COUNTY ROADS ARE DISCUSSED

ENGINEERS AT MEETING WITH COMMISSION YESTERDAY

How they would do the engineering work on almost $2,000,000 worth of county, state and federal roads to be built in the county was told to the county commissioners yesterday afternoon by ten engineers. They went into detail about possible costs, salaries and methods of building the roads.

Among the visiting engineers were P. S. Bailey, district engineer, and W. J. Van Lanon, his associate. Mr. Bailey said that the State Highway department would furnish an engineer for varying amounts, depending upon the experience and qualifications. He said the maximum salary paid resident engineers by the Department was $600 per month.

Some of the visiting engineers declared that a salary of $230 per month was adequate. Concerning methods of preliminary road-building, most of the engineers argued that sacking the road in water by artificial means was cheapest.

Mr. Bailey said arrangements for paving Highway No. 33 on Hobart street had been agreed with the city and the State Highway department. Paving will start as soon as the strip from the railroad to the Carson court line is paved. The county will pay for paving 18 feet in the center of the road and the city will pay costs of laying concrete of 17 feet on each side of the middle strip, making a 32-foot road.

"Just because spring is here it doesn't mean that people can live on nothing," Mrs. Davis said. "People have to eat and to feed them we have to have money or jobs for the unemployed," she said.

"Pampa citizens are not cooperating with the board in honoring their pledges to the Community Chest or giving odd jobs to relieve the unemployment," Alex Schneider, chairman of the board said.

Padding through the sky like some pre-historic bird, an autogyro piloted by James G. # MAD MARRIAGE by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY," etc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Gypsy McBride, 19-year-old typist in a New York office, marries Jim Wallace the day after she meets him at the home of her wealthy cousin, Anne Trowbridge. Gypsy has been jilted by Alan Crosby last year and a half in Paris, and Wallace's fiancée has broken their engagement. There is no romance in the union. Both seek to spite the person they care most for. Wallace is a young lawyer. They go to his home in Forest City where his relatives are antagonistic to Gypsy and snub her.

A letter comes from Alan Crosby but after much indecision Gypsy sends it back unopened. Later the marriage of Marcia Loring, Wallace's former fiancée, to Brock Phillips, wealthy New Yorker, is announced in a newspaper.

Jim undertakes the defense of Nina Roberts, accused of murdering her employer. The case is sensational with circumstantial evidence strongly against the girl. Gypsy becomes deeply interested in the murder case. She goes to see Nina and the girl gives her a letter to be mailed in case she is convicted. Mrs. Fowler, wife of the dead man, is called as a witness and faints on the stand.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVIII

It was Mrs. Fowler who had dropped back, apparently lifeless in her seat. There was a great buzz of excitement. Court attendants rushed forward. From somewhere a doctor appeared. Presently the woman's eyes opened and she raised her head. She was able to rise with assistance and the doctor and another man helped her from the room. The physician returned and announced that Mrs. Fowler was under severe strain and could not be questioned further.

She could not be questioned on the following day either. Bennett, the state's attorney, announced that the health of his witness did not permit her to appear.

At home that evening Jim Wallace said to Gypsy, "What do you think of that woman? I wish I could be sure she doesn't know something she's hiding."

He was stammering by the living room table filling his pipe with tobacco. Gypsy, looking childish in a yellow crepe frock made with short sleeves, sat with her feet tucked under her at one end of theavenport. The fox terrier's nose rested in the crook of her elbow.

"Do you mean Mrs. Fowler?" the girl asked.

Jim dropped into the heavy upholstered chair that was his favorite. As he held a flame to the pipe he nodded.

"I couldn't understand why she fainted," Gypsy admitted. "I mean unless she wanted to get out of answering any more questions. Isn't there some way you can insist on getting her there again?"

"Yes, there is. If it will do any good! In the meantime Bennett's reading those damned letters and bringing in witnesses who saw Nina Fowler having dinner together. Say—did you notice the way he read those letters? Made them sound twice as incriminating as they are. I'd get Mrs. Fowler down there in a minute if I thought I had the right hunch. I can't get over feeling that she knows something. But what?"

Gypsy leaned her head back and studied the opposite wall between narrowed lids.

"Doesn't Nina have any suggestions?" she asked.

"Nina said she'd never seen the woman but twice before. Said Fowler didn't like to have his wife come to the office. She's heard him talk to her over the telephone, though, and says sometimes they quarreled."

"Where was Mrs. Fowler when the shooting took place?"

"You heard her say she was home, didn't you?"

"But, Jim—then she hasn't any better alibi than Nina?"

"Except that Nina was in the same building and Mrs. Fowler was clear across town. Besides, there's no motive for the woman to kill her husband."

"How do you know that? There might have been 50 reasons! Jim, how long would it take for a person in a car to get from Fowler's office out to his home?"

Jim considered. "Oh, I should say off-hand about 20 minutes."

"But then she could have done it! She could have—don't you see! Suppose Mrs. Fowler came to the office after Nina left. Maybe they had a quarrel or a struggle and she fired the gun. She could have run down stairs—the building has two stairways you know—and got into a car and been home by the time the police telephoned at 6:30!"

Jim had been listening thoughtfully. Now he shook his head. "It won't work," he said. "You haven't any more case against her than any other person in town who happened to be alone at 6 o'clock that evening. No, I've got to fight the thing out as suicide. People don't get in and out of public buildings without someone seeing them. There were half a dozen witnesses in court today who swore that no one came in or went out of that building who hasn't an air-tight alibi. It must have been suicide!"

"There the discussion ended for the evening."

Gypsy awoke next morning with a headache. She sneezed half a dozen times while she was dressing and when she came to the breakfast table her eyes were smarting.

"Catching cold, aren't you?" Jim asked.

"I don't think so. I think I've already caught it." A loud "knock" punctuated the sentence.

Jim put down his coffee cup. "Take my advice," he said, "and stay home today. Go back to bed and have Matilda bring you something hot to drink. That's the only way to break up a cold."

"Oh, but Jim I hate to miss the trial!"

"Never mind about the trial. One member of the family's to do the job there. Now I want you to do as I tell you, Gypsy. Spring colds are dangerous."

She was about to protest but another attack of sneezing interrupted. "All right," the girl agreed meekly. Privately she decided she must look as miserable as she was feeling.

After he had gone Gypsy went to the kitchen to talk over the days' ordering and menus with Matilda. It was Cora's day to do the ironing. Gypsy gave Matilda instructions to take charge of the household. Then she went upstairs to her room.

Her head was hot and throbbing. She consulted the medicine cabinet and found the remedy that was usually most effective. Then she undressed, took a hot bath and got into bed.

The covers felt soft and warm. Gypsy closed her eyes and pulled the blankets more closely about her. Almost immediately she fell asleep.

When she awoke she had vague memories of a dream in which she had been floating in a cloud that had encircled a traffic officer who in reality was Bennett, the state's attorney. Bennett had arrested her and taken her to jail where a woman in a long black veil stood up and exclaimed, "You did it!"

"You know you did it!" Gypsy blinked her eyes and propped herself up on one elbow. According to the clock on the bedside table it was 2:30. She could hardly believe she had slept so long. Sleepily she fell back against the pillows.

The jolt renewed the pains in her head. She closed her eyes again but she did not sleep. A little later when Matilda came into the room on tip-toe the girl looked up and smiled.

"I had a long nap," she announced. "Is everything going all right down stairs, Matilda?"

"Yes, ma'am. I finished my baking and Cora's nearly through with the ironing. I've a cup of hot broth waiting in the kitchen for you. You have it now?"

Gypsy's throat was parched. "That would be fine," she agreed, "and will you get me a glass of cold water?"

Matilda returned with the tumbler. While Gypsy was drinking it the cook rearranged the shades at the windows to keep out the afternoon sunlight. They she went down stairs.

In 10 minutes she was back with a tray. There was a steaming bowl of beef broth cooked with vegetables and rice. Under a china cover was a plate of golden buttered toast and beside it a pot of tea.

"Is there anything else that I can get you, ma'am?"

"Nothing more," Gypsy said. "I didn't know I was hungry but this is delicious. Oh—I would like another handkerchief."

While she finished the broth and drank her tea Matilda chattered about affairs in the kitchen. Sam and Cora had bought a radio. Harriet had come up from Miss Wallace's to borrow the vacuum cleaner. The rolls had been slow rising but they were in the oven now.

"Are you feeling better now?" Matilda asked. She took the tray. Gypsy stifled a sneeze. "Much better," she said. "Has anyone telephoned?"

"No, ma'am."

"Mr. Wallace didn't send any messages?"

Matilda said he had not. She departed a moment later, closing the door after her.

Gypsy stayed in bed drawing until 5:30. Her head no longer ached and though her throat was feverish she felt much better than in the morning. She dressed in warm clothing and spent a painstaking half hour before the dressing table trying to cover up with rouge and powder the marks of illness.

Downstairs the front door slammed and she knew that Jim was home. A moment later she heard his footsteps on the stairs. Gypsy turned and left the room. He was half way up the flight when she reached the head of the stairs.

"Gypsy—do you think you should be up?"

"Oh, yes. I'm practically well now. Did anything happen today?"

While she was speaking she knew that something had gone wrong. Jim's face was worn and gloomy. He had looked tired for days but this was worse.

"What is it, Jim?" she asked quickly.

"Come on downstairs," was all he answered. When they reached the living room he pulled a chair forward for her. Gypsy sat down. Jim paced across the room and then swung around. He drew a deep breath.

"Well," he said shortly, "it's all over now! They've licked me."

"But you can't mean that! Tell me what happened."

"It's over," Jim repeated. "I'm glad you weren't there to hear it. All Bennett's performance today! I wouldn't be surprised if she gets the chair."

"Oh, Jim—no!"

"He had three witnesses," Jim went on, "technical experts—who testified that it couldn't have been suicide. Tough birds to cross-question. Of course Parker was there and he insists Fowler fired the gun. It's give-and-take as far as the evidence goes but the high sounding titles these imported experts have impressed the jury. I watched them and I'm sure of it."

"Oh, but Nina—"

Jim turned and walked toward the window. When he spoke again his voice sounded strange. "She'll have to pay for it, I guess," he said, "whether she did it or not."

He sank into a chair. Neither of them spoke for a long interval. Then Gypsy asked, "How much longer will the trial last?"

"Can't tell if Bennett has anything more up his sleeve or not. I haven't. It will probably go to the jury tomorrow."

Dinner was a somber meal. Jim's shoulders seemed heavy with the consciousness of defeat. He said little. Gypsy had forgotten her aching throat but she could not wipe from memory the vision of Nina Roberts' frightened face. She thought of the letter tucked away upstairs—the letter to Nina's sweetheart. Would she have to send it? Jim pushed away his chair after he had barely tasted the dessert. "Think I'll go to the library," he said. "You don't mind?"

The girl shook her head. After he had gone she sat for a while and then went into the living room. There were newspapers on the table with sensational headlines. Gypsy barely glanced at them and climbed the stairs to her room.

She changed her dress for a quilted, lemon-colored bathrobe. Turned for a long time she sat and stared at the floor. At last she turned down the covers and slipped into bed.

Next morning Gypsy announced that though her cold was better she thought it would be unwise to visit the courtroom. Jim looked relieved.

"Sensible idea," he said. "No use taking risks."

She stood beside him in the hall while he jammed on his hat.

"Jim," Gypsy said in a low voice, "I do hope things will go better today."

"Hope so. If there's a verdict I'll telephone."

"Yes, do."

Twenty minutes later she was in a taxicab driving east. The cab halted before a low brick bungalow and Gypsy stepped to the side-

The revival continues with Rev. Herschel Murphy, evangelist and singer, in charge.

The N. Y. P. S. meets at 7 p. m.
Evangelistic message, 8 p. m.
Dear reader, how is your experience? Does God still hear your prayers, or do you feel yourself separated from Him? "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither is His ear heavy that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God and your sins have hid His face that He will not hear." Isaiah 59:1-2.
We live in an age of pleasure seeking; the world is pleasure mad, but remember the words of John: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; if any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him, for all that is in the world, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, are not of the Father, but are of the world."
Christian—does your religion change you? If not, change your religion!
Heaven's blessings upon you all this Lord's day.

MODERNIZE YOUR HOME

A ROOM You Didn't Know You Had . . .

This old-time attic, dusty and dismal, is worse than wasted space. In the summer, it offers the home little protection from the sun's hot rays. And in the winter, it lets in the cold and moisture, and runs up the fuel bill. Thus to transform the attic into a charming, livable bed room, or a play room for the children, by means of wall board insulation, is not an extravagance, but a real economy. Let us give you more facts and figures.

If You Would Keep Abreast of Pampa of 1931—Then Modernize

LET Your HOME Be YOUNG Again

Here you see what can be done with a seemingly hopeless old house. First, a smart Colonial siding has been added, and painted white. Colonial pillars have been substituted for the ugly spindles. Attractive shutters have been introduced. A garage has been built on as a wing.

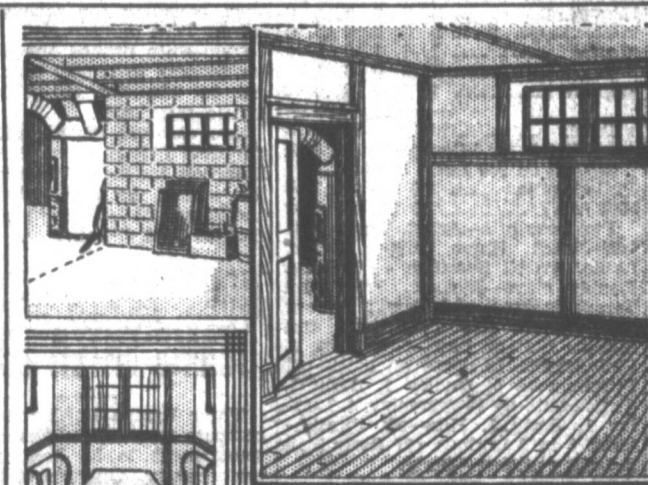

Surprisingly, all these improvements, and others in the interior, such as the arching of a square entrance, and the new wood floor, are all very inexpensive. Let us furnish you with modern plans and estimates.

LET Your HOME Catch Up To The Times . . .

This unseemly old frame house has been covered with metal lath and stucco, and flanked by a garage and a sun porch of harmonious architectural design.

At a correspondingly low cost, brick veneer can be added directly to the old wood siding, or an open foundation can be closed in with concrete block. We should be pleased to give you plans and estimates on modernization.

A NEW ROOM in the BASEMENT

With the proper use of wall-board and yellow pine flooring, this heretofore wasted portion of the basement is turned into a useful room. As a play room or den, it is delightful and inexpensive.

Likewise can a breakfast nook or service cabinet be built in your kitchen at an extremely low cost. We should be happy to furnish you with ideas, blueprints and figures.

It isn't magic that lifts pianos and heavy pieces of furniture. It isn't legerdemain that protects them from damage in transit. It is the intelligence as well as the hard work of the moving men who do the best. It seems that we would appreciate their services more if we did give their skill and courtesy more consideration.

OKLAHOMA AGGIE ACE SPRINTS CENTURY IN SECOND UNDER RECORD

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY, April 25.—A spindly, freckle faced 19-year-old youngster named Peyton Glass, Stillwater, Okla., became a sprinting hero today.

Glass, wearing the colors of the Oklahoma Aggies, and with only two years of competition behind him, conquered Eddie Tolan, world 100-yard dash champion, in one of the stunning upsets winding up the Drake relay carnival.

The 6-foot, brown haired Oklahoma youngster beat the famed Tolan to the wire by a scant nose, breaking the tape in 9.1, two-tenths of a second under the world mark held by Tolan.

Bob Hager of Iowa State, accounted for the second surprising upset by defeating Leg Sentman, University of Illinois speedster, rated as one of the outstanding hurdlers of the nation, in the 120-yard high hurdle event. Hager beat Sentman to the tape by three feet, clicking over the barriers in 14.7 for a new meet record.

Seven major records for the meet were ground into the dust after 2,600 athletes from 210 universities, colleges and high schools finished their assault on existing marks. Besides Hager's performance in making the high hurdle mark, records fell in the college sprint medley, two-mile run, 440-yard football relay, 800-yard university relay, two-mile college relay, and the shot put.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 25.

veloped the fact that the more intelligent business men have made no mistake in locating their business or factory. There are, however, speculators who are willing to take a chance on the location of a business without any consideration of the economic phase and with an utter disregard of the question of superiority in location. It is this type of citizen that cities must fortify themselves against by a zoning ordinance.

Business Comes First
Our cities are created primarily by and for business, commerce, and industry. Consequently, in zoning, business is given first consideration. The districts best suited to industries, whether because of natural location or because of some artificial advantage, as being adjacent to a railroad, are allotted to industries. Those best suited to commercial enterprises, such as the business center of the community or smaller centers in outlying areas, are allotted to commerce.

But while the city is created primarily for business, yet the purpose of business is to make life more worthwhile. Business provides the wealth by which one purchases the things that add to the completeness and joy of life—pleasant homes, education, and recreation. Business therefore cannot afford to spoil the very things to which it aspires. It is important then to establish a sufficient degree of social control over the uses of land to make sure that such uses are socially sound—that no use shall be allowed on any basis that fails to take into consideration as a proper charge the losses suffered by neighbors or the community as a whole. Yet, while there is undoubtedly demonstrated the need for collective intelligence in coordinating and controlling the uses to which portions of the city should be put, there also is equally demonstrated the need for caution. It is not always easy to differentiate the permanent from the ephemeral. Often a plot which is clearly destined ultimately for high use is not quite ready for such use, and during the interim it may properly be allowed for some lower use. Thus the plot is enabled to be productive of revenue during the time it must wait for its ultimate high use. Obviously then, intelligent control is necessary. Temporary uses should not be permitted to interfere with the proper functioning of the permanent uses which are destined ultimately to supplant them.

Parts Are Different

Zoning is recognition through law and ordinance that not all parts of a city are alike and that the health, safety, and general welfare of a community demand differentiation among them. The functions of the main divisions of a city, residential, commercial, and industrial are so dissimilar in their requirements and use that different treatments are necessary. A pavement suitable to a residential section often is unsuitable to an industrial section. The best location for an industry (usually adjacent to rail, water, or high-way transportation) often is the worst location for a residence. Commercial sections generally require high water pressure and high voltage electric power, while residential sections require only low pressure. Zoning, therefore, so assists the growth of a city that each section is used in its most advantageous way.

Zoning has a sane, common sense purpose: To guide the development of a city's area so that each part will be put to the most effective use and the whole community benefited by the substitution of system and order for chaos and disorder. This it seeks to accomplish by dividing the city into three kinds of districts, use, height, and area. Each of these districts is then classified: for instance, use districts are classified as residential, commercial, and industrial. There may be one or there may be many districts of each class, depending upon the city's size, topography, and present development.

Common Sense Plan

One of the very first things a city should do is to divide itself into zones or use districts, known as residential, commercial, and industrial. Common sense dictates that this be done so that definite provision will be made for the best use of every block within the city limits. When this is done, the ultimate population of every block may be

A well-known landscape painter, Mrs. E. R. Turman, will design and anticipate and accordingly the correct size of water, sewer, and gas mains may be designed to care for this ultimate population. In this, the proper way, rational designs of the water, sewerage, gas, and other public utility systems can be made, and in no other way can they be designed adequately and economically.

Losses Cited

Wholesale loss to property owners with corresponding decrease in values and unnecessary sacrifice of taxes to the city are continually occurring in cities that are un-zoned. A residence may be turned into a grocery or sold to make way for a filling station. If the block it is in is not ready for immediate business development, the adjoining property owners are forced to suffer inconveniences if they continue to occupy their homes for residential purposes; or else they incur financial losses if they decide to move.

The zoning regulations for Pampa are prescribed by ordinance and form a part of the city plan which is designed to control the character, and extent of the city's growth. These regulations are established in accordance with a definite plan of the city's development, and vary in character in accordance with the prevailing building development.

ODD FELLOWS ASKED TO REHEARSE DEGREE

Notices asking all members of Pampa Lodge No. 933, I. O. O. F., to attend the regular meeting Monday night, April 27, for rehearsal of degree work, were mailed during the last week by the lodge secretary.

The lodge's initiatory degree team will compete with Shamrock, Borger and Hereford teams at Borger against the horizon.

Time of the first episode is sunset and the colors in a marine sunset will be achieved by colored lighting effects. Time of the second episode is the morning of the next day, and of the third at sunset three weeks later. The interior of the deck cabin furnished action for the last two episodes.

The play involves the conflict between the extremely commonplace and practical ideals of five seamen and a youth's desire to paint; also the battle of the seaman in the storm, that rages 365 days of the year at Cape Horn.

Members of the cast are William Victoria, Ray Wiedman, Malcolm Carr, George Chappell, Paul Camp, Paul Sharpe.

OLD TIMERS OF THE PAMPAS

By ARCHER FULLINGIM Mrs. Eliza Ann Gragg was a passenger on the first "local" that ran from Wichita Falls to Fort Worth over the Fort Worth and Denver City railroad. That was a long time ago—somewhere around 1880. Mrs. Gragg and her husband were en route to San Antonio from Vernon to visit relatives.

In 1882, Leander Smith Gragg, her husband, who died here in 1924, and Tobe Odem and their outfit brought 7,000 head of cattle from Clay county to the neighborhood of Cantonment creek in Gray county. In the winter of '83 Mrs. Gragg lived near what is now Vernon with her parents. The next spring she came to Cantonment creek to live. They operated a ranch there three or four years and then moved their house up on Cabin creek. In all they lived in Gray county about eight years.

The ranch house on Cabin creek and Mr. Gragg's fences were bought by George Saunders, an employe, when the Graggs left Gray county. The present Saunders ranch was originally owned by Mr. Gragg. From Gray county, the Graggs moved to Collingsworth, where Mr. Gragg was foreman of the Rocking Chair ranch near Wellington. The family later lived three years at Mobeetie, at San Angelo, in Oklahoma, California, Colorado. Fourteen years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Gragg came back to Pampa.

Born Near Oakville Mrs. Gragg was born Feb. 22, 1862, near Oakville in Liveoak county, south of San Antonio. She moved when a girl with her parents to Taylor county, then to Jones county, where she and Mr. Gragg were married. Her next move was to Vernon. Mrs. Gragg came from Vernon to Cantonment creek in a hack. At that time Mobeetie was the only town in the Panhandle.

The pioneer woman has one child living, Mrs. Mary Lee Bullock of Pampa. Mrs. Gragg lives most of the time at the residence of an old friend, Mrs. John R. Henry.

Mr. Gragg loved a frontier country. As soon as a section showed signs of becoming too civilized he pulled up stakes and struck out for a new country. He was a pioneer as long as it was possible. . . . then when he found that the frontiers he had known and loved in the "sixties," "seventies" and "eighties" had vanished he came back to Gray county. When Mrs. Gragg was born in 1862 in Liveoak county, that section of southwest Texas was raided often by Comanches. She has been within a few miles of more than one Indian fight. The brush country in Liveoak county was first the habitat of Indians and later of outlaws, rustlers, desperadoes. Thus she was born in a pioneer country. Her father, like her husband, moved from Liveoak county when it became too populous for "elbow room," and "elbow room" meant a whole lot to his generation.

Was Trail Driver Long before the Graggs moved to Cantonment creek, Mr. Gragg started taking herds over the trail to "Dodge." It happened every spring, "and I thought nothing of it," Mrs. Gragg said. He continued to be a trail-driver long after he moved to Gray county. When Mrs. Gragg lived on the Cantonment, a man by the name of Wilson freighted from "Dodge" to Mobeetie with an ox-team. Some of her nearest neighbors were Mark Euseby, Doc Stewart, H. B. Lovett, and Dave Davis over on Red Mud.

And speaking of neighbors, Mrs. Gragg offers an explanation for the famed hospitality of the pioneers. "Our neighbors were always glad to see us when we visited them," she said. "People got along so well together in those days because they didn't live close enough to fall out with one another." A big time to the pioneers meant a big dance. Mrs. Gragg said she had given many a dance at her place.

"In those days I wish they were back a dance was no place for a drunk man, or for a man that even drank. If he even as so much took a drink and it showed on him, the boys would take him home and put him to bed—whether he wanted to go or not. . . . There never was a better set of men in the world than the cowboys. They respected themselves and everybody else, especially women—respect for a woman meant much more than it does now. You didn't see any boys drinking."

"Worse Off Now" Mrs. Gragg is of the opinion that prohibition is the "ruination of this generation." "It's just played the wild with everything. . . . why even kids peddle booze nowadays," she declared. "What's to be done, I don't know, but it seems to me that we're worse off now with prohibition than we were without it. I don't know which is the worse, bootleggers or saloons. . . . At any rate you didn't see boys going into saloons, and if a saloon-keeper sold liquor to a minor the courts popped it to him. . . . however, what is best to do, I don't know."

One of the valued friends of the Graggs was "Cap" Arrington. They knew him when he was captain of the Ranger forces in Jones county and then when he held the same position at Mobeetie. The captain was a small man when compared with some of the Rangers, Mrs. Gragg said. "He had the keenest blackest eyes I ever saw." The captain was sheriff at Mobeetie and later moved to his ranch in Hemphill county. He was buried at Mobeetie beside his child.

Mrs. Gragg did not like California. "I had to learn life over again when I lived out there," she said. "There were too many nationalities. To me Los Angeles is the most detestable city in the world. I never was so glad to leave a place."

Mr. Gragg was 74 years old when he died.

Mrs. Frank Soodhalter and little daughter returned Thursday from Shreveport, La., where they have spent the last month visiting Mrs. Soodhalter's parents.

Mad Pursuit

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Like a snake eternally wiggling out of its skin was Julian Lake. So mused his motherless daughter, Nora, in the garden of the Italian villa Mrs. Nevers had lent them. His wanderlust never satisfied as he gabbled unprofitably at painting, Lake led her an uncertain life. One sweet memory she cherished—that of a bicycle trip in England and the youth of 20 she had met. Even after their casual farewell, his philosophy and poetic aspirations had left their impress on the girl five years his junior. Half forgotten, his name Jonathan Thayer, comes to mind when she recalls that her father's guest, Nicholas Thayer, a painter, has the same family name. The rising sun disturbs her reflection that perhaps he knows Jonathan.

"I can't stand this hole any longer." He rumbled his dark hair with long nervous fingers. "I'm tired of wandering. I'm tired of meeting people we never see again. Oh, Julian, let's go home! I want to live! Nora cried flinging out the old cry of youth. "You can't live when you're always thinking of money, wondering how you can pay the next night's lodging, hoping you'll meet someone who'll lend you something."

"Well, we'll go home then," he grinned. But Nora knew that he would promise her anything she asked and show only a hurt surprise when she reminded him of it later. But now his silence was transparent as silence often is between two people who have lived long together; so that she could almost understand his keen appraisal of her. He was looking at her rosy mouth in the fresh pallor of her face. A the eyes so full of light that her Irish mother had given her; at the terrible red blouse she wore and the slim legs in stockings that needed darning. But, Julian Lake thought, disregarding the discrepancies in her clothes, she was a lovely creature.

"Come in!" her father's voice called. "So it's you, where is our slave?" "Magdalena didn't come." Her father with a sweep of his hand cleared the table beside his bed, knocking Don Quixote on the floor. "What have you got there? I feel like a breast of chicken and ice champagne," he said. But he sat contentedly munching toast and drinking the steaming coffee.

Nora sat down and observed him with delight. His crest of hair, his wine-colored eyes, his long face with its lively expression. His skinny arms protruded from the sleeves of his pajama jacket like brown twigs. "Send me my cigarettes. I was talking to Thayer last night. You know he's here. He knows of a place in the Tyrol. . . . the truth is, Nora, . . . if you'll give me some money."

"Not enough. We'll have to buy Magdalena," she told him. "My poor bourgeois child, who ever heard of paying the good Magdalena? She comes with this villa. . . . But I'm sure Mrs. Nevers expected you to pay her."

"I shall speak to Mrs. Nevers!" he said serenely. "And you might ask Nicholas for a few lire, just as he can."

old peasant woman sat before her dark hearth, looking through her open door. Sunlight keen and brilliant streaked across the earthen floor, lay on her patient folded hands, her bent head in its white coil, the blue of her cotton skirt. Nora moved back and continued to look at the picture. The trembling sunlight, the polished panes of the window, the woman's dark, lined face.

The painter had laid bare the life of the old woman, in the patient resignation of the face, the folded hands. It was so unlike the clashing colors in which her father painted, that it was as though Nicholas Thayer had used another medium. She hurried downstairs, set the tray with a crash on the table in the salon and saw that Nicholas Thayer was walking up and down the room. He was the very person that she wanted to avoid, but she was intensely curious about him. To the girl of twenty this man in

"That man!" she said with a scorn she thought superb. "He never looked your way, did he?" he asked, his face cringing into delighted laughter. She tried to be very dignified, opened the door with one hand, but the tray tilted and a cup slopped over and she set it straight with a bang. Outside the door she heard her father's chuckling laughter.

Still smarting with anger at the taunt her father had flung at her, she walked past Nicholas Thayer's room. The door was open. But he was not there. She stopped, arrested by something she saw on the table. It was a small painting propped up against the wall. The picture seemed to draw to it all the light and interest of the room. An

The curt "Good morning" he gave her away today, his voice was harsh like his personality. Nora wondered what could have attracted her father to such a man. Observing him narrowly she saw the structure of his face was violent, with its jutting nose and strong choh & company although not having much interest in grains through the board of trade clearing house had considerable business with other firms.

The close was nervous in all grains at about the day's lowest figures, with corn and oats ranging from 1 cent to 2 1/2 cents lower, eye 1 1/2-1 3/4 cff, and wheat unchanged to a setback of 1 1/2. Provisions finished unchanged to 7 cents higher.

Contrasting with drought north-west, moisture was general elsewhere, and crop prospects for domestic winter wheat were asserted as almost perfect. Exporters, however, apparently were not buying more than just sufficient for hand to mouth needs. Wheat at the finish was the lowest with one exception since 1896.

Provisions were firm, upheld by steadiness of the hog market. Closing indemnities: Wheat, May 81 1/2, offers; July 58 1/2-1 1/2, 61-61 1/2; Sept. 58 1/2-1 1/2, 61-61 1/2; Dec. 61 1/2-1 1/2, 64 1/2-1 1/2. STEEPS PRICES HIGHER KANSAS CITY, April 25. (U. S. D. A.)—Cattle trade around the eleven market circuit this week was featured by a fairly broad demand for light weight steers and yearlings with prices unevenly 25-75 higher on fat points showing upturns of 1.00 on fat light yearlings. Medium weight and heavy steers, however, closed the week slow and at most markets current values are little better than steady with a week ago.

Last week's sharp decline on killing steers served to check the movement of South Texas grass steers. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 177,000 as compared with 185,500 last week.

Hogs were unevenly 25-75 lower than a week ago, strong weight butchers generally showing more decline than the lighter weights. Current quotations are almost back to the low spot of the year. Total offerings this week were around 443,000 a slight increase over last week.

Fat lambs closed the week steady to unevenly lower, fed lambs generally 25-50 off and springers steady to easier. Mature killing classes of sheep slumped 25-50. The movement of aged stock out of Texas was liberal. The week's supply approximated 442,000 against 432,000 last week.

HUMORIST HAS POLO STAR IN WILL JR., HIS SON

Will Rogers, the Oklahoma cow puncher, who conquered Broadway and the London Strand and went on to become the intimate of rulers of men, is as well known professionally as any living man.

But the real Rogers—the family man, the private citizen—is as little known as the details of the Einstein theory.

Rogers is the ideal type of father, for instance. The sort of a man who takes an unfeigned interest in the mental and physical growth of his children. But there is a Spartan-like streak in Pappy Rogers that guides the recreations of his offspring into the more robust sports.

No japing pong or croquet playing for them. Each of the young Rogers, as soon as he was able to toddle about, was placed astride a horse and taught to ride.

Will Rogers, Jr., under the tutelage of his parent, has become one of the outstanding polo players on the Pacific coast. The daughter and young Jimmy also are expert at the game and the Rogers family, father, daughter and two sons, frequently put on practice skirmishes on their private polo field.

Rogers can't bear to see a horse mistreated. Many a worn out nag has found sanctuary on his ranch. He never has been known to sell a horse unless he was certain that the purchaser would give it the same kindly treatment accorded by Rogers himself.

The great comedian-humorist:

soft-heartedness extends to people as well. He never has laid a hand on his children. Rogers, the private citizen, is a typical outdoor American, varying, however, from the conventional pattern in his exhaustive fund of humor and his fastidious curiosity about what is going on in the world. Rogers' latest starring Fox comedy is Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee", with Maureen O'Sullivan, Myrna Loy, William Farnum and Frank Albertson, directed by David Butler, now at the La Norma theater.

Amarillo New Gas Turned Into Mains

AMARILLO, April 25. (AP)—Gas from Amarillo's new municipally-owned mains was turned into the home of the city's first customer this afternoon. Mayor Ernest O. Thompson, City Engineer E. N. Stanley, City Manager W. N. Durham watched the connection made and the first flame lighted. The connection was in the home of W. F. Curtis. Five other homes are in the block, and all the owners have asked for city gas. Mayor Thompson said. Other meters will be installed Monday. Although bids for completion of the city's system will not be opened until Tuesday night, Mayor Thompson said a shipment of large meters for commercial users would be received and installed within a few days.

Higher Taxes on Rich Advocated

WASHINGTON, April 25. (AP)—Higher taxes on the rich were advocated today by Senator Couzens to help meet government expenses. The Michigan Republican, a wealthy man himself, also sponsored revival of the levy on transfers of property and money before death, known as the gift tax, and relief from community property laws in several states under which husbands and wives are permitted to file separate income tax returns.

A column of news and views for Pampa people and our farmer friends.

Pat's left eye was badly discolored. His wife asked who did it. Pat: Mike Murphy. Wife: What? Do you mean to let a little shrimp like Mickie Murphy black your eye? Pat: Martha, don't speak disrespectfully of the dead.

If you happen to get around the City Hall or Park in the next few days and hear a motor put-pat, it isn't a motor boat. We have just delivered to the City a Jacobson Motor Lawn Mower. It has plenty of capacity, and City Manager Gwin plans to keep the City's premises as neat as a pin, as an example to the rest of us.

The "Daily Grind" is absent from the work one like.

We want to again call your attention to our Special Lawn Mower. Full ball bearing, 16" reel, four blades, with 10" wheel giving ample leverage on the reel to insure easy turning. This mower is exceptionally low priced at only $9.75.

If somebody else is doing your thinking, you're doing somebody else's work.

Did you know that you can buy a genuine Remington, guaranteed, pocket knife, popular size, with three best shaped blades for $1.00? You sure can, and we have them in stock.

Mrs. S.: I want to give my husband a big surprise for his birthday. Mrs. P.: Show him your birth certificate.

We slipped up on Guss Greene this last week and sold him a tractor, a truck, a one-way plow and a grain drill. Guss is a good boy, and is making a good start.

He: If you keep looking at me like that I'm going to kiss you. She: Well, I can't hold this expression just longer.

FISH CONTEST
We have had a number of declarations for entry in this contest. Drop in and see the prizes. Your choice of a Montague Fishkill fly rod or the new No. 27 Martin's Automatic reel. These are prizes worth working for.

Now that smoking by ladies no longer shocks anyone, the girls will not enjoy it half so much.

We are still selling a lot of Eureka Vacuum Cleaners. Call us for a demonstration. We are glad to show you what this machine will do.

Mrs. Hardup to husband: I wish you'd speak to your daughter. I caught her kissing the ice man this morning. Husband: Good heavens! That is awful!

Mrs. Hardup: I should say it is. The idea of her wasting her time on the ice man when we owe the grocer sixty dollars.

For next week we offer a Special on a 20 Gal. Galvanized, Corrugated Iron Garbage Can, with seams, cover and drop handles for $2.15.

William J. Morse, plant explorer, has brought back to United States new type soybeans from the Orient which may prove substitutes for wheat. He is shown examining samples of "miso," soybean ingredient of Japanese soup. At upper left is shown a Manchurian "cartwheel," a wheat meal cake fed to livestock.

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—Dolores Costello, during her two-year retirement from the screen, found a vocal instructor right at home. John Barrymore, her husband, assumed the responsibility for lowering her voice preparatory to her screen return.

When talks were younger, Dolores Costello was Warner Brothers' leading feminine star, and appeared in more audacious than any other woman up to the time of her retirement. In these films her voice always recorded higher than its natural pitch, but for the ingenue roles she was playing it did not seem necessary to change it.

Simple Training
Her decision to undertake more mature and sophisticated parts on her return, coupled with improvements in recording device, made it advisable to lower the pitch of her natural voice, and Barrymore the actor and husband became vocal tutor also.

The "course" covered three months, during which she practiced intonation and low register diction. The reading of blank verse, especially Shakespeare, Barrymore recommends, and adds the Sermon on the Mount and Lincoln's Gettysburg address as "simple things of great beauty" valuable for the same purpose, along with the customary breathing, diaphragm and other exercises.

Hoover Supporters Plan Organization

WASHINGTON, April 25. (AP)—Organization of the Hoover forces, locking to reorganization of the president by the Republicans next year is under way with Raymond Benjamin, San Francisco, a personal friend of Mr. Hoover, taking a prominent role.

Benjamin came to Washington last winter and has established a law office here. He has no direct relation with the Republican National committee.

However, his recent activity and conversations with Republican leaders close to the administration have given these party chiefs the understanding that Benjamin is looking after the political fences of the president.

Benjamin, a veteran in politics, declined to discuss the subject other than to say he was interested in politics as a pastime and has no ambitions whatever for public office of any kind for himself.

Crusader Fails To Get Freedom

GREENVILLE, April 25. (AP)—Miss Beulah Allred, prohibition crusader, failed to gain freedom from the Hunt county jail in a habeas corpus hearing today. District Judge L. L. Bowman ruled she was legally held and the recent trial in Raines county in which she was adjudged insane was properly conducted.

Her attorney announced an appeal would be made to the court of criminal appeals.

Miss Allred charged in the habeas corpus petition that she was the victim of a Raines county bootlegging ring, members of which she alleged sought to place her in a state hospital because she had made a fight against them and had publicly accused a mail carrier of drunkenness while carrying mail. She also charged she was not present at the Raines county trial and was not allowed to name the attorney who defended her.

DIXIE HAILS THEM AS QUEENS

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 25. (AP)—Cotton carnivals are much in vogue as Dixie prepares to plant another crop of the fleecy staple.

WAS QUEEN

—Hester's Studio. Miss Louise Pearce, above, reigned as queen of the Pampa high school carnival attended recently by hundreds of local residents. The festive event was for the benefit of the high school annuit.

More than 60 carnivals or festivals, designed to popularize the use of cotton for clothing and to demonstrate the many new uses found for the south's chief cash crop, have been organized in practically every state where cotton is grown.

"Cotton Week" Gov. I. C. Blackwood has officially proclaimed April 29 to 35 as "Cotton week" in South Carolina and a mammoth carnival is planned at the state capital, as well as in other cities of the Palmetto state.

Cotton week follows the close of the southeastern cotton festival at Anderson, S. C., one of the biggest annual celebrations of the kind in the south.

Considerable impetus to the idea of holding cotton carnivals was given by the Woman's club of Gastonia, N. C., home of more than 100 cotton manufacturing plants. Mrs. W. D. Anderson, president of the club, has addressed more than 30,000 people in 99 talks throughout the south.

Many See Exhibit A two-day program in Gastonia attracted 25,000 people, where a comprehensive style exhibit of cotton clothing was on display. Various uses of cotton in building roads, making bags for fruit, vegetables and foodstuffs, cotton fabric letter-heads, and many other articles were also demonstrated.

A similar event at Memphis, Tenn., fashioned after New Orleans Mardi Gras celebration, was spread over a week, with colorful parades and fancy dress balls at which only cotton costumes were worn. The festival included the coronation of a king and queen, whose throne was made of bales of cotton.

Cotton growers and manufacturers are cooperating with the Cotton-Textile institute of New York in staging the festivals.

It is estimated that 500 school children from all parts of the North Plains will be here for the music festival May 6 and 7.

Bands will come from Clarendon, Panhandle, White Deer, Groom, Canadian, Perryton, and Fortale, N. M. The local band also will participate. Orchestras are expected from Clarendon, Perryton, Panhandle, Canadian, and Pampa.

The following activities are slated for Wednesday, May 6: Band concerts, 10 a. m.; orchestras, 11 a. m.; instrumental solos, including violin and band instrument numbers, 1 p. m.; rhythmic bands, 2 p. m.; harmonica bands, 2:30 p. m.; glee clubs, 3 p. m.

Thursday will be devoted to piano solos beginning at 10 a. m. and vocal solos beginning at 1 p. m.

Artists Coming Two well-known artists, Hazel Silver Ricket and Joe Lefkowitz, will be among the music week attractions.

The soprano made her appearance in the past several years ago and was acclaimed as an artist of the first rank. She is known as one of the west's best singers—a woman who loves music for its own sake and who is pleasing in her manner of presentation.

Joe Lefkowitz became nationally known when he traveled with Madame Amara No. 1 as violin soloist. Although a young man, he plays a variety of numbers which shows his virtuosity and mastery of technique. Often his program includes the Saranite "Gypsy Airs," "Toselli's Serenade," and "Melody," by Tschalowski. He displays virtuosity without sacrificing sweetness. His capacity to make his audience enjoy violin music has attracted frequent comment. He and Hazel Silver Ricket will be heard Wednesday evening, May 6, at the city hall.

Mrs. Carr will be accompanist. Local churches will open music week on Sunday, May 3, in a series of special services, followed by a massed choir performance in the afternoon at the First Methodist church.

College Singers Expected On Monday evening, May 4, there will be a dual program at the city hall, consisting of a piano ensemble by 16 local pianists and a series of numbers by the girls' glee club of West Texas Teachers college. About 30 girls from the college will present choral and solo selections.

Their numbers will include "The Merry Dance" (Molloy-Lynes); "The Shoe-Shoo" (Mayhew); "Dutch Lullaby" (Wilson); "The False Prophet" (Scott); and "Pan, on a Summer Day" (Bliss). Miss Ada Clark is director. Admission will be 15 cents, the lowest charge that will cover the cost of the evening.

The ensemble, directed by Mrs. May Foreman Carr and equipped with eight Baldwin pianos furnished by Russell Music company, will play three famous overtures. These will be "The Call of Bagdad," "Ruy Blas" and "William Tell."

Pupils to Entertain The Tuesday evening program, May 5, will be an enjoyable miscellaneous entertainment by public school pupils, directed by Miss Iva

PUPILS OF MADELINE TARPLEY APPEAR IN RECITAL ON FRIDAY

Playing against a background of flowers, piano pupils of Miss Madeline Tarpley delighted a group of friends and music-lovers when they appeared in a recital at the home of their teacher Friday evening.

Favorable comments were heard in all parts of the room when Dixie Nichols, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nichols, played "Sailing" by Williams.

The two boys on the program, J. R. Griffing, dressed as a pirate and playing "Captain Kidd," and J. L. Nichols, dressed as an Indian and playing "Indian Song," also were given pleasing reception.

Mary Lynn Schofield, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Schofield, made quite an impression playing "Gypsy" which she won a place at the recent Panhandle Music festival at Amarillo.

Loris Bryson played "Fou Follet," the piece with which she won first place in the Panhandle music contest.

The two piano numbers by Virginia Lee Bechtelheimer and Loris Bryson were popular. They exhibited remarkable ability for girls so young.

Other pupils taking part were Dorothy Bumples, Maudean Woodworth, Mrs. Mary Gibson, Mildred Haggard, Carolyn Surret, Virginia Nelson, Iris Nichols, Jeanne Murrie, Ann Buckler, Orene Offord, Dixie Nichols, Feggie Stephens, Gloria Conley, Carolyn Grevett, Vivian Campbell, and Etta Marie Choate.

PAMPA DELEGATES ACTIVE IN PARENT-TEACHER GATHERING

REPRESENTATIVES ARE HOME AFTER BUSY MEETING

Local delegates took an active part in the meeting of the Eighth district, Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations which has just closed in Perryton.

Mrs. G. C. Malone, endowment chairman, presented the plan which has been undertaken by the Texas association to raise $50,000, the interest on this amount to be used for extension and improvement work. The Eighth district has been asked to raise $270 during the coming year.

Mrs. Malone listed those who had already subscribed to the fund and, when she asked for further donations, received a favorable response from the floor. She attended all board meetings and conducted study classes on program making.

County Supt. John B. Hessey addressed the convention on "Thrill" and spoke at the health luncheon. He was given an invitation to be one of the main speakers at the 1932 conference.

Principal J. A. Meek of Baker school made an extemporaneous speech at the general assembly. He also made a sensational appearance when he "fainted" at the health luncheon. Mrs. G. C. Malone screamed, and Mrs. A. L. Patrick and Miss Bess Killough administered first aid treatment. Some of the guests, mistaking the stunt for a real faint, attempted to dash water on Mr. Meek.

Others attending from Baker school were Mrs. Roy Kilgore, Mrs. Claude Lard, Mrs. S. G. Atwood, and Mrs. A. L. Jones.

Mrs. Lard presented the Baker report.

of commerce, was appointed to draw up a brief to be presented to the state highway department in behalf of designation of that part of the route now undesignated.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

THE QUALITY OF JUSTICE

It has been probably a year since this paper expressed the opinion that to be it for an indiscretion, a failure to gauge official proprieties, a lapse from ethical perspective or a venal act, A. B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, has paid his shot and evened the score.

Since that time the punishment, unique and extreme in the annals of the country, has been visited again daily upon Mr. Fall and his devoted, loyal, fighting family.

It is not our conception of justice that the scales must overbalance, or that it seeks to pursue its victim after he has squared his account and earned the right to look the world in the face.

The time has come when this long continuing and apparently endless punishment of years, mental, spiritual, physical, financial, should end. The point is that we are not dealing with a Sinclair, but with people of deep pride and high spirit whose humiliation has gone, in all conscience, far enough.

Judge Fall has lived an aggressive, challenging commanding life for three score years and ten.

We dislike sob-stuff as much as he does. But, he is now a white-haired invalid, without rancor, sitting quietly among grand-children, asking only peace, while his family is conscious only of what it regards as a bitter and inexplicable injustice, with its impending, crowning climax of humiliation.

Nor can it be forgotten that while the alleged bribe-giver is given a clean bill, the alleged bribe-taker is held guilty.

One cannot contemplate this fact without being conscious of a cloud upon justice. And if we are not mistaken, the feeling grows rapidly in this country that Fall has been made to bear disproportionately the brunt of obloquy fallen upon our worst discredited national administration.

As far as his home state is concerned, we believe Judge Fall in his age and adversity has won the sympathy and respect of even his bitterest political enemies—one of which this newspaper was for years. The deep feeling shown this week by his neighbors and fellow old timers is symptomatic. His ordeal has become that of the public. We are sure it will rally to any effort desired by himself or family looking to its termination.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

THE CONCEITED DRIVER

Conceit, which often finds expression in thoughtlessness, rudeness and selfishness, is considered of prime importance as a cause of automobile accidents, by Dr. Paul Schroeder, Illinois State criminologist.

"An appreciation of the rights of others on the highways appears to be a more important qualification of a driver than even normal intelligence," he says.

Dr. Schroeder's opinion is backed up by statistics. He recently made a study in Detroit of 100 prisoners convicted of manslaughter with an automobile. Only three had serious physical defects, one was subject to epilepsy, and one was insane. The old idea that anyone in good health and with reasonable mental qualifications can drive an automobile safely no longer holds. The egocentric driver, disregarding all but himself, taking chance after chance, whether he be mentally a genius or a moron, is a constant menace to life and property.

A little old-fashioned courtesy, which amounts to regard for rights of others, is the individual cure for the conceited driver. He presents a problem that must be solved as he is responsible for a large part of motor accidents.

The year 1931 opened with a record-breaking motor fatality toll—2,410 deaths in January, an increase of 30 per cent over January, 1930. Here is grisly proof of the need for a thorough-going investigation into every phase of the accident situation.—Mobeetie News.

"OUR BALKANS"!

OF NEW BOOKS

By RICHARD MASSOCK. NEW YORK.—Gabriele d'Annunzio has been a legend, but hardly an angelic poet-lover.

Yet "Gabriel the Archangel" is the title of a new biography of the Italian poet, written by Federico Nardelli and translated by Arthur Livingston.

The archangelic motif is carried throughout the book, in itself an almost lyrical narrative. The archangel is even made to fall, using the customary phrase.

Archangel: It was at a very early age, in his school days. And his nocturnal escapades caused the instructors considerable anxiety.

The biographer dispels legends about the poet's own birth. Gabriele was born in 1893 into a respectable middle-class home in Pescara, an Adriatic village. His own statement that he was born "in the year 1894, aboard the barkentine Irene, at sea, in the Adriatic," seems to have been mere poetic license.

Gabriele had a way with the girls, and soon after he broke into verse at the age of 15 he became a social lion. Journalism first claimed him and he was a reporter of society gossip. Thus he met a Duchess of Caluso. He promptly eloped with her noble daughter.

But he was not a faithful husband. His first contract with a publisher had provided that the publisher should open accounts at a shop "supplying bouquets and bonbons for his sweethearts."

There were to be many more sweethearts. "Many of the women of d'Annunzio's grandest love affairs are still alive," the biographer notes. "To speak of them, therefore, by name is forbidden."

But several can be named, among them Eleonora Duse, the actress, for whom the poet fashioned plays that cost her more money than they earned. Nardelli writes of the poet's career in politics and aviation, but even that is linked with his amours.

D'Annunzio now lives in a like-side villa, with two of his most faithful feminine friends, the biographer notes. The poet has never been reticent about putting his experiences in his writings. Nardelli calls his poetry "pornographic."

D'Annunzio has always been given to spectacular and lavish living. Even now he fires a salute from a cannon on his lawn every day as a symbol of the defense of Italy's frontiers, "dips in oil" every visitor and sends him away laden with gifts.

It is like the man, too, that he has his tomb already prepared.

Christian Church Will Convene Soon

WICHITA FALLS, April 25. (AP)—More than 1,000 members of the Christian church in Texas are expected to gather here for the 46th annual convention of the brotherhood May 12 to 15, according to Harry Hines, Wichita Falls, president of the 1931 convention.

Religious education, missions and evangelism are the subjects which will come in for the most discussion by the convention. All organizations of the church operating in Texas will make their annual report to the convention. These include such institutions as Texas Christian university, Fort Worth; Jarvis Christian institute, Hawkins; Mexican Christian institute, San Antonio; Juliette Fowler homes, Dallas; Texas Christian Missionary society, Fort Worth, and various others.

Quanah Bridge Is Nearing Completion

QUANAH, April 25. (AP)—Most of the concrete floor of the new steel and concrete bridge being erected across the Red river between Quanah and Eldorado, Okla., has been poured, and this work will be finished within a short time, according to A. D. Hutchinson, Texas state engineer in charge of construction.

Hand rails in cement pilings will be placed on the structure following the completion of the cement floor.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

(By Rodney Dutcher, NEA Service Writer) WASHINGTON—Judging from 87 elongated mimeographed sheets received in six weeks from the democratic publicity bureau and 41 similar sheets in the same period from the republican publicity bureau, the party arguments for the 1932 campaign as thus far formulated are as follows:

DEMOCRATS Hoover promised prosperity under a republican administration and now look at us.

The largest single factor in the sharp decline of our foreign trade was the Hoover-Grundy tariff bill.

The tariff also deepened the distress and misery of the farmer.

The administration has made no constructive effort to lessen the seriousness of the situation or to alleviate suffering.

Hoover and members of his cabinet spent many months trying to fool the people about the extent of unemployment.

The great bulk of the president's campaign promises have not been kept and no attempt has been made to keep them.

The administration has maintained a consistent general policy of subterfuge, vacillation and evasion.

It has played cheap politics with the depression, as in its treatment of Democratic Senator Wagner's unemployment measures.

Mr. Hoover, the great engineer, and Mr. Mellon, the "greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton," have so managed the country's affairs that the government now faces a deficit of somewhere near a billion dollars.

The republicans are so bankrupt for issues that they seek to make a national issue of the corruption of some obscure Tammany judges, forgetting their own complete silence anent the Harding administration scandals.

REPUBLICANS The republicans have effected agricultural measures which have kept our farm prices far above those in other countries.

They inaugurated a tremendous construction program which gave hundreds of thousands of jobs to men who needed them.

The country would have had to endure conditions frightful to contemplate had Herbert Hoover not been at the helm.

No man in office ever worked more intelligently, devotedly and industriously than Hoover has.

The depression was due primarily to depression outside this country and drought within.

The Red Cross functioned 100 per cent and children in drought areas have never been so healthy as they now are.

The democrats have offered no program of their own to the country, except for Chairman Raskob's proposal to solve economic problems by repealing the anti-trust laws and offering everybody a drink.

The republicans gladly accept the tariff as a presidential campaign issue.

Every democratic tariff has brought on disaster. The democratic party wants to substitute low foreign wage scales for high American wage scales.

The democratic national committee has developed a community of interest with the grain gamblers in attacking the farm board.

The south should throw off the shackles of democracy; its great industrial progress has been made under republican rule.

Republicans have put through all the immigration restriction laws; Tammany democrats always oppose such legislation.

Tammany exercises control over the national democratic party.

A student league in Mexico has decided to boycott American jazz. In a determined effort, perhaps, to shake off the "blues."

PAMPA TOPICS OF OUR CITY

"HE THAT RULETH OVER MEN MUST BE JUST, RULING IN THE FEAR OF GOD."—II Sam. 23:3.

There are few absolute rulers in this year 1931. A. D. Slam has the only one retaining the power of life and death over his subjects, and this king is resting in New York state preparatory to having a cataract removed from one eye. He is mild-tempered and appears to be fairly popular with his people.

Ruling justly is not acceptable to modern men unless they are allowed to participate. Democracy is the issue today. One Spanish pretender would like to be king and is willing to hold an empty title.

Crowned heads, whether the crown of gold is worn or merely the cloak of authority vested by vote, are uneasy. Most of the rulers of this age seem to desire to give out justice, although there are some chiefly presidents—who are dictatorial, extravagant, and corrupt. Such charges are made in Cuba, for instance, where the government assesses high taxes and maintains an army to keep it in power.

Pampa Kivanians, or half of them, will dine on a certain seed of a leguminous plant May 4. The losers of an attendance contest will eat beans while the victorious side savours fried chicken and all the "trimmings" across the table.

Considering the tough condition of most hens at this time of year, the Pampa is not inclined to waste much sympathy upon the bean eaters. This writer is fond of bean—butter and brown. He also has a liking for Mexican beans, the speckled variety. Cooked well done with plenty of juice, what is better than a steaming plate of beans, with corn bread, and bacon, butter, and onions. The Kivanians may get only beans—beans only, but still the Pampa does not think the victors won so much after all. We like beans.

With increased appropriations available through new tax levies, the state should find it possible to establish an experiment station on the upper plains of Texas. Wheat would be chiefly studied, but diversified products suitable for culture on wheat lands would be subjects of experimentation. Pampa, located in the wheat belt but near the "breaks," should have a good chance to get the new station. The climate here is typical of the north plains and the level soil is capable of producing much more revenue than it now is.

An editor's answer: When a questionable situation arises in a town, it is quite the fashion to remark that the newspaper ought to say something about that. The average citizen feels quite certain he could run a newspaper better than the editor does, and if he were publisher of that sheet, he'd show 'em, you can bet. As a matter of fact, if he has horse sense, he would do just as the editor does—put the soft pedal on family rows, church squabbles, scandals not involving major principles, and such matters of ultimately minor importance as will adjust themselves with the passing of time.

The newspaper critic ought not to expect the newspaper man to advocate or attack any proposition which he himself lacks the courage to support or assail over his own signature. The editor is willing, ever eager, to push any project in the public interest, but is not willing to pull chestnuts out of the fire for individuals or factions.—Canadian Record.

The above extract indicates that someone has been asking J. M. Noble to do some dirty work. If an editor begged requests of many people to "ball out" their enemies, the newspaper would become a snarling, biting institution which would get little business and deserve little. The public interest is far from the interest of an individual with a peeve. A newspaper is a business as well as an institution, and when it assumes every man's quarrel it must assume every man's enemies, every man's ill will, and must suffer—in the long run—lost prestige and forfeited confidence. It does not perpetuate and intensify community quarrels.

Roger W. Babson, business statistician, told President Hoover that he believed business had "turned the corner" and would gradually but slowly improve.

ABOUT NEW YORK

(By Richard Massock) NEW YORK—Pola Negri is writing her memoirs. Her title for them is "Confession," a title fraught with meaning.

But wait—have patience. They are not to be published for some time, although she has written up to the last hundred pages. The Polish vamp of Hollywood knows the better part of valor. Oh, my, yes, as chatter writers say for sake of punctuation.

Discreet Pola is dashing off her experiences and recollections in her spare time, of which she has had quite a bit while the talkies caught up with her accent.

But she explained that some of the names will have to be aged in her manuscript, especially in her wartime anecdotes. She was rather cryptic about that, smiling that enigmatic Negri smile.

Same Pola Rudolph Valentino's name and that of her lately divorced Prince Mdivani will have a page or more in her book, we may be pretty sure. Both gallant gentlemen are already in her past.

Miss Negri received us in her Park avenue hotel with a typical Pola pose. There was no tiger rug in the room, so she was sloped sedately enough against a heap of divan cushions, her right cheek laid on her clasped hands. Her flowered chiffon dress (we guessed it was chiffon), was the color of a pitcher of snapdragons.

Miss Negri was just stopping here a few days between Europe and Hollywood. Even so, the fan mail was trickling in from New York admirers who had read of her arrival. She showed us one note.

It was from a Polish boy who asked if he might play the violin for her. At the same time the office called to say a woman was waiting in the lobby to see her, that the woman said she was a relative.

"Poor thing," said Pola. "I have no relatives." "Hollywood, I Am Back"

Miss Negri is back to try for the talkies. It has been at least three years since she made a picture. Two of those years have been passed in Paris and London. She was so ill for one year of that time the doctors would not let her read the newspapers, so she was curious to find out just what has happened to Hollywood.

She likes Hollywood and missed her sun-bathing. Her illness, she thought, was caused by the European cold.

She wants to interpret Flaubert's Madame Bovary for the first time in what she calls the cinema. Then maybe Hollywood will let her do a talking-singing version of "Carmen."

"I have a singing voice, you know," she said. Her accent seemed as good as Marlene Dietrich's, for example.

"I learned English from a Scotch teacher before I came to America," she recalled. "Years ago I spoke with a Scotch accent."

"Almost every day I speak five languages. My maid is French and my friends who telephone are of many nationalities, Russians, Poles, Germans, Italians."

Home again is Hollywood, where she has "holdings." "I leave Wednesday," she said, "for a new venture." And so we turn Pola Negri over to the Californians.

SCATTERING ADVERTISING MEANS WASTE

Merchants in many cities suffer because they scatter their advertising appropriations. Too frequently merchants just want to be good friends, and do not consider how they are wasting money when they are spending their advertising funds. The result is that space in the leading advertising mediums must be slashed and the copy probably is not as effective as the merchants deserve.

Today there are only two cities in Texas under 100,000 population, so far as we know, that have two or more daily newspapers under two ownerships. One Texas city has a second daily because the owner of the established newspaper decided to run for mayor. He supported himself through the columns of his own newspaper. As he had the only local medium, it was not thought proper for him to take this advantage in municipal affairs to further his own candidacy.

When one realizes the changes that have taken place in Texas in the past few years, he can understand something of the stringent times in the newspaper business. In Wichita Falls the Times and Record-News were consolidated under one ownership three years ago. Waco newspapers were merged about four years ago. Then, a third daily was started and lived only a few months.

A few days ago we called attention to the remarks at the Panhandle Press association in regard to Amarillo being a newspaper "grave yard." Early in 1926, The News and Globe were consolidated under one ownership after the latter publication had lost a vast sum of money. Despite the lesson learned, a group in 1927 established the Amarillo Sun, another publication, which was published only six months.

When a third newspaper cannot succeed in a city of possibly 50,000, as Amarillo had in 1927, together with boom conditions, it can be understood that the newspaper field is a very limited business. If cities reaches the metropolitan stage find it necessary to limit the number of publications, it is evident that smaller places cannot be expected to do the impossible—that is, support three daily newspapers.

Amarillo and Waco merchants did not care to split their advertising appropriations so that they could not use effective space, and this undoubtedly will be the story in most other places where ambitious publishers try to evade the laws of business economy.

The U. S. department of agriculture has made a movie of the life history of the prune. But you can hardly expect a government film to depict the leading character in a perpetual stew.
