WASHINGTON—The National Woman's party finds its ears ringing with an unaccustomed amount of praise since it directed everybody's attention to the labor department's cruel treatment of Mrs. Lillian Larsh, the destitute American-born woman who was deported along with her four little girls to a Canadian town where she knew no one, simply because her husband had been a Canadian.

Usually the party is found pushing its equal rights amendment and is bitterly razzed by other women's groups because it would abolish labor legislation designed to protect women along with other legal inequalities. It will now, however, work for a bill to permit Mrs. Larsh's return and for once all women's national organizations probably will be on the same side.

The Columbia Broadcasting company's operator who cut off President Hoover's radio speech awhile ago still has his job and that incident and the one that happened to Democratic Chairman Jetté Shouse in San Francisco recently are making public men more careful. Hoover had penciled a couple of additional paragraphs onto his speech as first prepared and the operator, following the original copy, shut him off before he could get them on the air.

Senator Davis of Pennsylvania, former secretary of labor, sometimes known as "Banjo Jim" isn't always taken seriously here, but Cal Coolidge recently told a friend that when he had wanted to get a thing done Davis was the most dependable man in his cabinet. Jim, he explained, had a faculty of ingratiating himself and getting people to do those things.

The famous D. A. R. apparently still believes there is something slightly profane about tobacco. Signs in corridors of Memorial Continental Hall primly admonish one: "No Smoking. This is a Memorial hall."

Apple vendors have disappeared from the streets of Washington, but most office buildings have inherited a favorite vendor of fruits and candies who always looks very poor and usually undertakes to strengthen his position by inveighing against the communists in various offices. The Junior League bought the man who works its block a swell hat and coat which he now wears on his rounds.

A recent article published by the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, to prove that while a certain quantity of wine or brandy makes a man crazy, beer in corresponding quantity makes him stupid, contains this thought: "Some of us prefer an interesting maniac to a brutalized idiot."

Anyway, cocktails are not being consumed fast enough to take care of a surplus of grapefruit juice and orange juice. The agriculture department says practically all citrus-growing countries are increasing production faster than world consumption now and that production probably will keep on increasing, which presumably means that just one more section of agriculture is going to suffer from over-production.

A speaker at the recent chamber of commerce meeting departed from his prepared speech to tell interesting tales about how the Illinois corn crop used to go to Canadian distilleries but didn't any more because of competition and how Mohammedans in the Sudan were persuaded to work only on promise of trips to Mecca in return for two years' labor and then told at Mecca they must work a couple of years more for their passage home.

MAKE YOURSELF APPROACHABLE

Don't carry your feelings on your sleeve. Many a man has missed a timely piece of warning, advice or direction all because he carried his feelings on his sleeve. People didn't know just how he'd take their advice that would have been offered with every good intent. Had he not been so free to carry his feelings exposed they might have given him a tip that would have been worth much to him.

Many a prize fighter has won the champion's crown because he could take punishment. He could absorb all the blows the other fellow had to offer and when his opponent knew not where to turn he walked under the laurels and they fell on his head.

ABOUT BOOKS

By RICHARD MASSOCK
NEW YORK—Theodore Dreiser lays bare his brooding youth in his newest book, "Dawn."
The American novelist who has been so much in the public prints of late, as a result of his flapping Sinclair Lewis and then squabbling with the movie makers of Hollywood, also opens the family cupboard and displays its various skeletons in a document amazingly frankly and unhibited.

His father was a German weaver who came to America in 1844 and settled in Indiana, after marrying a Pennsylvania Moravian farmer's daughter. His business ventures were mainly unfruitful.

His mother and the rest of the children were in Terre Haute, Ind. August 27, 1871. His childhood was a dull and despondent period which seems to have colored his life forever.

Because of their poverty, his family separated. His father and three sisters remained in Terre Haute. His mother and the rest of the children went to Vincennes, then to Sullivan. She to emerge as a heroine, taking in boarders and washing to support her brood.

Eventually the family were reunited at Evansville, where they lived off the bounty of Theodore Dreiser's (Paul) Dreiser, the long writer-comedian and the latter's courtship admirer. They wandered to Chicago, then back to Warsaw, Ind.

His adolescence was a mooning over the handicaps of poverty and a growing sex obsession. About the flirtations of his sisters, to whom he gives fictitious names, and the scrapes of certain brothers, he is unparading.

His own sex experiences, beginning with the party game of "post office," his social reticence and self-imposed ostracism affected his sensitive conscience until after his year in Indiana university, paid for by a spivaker school teacher.

The book closes with his succession of lousy jobs in Chicago before his newspaper days.

"All Quiet" sequel
Erich Remarque's sequel to his "All Quiet on the Western Front" seems to lack the power of his first novel, but that probably will not deter its success.

It is called "The Road Back" and is composed of scenes that followed the armistice and the homecoming of Erich and his squad of German comrades. Their disillusionment is complete as they try to fit themselves into social conditions, finding profiteers and unfaithful wives, and a jazz-mad generation of youth. One goes mad, another commits suicide, all have their horrible memories.

It seems indeed a peace without glory.

THE FOLLOWING were present: M. E. James, J. O. Christy, I. Baum, J. Hulme, L. M. Williams, M. W. Jones, O. L. Beaty, Davis, and J. H. Lutz.

About New York

(By Richard Massock)
NEW YORK—The melodramatic capture of Francis (Two Gun) Crowley will live long in the manhunt legendry of Manhattan.

A spectacle like that out-movies the gangland movies. Seldom have police played to such an audience. And justice, embodied by 150 cops, triumphed for the proper ending.

Rarely, if ever, too, has a visitor seen a real big-town drama like that viewed by Miss Billye Lunsford of Fort Worth, Texas.

Just a day in New York for the first time in her quiet life and she looked on while 150 policemen bombarded the flat of a murderous fugitive.

Miss Lunsford had never heard of Two Gun Crowley or the killing of a Long Island policeman.

She had not yet read that Crowley, 20-year-old desperado, was sought for various crimes. That the cop had found him with a "good girl," Helen Walsh, in an automobile parked on a lonely byway. That Crowley, small-time tough, had shot the cop to death and fled with the girl.

Miss Lunsford, you see, had just arrived to inspect the sights of New York. She was visiting a friend who lived on respectable West End avenue.

One wouldn't look for gangsters on West End avenue, Broadway's where one looks for gunmen. West End is a residential street, quiet, respectable.

The new and elegant apartment houses are as sedate in appearance as the fine old residences remaining beside them. The latter shelter families who know West End as an avenue of fashion in a former day and not yet unfashionable.

So it was up this avenue that Miss Lunsford and her friend were traveling in a cab when they hit a mass of stalled traffic and a theater of war against a killer.

Platoons of cops were holding back some 10,000 spectators on the city battlefield. Ropes marked the deadline. Fire was in the air. Also a pall of tear gas and the smoke of pistols, shotguns, rifles, machine guns.

On the rooftops were crouching snipers. A police inspector leaned against a building and wiped gas-tears out of his eyes. Bluecoats ran hither and thither, indoors and out. A riotous sound of gunfire came from a corner rooming house.

Then the girl from Texas saw a squad of detectives lead a stumbling, hysterical girl of New York out of the beleaguered house. Plaster was in her tumbled hair, over a drawn face, tear-streaked and grimy with gunpowder smoke. She was Helen Walsh.

Then Rudolph Deringer, another confessed slayer, fat and frightened. Then Crowley, half sitting on a stretcher. The crowd yelled. The last ambulance clanged off. The audience slowly broke away.

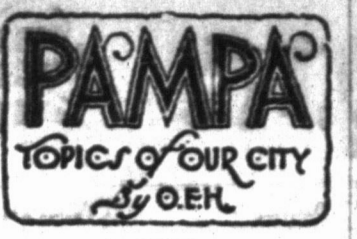

Miss Lunsford's taxi crawled up the avenue. A girl from a state famed for two-gun shooters had to come to New York to see one for the first time.

There were 230,090 more telephone messages received at the White House last year than in the previous year. It seems that the administration is called up as well as down.

Notable Achievement
Management is the secret of success in poultry raising, according to Miss Myrtle Miller, Gray county home demonstration agent, who today enables this column to continue its eggology. She cites the record of Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Parker, who have 300 hens averaging 23.5 eggs per hen (March). That is some record, in which our congratulations must include the hens.

It was stated that all during the day the chickens were well supplied with dry mash in hoppers. Along with this they were fed a wet mash mixed with sour milk about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They get plenty of fresh water, from 5 to 9 gallons of sour milk, and a mild dose of salts every three weeks. During the winter months, Mrs. Parker said, the chickens were shut up and fed with 6 pounds of alfalfa leaf along with the mash. They have green wheat to range over now. The cost of the feed for March was $19.69. Of the 589 dozen eggs produced in March, 522 dozen were sold for $74.78.

Eggs Too Cheap
We cite these figures to show that the hens are doing more than mere laying of freak eggs. It is regrettable that the price received by poultrymen for their eggs is too low to make a really substantial profit. Egg prices appear to follow cycles of high and low quotations, and a move upward is due.

This column has several times expressed the idea that the Texas constitution should be overhauled. This opinion suffers no loss of prestige through the action of the current legislature, in which proposed amendments are very numerous. Here are some of the amendments approved by the senate:

1. The $212,000,000 highway bond resolution.
2. Abolition of the state ad valorem levy.
3. Exemption of homesteads up to $3,000 from state ad valorem tax levies.
4. Increase of the governor's salary from $4,000 to $12,000.
5. Combining offices of county tax assessor and collector.
6. Authorizing a Texas centennial in 1936.
7. Authorizing the University of Texas board of regents to invest the university permanent fund in certain bonds.

Pending amendments, as this is written, pertain to a proposed constitutional convention in 1932, increasing of the salaries of the attorney general, the comptroller, and the treasurer, providing for a court of nine members, abolition of the office of county treasurer, authorization of the establishment of rural electric light, power, and gas distribution districts, authorization of the state to establish and maintain electric light, power, and national gas distribution systems, and an occupation tax on gasoline to be used for construction of highways and retiring bonded indebtedness of counties.

There's Warmth in Wood
The office supply department of THE NEWS-POST has the full approval of this column, in attempting to sell the people of Pampa on the merits of wood as opposed to steel office equipment. There is a historical affinity between man and wood. Wood expresses life because it is from living matter. Wood, a part of the body, that is its life force. For this reason, it is good to the touch, while metal is often either too hot or too cold. A fine wood desk has a certain warmth, a personality if you please, which is inspiring to the lover of nature and of artistic things. Wood is stiff, yet springy, and it returns to its original shape without remaining distorted as does metal.

Fire attacks a desk slowly and papers within are not much damaged until the woodwork is largely consumed. With steel this is not so—the papers are consumed as if in a frying pan even when the blaze would not have burned a wood desk. Furthermore, wood is attractive in its patterning and grain. By age-long association, through its partnership in his history and development, man has always done his best work on wood. The office supply department's experienced office planning expert is helping busy Pampa business and professional men to pick out equipment in harmony with their vocations and surroundings. A beautiful desk adapted to a man's business has a definite influence on his spirit and thinking. He therefore owes it to himself to take pride in the article of furniture before which he spends so much of his time.

Tax Is Logical
It should not be hard for the majority of Pampa property owners to approve the proposed library tax levy to be voted upon next Tuesday. This levy of 3 cents on the $100 valuation will add very little to the taxes of the average person. It will take the burden off the few who have been struggling to keep the institution alive and will distribute it among the citizenship.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS THINK

WAR VS. PROSPERITY

Evidence that war is inimical to business prosperity was never more forcefully presented than during the meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce last week. Many topics were discussed during the sessions which were held to analyze present business conditions throughout the world, and, if possible, devise a means for their improvement, but the central theme of the discussions was concerned with war.

Armaments and their cost, debts of the last war, the direct bearing that war has on economic conditions, as reflected in the inevitable postwar depression, were the chief topics of interest during the discussions. Evidently war furnishes the business leader of the world with a great deal of worry. Whatever we may think of the proposals for the cancellation of war debts, whatever we may think of the need of armaments, we cannot deny that they are contributing causes to the present economic stress which is being felt throughout the world. This is a grave indictment, and one that should receive serious consideration from business men everywhere, as well as in international councils.

Too much of the world's wealth is being consumed in the preparation for armed conflict that cannot but be destructive. We all know it, but somehow we can't agree upon the means of correcting this anomalous situation. Here in America we all know that some 80 cents of every tax dollar is spent for war purposes, toward paying war debts or armament construction, but we never single this out for protest when we cry that taxes are too high. Yet taxes cannot be lowered appreciably until something is done that will eliminate the war costs that are proving so burdensome.

What would our taxes amount to if we only had to pay some 20 cents on the dollar as compared to present payments? Think of the saving that would be effected? Think of what this would mean in the way of higher net profits and greater dividends throughout the United States.

It is not surprising that business leaders are concerned with matters relating to war when they meet to talk over economic conditions. The world may well be concerned, for war today is one of the greatest obstacles to stabilization of prosperity.—Vernon Record.

DEMAND—AND SUPPLY

No doubt the movement to increase the use of cotton is a good thing. It would seem so, at any rate. At least it would be a good thing for textile industries, if not for farmers.

It does not always follow that increased consumption elevates the price of a given commodity. Take tobacco, for example. In 1922 the tobacco crop of North Carolina totaled 408,000,000 pounds and brought the producers $118,338,000. Then ensued the greatest advertising campaign in modern history, the cigaret campaign. Manifestly the consumption of tobacco has increased by leaps and bounds; so by 1930 we find that North Carolina produced 858,000,000 pounds and this tremendous crop brought the producers only $101,000,000. Consumption and production doubled; the price was cut half in two.

You see what happened? Increased consumption brought increased production, and increased production brought a price collapse. It invariably does.

Our efforts in behalf of greater consumption of cotton are going to be damped, we fear, by the consciousness that greater consumption will simply mean greater production—and lower prices in the long run. The place to begin, it seems to us, is on the production end of the business. Consider the fate of tobacco for proof.—Abilene News.

PRACTICE HOUSE AT CANYON GIVES OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN BABY CARE

CANYON, May 16. (Special) — Four students of domestic science in the West Texas State Teachers college are demonstrating that young women from widely different environments can live together harmoniously in a situation which closely resembles that of normal family life, manage the home, and the care of a little child and be happy and efficient and at the same time carry on their college work.

For living in the practice house is a part of the experience of these young women who are preparing themselves to teach all phases of home making, care of the sick, care of children, sewing, marketing, and many other things.

Each of the girls has been manager of the home. The manager during her period of service, does all the buying for the family of five, and sees that the other members of the household perform the duties assigned to them, and, in case of illness, she assumes the duties of the girl who is unable to do her share.

During her period as house-mother each girl must give one professional entertainment. By a professional entertainment is meant one at which persons other than her personal friends are guests in

ANSWERS DAUGHTER'S PLEA TO ACT AGAIN

Mae Marsh, lovely heroine of some of D. W. Griffith's earliest pictures, shown at right with Marguerite, her youngest of her three children, is returning to the screen, from which she retired in 1923. Inset shows her as movie fans knew her before her retirement.

Attractive Contract Offered Former Star

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD, May 16. (AP)—Her little daughter's pleas as well as an attractive contract are responsible for the return of Mae Marsh to the screen that made her famous.

"It's true that Mary's persistent urging influenced me to come back," says Miss Marsh, who deserted the films nearly ten years ago for the career of marriage and motherhood.

Miss Marsh, a slim and attractive young mother, with the same red hair and the old mischievous twinkle in her eyes, is returning to play the mother role in "Over the Hill," a new version of the silent film classic that starred Mary Carr.

The wife of Louis Lee Arms, former newspaperman and now a short-story writer, she has three children—Mary 11, Brewster 5, and Marguerite 3—whom she now considers old enough to be left in other hands during her working hours at the studio.

JUNIORS AND SENIORS HAVE ANNUAL BANQUET ON FRIDAY

BOARD MEMBERS, HIGH SCHOOL FACULTY ARE GUESTS

With each adding junior to its list by use of golf terms, Sports B. Fisher, Principal L. L. Sone, and J. M. Dodson, were speakers at the annual Junior and Senior banquet Friday evening at the Schneider hotel. Among special guests were Mrs. George H. Wallace, president of the high school Parent-Teacher association, a high school faculty members, and members of the school board. There were 210 persons attending.

The Puffin Approach club was the theme used throughout the function.

Tables were adorned with tiny pegs and golf courses, and golf clubs were crossed at each light fixture.

Little golf bags, each containing two clubs, were given as favors. Programs were white with a golf player silhouette in gold. In gold also were printed the program, the three-course menu and the name of the following officers: President, Frances Finley; vice-president, Joe Kahl; secretary, Isabel Baer; treasurer, Ray McNeil; reporter, Ma'lan Sherrod.

Opening the program was a welcome address by Frances Finley, followed with a trombone solo by "Pop" Fraser. Miss Finley then proposed a toast to the seniors, and Christine Manning and Joyce Turner favored the group with a dance. They were accompanied at the piano by Miss Josephine Cariker. Supt. R. B. Fisher entertained with a solo, and Joe Kahl and Henry Wilder gave a saxophone duet. Miss Iva June Willis accompanied for the duet as well as for the numbers by Mr. Fraser and Mr. Fisher.

"Dear Old Pampa High School" was sung by the entire group to climax the event.

School board members attending were Joe Smith, J. M. Dodson, C. P. Buckler, and J. M. Daugherty.

Junior sponsors are Mrs. Luella Massa, Miss Josephine Cariker, and Miss Z. nobia McFarlin.

Feminine Fancies

Dozens of lovely dresses were seen at the Junior-Senior banquet Friday evening at the Schneider hotel, but one of the most attractive was made by the wearer in her home economics class at the school.

The gown was worn by Ruby Hillard. It was of orchid and had a long, circular skirt, draped neckline with rhinestone ornament in front, low-cut back with a ribbon bow of harmonizing color. It was worn with black accessories.

The girl who can make her own evening gown is to be congratulated.

Women pay their bills more promptly than men—or at least that's the opinion of A. D. McCall, president of the National Retail Credit association, expressed in an A. P. report from El Paso.

The reason? Because women have a better appreciation of credit service, and this probably because they do the great bulk of retail purchasing.

"Even in men's stores," McMullen said, "are the heaviest purchasers."

Who will be Pampa's first June bride?

For the bride who prefers a formal wedding, there are some of the most lovely gowns available which one could imagine.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY IS TO SELL POPPIES HERE MAY 23

RED FLOWERS REPRESENT HOPE TO VETERANS WHO FIND SOLACE IN MAKING THEM

Eight or ten years ago, after the poppy had been adopted as the memorial flower of the American Legion and its Auxiliary, commercial-made poppies were being purchased by the units for sale on Memorial day for the benefit of the disabled soldiers.

It seemed to the national president that a task so well conceived should be improved; that no one should make a profit on the memorial poppy, and that the disabled men and their families should get every possible penny. To this end it was arranged for the poppies to be made by the disabled men in the hospitals, knowing that money given, however appreciated or however needed, can never bring quite the full measure of happiness that money earned carries with it.

It wasn't easy to show numb fingers how to thrust the stem through the poppy petals and fasten it properly; the task took patience and perseverance. The project had the active support of the therapeutic specialists who saw renewed life coming to their patients as a new earth—one with a job—grew before them; who saw listless men transformed by poppy making into happy workers, even though still bedridden. Each man was paid a penny each for the poppies, paid as wages fairly earned, not as a gift—and what a difference!

The goal is ten million poppies sold May 23, with money derived to

RECENT BRIDE HONORED WITH SHOWER FRIDAY

Mrs. Ray Chastain, who, before her recent marriage was Miss Josephine Robinson, was honored by a group of friends Friday evening in the home of Mrs. W. B. Sausbury.

Believing Mrs. Sausbury to be ill, Mrs. Chastain went with three of her friends to the Sausbury home, where she found a large group of friends, all with presents for her new home. Among the gifts was a spoon from her mother which bore the words "My Wedding Gift for Your Wedding Shower." The spoon had been at gift at Mrs. Robinson's wedding shower.

Loved and were loved; and now we lie in helpless state.
Take up our battle with woe!
To you, from falling hands we throw the poppy, be yours to wear it high!
If you break faith with us soon to die,
We shall not sleep, where poppies blow
In hospital wards.

The local American Legion auxiliary will start selling poppies on the morning of May 23.

Saunders Home and Grounds Near City Among Finest In Territory

ELABORATE "NATURAL" WORK IN LANDSCAPING IS FEATURE OF DESIGN--MUCH ROCK IS USED

FURNISHING OF HOUSE IN KEEPING WITH GROUNDS

By ARCHIE FULLINGIM

The finishing touches are being put on the grounds surrounding J. M. Saunders' magnificent country home, 3 1/2 miles southeast of Pampa, this week-end. The lavish plan of the lawn and gardens is in keeping with the house and its expensive furnishings. When the 25-foot trees burst into leaf, the sloping lawns become green and the flowers and bulbs which have been planted burst into blossom, the house and grounds will without doubt become the show-place and pride of Pampa.

At present the house and landscaped grounds cover a space larger than a large city block. Next year, Mr. Saunders plans to landscape the grounds adjoining the drive-way from the LeFors road to the house. There is said to be no country in this home-as-the-territory that can match it in cost and in sheer magnificence.

Has Sunken Garden

A sunken garden, a natural pool and brook, a stone plaza surrounded by four rose gardens, are special attractions of the grounds. The landscape architect is William Krause, who came to Pampa from Minnesota. He has followed his profession for 21 years and he said that the rock garden is the largest and biggest he has ever constructed. Rock used to build it and the rock brook, rock piles, an old rock well equipped with an English sweep and an old oaken bucket, came from canyons on Mr. Saunders' 3-300 acres of valuable wheat and oil land. Eight different strains of rock were used.

In pockets between the rocks are planted sixty varieties of perennials, including painted, English and Shasta daisies, goliard, sweet williams, pink, sax varieties of iris, a bit of Texas wild flowers, delphiniums, five varieties of rock sedums, dahlias and ponies. The lawn has been sowed in Kentucky blue grass and clover brought from Stark and McMillen. Trees and evergreens planted at intervals on the grounds include northern elm, sycamore, Linden, cut-leaf birch, pin oak, Colorado blue spruce, Black Hill spruce, Norway spruce, Scotch pine, mugo pine (dwarf), Virginia, silver and Chinese juniper scorpulatum pitter, sasan juniper, canadensis, kosteria aurora conspicua, bonnata. The trees are watered by an underground tile system, while the sunken garden, the lawns, flower beds and flower gardens are watered by the sprinkler system.

"Natural" Is Keyword

Mr. Krause insists that the keyword to use in describing the landscaping is "natural." Not a bucket of cement was used in constructing the rock piles, sunken garden, brook, natural bridge, well and the walks. Mr. Krause declared that it is the most natural "natural garden" he has ever seen. There are over 900 feet of cobblestone walks. Between the stones of the walks are planted all kinds of small flowers, pansies, moss roses. The walks are from 18 to 24 inches wide. A round rock plaza in the "L" of an angle formed by the lines of the house at the northwest corner at the rear is surrounded by red and pink radiant roses, Los Angeles roses, Grus von Tipes and sunburst roses. There are four beds of perennials.

The natural pool measures four and one-half feet from the surface to the bottom at its deepest point. When completed it will contain water lilies, cat tails, and rushes. The pool is fed by a brook which bubbles and ripples over stones for about 50 feet. The pool is 50 feet long and 12 feet wide. Midway the length of the brook is a natural stone bridge. The coursing of the brook over its stony bed can be heard distinctly at the house a hundred yards distant. The pool and the sunken garden, the well and the rock piles are located at the rear of the house; as well as all flower beds. There are stone rests at various places in the yard, the seat consisting of one solid rock. Some of the rocks weigh 300 pounds.

Trees Are Large

All of the evergreens and trees are well-advanced. Some of the evergreens were already half-grown when planted. The elms and sycamores are 20 feet high. Shrubbery at the front of the house includes varieties of spirea, French and Persian lilacs, and varieties of hydrangeas. The lawn and gardens slope in every direction from the house. Before the residence was built, over 500 loads of earth were hauled to form the slope. A special kind of fertilizer was used to give the clover and plants a good start. Water for the grounds comes from a standpipe at the rear of the house which is kept filled by a large pump run by an electric motor.

However, as yet, the grounds do not compare in grandeur with the furnishings in the house. On the floor of the beamed drawing room which reminds one of a council hall in an old English baronial castle, is a considerable fortune in Persian rugs. The large rug is exquisitely beautiful and represents the best in Persian rug-making. A small rug near the fireplace is 100 years old. Its finish is of mirror satin.

Many Importations

Another large Persian rug, the dominant color of which is red, is on the dining room floor. Furniture in the library, drawing room, dining room and Mr. Saunders' den is of heavy oak, hand-carved and stained by hand. A great deal of it was imported from Europe. Costly, colorful Chinese rugs cover the floors of the bed rooms.

The room of Mr. and Mrs. Saunders' only child, Morris, now at Kemper Military academy, is equipped with two four-poster beds of carved oak. A photograph of the son may be seen in practically every room in the house. Two of the most beautiful pieces of furniture in the house are the drawing room and dining table. The first is inlaid oak and the second is long, dark and glistening and the top is made of a single sheet of timber. The chairs are heavy and were carved by hand. The second floor of the house is like a fairy land. The walls of what might be a long, winding, tea-room, drawing room, dance floor or play room were decorated by Mr. Brink, a well known artist of Manhattan, Kans. Paintings include trees, swans, and other objects done in the Japanese manner. A mural of mountain scenes forms a foot-high wainscoting for part of the wall in another section of room which is built in a shape that resembles a bird-circle.

Miss Ruth Ann Mitchell returned home Friday night after visiting in Dallas, Mineral Wells, and Abilene.

HAIR WITH THE GLINT OF YOUTH

You've washed it frequently, you've tried innumerable shampoos, you've fretted and fumed, yet your hair is still a "problem." Lustreless, brittle hair, a dry or an oily scalp is not so much the result of lack of care as it is lack of PROPER care.

Such a condition can not be overcome by haphazard methods. Individually prescribed treatments offer the only possible remedy. At the Georgette, a qualified hair and scalp expert will make her diagnosis after careful examination. Future treatments will follow the dictates of these suggestions. Hence, we will overcome scalp deficiencies by scientific, not haphazard means.

Backfield men, ends, and linemen desirous of trying for backfield positions on the 1931 Pampa Harvesters football team, have been ordered to report at the gymnasium tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to draw uniforms. Members will report at Harvesters field at 4 o'clock for practice. Coach Odus Mitchell said last night upon his return from attending a training school in Dallas during the week.

Theater Members Hear Makeup Talk
About 20 members of the Little Theater heard an unusual lecture and demonstration of make-up given at the city hall Friday afternoon. Monte Stuckey, leading man with Brunk's Comedians, told how to make up the face for an average woman, a 65-year-old man, a juvenile character, and genteel elderly man, and a Tobby part.
Art Reinhardt's infield came to his rescue with double plays in each of the last three innings here today and Galveston Buccaneers evened the series by winning an 8 to 6 decision from the Spudders. The Pirates collected four bibles during the afternoon and each drove in one or more runs to account for all but one of the runs scored off Steungrafe and Taylor.

NEW ORLEANS, May 16. (AP)—Cotton prices traded to new lows for the season in today's session, under selling induced by lower Liverpool cables, and a weak stock market.

The close showed a net decline of 11 to 12 points.

Liverpool came in a 2 to 3 points lower than expected and private cables advised reported local, continental and Bombay liquidation which set off to some extent by trade calling and covering. Sales in the English market were reported at 16,000 bales which minimized somewhat the bearish influence of the lower cables.

Offerings seemed absorbed at the decline by shorts covering for the week-end and before this demand was supplied July rallied to 9.58 and October to 9.93, or 6 to 7 points above the lows. The market weakened again, however, under selling prompted by the weakness in the stock market, and was on the down grade for the remainder of the session, reaching new lows for the season in final trading. At the lowest July sold at 9.45 and October 9.80, or 13 points down from the highs. Final prices were at or near the bottom.

Port receipts 2,939, for season 4,701,316; last season 8,446,487; exports 22,030; for season 6,042,022; last season 6,942,165; port stocks 3,420,385; last year 1,995,752. Combined shipments stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 55,172; last year 60,296; spot sales at southern markets 3,801; last year 2,523.

STEER PRICE DOWN
KANSAS CITY, May 16. (AP)—

S. D. A.)—While some of the centers reported little change in feed steers values for the week, downward tendencies were again the rule on the heavy grades, prices ranging 25-50 lower. The light kinds, however, encountered enough late buying strength to eliminate some of the losses and there were instances on the yearling offerings where advances of as much as 25 were scored. The markets had considerable unevenness and while lighter receipts should have been a bullish factor, the continued sluggishness of the dressed beef trade was enough to offset the diminished supply. Arrivals aggregated 178,700 as compared with 197,096 a week ago.

Some irregularly also ruled in the markets for hogs. Light and medium weight offerings at the majority of centers ruled weak to 25 lower and heavy hogs closed from 10 higher to 25 lower. Receipts showed a shrinkage, total arrivals reaching 411,300 as compared with 429,111 the previous week.

Fat lamb prices were depressed sharply, losses ranging from 25-100. There was an upturn late in the week, but the advance eliminated only a fraction of the large decline. Mature sheep averaged steady to 25 lower. Arrivals totaled 348,400 compared with 410,509 a week ago.

WHEAT TUMBLER
Associated Press Market Editor CHICAGO, May 16. (AP)—Swamped by general selling, wheat today tumbled to the lowest price this month. Corn bulged the season's bottom level. Stock market weakness, drought relief in Canada, and prospects of a bumper winter wheat crop in the United States were main incentives for sellers.

Wheat closed irregular, 1 1/2 cents lower to 1/2 advance, corn fell 1/2 down, oats 1/2-1/4 off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents. New official estimates put 1931 winter wheat production for Texas and Oklahoma at 55,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels each, with Kansas 200,000,000 and Nebraska 65,000,000 to 70,000,000. Fears were expressed that a volume of hedging sales would quickly appear in connection with the marketing of this expected big yield. As a result, July delivery of wheat fell to a discount under September contracts.

Last messages from Edmonton, Canada, told of rain at various points in the spring wheat belt. A halt in shipping demand for corn had a semi-demoralizing effect on the corn market. Holders were also handicapped by reports of fast progress of planting and by productive big increase of acreage. Oats weakened with corn and wheat. Provisions worked downward, affected by weakness of hog values and of grains.

Closing Indentments: Wheat, July 59 1/2-61 1/2-61 1/2; Sept. 59 1/2, 61 1/2-61 1/2; Dec. 63 1/2, 65 1/2. Corn, July 56 1/2-56 1/2; Sept. 55 1/2-57 1/2; Dec. 48 1/2, 50 1/2.

Mad Pursuit

Chapter 94
IS NORA JEALOUS?

While her thoughts turned to the old Dutch house on the river, still Nora found enchantment in these June evenings under the horse chestnut tree on Dover street.

They were all young and hopeful, not ashamed to fling out their proudest dreams. She learned that Fergus More was bent on further study in Germany. But how this was to be done on the precarious living that he now made, no one tried to answer. Aunt Em had a splendid idea of recouping their fortunes by raising violets. Halle admitted she was writing a story.

"And you, Fran?" Nora asked.

Fran's eyes sought Fergus. They had been laughing and murmuring together.

"The thing Fran has to do," Fergus said with authority, "is to get over that cough."

"Oh that cough is nothing," Fran said quickly.

As she joined in their laughter, Nora's fierce rebellion against life rose in her. She would not be a part of this precarious life, caged in this narrow middle-class house.

And now Nora had spent her last cent. She must find work. It was Fran who solved the difficulty. One of the girls in Fran's office was to be married in June; perhaps Nora could do the work.

"If you want to try it, Nora, I'll help you. The work itself is mere routine. The main thing is to put up with Mr. Dusenbury's temper."

"I'll do anything," Nora said humbly.

There began for Nora days of long hard work in the office. At the end of the week Mr. Dusenbury said grudgingly that she might fit in.

On Saturday she came home. When the bell rang she remembered a big increase of acreage.

Provisions worked downward, affected by weakness of hog values and of grains.

Closing Indentments: Wheat, July 59 1/2-61 1/2-61 1/2; Sept. 59 1/2, 61 1/2-61 1/2; Dec. 63 1/2, 65 1/2. Corn, July 56 1/2-56 1/2; Sept. 55 1/2-57 1/2; Dec. 48 1/2, 50 1/2.

W. J. Blasingame of Laketon was admitted to Worley hospital Saturday.

He said, "I won't be able to get away, I'm afraid. But as soon as they come back you are to come to us."

He was surprised when he turned to her to see her eyes were dazzling.

Jon drove along the river road. Nora knew where they were going now. They drove down a winding lane to the old Thayer house sunning itself on its lawns.

Leaving the car in the driveway, they walked toward the river and sat down at last, with the river watching against a pebbly shore.

She leaned back against a tree trunk, her dark head bare. Her eyes were on the river and something of her expectancy and youth touched her.

"It's a long time since I've seen you," he said.

"It has been long. Twelve days!" Nora flashed, then to hide her confusion she began to tell him breathlessly about Aunt Em and Fran and Halle, the struggles and small triumphs of every day.

"It must be very dull for you."

"No, it's exciting in a way. Each one is so ambitious, Halle is writing and Fergus More hopes to speak some day and I am working for the first time in my life."

"That's what I do and I don't find any excitement in it. I'd like to get away. The places I'd like to see, the things I'd like to do!"

"What places, Jon?"

"I'd like to climb the Andes with a pack mule. I want danger and fighting, and to come upon an old lost city."

As he talked so strangely excited, she found herself sharing the bitter trek with him. She was beside him as they came to the gates of the lost city.

But what was it Jon was searching for?

She asked him, "Why do you go seeking strange places when in the end you never find anything but yourself?"

"You're a funny child, Nora. That's what Damon said about you."

"Damon!" Nora cried. "She doesn't like me, I saw that at once!"

She rose suddenly to face him. Their eyes met.

"You don't understand her. She is hard to know."

"Perhaps Damon doesn't understand me!"

The air between them quivered with unspoken things. Jon was cool and arrogant; Nora was suddenly passionately angry. She knew that Jon thought she was jealous of Damon. She was not jealous of Damon, she told herself fiercely, unless she were jealous of her world that was careless and brave, aware of prerogative. And there still smoldered the memory that Jon had told Damon those things she had confided to him alone.

The magic of the afternoon was gone. They drove silently along a dreary river road and reached the old city. Jon's face was pale and proud; Nora sat with clenched hands. She did not want him to come to dinner. But Jon went stubbornly up the steps beside her. She could not bear it. Jon would see the confusion of a Saturday night supper; he would criticize her people.

Alice came to meet them at the door. Nora began to talk nonsense breathlessly before Aunt Em came in, her best gray crepe de chine donned. Nora knew, for the occasion. The shabby old back parlor had on its summer dress of cheap flowery chintz and looked cool and pleasant.

Aunt Em led the way to the basement dining room. Something began to soothe Nora's feelings. Perhaps it was because they had worked so hard to please her. The best white damask cloth was on the table and Fran had filled a blue bowl with buttercreps and the candlesticks from the back parlor mantle gave a mellow glow that transformed the mean small room.

Fran came in from the kitchen with a plate of hot biscuits, her cheeks flushed, looking like a dark rose. And as she took Jon's hand something of her spirit seemed to enter the room, to force Nora to glance at Jon and see his eyes on hers begging her for forgiveness.

They were all so simple and gracious, making this Saturday night dinner by their very ease and pleasure in Jon's company, something of an occasion. The dinner itself was delicious.

Fergus came in to join them over after-dinner coffee. He and Jon were congenial at once.

"I hope you'll ask me again," Jon said; "you don't know what a good time I'm having!"

Nora's spirits rose so fast they sprang up and ran up the basement stairs to the door. Julian Lake stood on the doorstep.

They were interrupted by the furious ringing of the bell. Nora

This Is Your Chance To Help The JOBLESS

MEN and women out of jobs do not want charity! They want jobs! And it is in your power to help give them jobs.

You, who are employed and whose income is not one jot smaller than it was a year ago, can resume Normal Buying.

You have "cut down," shaved your budget. Why? There is no answer. But there is an answer to why you should begin buying normally again. A big one! The Unemployed! By holding back from normal, sensible buying, you are depriving industry of normal production, depriving industry's workers of jobs, depriving yourself in turn, of unusual buying opportunities.

Every jobless person eventually reacts to the disadvantage of every job-holder. The jobless are not consumers; and whatever your trade, business or profession, you rely, in the last analysis, on consumers. For the common good you should resume Normal Buying.

Now is the time to remodel your home. Labor is plentiful and material is cheap. You can beautify your home cheaper now than ever.
