Jury to decide fee issue in Canadian River case

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

MIAMI — A Collingsworth County jury will decide this week how much money for attorneys' fees and survey expenses should be awarded to a plaintiff's group which filed suit against the state of Texas in 1989.

The trial, expected to last two days, will begin at 9 a.m. Monday in Wellington. The jury, to be drawn from a 160 to 180 member pool, will be asked to decide on the amount the plaintiffs may collect from the state after District Judge Kent Sims decided Friday the fees are receivable.

The plaintiffs are a group of Roberts County landowners who were permitted to sue the state over a boundary dispute between their privately owned land and the publicly owned Canadian River bed.

The landowners claim their holdings include land down to where the river runs in its current reduced state. They maintain the 1965 construction of Sanford Dam destroyed the state of Texas' title to the larger river bed which existed before the dam reduced the flow of the river to a small stream.

The landowners group includes E.H. Brainard II, Ruth Wilson, Boone and Bea Pickens, the Morrison Cattle Co., the Catharine C. Whittenberg Trusts, Bonnie Harvey Loopesko, Winifred Wadle, John Ydren and J. Douglas Allen. The stretch of riverbed in dispute straddles the Hutchinson-Roberts County line.

The state of Texas argued the size of the river bed was not altered by the manmade dam and that they still are entitled to use and control the pre-1965 river bed as public land.

Sims ruled earlier the methodology of the "Wilson survey" — a survey proffered by the landowners as proof of the legitimacy of their claim — is correct. The "Wilson survey" is based on the present day wash of the Canadian River as it flows in its reduced state.

On Friday, Sims announced his finding the state took unreasonable action — though he did not define that action — in this suit. He also ruled attorney fees are receivable by the plaintiffs under the Declaratory Judgment Act.

Both sides will present evidence to the jury about the reasonableness and necessity of expenses incurred.

Dallas attorney Mike Powell, speaking for the plaintiffs, told Sims over $1 million has been spent unnecessarily, while the state funded a survey it proffered on behalf of the General Land Office's claim to the wider river bed. Powell said the cost of the two surveys totals $500,000.

"All of this was brought about because they went out and got a lot of land by filing this survey," said Powell.

"I think the state had no idea these people would band together to fight this attack on their land," he continued.

General Land Office attorney Rande Herrell argued the legislature did not authorize the landowners to sue for attorney fees, only waived its sovereign immunity in a limited way when it allowed the group to sue over the boundary question.

The trial was moved to Wellington on a change of venue.

Police suspect Dallas family of crime web

DALLAS (AP) — Police say a former Dallas grocer and his brother headed an international gang of thieves responsible for at least one killing.

Dallas authorities suspect the scope of the legitimate merchant activities of Azzam and Abdel Rahim was overshadowed by a criminal empire they erected.

"The record speaks for itself," Dallas police detective Charles Storey, who has investigated the Rahims for more than a year, told The Dallas Morning News for a copyright story in Sunday's editions.

The Rahims' attorneys deny the allegations and ridicule as fantasies the police theories of a Rahim-run organized-crime empire.

"The Rahims are not engaged in any kind of ongoing criminal enterprise, and I can say that with all assurance," said defense attorney Frank Jackson.

"They are business people who have gotten trapped in the middle of some pretty bad, sordid situations."

Palestinian police, in whose custody Azzam died last September, said the 52-year-old grocer was the leader of a gang responsible for a slaying on the West Bank.

Abdel, 37, sits in the Dallas jail, accused of hiring teen-age gang members to kill a family friend and soliciting the slaying of another in a dispute over a cargo of baby formula.

Dallas police suspect Abdel Rahim in a third slaying. Fire investigators are looking into whether he torched two of his stores for insurance money and hired the same teen gang to burn the business of three competitors. He also has been charged with stealing $7,000 worth of power tools.

Other Rahim brothers are in trouble with the law. On Jan. 10, brothers Bashir, 28, and Wajeeh, 29, were arrested on charges that they lied to obtain U.S. visas. No trial date has been set.

Other federal agencies are still investigating the family, authorities said.

"There is definitely an ongoing investigation that transcends the Northern District of Texas that involves these defendants and others," U.S. Attorney Paul Coggins of Dallas said.

The brothers still living, including Taiser Rahim, 32, have denied all allegations of wrongdoing. The brothers said Palestinian police were "like a mafia" and accused Dallas police of a vendetta.

"The law here is messed-up law," Abdel said in October. "For freedom of criminals, they try to frame somebody."

As for the allegation that he killed somebody, Abdel said simply, "I didn't kill nobody."

Azzam was the first of the brothers to come to the United States, following a route often used by Palestinian traders — first to Colombia in the 1960s, then to Puerto Rico before arriving in Dallas in 1977.

Abdel followed his brother's route, arriving in Texas one year after Azzam. By May 1982, brother Taiser had arrived in Dallas. Bashir and Wajeeh arrived in 1983 when, according to Wajeeh's testimony in a 1987 deposition, Azzam arranged to smuggle them into the United States.

J.J. Juan fills his plate with Middle Ages-inspired food Friday afternoon at the close of two weeks of study of the medieval period in Sharon Jett's sixth grade history class at Pampa Middle School. Each class crowned a king and queen, as well as selecting a knight and lady-in-waiting.

Former Pampan named Canyon Citizen of the Year

CANYON — Weldon "Bird Dog" Trice, former Lefors and Pampa coach and teacher, was named 1995 Citizen of the Year during the Canyon Chamber of Commerce banquet last week.

Trice was awarded the honor Thursday night.

A 1942 graduate of Childress High School, Trice received his bachelor of science degree from West Texas State University in 1950 and his master's degree in education from WTSU in 1954. He served in the U.S. Army Air Corps/Air Force from September 1942 to January 1946.

He and his wife Evelyn moved to Pampa in 1951 and were residents of the city until 1969. Their four children attended Pampa schools, and Mrs. Trice was employed with the First National Bank.

One of their sons, Rick Roach, and his wife, Cindy, live in Miami, along with their three sons, James, Kris and Kyler. Roach is the Roberts County attorney.

The Trices' other children are Ronnie Birdsong, Terry Trice and Ted Trice. All the Trice children attended West Texas State University.

In his letter nominating Trice for the Citizen of the Year honor, Joe Gibson noted he had known Trice "since he was a little boy growing up in Childress," where Trice played football at Childress High School while Gibson was the football coach.

"He was an excellent high school athlete and went on to play football for West Texas State University under the direction of my teammate and dear friend, Frank Kimbrough."

Gibson wrote that the nomination of Trice "is echoed by many other Canyon citizens ... Weldon has done so much to benefit the city of Canyon. He is certainly deserving of this award."

Trice served as coach and teacher at Lefors

High School in 1950-1951, and then as coach and teacher at Pampa High School in 1951-1960. He then served as athletic director at PHIS from 1960 to 1965, then became assistant high school principal from 1966 to 1968.

The Trices then moved to Canyon, where he served as dean of men at WTSU from 1969 to 1980. He later served as executive vice president of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce in 1980-1981, and then was principal of Rex Reeves Elementary School at Canyon from 1982 to 1986.

Trice's professional organization memberships have included the Texas Teachers Association (1951-1969 and 1981-1986), Texas High School Coaches Association (1950-1965), Southwest Association Student Personnel Administrators (1970-1980), Texas Association Student Personnel Administrators (1970-1980) and Texas Chamber of Commerce Executives (1980-1981).

In his civic activities, Trice was a member of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors from 1973-1975 and 1978-1980, serving as board president in 1975 and 1980. He also served on the WTSU Ex-Students Association Board of Directors from 1981-1983.

He has been a member of the American Heart Association from 1970 to the present, serving two terms as president of the Canyon chapter. He served on the state board from 1977-1979 and was chosen as regional volunteer in 1988, with a research grant named for him. He has been the Canyon coordinator of the Jump Rope for Heart since its inception in 1979 to the present. He also has been a "Letters to Neighbors" participant for the association.

Trice served on the Boy Scout advisory board in 1975-1976 and chaired the fund drive in 1979. He is a member of Masonic Lodge #1381 and was a member of the Canyon Lions Club from 1969 to 1986, serving as president in 1980.

He has been a deacon of the Canyon First Baptist Church for 24 years.

His nomination form lists service and accomplishments on Canyon Chamber of Commerce committees, the High Plains Baptist Hospital Board of Directors, the Foundation for Buffalo Athletics at WTSU, the Canyon Planning and Zoning Commission, the Health Textbook Community Advisory Committee for the Canyon Independent District, the Executive Board of the Ex-Students Association, and the Gideons.

Trice was honored as co-recipient of the Distinguished Alumni award for West Texas A&M University for 1989-1990.

Trice also was cited for his contributions to West Texas State University. He organized and played on the university's first golf team in 1950 and was co-captain of the football team in 1949. He holds the record for the most interceptions in a single game — five — plus catching a fumble before it hit the ground.

As dean of men at WTSU, Trice was responsible for placing the first refrigerators in the residence halls, collecting materials and supervising the construction of benches on the campus as sponsor of Alpha Phi Omega, initiating the building of the large barbecue pit at the Cottonwood Grove and initiating procedures to prevent the demolition of Buffalo Courts.

He also started the tug-of-war Mud Pull to help students relax before finals and helped organize the Herdsmen spirit organization in 1977 (the group established the live buffalo mascot). He also served as chairman of the Homecoming Committee from 1969 to 1980.

Upon his retirement from WTSU, students and friends established a scholarship fund called the Weldon Trice Ring Award. The honor is awarded to an outstanding male student living in a resident hall, with the student being awarded a WTSU ring and a $1,000 check.

NCA president: Beef exports to equal imports this year

WASHINGTON — Beef exports are expected to equal beef imports this year, according to the head of a national cattlemen's group.

Bob Drake, president of the National Cattlemen's Association, said that beef exports are expected to equal beef imports on a tonnage basis in 1996. Drake, a Davis, Okla., rancher, and Mark Armentrout of Roswell, Ga., and chairman of the NCA's foreign trade committee, briefed reporters Thursday in Washington on the 1996 outlook for U.S. beef exports.

"We have been a net beef exporter on a value basis since 1991," Armentrout explained. "On a tonnage or volume basis, imports have always exceeded exports. But, projected 1995 figures show that exports and imports were almost equal for the first time, and we expect the lines to cross in 1996. This starts an historical trend that will lead the U.S. to being a net exporter on both volume and value basis."

Armentrout said that from 1980 to 1995, sales of U.S. beef, veal and variety meats to foreign markets soared 650 percent in value to a projected record $3.1 billion. Export volume has increased 460 percent during the same time.

Armentrout also serves as chairman of the USDA Agricultural Trade Advisory Committee for Animal and Animal Products, and as a member of the executive committee of the U.S. Meat Export Federation — the foreign promotion and market development arm of the industry.

The beef industry's long-range plan, Davis said, has set a 1996 export goal of one million metric tons of U.S. beef, up 18 percent from 1995.

"The main reason for our growth is access," Armentrout said. "The industry, working with government negotiators, has been successful in gaining access to important markets such as Japan — our largest market."

"Everyone has a role in our export success," he continued. "Lobbying efforts by the NCA's dues-paying members has helped achieve market access through GATT and NAFTA."

"Through cooperative efforts between government programs, producer promotion dollars and private dollars, the U.S. Meat Export Federation has identified market segments, market needs and has helped lead U.S. sellers to buyers overseas," Armentrout said.

Japan, Canada, Mexico and South Korea are the top foreign markets for U.S. beef. These nations accounted for 92 percent of all U.S. beef export sales in 1994, according to Armentrout. As political, infrastructure and financial issues are resolved, the Russian Federation, China and Europe offer growth and potential for U.S. beef exports, he added.

Low beef consumption numbers in world markets indicate potential growth for U.S. beef exports, Armentrout said.

"By the year 2001, we expect to export 1.5 million metric tons of beef to foreign markets worth $5.8 billion," he said. "On a volume basis, that will be a 780 percent increase and a 1,174 percent increase in value since 1980."

Floods threaten East regions

By The Associated Press

Thousands of people were moved to high ground Saturday at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and hundreds more were urged to get out of communities on the Delaware and Ohio rivers as melting snow and heavy rain caused devastating flooding.

"We are bracing for a very dangerous weekend," said John Comey, spokesman for the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency.

At least 21 deaths were blamed on the combination of cold, blizzard conditions and flooding since midweek from the Plains to the East Coast. Four people were missing.

Hundreds of roads and bridges were closed by high water, along with some water and sewage plants. Barges and pleasure boats broke from their moorings and drifted on the Ohio River and its upper tributaries.

A burst of record warmth that contributed to the rapid snow melt and flooding in the East was squeezed off the continent by arctic temperatures.

At the heart of the frigid air mass, Saturday morning temperatures shocked even northern Minnesota, falling to 57 below zero at Tower and Embarrass. The air was too still for a wind-chill rating.

Fearful of a repeat of deadly 1972 floods, officials in Pennsylvania ordered the relocation of more than 100,000 people from flood-plain areas of Wilkes-Barre and surrounding communities.

Buses, ambulances, trucks and vans were used to carry residents to Red Cross shelters in schools and town halls, said Luzerne County emergency official Al Bardar.

Jazz star Gerry Mulligan dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Baritone saxophonist Gerry Mulligan, a versatile jazz musician who worked with Dave Brubeck, Miles Davis and Duke Ellington, died Saturday morning. He was 68.

Mulligan died at his home in Darien, Conn., from complications from a knee infection, said his wife, Franca Mulligan.

He helped create the cool jazz movement but was also at home in big band, bebop and Dixieland. Mulligan, also a bandleader and composer, recorded with a variety of well-known musicians in different styles.

"It'll be a real loss because he was such an inspiration," said Brubeck, in Cincinnati on Saturday for a concert. "He just had such a grasp of what to do when he was playing."

"There were so many things Jerry still wanted to do musically," the pianist said. "It's a real shame. He won't be around to do them."

Mulligan was born April 6, 1927, in New York and grew up in Philadelphia. He wrote arrangements for Johnny Warfield's radio band as a teenager and wrote for Gene Krupa's band after moving back to New York in 1946. He became part of the cool jazz movement and took part in Davis' recordings in 1949 and 1950.

Mulligan performed through 1995.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, Reed Mulligan, of Florida.

WHO THEN CAN BE SAVED?

"And when the disciples heard it, they were astonished exceedingly, saying, Who then can be saved?" (Matt. 19:25.) Jesus had just told the rich, young ruler what he had to do to have eternal life (Matt. 19:16-22.) Upon hearing what was required of him, the record states: "he went away sorrowful: for he was one that had great possessions." (Matt. 19:22.)

Truly, the young man was a fine, religious person who, evidently, was lacking very little insofar as eternal life was concerned. Obviously, his possessions meant more to him than eternal life because he was not willing to part with them in order to have "treasures in heaven" (Matt. 19:21.) It is always a question, with all of us, as to how much does eternal life mean to us? Are we willing to give up anything or everything in order to have it?

I am sure that the disciples were impressed with this young man for he was indeed a notable person. And the question of "who then can be saved?" is a worthy question. "And Jesus looking upon them said to them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible." (Matt. 19:26.) This was His answer to their question. In regard to the young ruler, eternal life was impossible for him because he had made it impossible. Not that eternal life is impossible with God, because He desires that all men be saved (2 Pet. 3:9; 1 Tim. 2:3-4.) Certainly, God has made salvation possible for all men. This is His plan of redemption is such that any and all can believe and obey it if they desire to do so. But that desire must be with all of one's heart and must come from the heart (Acts 8:37; Rom. 6:17-18.) To be a disciple of our Lord and to enjoy the hope of salvation means that one must be willing to give up anything and everything, if necessary, in order to have eternal life. This the young ruler was not willing to do, thus he had made salvation impossible for himself.

Man has always sought to dictate to God regarding the conditions of salvation. This is the reason we have so many man-made denominations and so many man-made creed-books. But Jesus Christ has all authority in heaven and on earth (Matt. 28:18.) Thus He dictates the conditions of salvation and if we are not willing to meet those conditions we cannot be saved.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The Whitewater plot thickens ...

Forget, for a moment, the special Senate committee and the Resolution Trust Corp. and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and all the other sleuths who have been investigating the Whitewater affair.

The legal issues will sort themselves out in time. But one thing has now become all too clear: Bill and Hillary Clinton and their aides have made a concerted effort to deceive official investigators and the American public with half-truths and outright lies.

To their detractors, that will come as no surprise. From the start, the foes of this administration have kept up a drumbeat about its supposed failings. That relentless partisanship, in fact, gave reason to wonder whether the Whitewater investigations were a search for truth or for political gain.

But for anyone who attempted to give the Clintons some benefit of the doubt, well, the benefits are expiring. It's not clear what the Clintons want to conceal, but it's clear that they have made extraordinary efforts to do so. They have thereby bought the trouble that now engulfs them.

The latest evidence, perhaps the most damning to date, came when the White House released copies of billing records that detail the hours of legal work Hillary Clinton did at Little Rock's Rose law firm on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, whose failure cost the government $47 million. The records show that Mrs. Clinton had several business discussions with Seth Ward, an Arkansas businessman who was involved in a land deal that led to a $4 million loss for Madison.

These records were subpoenaed by investigators in 1994. They had disappeared from the files of the Rose firm, and the Clintons claimed to have no knowledge of them.

Yet, miracle of miracles, copies showed, up in the White House not long after the RTC decided not to bring a civil lawsuit against the Clintons and closed its doors. The records flatly contradict Mrs. Clinton's contention that she had no involvement in the land deal that caused the $4 million loss and little to do at all with Madison Guaranty.

Time and again, the Clintons and their allies have protested their innocence, only to be contradicted by a paper trail or the testimony of others. One more case in point: Hillary Clinton's role in the 1993 decision to fire the White House travel office staff and give the work to an Arkansas firm with Clinton connections.

The Clintons came to the White House with an election victory, but one provided by a skeptical electorate. The president's credibility had been rocked by initial allegations about Whitewater and questions about his character. The first lady's professed faith in her husband had given him a political boost.

Now their credibility is in tatters. Even if the Senate Whitewater committee and the special prosecutor were to close up shop tomorrow, the stain would remain. The Clintons decided that deception and delay were better than forthrightness. They were wrong, deeply wrong.

Berry's World

I THINK WHAT STONE HAS DONE IS AN ABSOLUTE OUTRAGE.

HEY, WHATEVER SHARON STONE WANTS TO DO IS OK WITH ME.

© 1996 by NEA, Inc.

You've really got to hand it to white people, particularly white men. Ask any race expert why blacks, as a group, earn less income than white people. Five will get you 10, the answer will be racism. Given black history and the everlasting "legacy of slavery," racism is a plausible answer.

But racism doesn't affect all blacks the same way. The fact that white people exempt some blacks from the burdens of racism, and do it in ingenious ways, leads me to the conclusion that they have divine powers. "Williams," you say, "we proudly accept your divinity conclusion, but how do you reach it?"

According to one study, as far back as 1969, black males who grew up in homes where there were magazines, books and library cards had incomes identical to whites from similar homes and education. The obvious conclusion is whites discriminate against blacks from homes without magazines, books and library cards. How they do it is a mystery to me. I haven't seen any white people - at least not that many - peering into the windows of black houses to see who had books, magazines and library cards.

Another study points out that in the 1970s, black band-and-wife families outside the South earned as much as white husband-and-wife families outside the South. Then by 1981, black husband-and-wife families, in which both had a college degree, earned slightly more than identical white husband-and-wife families, and that was true nationwide. I can understand how God might know that a black man is married to a woman with a college degree, but it's mind-boggling how white employers would have the same information.

Racism is a two-way street, and blacks are also guilty. You ask: What's the evidence? Race experts teach us that wherever there's disparity there's racism. Look at the announcement and photos of the starting lineup of any professional football or basketball game. It's so much of a tragedy that, cherishing equality of opportunity, I become ecstatic when a photo of a white player comes up on the screen. What else, other than racism, can explain how blacks, who are 13% of the population, are 66% of professional football players and 80% of basketball players? Some people might espouse genetic explanations like white men can't jump or black guys run like monkeys. I don't buy it; it's racism.

You never see Chinese or Japanese football and basketball players, at least not in the starting lineups. Again, a disparity, and again, racism. Initially, one might think of it as an injustice, but it just as soon could be a payback. Everybody knows that blacks have a higher infant mortality rate than whites, and it is caused by racism. It turns out that whites have a higher infant mortality rate than Chinese, Japanese or Filipinos. This can only be chalked up to some mysterious Far Eastern form of racism, particularly when coupled with the fact that Asians receive less prenatal care than whites. Another disparity is seen in the fact that the proportion of Asian American students who score over 700 on the math portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) is double the number of whites.

There are many racially rooted disparities resulting from one form or another of group wonderfulness, but the most bothersome one to me is a sex disparity. Men are 50% of the population, and so are women, but men are struck by lightning six times as often as women. I want to know what whoever is in charge of lightning strikes has against men.

Clinton: Long on empty promises

Charley Reese

When you evaluate the stand-off over the budget in Washington, there are a couple of points to keep in mind.

Republicans campaigned on a promise to balance the federal budget in seven years. They spent 11 months of hard work and came up with a plan that balances the budget in seven years. While I personally think they should balance it much sooner, Republicans did not promise to do that, and they have kept the promise they made.

President Clinton, on the other hand, who once said he would balance the budget in five years, has not once sent a serious plan for balancing the federal budget to Congress for its consideration.

He broke the campaign promise, which is no surprise, but he has also reneged on his more recent promise to come up with his own plan for balancing the budget in seven years, using the numbers of the Congressional Budget Office.

In addition, the Republicans in Congress have done their job. They came up with a plan. They passed the appropriations bills. Clinton's vetoes of these appropriations bills and of the bill to extend the debt limit are just political posturing.

The Constitution, which is the only source of authority for the federal government, squarely places responsibility for the federal budget with Congress. It says nothing in the section on the president about budget matters.

Certainly, Clinton or any other president is entitled to propose his own budget, to voice his opposition to congressional budgets he doesn't like, and, as part of the bargaining process, to veto appropriations bills.

It is wrong, however, for a president to shut down the federal government as a means of coercing Congress. This is truly the case, even though Democrats claim the opposite.

The Republicans in Congress have done their work. As far as they are concerned, the government didn't have to shut down at all. It is Clinton who shut it down and did so for purely political campaign reasons.

What seems proper for Clinton to do at this time is to accept the Republican budget, allow the government to get on with its business and then campaign against the Republican budget.

A president has the duty to enforce the laws Congress passes, whether he agrees with them or not. He does not even have to sign them; he can allow them to become law without his signature.

A president can make clear to the public that he does not approve of certain laws, but that, nevertheless, the people elect the Congress to do the budget work. We must live with it - at least until the next election. He can go on the stump and campaign against the laws he thinks are not good.

That is the way the Constitution intends for the government to work. Harry Truman didn't shut down the government when he had a Republican Congress. He didn't try to dupe people into thinking that Congress had to do what the president wanted.

Truman went out on the stump and campaigned against the Republican Congress on the basis of the laws they had passed and on the basis of the laws they had refused to pass.

I almost hesitate to mention Truman and Clinton in the same column because there is an ocean of intelligence, integrity and respect for the Constitution separating the man from Missouri from the man from Arkansas.

Eventually, the politicians will cut a deal and the government will reopen. It may already have happened by the time you read this, but it is nevertheless instructive to look carefully at what has been going on.

Despite the alleged concern about the federal workers (don't you wish national news media and politicians were as concerned about private workers losing their jobs?), the federal workers are merely receiving an additional paid holiday. They will eventually be paid for the time they didn't work. That is the kind of hardship all of us would welcome.

On this budget matter, the Democrats are wrong. They are just trying to repeal the results of the 1994 election.

The scandal continues to escalate

R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr.

The editorial writers at The Washington Post and The New York Times are dealing very roughly with Hillary Clinton. I can well sympathize with the White House's hurt feelings. Why now? Is it because her protests of being happily incognizant of the firing of seven innocent employees at the White House's Travel Office is now refuted by memos from White House aides? Since the summer of 1993, government reports and occasional journalistic accounts have put her at the center of a White House scheme to fill the Travel Office with cronies. Are the editorialists up in arms because only now has the White House come forward with Rose Law Firm billing records that indicate Clinton's deep involvement in the dubious deals of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan? Congressional investigators and certain journalists of independent mind have long asserted that she was lying about the documents and was deeply involved in Arkansas's Decade of Greed.

For three years, the Clintons have been involved in the most massive misuses of government since the Nixon years, possibly more massive. Now, the "mainstream" press is catching on. Just the other day, on Page One of the Wall Street Journal, Ellen Joan Pollack, who pooh-poohed Whitewater last February, saw the light. She now accuses the White House "and especially first lady Hillary Clinton" of activity that "has all the earmarks of a cover-up." Well, welcome to Whitewaters second act, colleagues, but throughout the two years of the first act, the evidence of "cover-up" and worse has been accumulating both here and down there in Little Rock. Though Pollack is right to raise the specter of a White House cover-up, she is woefully out of touch to say, as she does at the beginning of her piece, that there is not "any evidence so far of an underlying crime." Whether or not the Washington press corps recognizes it, federal prosecutors and congressional investigators recognize evidence of many crimes.

In the two years that I have been following the Clintons' cover-up, investigators have shown me signs of bank fraud and thrift fraud. At the end of this column, I shall mention a new case of bank fraud by Hillary Clinton. There is also evidence that the Clintons were active partners in a classic savings-and-loan looting. They were also tied up with a corrupt finance network of international dimension, extending to the BCCI. For years, they have been in the habit of using government regulators for their own purposes - for instance, former State Securities Commissioner Beverly Bassett Schaffer. They have also involved themselves in sophisticated bribe taking, as Mrs. Clinton's Miracle of the Cattle Futures suggests.

The Clintons, over the past two years, have quite properly been accused of repeated conflicts of interest, blatant deceptions, perjury, obstruction of justice, conspiracy to obstruct justice and witness tampering. As recent revelations about Clinton's dealings with Castle Grande reveal, she can stand accused of real estate fraud as well as bank fraud in that deal alone. As the plight of former Travel Office head Billy Dale makes clear, the Clintons are adept at misusing government power to persecute other public (and even private) citizens who get in their way.

Now, in light of all the above allegations over the past two years, here is the frequency of Whitewater references by our prominent liberal political columnists as revealed by a Nexis search. References to the term Whitewater? The New York Times: Bob Herbert 2, Anthony Lewis 5, Anna Quindlen 6 and Frank Rich 13. The Washington Post: David Broder 6, Richard Cohen 9, Meg Greenfield 4, Michael Kinsley 4 and Mary McGrory - brace yourself - 48. Travelgate? The New York Times: Herbert 0, Lewis 1, Quindlen 0 and Rich 2. The Washington Post: Broder 3, Cohen 2, Greenfield 2, Kinsley 1 (blaming Fosters death on the Wall Street Journal) and McGrory 6. Vince Foster? The New York Times: Herbert 1, Lewis 5, Quindlen 4 and Rich 7. The Washington Post: Broder 1, Cohen 4, Greenfield 2, Kinsley 1 and McGrory 17. The vast majority of these infrequent references naturally mouthed the White House line. As for conservative columnists, they rarely bought the White House line. They were, however, even more reluctant to take up Whitewater and related matters.

Only columnists Wes Pruden and Bill Safire have sustained a critical interest in what goes by the catch-all phrase "Whitewater." And Safire's reward has come from heaven - a White House threat of a punch in the nose. Their skepticism will be redeemed. Whitewater will not go away. Our criminal justice system will see to that. Even now, it is looking into another of Hillary Clinton's misdeeds.

In the March issue of The American Spectator, which will be on the stands in a few days, James Ring Adams and I outline how "Hillary, in a very unusual lapse, let her name be used to secure a large loan for the McDougals. Since they promptly misapplied the money for, among other things, an illegal campaign contribution for Bill and a bailout of the overdrawn Whitewater checking account, this slip, investigators believe, made her vulnerable to a charge of bank fraud." What is more, the Clintons and their friends, in attempting to conceal this bank fraud, have committed crimes that move the statute of limitations on related crimes right up to the present. As seasoned investigators have informed Adams and me, now, "Hillary isn't the only one at risk. The conspiracy (to obstruct justice) would encompass her personal staff, the White House counsel's office and ultimately President Clinton himself."

Morgans move to Amarillo

To the editor:

We did it! We moved from our comfortable, home WE BUILT about 35 years ago. We are now located in a comfortable retirement apartment in Amarillo. It was not what we wanted to do, it became a necessary phase of our living. At this location we are served three meals a day in delightful surroundings; our peers, like ourselves, had amassed a countless store of memories. Each bit of trivia brought our attention to memories that had long been dormant in the recesses of our minds. Each was important then and each became important as we reflected on this trivia. This is not 1938 Evergreen, nor will it ever be. It is now not necessary to plan and prepare our meals; if a light bulb burns out, someone replaces it; we do not need to worry about caring for the lawn, it is someone else who now pays the utility bills, etc.

Memories are the building blocks in developing life's psyche. A daughter and son growing from helpless infants to well-adjusted strong adults were the vehicle for most of those memories. Now they have their own children that will accumulate a store of memories of their own as their children mature and have their own dreams and goals.

Upon reflecting on our 57 years of marriage, Mattie Wave and I, it has not always been a serendipity period. During this period of maturing together, there had to be sufficient time to say, "I'm sorry!", forgiveness and much love and understanding. God created us each with our own idiosyncrasies and gave us a mind to be able to cope with these differences in others.

We were in Pampa 43 years. Mattie and I saw many changes. We are thankful we had the opportunity to participate in many of the activities aimed at making Pampa a better place to live. Pampa is a comfortable place to live because of the caring people, companies and industries. I hope Pampa will continue to grow in spirit, if not in size. The danger is in becoming stagnant and not recognizing innovations that can help the community.

Thanks for lighting up city

To the editor:

We, the "Celebration of Lights" organization, want to thank everyone, individuals, family, residential and commercial, who entered into the 1995 Christmas spirit with us and helped light up Pampa. It was incredible to drive around town and the surrounding areas to see all the beautiful lights. It was your enthusiasm that made the holiday season awesome and a great place to visit. We appreciate your time and your talent. Thank you to all of those who decorated, to those who supported us financially and with your volunteer time, to those who supplied materials, and to TDCJ who gave us so much volunteer labor. We could have never made it without you!

As we begin to work on the 1996 season, think about your organization. Could you adopt an area to decorate and light? We will be concentrating on more park areas and a lot more lighting. How about adopting a tree? Please contact us for more information.

If you were a winner in the Commercial, Residential or Children's Choice Award, please bring your yard sign back to M.K. Brown, Chaney's or Hall's; or give us a call, and we will come pick it up (669-5790; 669-3418; 669-9813).

Thank you from "where the Panhandle of Texas shines!"

They appreciate D.A.R.E.

To the editor:

We would like to bring recognition to an excellent Pampa police officer, Rob Goodin. We and our fifth grade students at Austin Elementary School had the privilege of being instructed by Officer Goodin in a twelve-week D.A.R.E. (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) course.

D.A.R.E. is an informative, down-to-earth, and effective way of teaching students about illicit drugs, and Officer Goodin is a superior instructor. Our students looked so forward to days when he would be at school.

We believe the students who have successfully completed this course will be drug-free, confident teenagers. We have Rob Goodin to thank for this.

Please leave flowers alone

To the editor:

My husband has been buried in Fairview Cemetery for 19 years. Last Memorial Day, we put an expensive wreath on a stainless steel saddle on top of the stone. Someone took these flowers and saddle a few weeks later.

This past Christmas, we put another expensive wreath on top, and two weeks later someone took that one.

I think the people that can do this are sick and uncaring. Please leave our flowers alone.

Space shuttle returns safely

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — There's nothing like a good night's sleep — and some good sake — after a long and tiring, but successful space shuttle mission. Japanese astronaut Koichi Wakata was looking forward to both following Endeavour's early-morning landing Saturday. "You can take tomorrow off," commander Brian Duffy assured him.

The six astronauts were elated by their triumphs: capturing a Japanese satellite that had been in orbit for nearly one year, releasing and retrieving a U.S. science satellite and performing two spacewalks to help international space station designers.

"We feel like we got 1996 off to a great start," Duffy said. "We also feel that we took another step in the international cooperation in space exploration."

The No. 1 objective of Endeavour's nine-day, 3.7 million-mile voyage was snaring the Japanese satellite. The spacecraft was launched from Japan last March with an infrared telescope, crystal-growth furnaces, female news and new eggs. (The news died as planned after 1 1/2 months in orbit.)

Before Wakata could snare the satellite with the shuttle robot arm last weekend, ground controllers had to sever its two folded solar panels, which would not latch into place for the trip home.

Each day brought a new challenge, and as each objective was accomplished, Duffy said, "we felt a lot of satisfaction and we would revel in it a little bit among ourselves, saying, 'We did it and we did it right.' And then we would look forward to the next hurdle. We could never get too comfortable with what we were doing."

The final hurdle was the 2:42 a.m. touchdown on a floodlit runway at Kennedy Space Center. It was the eighth time in 74 missions that NASA shuttles landed in the dark.

Duffy, an Air Force colonel, said it turned out to be just as he had expected, despite some slight turbulence.

"I would like to celebrate the successful mission in the near future with all the crew members over Japanese sake," Wakata told reporters six hours after touchdown.

Family and friends are invited to a reception honoring the 90th birthday of Minnie Cole today from 2-4 p.m. in the First Assembly of God annex, 500 S. Cuyler. Cole was born in Ajax, Texas, and moved in 1929 to Pampa, where she served as a postal clerk for many years.

Border Patrol agent killed in gun battle

EAGLE PASS (AP) — A senior Border Patrol agent has been killed during a gun battle with men he suspected of smuggling marijuana across the Mexican border, the agency said Saturday.

Jefferson Barr was fatally wounded about 10:30 p.m. Friday as he and another agent confronted four men in an isolated riverfront area in Eagle Pass.

Gunshots broke out when Barr and fellow agent Ned Thomas challenged the men not far from an area called "el puente negro" — the black bridge, a railroad crossing. One bullet hit Barr in the collar bone and ricocheted downward, penetrating several vital organs, officials said. Thomas administered CPR on the spot, but Barr was pronounced dead on arrival at Maverick County Hospital about 35 minutes later.

Barr began his career with the Border Patrol exactly eight years earlier in Eagle Pass. He is survived by his wife, Leigh Ann; a daughter, Tiffany Dale, 9; and a son, Cody Garrett, 5.

Entertainer George Burns marks his 100th birthday

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — After years of poking fun at his age in the spotlight, George Burns spent his 100th birthday Saturday at home with a private audience — his family.

No celebration was planned, said the comedian's manager, Irving Fein. "George is the same as he was a week ago. He is weak, and he's not eating much. He'll just take it easy today."

In Las Vegas, Caesars Palace planned to display an hourlong "Happy Birthday" message on its 70-foot tall electronic marquee to its longtime headliner. Burns had to cancel sold-out birthday performances at Caesars because of frail health.

On cable, the American Movie Classics channel showed comedy shorts of Burns and his late wife, Gracie Allen. Burns' movie, Oh, God! was shown on superstation WGN.

Burns, who uses a wheelchair to get around, suffered injuries from a bathtub fall last year and caught the flu after attending Frank Sinatra's Christmas party.

Texas holds No. 2 spot in foodservice market

AUSTIN — Texas now holds the number two spot as the largest foodservice market in the United States with projected sales of $19.4 billion in 1996, according to the Texas Restaurant Association.

With this 6.7 percent increase from 1995 levels, Texas surpasses Florida in sales and trails only behind California, which tops the list with expected sales of $24 billion.

In 1996, as Texas' employment continues to rise by 2.3 percent and personal disposable income increases 3.3 percent, Texas claims its place in the top 10 of state populations with more disposable income and remains in fifth place nationally as an economically growing state.

The Texas Restaurant Association predicts that 1996 will continue to bring growth and prosperity to Texas foodservice establishments in its January 1996 Industry Forecast issue of Food & Service.

Although Houston continues to hold the title as the largest foodservice market in the state with projected sales of $3.9 billion, Dallas closely follows with expected sales of more than $3.6 billion.

San Antonio and Fort Worth-Arlington rank number three and four with estimated sales of $2.1 billion and $1.8 billion, respectively. San Antonio and Austin will enjoy the largest sales increases in 1996, both with predicted growth rates of more than 13 percent above 1995 totals.

Border markets are slowly but surely beginning to recover from the devaluation of the peso indicated by small growth rate increases in El Paso and Laredo. The McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg market continues to exceed the sales performance of other border cities with a 6.8 percent increase.

Nationwide foodservice industry sales will reach a record-breaking $312.9 billion, a 2.4 percent rise over 1995, according to the National Restaurant Association. Sales in both the fast-food restaurants, rising by 4.2 percent, and full-service segments, increasing by 2 percent, should top $100 billion.

With the ever-increasing number of new foodservice locations, market competition will remain fierce to win the 44 percent of consumers' food dollars that are spent away from home.

Menu prices will reflect this competition by growing a modest 2.5 percent — the same as predicted for 1995. Because consumers are extremely price sensitive due to stagnant wage growth, NRA predicts that operators will continue to offer the best value possible to the customer.

The 1993-96 time frame reflects one of the strongest continuous growth periods for the foodservice industry since the mid to late 1980s. Many Texas foodservice markets can expect stronger sales than those estimated by TRA if personal income gains exceed expectations.

Regardless, Texas will continue to lead the west south central region in terms of growth. The region itself, with a rising growth rate of 6.2 percent, is experiencing growth second only to the mountain region.

It is the goal of the Texas Restaurant Association, which represents 6,300 restaurant owners, managers and personnel in the foodservice industry, to be the advocate and indispensable resource for the foodservice industry in Texas.

Offshore Technology Conference scheduled in Houston

RICHARDSON — The Former Soviet Union's (FSU) offshore petroleum resources and their role in future world markets, and the impact of the $4.2 billion Heidrun field development in the Norwegian Sea are among topics to be discussed by experts at the 28th annual Offshore Technology Conference scheduled May 6-9 in Houston.

Over 33,000 engineers, scientists and managers from more than 80 countries are expected to attend OTC '96 at the Astrodome U.S.A. Complex. Also available will be the latest technologies, equipment and services from the 1,300-plus exhibiting companies.

At the OTC general session, set for 2 p.m. May 7, executives will discuss the offshore and onshore petroleum picture in former Soviet republics with emphasis on exploration and production issues.

"The Former Soviet Union/Commonwealth of Independent States (FSU/CIS) hold vast developed and undeveloped petroleum resources, particularly offshore," said incoming OTC Chairman Roger L. Abel, a Conoco vice president.

"The future impact those resources will make on the world energy picture is an underlying issue that is seldom discussed," Abel continued. "That's why a high profile has been identified for the topic at this year's OTC."

Joining Abel on the general session panel will be T. Don Stacy, chief executive officer for Amoco Eurasia Petroleum Co., and Charles (Chip) McPherson, the World Bank's principal energy economist for Europe/Central Asia.

"The combined experience of our panel in FSU/CIS operations is extensive," said Abel. "We all have been actively involved in negotiating for participation in E&P activities in a number of the republics. What's more, we share similar experiences during the last three or four years dealing with the complex political and technical challenges that exist as you move toward forging international co-development agreements with FSU/CIS companies."

Analysts report that becoming involved in that area of the world is crucial to the international petroleum industry, since combined

FSU/CIS oil and gas reserves, when developed fully, will dwarf those elsewhere around the world, including the Middle East.

In addition to the general session discussion of operations in the area, Stacy will discuss his company's activities in various ongoing FSU/CIS projects at a luncheon scheduled for 12:15 p.m. May 6 at the Sheraton Astrodome Hotel.

Also receiving emphasis this year will be Conoco Norway Inc.'s development with Neste Petroleum A/S of the Heidrun field, located some 70 miles south of the Arctic Circle. Conoco will receive the OTC Distinguished Achievement Award for companies, organizations and institutions at the OTC awards luncheon May 7.

GMC Gas Corp. purchases gathering assets from ANR

HOUSTON — GPM Gas Corp. has signed a purchase and sale agreement to acquire gas gathering assets primarily located in northwest Oklahoma from ANR Pipeline Company.

Completion of the transaction is anticipated in 1996, following governmental and regulatory approvals.

The system GPM is to acquire from ANR gathers approximately 200 million cubic feet per day from about 1,000 active meter stations. The purchase would add 1,570 miles of gathering pipelines and 14 compressor stations to GPM's gathering systems. The transaction does not include any processing facilities.

"We're excited about acquiring these systems which will complement our current operations in Oklahoma," said Don Walleette, GPM's Oklahoma region vice president. "We're looking forward to 'partnering' with the producers in these areas by offering GPM's full range of gathering, processing and marketing services," he said.

GPM Gas Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Phillips Gas Company, is headquartered in Houston. GPM operates 18 gas processing facilities in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico that process about 1.65 billion cubic feet of gas per day. GPM and its related affiliates operate about 25,000 miles of both high- and low-pressure gas gathering systems.

GPM markets approximately one billion cubic feet of residue gas per day to local distribution companies, industrial customers and other end users in the major gas markets across the United States.

Minding your own Business

By Don Taylor

Sucessful partners

Ben had a good idea. When he took his idea to his employees, they weren't interested. "Business is good," they said. "We don't want to invest in an untested idea."

However, the idea kept nagging Ben. He watched industry trends and knew the time was right. Ben resigned and worked his idea into a business plan. Then one evening at a church dinner he casually mentioned his idea to a recently retired executive.

Immediately the executive expressed interest. Was Ben looking for partners? Did Ben need capital? Ben said yes, and they met the next night to discuss the idea. The meeting went well and the executive suggested bringing in a third partner. Ben wasn't sure at first, but finally agreed because he needed additional capital.

Each partner received one-third ownership. Ben got his third for the idea and industry knowledge. The other partners supplied capital and management expertise for their shares.

The company started quickly and early production was strong. Led by Ben's knowledge of the industry and his marketing ability, the company established solid accounts quickly and profits came early.

Then unexpectedly one morning early in the second year, Ben's partners fired him from his own company. The partners controlled two-thirds of the stock and they wanted Ben out. Ben kept his stock and demanded his third of the profit. The partners immediately raised their salaries and the leftover profit was meager.

Ben hired an attorney, but was told the partners were within their legal rights. Ben was out and had no legal recourse.

Common problems

Situations like Ben's happen every day. I've watched more than a dozen partnerships come apart, and it isn't a pretty sight. It is sad to see a business deal turn friends into bitter enemies.

Common causes of these breakups include lack of planning, unclear objectives, lack of capital and no written agreements. However, the most common reason is simply that the partners themselves are not compatible.

You should select your partners for their skills, experience and compatibility factors. Good partners should have similar work ethics, ambition, motivation and personality attributes.

Successful partner attributes

- Here are some attributes that partners should possess.
- Honesty and integrity. All successful relationships are based on trust. No partnerships can last long-term if one partner is dishonest.
  - Willingness to work hard. Though no two people work alike, each partner must be committed to the cause. You should define job responsibilities before you begin.
  - Competence and skills. Each partner must bring useful expertise to the business. Money can start a business, but ability keeps it going.
  - A good team player. A partnership, regardless of the number of partners, is a team sport. Partners must work independently when necessary, together when beneficial.
  - Good people skills. Good partners get along well with all types of people. They treat others with respect and are enjoyable to be around.
  - Can control their emotions. All partnerships will have periods of stress and strife. Good partners control their anger, keep cool under pressure and don't overreact.
  - Communication skills. Everyone profits by improving listening, speaking and thinking skills. Listening with understanding is the first step in solving problems.
  - Works toward "win-win" solutions. A good partner will see both sides of every situation. They are adept at proposing solutions where everyone comes out ahead.
  - Ability to organize and prioritize. Good partners stay focused on accomplishing the most important tasks. When you organize and prioritize your efforts, everyone gets more done.
  - Willing to admit errors. "I was wrong," may be one of the least used phrases in partnerships. However, it is a critical element in healing disagreements and going forward toward your common goals.

Clinton joins in mourning death of Texas congresswoman

HOUSTON (AP) — For President Clinton, former Texas Gov. Ann Richards and others who came Saturday to mourn the death of Barbara Jordan, it was "the voice" that first came to mind.

"The truth is, I counted on Barbara to preach at my funeral," joked a tearful Richards, whose voice cracked with emotion before 1,500 mourners at former Rep. Jordan's funeral service at Good Hope Missionary Baptist Church. "She had a way of making everything sound good."

But the recollections of the resonant baritone with the nitroglycerine punch easily gave way to the memories of the unflinching moral compass that guided Jordan out of Houston's poor Fifth Ward and onto Capital Hill.

"Barbara Jordan was a monument to the three great strands that run constantly through the fabric of American history," Clinton said. "Our love of liberty, our belief in progress, our search for common ground."

The 59-year-old Jordan died Wednesday, from pneumonia and other complications of leukemia. She had also been suffering from multiple sclerosis for several years.

Jordan, who became the first black woman elected to the Texas Senate in 1966, became the first black woman from the South to be elected to the U.S. House in 1972. She served three terms and then took a teaching job at the LBJ School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas in Austin.

Clinton recalled her 1976 speech to the Democratic National Convention, in which Jordan noted that when the Constitution was originally written, the words "We the People" did not apply to herself and other black Americans, most of whom were slaves.

"Barbara, 'We the People' will miss you," he said.

Clinton thanked Jordan and her legacy for having "stirred our national conscience."

Outside the church, hundreds stood in a light drizzle, huddling beneath umbrellas, trying to stay close to outdoor speakers transmitting the funeral service.

A "Who's Who" of Texas and national Democrats packed the church, of which Jordan was a member and had last attended on Christmas Eve.

Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, Education Secretary Richard Riley, Attorney General Janet Reno, and a number of congressmen, including Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, heir to Jordan's 18th Congressional District, were in attendance.

Former Texas Gov. Mark White and former U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen also came to the funeral.

Mourners filed past the open casket, which showed Jordan in a black suit and wearing the 1994 Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian decoration.

BORGER — Canyon defeated Borger Friday night 58 to 45 and came one step closer to evening up their record in district play.

Canyon led throughout the entire game, although Borger kept it close most of the time. Canyon's lead after the first was only 3 points, but they were able to expand on their lead to go ahead by 7 at half-time, 34 to 27. Canyon kept expanding their lead throughout the second half, stopping Borger's efforts to try and pull off an upset.

High scorers for Canyon were Taylor Robinson with 19, and Keith Sparling with 13. Borger's leading scorer was Aaron Perry with 15.

With the win, Canyon's district record is 2-3, with their overall record at 10-11, almost even. Borger remains without a win in district, 0-5, with their overall record at 8-18.

Canyon's J.V. boys defeated Borger's J.V. by ten points, 55 to 45.

The Canyon girls varsity also won, defeating the Borger girls 69 to 45. Canyon led throughout the entire game, leaving Borger struggling to catch up. Sims and Valdez were the high scorers for Canyon, with 17 and 13, respectively. Borger's high scorer was Powell, with 18. Borger's girls record falls to 13-6, 2-5 in district play, while Canyon's record stands at an undefeated 22-0, with a 7-0 record in district play.

HEREFORD — Hereford handed Pampa a 67-40 setback Friday night in District 1-4A girls' action.

Hereford is now 5-2 in district play and 19-3 for the season. Pampa is 1-6 in district and 12-11 overall.

Misti Davis had 17 points while Brittney Binder and Julie Lampley had 11 points each to lead Hereford in scoring.

Jennifer Jones topped Pampa in scoring with 16 points while Jane Brown and Kristi Carpenter added 6 points each.

Also scoring for Pampa were Tina Dwight with 4 points, Chandra Nachtigall 3, Candice Nachtigall 3, and Erin Alexander 1.

The Lady Harvesters host West Texas High in a non-district game at 6 Tuesday night.

MCLEAN — McLean rallied to defeat Higgins, 57-54, in a non-district boys' basketball game Friday night.

The Tigers trailed by 9 points (45-36) going into the final quarter.

Jeremy Crutcher topped McLean in scoring with 18 points, followed by Ben Reeser and Blake Crockett with 11 points each.

Higgins won over McLean, 45-39 in the girls' contest.

Heather Hess had 21 points to pace McLean while Shaley Stalls added 15.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Second-ranked Kentucky sank a season-high 15-pointers, led by Tony Delk's school-record nine, to beat Texas Christian 124-80 Saturday night and roll to its 14th straight victory.

Delk scored 27 points, all coming from 3-point range, while Antoine Walker scored 16 and Wayne Turner, Derek Anderson and Walter McCarty 13 apiece. Kentucky (15-1) scored more than 100 for the fourth time this season.

Texas Christian (9-9), in its most one-sided loss of the season, was led by Damion Walker and Juan Bragg with 18 points each.

Kentucky picked up where it left off in Tuesday's 129-97 demolition of LSU. The Wildcats shot 57 percent (38-of-67) from the field, including a torrid 56 percent (15-of-27) from beyond the 3-point arc.

Five minutes into the game, Kentucky was sitting atop a 19-4 lead behind Delk's two 3-pointers. The Wildcats forced Texas Christian to hurry shots in building a 63-33 halftime advantage, and the outcome was never in doubt.

Jones and Rooney: A study in contrasts

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — NFL owners had just finished a meeting last October, with Art Modell explaining why he wanted to move the Browns from Cleveland to Baltimore. As they emerged from behind closed doors, spotlights flicked on and minicams whirred.

Jerry Jones, wearing a $2,000 suit, headed straight for the bright lights. The pack of reporters ignored a man inconspicuous in blue blazer and gray slacks — Dan Rooney, perhaps the NFL's most powerful owner.

Rooney's Steelers play Jones' Cowboys in the Super Bowl next Sunday. Jones will be the owner fans recognize. Rooney will be the one the league roots for.

When Paul Tagliabue really wants a problem resolved, he calls on Dan Rooney. One way or another, something happens.

Tagliabue never calls on Jerry Jones, at least not lately.

Open the Dallas media guide and just past the index is a full page picture of Jones, his right fist punching the air. The next four pages are about: Jerry Jones, Jerry Jones, Jerry Jones and Jerry Jones.

Jones probably has more commercials than any NFL player other than his own $35 million man, Deion Sanders.

Who's better known, Sanders or Jones? Emmitt Smith or Jones? Troy Aikman or Jones? Michael Irvin or Jones?

Open the Pittsburgh media guide and there is a team directory. At the top, it says "Daniel M. Rooney, president." It's followed by a "History of the Steelers," that covers three full pages in small print. Only in the last six paragraphs is Daniel M. Rooney mentioned again.

"That's very intentional," said Pat Harlon, the New York Giants' public relations director and a former member of the Steelers' PR staff. Rooney is not about image.

What makes Dan Rooney powerful is his ability to find a middle ground.

"A prince," said Carmen Policy of the 49ers, who isn't always on the same side of every issue. "Is there anyone who's done more for the league?"

"I give Dan all the credit for finally getting us labor peace," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association. "When other people are finding the most extreme positions, he can find a way to compromise."

The positions in which Jones, one-time Arkansas oil wildcatter, most often finds himself are those that:

a. Make money for Jerry Jones.
b. Make money for the Cowboys.

c. Publicize Jerry Jones.
He does all very well and his team wins. It's just that in doing it, he's alienated most of his peers and many fans, even in Dallas.

Even Jones recognizes that. Asked before the NFC title game how many of the 29 other owners would be rooting for the Cowboys against the Packers, he replied, "6

1/2." Later, he acknowledged that might be an exaggeration.

It's not always Rooney in the white hat, Jones in the black. What defines them more accurately is what defines the old and new NFL.

Rooney is the son of Art Rooney Sr., who founded the Steelers in 1933 with, as legend has it, the winnings of a poker game. By the time he died in 1988 at age 87, "The Chief," as the senior Rooney was known, was the NFL's most venerated elder.

Jones bought the Cowboys in 1989 for $185 million, immediately fired Tom Landry, their only coach, and spent the next four years rebuilding his team and his image. He was successful with the team. There are still questions about the image.

That's because he courts controversy. Southwesterners say that goes with his background. Oil wildcating, in which Jones made his fortune, is the most cutthroat of businesses.

His best-known blowup was with Jimmy Johnson, his old Arkansas teammate whom he hired to replace Landry and whom he fired after two Super Bowl victories in a clash of monumental egos.

This season, he alienated the owners when he took them on over revenue sharing and marketing, fostering a $300 million lawsuit against him by the league and his counter suit for $750 million.

The style antagonized people as much as the substance. Jones paraded onto the field at Giants Stadium during the opening Monday night game to announce a deal with Nike, upstaging Wellington Mara, the NFL's patriarch, during a ceremony to retire the number of former Giants quarterback Phil Simms.

Yet Jones isn't written off by his peers, even those with whom he often has differences.

"I know there's a perception that Jerry and I are bitter enemies," said Policy, whose 49ers have been battling Jones' Cowboys for NFL dominance and players like Sanders for five seasons. "But you have to give him credit for a lot of things. He has brought a new energy level to the league and a lot of new ideas."

Other owners suggest that Jones' brashness and publicity-seeking prevent him from less-costly ways of implementing his ideas.

Robert Kraft of New England and Jeff Lurie of Philadelphia, for example, agree with some of his marketing ideas. But they suggest that had he stayed within the league instead of going public with Nike, Pepsi-Cola and American Express deals that challenged NFL Properties, his ideas could have been implemented.

Rooney, on the other hand, operates quietly, one reason he's so often heeded. Some of the ties are cemented in marriage — his niece is married to one of Mara's sons, a union of two of the league's bedrock families.

But he's as passionate about his team as Jones. Last Sunday, recovering from gall bladder surgery, he was walking around Three Rivers Stadium in sweat pants to cheer them on.

HEREFORD — Trying to play catch-up against the Pampa Harvesters just doesn't work out most of the time.

Hereford found that out the hard way as Pampa rolled to a 72-63 win Friday night in a District 1-4A game to determine sole possession of first place.

The Harvesters shot lights out from both the floor and foul line to pick up their 20th win of the season against just three setbacks. More importantly, the Harvesters pushed their district record to 6-0. Hereford is 4-1 in district play and 15-8 overall.

"They really concentrated on trying to play well and it showed up in their shooting percentage," said Pampa head coach Robert Hale. "I thought their defense and shot selection was very good."

The Harvesters, currently ranked No. 6 in the Class 4A Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll, is going for their eighth straight district title. They host Childress in a non-district game at 7:30 Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Led by Rayford Young's 28 points, the Harvesters hit 63.4 percent (26 of 41) from the floor and 15 of 17 (88.2) from the foul line.

"I thought our players made each other look good," said Hale. "They did the little things on defense, like helping each other, and on offense they were getting the ball to the open man. I really liked their spirit."

Pampa jumped out to an early lead and never surrendered it. August Larson's 3-point goal gave Pampa a 16-6 advantage with less than two minutes remaining in the first quarter. By halftime, the Harvesters were up by 13 points (36-23) and going into the fourth quarter, Pampa had a 12-point lead.

Hereford tried to make a run in the final period and were able to cut the margin to 8 points three times, but the Harvesters had the clock on their side. In Hereford's last gasp, Issac Walker cut the Pampa lead to eight (66-58), but less than two minutes remained in the game. Two free throws by J.J. Mathis, followed by a basket and two foul shots by Jason Weatherbee gave Pampa a commanding 14-point lead with just 14 seconds to go.

Coy Laury added 12 points and Larson 11 for the Harvesters, who had eight players make the scoring column. Devin Lemons added 8 points and 6 rebounds and helped hold Hereford's leading scorer Michael High to 9 points.

Pampa's defense, sparked by J.J. Mathis' 7 steals, forced Hereford into 16 turnovers.

Jonathan Keenan led Hereford in scoring with 15 points and Walker chipped in 14.

Etbauers dominate saddle bronc riding at Sandhills Stock Show and Rodeo

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — To spectators at the $138,856 Sandhills Stock Show and Rodeo in Odessa, it might seem obvious that Robert and Dan Etbauer and Craig Latham practice together.

The Etbauers of Goodwell, Okla., and their "adopted brother" Latham of Texhoma, Texas, placed in the saddle bronc riding Dec. 29-Jan. 6, at the Odessa rodeo.

Robert finished first with 83 points, Dan finished second with 80 points and Craig Latham tied with three-time world champion Dan Mortensen for fourth place with his 78-point ride. Bret Franks, also of Goodwell, Okla., finished third.

"It was a good rodeo. It had a lot of contestants and a lot of spectators. We're just happy to go get on some good horses and win a little money," said Robert, a two-time world champion who won the average at the 1995 National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas. He finished the season ranked fifth in the Crown Royal world saddle bronc riding standings.

"Anywhere where they have one (a rodeo) and we can win some money and get on some good horses, we'll try and be there," he said.

Robert earned $2,188 for his performance aboard Harry Void Rodeo Co.'s Blue Mist.

"I've never been on her before," Robert said. "She just turned out of there and jumped and kicked and made a nice circle to the left. She was real good to ride, takes some rein. If you get on her, it's pretty much up to you."

Robert said he still is struggling with a knee injury he suffered in 1992.

"It's a slow progression to build it back up," he said, adding that weight lifting has really helped.

"I've got to do it," he said. "I don't have a choice if I want to keep riding broncs."

Other winners of the Sandhills Stock Show and Rodeo in Odessa, were James Boudreaux (Hackberry, La.), bareback riding, 79 points on Harry Void Rodeo Co.'s Casanova, $1,979; Owen Washburn (Lordsburg, N.M.), bull riding, 86 points on Harry Void Rodeo Co.'s No. 100; Jason Senior (Arcola, Texas), calf roping, 9.0 seconds, $2,539; Frank Davis, (Sonora, Texas), steer wrestling, 9.5 seconds in two rounds; Brady Wren (Kerrville, Texas)/Tom Wren (Kerrville, Texas), team roping, 13.9 seconds in two rounds, $1,819 each; Mandy Terry (Colorado City, Texas), barrel racing, 14.97 seconds, $2,382; and Jason Evans (Huntsville, Texas), steer roping, 52.0 seconds in four rounds, $3,525.

Dan Etbauer also won the saddle bronc riding at the Wrangler Prorodeo Classic, Jan. 6-8 in Wichita, Kan., earning $1,132. In Wichita, Latham tied for third with Tom Reeves of Stephenville, with each earning $425. Latham also picked up a check at the Arizona Stock Show and Rodeo, Jan. 6-7 in Phoenix, tying for fourth place and earning $409 for his 76-point ride.

Stewart gains share of Hope Classic lead

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Payne Stewart, trying to regain the form that brought him a PGA Championship, U.S. Open and seven other tour victories, shot a 9-under-par 63 Saturday to move into a share of the lead in the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

With most of the players making a mockery of par on the desert courses used for the tournament, Stewart moved to 18-under, tying him at the top of a crowded leaderboard at 270 with Jeff Maggett, John Huston and Mark Brooks.

Maggert shot a 64, Huston had a 65 and Brooks, a first-round co-leader who has stayed in the thick of things, had a 67.

Stewart, Huston and Brooks all played Indian Ridge Country Club, which also will be the site of Sunday's final round. Maggett played at Tamarisk Country Club.

Stewart, who started tinkering with his game after winning the U.S. Open in 1993, has returned to his old form — including a loop in his backswing.

After going winless in 1994, he captured one title last year, the Houston Open.

Twelve players will go into the last day of the five-day, 90-hole Hope Classic bunched within three shots of each other at the top. Another six golfers are within five strokes of the lead.

Fred Couples, who shot a 65 Saturday at Bermuda Dunes, and Nolan Henke, who had a 69 at Indian Ridge, were one shot back of the leading quartet.

At 16 under were third-round leader Brad Bryant, with a 71 on the fourth day; second-round leader Paul Goydos, with a 69; and Jesper Parnevik, with a 67.

In a threesome another shot behind was Tom Kite, who set a 90-hole tour record in the 1993 Hope with a 35-under-par. Fulton Allem and Jim Furyk were tied with Kite at 15-under after four rounds this time.

Four courses are used for the Hope, which features pro-am play the first four days. All the golfers play one day at each of the courses, then the field is cut for the final day at the designated host club, Indian Ridge this year.

Claude turns back Groom

CLAUDE — Groom was defeated by Claude in a very topsy-turvy game Friday night, 67 to 58.

Groom led in at the end of the first quarter by 2 points, but Claude fought back in the second quarter and gained a one point lead going into halftime, 30 to 29. In the third quarter Claude continued to dominate Groom's Tigers, allowing Groom to score only 8 points while Claude racked up 20, going into the fourth quarter with a 13 point lead. But Groom tried to make a comeback in the fourth and scored 21 points, but Claude responded to Grooms drive by scoring 17 themselves in the fourth quarter and winding up with a 9 point victory.

The games high scorers were Stanley Homer for Groom, with 21 points, while Minkley scored 24 for Claude.

Justin Ritter added 12 points for Groom.

With the win, Claude's record is at 17-6, while the loss brings Groom's record down to 11-8.

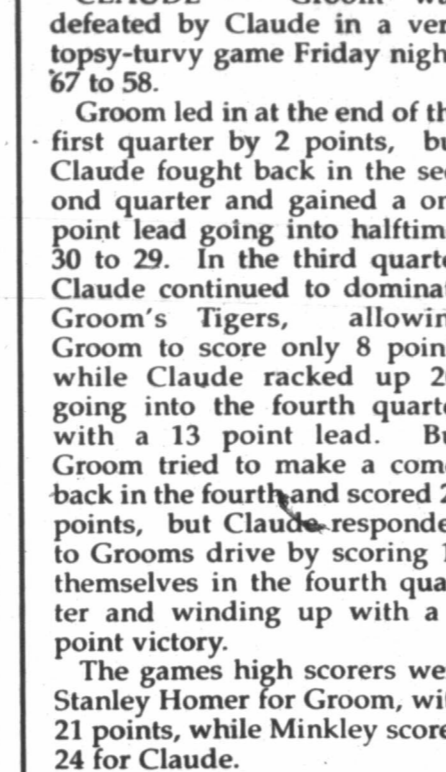

Claude's varsity girls also won, defeating Groom's girls in a game that wasn't nearly as close as the boy's varsity game, 87 to 50.

Claude dominated throughout the game, always ahead with a comfortable lead. Claude's high scorer was Crowell with 20, while Kay Case led Groom with 17. Sandie Conrad added 15 points for Groom.

Claude's girls record is now at 20-2, while Groom's record is at 16-4.

Samnorwood led throughout the first half of the game, ending the first quarter ahead by 2 points and leaving the lead at 4 during half-time. Miami hosts the Pampa junior varsity on Tuesday night.

Vazquez leads Texas past Southern Methodist

AUSTIN (AP) — Freshman DeJuan "Chico" Vazquez had a career day, hitting 7 of 8 three-pointers and scoring 24 points to lead Texas past Southern Methodist, 81-63, on Saturday.

Vazquez was 8-of-28 from outside the three-point arch in 13 previous games.

Texas (10-4, 3-1 Southwest Conference) jumped to a 43-30 half-time lead with second-chance shots after leading 13-4 in offensive rebounds. Sonny Alvarado had 15 rebounds, the most by a Texas player in three years, and 23 points.

Jay Poerner led SMU's Mustangs (5-10, 1-3) with 16 points. Troy Matthews added 15 points and Jeneil Rich 11.

Texas set a school record by making all 14 of its free throws. The previous best percentage was 95 percent on 19-of-20 in a game in 1963. SMU made 13 of 24 from the line.

Texas' Reggie Freeman was fifth in the nation in scoring average (24.4) going into the game, but went only 2-of-13 from the field and finished with 7 points. He was involved in a four-car accident Friday night in which he was not injured.

Colbert, Bland share lead in Tournament of Champions

DORADO, Puerto Rico (AP) — Defending champion Jim Colbert battled changing conditions for a 2-under-par 70 Saturday and a share of the second-round lead with South Africa's John Bland at the Tournament of Champions.

Playing 26 holes after Friday's first round in the winner's-only senior tournament was cut short by rain, Colbert began Saturday with a birdie at the difficult 199-yard par-3 11th hole. That left him at 7-under in the $800,000 event.

At the 16th, however, the 1995 Senior PGA Player of the Year pulled his drive and three-putted for double-bogey. He finished the round at 67, a stroke ahead of Tony Jacklin, Graham Marsh and Bob Murphy.

By the start of the second round at mid-morning, conditions at the Hyatt Dorado Beach East course had changed drastically.

Rain that had fallen in the past three days at the season-opening event gave way to sun and blustery conditions, making the greens easy to hit, but hard to putt.

"It was almost like two different days out there," said Colbert, who battled the course's saturated conditions all day to a two-round total of 137. "It was real hard to get it close and with the rain, it was difficult to figure out the greens. I must have puttred six times through my own ball mark."

Bland, who finished in the top 10 in each of three Senior PGA tournaments he played last year, continued his run here.

"It will take double figures to win here," said Bland, who shot a 68 in the second round. "I need to give myself more birdie chances than I did today."

January in the Texas Panhandle can be brutally cold, but area Boy Scouts managed to miss the worst the panhandle had to offer at Camp M.K. Brown east of Wheeler.

Some 75 scouts and scout leaders gathered at the Boy Scout camp earlier this month to work on various merit badges including wilderness survival. While the temperatures were cool, they were not bitter as was the case a few days later as an arctic front moved through the area.

Anticipating frigid temperatures, some of the scouts had planned to work on their Polar Bear badge, laughed Linda Huddleston, a Pampa assistant scout master. As it was, the scouts who spent the night in lean-tos that they had constructed as part of their work for a wilderness survival merit badge thought it was cold enough.

"Three of them didn't bring their sleeping bags," Huddleston said.

Other scouts from Pampa, Fritch, Borger, Stinnett and Panhandle worked on merit badges in metal working, fire safety, photography, bugling, Indian lore, railroading and wood carving. Classes were also held in citizenship for the nation and the world and for emergency preparedness. The citizenship and emergency preparedness badges are required for the rank of Eagle Scout, Huddleston said.

"The interest in all the kids in all the stuff was the best I've ever seen," Huddleston said.

Boy Scouts from six different troops journeyed to Wheeler County this month to work on various merit badges as they work their way through the ranks of scouting at their annual Winter Camp. Other scouts like Joshua Smotherman of Panhandle, lower center, learned the fine art of using mirrors to signal messages across the broken plains of Wheeler County.

Waco chef combines the expected with the offbeat

By TERESA S. JOHNSON
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO - Who would think about serving creme brulee in a tostado shell, drizzling red wine sauce over a chicken breast or making chimichangas from mashed potatoes?

Such unusual culinary twists are the brainchild of Kevin Davis and they keep luring customers back to Diamond Back's, where he is chef.

"I start with standard dishes, then add an unusual twist to make it special," Davis said.

Among Davis' "unusual twists" are using a pecan mixture to batter red fish, adding avocado to the restaurant's pico de gallo and pairing medallions of tenderloin with a Southwestern sauce with mashed potato chimichangas for Texas Tournedos.

"It's really simplified foods. They are not as complicated as people think," Davis said. "It just takes some imagination to make them special."

Davis also uses garnishes to make the dishes look special. For instance, black beans and corn are often used to decorate plates at Diamond Back's. Other out-of-the-ordinary garnishes Diamond Back's diners might see are oriental kale, persimmons, pomegranate seeds and star fruit.

"People are not used to seeing these things and it starts conversations about the restaurant. It stirs up interest," Davis said.

Davis said even a simple twist can make a dish exciting.

For Chicken Diamond Back, he grills a chicken breast, then tops it with slices of avocado, tomato and monterrey jack cheese, then drizzles it with a red wine sauce.

"Most people don't think of a dark wine sauce with chicken, but I had experimented with it before," Davis said.

Even the desserts get Diamond Back's unique stamp.

The most popular is the Creme Brulee Tostado. A fried taco salad shell is streaked with chocolate, then filled with creme brulee. Brown sugar is sprinkled over this, then broiled to caramelize. This is served with a sauce and fresh fruit.

The cream-colored sauce serves as a palette for the swirls of brown chocolate and the colorful raspberries, blueberries and kiwi set just so, turning the dish into a work of art.

Presentation is important at Diamond Back's. Davis likes his food to look as good as it tastes.

His tips on presentation could be used by anyone wanting to make the food on their table more appealing.

Perhaps the biggest mistake people make in presentation, according to Davis, is putting too much food on the plate.

"It's better to keep portions smaller and place them around the plate rather than piling things on," Davis said.

Davis likes to experiment with height. For instance he often uses fried tortilla strips to elevate the entree to make it stand out on the plate.

Color also is important in making a plate visually appealing, Davis said.

He likes to use colorful fresh produce such as purple oriental kale; black beans and corn, for the yellow and black contrast; light green mango, bright yellow papaya and dark green prickly pear or cactus fruit.

But don't think you have to have the unusual for visual appeal. Davis sliced the end of a carrot into three sections, cut it off just below the cuts and spread it out a little to resemble a flower. It made a pretty contrast when centered in a mound of wild rice being used as a side dish.

Following are two of his specialties.

CHICKEN DIAMOND BACK

- 4 to 5 ounces boneless skinless chicken breasts
- 1 avocado
- 1 large tomato
- 4 slices (1/4-inch each) monterrey jack cheese
- 8 ounces brown sauce (recipe follows)
- 1/4 cup red wine
- 1 teaspoon minced shallot
- Salt and pepper

Garnish: fresh cilantro sprigs, fried kernel corn and black beans

Trim fat from breast, then season with salt and pepper. Start your barbecue or wood grill and cook on each side for 3 minutes; set aside. Slice avocado into 4 pieces and tomato into 6 slices. Top each chicken breast with 2 slices tomato, 1 slice of avocado and 1 slice of cheese.

Saute shallots for 20 seconds in a hot pan. Deglaze pan by adding wine; simmer until wine is reduced by half. Add brown sauce and simmer. Add salt and pepper to taste.

To assemble, heat chicken breast in 350-degree oven for 4 to 5 minutes. Place on plate and add wine sauce and garnish. Serve with wild rice and seasonal vegetables. Makes 4 servings.

NOTE: At Diamond Back's Davis uses a classic brown sauce, which involves reducing a strong, clear beef stock, thickened with flour, by slow simmering. This can take from 2 hours to 12 hours, depending on how much of a perfectionist you are.

But we found a recipe from "The Redbook Cookbook" that takes considerable less time because it uses bouillon instead of beef stock. For those who want a flavor more true to the original, recipes for brown sauce (also called Espagnole Sauce) can be found in most gourmet cookbooks.

BROWN SAUCE SHORT METHOD

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
  - 6 tablespoons flour
  - 2 beef bouillon cubes
  - 2 1/2 cups boiling water
  - 2 parsley sprigs
  - 1/2 small bay leaf
  - Pinch of dried thyme
- Melt butter in a heavy saucepan over moderately low heat (about 225 degrees). Add 4 tablespoons flour; cook 6 to 8 minutes, stirring constantly, until medium brown or cinnamon-colored. Remove from heat and stir in the remaining 2 tablespoons flour.

Dissolve bouillon cubes in the boiling water; gradually add to the flour mixture, stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Add remaining ingredients; cook over low heat (about 200 degrees) for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Strain through a fine-mesh sieve. Makes about 1 1/2 cups sauce.

CREME BRULEE TOSTADAS

- 4 flour tortillas (12-inch diameter)
- Oil for frying
- 4 egg yolks
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
- 5 ounces chocolate, melted
- Seasonal fruit, garnish
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons shaved chocolate

Whipped cream

For creme brulee, beat egg yolks until lightly pale yellow, then add sugar and beat until thick. Then add sour cream, heavy cream and vanilla. Cook over a double boiler until mixture will coat the back of a wooden spoon or spatula. Remove from heat and cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until needed.

In heavy pan heat oil to 375 degrees. Submerge tortilla in hot oil with tortilla fryer or ladle to form baskets. Fry until golden and drain well.

To assemble dessert, with a wire whip streak the backs of the tortilla shells with melted chocolate. Allow to cool. Ladle about 6 ounces of creme brulee into tortilla shell. Sprinkle brown sugar on top and put under broiler until caramelized. Garnish with fruit, whipped cream and shaved chocolate.

Poison: Avoid it, prevent it, treat it

Americans will accidentally poison themselves more than four million times this year, usually by swallowing something. This poisoning often involves medicines. Over half of these cases involve children age six and younger. In over a fourth of the poisoning instances involving children, the poison is medicine. In this column, we will focus on preventing accidental poisoning involving medicines.

Poisons come in four forms, all of them dangerous: solids, liquids, sprays and gases. Strong medicines, developed in all of these forms to make us feel better, ironically can do the opposite when they are misused.

The most common accident involving medicines, and the easiest to understand, is when children swallow pills or syrups intended for others. Sometimes children are hungry or thirsty; sometimes they are bored; sometimes they want to imitate their parents or other adults. However it happens, it is a parent's duty to prevent accidents.

Both prescriptions and over-the-counter drugs often come in attractive packages, with colors chosen to make the products themselves appear more friendly. That is important for seriously ill people who find attractive medicines more palatable. But sometimes medicines look or smell like something they're not - like candies, foods or drinks.

Without frightening our children, it is important to make sure

Homemaker's News by Donna Brauchi

They respect medicines and understand that they should never use them without adult supervision. Heart medicine, for instance, is not intended for a five year old.

How to Help Prevent Accidents

Medicines are commonly found in kitchens and bathroom cabinets and on bedroom furniture. All medicines should be stored on high shelves or in locked cabinets that are out of the reach of children. Samples of over-the-counter medicines may be delivered by your letter carrier and deposited in your mail box. Always check your mail as quickly as possible for medicines you have ordered, or for samples that might be attractive to children. Be careful not to leave any medicines where they can be found by children.

Other precautions that can prevent serious illness involve the way you behave. Here are some additional tips to help prevent accidental poisoning:

- Avoid taking medicines in front of children. When they do see you, explain that you are taking medicine - not eating candy - and that they should never take medicine unless you give it to them.

- Never misuse medicine. When you take prescription medicine, follow your doctor's instructions, and be sure your children understand that it is serious business.

- Read and heed manufacturer's warning labels on over-the-counter medicines, then take a look at your medicines from the perspective of a child who isn't able to read.

- After you have established household rules on medicines, stick to them and make sure other people do, too. Be sure your babysitters know these rules and review them with frequent visitors like grandparents and other relatives.

- To keep the danger of accidental poisoning under control, become familiar with the medicines in your house and other locations. Take a good look in your medicine cabinets and other places where you store both prescription and over-the-counter medicines. Take note of approximate quantities.

Information like this can be helpful in an emergency.

- Make changes you feel are necessary. Be organized. Move medicines to high, out of reach shelves or locked cabinets. Discard unnecessary or out of date medicines. Record the phone numbers of your doctors or local poison control information center in a convenient place.

- Make sure your children understand the value of the property use of medicines, as well as the dangers of misuse. Show them your medicines and locked medicine storage cabinets, and tell them to play elsewhere. Impress upon them to never take anyone else's medicine and to always check with you before taking any medicine.

- Caution grandparents and other relatives about protecting children from accidental poisoning. If necessary change your own habits and those of other adults who visit your home.

- Keep syrup of ipecac with your medicines. It may be used to induce vomiting in some poisoning emergencies. It should be only be used when recommended by your doctor or poison information center.

In an Emergency

Grandma Gets Bouquet Of Thorns For Her Tacky Wedding Behavior

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a formal wedding where I witnessed something I thought was outrageous. When it came time for the bride to toss her bouquet, the bride's grandmother, who is well into her 70s, shoved the bridesmaids and young cousins of the bride aside and caught the bridal bouquet. Everyone was bewildered!

When it came time for the groom to toss the bride's garter, none of the young men tried to catch it, so it fell to the floor.

One young man was coaxed into picking it up and placing the garter on Grandma's leg. Obviously embarrassed, he put it on up to her knee when Grandma urged him to go higher until it reached her thigh. (Yes, she was sober.)

When one of the bridesmaids reminded Grandma that tossing the bouquet was a ritual intended for the young unmarried girls, Grandma shouted, "Well, I'm single!" Everyone applauded.

Abby, what do you think of Grandma's behavior?
NEW JERSEY READER

DEAR READER: I think it was outrageous and inappropriate, although it did add some unforgettable frivolity to the wedding. (Are you sure Grandma was sober?)

DEAR ABBY: Unless you are willing to state unequivocally that

Abigail Van Buren

the books and magazines you read and the movies you saw in your youth did not affect the way you conducted yourself, then your statement, "It's unrealistic to hold the media responsible for your daughter's morality..." is unrealistic.

When I was a teen-ager, the movies and what I read had some influence on my behavior toward others. Today we see raw sex on TV as early as 7:00 in the evening, and magazines on supermarket shelves devoted almost entirely to sex. I have seen sexual innuendoes on many TV shows to such a degree that it destroys their humor. I have heard more foul language in one Eddie Murphy movie than I heard in my several years in the Navy — ashore and at sea.

You cannot tell me that the language of the movies is not absorbed by teen-agers, resulting in unbelievable rudeness. And the sex scenes are going to reduce their inhibitions.

There is no way that "Concerned in Chicago's" daughter can avoid seeing or reading all of this. When our children said, "But everyone else is..." we could say, "You are not going to..." with neutral or positive influence by the media. Now the movies and the printed word tell them that such conduct is all right.

ALEX R. THOMAS,
SAN ANTONIO

DEAR MR. THOMAS: It is the job of parents to supervise the exposure their impressionable children have to "the media" and to provide moral standards for them. Although the idea seems tempting, I am opposed to censorship. The family should provide the "filter" through which their children view society.

DEAR ABBY: My husband needs to be on oxygen all the time. He has a portable tank for when we go out, but it's too cumbersome for him to manage by himself.

When we are in a restaurant and he needs to use the restroom, what should I do? Should I take him to the ladies' room with me? Should I go to the men's room with him? Should I ask the waiter or some other male service person to accompany him?

What is the polite or socially acceptable course of action? Please don't use my name.

Grizzard's widow recalls husband's life, career

By CHIP CHANDLER
Staff Writer

"I don't think there's going to be too many Lewis Grizzards to come up and replace him ... [He was] a true Southern voice," said Grizzard's widow, Dedra Grizzard.

"This will preserve a piece of him," she continued.

Mrs. Grizzard referred to an hour-long documentary about her late husband set to air today at 4 p.m. on KVII, Channel 7.

Son of the South ... The Lewis Grizzard Story takes a close look at Grizzard's personal and professional life and features conversations with some of his well-known contemporaries and close friends.

In a telephone interview from her home Tuesday morning, Mrs. Grizzard recalled that following her husband's death in March 1994 she wanted to do something for his many fans across the country.

"Lewis' fans are hungry for anything they can get their hands on. He's like a long-lost brother. [For] so many loyal, devoted fans, this is a piece missing to the puzzle [of his life]," she said.

The documentary begins with Grizzard's childhood in rural Georgia: His widow remembered that he told her that at the age of six he knew he wanted to be a sportswriter.

About six months after his death, Mrs. Grizzard and her late husband's business partner, Steve Enoch, began gathering facts about Grizzard's life, "from photographs to old love letters," according to the widow.

The program continues with the start of his career at a small newspaper in Athens, Georgia, and traces his career from appearances on The Tonight Show to the New York Times bestseller list and national syndication.

"It puts his career in synch," Mrs. Grizzard said.

One aspect of that career that may surprise long-time fans is Grizzard's fledgling music career.

Mrs. Grizzard recollected that her husband signed a contract with Sony Music in 1991, writing and recording demos for several country songs. After his death, she had background music added to those demos and released an album, Alimony, in late 1994.

The album was subtitled "The bill you get for the thrill you got," she laughed.

Songs from the album are used in the documentary, along with interviews from a number of friends and business associates.

They include Grizzard's first wife, Dr. Randy Martin, his cardiologist at Emory University for his last two surgeries; CNN talk show host Larry King; Grand Old Opry host Bill Anderson; and Georgia Governor Zell Miller.

"We tried to put as much in as we could in one hour," Mrs. Grizzard said.

The documentary has been airing in various markets in the South since Oct. 22, mostly in places where Grizzard's popular column ran.

More than half of Grizzard's 21 books made the New York Times bestseller list. At the time of his death, his newspaper column was featured in more than 500 papers across the country, including The Pampa News.

To order a copy of the documentary or Grizzard's album, call 1-800-955-1162.

"I'm real proud of this project," Mrs. Grizzard said. "I think Lewis would be proud of it, too."

Nickelodeon to launch classic TV network

NEW YORK (AP) — Pining for That Girl? Man enough for Mannix? TV Land, a 24-hour, basic cable "classic TV" spinoff of Nick at Nite, will debut in late April.

"Nick at Nite's TV Land is assembling the best line-up of shows from virtually every genre from the past 40 years," Rich Cronin, president of TV Land and Nick at Nite, said Wednesday.

The rerun network, beginning April 29, will air the classics Hogan's Heroes, Gunsmoke, The Ed Sullivan Show, The Sonny & Cher Variety Hour, Hill Street Blues, St. Elsewhere, Mannix and Cannon.

Other TV Land programming includes The Addams Family, Green Acres, My Three Sons, Petticoat Junction, The Phil Silvers Show, and The White Shadow.

TV Land publicist Paul Ward said the network expects to launch in at least 4 million to 6 million households.

Nick at Nite and its daytime incarnation, Nickelodeon, are subsidiaries of MTV Networks, owned by Viacom, Inc., and are seen in more than 64 million households. Combined, they were basic cable's top-rated network in 1995.

Talkmeister Phil Donahue calls it quits after over 25 years

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue, who invented the issue-driven daytime talk show, then watched his ratings slip while low-brow imitators outperformed him, is calling it quits at the end of the season.

A nine-time Emmy Award winner as outstanding host, Donahue will continue to work on TV specials and new projects in broadcasting and cable, his syndicator, Multimedia Entertainment Inc., announced Wednesday.

Industry analysts blamed his departure on slipping ratings and a market crowded with more sensationalistic talk-shows.

A spokesman for the show said Donahue was taping a program and would not be available for interviews.

"Phil Donahue essentially started this company and began an entire industry in daytime syndication," said Multimedia President Bob Turner. "He was the first to intimately involve his studio and home audiences."

Seen in more than 45 countries, "Donahue" marked its 25th anniversary in 1992. It has won 20 national Emmys and broadcasting's prestigious Peabody award.

It first saw the light of day on Nov. 6, 1967, in Dayton, Ohio, where the then-brown-haired TV personality was launching a couch-and-desk talker, when a studio audience showed up for the canceled variety show he was replacing.

"Somebody said, 'Why don't we sit 'em down and let 'em watch the interview?'" Donahue recalled in a 1987 interview. His guest was atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair, and the audience asked her questions during commercials.

Donahue thought the audience's questions were better than his. "Sometime during that first week, I jumped off my chair and ran into the audience," he said.

The program moved to national syndication and the top of the ratings — until a newcomer named Oprah Winfrey debuted in the 1986-87 season — and knocked him out of first place.

Still, Donahue stuck to the high road, even as his show's ratings began slipping three years ago.

The show's doom was sealed in August, when New York City's WNBC-TV declined to renew it for this fall season, and no other New York station picked it up — depriving it of 7 1/2 percent of the nation's viewers.

'Dead Man' riveting, 'Mr. Holland' features star turn by Dreyfuss

By DAVID GOODMAN
Associated Press Writer

'Dead Man Walking'

Matthew Poncelet (Sean Penn) is a swaggering, hate-spouting murderer on Louisiana's death row who is fast running out of time.

Hoping to find a lawyer and escape impending death by lethal injection, he writes to his local church and is assigned to Sister Helen Prejean (Susan Sarandon), a Catholic nun who lives and works in a New Orleans housing project.

Writer-director Tim Robbins based Dead Man Walking on the memoirs of the real-life Prejean and her experiences counseling condemned men in their last days.

This gripping movie uses the relationship between Sister Helen and Poncelet to take an unflinching and balanced look at crime, punishment, the possibility of redemption and the moral questions raised by state-sanctioned killing.

It's the kind of film that requires great performances, with a narrative exposition driven by the kind of monologue scenes actors love. Such a subtle, character-based movie rises and falls on the quality of actors who bring the script to life and, fortunately, Robbins has the advantage of an exceptional cast.

Penn is riveting as the dense young Cajun accused of the rape and murder of a teen-age couple as they sat necking in their car one night. And Sarandon sheds expensive makeup and sexy clothes to stirringly play the plucky, selfless woman of the cloth who volunteers to be the condemned man's "spiritual counsel."

With great acting mixed with such an intelligent script, this story about a killer's final days turns into one of the year's most absorbing and important movies.

The meetings between the unlikely couple and impact these disparate souls have on each other form the core of the dramatic action. In the beginning, Poncelet is defiant, seemingly immune to fear or remorse.

For Sister Helen, the meetings with this extremely unappealing specimen are a test of her faith, her opposition to the death penalty and her belief that "every person is worth more than his worst act."

She's appalled by Poncelet — his lewdness, racist diatribes and psychopathic lack of feeling — but she's determined to help him face death with dignity, even as her efforts perplex her upper-middle class family and alienate the children she teaches in the ghetto.

Robbins uses creative filming techniques to achieve a strangely intimate mood in the sometimes desultory, sometimes emotional visiting room sessions.

There's one telling exchange as the pair sit on opposite sides of a glass barrier. Robbins shoots from an angle so one face is reflected in the heavy safety glass as the other is talking. Rapid cuts would have exacerbated a sense of emotional distance, but putting both faces in frame at the same time underscores the characters' importance to each other.

As the plot progresses from failed legal appeal to depictions of the bureaucratic minutia that make up the state's preparation for the execution, Sister Helen gradually breaks through Poncelet's bravado.

Even as the movie unravels Poncelet's hidden vulnerability — particularly when his mother (Roberta Maxwell) breaks down clutching old photographs of her son at age 6 — Penn never a huge swath of time, from age 30 to 60, to show a man changing and growing. He also gets the support of a "small" character-driven film, the kind that derives its drama from the unspectacular successes and failures making up an ordinary, uncelebrated life.

There are no car chases or splintering glass elevators. Instead, we get a neighborhood music teacher, a student who can't produce a good tune on her clarinet, a school orchestra that cannot keep time and a young singer who tantalizes Holland with the siren call of beauty, talent and ambition.

These are the events, the challenges making up Mr. Holland's days. And this bittersweet movie, though openly manipulative and oversentimental in places, reminds us how important such "small" moments are.

When the film opens, it's 1964 in Portland, Ore., and Glenn Holland is pushing 30. The young musician and his sweet, likable wife (Glenn Headly) are poor in an optimistic, graduate student kind of way, and Holland is seeking a way to escape the wedding circuit so he can concentrate on composing the magnificent symphony that will make him famous.

To temporarily solve the annoying problem of earning money, Holland takes what he sees as another temporary pick-up gig, teaching "Music Appreciation" and coaching the band at the local high school. He naively thinks a teacher's day ends at 3 p.m. and that he'll have time to compose.

Facing an audience of turned-off teens is quite a comedown for a man who would be Copeland and, at first, he's a resentful teacher, boring his students with colorless lectures and annoying the principal (Olympia Dukakis) with his obvious lack of commitment.

Something catches hold inside and the unique challenges of teaching begin to work their way under Mr. Holland's skin. Increasingly, he finds himself ignoring the score sitting on the piano at home to spend time after school drilling the orchestra.

Before he knows it, he's a fully fledged teacher and a life has gone by. It's not the life he planned out, but also not, as we later understand, a wasted life either.

It takes a certain degree of guts to make a movie about real life, the kind of mixed, work-a-day lives people usually end up with instead of the glittering fantasies they planned out.

really makes him the slightest bit likable.

It's obvious Robbins felt he had to give us all the evidence against Poncelet. Although the movie (and book) is a heartfelt plea against the death penalty, Robbins never patronizes the audience or uses his power as director to stack the deck.

The terrifyingly banal act of government execution is intercut with grainy flashbacks of Poncelet's role in the hideous double murder on Lover's Lane, right down to his savage, triumphant dance as he stands over his victim before falling upon her and raping her.

Penn and Sarandon are perfectly backed by excellent actors in a variety of supporting roles. The movie's narrative direction is further bolstered by compelling scenes between Prejean and the victims' parents (Raymond J. Barry, R Lee Ermey and Celia Weston.)

Dead Man Walking is produced by Robbins, John Kilik and Rudd Simmons. The Gramercy Pictures Release is Rated R and has a running time of 120 minutes.

'Mr. Holland's Opus'

Mr. Holland's Opus marks the full return of the Richard Dreyfuss of old — not the fading star who slouched through bombs like Moon Over Parador, but the Richard Dreyfuss people remember so fondly from films like The Goodbye Girl, Jaws, Close Encounters and, most recently, The American President.

There's no question this latest role, an aspiring composer named Glenn Holland who puts aside his dreams to take care of his family, is a meaty one indeed.

For starters, Dreyfuss gets an entire adult life-span to play with,

Roseanne likely to return to ABC, working with Fox

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Roseanne could belong to two networks soon: She's likely to return for a ninth season of her ABC sitcom and is working on a late-night Saturday show for Fox.

Roseanne is developing the Fox show and may make appearances, but is not expected to star in it, Fox programming head John Matoian said Wednesday. The show could start airing before fall.

Regarding the long-running Roseanne, ABC said it was in negotiations with producer Carsey-Werner Co. and was expected to announce a deal shortly.

Matoian, speaking to the Television Critics Association, said Fox also is in program discussions with Michael Moore, filmmaker and creator of the short-lived satiric news magazine TV Nation. Moore is developing a late-night Saturday show and a sitcom.

Details of the proposed Saturday shows were not announced. Matoian said the plan is to alternate Roseanne's show with the comedy program MAD TV, which overlapped for a half-hour opposite NBC's Saturday Night Live this season.

For now, Fox will air a monthly Saturday night boxing match. The first, a bout in Phoenix, is set for 11 p.m. EST Jan. 27.

On other subjects, Matoian said Fox continues to plan a national news program.

"It is a goal, it is an unrelenting theme of (Fox owner) Rupert Murdoch how to get a news presence on this network," Matoian said. A news magazine would be more likely than a nightly newscast, he said.

Party of Five, a critically acclaimed drama that Fox kept despite initially low ratings, "has turned the corner," Matoian said, making its survival more likely.

The Market Forecaster

By George Kleinman

WHEAT — (BULL)

OUTLOOK: The evidence as I see it still points to higher prices. It's dry in portions of the Great Plains (winter wheat country) and crop development is less than ideal. Export business is starting to pick up. At press time we heard rumors (not yet confirmed) of huge Chinese purchases developing.

I'm looking for the crop report to confirm U.S. wheat stocks to be the lowest in 20 years. If demand accelerates, the market should still reach new contract highs over the coming month or two.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Our new crop hedging program is 50 percent complete with the recent purchase of the July Chicago 420 and 48¢ puts for 19¢. This will assure better than $4 wheat on a portion of your crop. Until the weather situation becomes clearer, we plan to hold on to additional hedges at this time.

Remember, puts will never limit your upside potential, and give you protection for a limited and predetermined cost. Forward contracts, on the other hand, put a ceiling on your potential profit. In two years, why limit yourself? Continue to hold the March 490 calls previously purchased for 15¢.

Traders: We're long the March Minneapolis futures at $4.87 or lower. Risk 20 cents for an eventual profit objective above $5.35.

CORN — (BULL)

OUTLOOK: Due to deadline considerations, this section is being written prior to the release of the January corn stocks report. This is a very important report, and will give strong clues as to corn usage.

As you know, I've been bullish corn for a year now. We now have prices at which one might think demand would fall. But I don't think that's happening. The recent hog report is showing greater numbers, not less. Exports are robust.

I don't believe a lot of people realize just how tight corn supplies are. There are virtually no other feed grains available in quantity or at a lower price. If the report indicates strong usage, prices will surely reach new contract highs. This is what I suspect it will show, but time will tell.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: Purely for risk management purposes, and to "bank" significant profits, we "rolled" our March 330 calls up to the 370s early last week. You'll recall we used different strategies to maintain a corn position since last fall's harvest, and it's paid off.

You should have been able to make at least a 35 cent profit on the 330s from our recommended entry point, and replaced with the 370s for about 10¢/bu. This maintains your position, and greatly reduces your risk.

Traders: Just as recommended for our hedgers, speculators were also advised last week to "roll" up the 330 calls, purchased for 10 cents to the 370s. You should have been able to take at least a 35 cent profit on the 330s from our recommended entry point.

This reduces our risk prior to the crop report, yet maintains a corn position. We're also long the March futures at $3.32, and holding.

CATTLE — (BULL/BEAR)

OUTLOOK: Well, just about everything that could go wrong for the cattle market in the past month has. We had a negative hogs and pigs report, which showed the supply of this competing meat at 15 year highs. Then we had a major "storm of the century" on the East Coast which hampered meat movement and demand for beef. There aren't a lot of steak dinners sold when a third of the nation can't get out to the steak house.

Meanwhile, feeding weather in the Midwest has been pretty good for weight gains. Now I think we're starting to see some herd liquidation. Cows are being brought to market, and some producers are looking at the high price of corn. They question the gamble of feeding an animal which may or may not make a profit while they can bank good corn prices now.

I've been bullish cattle recently, since the odds are historically in our favor for higher prices from Thanksgiving into February. I've made money following this tendency most years. However, thus far the market has failed to act the way it should. Prudence dictates a sidelines position until the market shows us a sign it wants to turn back up.

STRATEGY: Hedgers: We've been using puts to hedge fat cattle prices. Puts limit your downside risk for a predetermined and modest cost, yet leave your upside potential open. The puts have been increasing in value during the recent market fall, so they're doing their job.

Hold until the day you market your cattle. If the price continues to fall, put profits will help to offset cash losses.

Cow/calf operators: Look at good rallies ($2 to $3) as sale opportunities. The combination of high feed costs and weak finished prices could continue to weigh on this market.

Traders: We were stopped out of our February position on the move under 66. This is our first cattle loss in quite a while. We'll stay on the sidelines for now.

If you're still in our suggested spread — Long February and Short August cattle at under 500 — risk no more than 100 points from entry ($400 per spread).

Texas Corn Growers Association to have annual meeting in Dimmitt

DIMMITT — The 23rd Annual Meeting of the Texas Corn Growers Association will be Tuesday, Jan. 23, at the Castro County Exposition Building. Keynote speaker will be Texas House Speaker Pete Laney. Farmers can earn three CEUs by attending.

The meeting begins with registration at 8 a.m. The program begins at 9 a.m. A free lunch will be served by area Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE) members.

The meeting will feature discussion of federal farm programs, TCGA's continuous efforts to obtain a sound agricultural policy, and various reports on area insect, weed and disease research.

"Last year we had more than 300 people attend our annual meeting," says TCGA President Carl King. "Because of the quality of speakers we have lined up, we anticipate another large turnout at this year's meeting."

Laney is expected to address private property and water rights for farmers and ranchers, state environmental issues and other matters which have an impact on

Texas agricultural production.

King, also chairman of the American Corn Growers Association board, will present his annual review of TCGA and ACGA activities. They have included numerous lobbying efforts to bring about a sound agricultural policy that benefits farmers and not just large agribusiness conglomerates.

The first of two special panels will feature representatives of the state Farm Service Agency (FSA), formerly the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. State FSA Executive Director Harold Bob Bennett will discuss the progress of the FSA reorganization program. Ray Joe Riley, State FSA board chairman, will review federal crop insurance and Farmers Home Administration loan provisions.

A second panel will center on the controversial 1995 Farm Bill still being debated in Washington.

Panel members will include David Senter, consultant to TCGA and ACGA in Washington; Larry Mitchell, executive director of the National Farmers Union; Lois Wales, spokesperson for

WIFE; and Don Kimball, representing the American Agriculture Movement. A representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation will also take part.

Following lunch, the afternoon session will include research presentations by Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station personnel.

Dr. Clay Salisbury, TAES agronomist in Amarillo, will review his research on corn cropping systems. Dr. Brent Bean, TAES agronomist, will look at new herbicides for corn. Dr. Charlie Rush, TAES plant pathologist, will discuss corn diseases.

Dr. Tom Archer, TAES in Lubbock, will center in on mite control systems, including new mite-resistant corn hybrids. Dr. Pat Morrison, TAES in Lubbock, will discuss other insect resistant corn studies.

An overview of corn marketing programs will be given by TAES economist Dr. Steve Amosson and J.D. Ragland, Castro County extension agent.

For more information on the annual meeting, contact the TCGA office at 1-806-647-4268.

Texas Farmers Union to meet in Waco

WACO — How producers, consumers and the economy will fare in the upcoming farm bill debate will be the focus of the 92nd annual convention of the Texas Farmers Union (TFU).

The state's oldest family farm and ranch organization will convene at the Radisson Mockingbird Hotel in Dallas on Jan. 26-27.

A "Farm Program Forum" will feature national and state experts in a lively discussion on the impact of farm programs and the international marketplace.

"The dramatic impact of the policies under consideration in Washington affect every producer and consumer," said TFU President Joe Rankin. "This forum will provide definitive programs for protection of our nation's family farmers and ranchers and ensure a safe and reliable food source for the consumers."

The session is set for Saturday, Jan. 27, at 8 a.m. at the convention hotel.

The forum includes, Jack Norman, president, Texas Wheat Producers; Pat George, president, Texas Grain Sorghum Producers; Carl King, president, Texas Corn Producers; Steve Ballas, Texas Rice Producers; Dr. Carl Anderson, cotton marketing economist of Texas A&M University; Sherman Sides, vice president, Southwestern Peanut Growers Association; and Richard Fleming, USDA milk market administrator-Texas and New Mexico. The session will be chaired by National Farmers Union (NFU)

Legislative Director Larry Mitchell.

Following the farm forum, a second session will address the controversial boll weevil eradication program, with speakers Woody Anderson, chairman of the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, and Clifford Smith, president of Sweep Out and a South Texas cotton producer.

Congressman Charles Stenholm (D-Stamford), ranking minority member of the House Agriculture Committee, will address the convention on Friday afternoon, Jan. 26. Also, Congressman John Bryant and Congressman Jim Chapman will speak. Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock is scheduled to attend the convention.

Harold Bob Bennett, State ASCS director, and George Ellis, Farmers Home Administration director, will speak at the convention updating the convention on program initiatives of their respective agencies. Gary Condra, administrator, Texas Agricultural Mediation Program, will speak on finance. NFU President Leland Swenson will close the convention with a banquet address Saturday night, Jan. 27.

"We are entering a crucial era for our nation's family farmers and ranchers," TFU President Rankin said. "The choices we make on our food and fiber policy this year will determine our course into the next century, so we encourage widespread participation from our producers and consumers."

Sheep producers favor poison collars for predators

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — Oregon sheep producers are lining up behind a state proposal that would allow use of poison collars to thwart predators.

Predators usually attack sheep at the neck. The rubber collars are filled with a poison; the predator bites down on the collar, ingests the poison and dies.

The poison, Compound 1080, was banned by the Environmental Protection Agency in 1971, but Oregon and several other states are asking for reauthorization to use it for controlling predators. It already has been authorized in Texas, Montana, New Mexico, Wyoming and South Dakota.

Predators cost U.S. sheep ranches more than $500,000 last year. Richard Kosesan, executive director of the Oregon Sheep Growers Association, said many of the state's 4,000 producers have been expressing interest in the poison collars since learning they have been used effectively elsewhere.

Computer-generated map measures crop progress

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Grain traders in Chicago will soon be able to look in their computers to find out how well 2,000 acres in Iowa are growing — dark green is lush and brown is not so lush.

Ecosystem Testing Designs Inc. and a University of Kansas program have developed the "Vegetation Greenness Map," which will go on the market in February.

Data for the map are gathered by a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weather satellite. Then, John Lomas, research analyst for the university's Kansas Applied Remote Sensing program, analyzes the data and creates a Normalized Difference Vegetation Index.

The map, which will be available mainly to subscribers via computer, will help farmers determine the condition of their crops and how close they are to harvest readiness.

The new technology also is targeted at agricultural business traders, especially the Chicago Board of Trade, Lomas said.

Subscribers will receive four different maps on their computers, with updates every two weeks.

Similar maps are already under way for China, South America and other agriculturally significant global areas.

State's unemployment rate edges up in December

DALLAS (AP) — The state's unemployment rate rose slightly to 6.4 percent with 37,000 more people looking for work in December than in the previous month, the Labor Department said Friday.

The rate rose by four-tenths of 1 percentage point, virtually unchanged from the November unemployment rate of 6.0 percent. The rate also was little changed from the 6.0 percent rate seen in December 1994, the department said.

The three-month unemployment average, considered a more stable measure, ranged from 6.1 percent to 6.3 percent over the months of September, October and November. For the three months ended in December, the state's unemployment rate averaged 6.2 percent.

Some 615,000 Texans sought work in December, up from 578,000 in November.

The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 5.6 percent in December

Nation's unemployment holds steady, manufacturing produces big increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 5.6 percent in December as the manufacturing industry enjoyed its biggest monthly increase in nearly six years, helped by the return of striking aircraft workers.

The Labor Department said Friday the overall jobless rate ended the year about where it began as the nation's businesses added 1.7 million workers to their payrolls in 1995, down sharply from the 3.53 million jobs that were added in 1994.

Economists said the slowdown in job growth was to be expected given the fact that the economy grew much less robustly in 1995 than it had in 1994.

The jobless rate dipped as low as 5.4 percent in February, the best showing for the current recovery, and climbed as high as 5.8 percent in April. It spent the year in a narrow band that many analysts believe is close to full employment as the current recovery completes five years of growth.

The release of the unemployment report was delayed two weeks because of the government's 21-day shutdown.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said

Friday that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, was growing at an annual rate of 3.2 percent in the July-September quarter after nearly stalling out in the spring. Still, analysts believe that the fourth quarter growth rate will slow once again.

Some economists have begun to express growing worries about a possible recession developing this year. They point to the age of the current expansion and the fact that, despite the relatively low unemployment rate, consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the total economy, has been teetering of late under the impact of high debt burdens and anemic wage growth.

Earlier last week, it was reported that the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, designed to forecast activity six to nine months in the future, dropped by 0.5 percent in November, its second straight monthly decline.

Some economists believe that the Federal Reserve, which in December cut interest rates for a second time, should do so again when it next meets at the end of this month, given the weakness of a variety of reports.

For December, the strength in the labor market came in manufacturing, where employment rose by 52,000, the biggest increase since a jump of 104,000 in February 1990.

But the number was inflated by a gain of 31,000 returning aerospace workers who had been on strike against the Boeing Co. Additionally, 10,000 auto workers returned to work after having been laid off as Detroit tried to whittle down an overhang of unsold cars.

The gain in manufacturing followed three consecutive monthly declines. In all, manufacturing employment fell in seven of 12 months last year.

Other strength in December came from an increase of 69,000 workers in service industries as health services, engineering and business enjoyed gains. However, the retail industry, which has been hard hit by lackluster sales during the all-important Christmas season, experienced a drop of 48,000 jobs last month.

Katharine Abraham, head of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said that the weak job growth in retailing was "consistent with recent news reports that many retailers experienced disappointing sales during the holiday shopping season."

Magazine questions Boeing 777 safety tests

SEATTLE (AP) — Some federal aviation specialists are questioning the safety of the Boeing 777, saying it was rushed into service without adequate testing to make sure a break in a fan blade wouldn't cause dangerous engine vibrations, Business Week reported.

Boeing strongly disputed the story in the magazine's Jan. 29 issue.

The first plane designed entirely by computer, the Boeing 777 was certified April 19 by the Federal Aviation Administration and quickly achieved widespread popularity as a long-haul aircraft.

The 777 is already in use on United's daily London-Washington, D.C., flights, and several foreign airlines have ordered them, including Malaysia Airlines, which ordered 15 777s this month. Depending on which version of the 777 is ordered and what seat layout is chosen, it can carry roughly 300 to 550 passengers.

In a statement, the FAA says the plane is safe. But the magazine quotes dissenting FAA engineers and inspectors as saying that the federal agency bowed to pressure from Boeing to get the plane into service in time to avoid costly penalties.

"It's an issue of safety," one unidentified FAA specialist was quoted as saying. "It could lead to catastrophe."

Brian Ames, a spokesman in Everett for Boeing Co., disputed that assessment.

"We specifically tested for the fan blade stability issue and ruled it out as a problem," Ames said. "Broken blades on fans in jet engines have been reported in 24 airliners since 1990, none resulting in a crash, but the effect might be more serious in the 777 because its fan blades are unusually large, the article said."

"Numerous FAA engineers and inspectors fear that if one of those giant blades were to break in flight, tremendous vibrations could occur that might severely destabilize the plane," Business Week said.

Some believe the cockpit might shake so hard that pilots would be unable to read their instruments, it said.

Other Boeing officials refused to comment on the article, Business Week reported. Ames said the magazine rejected "an opportunity for background briefings" on the certification process.

"It's unfortunate that Business Week would publish an article with conclusions based on innuendo, hearsay and anonymous sources," Ames said.

Thomas McSweeney, FAA's director aircraft certification, said the Boeing 777 "met every regulation that it was required to meet."

A statement issued by the FAA in Washington said "the testing and analysis of the Boeing 777 was unprecedented in its scope and breadth."

"The certification process for this aircraft exceeded 125,000 staff hours by technical experts at the FAA. The agency maintains complete confidence in the certification," said Sandra Allen, assistant FAA administrator for public affairs.

Critics argue over whether some people's brain tells time while sleeping

By ROGER MUNNS
Associated Press Writer

DECORAH, Iowa (AP) - You're in a strange place, there's no alarm clock and it's important to wake up early.

Do you stay up all night? Luther College Professor Bill Moorcroft said many people have discovered a better way - the brain's own no-clock alarm.

"Not everybody can do it. There are some who need three alarm clocks and a bucket of ice to get up. But many people really can do it on their own," Moorcroft said.

That's one view. Critics say it's poppycock. "This is an old wives' tale. People have studied this since the 1920s."

"They say they can wake up any time they want, but what it comes down to is, all the evidence comes from their own reports. You don't have any objective statistics," said Harold Zepelin, a professor of psychology at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich.

Some people, he said, might be able to wake up if they have a regular sleep pattern and if their intended wake-up time corresponds to the cycles of rapid eye movement sleep. REM occurs every 80 to 100 minutes.

"I had one guy who said he could wake up within five minutes of his designated time. So I asked him to change the time, and he was an hour and a half long," Zepelin said.

Such has been the debate for years.

Greg Mader, an official for the American Sleep Disorder Association in Rochester, Minn., said the topic has been batted back and forth in the group's periodical Sleep.

Moorcroft said he has new ammunition.

"The problem with other surveys is, you ask people the results but you're never sure they tell the truth," he said.

So he devised an experiment to take the self-reporting away.

Moorcroft recruited 15 volunteers, aged 19 through 62, who claimed they had an internal alarm. Each was asked to set a time to wake up without any external alarms. Each was given three tries, thus providing 45 tests, and some varied the wake-up time at least once.

In a departure from other tests, each participant wore a wrist sensor called an actigraph, which records movement every minute. The data produced by the sensor showed exactly when the subject woke up. There were 44 usable sets of data; the actigraph malfunctioned on the remaining test.

Of those 44 nights, 18 of the subjects awoke 15 minutes or less before the stated time. Another 10 were late by no more than 15 minutes.

"Fifteen minutes is pretty stringent criteria, given that you're sleeping six, seven, maybe eight hours. I think that's pretty good. If you give them a 30-minute window, you get another seven.

That makes 80 percent within a half-hour of the target," said Moorcroft.

"The interesting thing, and we didn't expect this, is that the ones who had one or more different times were more successful than those who had the same time. I have no idea why. It's counterintuitive," he said.

The results would be even more impressive, he said, if it hadn't been for one volunteer who missed all of his times. "There was one guy who was not very good. He woke up, but he was never close to the target," he said.
