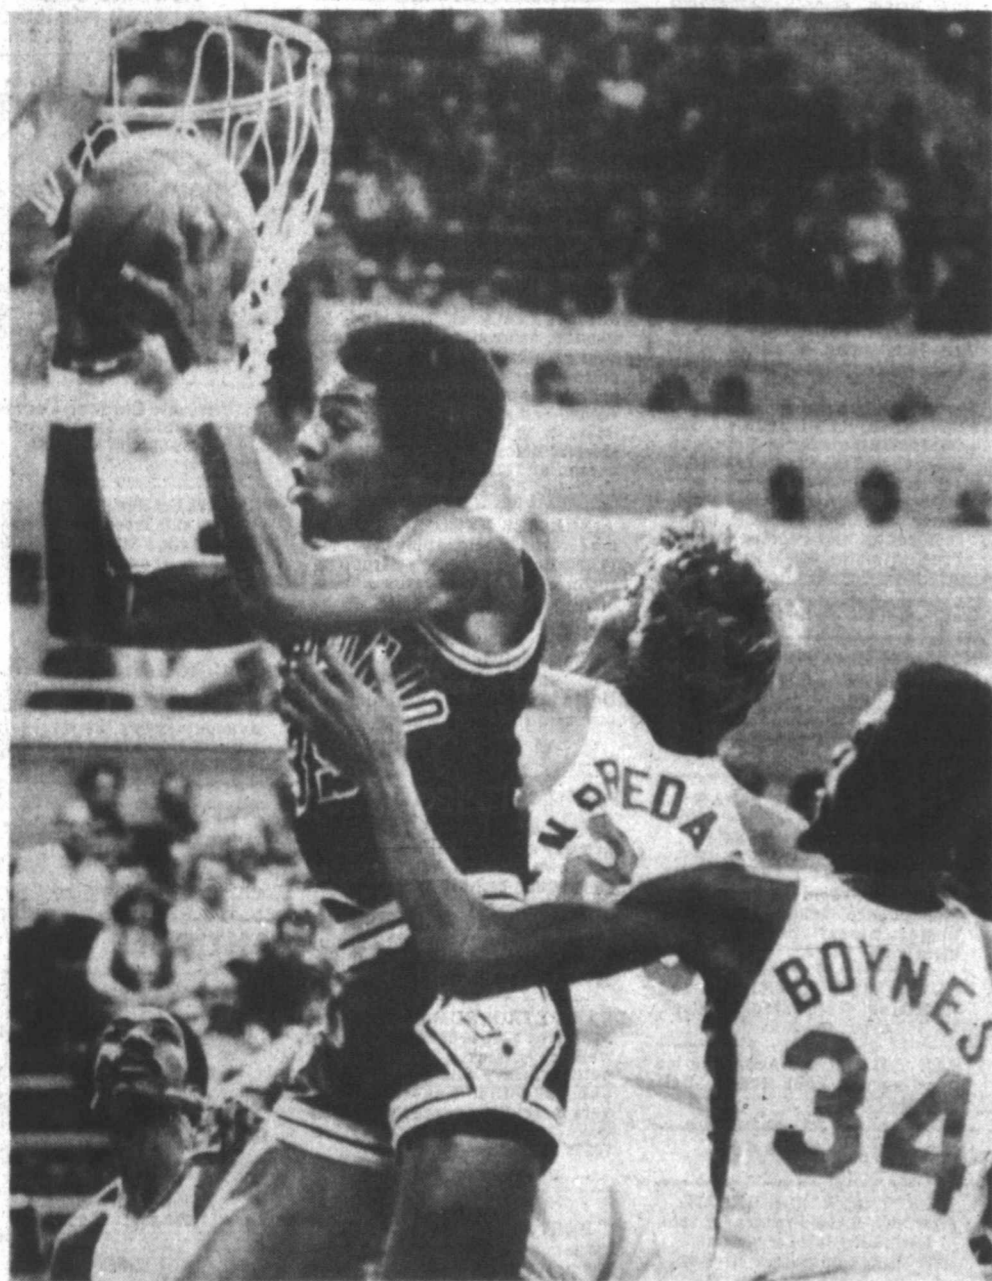

Defensive tackle Byron Talbert, a long-time Dallas baller, said, "It's always fun to play the Cowboys and to beat them."

As for the field goal, which came after Talbert called the time out, he said, "If it had been a 50 or 55 yarder, we would be trying to run the points up. It was just a short chip shot for Mark."

However, Dallas substitute quarterback Danny White, who got the Cowboys a touchdown with a 9-yard toss to Drew Pearson late in the game, talked for many of his teammates when he said:

"They rubbed our nose in it with the field goal," he said. "We will remember it. It will be something to remember in a couple of weeks and get us fired up."

"They love it now," White continued, "but it may come back to haunt them." The teams closed out their seasons against each other in Dallas Dec. 16.

Natt scores final basket to lift Nets past Spurs

ISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — For rookie Calvin Natt, the 107-105 victory over San Antonio was no bigger than any other even though New Jersey hadn't beaten the Spurs since 1976.

"I didn't even know about that," Natt said when told the Nets' triumph Sunday night had broken an 11-game losing streak against San Antonio.

"We just need to win, to get momentum going here. We've been playing better and better lately and didn't think this is any bigger a win than any other one."

For most of the New Jersey fans, however, the victory was significant both for its historic import and the way in which it was achieved.

Ed Jordan stripped the Spurs' James Silas of the ball with the score tied 105-105 and four seconds left to play. Jordan fired a quick pass to Natt who roared down the floor and dunked the ball for the winning points as the buzzer sounded.

Natt finished with 33 points, matching his career high, and scored 12 of them during a remarkable third quarter in which the Nets outscored the Spurs 38-18 to take a 90-80 lead into the final quarter.

"That third quarter was the difference," admitted San Antonio Coach Doug Moe. "We didn't come out ready to play. They came down and got the first three offensive rebounds, then we would come down and put up bad shots. We just let up in the third period and it hurt us."

"You just go as hard as you can and hope," Natt said. "I looked up and I didn't see any time on the clock. I thought maybe the official called it no good."

But the shot clearly beat the clock and gave New Jersey its first victory over San Antonio since Nov. 24, 1976 and only its second since the teams were among the four former American Basketball Association clubs joining the National Basketball Association in 1976.

"We made some changes in our starting lineup in the second half," Nets Coach Kevin Loughery said, "and I think that helped us."

Loughery used two centers at the same time in the third quarter with George Johnson playing strong forward. The formation held the Spurs — the NBA's highest scoring team to just 43 points in the final 24 minutes.

George Grvin finished with 27 points, 11 of them in the first quarter to lead the Spurs. Larry Kenon added 15. Mike Newlin had 22 for the Nets and Jordan added 16.

A&I captures Lone Star title

Texas A&I has captured its sixth Lone Star Conference football championship of the decade, and both the Javelinas and Angelo State have earned berths in the NAIA playoffs.

The LSC has won seven consecutive NAIA titles, but this marks the first time two teams from the league will go into the playoffs.

The foes were to be determined later Sunday by the NAIA in Kansas City.

Quarterback Martin Stroman rushed for 114 yards to pace the Javelinas to a 42-10 victory over Southwest Texas State.

Angelo State won a comeback 20-19 thriller over East Texas State.

The ASU Rams, defending NAIA champions, won as Ruben Fowler capped a time-consuming 12-play 68-yard drive on a one-yard plunge with 4:26 remaining.

East Texas State, Angelo State and Stephen F. Austin, a 42-20 winner over hapless Sam Houston State, tied for second place one game behind A&I with 5-2 records.

A&I and Angelo State could meet in a semifinal game with the winner going to the Palm Bowl in McAllen Dec. 15.

Abilene Christian finished strong after an 0-4 LSC start by whipping Howard Payne, 34-18. Quarterback John Mayes completed nine of 11 passes for 190 yards and two touchdowns.

The Wildcats won their last three conference games and finished 7-4 for the season.

Stephen F. Austin, picked for a second division finish, blasted Sam Houston, 42-20, to complete an 8-3 campaign.

Dons advance in soccer playoffs

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The University of San Francisco Dons advanced Sunday to the NCAA soccer Midwest finals with a 3-2 win over the University of Santa Clara Broncos in a first round playoff game.

Roar Andersen scored the winning penalty kick which came at 84:21 in the game. That score followed Dev Rendler's 15-yard goal, which came at 80:45 and tied the game at 2-2. USF led at halftime, 1-0, thanks to Bjorn Tronstad's breakaway goal.

The Dons — the reigning national champion — face the winner of this week's match between Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and Southern Methodist. The Midwest finals will be held next weekend in Dallas.

Ryan expected to sign today

HOUSTON (AP) — Native Texan Nolan Ryan, who earned fame as a strikeout artist with the California Angels, was expected to return home today to sign a multi-year contract with the Houston Astros.

The Astros called a news conference for 2 p.m. CST today.

Ryan, from nearby Alvin, placed himself on the free agent market and the Astros apparently emerged victorious from a bidding battle with the New York Yankees, Texas Rangers and Milwaukee Brewers.

Ryan is believed to be signing a four year contract in excess of $4 million.

The acquisition of Ryan would give the Astros two of the most feared strikeout pitchers in the major leagues.

Ryan led the American League last season with 223 strikeouts and Astros starter J.R. Richard, who recently signed a new contract, led the National League with 313.

Ryan's contract apparently would be worth more than Richard's but Ryan said that wouldn't lead to any team jealousies.

"This is my last contract," Ryan said. "But at J.R.'s age, he'll still get another contract and when he signs that one it will be more than what I'm getting so there shouldn't be any problem."

The Astros finished second to Cincinnati last season in the rugged National League Western Division race with a strong pitching staff headed by Richard and knuckle ball specialist Joe Niekro.

Rams need win to deadlock NFC West

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1979 National Football League season has not been a banner year for either the Los Angeles Rams or Atlanta Falcons, but both teams are fortunate in one regard — they're in pro football's weakest division.

Going into tonight's nationally televised contest, both the 5-6 Rams and 4-7 Falcons are still well in the thick of the NFC West race.

Los Angeles, in fact, can move into a tie for the division lead with a victory over the Falcons, since New Orleans fell to 6-6 via a 38-24 loss to Seattle on Sunday. And in a division where 500 is tops, the Falcons can move within a game of first with a triumph over the Rams, who are favored by a touchdown in this meeting.

As an example of what kind of year it's been for the Rams, they're hoping against hope that their No. 2 quarterback, Vince Ferragamo, can start against the Falcons.

Injury-riddled Los Angeles, NFC West champions the past six years, has lost starter Pat Haden for the season with a broken finger, and backup Ferragamo — who has never started an NFL game — has been sidelined since Oct. 14 with a broken bone in his throwing hand.

Bob Lee, the 11-year NFL veteran who formerly played for Atlanta and Minnesota, has been with the Rams for less than two weeks, and he and rookie Jeff Rutledge are the other Los Angeles quarterbacks.

The Falcons, too, may have a reserve at the controls. June Jones III will start at quarterback if Steve Bartkowski is unable to play. He was listed as doubtful because of a hip injury suffered in last Sunday's 24-3 loss to the New York Giants.

Jones, who has completed nine of 17 passes for 159 yards this season, came off the bench last year to lead the Falcons to a 15-7 Monday night victory over the Rams in Atlanta, Ferragamo is seven of 17 for 89 yards for the Rams this year.

The opposing coaches, Atlanta's Leeman Bennett and Los Angeles' Ray Malavasi, agree that neither team can afford many more losses.

"We still have something to play for, since we still have four games against Western Division opponents," said Bennett, a former Rams' assistant.

"It's not too late to make something happen, but we have got to do it right now. The Rams are in the same position, and it should be a good game."

Olympic team to train overseas

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee has adopted a plan for the 1980 U.S. Olympic team to conduct its final training in West Berlin beginning July 1.

Spokesman Bob Paul said it will mark the first time for the American team to be processed and finish its training overseas.

In other action taken during a weekend meeting of the committee's executive board, Larry Brown, basketball coach at UCLA and a 1964 Olympian, was named assistant basketball coach for the American team. David Gavitt of Providence College is the main coach.

The executive board also adopted a strong resolution requesting that the AAU wrestling division and the rival US Wrestling Federation agree within seven days to meet and to seek a resolution of their differences over who will be the national governing body of amateur wrestling.

By a court decision earlier this year, the AAU Wrestling Division was cited to retain the governing body status until after the Olympic Games in Moscow next summer.

At the same time, the U.S. Wrestling Federation was given the title governing body designate.

"By action of the executive board, it is hoped that the two groups will be able to resolve their differences and bring to an end the dispute which has been carried on for four years," Paul said.

HEALTHFUL HINTS
Most often asked Questions On Nutrition
BY: KATRINA BIGHAM

Q. My stomach ulcer is acting up. I know quite a bit about nutrition and take good vitamin-mineral supplements, but I must be missing something. Can you give me any hints?

A. Adelle Davis has an excellent chapter on stomach ulcers in her book "Let's Get Well". She suggests using her "antistress formula" which consists of drinking her "Pop-up" along with 800 mgs. of vitamin C, 100 mgs. of pantothenic acid, and at least 2 mgs. each of vitamins B-2 and B-6 six times daily. This formula should be supplemented with vitamins A, D, E and B-complex tablets.

Miss Davis also suggests that anyone who has ever had an ulcer should continue taking perhaps 200 units of vitamin E daily in hopes of dissolving old scar tissue.

HOUSTON OILER running back Rob Carpenter (26) breaks free from defending Cincinnati Bengals, after losing a piece of his shirt, to cross the endzone unchallenged during the first half of Sunday's NFL game in the Houston Astrodome.

(AP Laserphoto)

Oilers topple Cincy

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips hasn't gone to his bull pen too often this season but there was no lds in efficiency Sunday when he called on Gifford Nielsen to relieve injured quarterback Dan Pastorini.

Pastorini had completed 10 of 13 passes for 182 yards when he was gouged in the eye by Cincinnati defensive tackle Eddie Edwards in the second quarter with the Oilers leading 21-7.

Without any change in tempo, Nielsen shook off four games of inactivity, completing his first six passes and leading the Oilers to a 42-21 victory that enable the Oilers to tie Pittsburgh for the American Football Conference's Central Division lead.

"I was happy that I got the opportunity," said Nielsen, a second-year pro from Brigham Young. "I hate to see anything happen to Dan but I have to always be ready to perform."

Nielsen's performance included 10 of 16 passes for 139 yards and a seven-yard pass to running back Rob Carpenter that boosted the Oilers to a 9-3 record, equal to Pittsburgh, which lost to San Diego 35-7.

Nielsen had not played in the past four Oiler games.

"I knew when he (Pastorini) went down that I'd be coming in for at least one play," Nielsen said. "We had the lead when I came in and we built the lead."

Pastorini, recently recovered from a shoulder injury that had hampered his passing, built a 21-7 second quarter lead around a two-yard run by Earl Campbell, Carpenter's three-yard run, and a 17-yard touchdown pass to tight end Mike Barber.

Then, with 3:45 to go in the half, Pastorini was poked in the eye and spent the rest of the game on the sidelines with a white patch over his right eye.

Southwest rich in bowl games

By DENNE FREEMAN AP sports writer

The Southwest Conference, which has already been enriched by some $2 million in television money during the regular season, stands to make another financial killing off four bowl games to be attended by Baylor, Arkansas, Texas and Houston.

If things follow the form chart, it's Baylor in the nationally-televised Peach Bowl Dec. 31 against an 8-2 Atlantic Coast Conference Clemson team fresh off a 16-10 whipping of Notre Dame Saturday.

It would take an incredible set of wins and losses for Baylor to cash a 5,000-to-1 shot to make it into the Cotton Bowl. If Texas, Houston and Arkansas win their remaining conference games, Arkansas will be in the Cotton Bowl, Texas in the Sugar Bowl and Houston in the Sun Bowl.

It would be Arkansas against the Big Eight runnerup, either Oklahoma or Nebraska; Texas against the Southeastern Conference champion, probably Alabama; and Houston against Washington, provided the Huskies don't go to the Rose Bowl.

But some incredible things could happen.

For example, if Arkansas lost to SMU, Baylor beat Texas, and Houston lost one of its last two games against Tech or Rice, the Baylor Bears would be in the Cotton Bowl because in multiple ties it's the team that last got to go to the New Year's Day classic.

Is that incredible enough for you?

Arkansas, Houston and Texas all have one loss apiece and Baylor has lost twice, to Houston and Arkansas.

Of course, Texas could still go to the Cotton Bowl if SMU upsets Arkansas Saturday in Little Rock and the Longhorns get by Baylor and the Texas Aggies in the SWC finale Dec. 1. In a Texas-Houston tie for the SWC title, the Longhorns would get the Cotton Bowl nod by virtue of their victory over Houston.

Houston could make it to the Cotton Bowl for the third time in four years if Texas loses again and the Cougars win their remaining two games with Texas Tech and Rice. That would make it a Houston-Arkansas tie, and Houston beat Arkansas.

Field Scovell of the Cotton Bowl committee said "This is the biggest mess we've had in finding a team."

Government predicts higher food prices in '80

The government has predicted that food prices could go up by as much as 11 percent in 1980, but you don't have to pay the higher prices if you shop carefully.

Economists at Citibank, the country's second-biggest commercial bank, recently priced a random marketbasket of 36 food and non-food items at a New York City supermarket.

They found that a careful shopper rang up a bill of $51.08. A careless shopper, who picked haphazardly, without paying much attention to price, paid $83.39 for the same products. The careful shopper saved 39 percent — more than three times as much as the maximum price boost predicted for next year.

Shopping to save takes time and effort. But the trouble may be worth it. Suppose you spend $60 a week on food. Assume you can save just 15 percent by spending an extra hour on shopping — clipping coupons, comparing prices, planning menus around specials. That comes out to $9 a week. That's more than $450 a year. How many hours would you have to work to earn enough to save $450?

Some of the savings reported by the Citibank shoppers were dramatic. One brand of vinegar, for example, cost more than twice as much as another — 34 cents a quart versus 79 cents. Three pounds of onions, purchased loose, cost 69 cents. The same amount, packaged in a bag, carried a price tag of $1.77.

Here are some of the things you can do to save money: —Check newspaper ads before you shop. Circle specials and buy those products at the store that offers the best deal.

—Compare prices on non-sale goods. A 10-cent saving on an advertised special is no bargain if a store's regular prices are higher than the competition.

—Try to plan your spending and shop less often. Each time you enter the supermarket, you're vulnerable to impulse buying; fewer trips mean fewer potential temptations.

—Look for unit prices so you can compare different sizes. The larger size is usually — but not always — cheaper.

—Inspect store displays carefully. A special display doesn't always mean a special price.

—Suit quality to use. No-frills brands in plain packages often offer equal nutrition at much lower prices.

—Learn to compare true cost as well as price. Spare ribs may seem to be cheaper than hamburger, but you get fewer servings per pound.

—Be aware of marketing techniques. The potato chips and snack foods didn't wind up next to the soda by accident.

—Use coupons and take advantage of refund offers displayed on shelves. If the store is out of an advertised item, demand a raincheck.

—Weigh the cost of convenience. The Citibank shoppers, for example, found that a 10-ounce box of frozen peas with butter sauce cost 89 cents. A 10-ounce bag of plain, frozen peas cost 29 cents. Adding the butter yourself is cheaper and takes very little effort.

NATION

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball is "doing just fine" after surgery to remove excess blood and fluid from an area between his skull and brain, a church spokesman says.

The 84-year-old church leader underwent the one-hour operation early Saturday. Doctors expect Kimball will be hospitalized for another 12 to 14 days, said church spokesman Jerry Cahill.

The man considered a prophet by 4.3 million members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints had a similar operation in September for removal of another subdural hematoma.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With another presidential election approaching, black Americans are still not taking enough interest in politics, says Georgia state Sen. Julian Bond.

Bond criticized blacks for political apathy and said Richard Nixon would never have become president if only 10 more voters in every black precinct had voted in 1968.
