Moslems protest Pope's statement on hostages

By The Associated Press

Iran's hard-line Moslem government will allow two Iranian clergymen, a Protestant minister and a Roman Catholic priest, to celebrate Christmas with the 52 U.S. hostages, virtually assured now of spending their second Christmas in captivity.

Swiss diplomats representing U.S. interests in Tehran said today that approval for the religious service was received earlier in the day during a meeting with government authorities.

There were indications the service would be held in Farsi, the Persian language, rather than in English, and that neither the Swiss nor any other foreign representatives would be allowed to attend.

It was also unclear whether all of the hostages would be gathered together for the service and whether it would be held Wednesday night, Christmas Eve or Thursday, Christmas Day. The diplomats said the clergymen were Iranian citizens but that their identities were not immediately disclosed.

Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai today summoned the Vatican representative in Tehran to sharply protest indirect statements made by Pope John Paul II on the hostages' continued captivity. Tehran radio reported without elaboration.

John Paul, in a plea clearly aimed at Iran, appealed for the release of hostages seized for "political retaliation" or ransom in his annual Christmas message to Roman Catholic cardinals delivered Monday. The pontiff said he prayed with "tears in my eyes" that hostage captors would take pity on their victims.

Meanwhile, the official Pars news agency reported that Iran's public prosecutor Ayatollah Abdul Karim Mosavi-Ardabili escaped an assassination attempt in Tehran. The report said a bomb went off as the bearded chief prosecutor was crossing a Tehran street on his way to his office, "but luckily did not harm him in any way."

Pars blamed the early morning bomb attack on "enemies of the Islamic revolution" without specific identification. Radio broadcasts in the Arab world, monitored in Beirut, said underground terrorists of Iran's anti-clerical group Forghan claimed responsibility.

Forghan has claimed responsibility for several assassinations and assassination attempts since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution came to power nearly two years ago.

Many Forghan guerrillas have been arrested and some executed by Islamic revolutionary courts. Although the group is made up of Moslem fanatics, it calls for a complete withdrawal of the clergy from political life in Iran. It was not clear whether Ardabili prosecuted any of the Forghan guerrillas.

Meat supplies improve after Polish strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Workers at 50 factories in Chelm, just 15 miles from the Soviet border, held a one-hour strike today to protest the amount of Christmas meat rations they received from the government, the independent trade union Solidarity said.

The strike, which began at 7:15 a.m. local time, ended without opposition from local authorities, factory managers or police, Solidarity said, adding without elaboration that supplies of meat had improved in the area.

Meanwhile, Solidarity said it would push for release of seven jailed dissidents, a move that could further irritate Poland's Soviet bloc neighbors, and top government officials warned that Poland's chronic meat shortages will get worse before they get better.

The union, spawned during nationwide strikes this summer, said one independent protest over the amount of Christmas meat rations ended Monday, and that the workers in Chelm, near the southeastern city of Lublin, went on strike for the same reason.

Solidarity said the Chelm workers sought more holiday meat and butter rations and were angered by unspecified "denigrations of Solidarity."

Chelm is a railway junction and manufacturing town of about 40,000 people situated 15 miles from the Soviet border. It was the first town liberated from the Nazis by Soviet troops during World War II and the new communist-controlled Polish republic was proclaimed there in 1944.

The protests come less than a week after Poland announced its first meat rationing since shortly after World War II to assure Poles access to holiday supplies. Workers in Piotrkow, where a four-day protest ended Monday, and Chelm were apparently unsatisfied with the size of their allotments.

Leaders of the Piotrkow protest said their allotments were 40 percent below the average for other towns. The government promised to send in additional supplies, but it was not known if the food had arrived.

The Piotrkow workers drew support from a local Solidarity committee despite the national union's temporary ban on strikes by its estimated 10 million members in a bid to calm Poland's tense East bloc neighbors and reduce the chances of Soviet military intervention.

Deputy Premier Henryk Kisiel, in a message to district government officials here, warned that Poland's chronic meat shortages will get worse in 1981 and said the nation would have trouble maintaining current living standards.

"A radical change in economic results will be impossible next year," the planning chief said, adding that while workers' salaries might improve, "the market situation will not."

Solidarity announced Monday that its leader Lech Walesa, 25 other union officials and prominent Polish artists had petitioned the government to release seven dissidents, including one reported on a hunger strike in a Warsaw jail.

Cable TV rate change okayed

A request from Sammons Communications, Inc. concerning modification of rates for cable television services was approved today by the Pampa city council in a regular session.

The Sammons Communication rate modification requested by Wayne Steddum, representing the firm, included an increase of 75 cents raising the $7.75 monthly rate to $8.50 and an increase of .50 for secondary service raising the monthly rate of $1 to $1.50.

Traffic tickets are now being issued for handicapped parking violations in compliance with an ordinance passed on final reading by the councilmen at the Dec. 2 meeting.

City councilmen were informed the Planning and Zoning Commission has approved the proposed change in zoning from SF-2 to 2-F, Lots 1 through 3, Block 2, Grange Subdivision, and Lots 1 through 4, Block 2, Benedict Annex.

The public hearing concerning pre-application for funds through the Community Development Block Grant program was tabled by councilmen when no one appeared concerning the grant.

Approval of the contract with Metropolitan General Ambulance, Inc. was tabled.

Holidays grim for Italian quake survivors

ROME (AP) — Shepherds play their bagpipes as usual this holiday season in the mountain villages of southern Italy. But the traditional music of Christmas does little to dispel the gloom for the tens of thousands of Italians still shivering in unheated tents one month after their homes were shattered in the sudden fury of an earthquake.

"How can we enjoy ourselves when there are still bodies under the rubble?" asked Giovanni Pionati, mayor of the quake-ravaged town of Avellino.

The holidays will be grim for most survivors of the Nov. 23 quake, despite some progress in government efforts to bring in campers or arrange temporary lodging in buildings for the more than 200,000 left homeless.

Family and friends will miss the nearly 3,000 who died in the tremor — the deadliest in Europe in 65 years. Soldiers and firemen are still digging for at least 71 bodies known to lie beneath shattered buildings.

Hundreds of survivors are suffering from bronchitis, pneumonia or other respiratory ailments brought on by freezing temperatures and winter rains, health officials report. Two children, aged two months and two years, died this week from illnesses blamed on the cold penetrating the tent cities that fill almost every soccer field, public park or other open space east of Naples.

Giuseppe Zamberletti, the government's chief of relief operations, narrowly escaped being fired last week after local mayors complained that he wasn't answering their phone calls or paying attention to their needs.

Despite the problems, relief officials report some progress in moving the homeless out of tents. They don't yet have specific figures, but estimate that in the past two weeks at least 50,000 people have moved into trailers, schools or other public buildings, or homes of relatives or friends. Some officials cautiously predict no one will be living in tents by the end of January.

So far, however, the government's two biggest housing plans for the area have flopped.

Initially Zamberletti wanted to evacuate the homeless to hotels on the coast, with the government paying full room and board. Officials say only 4,000 people have taken advantage of the offer, partly because they fear they won't be able to return to their towns or earn a living in new surroundings.

The government then proposed moving people to empty vacation homes, but only 88 homeowners agreed to hand over their keys.

An estimated 50,000 people have left the area on their own to live with relatives elsewhere in Italy, or in Switzerland or West Germany.

The state is now focusing on efforts to build prefabricated houses in people's own towns, but Zamberletti admitted that even this idea isn't popular.

"They want us to rebuild the homes they had before, but we can't be asked to do the impossible," he told reporters.

Reagan cabinet nears completion

WASHINGTON (AP) — With today's formal selection of Illinois farmer John R. Block as secretary of agriculture, Ronald Reagan is down to one last Cabinet decision — finding an educator to head a department he wants to dismantle.

Block, 45, director of the Illinois Department of Agriculture, arranged to meet with reporters at a news conference today, 24 hours after the president-elect inadvertently disclosed that Block was his choice to head the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Reagan has now filled 15 Cabinet-level jobs, including agriculture and four other positions filled Monday.

The new additions to his Cabinet are former New York Supreme Court Justice Samuel R. Pierce Jr. as secretary of housing and urban development, Georgetown University political science professor Jeane J. Kirkpatrick as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, conservative Colorado attorney James G. Watt as interior secretary, and former South Carolina Gov. James B. Edwards as energy secretary.

Pierce is the only black named to Reagan's Cabinet, while Mrs. Kirkpatrick is the only woman. She also would be the first woman to hold the U.N. post.

Now Reagan has just the post of education secretary to fill — a task complicated by the unwillingness of some prospective candidates to accept a job the president-elect has vowed to eliminate.

Reagan pledged repeatedly during his presidential campaign to do away with the department.

DPS advises extreme caution

Unless holiday travelers use "extreme caution" while driving during the forthcoming holidays, an estimated 95 persons will be slaughtered on Texas highways, Department of Public Safety (DPS) officials say.

Col. Jim Adams, head of the Texas DPS, said an estimated 58 persons would be killed in motor vehicle accidents during the Christmas holiday weekend and another 37 persons would be killed during the New Year Holiday weekend. Both holiday periods are 102 hours long.

The Christmas count starts at 6 p.m. Wednesday and will continue through midnight, Sunday. The New Year holiday count begins at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 31 and ends at midnight, Jan. 4, 1981.

"During both forthcoming major holidays, our traveling public has an opportunity to take advantage of slower speeds while helping our law enforcement officers across Texas reduce the spiraling death toll," Adams said.

"I would certainly urge all drivers to utilize only wise driving habits and caution while on the roadways," he added.

Adams said that during the Christmas holiday period last year, 72 persons were killed in traffic and 43 died in traffic accidents during the New Year's count.

"We don't have to continue suffering the spiraling traffic deaths if drivers use extreme caution in traveling on the streets and highways in Texas," Adams said.

Are you planning to drink and drive this holiday season? If so, remember the "one-for-one" rule.

"It takes your body about one hour to rid itself of the alcohol in one drink. The one-for-one rule simply calls for having no more than one drink per hour and not drinking at all one hour before getting behind the wheel," explained Ray Halverson, the Texas Safety Association vice president for traffic.

One fourth of all traffic fatalities in Texas last year involved intoxicated drivers, Halverson said. DPS statistics show that 926 of the more than 4,000 traffic deaths in 1979 were alcohol-related.

"Use seat belts, too," the safety official said with emphasis. "If you're involved in an accident, they'll reduce your chance of a serious or fatal injury by 60 percent."

According to DPS records, only 47 vehicle occupants wearing seat belts died in Texas traffic accidents in 1979. However, 2,911 persons died while not wearing the safety devices, he said.

Besides restricting your alcohol intake and fastening seat belts, drive defensively to increase safety, the Halverson said. "Looking out for the incorrect actions of other motorists and taking into account road conditions helps keep you out of accidents," he said.

"While on the highway, drive 55 so if you can't avoid a mishap, your chances of surviving the crash will be better. At 70 miles per hour, the odds are one in two that a crash will be fatal. At 55 miles per hour the odds are better — one in 33," Halverson added.

Col. Adams said all available DPS troopers will be on duty throughout both holidays. He said they will join with local officers to place special emphasis on removing drunks and reckless drivers from city streets and highways.

Pampa will observe holiday schedule

Some local businesses will be working on revised schedules due to the Christmas holiday.

Among those businesses with revised schedules:

The Gray County Courthouse offices will be closed Thursday and Friday and will reopen as usual Monday.

The County Clerk's office will be closed Wednesday at noon and will reopen Monday.

The District Probation office will be closed Wednesday at noon and will reopen Monday as usual.

All city offices will be open Friday.

Banks and Savings and Loan institutions in Pampa will be open Friday as usual.

State offices will be closed Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. They will reopen for business Monday.

Federal offices will be closed Friday, however the Post Office will open for business on Friday.

The Lovett Memorial Library will be open Friday for business as usual.

The Pampa News will not publish on Christmas Day but will publish as usual on Friday.

Weather

The forecast calls for fair skies today through Wednesday. Lower temperatures are expected for Wednesday. The high for today will be near 60 with overnight temperatures in the 20s. The high for Christmas eve will be in the 40s. The forecast for Christmas day includes partly cloudy skies and cold temperatures.

Jury picked in Carr trial

CANADIAN - A jury has been selected for the 31st Judicial District trial of 24-year old Robert Carr accused of murdering his uncle, Tommy Carr, in Canadian on April 9.

The State of Texas had rested its case late Monday and the defense is expected start testimony today, according to District Attorney Harold Comer.

Carr was indicted by a Hemphill County Grand Jury on the charge of murder following the shooting.

"The case is expected to go to the jury sometime late today or Wednesday," Comer said.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Dense fog and light drizzle covered much of South Central Texas and the coastal bend early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue travelers advisories because of hazardous driving conditions.

The advisories covered the San Antonio area and the Hill Country as well as other portions of South Central Texas.

Forecasts called for intermittent light rain or drizzle over eastern and southern sections of the state today. Elsewhere skies were to be clear over the western half of the state and cloudy over the eastern half. Highs were to be mostly in the 60s, ranging from the 50s in Northeast Texas to the 70s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy over most of the state early today. Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s, ranging from the 30s in West Texas and Northwest Texas to the 50s and 60s in Southeast Texas and South Texas. Extremes ranged from 26 at Marfa and 29 at Dalhart to 61 at Galveston.

Texas forecasts

North Texas - Partly cloudy west, mostly cloudy east today, becoming mostly cloudy entire area tonight. Turning colder late tonight. Mostly cloudy, windy and cold Wednesday. Highs 55 northeast to 64 southwest. Lows 28 northwest to 42 southeast. Highs Wednesday 32 northwest to 45 southeast.

South Texas - Intermittent light rain or drizzle extreme south through Wednesday. Otherwise mostly cloudy and warmer today, windy and turning colder late tonight and Wednesday. Highs 60s. Lows 40s north, 50s south. Highs Wednesday 50s except 60s extreme south.

West Texas - Fair today, warmer south. Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday, turning colder north tonight. Colder most sections Wednesday. Highs 61 Panhandle to 73 Big Bend. Lows near 20 Panhandle to 37 south. Highs Wednesday 39 Panhandle to 70s Big Bend.

National weather

Cold air spread over the northern Great Plains states, the Great Lakes and New England, with readings below zero in some areas, with precipitation scattered across a wide band of the country.

Snow fell from the northern Rockies to the Great Lakes region, with a traveler's advisory in effect for the northeastern half of Wisconsin.

Light rain spread along the southern Atlantic coast, with freezing rain falling in parts of Georgia, the Carolinas and eastern Virginia.

Bonfire sites carefully guarded

LUTCHER, La. (AP) - Come Christmas Eve, thousands of people will line the banks of the Mississippi River to watch the traditional bonfires lighting the way for Father Christmas.

But this year the tradition is taking on an air of rivalry, and teen-agers are sleeping out in the cold to keep watch over their piles of wood.

"We sleep out no matter what," said 16-year-old David Michel. He and his friend Dan "Ding" Bourgeois, like scores of other youths vying to have the biggest bonfire, are keeping guard over a 12-by-8-foot log cabin so no one lights it on fire before they do.

"We ain't too smart," Michel grinned. "That's what our daddies say. But they used to do the exact same thing we're doing now," Bourgeois added.

A few small fires already are adding a ruddy glow to the full moon's cold light, and the levee soon will be ablaze along a 12-mile stretch of river in southern Louisiana.

About 20 feet away from the teen-agers' cabin is a more traditional woodpile - a teepee-shaped stack of logs, filled with shorter logs, with piles of sugar cane heaped nearby. On Christmas Eve, the cane will be tied upright around the sides as kindling.

It acts as a holiday noisemaker, too, since the cane's air-filled joints explode like firecrackers in the heat.

The dozen teen-agers who built it say it took them two days to cut all the logs and another three to stack them 34 feet high.

Tests may prove ducks poisoned

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - A state game warden says that 500 geese found dead at a playa lake in the northern Panhandle may have been poisoned.

Tests were being conducted at the Texas A&M veterinary diagnostic center in Amarillo to determine what killed the birds while they were in a lake near Etter, about 50 miles north of here.

"Botulism wipes out numbers of ducks now and then, but this is the first goose kill in Moore County," said Brooks, who added that he found several hunters stacking and counting the dead geese when he went out to the lake Thursday.

The hunters told Brooks that they had been at the lake the day before and the goose population had appeared healthy.

Brooks said the tests ruled out cholera as the cause of death and further results are not expected before next week.

About 40,000 to 50,000 Canadian geese migrate to Moore County every winter, Brooks added.

Amarillo quiet on police position

DALLAS (AP) - Carl Thomas, the controversial sheriff of Dallas County, says he has applied for the job of Amarillo police chief, but city officials there won't say if they have received his resume.

"I won't comment on the applications for city police chief," Amarillo City Manager John Stiff said Tuesday when asked about Thomas' application.

The lame duck sheriff told Dallas television station Monday he had sent a resume to Amarillo officials, adding that he had "sent out resumes to several places all over the country."

He said he had been contacted by several people who received his resumes, but said he "wasn't interested in them."

Amarillo Police Chief Lee Spradlin resigned effective Jan. 2 after allegations that his department mishandled several murder investigations in the last year.

Trapp lodge was overdue inspection

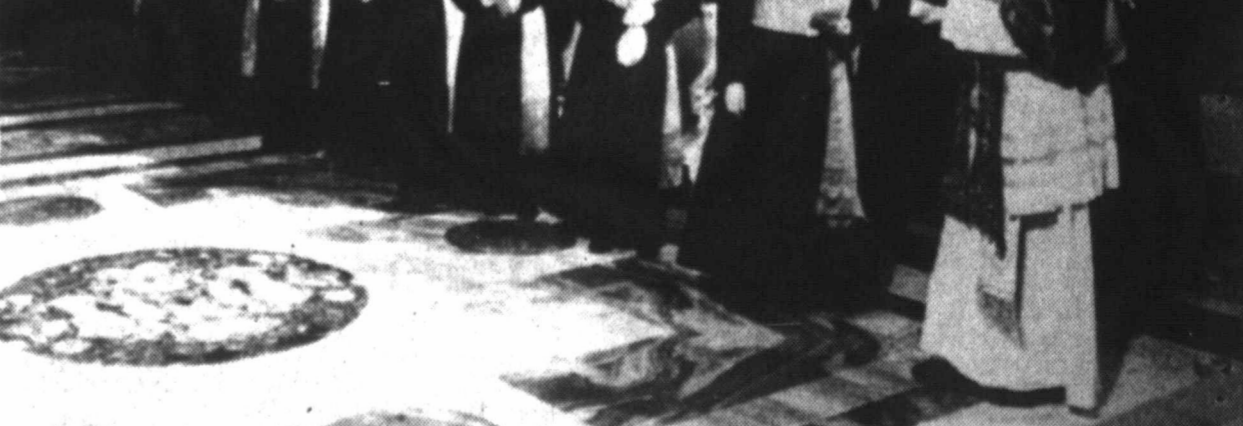

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) - The Trapp Family Lodge, home to the "Sound of Music" family until it was destroyed by fire, had not been inspected for fire code violations in 16 years, state records indicate.

The landmark lodge was last inspected in 1964 by state fire safety officials, and code violations were turned up at that time, according to the records. State officials said they did not know if those violations had been corrected.

A fast-moving blaze enveloped the building early Sunday, killing one guest and forcing 45 others to flee. Another 56 guests from an adjoining building were also evacuated in subzero temperatures.

Vermont Labor and Industry Commissioner Joel Cherington, who is in charge of the state's fire safety program, said the state has three fire inspectors and 40,000 buildings to inspect.

He said the state has no set inspection schedule.

Bomb threat grounds jet

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Eastern Airlines jumbo jet headed for Los Angeles made an emergency landing at Dulles International Airport early today because of an anonymous bomb threat, officials said. No bomb was found.

Nine of the 293 passengers who were evacuated down inflatable rubber slides suffered minor injuries including bruises, scrapes and sprains, Eastern spokeswoman June Farrell said.

Flight 225 was cruising at 33,000 feet en route from New York's Kennedy International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport when the pilot of the Lockheed L-1011 was told of the bomb threat, said David Hess, public affairs officer for the Federal Aviation Administration agency that runs Dulles. The plane landed at Dulles 13 minutes later, at 12:06 a.m. EST, he said.

The passengers were treated at hospitals near Dulles, which is in northern Virginia, 25 miles from Washington.

Reagan road trips call for Mexico visit

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan's first trip abroad to meet with President Jose Lopez Portillo is a strong indication the two want to develop a personal working relationship, American and Mexican diplomats here say.

It is a relationship that Lopez Portillo never managed to achieve with President Carter — and relations between the United States and Mexico have stayed humdrum as a result.

Reagan is scheduled to meet for the day with Lopez Portillo on Jan. 5 at the border city of Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas, Mexican officials said. The main purpose of the meeting is for the two to get to know each other better. Reagan and Lopez Portillo first met when Reagan, while still a presidential candidate, visited Mexico City last year.

The fact that Reagan sought the meeting, his first trip abroad since Election Day, has impressed the Mexicans. "Let's hope it will underscore the importance Mexico really has for the U.S. and vice versa," said one Mexican official who asked anonymity.

Lopez Portillo himself described the coming meeting with Reagan as "a necessary personal relationship with the chief executive not only of the most powerful nation on earth but a neighbor... with whom we have problems."

Among other things, Lopez Portillo is expected to try to convince Reagan that the United States must drop what Mexicans feel is a "big brother" attitude toward this oil-rich nation, something the Mexican president feels he failed to impress upon Carter.

"The chemistry between the two men just wasn't there," said an American diplomat who asked not to be named. "Now, there is every indication Reagan and Lopez Portillo want to develop a personal relationship, and that is always a big plus in relations between two countries."

New oil finds have made Mexico the world's fifth richest oil nation, increasing its strategic importance to the United States and, with it, Mexico's political influence internationally.

"We have already seen signs of a new interest in Mexico in playing an influential role in regional and world affairs," U.S. Ambassador Julian Nava said recently.

"No U.S. administration could ever have ignored the significance of Mexico to our own security," Nava added.

Among other things, the two countries share a sparsely patrolled 1,776-mile border, and are major trading partners.

Under Reagan's new Republican administration, Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda says he expects "the most difficult problems between Mexico and the U.S. to come up... on multilateral regional issues," as a result of Mexico's more assertive international role.

Mexicans are particularly worried by reports that Reagan will be more aggressive in opposing growing leftist movements in Central America and the Caribbean, two areas in which Mexico recently developed an interest.

It recently joined Venezuela in an agreement guaranteeing the oil needs of Central American and Caribbean countries, financed by long-term, low-interest loans to help their sagging economies. Mexico wants no forceful U.S. political intervention in the area, or at least it wants to be consulted before the United States takes any action, Castaneda indicated.

Mexico is resisting a Reagan trial idea for a North American common market with the United States and Canada. Trade among the three countries is hitting all-time highs, and the Mexicans are afraid U.S. technology will absorb them.

More than two-thirds of Mexico's exports go to the United States, making it the third biggest trading partner after Canada and Japan. It is the principal U.S. supplier of silver, zinc, gypsum, antimony, mercury, bismuth, selenium, barium, rhenium and lead and a major supplier of winter vegetables and fruit. Total trade between the two countries went up from $13 billion in 1978 to $19 billion in 1979 and is going up another 55 percent this year.

Also recently, Mexico resisted pressure from the Carter administration to join the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs and lower its import barriers to cheaper foreign-made goods. The Mexicans say they are determined to protect their developing industries.

Mexico similarly refused to raise its oil production or increase current sales of 650,000 barrels of crude oil and 300 million cubic feet of natural gas to the United States, because of fears the additional income will worsen inflation at home.

The large number of Mexicans settling illegally in the United States is another major problem that has been souring relations between the two countries for decades.

An average 800,000 Mexicans a year are caught crossing the border illicitly and returned. The number of so-called Mexican "illegals" living in the United States has been variously estimated at 3 million to 6 million.

Talks between Mexican and American officials have been going on for years, but Mexico has persistently refused to curb the flow of "illegals" because of its economic and population pressures.

Mexico's population of 65 million is growing 2.9 percent annually, and government planners estimate the country must provide 850,000 new jobs every year just to keep up with new jobseekers.

"No matter what restrictive measures you may adopt, the United States will continue to absorb for some time to come part of our excess population," a Mexican official said.

Airman cleared of charge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today threw out a 1959 theft conviction against a California man who went on to an impressive Air Force career.

Edward Armijo, now living in Sacramento, Calif., was an $85-per-month airman when he and another man were fined $100 for breaking into a coin-operated machine. Theodore Hargrove, Armijo's lawyer, said Armijo got no money in the theft.

Hargrove said Armijo paid the fine, and continued on a 20-year Air Force career that ended in 1979. Armijo's last assignment was as adjutant superintendent at the Strategic Air Command in Omaha, Neb.

"After he retired from the Air Force he went to apply for a job and the application asked whether he had even been convicted of a crime," Hargrove said today in a telephone interview.

Inspectors accused of popping pills fired from Texas job site

HOUSTON (AP) — A Brown & Root Inc. official says five quality control inspectors at the South Texas Nuclear Project were fired or resigned for taking pep pills on the job.

Knox M. Broom, a senior vice president for the prime contractor on the $2.7 billion project under construction near Bay City, said lie detector tests were used during the two-week investigation last spring and no evidence was found that the use of amphetamines affected safety or proper construction.

"We looked carefully for any improper performance by them on the job and just couldn't find any," Broom said.

Because of quality control problems, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission fined Houston Lighting & Power, and project's major partner, $100,000 and ordered the firm to show cause why construction permits should not be revoked. The NRC later said there had been a complete turnaround on quality control and construction was allowed to continue.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Significance of Sri Lanka

In select locations around the globe, people seem to be awakening to the idea that an enterprise economy is good for the great masses.

One of the latest and most striking turnarounds is occurring in Sri Lanka, an island nation in the Indian Ocean that was once known as Ceylon. Until the election of Junius Richard Jayewardene as president in 1977, Sri Lanka had been committed to state socialism, and its economic statistics reflected the mire in which it immersed itself. Production in the indigenous industries, tea and rubber, plummeted after they were nationalized; economic growth ground nearly to a halt and unemployment rose to 24 percent, according to a Los Angeles Times report. The nation came to be an international symbol of how a blessed society could self-destruct through statism.

Indeed, Sri Lanka's heritage is an unusual one among Third World countries. As in neighboring India, the people are widely schooled, and free, democratic elections have been held in an atmosphere of political stability. Nonetheless, the economy was in ruins when Jayewardene took over.

His revival plan for Sri Lanka has been to get government largely out of the way and allow private companies, mostly large Western firms, to move in. In a trial free-trade zone, 50 foreign-owned businesses have created 9,000 jobs, and Motorola is about to fill 2,600 more to produce semiconductors. The national rejuvenation is still in its early stages and a number of rough spots have been evident, but the script for the nation parallels that already written in Taiwan, South Korea and Singapore, all economic success stories. If Sri Lanka can follow their lead while maintaining political freedom that they lack, it stands to become a jewel in the midst of a region of poverty. The stark contrast that would then exist between two countries that achieved independence from Britain in the same year, Sri Lanka and India, would serve as a constant reminder to the underdeveloped world of what is possible when the marketplace is turned loose.

The power of the people

A black banker expressing his pleasure at Reagan's election recently reminded me of a truth that's easy to ignore or even forget in the excitement over elections, transitions, new cabinet speculations and inaugural preparations.

Alvin J. Boutte, president of the Independence Bank of Chicago, the nation's largest black-owned bank, commented that the economic development of the inner cities will progress, regardless of who is president, though noting that Carter's economic programs had stifled that progress.

That's an important insight. The economic development of the country will continue as it always has - as the result of the needs and efforts of millions of individuals who want to improve themselves and search for ways to do it. Progress is the result of millions of individual decisions, thousands of agreements, thousands of transactions.

Government can influence economic progress, for better or for worse. It can slow it down by passing bad laws, imposing high taxes. But it can't stifle it altogether, because it grows out of the needs of people, and people will find a way to meet their needs. There will be setbacks and shortcomings, but people find a way to survive in almost any environment. Even in totalitarian countries black markets flourish, providing for the needs of the people despite government edicts.

We believe that policies and laws can be improved so that people can improve their conditions more easily. We'll continue to suggest changes in government policies that we think will give the people more freedom and flexibility to do the things they really want to do for themselves.

But we think it's important once in a while to step back and acknowledge the power that individuals and groups of people have to build prosperity independently of government edicts and programs. Administrations may come and go; power may change hands in Washington and Austin. But the strength of this country lies in the strength and independence of free people pursuing full and satisfying lives in their own ways.

First things first

It is significant that President-elect Reagan and his chief advisors are concentrating their attention on the country's economic problems, which they clearly consider to be more urgent just now than defense and foreign-policy challenges.

Tax and budget strategies for the new administration were mapped at the recent economic summit conference in Los Angeles that brought Ronald Reagan together with some 15 economic advisers. Their specific recommendations have not been published, but the unofficial word is that broad tax cuts will head the list of initiatives the administration plans immediately after inauguration day on Jan. 20. In reaffirming his campaign pledges, Reagan has said he plans to "hit the ground running."

Thus it appears the incoming administration has decided against wait-and-see gradualism in favor of a more audacious approach. This in turn suggests a tilt toward supply side economics over the traditional, which is to say that the free enterprise system will be freed up from some burdens of federal taxes and regulations to produce more goods and eventually even more tax revenues.

The Reagan administration is probably right in planning a vigorous, audacious economic strategy. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who won a surprise landslide election on a conservative platform, is in serious difficulty because her gradual approach to economic reform invited debate, delay, compromises and tax trade-offs that translated bold programs into even higher taxes and inflation. Another example to profit from is Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark's short-lived Conservative government last year which offered only painful austerity instead of growth.

Indeed, economic audacity may be Reagan's only hope of reining in runaway federal spending that bounded $157 billion beyond budget estimates in just 13 months - $36 billion since June, mostly in increased transfer payments brought on by the recession. Only the strongest medicine can deal with such an affliction.

Subsidized jobs for youths

By William Steif

Half the nation's 8 million jobless are 16 to 24. Among white youths, the jobless rate is 15 percent, among Hispanic youths, 22 percent, among black youths, 40 percent. In some cities, half the minority youths are jobless.

One idea for sopping up this jobless pool is the sub-minimum wage; teen-agers would be paid about two-thirds of the federal minimum wage.

But before the incoming Reagan administration and Congress rush into a low-pay tier for minority youths, thus creating an underclass akin to Arab workers in France, someone ought to take a look at an experiment on which the U.S.

Labor Department has spent $230 million over the last three years.

It's called the Youth Incentive Entitlement Pilot Projects Demonstration and was first sponsored by congressional Republicans.

William Grinker, president of a non-profit New York outfit called Manpower Demonstration Research Corp., explained that the experiment tried to:

—Link schooling and guaranteed jobs for youths 16 to 19.

—Set standards in school work and attendance that would keep youths in school longer, and so make them more employable over the long haul.

The basic lure in all this was job subsidies to private and public employers. The subsidies ran up to 100 percent of the minimum wage, though they tailed off as time went by. From spring 1978 through last July, $1,000 youths from poverty-level families worked at these subsidized jobs.

Half the employers were in the private for-profit sector, though, only a quarter of the employed youths worked for these businesses. It turned out that only one business in five would take these youths - big businesses didn't want them at all. Only small firms would take a chance on one or two at a time. Grinker thinks this was advantageous, because the youths got better supervision in small firms. But this also makes one wonder just how well a subminimum wage would sop up our pool of jobless youngsters.

Outside the private for-profit sector, the youths were evenly split among non-profit private groups, schools and other public agencies.

The 81,000 youngsters were signed up through "prime sponsors" - local or state agencies - from 17 sites. There were first seven big prime sponsors, Baltimore, Boston, Cincinnati, Denver, Detroit, two Seattle-area counties, a swath of southern Mississippi counties. These seven enrolled the bulk of the 81,000. Ten more sponsors, from Philadelphia to Albuquerque, came in later.

The agencies, monitored by Grinker's outfit, dredged up jobs and then recruited 16- to 19-year-olds for the jobs. The youths got part-time jobs in the school year, full-time summer jobs. Their part of the bargain was either to stay in school or return to school if they'd already dropped out.

By matching the Baltimore, Cincinnati, Denver and Mississippi groups with four "control" areas where the program didn't exist, Grinker's staff found:

—More than 36 percent of the school dropouts returned to school in the experiment; without the program just more than 22 percent would have returned.

—Youths who were in school at the program's start stayed in school in greater numbers than they would have without the experiment.

—57 percent of all eligible youths participated, 50 percent of eligible Hispanic youths, only 17 percent of white youths; Grinker says the low white participation is because whites have "other options."

About $3,000 per youth was spent on the experiment, 70 percent for wages.

Grinker is continuing the follow-up. He says that if the program went nationwide it'd cost $1.1 billion, about the same as the "city" the Air Force wants to build in the Nevada desert to base the MX missile system.

But Grinker doesn't advocate pushing this idea nationally all at once. He's seen too many anti-poverty nostrums fail. Instead, he thinks a slow extension would be better.

If you want to know more, write Publications Department, Manpower Demonstration Research Corp., 3 Park Ave., New York, NY 10016. You can phone Grinker or his staff at 212-532-3200. And you might ask them what they think about the sub-minimum wage idea.

Harassment in the office

by ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON--The most prevalent office sexual harassment right now takes place at office parties during the holiday season.

Vandermeer told me about a party they held at Consolidated Grommets last week. "I never saw anything like it," he said. "Zelda Blackstone slapped Harvey Firth in the kisser because she said he was harassing her."

"Was he?"

"I think so. But Zelda was really mad because Charlie Rollerdex in Sales wasn't harassing her instead."

"Then Zelda has nothing against office harassment per se?"

"No. If she doesn't like the guy, she calls it harassing. If she does like him, and he makes a pass at her, she calls it romance. The trouble is if the one guy she likes doesn't make a pass at her, then she gets sore at anyone else who does."

"So who was Charlie harassing?"

"He was all over Clara Southworthy in Accounting, but I'm not sure he was harassing her. At least she didn't complain when he took off with her toward the mailroom."

"Where were you?"

"I was harassing a little blonde in the typing pool, but then Colfax joined us and she decided she'd rather be harassed by him. Colfax has a reputation for harassing anything in a skirt."

"I'm glad I don't work in a big office," I said.

"I then went over to the bar and found Miss Featherstone, the boss' secretary, on her fourth vodka. She was a different person from the one I had seen before. She said she hated harassment in the office, but she wouldn't mind if we went to her place after the party. Then she had another vodka and passed out."

"Lucky for you. She could have pressed charges with the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission."

"I thought of that. It's pretty tricky in a big company about who you harass and who you don't. George Kilbride thought he was getting signals from Lila Peabody in Research and Development. So he approached her at the party and asked her to dance, and she started screaming her head off. She said George just wanted to dance with her because she was a woman. She said he'd never treat a man in the office like that."

"He probably wouldn't. Did you calm her down?"

"I think I did. I explained to her that people lose their heads at Christmas office parties and they'll dance with anybody."

"Did she accept that?"

"Not really. She said she wanted to be promoted on her merits and not who she danced with. I told her if she danced with me, her reputation would be safe because I had nothing to do with promotions in Research and Development."

"Did anyone else get harassed?"

"Lots of people, but as the evening wore on no one was making a big deal of it, except Mary Kelly in Computers. She was crying because she had been with the company five years and she had never been harassed once. Then she started taking off her clothes."

"That must have lived up things."

"It had just the opposite effect. Corngold in Personnel threw a tablecloth over her because he was afraid that when she sobered up she'd sue the company for a million dollars."

"But no one harassed her when she took off her clothes?"

"No, that's why he was afraid she'd sue the company."

"What time did the party break up?"

"They closed the bar at 9 o'clock. Gelman, the president, said that those who wanted to continue their harassment would have to go somewhere else or wait until next year."

"Did you strike out?"

"I'm afraid I did. By the time I made my move, anything worth harassing had been spoken for."

Shall we kill the goose?

By Oscar Cooley

The United States of America was built on free enterprise. That is not a platitude; it is a memorable fact.

The United States is now in grave danger of falling into a long decline because of a shift away from freedom into regimented enterprise. American society is being politicized. While, a generation ago, it was assumed that economic expansion would be undertaken and carried out by private business firms, now Americans turn to government to take over the big jobs.

An example is the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation, a creature of Congress which has been mandated by that body to oversee production of substitutes for gasoline. Speaking on Meet the Press, John C. Sawhill said that although President-elect Reagan has branded this agency as government intrusion into the private sector, he will probably retain it.

When our country's history clearly demonstrates the creativeness and dynamism of private firms, why do we not abandon privatism and embrace statism? Has it been such a howling success in Great Britain, Poland, Sweden, Soviet Russia?

So successful has capitalism been that most Americans, compared to other peoples, live high on the hog. We have grown used to producing and consuming hugely. This requires a great deal of energy.

When, a few years ago, foreign producers of petroleum became conscious of approaching exhaustion of that excellent fuel and raised its price sharply, we were jolted into realizing how much we depend on it. So we began to conserve.

Looking still further ahead, we began to consider producing substitutes. This loomed as such a large order that we turned to government, which is supposed to have unlimited money and muscle.

Even in 1973, when the oil price took its first leap, Washington became oil-conscious. Congress and the President must act, it was said. Controls were slapped on the oil companies. Their "windfall" profits were taxed. The left-wingers screamed that big oil was lord-ing over the little consumer. He must be protected.

The protection theorists forget that under free enterprise, the consumer, little and big, is protected by his freedom to buy what, when and where he will, and that sellers, whether the corner grocer or General Motors, have no power to force him to patronize them.

If Exxon and Mobilil are big, it is because they have been successful in satisfying consumers. Those firms that have not given satisfaction have been weeded out by competition. To continue big and profitable, a firm must continue to satisfy people, who are all the time looking for better buys.

Contrast this with government-run business - socialism. Behind all government projects lies the taxing power - that is, the privilege of requisitioning money for every need. The project is launched with tax money. It may sell for a price and amass income, but if at any time its outgo exceeds its income, it can dip into the tax bill to keep afloat. This privilege, the assurance of subsidy, makes it unnecessary for the project to be efficient. This is the Number 1 cause of government waste.

Further, if the project succeeds and revenue accumulates, it rewards no risk-takers, for there are none. It goes into the general treasury, or is wasted on some bureaucrat's pet extravagance. It does not perform the function of profits. The hope of it does not move people to do their best, nor does its achievement reward those who have done so.

Some are beguiled into supporting public services in the belief that civil servants will sense their duty to the community and burn the midnight oil for the public good. Splendid, to the extent this occurs. But can it be depended on? Is there evidence that people will be this public-spirited, consistently?

There is ample evidence that private enterprise harnesses self-interest, continuously. Shall we kill the goose that has laid the golden eggs all these years?

"We want to take out a second mortgage on our house so we can blow it all on Christmas presents."

Bush pledges administration sensitivity to minority needs

HOUSTON (AP) — Vice President-elect George Bush, trying to remove any remnants of campaign rhetoric, promised black leaders the Reagan administration would be sensitive to minority needs but warned its goals would not be compromised.

"Governor Reagan and I were elected to take this country in a certain direction. We were elected to achieve objectives like more jobs, less inflation, more home ownership," Bush told 800 people attending a dinner in his honor Monday at Texas Southern University, a predominantly-black, state-supported college.

In a news conference prior to the dinner, Bush said the appointment of black attorney Samuel Pierce as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development gives the Reagan cabinet a "broad representation and enables members to adhere to what we hope will be a pattern of excellence."

When asked about reports that the American hostages in Iran were being abused, Bush said that if true, they would represent "only more evidence the Iranians don't respect international law."

The dinner was sponsored by the Professional United Leadership League, Inc., a non-profit organization formed by professional athletes to meet the needs of Houston's youths.

Attending the gathering were Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Art Fletcher, former Assistant Secretary of Labor and a member of the United Nations General Assembly delegation.

Bush said the incoming administration seeks help from minorities solve domestic problems.

"But," he cautioned, "don't bring up the Democratic national platform and tell us this is the only way we can do business. We were elected to do something else."

"Our lines of communications are open, there is no static on the lines. We may disagree but we want to go the same place. We have a steadfast common interest in getting to that place."

The vice president-elect acknowledged the need for federal programs to assist Americans — particularly minorities — but he said local programs best attuned to solving local problems must be allowed to flourish.

"The point is whatever we do at the federal level must not discourage the people that want to help at the local level. Some things can be bought, some things can be paid for — supposedly by federal money — but not all things," he said.

The Reagan administration will strive to be "sensitized and tuned in to our Bill of Rights, with the American dream out there for all to work for and achieve," Bush said.

He also told the group the new administration recognized the need for better education and the preservation of black institutions to help solve problems confronting minorities.

"The traditions of shared culture are strong and noble traditions," he added. "The quest for excellence can indeed be fulfilled in our great black institutions."

GSA advocates economy planning for Southwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diversification of the energy-dominated economy of the Southwest could prevent trouble in the future when resources run out, says a federal report.

"Although the Southwest region currently is fiscally and economically healthy, troublesome trends strongly indicate that long-range planning is needed," the General Accounting Office study said.

The report suggested that little attention is being paid to the need to plan for diversification because rising energy prices are stimulating the regional economy and bringing additional revenues to state treasuries.

"With rising energy prices, the region's potential overdependence on this industry is masked by current economic prosperity," the report said.

The study examined the state budgets and economies of Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma and the federal planning agencies that have made funds available to local and state governments.

"Our basic message is that the several, existing federal planning assistance programs should include a focus on potential fiscal and economic base dislocations in the Southwest stemming from declining petroleum production and reserves levels," the report said.

As an example, it pointed to the economic troubles that New England ran into after the textile industry relocated to the South.

"To a large extent, a region's long-term fiscal and economic vitality and resiliency depend upon diversification," the study said. "Appropriate means exist for encouraging diversification through planning decisions and policies."

The study added that federal planning agencies could urge the state and the region to emphasize planning, even though most of the decisions take place below the federal level.

The study said Congress should be interested in the issue because massive federal aid eventually could be needed to help the Southwest — just as New York City needed help in the last decade — if the potential problems are not avoided.

"By encouraging long-term planning, the federal government can help to avert problems in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana resulting from diminishing, non-renewable oil and gas resources," the report said.

It noted that Texas Gov. Bill Clements recently started a comprehensive planning project to pinpoint the state's requirements for the year 2000.

"Two issues already identified as needing attention are the long-range consequences of shifts in the composition of Texas' economy and the impacts of declining oil and gas reserves on state revenues," the report said.

Of the three states examined, Louisiana was the most dependent on oil and gas revenue, with almost $33 collected per person for each $1,000 of state personal income. The figure was $15 for Texas and $14 for Oklahoma.

Petroleum and related industries represented 7 percent of Texas employment in 1977 and 11 percent of its payroll.

Eccentric woman found to be a millionaire

NEW YORK (AP) — Beatrice Bauer, 66, spent nearly 20 years living in a succession of rooming houses, subways and a garage before she was found in Grand Central Station, dehydrated and suffering from malnutrition.

But she was heir to a fortune, and now a court official is charging that her $3.7 million estate is being mishandled.

Special Guardian William Goodstein says he is fighting to give the woman "a chance to live a more fulfilling life."

The woman is the daughter of the late Arthur Bauer, a pharmacist who liquidated his drug stores and invested in the Defiance Button Machine Co. of Queens.

His wife inherited his estate when he died in 1945, and she passed it on in 1951 to her daughter, who has no brothers or sisters and never married.

Miss Bauer spent her life in the family apartment near Columbia University until she was evicted in the early 1960s because of a Health Department complaint. She had many cats and dogs in the apartment, some of them dead.

She apparently bounced from rooming house to rooming house, and her last known residence was a Manhattan garage.

Despite her eccentric lifestyle, she attended a board meeting of the Defiance company as late as 1977.

Found in the train station two years ago, she told doctors she had been sleeping in the subways for three days.

She was declared incompetent, and two conservators were appointed to handle her affairs. The courts placed her in the Sunnydale Home for Adults in Mamaroneck, and she was transferred last fall to the Garnerville Home near Haverstraw.

Found to be schizophrenic, she received no psychiatric assistance or treatment at Garnerville, charged Goodstein, who was appointed on October to check her conservatorship.

"Frankly, I was stunned at that information," he said in court papers.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. is playing Santa Claus to 25,000 blind, retarded and handicapped children this year.

Each of the youngsters will receive an electronic Simon computer game this Christmas, courtesy of Davis, who is blind in one eye himself.

Davis contracted with the Milton Bradley Co. of Springfield, Mass., to deliver the games, worth about $500,000, to Therapeutic Living Center for the Blind in Pasadena, of which he is a director. The games are being distributed to 5,000 children in San Francisco, 5,000 in New York City and 15,000 in the Los Angeles area.

The Simon toys make ideal gifts for handicapped youngsters, said the center's founder, Bernice Pearlman.

"They light up brightly and many of the children who are legally (but not totally) blind can see them," she said. "For the others (the totally blind), they have different sounds and the kids can make tunes out of them; they learn counting, they learn all kinds of things."

ATLANTA (AP) — Work on President Carter's return to Georgia is being held up while the White House decides exactly where it wants Carter's new office.

Federal workers will have to allocate, partition, paint and furnish space in the government's Richard B. Russell Building in downtown Atlanta for Carter and his staff. But so far, Carter's staff hasn't told the General Services Administration which floor of the Russell building it wants to use.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Henry Fonda, hospitalized for two weeks for tests of a new medication used in conjunction with a heart pacemaker, will probably be leaving Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in a few days, says hospital spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon.

She said the 75-year-old actor was "feeling better" Monday, and that "he probably won't be here much longer."

"His doctor said a few days," she added.

Fonda had a pacemaker implanted in 1974. The hospital has said that the actor was not ill.

Runaway car flies through living room

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Arthur York knew there was going to be trouble when the headlights of a car flashed across his living room wall. He grabbed his wife and ducked as the car, airborne, "went right over the top of us."

"It sounded like a stick of dynamite" when the car tore through the Yorks' living room, he said. "I don't ever want to hear that again."

The incident occurred late Sunday when a car plowed off the highway, down a small snowy embankment and up a rise into the house.

The car blasted through the front left corner of the house, tearing away the living room walls, and crashed to a rest about 15 feet away, on the far side of the Yorks' driveway.

Police identified the driver as 34-year-old Thomas D. Jones of Augusta. He suffered a broken back and head and internal injuries and was in guarded condition after surgery Monday.

According to police, Jones was driving east on the road outside the York house when his car left the road on a curve and shot into the air.

York and his wife, Barbara, had just put their two sons to bed and were in the small living room when York saw the headlights.

"When the lights flashed on the wall, it was over farther on the picture than usual," York said, adding, "I got the old lady on the floor" and covered her body with his own.

Rusk juvenile area closed

TYLER (AP) — Attorneys for three teen-agers formerly committed to Rusk State Hospital say a federal judge's order moving the mentally retarded juvenile offenders program to community facilities in Fort Worth was a "step in the right direction."

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice Monday shifted the program from the state mental institution to the Fort Worth State School community treatment centers while he studies a class action lawsuit that alleges residents of the juvenile facility at Rusk have been sexually abused and forced to live in a "prison-like" environment.

"This (Justice's order) is a substantial step in the right direction," said Renea Hicks, staff attorney for Advocacy Inc., in Austin, one of two legal organizations that filed the suit on behalf of three boys formerly in the program.

"Of course, we will have to see how the (Fort Worth) program works, but moving it to a community setting is a substantial improvement."

Justice ordered the ten teenagers in the program moved Jan. 9 while he studies the suit, filed last April by the Austin group and East Texas Legal Services. Lawyers with the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation agreed to the move.

"It would be fair to say that almost all of the legal issues involved in the suit are still pending," said J. Michael Ball, an attorney with East Texas Legal Services in Nacogdoches.

Ball said Justice's order provides a "partial remedy" to the students now in the juvenile offender program, but does not address the constitutional question of whether mentally retarded juveniles have the right to be treated in community-based programs rather than be committed to institutions.

The suit alleges that the state hospital at Rusk is not "appropriate" for mentally retarded youngsters because they are not being treated in "the least restrictive environment."

Publishers protest proposed electronic information plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas newspaper publishers say Ma Bell should tend to the phone lines and not get involved in the business of sending information over those lines to special home television screens.

The Texas Daily Newspaper Association asked the Public Utility Commission on Monday to stop an AT&T plan to test its "Electronic Information Service," a home information system to be tested here beginning in June.

The test would include outfitting 600 homes and 40 businesses with television screens at no charge. The screens would be equipped to display advertising, phone listings and other information, but not news, according to Southwestern Bell. Keyboards would be used to retrieve specific information — mostly advertising — from the system.

A PUC staff member approved the experiment, but John Murphy, TDNA executive vice president, said the official did not realize the possible effects of the program.

TDNA filed a motion with PUC asking that permission for the test be rescinded. Publishers also want a public hearing on the matter.

"If AT&T is permitted to achieve what we believe it seeks to achieve in Austin, it will be in a very, very dominating position in the future of telecommunications," Murphy told a news conference.

"The phone company has no business in the world doing anything more than it originally went into business for," he said.

Newspapers and other businesses are expected to get involved in the pending home information system boom. Some newspapers already are testing such systems, using Bell phone lines.

There are predictions that home screen systems could someday replace the daily newspaper.

The publishers claim it is unfair for AT&T to get involved, because AT&T controls phone lines and equipment and could price competitors out of the business.

"Legislative, regulatory and judicial bodies in this country concur in the conclusion that this market must be protected from the stranglehold that would be created if the owner and operator of the monopoly network used for public transmission of this data also engaged in the business of generating and processing of the data for transmission," the TDNA motion said.

A Bell release said EIS would provide "not only yellow and white pages directory information and government agency telephone listings, but also an assortment of other useful consumer information and shopping services, as well as stored personal numbers."

Murphy said Bell wants "not only to own and control" the communications equipment, "but they want to be the provider of information that other media should properly be providing."

Austin lawyer Earnest Casstevens, representing TDNA, said previous federal court decisions bar Bell from getting into the home information business.

Murphy said Bell wants to use the Austin test as a legal precedent for establishing such services nationwide.

"They want the sanction of PUC, and once they get that we know they would go back to Congress and the Federal Communications Commission and say, 'What you are telling us we can't do, Texas is telling us we can do,'" Murphy said.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Dale Johnson denied any long-range plan beyond the Austin experiment.

Proposal would cut care for retarded

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Board of Human Resources has approved a proposal that private health-care providers claim would run them out of business and is a "step backward" in the care of mentally retarded persons.

The board tentatively adopted a staff recommendation Monday to remove certain types of care for the mentally retarded from Medicaid coverage.

The proposal encourages the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to seek "alternative funding," which could lead to legislative debate over whether the state should pick up almost all costs.

Acting Commissioner Marlin Johnston of the Department of Human Resources stressed, however, the board decision is not final.

Deputy Commissioner Merle Springer said expenses for intermediate care services exceeded appropriations by $7.4 million in the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 and is expected to exceed appropriations for the current fiscal year by $14.1 million.

Even larger increases are projected for 1982-83.

"Twice this fiscal year we have had to make adjustments to accommodate increases," said Springer. "At some point in time we will not have enough funds to bail out the program."

The DHR staff proposal encourages MHMR to seek other money for people who have "mild to moderate" retardation and are receiving pre-vocational training in hopes they can become more independent.

The staff said alternative funding would allow DHR to remove Medicaid coverage for this category of care, effective Sept. 1. This would stop the flow of federal dollars, which now pay for half the program.

Spencer McClure, director of special programs for MHMR, said eliminating Medicaid payments "would almost stop it (the mentally retarded program) in its tracks. ... Taking it out of Medicaid concerns us very gravely."

Series finale could shock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anyone who's seen any of Jonathan Miller's 13-part PBS series on the human body, "The Body in Question," won't be surprised that in tonight's final episode, Miller considers death in a most forthright manner, without euphemisms.

But even the steadiest Miller fans, accustomed to his off-hand style while probing livers and spleens, might flinch a bit. Tonight, Miller and a colleague open a corpse. They squeeze the liquid-filled lungs of the departed fellow, carve up his liver, slice into his heart.

This "is neither frightening or repulsive," Miller assures. "It's simply a necessary part of our medical knowledge." Miller makes a post-mortem seem like a grand mystery, repeatedly emphasizing that only in death can "the causes of pain, decay and disability in life be observed in minute detail... so, in the history of medicine, it was only possible to understand the ordeals of the living after we'd made the decision to open the dead." Idly chatting as they remove and inspect the corpse's organs, Miller and his pathologist pal indulge in a little pathologist's humor. Miller notes that the deceased's liver was enlarged, but it wasn't quite the classic "nutmeg liver." "For some reason," he notes, "pathologists seem to have this." "Tendency to name things after food," his friend adds. "Yes," says Miller, "a whole meal can be had." By this time, you've either agreed that there's nothing frightening or repulsive about this business, or you're wiped out by the sight of two guys digging around in the innards of a stiff. It is a fascinating, instructive conclusion to a surprisingly compelling series. However, I, for one, didn't hang around for dessert. "I. Claudius," that extraordinary BBC work that made a couple of rounds on public TV, will come to commercial American television next year. Anne Bancroft is host on the acclaimed 13-part series.

Masked robbers hit Seguin

SEGUIN, Texas (AP) — Two Austin men have been arrested in connection with an armed robbery Monday at the First National Bank of Seguin, FBI officials said.

FBI agents arrested two men Monday night in Austin and both were jailed pending arraignment Tuesday on federal bank robbery charges, said an FBI spokesman in San Antonio.

Two masked men, one reportedly armed with a machine gun, escaped with an undetermined amount of cash about noon Monday, officials said.

The gunmen had approached two tellers at the bank's personal services facility and demanded that the women put cash in a sheet the robbers brought with them, said Seguin Police Sgt. Mike Rosas.

The FBI and Texas Rangers joined Seguin police in investigating the robbery while the Department of Public Safety and lawmen in nearby San Antonio, San Marcos and Austin were alerted to be on the lookout for the bandits.

A Department of Public Safety bulletin said one of the bandits was wearing a black mask and cowboy boots, while the other had on a western-style jacket.

PRISON BACK IN MAXIMUM SECURITY HOSPITAL

AUSTIN (AP) — A man who claims to be Jesus Christ and who was accused of disemboweling and dismembering an Austin car salesman is back in the maximum-security Rusk State Hospital after six weeks at Austin State Hospital.

William Craig Riley was transferred here Nov. 1 after Rusk psychiatrists decided he was no longer "manifestly dangerous."

Riley was sent back to Rusk Thursday after a hearing.

"They simply don't have the security here," said Phil Nelson, first assistant district attorney. "To say this guy is not manifestly dangerous kind of scares you."

Riley, 29, was first sent to Rusk in February after a jury found him mentally incompetent to stand trial for the slaying of car salesman Jack Cooney III.

Cooney disappeared Nov. 30, 1976, while taking a man to test drive a Volkswagen van. His body—minus head, hands and legs—was found Dec. 3 on a sand bar in the Brazos River near Hearne.

TEXAS REHAB EARNS TURKEY AWARD

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of Texans concerned about the cost of government has awarded its Texas 13 Turkey Award to the Texas Rehabilitation Commission.

Texas 13, a non-profit group headed by former Attorney General Waggoner Carr, cited TRC on Monday for sending 38 employees to a Louisville convention in August.

Texans paid $19,067 to send the TRC employees — from secretaries to the commissioner — to Kentucky for the National Rehabilitation Association meeting.

The expenditure brought a letter from the governor's office, expressing "concern about commission policies."

Carr's group called the $19,067 expenditure "an outstanding example of wasteful spending."

ONE DIES IN BARROOM BRAWL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — One bystander was killed and another was wounded in a barroom fight Sunday night.

Police identified the dead man as Manuel Bazar, 64, owner of the Early Bird Lounge.

Adelia Reyes, 32, was listed in stable condition at Bexar County Hospital with a gunshot wound in the left shoulder.

The two were shot about 7 p.m. Sunday during a fight between Arthur Navarro, 35, and another man, police said. Navarro was listed in poor condition at the same hospital with stab and slash wounds of the face, chest and abdomen.

Police said they were searching for the man who allegedly stabbed Navarro. They said a friend of Navarro's fired the shots that struck the bystanders in an attempt to shoot the man wielding the knife.

Officers said the incident started with an argument over a game of pool.

CHILD ASPHYXIATES

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Investigators are blaming asphyxiation for the death of a 21-month-old girl who was found dead in a sweltering apartment with her unconscious parents Sunday night.

Regina Roxanne Ortiz was found dead in her crib and investigators said she apparently died of asphyxiation caused by a bathroom heater that was burning on high without sufficient venting in the small apartment.

The child's parents Joe Ortiz, 21, and Josie Ortiz, 17, were in intensive care at Southeast Baptist Hospital.

The child's grandfather, Refugio Bustos, 46, broke a window and found the victims late Sunday after unsuccessfully trying to contact the family all day.

WOMAN ESCAPES BLAZE

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An elderly woman jumped to safety through the only unbarred window in her house Sunday night to escape a blaze which started when her Christmas tree caught fire.

Mrs. Arthur R. Garza, 64, said she was washing dishes in her kitchen about 10 p.m. when she heard a noise that sounded like an explosion in the living room. She spotted flames coming from her Christmas tree and tried to put them out with a pan of water and a dish towel, she told investigators.

"The flames just got bigger. The lights went out and I tried to call the operator, but the fire was spreading and I had to get out," she said.

Mrs. Garza said she crawled out a rear window, the only window without burglar bars in the seven-room house.

Acting District Fire Chief Arthur Ramirez estimated damage at $40,000.

Texas motorists meet compliance

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas motorists, thanks to a change in the way federal officials manipulate speed limit data, now meet the minimum compliance rate required to avoid a $7 million penalty.

The state came into compliance Monday when officials plugged the numbers into the new formula sent down from Washington. Under the old formula the Texas compliance rate was 34 percent, below the required 40 percent.

However, those same numbers add up to a 43 percent compliance rate in the new formula, which takes into account possible speedometer error of 5 mph.

The revised formula was passed down to the state by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Federal Highway Administration.

"This gives us another year's grace," said Gene Sparks, assistant chief engineer of safety and maintenance operations for the state highway department.

Non-compliance with the required minimum could bring a penalty of 5 percent of federal funds. That would mean about $7 million for Texas, Sparks said.

"It looks like we'll make it this year," Sparks said.

"We'll barely make it"

JACKET OF three-piece outfit, left, in spice-pink Ultra suede, features gentle shaping with notched collar; two-piece camisole dress is made of printed silk scarves imported from India and is cinched with a spice-pink, obi-style sash. Big news from spring '81 is pants — all lengths from ankle to above-the-knee — and one of the easiest ways to wear them is side-slit-pocket culotte, right, with an elegant tailored look in khaki Ultra suede; worn with matching vest with top-stitched detailing and welt pockets; under it a silk blouse with olive cord stripe and matching bow-ascot. (Both by Peter Hatsi-Androu from the Samuel Robert Spring Collection.)

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am an air traffic controller, male, age 53. I've had duodenal ulcers for 25 years (spring and fall type). Neither Proganthine with Maalox, nor a strict bland diet seemed to help. I experienced severe pain and nausea, plus loss of sleep due to pain in the middle of the night. Surgery was suggested and I refused.

Along came Tagamet. One tablet four times a day for 30 days and I became a new person. No pain, no nausea, solid sleep and naturally, a great change in personality. A few months after I stopped Tagamet, the symptoms returned. My doctor put me back on Tagamet and I was normal again. When I quit Tagamet the symptoms returned. I asked for an open prescription for Tagamet and my doctor was reluctant but finally gave me one for a year. I took one pill before going to bed and one before work and I felt great. Now my prescription has expired and again he is reluctant to give me an open prescription. He'd like to help but he is wary.

In view of my history, would you cooperate with a patient like me and allow an open prescription?

DEAR READER — No. Your doctor is concerned because at this date the studies of using Tagamet on a long-term basis for more than eight weeks have not been reported. We don't yet know what the long-term effects are. However, your doctor might be more willing to put you on a low dosage maintenance level if you agree to regular check-ups to be sure you don't develop significant complications, such as a low white blood cell count. He might also agree to a longer term treatment if you agree to gastroscopic studies to see if your ulcer is healed or not.

Tagamet has proved to be a very useful medicine in the short-term treatment of ulcers and continued low dosage has been used to prevent recurrences. There is much more to treating an ulcer, though, that could be important in your case. These measures are discussed in "The Health Letter number 15-10, Understanding Ulcers and Acidity, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Careful attention to life-style and diet plus the judicious use of antacids and other medicines may mean you won't need to stay on Tagamet to avoid ulcer symptoms.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 20-year-old male and have varicose veins in the sack of my left testicle. I've had this ever since the age of 15. I would like to know if this is unusual or if you have ever heard about anything like this. I have seen two doctors about it but they said it was nothing to worry about. Can this affect my sex life? What do you suggest I do?

DEAR READER — It is quite common. Some are mild or small and others are quite large. Sometimes they can cause aching discomfort upon standing a long time. The veins to the testicle are important in controlling the local temperature. When the temperature gets too high the involved testicle may not produce viable sperm. With one normal testicle that is not likely to be a problem. Otherwise a varicocele, as these are called, will not interfere with your sex life. If a man is sterile because of a varicocele, it (the varicocele) can be removed.

Cookbook features recipes from many cultures

SAN ANTONIO — The countries of the world which celebrate the Christmas season enjoy traditional foods unique to each culture. The following recipes, excerpted from "The Melting Pot: Ethnic Cuisine in Texas" published by The University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures at San Antonio, are a sampling of yuletide fare from Norway, Sweden, Czechoslovakia and France:

NORWEGIAN CHRISTMAS BREAD

- 1 cup butter
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1/4 cup citron
- 1/2 cup candied cherries
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- 4 cups milk, scalded
- 2 yeast cakes
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon cardamon
- 4 cups flour (or more)

Melt butter and sugar in milk, cool to lukewarm and add yeast. Make a sponge as for bread. Knead well and let rise, until light. Add fruit and knead again. Shape into loaves in a loaf pan, let rise and bake at 350 degrees F. for 1 hour. Ice with a paste or powdered sugar and milk. Cool completely before serving.

SWEDISH RICE PORRIDGE

This dish is a must for the Swedish Christmas Eve supper. Usually one member of the family is assigned to stir the rice. If you are short of people to help stir, use a double boiler.

- 3 cups milk
- 1 cup rice
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 almond
- 1 cinnamon

Place milk in the top of a double boiler. Add salt to taste. Add rice and cook until thick. When thick add sugar. Stir well. If it is too thick, add some cream or milk. When cooked pour into a dish. Bury almond in the center, then sprinkle cinnamon on top. The one who finds the almond will marry within the year.

CZECH CHRISTMAS BREAD

- 2 yeast cakes
- 1 cup milk
- 2 teaspoons sugar

Seminar celebrates publication of book

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Fifty years ago, a dozen young men at Vanderbilt University published a book about the South, a place they saw as apiritual and aesthetic in the thrust of post-World War I industrialism.

The three surviving members of the group known as The Agrarians — Robert Penn Warren, Andrew Lytle and Lyle Lanier — returned to Vanderbilt recently for an anniversary seminar.

"I'm amazed that the document has held up over the years," Lanier said, looking out over the packed lecture hall. "No one considered themselves a prophet. But, we turned out to be far better prophets than we knew."

After the work, "I'll Take My Stand," was published in 1930, it remained out of print until 1958.

"It occurred to me in the spring of '79 that this year would be the 50th anniversary of this very famous book," Walter Sullivan, a professor of English at Vanderbilt, said.

Sullivan sought the help of William C. Havard, a professor of political science, and together they obtained money from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the university's chancellor, Alexander Heard, and the university, for the symposium. About 10 scholars in Southern literature, history, political science and sociology participated.

"We were awfully lucky because we got the people we wanted," Sullivan said. "There is no chance of getting these three men together again."

At the center of the movement a half-century ago was a group of four poets at Vanderbilt called the Fugitives. The four men, Warren, Allen Tate, John Crowe Ransom and Donald Davidson, looked to the South as a symbol of a life untainted by the ugliness of industrialization.

They saw their region as a stronghold against mechanization — a place where people held on to the agrarian way of life.

The South may have seemed backward to Northern industrialists, but to the young Fugitive poets it represented a life of leisure, tradition, aestheticism and religion.

"In its very backwardness, the South had clung to some secret which embodied, it seemed, the elements out of which its own reconstruction — and possibly even the reconstruction of America — might be achieved," Davidson wrote then.

The Fugitives were soon joined by eight young men with similar ideas, and they became known as the Agrarians.

Two were novelists, "Stark Young and Lytle; one was a poet, John Gould Fletcher; another was a professor of English, John Donald Wade, and two were historians, Frank Owsley and Herman Nixon. Henry Blue Kline was a journalist and Lanier a psychologist.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

LAYAWAY FINANCING

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I know I speak for thousands of voters in California, Washington, Oregon and Hawaii who were outraged when President Carter conceded the election before the voting was over, causing candidates on both sides to lose votes. I think the networks should be forbidden by law to make any prediction based on early returns.
DISGUSTED IN OREGON

DEAR DISGUSTED: Congressman Mario Biaggi, a Democrat from New York, has a better idea: "Make Sunday Election Day, a day of duty to God and country." (It's done in Europe, where voting turnouts of 90 percent are common.) "On Sunday, a non-working day for most, voting hours could be staggered so the results in the East would not be available earlier than in the West."

"The Eastern states would vote from 11 a.m. till 8 p.m. The Western states would vote from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. And in Hawaii, the polls would open at 6 a.m. and close at 3 p.m. This system would prevent the results from the East from affecting the voters in the West. And Sunday voting would increase voter participation."

Hooray for Biaggi. Another sensible suggestion, from Los Angeles, is: Vote as usual, but don't start counting the votes until all voting is concluded.

DEAR ABBY: What is wrong with me? I love to move! We've been married for 20 years, and I'm ashamed to tell you how many times we've moved. All in the same town, too. I'm never satisfied. Once we're moved and settled I start looking for another house. My husband is very good about it and goes along with it just to please me.

We just moved into a nice house, and I'm already looking around. All this moving is very expensive. We have three teen-aged children who were against all the moves, but we moved anyway.

My husband helps, but I do most of the packing and unpacking. I just love hard work. Sometimes I wonder if I'm not a little crazy. Everyone I know hates to move, but I love it.

Have you ever had a letter like this? And do you think I should have my head examined?
LOVES TO MOVE

DEAR LOVES: No, I've never had a letter like yours, and it wouldn't hurt to have your head examined. It may not put an end to your moving, but at least you'll know why you love it.

DEAR ABBY: KEEPING THE PEACE wrote to say that she and her husband's family had vast disagreements when it came to politics and related social issues, so in order to keep every family gathering from erupting into a noisy battle, she kept her mouth shut. She said, "Afterward I felt guilty because my children are old enough to understand the talk, and I don't want some of the erroneous and bigoted statements made by my husband's family to go unchallenged."

You replied, "A noisy battle involving politics is much healthier for children than the choked-off silence you're maintaining in the interest of peace and quiet. Silence implies agreement."

Abby, I grew up in a politically active family and I consider the experience valuable. I highly recommend that KEEPING THE PEACE should challenge any views she considers bigoted or wrong. She owes it not only to herself, but to her children.

Coincidentally, the day I read that provocative item in your column, I saw the following quote displayed in the office of Judge C.V. Sanders, Shepherdsville, Ky.:

"It is better to debate a question without settling it than to settle a question without debating it." (Joseph Joubert).
JULIA B. BARRY, LOUISVILLE, KY.

DEAR JULIA AND JUDGE SANDERS: Thank you for a valuable contribution to this column.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Toffee squares brighten holidays

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Toffee is a hard sweetmeat or confection that comes in many guises. Often, it is made with nuts, candied fruit or coconut added. But the classic is basically a sugary confection, plain, with no added frills, other than perhaps another flavoring such as coffee.

Homemade toffee crunch squares are easy to make — as long as you watch the cooking time and temperature. These will keep (hidden, of course) for many weeks in a tightly covered container. However, they go fast when kept within reach of visiting children and adults who have a weakness for toffees similar to that of peanut or popcorn devotees.

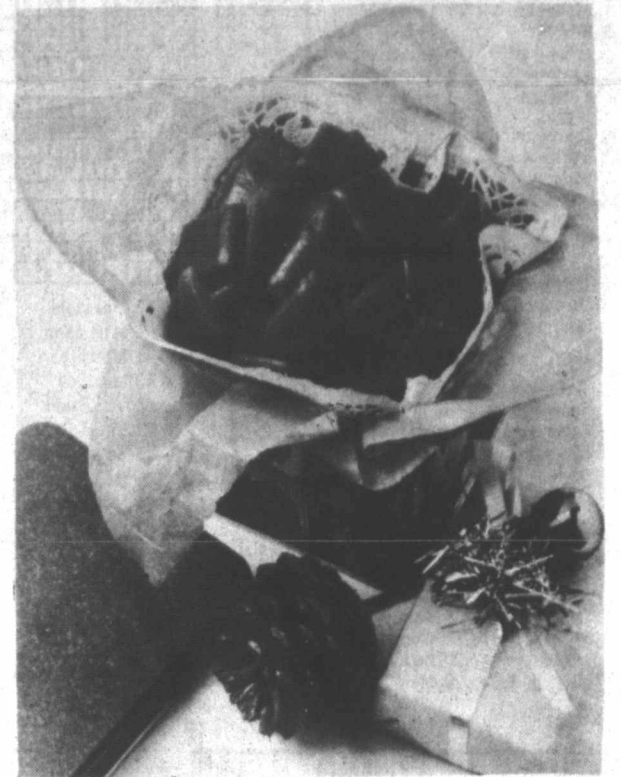

TOFFEE CRUNCH SQUARES
1 3/4 cups sugar
1/3 cup light corn syrup
1/4 cup heavy cream
3/4 cup margarine

Line 2 cookie sheets with aluminum foil. Grease foil. In heavy 2-quart saucepan, stir together sugar, corn syrup and heavy cream until well blended. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over low heat. Add margarine. Stirring occasionally, cook, until temperature on candy thermometer reaches 285-degrees or until a small amount of mixture dropped into cold water separates into threads which are hard but not brittle.

Pour onto prepared cookie sheets. Spread with greased spatula to cover entire surface. Cool a few minutes until a film forms on top. Using a sharp knife, mark surface in squares.

Begin marking candy from outside and work toward center. With wide metal spatula, press along marked lines. Do not break through the film surface. If lines do not hold, cool candy a while longer, then continue to press along marked lines, pressing the spatula deeper without breaking film. When spatula can be pressed to bottom of candy in all lines, candy is shaped. Cool. Break into squares. Store in tightly covered container.

HOMEMADE TOFFEE helps brighten the mood of candy munchers.

Play it safe with wood stoves

CHICAGO — The old-fashioned wood stove is making a comeback these days as an energy-efficient alternative to heating with oil, gas or electricity. But homeowners considering the use of wood stoves to supplement home heating systems should be aware that wood stoves may present serious fire hazards if not properly installed and operated.

More than 53 persons lost their lives in Maine in 1979 in fires related to wood stoves. In Vermont, 42 persons died in fires attributed to wood-burning stoves.

The bulk of such fires result from incorrect installation or careless maintenance or stoves. A study of 11,800 wood stove fires by the Center for Fire Research of the National Bureau of Standards found that in the fires where a specific cause could be determined, 21 percent resulted from incorrect installation or from placing combustibles too near the heating appliance. Improper maintenance, such as allowing creosote to build up in chimneys, caused another 32 percent.

A recent survey in Pennsylvania implicates installation and maintenance problems too. The Insurance Federation of Pennsylvania queried property and casualty insurers licensed in the state and found that wood stoves caused more than 200 major fire losses in 1979. Careless installation and maintenance resulted in more than $2.5 million in insurance-covered fire losses in Pennsylvania alone.

Although wood stoves obviously carry risk of fire loss, insurers generally include this coverage in the typical fire or homeowners policy at no extra cost. Insurers also support public education efforts for safe use of wood stoves.

The Alliance of American Insurers has prepared "Wood Stoves: Don't Lose Lives Saving Energy," a leaflet that outlines tips for installing and maintaining wood-burning stoves and chimneys. It is available free by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Communications Department, Alliance of American Insurers, 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60606.

Blind woman boosts Marines

BEAVERTON, Ore. (AP) — A blind woman wearing a Marine Corps drill instructor's hat sits in her wheelchair at a shopping center behind a table topped with Marine Corps literature and two flags.

Anna Kaspar and her husband, Frank, are spending the first year of their retirement traveling the country in a battered Volkswagen bus telling 45,000 miles in nine months. Eight Kaspars are in the corps or have been, including the wife of one of Mrs. Kaspar's brothers and two sons of another brother. The Kaspars' son, Master Sgt. Kenneth Kaspar, has been in the corps 16 years.

"We were all orphans in Milwaukee, Wis. — me, my sister and four brothers," Mrs. Kaspar explained. "I got a job as a domestic, but the boys couldn't find work."

"Then brother Frank joined, and the Marines wanted to know if there were any more like him back home, so the other three joined the corps," she said.

The Kaspars have no financial or other official connection with the Marines, though they have become endeared to hundreds of recruiters.

When they find someone who is interested in the corps, they deliver information on the person to the nearest Marine recruiter. Mrs. Kaspar has no idea how many people they may have recruited, "but if only one good man has enlisted, it was worth it," she said.

They live strictly on Social Security.

Mrs. Kaspar, a diabetic, went blind 12 years ago and lost her foot to an infection four years ago. She said she had convinced her husband that they should spend the first year of their retirement publicizing the Marines partly as therapy for her after she had been confined to bed for two years.

QUICK PEA SOUP

This pantryshelf version is delicious, but its flavor is different from a similar soup made with fresh or frozen peas. 2 tablespoons butter 2 small or medium scallions, thinly sliced

2 tablespoons flour 2 cups milk 8.5-ounce can green peas, undrained 1/4 teaspoon salt White pepper to taste In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan melt the butter; add the scallion and cook gently until wilted; stir in the flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the milk, keeping the liquid mixture smooth. Cook over moderate heat, whisking constantly, until thickened and bubbling. In an electric blender, whirl the peas and their liquid until pureed; add to saucepan with the salt and pepper. Whisk together until blended; reheat. Makes 2 1/2 cups.

AT WIT'S END

By Erma Bombeck

There are some people who simply cannot throw themselves into the spirit of Christmas.

They're the ones who remind you of how many seconds it takes a Christmas tree to burn down, the harmful psychological effects of telling your child about Santa Claus, and how many people knocked off the Salvation Army kettles last year.

That is why I was absolutely amazed last night to see my husband come through the door laden with bundles.

As he spread them on the dining room table, I teased, "The season finally got through to you. Do you want me to leave the room?"

"What for?" he asked. "You've seen underwear before." I watched numbly as he dumped out stacks of shorts, shirts and socks.

"Who are they for?" I asked.

"For me. I've needed them for months. And look at this sweater. It was on sale. I really needed something like this to kick around in."

"I felt the blood draining from my face."

"Wait until you see the bedroom slippers that I found. You probably hadn't noticed, but my old ones fell apart the last time I had to hunt for the paper."

"I noticed," I said, slumping into a chair.

"Look at this. I'll bet you've never seen a money clip like this one, have you?"

"Wanta bet?" I said miserably.

"You know with men's pants so tight, there's never any room for a billfold, so I just bought it on an impulse. Let's see, what else have I got?"

"Where is the bathrobe with your monogram on it?" I grumbled.

"How did you know that I bought a bathrobe? It's at the store. They can't get the monogram on until after Christmas."

"Just a wild and crazy guess. And what about a wristband to hold your car key and change when you jog?"

"Right here!" he said, opening up a box. "What are you, some kind of a mind reader? You know, this Christmas shopping isn't such a bad idea after all. It might even catch on."

The way I see it, there are two choices open to me.

He can either return all of his stuff and replace it with what I have wrapped under the Christmas tree.

Or I can return him and replace him with a new husband to go with all the stuff I bought.

GRILL-ette

by JENN-AIR

The ventilated portable electric grill that brings outdoor char-flavor broiling...indoors!
Where there's smoke there's flavor!

The indoor cookout. GRILL-ette creates cooking smoke to give the foods you broil that special "outdoor flavor" and juicy "done just right" tenderness. GRILL-ette's exclusive design allows hot cooking juices to drip to the heating surface below and vaporize into flavorful smoke. This smoke bathes the food with a true char-flavor that can't be duplicated by "smokeless" grills.

A built-in power exhaust system captures smoke and odors at the broiling surface... then whisks them quietly outdoors through the special window-vent (included) or your regular kitchen exhaust hood. No heavy broiling odor or smoke remains... just the flavor of a great cookout.

From steaks to hamburgers... fish to fowl (on the grill or optional rotisserie) GRILL-ette brings the fun and flavor of outdoor broiling indoors... 365 days and nights a year!

Though you might feel tested at times this coming year, those about you make your road easier. Their influence is exceptionally fortunate and strong, making it difficult for adverse conditions to prevail.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Because you are anxious to change things for the better today for those you love, you grow in the esteem of the persons you help, even though you seek neither praise nor reward. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, in several relationships very important to you, you and those with whom you're associated will have opportunities to show how much each cares.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're the type who is always willing to be helpful and of service. Today the roles will be reversed and those you aided will be anxious to reward you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Everything should go just as you want it to today, socially or romantically. Bonds will be strengthened with either new or old relationships.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be chalking up a great many points today because you continually put others' interests before your own. Those points add up to a lot of love for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A most enjoyable day is in the making because you'll be spending it with those who mean a lot to you and who know how to have a good time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Gifts could come to you today from two different sources. Both will be given out of love and may be even larger than you had dared hoped to receive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If your objective is to have a good time today, you should have no trouble realizing it. Both family and friends will hover about, trying to make you happy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't have to look beyond the homestead today for the real values in life. Receiving material things is nice, but the gift of love is priceless.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Without your being aware of it, your actions today exert a positive and hopeful influence over many persons. This uplifting effect makes spirits soar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The role you take on today is one of kindness and generosity to all. Whether you seek it or not, you'll be both a leader and a catalyst for many.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your jovial and expansive outlook serves as an inspiration today. Your words and thoughts carry weight, warmth and wisdom. They'll not be forgotten.

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT, from a painting by Julius Von Schnorr.

The little family was to leave Bethlehem on their return to Nazareth when Joseph awakened the next morning early and sat in silence until Mary opened her eyes. She saw the frown and asked if he was troubled. Yes, he said, he was. In the night he had had a dream. He saw an angel, the same one he had seen before. The angel was agitated. "Rise!" he commanded. "Take with you the child and his mother and flee into Egypt! Remain there until I give you further notice. Herod is on the point of searching for the child in order to take his life!"

Mary had no doubt about the course they should pursue. They must hurry to Egypt. If an angel ordered this, then God had told the angel to do it.

Joseph realized that Mary was right. He paid the innkeeper that day, and bought some food for the saddlebag, and stocked up with water. He told no one that he was leaving, or in which direction he would travel when he did.

When the blue dark of night set in, Mary mounted the little ass, held her baby against her breast, and the young man yanked the halter strap and started to plod along the white-stoned road south to Egypt.

It seemed strange to Joseph, walking toward the great desert, that anyone would want to hurt a baby. Any baby. It seemed even stranger that God was keeping this one a secret. The only ones who knew that this tiny jostled, sleeping burden behind him was the Son of God were the despised and poor shepherds of the fields, and the despised and rich gentiles from Persia. The king of all Judea, Herod the Great, had heard about the infant Jesus, and his reaction, according to the angel, was to plot a murder. Why? Joseph begged to understand.

Herod's palace was a place of splendid courtyards and many oil lamps on the west side of Jerusalem, about three hundred yards from a place called Golgotha, or Calvary. Men of importance were rushing, on this night, in and out of the palace. Herod the Great was in a towering rage. Many, he said, would pay for the trick which had been played upon him. Many would die.

Spies had come to him from several quarters. The first ones said that the Magi had remained in Bethlehem two days and had left for Persia, skirting Jerusalem to the south. This showed that they had no intention of keeping their promise to return to the king with news of the newborn messiah. Other spies had been sent at once to Bethlehem to find the baby and his parents and bring them to the august presence of Herod. But these had returned with bad news indeed: the little family, it seemed, had lived in a stable beneath the inn, and both stable and inn were now empty.

Herod had ordered his soldiers to arrest the innkeeper and his wife, but torture could bring no further information than that they had no room at the inn for the expectant mother, and had permitted her to live in the stable with her husband and newborn. The king was seventy years of age, and very ill, but his rage enslaved him.

The census, he roared. That would provide a solution to the problem of the make-believe messiah who had come to exact tribute from the gullible Jews. He called an aide and ordered him to go to the Roman tribune now in quarters at Fortress Antonia and to ask in the name of the king for the names of all families who had infants.

Wait, Herod screamed. We must first find out how old this particular baby is. Call my councilors!

The learned ones came in, their striped cloaks betraying the trembling of men underneath. How long, said Herod, had that accursed star been in the sky? No one knew. They had not looked for a star. Herod moaned and sobbed and pounded the wall with his withered fists.

The soothsayers said that the strange bright star could not have been in the heavens long, or else astrologers among the Jews would have broadcast the news. They would also have made their own dire predictions about it. This, they reasoned, made it likely that the star was on a path across Persia toward Bethlehem and that it had begun its flight recently.

A year ago? shouted Herod. A week ago? I must find out the age of his little majesty. The councilors looked at each other and said surely no more than a year. Probably far less.

Herod sent the courier to the Roman tribune. He was to ask, in the name of the king, for a list of all Jewish families who had male sons two years of age or less. The census would reveal the status of every family — how many members, what age. When the list was copied, he wanted it given to his chief of guards and he wanted squads of soldiers sent to Bethlehem, Jerusalem and every town and village in the area.

The soldiers were under orders from the king to tear the babies from their parents and to either kill them on the spot with the short sword, or take them out in batches and cast them from the cliffs.

There would be no exemptions, even among the babies of the soldiers themselves. This must be done at once, so that no spurious pretender to the throne could grow up and lift the scepter from Herod's cold hands.

In fact, while he thought about the matter, Herod the Great dwelled upon the idea of killing his own son, Herod Antipas. He too aspired to this throne, the throne on which none but the one Herod, the Great Herod, would sit. He said nothing at the moment, but mentally marked his son for death within the week.

Within a few days, the slaughter of the innocents began. In every village, anguish and wailing followed the visit of death. In Jerusalem, some of Herod's soldiers wept because they had to kill the babies of fellow soldiers. All up to the age of two were slain because to fail by one baby would have brought death to many soldiers.

The news mollified King Herod. He asked many questions about the killings, and was pleased that his officers had done an efficient job. Surely the so-called baby king was among the many who died in the swift raids.

For a while, his peace of mind improved his health. To celebrate this feeling of tranquility, the king ordered his son Antipater to be executed at once. When this was done, Herod felt even better because there was no one in all the nation who aspired to his throne.

He was, for a time, almost benevolent. Then he was seized with a fit, and fell to the floor of his palace. His councilors and officers were summoned and they stood around in a little group and watched the king struggle slowly. There was nothing they could do to help him, and, apparently, there was no wish to ameliorate his last hour.

When Herod's final gasp subsided in a gasp of resignation, the councilors moved to inform the nation, and Caesar Augustus in Rome, that the king was dead.

He had followed the infants, but he did not join them.

'I'm still capable of crying'

POW's wife won't give up

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas in Charles Shelton's home. The tree is up, gaily wrapped presents are standing about, and the family is planning a traditionally sumptuous holiday meal. The only thing missing is Charles Shelton himself, a U.S. Air Force colonel.

Shelton was shot down over Laos during the fighting in Southeast Asia, and was one of the first Americans to be taken captive by the communists. That was in the spring of 1965. This will be the Shelton family's 16th Christmas without him. For all anyone knows he is still a prisoner of war.

In fact, the colonel is the only POW officially left over from the conflict. The Defense Department says 2,500 soldiers were still unaccounted for after Vietnam, but most have since been presumed dead. Only Shelton and 12 men missing in action are still formally listed as unfinished business.

This may soon change, however. Shelton's wife Marian says the Pentagon is anxious to make final determinations regarding the last few soldiers on the books, and therefore a military review board has recently asked the secretary of the Air Force to make a presumption of Col. Shelton's death.

The presumption could come at any time. And Mrs. Shelton says the thought of it makes this the loneliest Christmas of all. She doesn't think her husband is necessarily dead, and she doesn't want the government to think it either. "What they should do," she says, "is to find out for sure."

Mrs. Shelton claims that shouldn't be impossible. Because she says her husband's case is one of the best documented of the war. "I've got stacks and stacks of information, and the military has a lot more of its own. I don't think we should just give up now, to clean out the records."

The data on Col. Shelton

CHARLES SHELTON, a U.S. Air Force colonel, shot down over Laos in spring of 1965. Marian Shelton, his wife, says, "I wouldn't like to think of him in a cage this long; there are worse things than dying."

began in April of 1965. He was a 33-year-old reconnaissance pilot then, a husky former football player, and he was shot from the skies by a Pathet Lao anti-aircraft team. There is evidence that he eluded the enemy in the wilds of the jungle, at least for a few days.

He was apprehended on May 1, reportedly. He was declared a POW on May 24.

Apparently, the colonel was none too cooperative with his captors. Air Force intelligence officers say that numerous reports indicate he was belligerent, sarcastic and even violent. Mrs. Shelton says the Air Force thinks he once killed three North Vietnamese guards with his bare hands.

He also is said to have escaped several times, perhaps with the help of people friendly to the United States. He was always hunted down and returned to captivity, however. Mrs. Shelton believes he was held mostly in the Laotian Plain of Jars, but he was seen by third parties in various locales.

Wherever he was, the news about Col. Shelton stopped in 1968, and nothing definite has been heard about him in 12 years. Military reviewers speculate that he may have been too much for the communists to handle, and conceivably was shot; otherwise, they add, he could have been killed a dozen ways.

The reviewers met in Texas last autumn. Mrs. Shelton was present with a lawyer, and she thinks the judges had their minds made up before testimony was given. Essentially, Mrs. Shelton was asked to prove that the colonel was still alive; she could not, of course, and so the decision was negative.

The decision is not final, and it's still under review by the service secretary. Mrs. Shelton says she's not optimistic, though, and therefore is spending the holidays waiting for the phone call that could, in effect, formally announce that the government has given up hope for her husband.

She thinks she will probably cry when it comes. "I'm still capable of crying after 15 years." And too she will wonder anew about justice. "Jimmy Carter promised us that he would not turn his back on the prisoners; then he allowed the military to go ahead and write off almost 2,500 men."

Mrs. Shelton says it's difficult to understand a government that abandons the people it sends to war. During the hearing for her husband, she recalls that one of the judges got up after it was over and almost ran from the room.

In any event, Mrs. Shelton, who now lives in San Diego, says the government action changes nothing for her. She has raised her five children by herself, she has maintained a religious faith, and she expects to go on for as long as necessary to find out what really happened to her lost husband.

"He could have been taken to China after the war," she reasons. "But if he wasn't, if he was left in a cage, I hope he is dead. That's a hard thing to say at Christmas. Maybe people won't understand it. But I wouldn't like to think of him in a cage this long; there are worse things than dying."

Pilgrimage watched by Israeli troops

BETHLEHEM, Israeli-occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops patrolled the streets of Bethlehem Monday as thousands of visitors walked through the ancient Church of the Nativity on a Christmas pilgrimage to the traditional site of Christ's birth.

Soldiers in battle gear stood sentry outside the church as loads of pilgrims rolled into Manger Square for a pre-Christmas visit to the Holy Manger in a tiny incense-filled grotto.

Israeli authorities said security precautions would be as strict as usual despite an appeal by the Arab mayor of Bethlehem, Elias Freij, to dispense with the Christmas eve roadblocks and body searches, which he says dampens the seasonal spirit.

Colored lights and nativity scenes in the souvenir shops, flapping pennants and a 30-foot decorated tree in Manger Square gave Bethlehem its traditional festive appearance.

But shopkeepers were unseasonably gloomy and complained inflation was keeping sales down.

Israeli officials said they expected about 33,000 pilgrims on organized tours, slightly fewer than in previous years. About 10,000 were expected in Bethlehem on Christmas eve, where Roman Catholic pontifical high Mass will be broadcast on a 20-foot-square television screen from inside the church.

Worshippers also will feel the inflation pinch this year with only three foreign choirs — about half the usual number — entertaining the crowd on Christmas eve.

Utah gains national ranking

Fame is not new to Utah Athletic Director Arnie Ferrin — and he recognizes the occupational hazard that accompanies a national ranking. "We're excited about being in the poll. But once you get there, there's nothing they enjoy more than tipping you out of the poll," said Ferrin, an All-American basketball player at Utah in the 1940s. The Utes' No. 19 ranking is their first this year in the Associated Press weekly college basketball poll. To earn the spot, they raised their record to 7-0 and knocked out the 20th-ranked Louisville by beating the defending national champions 78-59. "When we'd won six, we felt that if we beat Louisville we would get the national recognition," said Ferrin. "Next, we play in the Far West Classic. If we meet the challenge this week by beating Drake and then winning the second game we'll have a chance to move up in the poll." Ferrin, who was on Utah's 1944 NCAA championship team and its 1947 NIT champion squad, said the Utes' current success is due to "an excellent team," led by seniors Danny Vranes, a member of the 1980 Olympic team, and Tom Chambers, an Olympic alternate. Ferrin, after his college career, played for two NBA championship teams as a member of the Minneapolis Lakers. New to the rankings in addition to Utah is South Alabama, 7-1, which defeated Ohio State 76-67 to climb into 16th place. The top five teams in the poll held their positions from last week. The DePaul Blue Demons kept their No. 1 rating, which they've had in every poll this season except the pre-season balloting. DePaul, 8-0, got 30 of the 57 first-place votes cast and accumulated 1,110 points. DePaul won the Chicagoland Classic last week with a 71-67 opening-round victory over Loyola, Ill., and a 62-54 championship win over Northwestern.

Kentucky, 6-0 and winners of their own Wildcat Classic, had 21 first-place votes and 1,097 points for second place. The next three — UCLA, Oregon State and Virginia — were the only other teams to receive first-place votes. The Bruins, 6-0, got three first-place votes and 1,008 points, while Oregon State had one and 959, and Virginia two and 917. North Carolina, 65-56 winner over Indiana, moved from eighth place to sixth with 737 points, while fellow ACC member Wake Forest jumped from 12th place to seventh with 656 points. Notre Dame, sixth last week, dropped to eighth place with 642 points, while Maryland held ninth place at 635 and Louisiana State remained 10th with 614. Arizona State leads the Second Ten, followed by Texas A&M, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, South Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Utah and Brigham Young.

Chargers clinch NFL playoff spot with win over Steelers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A year ago, San Diego kicker Rolf Benirschke was a walking skeleton after a life-and-death battle with a rare disease.

Monday night, before the Chargers' crucial game with Pittsburgh, his teammates paid homage to Benirschke's courageous comeback. They named him honorary captain.

Benirschke, fully recovered from the rare intestinal disease, repaid the kindness by tying a team record with four field goals as San Diego clinched a National Football League playoff spot with a 26-17 victory over the Steelers.

The victory, San Diego's 11th in 16 games, catapulted the Chargers into next month's AFC semifinals against either Houston or Buffalo. It came a year to the day that Benirschke made an emotional return to San Diego Stadium.

"Before the game I remembered what it was like to hardly be able to walk," said Benirschke, who broke a 12-year-old club record with his 24 field goals and set a club scoring record.

While Benirschke was perfect in four attempts, the Chargers were near-perfect in quarterback Dan Fouts' estimation.

"That's the best effort I have ever seen by a Charger team," said Fouts, who directed San Diego to scores on their first five series.

Their vaunted passing game produced 308 yards and numerous big plays. Chuck Muncie gained a season-high 115 yards on 26 carries to provide a badly-needed running game. And San Diego's stout defense limited the Steelers to 49 rushing yards.

"We knew we were going home if we lost," said Fouts, who completed 21 of 37 passes for his eighth 300-yard game this year, an NFL record. He finished with 4,715 passing yards, another NFL record.

Benirschke put San Diego ahead 9-3 at halftime on field goals of 33, 26 and 26 yards. The Chargers increased their lead to 16-3 after Fouts teamed up on a 59-yard gainer to tight end Kellen Winslow on the first play of the third quarter. The play carried to the Pittsburgh 23 and Fouts scored eight plays later from the one.

Bradshaw countered with a whirlwind drive for the Steelers' first touchdown, a 2-yard run by Sidney Thornton after Theo Bell caught passes of 32 and 35 yards.

The Chargers added 10 points on another 33-yard field goal by Benirschke and a 10-yard run by Muncie for a 26-10 lead with three minutes remaining.

Playing on pride, the Steelers, snafving from missing the playoffs for the first time since 1971, added a touchdown with five seconds left when Bradshaw hit tight end Benny Cunningham for a 15-yard pass.

"Perhaps," said Benirschke, "maybe it was the Team of the '70s playing the Team of the '80s."

Afterward the game, Bradshaw praised San Diego's "super offense" and predicted the Chargers would meet Dallas in the Super Bowl.

SWC roundup

Mustangs routed by Kansas

Kansas guard Darnell Valentine may have a sweetheart of a name, but he's nothing but trouble as far as Southern Methodist basketball coach Dave Bliss is concerned.

"He is one of the greatest leaders on any team in the country," Bliss said Monday night after Valentine scored 19 points and the Jayhawks pinned a 73-62 inter-sectional basketball loss on the Mustangs.

In other games involving SWC teams, West Texas State beat Texas Christian, 67-63, in the first round of the Rebel Roundup Tournament at Las Vegas, Arkansas beat Southern Mississippi, 76-68, and Baylor was beaten, 78-72, by Colorado.

"He (Valentine) caused us a lot of problems tonight (Monday), and that's just what you expect from a great player like he is."

Valentine returned the compliment by saying the Mustangs, now 3-6, "have nothing to be down about. We didn't function as well on offense as we have, and a lot of that is due to good defense by SMU."

Kansas, 6-2, used a sticky zone defense to hold the Mustangs scoreless while they scored the first eight points of the game. SMU never recovered from the initial shock.

Trailing 35-25 at the half, SMU managed to pull within 69-62 with 42 seconds left, but Tom Guy dumped in a field goal and Valentine hit two free throws to seal the Mustangs' fate.

SMU freshman guard David Gadis led all scorers with 21 points.

To the west, the gambling Buffaloes of West Texas State used four George Holt overtime free throws to dump Texas Christian 67-63 in the opening game of the Rebel Roundup college basketball tournament in Las Vegas.

The Horned Frogs, trailing by 10 points early in the second half, managed to tie the game 61-61 in regulation play.

TCU sophomore guard Darrell Browder led all scorers with 26 points, while Terry Adolph and Eurskine Robinson scored 12 each for West Texas.

Arkansas fared better than its two Southwest Conference foes Monday night, using 20 points from U.S. Reed and Scott Hastings to give the 17th-ranked Razorbacks a 76-68 win over Southern Mississippi.

The Hogs, now 7-2, jumped out to a 16-point lead in the first half but the Golden Eagles, now 4-2, closed the margin to 36-28 at halftime.

In the second half, Southern Mississippi managed to tie the score at 48-48, but the Razorbacks pulled away with four minutes left to ice the win.

In a non-conference clash in Boulder, Baylor jumped out to a 40-36 halftime lead over Colorado, but Jo Jo Hunter dumped in 30 points to lead the Buffs to a 78-72 win over the Bears.

Hunter, a senior all-Big Eight guard, drilled 12 of 22 from the field as Colorado broke out on top with seven minutes remaining and took the lead for good after the game had been tied seven times in the second half.

Gary Teagle led the Baylor scoring with 26 points and Pat Nunley added 19 for the Bears.

Baylor dropped to 4-5, while Colorado moved its record to 6-2.

WTSU claims overtime victory in Rebel Roundup Tournament

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "OCU is a very good team," Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "I was scared because we were playing the best we could and were still down a point at halftime."

After trailing 45-44 at the intermission Monday night, Tarkanian's Rebels came back to take control of the contest early in the second half en route to an 86-76 college basketball victory over stubborn Oklahoma City University in the first round of the Rebel Roundup tournament.

UNLV meets West Texas State in tonight's championship game, while Oklahoma City plays Texas Christian University in the consolation contest.

West Texas State won its game in overtime, as George Holt hit four free throws in the final 1:27 to pace the 67-63 victory over TCU. In the UNLV-OCU match, Rubin Jackson had 20 first-half points to put the Chiefs in the lead, but was held to 10 points in the second half. "We didn't get the ball to Jackson enough in the second half," said Oklahoma City Coach Ken Trickey. "Our guards broke down and we lost our rhythm. "Las Vegas did a good job on him defensively, too." Trickey was asked if the Rebels' run-and-gun offense made his Chiefs tired. "They didn't wear us down," he replied. "We've got just as good kids as they have. We play that way, too. We held all the scoring records until Vegas broke them." Tarkanian said he was generally pleased with his

Miami cagers win Shamrock title

SHAMROCK—Miami boys and girls claimed the championship of the Shamrock Tournament with victories over Wellington Saturday night.

Ray Young and Ron Francis combined for 50 points to lead the Warriors on a 71-45 rout of Wellington.

Young finished with 29 points while Francis added 21.

Lenny Archie topped the losers with 16 points.

The Warriors raised their record to 11-1. Miami girls won easily, 53-24, behind a 20-point performance from Susan Bean. Beth Gill added 10 points.

Kathleen Reeves topped Wellington with 12 points. The Warriorettes remain unbeaten at 12-0.

Miami's next scheduled game is Jan. 2 at Mobeetie.

Wheeler girls edged Booker, 51-48, to win the consolation title.

Missy Wiggins paced Wheeler with 22 points while Mona Jennings added 17.

Bennington topped Booker with 18 points. In the boys' division, Wheeler bounced Booker, 61-48, to take the consolation title. Boyd Waldo led Wheeler with 19 points while Russell Gaines added 13.

Cowboy fans warming up for Rams

DALLAS (AP) — Charlie Waters said the suddenly more rabid home fans will be a big advantage for the Dallas Cowboys Sunday in their National Conference wild card meeting with the Los Angeles Rams in Texas Stadium.

The veteran Dallas strong safety said he has never seen the home fans as wild as they were Sunday in a 35-27 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles which earned them the homefield advantage against the Rams.

"Home now is definitely an advantage for us where it hasn't always been that way in the past," said Waters. "Our crowd has been cold and semi-distant, but now they are verbal and they really add a plus to us and really give us an advantage."

Waters quickly added "By no means does that give us an automatic in. Those guys (the Rams) are going to feel confident playing us."

Waters and the green Dallas secondary was bombarded by Ram quarterback Vince Ferragamo for over 400 yards passing.

"We've got to get the same effort we had against the Eagles," said Waters. "We have something to prove. Fortunately, we don't have to beat them but one point instead of 25."

The Cowboys had to make up a 25 point tiebreaker difference on the Eagles but fell 17 points short.

Asked if he felt the team had purged itself of the Ram blemish with the solid victory over the Eagles, Waters said "Yes, I think we've wiped our slate clean. We have matured an awful lot after what happened last week."

"Those type things usually don't happen to the Dallas Cowboys late in the year, but it did last week. It showed our personality is not as stable as we had hoped it was."

Waters added "We were on a positive swing. We caught the wave and we wanted to ride it out to the very end. Sometimes you think how good you are and forget what it takes to be good...to fear an opponent...to be excited about what you are doing."

Phillips' one-liners spoiled by Browns

HOUSTON (AP) — Some of Houston Coach Bum Phillips' most famous one liners are taking a beating since Cleveland dethroned the Pittsburgh Steelers as the American Football Central Division champions.

Houston made it into the playoffs last year as a wild card and Phillips remarked that the road to the Super Bowl went through Pittsburgh, which eventually defeated the Oilers in the American Football Conference title game.

The Oilers returned home and Phillips said in 1980 the Oilers would kick the door in and beat out Pittsburgh. The Browns overcame the Steelers first however, by winning the title Sunday with a 27-24 victory over Cincinnati.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano reminded Phillips that he had been knocking on the wrong door. "We'll see how his sense of humor is later on," Phillips smiled.

Browns tight end Ozzie Newsome suggested someone tell Phillips the road to the Super Bowl goes through Cleveland.

"The road to the Super Bowl doesn't go through Cleveland yet," Phillips said.

The Oilers traveled the same rocky, cliff-hanging road in 1980 that has taken them to the playoffs the past two seasons.

The Oilers weren't assured of a playoff berth until the final play of Sunday's game when Minnesota quarterback Tommy Kramer passed incomplete into Houston's end zone.

"They say one play does not a season make," Oiler assistant John Paul Young said. "Well, I'd like them to take a look at that play."

An Oiler loss could have meant the end of the season but instead Phillips is looking confidently to the playoffs following the 20-16 victory over the Vikings.

"I'm as confident as I was last year and a little more confident than I was the year before," Phillips said. "We are a better team this year. Our passing statistics are better and we're a better running team and we have an improved defensive team."

The Oilers finished the regular season with an 11-5 record and on a record-breaking 203-yard performance by Earl Campbell, who won his third straight NFL rushing title. Campbell gained 1,934 yards for the season, only 69 yards shy of O.J. Simpson's single season record.

Steelers close with class

The Pittsburgh Steelers bid us a fond — and probably only fleeting — farewell the same way they had ruled the National Football League.

They did it with class. If there is a textbook definition of that overused word, it is probably: "grace under pressure."

That is Chuck Noll. That is Terry Bradshaw. That is Joe Greene and Rocky Bleier and almost anyone else in that organization.

They could have cheap-shotted it Monday night in San Diego, taken out a season's worth of frustration on the team that was handing them their emphatic defeat. After all, the Steelers had nothing to lose.

Nothing but their self-respect. In the waning minutes of a game out of hand, they could have said the heck with it and just run out the clock. Bradshaw was already hurting more than most of us can even imagine. Seven more points would mean nothing to anybody.

Except to the Steelers themselves.

There is no quit in this team. Which is why, with no time remaining, there was Bradshaw figuratively shaking his fist at fate by flinging a 16-yard scoring pass to Bennie Cunningham. It may have been the most important touchdown the Steelers scored all season. It told the world: We're no losers. We're still the greatest team around.

Bleier, the running back whose life has already been recorded on film and who closed out his playing days in Pittsburgh last week with a storybook ending, a game-winning touchdown catch, very nearly tacked on a most improbable epilogue in the fading seconds in San Diego. He caught another touchdown pass — only to have it ruled no pass at all because Bradshaw had been in a Charger's clutches.

So it goes. "Last week was the way to end it. I couldn't think of a better way than scoring the winning touchdown in front of the hometown fans," said Bleier, who received a hero's sendoff as he left the Three Rivers Stadium field.

"People ask me, 'Should I have retired on top, with a Super Bowl championship last year?'" Bleier went on. "There was a chance to win three Super Bowls in a row. That's never been done. It's nice to go out on top, but that isn't life. Life isn't always winning."

It was typical of the talk in the Pittsburgh locker room. No recrimination. No whining. No rage over what might have been. Just philosophy and a sense of determination already mounting, a desire to prove that one off-year isn't anything worth worrying about.

"Even though a lot of negative things happened this year, there was still a lot of spirit," said Franco Harris, failing for only the second time as a pro to rush for 1,000 yards and failing for the first time in his nine years to be on a playoff team. "We still have the winning attitude. We'll be back — and in the playoffs. Anybody hates to have less than he knows he can produce."

Nebraska prepares for Sun Bowl with closed practice sessions

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Head Coach Tom Osborne, who says the Sun Bowl contest Saturday against Mississippi State is "the most important game of the year for us," has closed Nebraska's football workouts to the press.

"We were burned a couple of times and I don't want it to happen here," the coach said.

Osborne, who arrived Sunday with his 115-man squad, said "Our players and coaches have approached this game with a serious and positive attitude. It's going to determine the final rankings."

He said the outcome would decide "how this team is remembered — as being either a real good football team or just an average team."

Nebraska, ranked No. 8, is a two-touchdown favorite over Mississippi State, but Osborne said he pays no attention to the point spread.

"Disciplined football players are going to play the best game they can regardless," he said.

Mississippi State, ranked 17th, arrives later today, and Sun Bowl officials have promised to give them the same welcome — strolling mariachi musicians, dancing girls and beauty queens — that Nebraska's players received when they arrived Sunday afternoon.

"We can't promise the teams as much money as the bigger bowls, but we try to make up for it in hospitality," said Sun Bowl Committee spokesman Vince Carafano. He said this year each team will receive $235,000 for its Sun Bowl appearance.

The nationally televised contest is expected to draw a sellout crowd of more than 30,000.

FARM SCENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn prices are the highest in six years and one reason is the nation's sweet tooth.

To be sure, this year's skimpy harvest, caused by drought and hot weather last summer, is the big reason for the high prices. And overseas demands are pointing to another record year for exports.

But corn starch also is a source of sweeteners that are much in demand among U.S. food processors, including those that make soft drinks.

In all, says the Agriculture Department, about 465 million bushels of corn will be used by the "wet milling" industry this year, an increase of about 5 percent from 1979.

Looking ahead, the department's latest "Sugar and Sweetener Report" said more than 500 million bushels of corn may be used in 1981 by the wet-milling industry, a further gain of about 8 percent from this year.

Around 70 percent of the starch recovered by the wet-milling process goes into corn sweeteners, with the remainder sold as corn starch and dextrin.

"This does not include the corn dry-milled for corn chips, tacos and similar products, or the corn used to produce industrial alcohol," the report said.

One reason for the popularity of corn sweeteners is that sugar prices have been high as a result of a declining world supply. That is particularly the case for one kind of sweetener known as high fructose corn syrup, called HFCS in the trade.

"Per capita consumption of corn sweeteners for food use is expected to total about 41 pounds (dry basis) in 1980, up about four pounds from 1979," the report said.

"Most of the increase will be in HFCS, from 15.4 pounds to nearly 19 pounds."

For the first time, it said, the per capita consumption of HFCS will exceed that of glucose corn syrup, traditionally the most popular sweetener made from corn.

By comparison, per capita consumption of sugar this year is expected to average 87.2 pounds, down from 91.1 in 1979.

"Corn sweetener prices in 1981 will likely average above 1980 levels, and could increase significantly as corn and other energy prices rise appreciably," the report said.

"HFCS prices will continue to be largely determined by the price of sugar, a close alternative sweetener in many industrial uses."

The report added that this year's crop of 6.46 billion bushels, down 17 percent from the 1979 record harvest of 7.76 billion bushels, probably "means that corn prices will likely continue high" for some time.

"Prices of valuable corn refiner products can also be expected to increase, benefiting corn wet-millers financially," it said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent upward spiral of interest rates has triggered higher costs for loans made by the Farmers Home Administration.

The FmHA, as the Agriculture Department agency calls itself, said Monday that the basic interest rate charged borrowers has been boosted to 13 percent from the rate of 12.25 percent previously in effect.

Gordon Cavanaugh, administrator of FmHA, said the 13 percent rate applies to loans for low and moderate-income housing; farm operation, including "economic emergency loans" used for operating purposes; and disaster emergency loans for annual production or operating purposes above actual losses.

But Cavanaugh said the increase in interest rates applies only to loans not subsidized by the government.

"Home loans will still be available at rates as low as 1 percent for low-income families under the 'interest credit' provisions of the national housing act," he said.

The agency also offers a number of other loan programs that carry interest rates below the costs of commercial loans for farmers and other rural residents who cannot borrow money elsewhere.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial production of farm-grown catfish in November soared to 3.63 million pounds, up 21 percent from the same month of last year, says the Agriculture Department.

Over the entire 11 months of 1980, catfish output at 42.9 million pounds was up 13 percent from a year earlier, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Meanwhile, competing imports of catfish — mostly from Brazil — totaled 284,000 pounds in October, the most recent month tabulated. That was a decline of 78 percent from October 1979, officials said.

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has taken the first formal move toward the sale of petroleum leases in the 23 million-acre National Petroleum Reserve of Alaska. The sale tentatively is scheduled for no later than August 1982.

The department Monday issued a "call for nominations," which is the first formal opportunity for petroleum companies to express interest in specific tracts they want offered for leasing, and for environmental groups, Alaska natives and others to express any concerns they may have.

The next step would be for the department to review the suggestions and comments, then select areas for environmental study and further public comment. Those studies would be used in the final selections of tracts to be offered for leasing.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says its records show 32 accidents involving nuclear weapons since 1950.

Officials said Monday that only one of the accidents — the explosion of a giant Titan II missile in a silo at Damascus, Ark., last September — occurred in the past 12 years.

The Pentagon said there also were an unspecified number of "incidents" of a less critical nature than the 32 accidents.

Officials said the accident list does not include a spill of propellant at a Titan II silo in Kansas in 1978, when two Air Force crewmen were killed while the propellant was being loaded into a missile. It was not on the list of accidents because there was no nuclear warhead on the missile at the time and thus no danger of a nuclear explosion, officials said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury bills have declined significantly after weeks of steady increases.

The Treasury Department, after its weekly auction Monday, said the discount rate on 13-week Treasury bills fell from 16.67 percent last week to 14.92 percent, and the rate on 26-week bills fell from 15.423 percent to 14.032 percent.

As a result of the auction, banks and thrift institutions may pay up to 14.282 percent on popular six-month money market certificates, starting Thursday. The current return is 15.673 percent.

Thrifts can now pay up to 12 percent on 2 1/2-year savings certificates and commercial banks can pay 11.75 percent. Those rates are at the top of a federally controlled ceiling.

Overseas

BRESCIA, Italy (AP) — Traffic was stuck for hours on the northbound lane of the Milan-Venice highway — literally stuck to the pavement after a truck carrying a potent chemical adhesive spilled its cargo in a road accident.

Police said the tires of cars became stuck when drivers slowed down and tried to pass the scene where the glue truck collided with another vehicle on Monday.

Police used chemical solvents to free the mired vehicles.

TORONTO (AP) — A Toronto man who shouted "There is no Santa Claus" at the city's annual Santa Claus parade last month has been fined $50 by a provincial court.

Richard Dildy, 40, was convicted of causing a disturbance after he joined the parade carrying a sign that read in part: "Down with Santa."

"We've got to get you off the streets at Santa Claus time," said Judge D.G. Scott, after hearing that Dildy had been charged on two similar counts stemming from last year's parade.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire today ended Syrian shelling of the Lebanese Christian city of Zahleh, allowing its 200,000 inhabitants to prepare for Christmas, Lebanese police sources said.
