U.S. Embassy sacked, burned in Libya

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Some 2,000 Libyans sacked the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli and set fire to the four-story building but the embassy staff escaped unhurt.

The State Department filed a strong protest with the Libyan government and implied that it was responsible for the attack.

It was the second attack on an American embassy in a Moslem country in response to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's campaign to end U.S. influence in the Islamic world. On Nov. 21, a mob burned the embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, killing two U.S. Marines and two Pakistani staff members.

Charge d'Affaires William Eagleton's wife said about a dozen staff members were working in the Tripoli embassy at midmorning Sunday when a group of demonstrators arrived "quietly chanting"

She said the staff "immediately locked up," and several male officials went to the Green Square, a central plaza several blocks away, where they "saw a large mob. They got back to the embassy and within five minutes the mobs arrived."

Consul Vincent Principe said the Libyans began "banging on the door and made it known to us they wanted to get inside. We just thought it prudent to leave."

The Americans fled through a back door and took refuge in their homes.

Only one Libyan policeman was on duty in front of the embassy at the time, and Libyan officials ignored appeals from the embassy for reinforcements, the State Department said in Washington. The embassy's Marine guard was withdrawn from Tripoli some time ago at the request of the Libyan government, the department said.

The State Department said the mob apparently used two-by-fours to break through the front door while some of the demonstrators climbed up to a second-floor balcony. JANA, the official Libyan news agency, said the mob burned an American flag and effigies of President Carter and the deposed shah of Iran. U.S. officials said there was serious fire damage to the consular section on the first floor and damage also on the second floor.

State Department officials in Washington said the attack on the building set off an automatic tear-gas security system. JANA charged that the embassy staff "fired toxic gases believed to be used only by the military, confirming that the embassy's employees are military personnel." It claimed the gas seriously injured several students.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the U.S. government protested the "inadequate and unresponsive" security protection.

Asked whether the attack had the backing of the Libyan government, he replied: "Libya is not a country in which demonstrations and other public manifestations happen in the same way in which they happen in this country."

Mrs. Eagleton said police reinforcements arrived after the mob scattered "but we have protection now at the embassy and our houses." The State Department said Libyan firemen extinguished the fires.

Shah rests in private on Lackland Air Base

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The deposed shah of Iran rested at a secret location somewhere on Lackland Air Force base today, where he was placed under the protection of the U.S. military for the first time since the Iranian crisis erupted.

The surprise, pre-dawn transfer from New York Sunday was aimed at providing "a secure convalescent facility" for the ailing shah until the U.S. government finds him a place to live, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said.

However, several hours after being given a fourth-floor ward at Lackland's Wilford Hall Air Force Hospital, the shah was later moved out of the hospital to another location on the base, a top Lackland source confirmed.

Officials would not give a reason for the move, and would not comment on speculation it was for security reasons. The nine-story hospital is located on the fringe of the base and in clear view of a busy highway.

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, 60, went to New York's Cornell Medical Center Oct. 22 for treatment of lymph cancer and for gallbladder surgery. A mob of Moslem militants holding 50 Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran has demanded the return of the exiled monarch to Iran.

The shah's transfer places him under guard of a U.S. military force for the first time since the seizure of the U.S. Embassy, and offers more security in any future move the shah may make from here. In Iran, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the move does not affect the hostages one way or the other.

Officials at Lackland, where airmen and officers learn basic training, refused to discuss any details of the shah's arrival. They barred all reporters and photographers from the base, using the presence of guard dogs to encourage the mass departures after the order was given.

Extra guards were added throughout the base and hospital areas. Officials also said FBI agents were helping with security.

Job for life

IRANIAN LEADER Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, center, is surrounded by followers Sunday as he arrives at a mosque in Qom to vote in the referendum on a new Islamic constitution. The constitution would automatically confirm Khomeini as ruler for life.

Trio arrested for kidnapping

Pampa police officers arrested three Amarillo men in a local restaurant parking lot for investigation of assault and kidnapping charges.

Franklin Andrew Haney, 22, of 5421 River Road, Mark Anthony McGahey, 25, of P. O. Box 365 and 30-year old Rick D. Moore of 4215 Spark, all from Amarillo, were booked and placed in city jail for investigation of aggravated assault and aggravated kidnapping charges of a Pampa man, Tony Bailey, 22, of 420 N. Wells.

According to the police report, the charges stem from a dispute over a pickup. The men reportedly took Bailey to an open field where he was beaten, a knife was held to his neck and his life was threatened.

Then, they allegedly drove to a grocery store where the suspects purchased some notebook paper. Bailey was taken to another location where his life was again threatened and he was forced to write a confession.

Bailey returned to his home to get the keys to the vehicle. The suspects were confronted by family members saying they would be reported to the police. Immediately after the three men left the residence, the police were called and a description of the alleged kidnapers were given.

Warrants for the men were issued by Justice of the Peace Nat Lunsford. Officer John Blakemore located the men at a local restaurant parking lot. Three other police officers were called as back up when the arrests were made.

Participating in the arrests were Sgt. Charles Love, Patrolman Kenneth Hopson and Patrolman Johnny Bennett.

The incident is presently being investigated by the police department. According to Lt. Charles Morris, no charges have been filed at this time.

Bailey received minor injuries which did not require hospitalization.

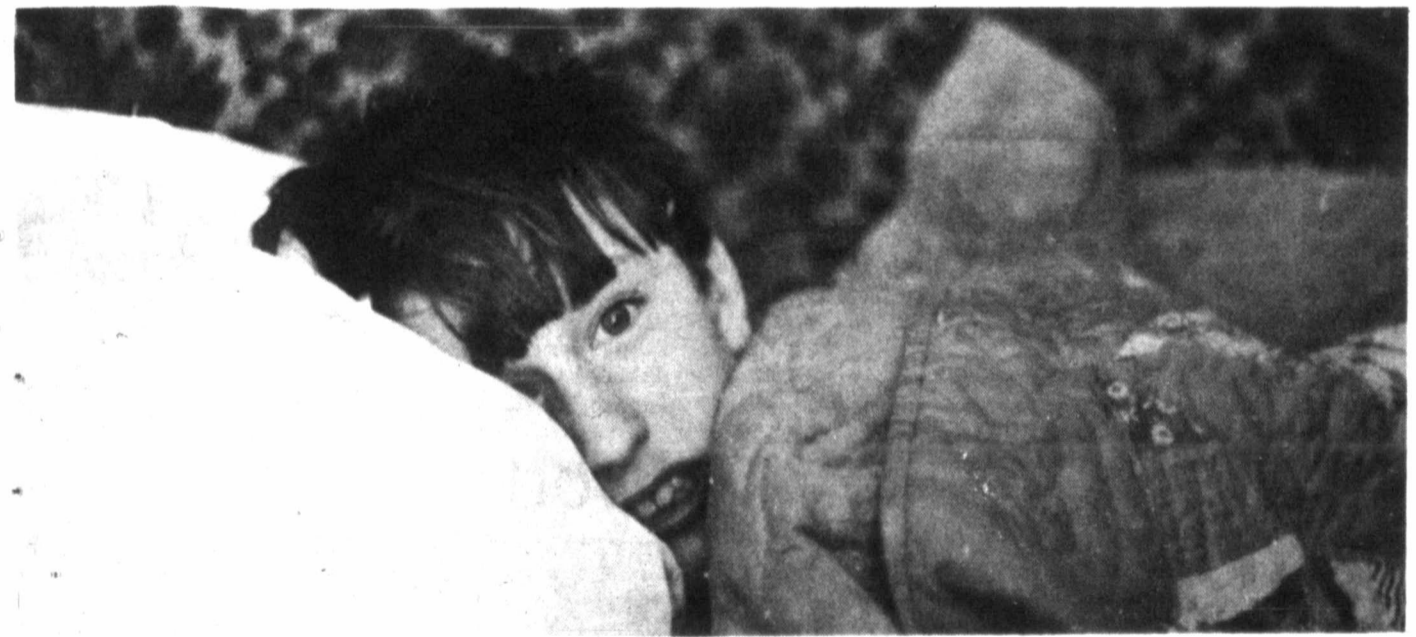

Weather

The forecast calls for partly cloudy and warmer conditions through Tuesday. Monday and Tuesday's highs will be in the mid to upper 60s. Monday's low will be in the mid 30s. Winds will be gusty and variable.

TRENT WATSON

Newspaper boy attacked

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Of The Pampa News

An 11-year-old Pampa News carrier was taken to Highland General Hospital Emergency Room Sunday morning after being attacked by a St. Bernard while delivering the morning newspaper.

Trent Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Watson of 101 N. Dwight, was pulled from his bicycle in the 900 block of Rham at about 7:40 a.m. by the large dog, known as "Duke", and was brutally attacked. Lying on his face, the boy was bitten on his back and legs.

Two other dogs are thought to have been involved in the attack, Mrs. Watson said. She believes the owners were contacted by the animal control warden and they are supposed to present certification of the dogs' rabies shots sometime today.

Dannie R. Miller of 105 Faulkner saw the attack, ran to the scene, hitting the dog with his hand. This forced Duke to move away from Trent, allowing Miller to rescue him. He then took the boy to the emergency room where Watson received 60 to 70 stitches for his injuries.

The owners of the animal, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hughes of 923 Rham Street, penned the dog and turned him over to the animal control warden. Duke is presently being observed for rabies at a local veterinary clinic.

The Hughes have given permission for the dog to be destroyed after the observation period is up, a police spokesperson said.

According to Mrs. Wanda Watson, Trent had known the dog for two years and had never had any problem before. Saturday, Mrs. Watson said, Trent told her he felt the dog might have attacked him when he went to the Hughes residence to collect for the paper.

Mrs. Watson also commented some neighborhood children had attempted to choke the St. Bernard earlier in the week. She said the dog's neck was "real sore."

Police say the Hughes informed them the dog had recently had rabies shots. Police confirmed the Hughes are to provide the proof.

"Trent is doing better than I expected him to be," Mrs. Watson said. She commented most of the stitches will have to remain in the bite wounds for 10 days to two weeks, adding some will be removed sooner.

Hightower says America must develop energy

By MELANIE MILLER
Of The Pampa News

American oil companies must begin work on developing alternative energy sources because the U.S. economy depends on it, U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, said Saturday.

And concerning the Iran situation, the congressman said there is not any one answer to how to get the hostages released.

"I'm behind President Carter," Hightower said. "He should be and has been using every diplomatic means possible for releasing the hostages."

Hightower was the featured speaker at the 47th annual officer election banquet of the American Petroleum Institute Saturday. Fred Neslage served as master of ceremonies for the banquet, his 34th year to do so.

The congressman said the public needs to know the truth of the economics of oil and gas and doing that right now is hard.

"There's a lack of understanding about the economics of oil and gas," Hightower said. "The message is hard to tell and we're living in a time where everyone's an expert — people think they have all the answers."

Oil and gas is the essential strength of the economy of this country, he added.

"We're in peril unless we make some real adjustments," Hightower said. He sees the major problem facing Americans as inflation, caused by actions of the OPEC nations as well as by actions of the U.S. Congress.

"We have a lot of deficit spending and we need to cut down on non-essential spending, but how?" he asked.

Hightower added that when Americans have difficulties, they want to find a "whipping boy" and many people that whipping boy is the oil companies.

"The recent earnings rates of the oil companies caused a furor," he said. "It makes my blood boil when I hear people yelling about those profits. If we could just get the bottom line down to people, that'd help."

The congressman said he voted against the windfall profits tax, a bill he claimed is named what it is "for political reasons."

"It's an excise tax, pure and simple, but it gets people stirred up," he said. "It's strictly punitive."

Americans need to become concerned with where oil they receive is coming from and the U.S. needs to "get out from under the OPEC dependency," Hightower said. He questioned how that could be done but explained that work needs to be continued on developing synthetic fuels.

"We need to understand that while we're doing that, we'll have to continue to pay high prices for imported oil," Hightower said. He added that he supports gasohol because it will provide another market for farmers and because it will stretch the capacity of fossil fuels by two percent.

Hightower said he is pleased with the "uniformity of American response to the Iran crisis — it has brought the people together." He added that he did not sign the resolution promoted by other congressmen favoring a deadline for release of the American hostages in Teheran.

"We're tying the hands of the hostages by doing that," Hightower said. "I'm for supporting the president — in a time of crisis like this, there's only one president."

He added that the things the Ayatollah Khomeini has done are in "direct opposition" to the Koran, the Bible of Islam.

"In the Koran, it says diplomats must be treated with respect," he said. "This whole thing is strictly anti-American politics — Khomeini didn't jump on Mexico when the Shah was living there."

Hightower has submitted a bill calling for the deportation of Iranian students found guilty of committing crimes in the U.S. The first student, who had been living in Oklahoma illegally for the past two years, was deported Saturday.

API members approved Richard L. Wall of Texaco as club chairman for 1980. Other officers named were Billie Mac Millican, first vice-chairman; Rayln Boudreaux, second vice-chairman; John Anderson, third vice-chairman; and secretary-treasurer, Martin F. Ludeman.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Walking softly has not helped in Iran

Americans found themselves in a tremble the past few days. It was a feeling they had not known for some time. They had seen a bad situation in Iran grow worse, and they had begun to wonder just where it all would end. Not much has changed in that respect.

People who are old enough to remember such things found their thoughts returning to the time when they first heard the news of Pearl Harbor, where they were, what they were doing, how they reacted. Or, thoughts of the Battle of the Bulge might have come back, or thoughts of how it felt to see a loved one ride off to war with chances of his ever returning being less than good.

It had been a long time since events stirred such memories, but they were there, tucked away in the back of our minds to be pulled out when events prompted it.

Well, events have prompted it. During the past couple of weeks, we have seen religious fanatics capture our embassy in Iran and take hostage all who were within. We have seen some of those hostages released, and we have seen the brittle attitude of Iranians grow more brittle toward our country.

It is something we don't quite understand. The focus of hate falls on the shah who came to this country to get medical treatment. Release the shah, Iran said, and we will release the hostages.

The Iranians don't understand our type of morality, apparently, and we don't understand their religious fanaticism. They are Shites, they say, and there is something about their beliefs that give whatever they do a touch of religious zeal.

It is easier to deal with ten thousand loonies than it is to deal with one person who is sure that he has been anointed by his religious deity.

This country has walked softly and carried a little stick as it tried to find an answer to the villainous situation which Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini thrust us into. Our leaders have reasoned, cautioned, pleaded, and, finally, set out on a definite course that could bring military intervention.

And all the polls have indicated that the people are in agreement. We have been wronged. We continue to be wronged as long as our people are under guard in our own embassy, or anywhere else for that matter. We can't go on like this forever.

If it is necessary to shoot, we will do so with a calculated risk. Our honor is at stake, and we must take that risk.

It is not a pleasant thought, going to war. It is sometimes necessary. We hope this time it is not necessary.

Just what's wrong with a little poison

Washington has been plagued with a near-epidemic of hot air for years. Just recently this problem has dramatically worsened. It seems that the Food and Drug Administration, which supervises almost everything Americans eat, drink, breathe or wear, has been spewing cancer-causing chemicals into the air from its own Washington laboratories.

FDA admits to discharging daily more than 38 pounds of toxic and carcinogenic chemicals into the air, but claims such amounts pose no threat to public health and safety. Congressman Elliott H. Levitas isn't so sure and says: "I find it singularly out of character for an agency such as the Food and Drug Administration to say there's nothing wrong with a little poison." FDA also maintains laboratories in Philadelphia, Chicago, Seattle and Denver.

Where's justification for deficit of billions

A Senate and House conference committee recently reached agreement on how much the federal government should spend during the current fiscal year. The amount is $547.6 billion.

If that figure is hard to visualize, try one that goes with it. Because the government expects to borrow about $29 billion to cover another deficit in its budget, the national debt is expected to reach $880 billion by the middle of next year.

Dollars in those amounts are beyond any frame of reference in our daily lives. But the federal budget and its deficit are pertinent nonetheless to what is going on in our own pocketbook, where we pull out a $20 bill today to buy something that cost $10 barely a decade ago.

Economists generally agree that the only way to bring inflation under control is through monetary and fiscal restraint. The Federal Reserve Board finally is practicing monetary restraint with its high interest rates and other steps to limit growth in the money supply. Fiscal restraint is up to the president and Congress and their claim to be practicing it in the current budget is chicanery.

When President Carter was campaigning against Washington's big spenders in 1976, he talked about balancing the budget by 1980. His economic policies as president have been a string of rationalizations. By last January, when he offered a budget of $332 billion for fiscal 1980, with a deficit of $29 billion, he was arguing that spending any less would do more harm than good.

By July, inflation and brisk economic growth had produced such a promising outlook for tax collections in 1980 that the administration discovered it could spend $542 billion without pushing the deficit past $29 billion. By October there was enough money in sight for a $547.6 billion budget — still with a deficit of $29 billion.

The "restraint" we are supposed to see in this exercise is that the deficit for 1980 is only a couple of billion dollars greater than the one for 1979. We are supposed to overlook the fact that if Carter had stuck to his January spending estimates, the deficit might be down to $15 billion — some restraint more worthy of the name.

If deficit spending fuels inflation, as many economists believe, then whose side is the government on? If a business slowdown results from the squeeze on credit, as everyone expects, there is no assurance that the 1980 deficit even can be held within the $29 billion now projected. A recession causes government revenue to fall and the costs of welfare programs to rise.

In the depth of the Depression when Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal was trying to prime the economic pump with government-spending programs, the biggest deficit ever approved by Congress was 3.5 billion in 1936. Applying the inflation factor, that would amount to $17.5 billion today.

Carter has been enthralled by New Deal economics since he entered the White House. But even taking a leaf from FDR's book, what is the justification for a $29 billion deficit at a time of rampant inflation, when unemployment is relatively low, and the government is banking on only a mild turnaround before the Fed's tight money is relaxed? The answer is that there isn't any.

Don't blame retailer for inflation

By Oscar Cooley
We consumers are inclined to be antagonistic toward the storekeepers who sell us our groceries, wearables, hardware, remedies, etc. When the prices of these things rise noticeably, we look blankly at the sales clerk, as much as to say, "What are you doing to us?"

Today's inflated prices arouse our animus, and much of it is directed at the fellow who charges those prices. During a time of rapid inflation, retailers are more than normally unpopular. Much of the anti-business feeling we hear about is due to our concern over price tags.

Ronald P. Wolff, writing in the Los Angeles Times, attacks the retailers for not merely pricing their goods at a fixed percentage over what they paid for them.

He says prices in retail stores depend on various silly factors which have little or no relation to what the goods cost the retailer.

For example, the rule of nines, or the notion that a customer will buy an article for $39.95 much more readily than if it is priced at an even $40. (Would Wolff prefer to pay $40? The clerk will probably oblige.)

Then there is the rule of quantity discount. The more ounces of mouthwash you buy, the less you pay per ounce. Wolff is indignant at how much less, sometimes, you pay. (This rewards the customer for looking ahead and foreseeing that his breath will need sweetening a month from now just as it does now. So it pays him to buy the large bottle.)

Wolff even cites a "rule of personality," alleging that if you are nice to the clerk and she likes you, she'll give you a break at the cash register. On the other hand, "Make yourself hard to deal with and you are asking to have your wallet gouged." (This strikes me as a tribute to the store people. Is Wolff implying that a smile is out of place in a business transaction?)

He is upset also because the different stores of a chain may charge different prices for the same goods, depending on the opulence of the area in which the store is located. (In short, they favor the poor.)

But his main criticism is that retail prices are not determined by a "standard mark-up procedure," that is, by simply adding enough to the wholesale price to enable the retailer's cost of operation, covering him to "make enough money to stay in business and live comfortably."

Wolff, in his innocence, always had assumed that retailers did this, and he was dismayed to find, when he went to work as a salesman in a retail camera store, that this is not always the case. He thinks there is something unfair in a seller charging a price other than just what is required to cover his costs, plus a fair profit.

Retailers do have standard mark-ups, but they do not and cannot observe these in all cases. They sometimes price an item at "considerably more than the standard mark-up. And they often cut the price to substantially less.

They do this, as economists have long pointed out, in observance of the laws of supply and demand. The law of supply says that the larger the quantity of the good which is available, the lower the price must be to sell all. The law of demand says that the keener the demand for the good in question, the higher the price must be to ration out the good and avoid shortage.

What has "standard mark-up" to do with these natural laws? Nothing. If a retailer were to mark all his goods up by a standard, cost-covering percentage, his selling prices would not be in accord with the market's demand and supply. Some articles would be overpriced and would not sell. Others would be underpriced and would be snapped up by customers who got there first, leaving the late-comers empty-handed. In either case, the seller would make less profit than the market wants him to have.

In practice, your retailer adjusts his prices in an effort to conform to the laws of demand and supply. For example, before Christmas, demand for gift goods is keen, and so he keeps his prices fairly high, as high as his competition will allow. After Christmas, demand for such goods drops precipitately, and so the retailer responds by having a January sale, crossing out the old price tags and remarking them down.

Throughout the year, your alert merchant is checking his stock. He notes what is selling briskly and orders more, what is gathering dust on the shelves and marks it down so it will move. This is what is meant by "selling for all the traffic will bear." It is not unfair. In truth, it is the fairest policy he could imagine — fair to the customer because it stretches out the supply so that some is available for everybody, fair to the merchant because it moves his goods and keeps the cash register ringing. If the price were not adjusted to what the market will bear, nobody would be satisfied. Wolff's rule of nines, of quantity, of personality are mere clauses in the general rules of demand and supply.

Merchants increase retail prices, it is true, but only when moved to do so by forces beyond their control. They are not to blame for inflation.

Last train from Chicago

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON—Neil E. Goldschmidt is not a household word. The reason for this is that he is a member of President Carter's cabinet. Mr. Goldschmidt is Secretary of Transportation. He would have probably remained anonymous for the rest of his term except that last week he told reporters that he would look for opportunities to deny federal funds to Chicago because Mayor Jane Byrne has decided to support Sen. Teddy Kennedy.

Since Secretary Goldschmidt is new to Washington he can't be blamed for putting Chicago on the President's hit list. He told reporters the decision had been made after consulting with White House officials.

What people didn't know until Goldschmidt's meeting with reporters is that the Department of Transportation has a $2 billion government slush fund which can be distributed to the cities for their needs at the discretion of the secretary. While it is the taxpayers' money, the Carter people have decided to use it to keep the mayors in line.

I have no vested interest in Chicago, except never to go there in the winter, but as a taxpayer I didn't know that my money would be used to guarantee Carter's nomination in 1980.

I was so upset to hear that Secretary Goldschmidt had the authority to give or withhold government money, according to a mayor's loyalty to the President, that I called the Department of Transportation to protest.

"How could you do something like that?" I asked someone in charge.

He replied, "In spite of what you read in the newspapers Secretary Goldschmidt's decision was not a political one. We're cutting Mayor Byrne off because we feel Chicago would only waste the funds on improving its urban transportation system."

"But isn't that what the Department of Transportation's money is supposed to go for?"

"Up to a point," he said, "but it was not Congress' intent to vote appropriations which would be used by a mayor who would turn her back on the greatest President the United States has ever known."

"Then you are playing politics with the taxpayers' money?"

"We most certainly are not. We have guidelines before we give federal funds to the cities. The most important question is, does the mayor have the intelligence and executive ability to use the money wisely in improving her transportation system? The secretary, after consulting with transportation experts at the Carter for President organization, decided that Mayor Byrne failed to meet this test."

"But you decided this only after she came out for Kennedy?"

"We decided it long before that, but only announced it after she came out for Kennedy so we wouldn't hurt Mayor Byrne's feelings. We'd much prefer for her to believe it was a political decision rather than tell her the truth, that when it comes to transportation matters she's a very poor mayor."

"Can you assure me that your action against Chicago, and any future actions you take in withholding funds from a city, has absolutely nothing to do with the upcoming election?" I demanded.

"Of course I can," he said. "The secretary has told me many times, 'My only job is to see that America's trains run on time. But I would not be serving the interests of the American people if I gave money to a mayor who doesn't even know which side her bread is buttered on.'"

The terrorist business

There's a boom underway these days in one aspect of international business activity that is causing no joy in boardrooms.

Terrorism directed at business enterprises and executives is spiraling sharply and steadily upward, according to a study just out from The Conference Board.

By its tally, terrorist incidents — murders, kidnappings, bombings, personal assaults and the like — nearly tripled in a four-year period, jumping from 572 in 1975 to 1,511 in 1978. And indications from the first three quarters of 1979 are that another record year is coming up.

The private economic research organization says its figures, because of different criteria, vary somewhat from those of such other interested parties as the State Department and CIA, but all are in agreement on the upward trend.

Focusing on kidnappings, the study finds that businessmen are far and away the prime terrorist targets. They were involved in 55 percent of abductions of American personnel in foreign countries between 1970 and 1978, with diplomats a distant second at 28 percent.

There is a sexist as well as economic tilt to kidnappings. Some 90 percent of victims have been male. Of the few women abducted, about half were daughters of executives who were the real targets of extortion incidents.

The increasing incidence of terrorist kidnappings has been paced by rising ransom demands. In 1978 there were 12 demands for $1 million or more, where early in the decade there had been none that high. The norm is now in the $5-10 million range and since 1970, the terrorists' total take has been an estimated $150 million.

In self-defense, businesses and businessmen operating abroad are using a number of stratagems such as assumed names for travel and hotel reservations, unlisted addresses and phone numbers, unidentified company vehicles and insurance.

How many firms are utilizing the latter is unknown because publicity can in some cases be grounds for cancellation of coverage. But ransom insurance is known to be a growing field with — surely to no one's surprise — Lloyds of London in the forefront of carriers.

While insurance may be an appropriately businesslike way of minimizing financial losses, it does nothing to resolve the basic problem. And unfortunately, no resolution yet appears in sight.

We are still a long way from finding a way to give the business to terrorism.

Tehran as viewed from Stockholm

If the causes of terrorists are frequently murky, their psychology can be even more so.

Their often irrational behavior is a field of growing interest to psychologists. And so is that at times displayed by their captives.

An attitude of particular interest that has been evidenced by the latter is the "Stockholm syndrome" and it is discussed in a recent New York Times report.

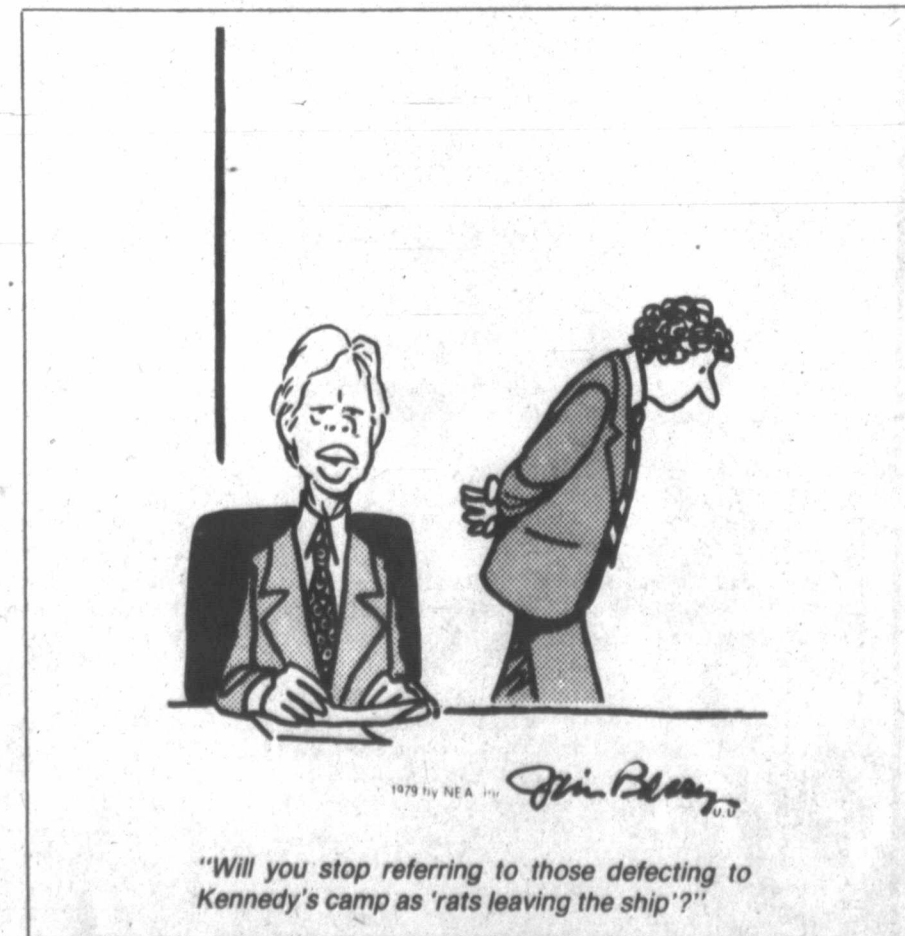

The name comes from a bank seizure in the Swedish capital six years ago in which sympathetic bonds developed between captives and captors. The consequences can be bizarre in some instances, with hostages reacting hostilely to their eventual rescuers, visiting jailed terrorists and setting up funds for their defense.

The syndrome can also have a reverse, with captors becoming so involved with their prisoners that they find it difficult to impossible to carry out death threats.

Sympathetic references to their student captors by some of the released American embassy personnel suggest that the Stockholm syndrome may be at work in Tehran, according to one expert observer, Dr. Frank Ochberg, Michigan State Director of Mental Health and a member of a 1975 Justice Department national task force on terrorism.

The Stockholm syndrome may go a long way to explain Tehran and other puzzling terrorist incidents of recent years, and in so doing go to a disturbing extreme to demonstrate a quirky fact of personality that even non-psychologists are familiar with — that opposites attract. minor accidents

A 1971 Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by Damar Fleming, 16, of 1925 N. Zimmers was reportedly exiting on a service ramp in the 1800 block of N. Hobart when it was in collision with a 1979 Chevrolet driven by 57-year-old Doris Gaston, Box 719, Sterling City. Gaston was reportedly southbound on Hobart when the mishap occurred. Fleming was cited for failure to yield right of way.
 Randall Manning, 21, of 453 Hughes was reportedly driving a 1971 Buick southeast on a parking lot of the Coronado Center when he was in collision with a 1964 Pontiac driven by 73-year-old Lottie Patterson, 619 N. Sumner who was traveling east on the lot. No citations were issued.
 An unknown vehicle was traveling north on Hobart in the inside lane, when it attempted to make a right turn onto Francis Street from the wrong lane. It reportedly struck a 1978 Ford driven by Ruth Alexander, 29, of 1336 Terrace. Alexander was traveling north on Hobart in the outside lane when the accident occurred.

TEXAS

By The Associated Press
 Light, intermittent rain fell in the Lower Rio Grande Valley today, but most of Texas had clear to partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures.
 Highs were to be mostly in the low to middle 60s except in the Valley where highs to be in the 50s.
 Light rain fell in the Valley throughout the night. Western and northern sections of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies early today and skies were mostly cloudy over all of South Texas.
 Early morning temperatures ranged from the 20s and 30s in West and North Texas to near 50 in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 22 at Wink to 55 at Corpus Christi.

NATIONAL

Winds up to 50 miles per hour swept across the prairie and the Great Lakes early today as gale warnings were posted along the Oregon coast.
 Rain was forecast today for much of the northern and central Pacific Coast and the northern and central plains. Snow was expected in the Rockies and temperatures were expected to be cold with highs in the 30s from the Dakotas to northern New England.
 Early today, high winds drove down temperatures in parts of Wyoming, the northern Plains, the Mississippi Valley and the western Great Lakes, piling up snow in some areas. Gale warnings were posted for lakes Superior, Huron and Michigan and for the northern Pacific Coast.
 Light rain fell over southern Texas before dawn while rain and snow blanketed northeast Colorado and in parts of the Pacific Northwest.
 Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 4 below zero in Gunnison, Colo., to 68 in West Palm Beach, Fla.
 Eastern U.S. — Atlanta 30 clear, Boston 25 clear, Cincinnati 18 clear, Cleveland 13 clear, Detroit 14 clear, Miami 61 clear, New York 27 clear, Philadelphia 26 clear, Pittsburgh 25 cloudy, Washington 32 clear.

Not guilty verdict returned in drug trial

A not guilty verdict was returned Friday in 223rd District Court against Larry Odus Ivey of Pampa, who was charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver.
 The six-man, six woman jury returned the verdict after three hours of deliberation. District Attorney Harold Comer said Ivey was arrested Aug. 23, along with Terry and Elaine Brookshire, at the Brookshire's mobile home in the Johnson Trailer Park at the intersection of West Kentucky and Price Road.

Officials of the Gray County sheriff's office seized methamphetamines and paraphernalia in the arrest. The Brookshires' case has not come to trial.

A few of the Annual Pampa Christmas Parade weren't quite sure why they bothered to enter.

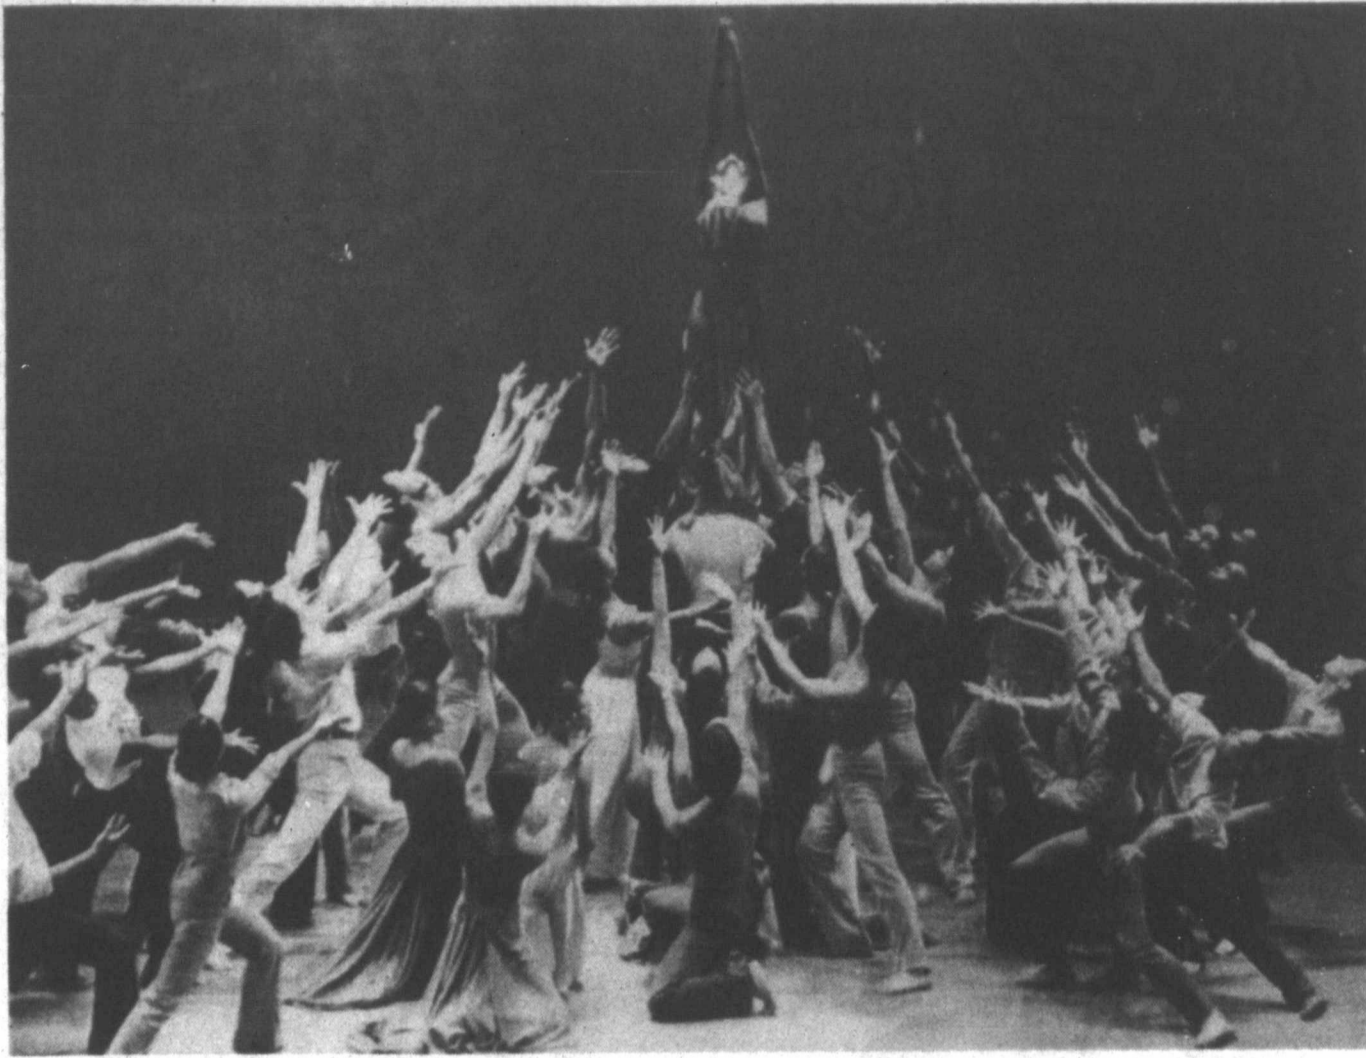

police report

William Wayne Roe, 44, of 304 Miami was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving left of center at the intersection of Huff and McCullough. He was booked and placed in city jail.
 Manuel Cardenas Wilson, 39, 1132 Sirroco, was arrested for driving while intoxicated and driving left of center at the intersection of Hobart and Foster. He was placed in city jail.
 Donald Joe Williams, 17, of 2129 N. Zimmers was arrested at 21st and Nelson on charges of driving while intoxicated and violation of drivers license restriction. He was placed in city jail.

THE PEOPLE'S PHARMACY

'New' and 'improved' is mostly hot air

By Joe Graedon

"New" and "improved" are key words in our progress-oriented society. We have fallen in love with bigger, better, newer. Whether it be a mouthwash, backache remedy or sleeping pill the words "new and improved" almost guarantee increased sales. But just how much can you trust these tempting labels that promise extra strength and greater benefit?

Despite an occasional breakthrough in product development, more often than not reformulation is the response to federal regulation. That is, an ingredient which is banned or will require a warning label is removed and another, often chemically similar (but untested), ingredient is substituted. The resulting product may be hardly better than the original.

Take sleeping pills for example. The Food and Drug Administration recently banned the ingredient methapyrilene because it was shown to cause cancer in animals. (There was also some doubt it was really effective in putting insomniacs to sleep.)

Hundreds and hundreds of products were pulled off pharmacy shelves, including Nytol, Cope, Compoz and Sominex.

Many manufacturers rushed to salvage the reputation of their highly advertised medications. The makers of such successful products as Sominex and Nytol acted quickly to reformulate. Now both products boast a "New Formula".

Both sleeping pills contain the identical ingredient — an antihistamine called pyrilamine.

Pyrilamine is a chemical cousin of the banned drug methapyrilene. While there is no evidence that the new ingredient is hazardous, there is also a paucity of data to support its worth either.

Because of insufficient information the FDA commissioner has required further testing to establish safety and effectiveness. Meanwhile, the drug companies exhort us to buy the "New formula for safe, restful sleep".

In order to escape such a scary label and turn a problem into an asset, the companies have reformulated. While many have moved in good faith to eliminate all suspect chemicals, a few have merely moved molecules and created "new formulas" that are practically identical to the original dangerous dyes.

One product which has recently been reformulated without such apparent threat is Doans Pills. According to the label, the "New Doan's" is stronger and starts to work faster than ever before. With a medically proven pain killing ingredient that relieves backache pain and strained muscles for hours."

To fully appreciate the "New Doans" it is helpful to know what was in the "Old Doans". This "best selling" back ache remedy contained some fascinating ingredients, including extract of buchu, extract of uva ursi, and vitamin A. It did contain sodium salicylate — a compound similar to aspirin but in a dose equivalent to about one-third of an adult aspirin tablet.

There was also some theobromine, a caffeine-like substance found in tea and cocoa. So far as we know there are no hazards associated with any of these ingredients. But there's little evidence they would do much in particular to relieve your nagging backache.

The new Doans has eliminated the old ingredients. Sodium salicylate was replaced with magnesium salicylate, a pain reliever approximately equal to aspirin in analgesic potency. And they threw in a little caffeine, about what's in half a cup of coffee.

Consequently, "new formula" Doans will probably be little more effective than the old product and not better than plain aspirin in relieving backaches. It costs more, though.

The moral? It pays to be skeptical rather than gullible when it comes to these "new improved" drug labels.

HOW TO MAKE A MERRY CHRISTMAS

Free clinic

Free vaccination clinics offered in December include one in Pampa on Dec. 13 at the Marcus Sanders Community Center, 407 S. Crawford.

The vaccines, offering protection against several childhood diseases, will be given from 1 to 4 p.m.

Protection will be offered against polio, diphtheria, lock jaw, whooping cough, measles, rubella and mumps.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm over 80, and have a difficult decision to make. About 55 years ago, my youngest brother (then 23) married a pretty girl who said she was expecting his child. At the time there was talk in town that she was romantically involved with a married man — her employer.

Unfortunately, her child turned out to be the living image of her employer! When the boy was 4, his parents divorced, and the mother and son left town. To the day of my brother's death (three years ago), he never mentioned her or his "son." My brother never married again.

Last year, a handsome, well-mannered man knocked on our door and introduced himself as my brother's son. He said his mother had died recently, and he wanted to visit the town of his birth and meet his "father's" family. He was full of questions about his "father," saying his mother refused to talk about him. He asked me why his parents had divorced. (His biological father is also dead.)

My question: Should he be told? He has a lovely family and lives 900 miles away. We have several cousins who know the story, but they say they'll never tell.

If he should be told, I think I should be the one to tell him before I pass on. He'll probably not visit this way after I'm gone. What would you do, Abby?

INDIANA

DEAR INDIANA: I would leave well enough alone, and say nothing. I'll probably hear an uproar from many who believe it's everyone's "right" to know their real roots, but I would not exhume this 55-year-old skeleton.

DEAR ABBY: Phil is 28 and I'm 22. We met at church choir about a year ago and have been going together ever since. He's asked me to marry him, but there is something about him that bothers me. Please don't laugh; it's the way he cheats out when it comes to money.

He refuses to give a dime to any charity. (He calls them all "rip-offs.") He won't leave a tip unless the service was exceptional — which rarely happens. (I leave tips out of embarrassment.)

Once when he took me out for dinner I said I wasn't very hungry, so he ordered a big meal for himself and told the waiter I didn't want anything. He ate in front of me and didn't even offer me a cup of coffee! I felt so hurt I nearly cried.

He's always asking me to take my car and never offers to put in any gas. (I always pay for the parking, too.)

We both work, and he doesn't have anybody to support, but himself, so I can't understand why he's so tight.

I know it's the thought that counts, but every gift he's given me has been so cheap that I'm almost ashamed to show it to anybody.

Other than his tightness with money, we have a good relationship.

How important is a person's attitude about money?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Very. Don't treat it lightly. A person who is stingy, uncharitable and generally tight with his money is usually inconsiderate, ungracious and uncharitable in other areas. You are wise to wonder.

DR. LAMB

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to comment in reference to your column about the lady who was unable to lose weight even though she only consumed a 1300-calorie diet and engaged in a vigorous exercise program daily. I gather you felt that she either couldn't count calories well or might not be telling the truth. But I am like her and I know other women with the same problem.

I use the term hypometabolic to describe this condition. It's a slow metabolism that's not hypothyroid. I take one grain of thyroid and can burn nine calories per pound of body weight for 24 hours if I also follow a program of long-distance running. Of course, I only weigh 100 pounds so I can only eat about 900 calories a day.

I think there are a number of women who have this problem and they have difficulties because they ask advice from a male-dominated medical establishment. Instead of getting help, they're humiliated. We're told we're not possible and we can't count or that we're crazy or liars or all of the above. Maybe after doctors admit we exist they will be able to study this problem and help us.

DEAR READER — As I've indicated before, there are certain laws of nature that can't be changed. You are absolutely right that if a person really didn't use very many calories he would get fat on a relatively low-calorie diet. The law of energy simply is that if you consume more calories than your body uses, you will accumulate fat. And in order to lose body fat, which is nothing more than stored energy, you have to take in fewer calories than your body uses.

Now anyone who thinks that he or she is one of the low metabolism group you speak of can easily have it verified.

All you have to do is have your doctor request a basal metabolism rate test. This is an old test in medicine based on how much oxygen the body consumes. It's done in the resting state after a good night's rest and with the person fasting. Lying there resting for an hour the total amount of oxygen used at absolute rest can be measured.

PECAN PIE NEW HOLIDAY DESSERT RECIPE

CLIP AND SAVE

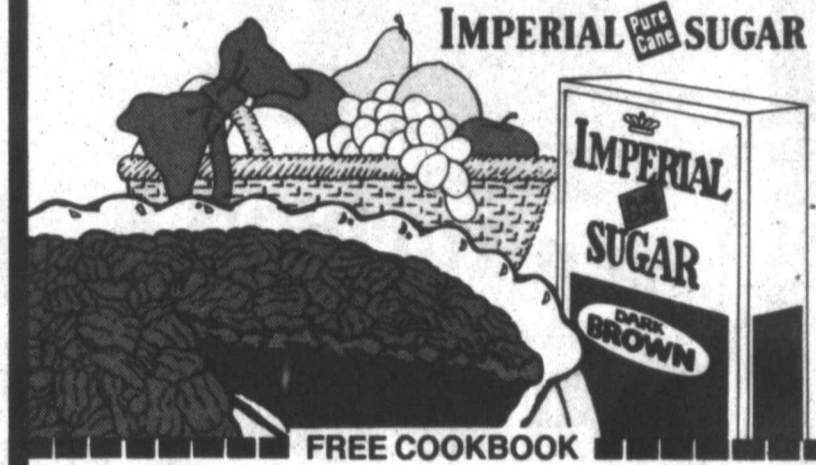

TEXAS PECAN PIE

Crust:
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour 3/4 cup shortening
1/2 teaspoon salt 3 tablespoons water

Mix flour and salt together; add shortening and cut into flour with fork or pastry blender. Add water and mix gently with fork in stirring motion. Gather pastry into a ball and place in pie tin. With tips of fingers, spread pastry along bottom and sides of pie tin, shaping a high, fluted edge. Makes one 9" pie shell.

Filling:
1 1/2 cups Imperial Dark Brown Sugar (firmly packed) 1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup Imperial Granulated Sugar 2 eggs
1/4 cup water 1/2 cup evaporated milk
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour 1 1/2 cup pecan halves
1/4 teaspoon vanilla

Combine first five ingredients in small bowl and mix well. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Add evaporated milk and mix well. Stir in pecan halves and vanilla. Mix well and turn into unbaked 9" pie shell. Cook in preheated 400°F. oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F. and cook an additional 35 to 40 minutes, or until filling is puffed in center and is well browned. Let pie cool before cutting.

Please send me Imperial Sugar's free booklet "Texas Recipes from Texas Places", Vol. II. For each booklet, I have enclosed one block marked pure cane from a bag or carton of Imperial Sugar. To insure delivery, I have included my zip code.

Clements blasts administration on energy issue

WASHINGTON (AP)—Texas Gov. Bill Clements says the Carter Administration is in "a full state of procrastination" on energy issues.

The governor made the remarks on energy after appearing at a Capitol Hill news conference opposing the proposed Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

"There isn't any quick fix in this energy problem," Clements said. "I think they're dragging their feet in a lot of phases."

The former deputy secretary of defense said that conservation certainly has a role to play in any energy program, but he repeated his call for a production oriented energy policy.

"For God's sake let's set that (conservation) aside and move forward," Clements said.

The Republican governor also said after the news conference last Monday that his party will be pushing hard to win in the fourth congressional district next year. Rep. Ray Roberts, a Democrat, is retiring.

"I'm optimistic about taking that seat," Clements said. "We're looking for someone from Tyler."

The district begins at the Oklahoma border near Sherman and Denison and loops north of Dallas toward the east to include Tyler and Longview.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, was one of two senators who voted against the confirmation of Shirley M. Hufsteler as secretary of the new Department of Education.

Tower said his vote represented his continued opposition to creating a new Cabinet department, not opposition to the nominee personally.

Presidential aide Sarah Weddington, a former state legislator from Travis County, presided over the swearing in Friday of seven Washington lawyers to the State Bar of Texas.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, whose district includes Austin and the law school, was present for the event.

"I really came to Washington out of desperation because he would not make an opening for me (in Congress)," Ms. Weddington joked, calling Pickle the only politician she knew who works the aisles of planes as he flies.

The direct flight from Austin to Washington, of course, has become known as the "Jake Pickle Special."

The staff of Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, has finished tabulating questionnaires sent out to his constituents last summer.

Among the findings from the approximately 14,000 forms returned were:

-About 72 percent favored a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget; only about 27 percent said they were for a constitutional convention to balance the budget if it could result in major revisions to the Constitution.

-A split almost down the middle between those who preferred "adequate supply but higher price" as an energy option to "more conservation, and shortages but restraints in price increases."

-A little more than half wanted to prohibit the sale of Texas land to foreigners.

-About 75 percent opposed a national health insurance program. Loeffler's district, the state's largest in area, stretches from San Antonio to San Angelo to the Big Bend.

Since each survey included spaces for two people to respond, about 28,000 opinions were considered.

Washington Post columnist Richard Cohen has admitted to a new humorous addiction to the television show, "Dallas."

"I think it happened when Sue Ellen stopped crying long enough to have another affair," he wrote. "It is clear by now that 'Dallas' is our very own 'Upstairs, Downstairs.'"

Cohen claimed the main differences are that in "Dallas" everything takes place at breakfast instead of tea, a ranch house does not have a downstairs, and "Dallas" does not have Alistair Cooke to host it as he did for the British series on public television.

"I'd love to see him (Cooke) explain Sue Ellen," the column concluded.

The first blues record by The Fabulous Thunderbirds of Austin was reviewed by the Post as "a spare, no-nonsense record, devoid of gimmickry and gadgetry. ... The only problem with 'The Fabulous Thunderbirds' is that it may be a little too hard-core, making no concessions to those who are not already hooked on unadulterated blues."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

December 4, 1979
 This coming year you are likely to form several very beneficial alliances. These arrangements will prove to be good both for you and your partners.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 Although it's very uncharacteristic of you, you may have trouble seeing the other person's point of view today. An open mind is a must in negotiations. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City station, N.Y., 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Be wary of tendencies today to worry about how hard something you want to accomplish is going to be. Negative thoughts halt your progress.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
 Before volunteering to manage something for another today, be certain you know what you're getting into. Things could be more complicated than they appear on the surface.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 Have faith in your own ideas today regarding something you'd like to see changed. If you worry too much about what others may think, it won't get done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 Better be prepared today by having a flexible schedule. Neglected duty will rear its ugly head and demand to be taken care of.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 I hope you charged prudently the past month. Today is the day when creditors will have their hands out for payment of any bills incurred.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 If you spend your time for the benefit of others today you'll have fewer lumps to swallow. Your personal interests aren't favored.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 Guard what you say and to whom you say it today. A great deal more than what was intended will be made out of any negative remarks, giving you a few headaches.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 It's good to Christmas-shop early, but take extra care today to make certain you're getting full value for your money. You tend to spend unwisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Chances are the melancholy you feel today is self-induced. Tally the realities in your life. You'll see the ledger is longer on the good side.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 Hasty thinking must be avoided today. Thoroughly investigate all possibilities open to you and you stand a good chance of overcoming any mistakes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 Depend upon yourself today and you won't suffer unexpected headaches. Sources of help you usually can rely on will not be available.

Cowboys halt losing streak

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, after a brief stretch of self-destruction, are on another patented Super Bowl stretch drive. They played their finest second half of the season Sunday in a 28-7 rout of the New York Giants fashioned on three Roger Staubach to Drew Pearson touchdown passes.

The victory put Dallas on a collision course with the National Conference Eastern Division-leading Philadelphia Eagles, who slaughtered Detroit, 44-7.

Dallas and Washington own 9-5 records, a game behind the Eagles. If the Cowboys beat the Eagles this Saturday and Washington two weeks from now, they can claim the division title Philadelphia has already clenched at least a wild card berth.

Dallas had lost three straight games for the first time since 1974 going into Sunday's meeting with the Giants. It was reminiscent of past Cowboys seasons where they sagged to 5-4, 4-3, 5-3, and 6-4 records before mounting Super Bowl drives.

"This gives us the positive note we needed going into Philadelphia," said Cowboys Coach Tom Landry. "Whoever wins at Philadelphia wins the East... All the chips are on the line."

Landry said of the Cowboys performance, "It was the best overall performance of the year. We did everything well."

Pearson, who caught three touchdown passes in one game for the first time in his career, almost self-destructed, literally.

He caught a touchdown pass of seven yards in the first half to tie the score 7-7, then gathered in an eight-yard scoring pass in the third period to put Dallas ahead to stay.

However, Pearson twisted his knee throwing the ball into the stands in celebration.

"My spiking days are over," said Pearson after the game. "I retired my spiker. What can I say? It almost cost me my leg."

"I got so excited that I tried to throw the ball in the stands and came down wrong. It scared me for a while but it's all right."

Pearson went to the locker room for a quick X-ray, then returned in time to snag a 44-yard touchdown pass from Staubach. Pearson gently dropped the ball in the end zone after his third catch.

Pearson said, "That's the most touchdown passes I ever caught in my life and maybe that's why I got so excited. Roger was reading me all the way. Now I guess I'll be fined $150 for throwing the ball in the stands."

He added, "I guess it was worth it — that's going to be the last time."

The Giants, who held a brief 7-0 lead in the first quarter on a two-yard Billy Taylor touchdown run, praised Pearson's performance.

Defensive back Terry Jackson, who was beaten on two of the Staubach to Pearson touchdown throws, said, "It was just his day... He had a hell of a game... He's a hell of a player. But he's been catching touchdown passes for seven or eight years."

The other Giant cornerback, Ray Rhodes, who was burned for the third TD pass, said, "He made a great play... I rate him among the top receivers in the league."

The Cowboys' stagnant running game perked up considerably with Tony Dorset gaining 108 yards on 29 carries and fullback Robert Newhouse pushing out 48 yards on 10 carries.

Kennedy attacks Shah

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says the 37-year reign of the deposed Shah of Iran was "one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and contends the interests of the United States lie "with the Iranian people."

The Massachusetts Democrat, vying with President Carter for his party's 1980 presidential nomination, did not criticize administration handling of the 4-week-old hostage crisis in an interview Sunday with San Francisco television station KRON-TV.

Instead, Kennedy zeroed in on long-time U.S. foreign policy, saying Americans dealing with that policy "have to get their acts together."

"The shah had the reins of power and ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind — in the form of terrorism and the basic and fundamental violations of human rights, in the most cruel circumstances, to his own people," he said.

With that in mind, Kennedy said, "how do we justify... on the one hand accepting that individual because he would like to come here and stay here with his umpteenth billions of dollars that he's stolen from Iran and, at the same time, say to Hispanics who are here legally that they have to wait nine years to bring their wife and their children to this country."

Talk springing up on legislative session, agenda

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It's probably at least five months before Gov. Bill Clements calls the Texas Legislature back to Austin but there's already plenty of talk about the legislative agenda.

Clements told a gathering of newspaper executives recently the special session was still on the books, probably in April or September. He has given up on chances of a January session.

The Republican governor, who has made clear he will call the session at a time to best help his party, stressed again he will ask for initiative and referendum — a means of letting voters propose law changes.

In fact, Clements said, he had the Legislative Council busy drafting his ideas into an initiative and referendum bill to be presented to the legislators.

Meanwhile, an organization of taxpayer groups, Texas 13, is collecting money for a campaign to amend the Texas constitution if the Legislature should approve initiative and referendum.

And the Texas AFL-CIO is busy in the other direction. AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard says if Clements is able to sell the Legislature on initiative and referendum, the labor union will put up two of the first attempts to amend the constitution. One union effort would call for a corporate-profits tax and the second a rollback in home loan interest maximums from 12 to 10 percent.

Several newspapers have commented on the initiative and referendum issue.

"This is one issue where the governor appears to know the public mind better than the Legislature," said the Lufkin News.

One public opinion poll early in the summer said 56 percent of those surveyed favored a special session on initiative and referendum. Another survey, by a different firm, in the middle of the summer showed significantly less support of the issue.

Clements has stressed that his proposal would not allow corporate funds to be used in promoting an initiative and referendum proposal or to help gather signatures. All signatures must be gathered by volunteers, not professionals as used in some other states. The Legislature would only consider a proposal if it was backed by 15 percent of those voting in the last governor's election from each of at least 75 counties.

Efforts for initiative and referendum legislation have been around a long time — without any success up to date.

According to a special legislative report put out by the House Study Group, Texas voters first defeated a constitutional amendment in 1913 that would have given the people "the power to propose laws at the polls and to approve or reject any act of the Legislature."

In 1973, a commission assigned the task of writing a new state constitution considered but rejected initiative and referendum powers. The 1974 Constitutional Convention failed to reach a decision on a proposed new constitution, with or without the I&R powers.

Then in the 1977 Legislature, two initiative and referendum proposals were introduced but neither made it out of committee during the regular session. At least three more were introduced in the 1978 special session but they also failed to get committee approval.

During the 1979 Legislature, there were 12 initiative and referendum proposals, nine in the House and three in the Senate.

One of the measures, HJR 3, finally made it out of committee and was cleared for House debate. It was an "indirect" proposal whereby voters could petition the legislature for action but could not put a measure directly on the ballot.

The limited proposal sparked several major debates in the House, accompanied by considerable arm twisting from the governor's office, but it never received the necessary 100 votes to send it on to the Senate.

FOCUS

Medical Milestone

Twelve years ago today, a team of surgeons in Cape Town, South Africa, astonished the world by performing the first human heart transplant. On December 3, 1967, doctors replaced Louis Washkansky's damaged heart with the healthy heart of Denise Ann Darvall, a young woman who had died after an auto accident. Washkansky lived with his new heart for 18 days, before he died of a lung infection. Other transplants soon followed. One transplant patient, Mrs. Betty Anick of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, lived more than eight years after receiving a new heart in October, 1968.

DO YOU KNOW — What South African surgeon directed the first successful heart transplant operation?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Mark Twain's real name was Samuel Langhorne Clemens.
