STEVENSON CALLS ON TEXANS TO BACK FDR

GERMAN RESISTANCE ALSO STUBBORN

While press wires carried stories of a stubborn Russian resistance on the eastern front, this German-censored radio-photo from Berlin shows a German lieutenant with his wounded arm bandaged, directing his men in an attack on Russian positions somewhere on the eastern front. The suicidal resistance of the Russians may be the reason for this German officer staying with his troops to direct their efforts rather than retire behind the lines for treatment.

One Soldier Dies Every Three Days In Road Accidents

AUSTIN, Aug. 8. (AP)—Highway violence has taken a toll of one soldier every three days since the start of 1941, state police reported today. In an appeal for driving caution addressed to military personnel and citizen motorists, director Homer Garrison, Jr., of the state police said 80 soldiers, sailors and marines were killed and 433 injured in Texas from Jan. 1 to June 30.

In the same collisions, he continued, 14 civilians lost their lives and 109 suffered injuries. Garrison asserted a large number of the fatal crashes occurred between 11 p. m. and 2 a. m.

Labor Strike Closes Curtiss-Wright Plant

(By The Associated Press)

Several hundred AFL members walked out on $100,000,000 worth of defense work at the Curtiss-Wright corporation propeller division plant at Caldwell, N. J., today while a CIO strike continued to hold up $493,000,000 of naval and merchant shipbuilding at Kearney, N. J.

The latter case may be referred directly to President Roosevelt for action, a defense official indicated.

At Caldwell, a company official said the plant's entire production on defense orders was imperiled. The plant employs several thousand workers.

Those who walked off their jobs were members of the AFL International Association of Machinists, John Hart, company spokesman,

House Calls For Extension Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (AP)—The house wasted no time today in calling up army service extension legislation, and administration leaders stood firm for an indefinite extension in preference to the 18-month maximum just voted by the senate.

The senate approved the 18-month extension by a 45-20 tally late yesterday, providing $10-a-month more pay for service beyond one year, and house leaders promptly ordered an unusual forenoon session today with the determination to get a vote by Monday at the latest.

Manifesting no misgivings as to how the house vote would go, Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the Military committee predicted that the chamber would disregard the senate's 18-month time limitation.

"I'm getting sick and tired of this question of whether we are going to defend our country for six more months, or 12 more months, or 18 more months," May told reporters. "I believe in national defense without any time limit."

The heart of the senate measure was the provision that would add a maximum of 18 months additional military duty to the present "hitch-hike" of all selectees, national guardsmen, reserves, and regular army enlistees. All are now subject to only one year's service, except the regulars who sign up for three years.

But before the measure passed at the end of a stormy session lasting more than six hours, the senate wrote in a provision that would give all men with more than a year's service a $10-a-month pay boost. This would have the effect of upping the present base pay of a private soldier to $40 a month after the first year.

Just how much this pay increase would cost was something its sponsors did not profess to know.

Let The Army Have Silk, Women Say

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8 (AP)—Smartly dressed women, leaders in the city's society, business and professional life, are ready to abandon the silk stocking standard cheerfully.

In fact, they agree to gladly sponsor a cotton or other substitute style so that the nation's dwindling supply of silk might go entirely to the army and navy for parachutes and powder bags.

That's just their feeling as individuals, however, and there's no active campaign under way in this direction.

"I shouldn't mind wearing cotton stockings at all; why I used to wear them when I was a girl," declares Mrs. Harry Lippincott Cassard, long noted for her beautiful grooming.

The grandmother of debutante Sally Cassard, she recalls wearing cotton stockings as a youngster to match her dresses "like the fashion experts have been trying to get us to do recently." The colored cottons "were very pretty, and quite expensive," she said.

Nina Liggett, glamor girl of the 1938-39 social season and now a prominent fashion careerist, draws the line at cotton but adds blithely she wouldn't mind saying goodbye to silk.

"I'm going to wear make-up on my legs and never have to worry again about runs in my stockings," explains Miss Liggett. She's going to use a liquid "that goes on very easily."

Speaking for the business women, Investment Counselor Mrs. William Hamill says she'd be glad to wear cotton or another substitute, adding:

"When cotton begins to appear wearing cotton stockings; I must get some right away!"

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Columnist for a day in place of vacationing Alicia Hart is Ilka Chase, witty stage and radio actress. A sterling example of "glitter grooming," Miss Chase has an enviable reputation for chic.

BY ILKA CHASE

When you go away for the weekend, don't use your hostess' home for a beauty parlor. Arrange to spend a minimum of precious time in primping.

There are so many things that can be attended to before you leave. Your nails, for example. If you manicure and pedicure at home, it will scarcely be necessary to repeat the process. Carefully consider the clothes you will wear, and decide on dresses and sports things that will take kindly to the same shade of polish—then it won't even be necessary to change your nail enamel.

The bathroom is a major problem on week-ends unless your hostess is lucky enough to be able to present you with your very own. Use it considerably—also the things in it. Treat your hostess' towels as you would your own. Cream your face in your room—put your make-up on there also.

MINIMUM OF MAKEUP DURING THE DAY

There's really no need for more than a mere suggestion of color during the day. Tennis and swimming call for outdoorsy faces. But it never hurts to keep your hand in the evenings. No matter what the dozing males tell you about liking you without makeup, give them a chance to see you at your best when the moon rises high.

Beauty doesn't "just come natural" to anyone. Glamor gals put in as many experimental hours of "try out" work as the humblest stenographer. Do that essential ground work at home.

There's something extra-alluring about the metamorphosis of the daytime Atlanta, when, groomed to a fore-thee-well, she descends the stairs, attired in her Saturday night finery.

Most important of all—bring your own implements. Don't expect a hurried home-owner to provide cleansing cream and tissues, face powder and hairpins. It's so easy to make a list of things needed and put 'em all into your bag. I find small sizes of everything a good idea.

If you follow all these rules, your week-end will be a success—and what's more, I guarantee a return engagement.

MATRONS' DRESS

First in a series of pre-nuptial courtesies honoring Miss Cleora Stanard, bride-elect of Kenneth Curry, was given Thursday evening when Mrs. Robert Curry and Mrs. Bill Anderson were hostesses at a crystal shower in the home of Mrs. Curry.

Angered throughout the house were attractive bouquets of summer flowers.

Forming the large nosegay, which centered the refreshment table, was a pink dahlia surrounded with matching phlox and baby breath arranged in a low white pottery bowl encircled in white tulle with a blue edging. Small blue satin streamers extended from the centerpiece to the corners of the table. Tall white candles in pottery holders lighted the table and a lei of tiny nosegays of lace and forget-me-nots, which were given as plate favors, outlined the entire arrangement. Decorating the buffet was a tall bride wearing a white satin gown and holding a similar nosegay.

Refreshments of lily and heart-shaped sandwiches and cookies were served with punch.

ADVANCE MILLINERY NOTE

For that first fall hat to introduce the new season, Hollywood selects this all-purpose model worn by Evelyn Keyes. An item of interest is the veil, which offers the very new color combination of light brown with black.

Taking first place in the fall fashion parade is the flattering, all-purpose felt, which rates star billing because of its adaptability to different occasions. The mushroom brim of this hat can be worn over the forehead to shadow the eyes. Pushed back on the head to form a frame for a pompadour roll, it presents another style. The high-point crown strikes a neat note between sports and dress models.

The veil softens the line of the brim and adds to the all-purpose ideal. It can be dropped over the face or folded under the chin for dress occasions, or as preferred by Evelyn Keyes, it can be worn as a simple trimming for the brim.

Further fall predictions stress two points: Hats will have a forward movement, an over-the-nose dip; hats will slide to the back of the head, playing up the pompadour.

Black will be combined with brown, rust, timberline green, air force blue, prairie fire red, and foot's gold. Crowns will be higher. Brims generally will be normal width with either a bend, veiling, or stitching to trim. There is an emphasis on narrow sidelines, with longer back-to-front lines. Dressy hats will be small and set forward. Velvets will be trimmed with feathers or ribbon.

It's good news to hear that anchoring the hats will no longer depend upon chance or a left hand clutch. Shell pins tipped with feathers or ribbon bows are the latest and the best. Younger fashionables will monogram initials on their hats and they will plant costume jewelry on their plain felt roller brims.

An advance flurry of fur hats will likely break into a wave of popularity. There will be all-fur hats in every size and shape. Double-ripped brims, enormous heart-shaped brims, 1880 touches matched to huge muffs, have already been noticed.

The casual tailors, however, the all-purpose hats with moderate lines, make the first bid for fall popularity. There will be more becoming hats... less chichi. It may be the English influence; it may be a trend toward the practical, caused by increased war work. Or perhaps it is an acknowledgement of a masculine world that prefers "pretty hats" to "crazy hats."

Women Adjust To Age Better Than Men

Women may fight old age harder than men and dread it more before it is actually upon them, but, once it comes, white hair and all, they seem to have a better time in life than do old men.

That is especially true of older widows, whose husbands have left them a place to live and an adequate income. There is a group of them in every community—and they do have fun living.

So many of an active man's interests—like outdoor sports—are too strenuous to be pursued into old age, but the things in which women are interested in their busy years continue to interest them after they are old and no longer so active.

Take the well-fixed elderly widows you know, for example. They like clothes and are just as good customers of the beauty shops as they ever were. Their white hair is waved smartly, their nails are lacquered a soft pink, and their skin shows that they still believe in face cream.

They like parties even better than they did in their younger days, when entertaining was something of a chore on top of taking care of a large family. And they love to be invited out because they have lots of time in which to get ready at a leisurely pace, and they have time to wonder about the party beforehand and think about it afterwards.

Spending, But No 'Spree'

The vast sums of money which have been poured into the defense program are beginning to circulate. The makings of the kind of a "silk-shirt spending spree" like that which swept across the country in World War days and directly afterward are all present. But there is a difference, and that difference is all to the good.

The America that comes into this period of "war prosperity" is a different America from the one which entered that of 1916-1920. We have been chastened; many have had a hard struggle for 10 years; we do not have the same child-like confidence that good times will go on forever.

The Nation's Press

STIMSON AND KNOX SHOULD GET OUT (Chicago Tribune) Secretary Stimson of the war department has apologized to Senator Wheeler for saying that the senator was "near the line of subversive activities against the United States, if not treason" in sending out anti-war postcards, some of which were forwarded from home addresses to men in the army.

Senator Wheeler, when defamed by intolerable reflections upon his loyalty, explained to the senate that the names of the persons to whom the cards were sent were obtained from a commercial firm and that the matter was prepared before the question of the military terms of service was raised. Mr. Stimson had accused the senator of addressing the soldiers directly and thus spreading discontent in the army.

There is a story in Washington that Stimson was guilty more of being a chump than a maligner. The statement he issued regarding Wheeler is reported to have come out of the White House and to have been written by Stephen Early of the secretariat. If that's true, then Stimson was only the proxy voice as he has been on occasions before. He was the tool for scandal. The episode should close the career of the present secretary of war.

Mr. Roosevelt is fishing in troubled waters. He should have a real secretary of war and a real secretary of the navy. He needs more than phonograph records of White House speeches in both jobs.

Threatened the peace of the whole world and the balance of military, diplomatic and economic power, none has ever been of vital interest to America. Down the ages would-be dictators have aspired to conquer the entire world, but always something has happened to thwart their plans.

Both these ancient political relics of a discreditable episode should resign. Stimson is a serious way to attain national unity.

The greatest contribution to national unity would be for the President to tell the people of the country just what constitutes the "great emergency" which he says confronts the United States. If the nation is in dire peril the people have a right to know it. Without disclosing any military secrets the chief executive could inform the people as to the details of this great danger which we hear so much about in general terms.

Common Ground

BY R. G. HOLES This column contends there can be no satisfactory progress until we measure the shares of each man by the common yardstick of the God-given equal right to create and enjoy anything anyone else has a right to create and enjoy.

"HOW WOULD YOU LIKE IT?"

In discussing what is right one often hears the remark, "How would you like it?" The inference is that what one likes is right and what one does not like is not right.

From a social, political or moral standpoint, what one likes or does not like has nothing whatever to do with what is right. That is, with what is God's laws; what constantly and most rapidly makes it possible for more people to live and have more experiences.

It might be that because what one likes from the standpoint of taste, or smell, or hearing, or touch is usually good for man when coupled with reason, that we have jumped at the conclusion what one likes other people to do is also good for society.

No, what each person likes is not the norm nor standard of goodness. If it were there would be as many standards of right and wrong as there are individuals. This could only lead to continued confusion and conflict, and to perpetual civil, and international wars.

Our Creator decreed that all men have certain equal duties to perform which give him certain equal inherent rights. "All" and "equal" must always be included in any basis of determining right from wrong. It has been decreed by nature that each and every man must create his own support or have it voluntarily given to him, if we are to multiply and replenish the earth and have a constantly increasing standard of living.

This belief of what I like or you like, or that one man's opinion is as good as another, can only lead to chaos and anarchy. It is no standard of rightness.

THE REAL NEED OF PRICE CONTROL

The Administration's representatives are talking a lot about the danger of high prices. Henderson on several occasions has put a ceiling on prices and ordered some of the Auto Manufacturers to cancel their price advances.

No, I am not referring to food prices which the Government is helping go higher by their methods of penalizing the farmers who produce more than the government agents say is their share of production.

The real need of price control or reduction, is the price the government charges to the citizens for the services it claims to send to them.

Even without the war cost the price of government service was never as high as it is at present. It will be claimed, of course, that the government is rendering a greater service than ever before. But from this claim of service must be subtracted all the disservice the government is performing in the line of miseducating the people to believe it is right and good for them to have large numbers of able bodied people live without work by taking by taxation by the force of the majority the fruits of the labor of those who have worked and produced.

When this is subtracted it will be found that the real net services the government is rendering is less than any time in our history. Yet the government is now taking one-third of the labor of all workers as the price of government operation.

It is only natural for reformers and self-proclaimed wise boys (as all New Dealers are) to attempt to regulate the acts of others and pay no attention to their own most serious errors.

What we need is the public to waken and regulate the regulators—the government office holders.

rious handicap to the army which Mr. Roosevelt is trying to send into the war he is determined to have, and Knox—who was a part of the Willie nomination conspiracy—doesn't know a battleship from a shuttlecock. He is making the navy ridiculous.

Mr. Roosevelt is fishing in troubled waters. He should have a real secretary of war and a real secretary of the navy. He needs more than phonograph records of White House speeches in both jobs.

Threatened the peace of the whole world and the balance of military, diplomatic and economic power, none has ever been of vital interest to America. Down the ages would-be dictators have aspired to conquer the entire world, but always something has happened to thwart their plans. Hitler is merely an imitator of Alexander and Napoleon, and yet America had never considered it necessary to "intervene" in a foreign war until Germany by continued overt acts caused us to go into the great war of twenty-five years ago—and though we were among the "victors" our people do not want any more of that brand of victory (7).

It is one thing to stay at home and make our country impregnable against possible attack by any foreign power or combination of powers, but to attempt to dominate the affairs of distant nations is something new in American foreign policy.

Members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet and many of his other close advisers have been beating the war drums for months and it is evident that the President himself is impatient to be "forced" into war in Europe, in Asia and anywhere else where the fighting is good. He has been making fighting speeches for more than three years—even before England and France declared war on Germany.

GASLESS NIGHTS

Around Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 8—All the studios and most of their writers practice piracy in one form or another, the second to straighten you out on your heroes, how they got that way, which may be worthy and why.

For 18 years Professor Hicks has taught Wisconsin's leading survey course in American history. The "course" is available in his books. But most emphatically, this is not a textbook. Professor Hicks divides his story into two parts, the Federal Union, America from Colonial days to the close of the Civil War, and the American Nation, U. S. Reconstruction to Roosevelt's third term.

Hecht also told about some trouble he and Charles MacArthur had with "The Scourge"—a film, incidentally, which eventually won the Academy Award for the best original story of 1935. After they had been in production a short time, they learned that the screen play contained a situation almost identical with one in an obscure German play of a few years before.

Under the circumstances, the writer-producers thought it wise to buy screen rights to the play. This they quietly did for $2,500, but afterward the play-author sued, saying he hadn't known the picture was already in production, that his property was essential to the film and was worth much more than the amount paid.

And then, only the day before the case came to trial, Hecht remembered. And in court he was able to present a set of galley proofs, printed and ready to go to press, called "All He Ever Loved," in which a saddened ghost brought down the second-act curtain with the line: "Is there no one to cry for me?"

Thus it was apparent that the complaining author had stolen the idea which now was the basis for the suit. Worse than that, he actually was suing the man from whom he had stolen it. "All He Ever Loved" was one of Ben Hecht's early efforts.

It was one thing to stay at home and make our country impregnable against possible attack by any foreign power or combination of powers, but to attempt to dominate the affairs of distant nations is something new in American foreign policy. Members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet and many of his other close advisers have been beating the war drums for months and it is evident that the President himself is impatient to be "forced" into war in Europe, in Asia and anywhere else where the fighting is good.

LEARN HISTORY, MEET THE HEROES IN TWO BOOKS

Most Americans, for one reason or another, seem to take their history lightly, content to rest with a few dates and a handful of heroes. At any rate, it is a good time to learn more as the nation makes history the schoolbooks may link along with Lexington and Concord 150 years hence.

There is scant excuse for not knowing. For instance, two books just off the presses fill the need abundantly. They are John D. Hicks' two-volume narrative history, "The United States" (Houghton, Mifflin, $7.50) and Dixon Wecter's combination history-biography, "The Hero in America" (Scribner's, $3.50).

While he courted Arabella she thought of his career. She loved him and was determined that he should not finish in sweetness and frustration as her father had. She made him turn down a job with the cement company. She told him about her father. Robert remembered her father a little and he never suspected that he suffered all the agonies of the damned and frustrated.

Robert was glad to escape Chicago. He could already play the Elegg and he was bored. A man gets a hankering to do something beautiful but "it doesn't mean he wants to spend all his life doing it. THE LOOKING GLASS

THE VIOLINIST

Arabella was devoted to her father who spent the better part of his life as clerk in the tax-assessor's office. They made little excursions together. Mother's feet or her back generally hurt so they were glad to leave her at home. They went fishing and hiking together. Father would build camp fires and speak wistfully of an early desire to go west as a pioneer. In the Woods Arabella could see that he was intensely alive. She always remembered her father as a gentle man patiently, smilingly, living a frustrated life.

It made her heart sick and determined that her love should never frustrate any man. She was a courageous opinionated girl who expected the same courage and conviction in others. But Robert was neither courageous nor convicted. It was accidental that he fell in love with music. He had been at the same time. All he really wanted to do, as he realized later, was to play Massene's Elegg. Most musical ambitions bow down to a single piece of music.

Arabella would marry Robert was that he not take a job and that he practice his music. Robert had neither the genius nor the ambition necessary. Also he felt like a sissy. Arabella persuaded him that he needed a more sympathetic environment. He must go to the University and this would be possible if she could get a job as an assistant teacher. Things went better. Robert got the technique at least. By the time he finished the course Arabella was a full-time teacher with quite excellent pay and she said Robert must go to the Conservatory in Chicago. She swore she would never have a child until he was launched in his career.

Plenty of men were trapped that way. Maybe she had been the trap that had sprung on her own father. Robert was glad to escape Chicago. He could already play the Elegg and he was bored. THE skipper of this space now is vacationing. By the time this gets into print he should be a long way from Pampa. An early start—one of those before breakfast things—was made this morning after the usual days of preparation and pre-vacation planning.

We have told you, of course, that while we absent this column will be handled—beginning Monday—by a long line of guest columnists. We'll go into more detail about that Sunday. Meanwhile, our interest is turned toward the success and entertainment of Bobby Dedmon, Pampa's Soap Box derby champion, who also is leaving for the east where he will represent the Pampa News in the All-American Soap Box derby at Akron, Ohio, one week from Sunday.

Participation of aircraft will be limited. There will be few if any parachute troops. All the ground forces will have honest-to-John rifles and full quotas of machine guns. They will fire blank cartridges as long as the supply holds out, as the munitions plants are too busy making the real things to bother making more blanks.

In the line of field artillery, there will be 75's, but practically no 90's, 105's, 155's or any of the bigger guns. They will fire almost 100 percent equipment in the way of the smaller mortars, but very few of the larger guns. Anti-tank guns and anti-aircraft guns will be missing.

There are so many that are considerable squawk about the dummy weapons, in spite of the fact that the Army has been doing its best for months to explain that the Germans trained with cardboard tanks before Hitler and that these shortages are inevitable when you jump an army from 285,000 to 1,400,000 practically overnight.

DRUG WOULD BEAT OUT FACTS Army has always been undecided, in the past, whether to bludgeon and try to hide its shortages, or whether to come out boldly and admit its equipment left considerable to be desired. General Drum, in command of the up-to-the-biggest maneuvers in the New York state area during the last few years, has been one of the officers supporting the idea that the country should be fully informed about how lousy its Army material really was, in the hope that it would stir up people and particularly congressmen and firebrand politicians for more money for defense. It didn't work, but it was a good idea.

What is all this prove is simply that the Army can't read the war. Certain tank forces, perhaps yes. But the Army as a whole hasn't the equipment and its men, good as they may be, simply haven't had all the training it takes to make an Army that will stack up against the professional and fire-bred fighters of Europe and Asia. And the more everyone realizes those shortcomings, the better off we'll be.

BY PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—From now until the end of November, army units all over the country will be up to their ears in biggers and up to their necks in maneuvering, the biggest that Hitler slates forces have ever staged, costing about $24 million. Nearly a million men will participate—230,000 of the Third Army in the Beauregard, La., area from Aug. 16-20, 470,000 of the First and Fourth Armies at Beauregard in September, 302,000 of the Second and Third Armies in the Carolinas and November.

Maneuvers so far have been piddlin' little things of divisions or corps, a mere 15,000 to 100,000 men. Now the full armies swing into action in the biggest maneuvers the country has seen since the War Between the States, as there was nothing like these during the World War.

Participation of aircraft will be limited. There will be few if any parachute troops. All the ground forces will have honest-to-John rifles and full quotas of machine guns. They will fire blank cartridges as long as the supply holds out, as the munitions plants are too busy making the real things to bother making more blanks.

In the line of field artillery, there will be 75's, but practically no 90's, 105's, 155's or any of the bigger guns. They will fire almost 100 percent equipment in the way of the smaller mortars, but very few of the larger guns. Anti-tank guns and anti-aircraft guns will be missing.

There are so many that are considerable squawk about the dummy weapons, in spite of the fact that the Army has been doing its best for months to explain that the Germans trained with cardboard tanks before Hitler and that these shortages are inevitable when you jump an army from 285,000 to 1,400,000 practically overnight.

DRUG WOULD BEAT OUT FACTS Army has always been undecided, in the past, whether to bludgeon and try to hide its shortages, or whether to come out boldly and admit its equipment left considerable to be desired. General Drum, in command of the up-to-the-biggest maneuvers in the New York state area during the last few years, has been one of the officers supporting the idea that the country should be fully informed about how lousy its Army material really was, in the hope that it would stir up people and particularly congressmen and firebrand politicians for more money for defense. It didn't work, but it was a good idea.

What is all this prove is simply that the Army can't read the war. Certain tank forces, perhaps yes. But the Army as a whole hasn't the equipment and its men, good as they may be, simply haven't had all the training it takes to make an Army that will stack up against the professional and fire-bred fighters of Europe and Asia. And the more everyone realizes those shortcomings, the better off we'll be.

So They Say

The effort is enormous and the good will very striking. It is now only a matter of time, and there can be only one result.

JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES, British economist, on the U. S. Defense effort.

We shall be and continue to be in great danger as long as the Hitler idea rules. Our best hope is to get it over with—without war. Our next best hope is to get it over with, even if we have to go to war.

WASHINGTON PEARLNESS POINTERS

U. S. Marine Corps has a confidential file on the manners and customs of countries all over the world, and whenever a devil dog detachment is preparing for foreign service, the manuals are dragged out and the men get a course of how to behave while traveling.

More than 90,000 regular soldiers are now serving in 12 branches of the Army, 60,000 in the regular Army, the balance in national guard. Army medical corps is making a special study of tropical diseases like yaws (pinta and bejel). And Army quartermaster corps has let contracts for 15,800 pairs of fur mittens, 4,800 fur-trimmed parkas, and 1,000 sets of fur mittens and caps for nurses.

Also to be mentioned are hundreds of sets of tyann boots (50 books to a set) for the armed forces. Nearly 500 searchers in the Census Bureau are swamped trying to keep up with requests for "delayed birth certificates," now pouring in at the rate of 16,000 a week. Point is that workers can't get jobs in defense plants unless they can prove citizenship, and many people can't otherwise prove they were born . . . Of 265 dollar-a-year men, 40 were corporation presidents . . . WPA workers have made bows and arrows for 19 Army entertainment recreation centers in California.

High School Coaches Vote Policy Change

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
HOUSTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—The Texas High School Football Coaches association, largest organization of its kind in America, is ready to expand its scope of athletic activities.

For nine years the association has functioned as a football unit, sponsoring a huge coaching school where all phases of the gridiron game are dealt with. Now it is prepared to add basketball, track and field and the other sports operated through the far-flung Texas interscholastic league.

That was made possible last night when the association voted to change its name by dropping "football" and becoming the Texas High School Coaches association.

The school entered its final instruction periods today with nothing left for tomorrow except the annual all-star game matching the cream of the crop from the upper regions of the interscholastic league.

This game, scheduled for 8 p. m. at Rice field, is expected to attract between 8,000 and 10,000 spectators.

And indications are that all the money realized from this classic will go into a fund to provide permanent disability insurance for school-boys athletes of the state.

A committee headed by P. E. Shotwell, veteran Longview coach, is studying a plan whereby athletes in the schools represented in the association will have this insurance paid up for them, meaning some 12,000 boys will be protected without cost to their schools.

At the annual business meeting last night Eck Curtis of Breckenridge, a highly successful oil belt coach, was elected president for the ensuing year.

Clyde Park of Fort Stockton and Shotwell were the two renamed to the board. New directors elected were Clyde Gott of Smithville, C. M. Flory of Harlingen and Miller of Brownwood.

The site of the 1942 coaching school will not be selected until January when the board meets at Athens.

PAMPA BASEBALL WEDDING

Yanks Got Going When Sturm, Forgotten Man, Went To First

Johnny Sturm plays plenty of first base. Jewell Ems, former manager of Indianapolis, and now a Cincinnati coach, calls Sturm a better fielder than the flashy Dahlgren.

Johnny Sturm plays plenty of first base. Jewell Ems, former manager of Indianapolis, and now a Cincinnati coach, calls Sturm a better fielder than the flashy Dahlgren.

Sturm likes to tell about the time he made all three putouts in a triple play while with Joplin in the Western association.

With runners on second and third, a ball was hit to the shortstop, he relates. "I took the throw for one one, and when the man on third hesitated about going home, I threw to the plate and he was caught in a run down."

"I backed up the plate and took the throw, chasing and tagging the runner before he could get back to third. Meanwhile, the man on second had hesitated and before he knew he was hung up, and I beat him to second for the third out. Double! Plays completed when Sturm is around."

On the last western swing, Sturm twice started double plays in extra innings as the New Yorks beat the Detroiters in 17 innings.

Sturm teamed with Priddy and Rizzuto to set the all-time double play record last season with 193. Today the Yanks are closing in on the American league record of 187 double killings set by Cleveland in 1936. The Yankees have completed 120.

As leadoff man, Sturm's 250 batting average is weakest among the New York regulars, but no one worries much about it, not even Johnny himself.

Maytag And Kraft Lead Broadmoor

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 8 (AP)—Bud Maytag and John Kraft were still the men behind the guns in the Broadmoor Invitational tournament today as three Coloradans who spilled failures in the first round failed to repeat.

Maytag, only Colorado Springs entrant still in the running, met Francis (Mickey) Fleming of Evansville, Ind., in today's quarterfinal round, after ousting Gomas Green of Fairfax, Okla., yesterday 2 and 1.

Fleming knocked out H. F. Benson of Colorado Springs, who upset former titlist Eddie Stokes of Denver in the first round.

Kraft, a Denver educator, won by default from Harvey Cowan of Beaumont, Tex., to meet Joe Hartman of Denver today. Hartman eliminated Lyman Wright of Broadmoor 2 and 1.

The other two first round giant killers who bowed out yesterday were Pat Collins of Colorado Springs and Dan Walker of Denver. Young Collins lost to John Oliver, Amarillo, Tex., city champ, 1 up in 19 holes, and Walker was ousted out by the single hole advantage of Will Price, Jr., of Wichita, Kas.

Price and Oliver drew each other in today's shooting.

The final 18-hole encounter today is an all-Oklahoma affair, starting Dee Reppole of Stamford University and Oklahoma City and Neil Smith of Ardmore.

Reppole nipped Norris Russell, Denton, Tex., 4 and 3 while Smith was winning a 24-hole endurance contest from L. P. Larkins, Beaumont, Tex.

Hawaiians Favored In Swimming Meet

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8 (AP)—If the snappy Hawaiian team splashes off with honors at the National A. A. U. senior men's swimming and diving championships starting today, the losers can't use the alibi that the islanders have lived in the ocean.

On the contrary, most of them learned to swim in an irrigation ditch and followed through with advanced courses in pools even as their competitors from the inland.

The competitive Hawaiian swimmers snub such famed spots as Waikiki beach, that's for tourists. "It's a mistaken notion in the United States that Hawaiian boys and girls are developing into swimming champions chiefly because they spend a lot of time in the ocean," said Solchi Sakamoto, coach of Alexander House Community association from Maui Island.

Buffs Run Win Streak To Six

(By The Associated Press) The Houston Buffs ran their winning streak to six in a row and Howard Pollett marked up his 19th win of the season last night as the Shreveport Sports succumbed twice, 9 to 3 and 2 to 1.

Al Brazle was the second game twirler.

A four-run rally in the seventh gave the Oklahoma City Indians a 4 to 1 victory over the Dallas Rebels.

The Fort Worth Cats amassed 15 hits and, aided by five Tulsa errors, submerged the Oilers, 9 to 2.

Rain at Beaumont caused the San Antonio game to be postponed.

LESSONS IN LOVE

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY Dugan tells Barbara he should have known it never could be...

the cards you have to play? "Let's not analyze it," she whispered.

Barbara knew she could never learn to love a man, as though it were a lesson...

BARBARA SAYS 'NO'

CHAPTER XI

LARRY GROVER took Barbara's face tenderly between his two hands. "Okay," he murmured.

His arms went around her again and his lips sought hers, but she turned her face against his chest instead of kissing him.

"Larry," she said quietly, "I think I've always wanted you to kiss me the way you did just then. It was the first time you really ever put your heart into it."

She looked up at him then. "Yet even now you take me for granted. You confess your love unreservedly, so of course you figure I'll start marching right down to the altar with you."

Barbara patted his cheek tenderly. "I'm glad you finally kissed me that way, Larry. It woke me up."

He frowned slightly. "What do you mean?" "I'm pretty sure I don't love you, Larry," she said softly.

"You're sweet and swell, but" she pointed to her heart—"but something didn't go click in here when you popped the question."

She looked at the moon streaming from behind a feathery cloud, and she felt as though a big load had been lifted from her mind.

"It's funny, Larry," she mused, "the way we think we want something, and then discover we never really did want it when we get it."

She poked him in the chest playfully. "That applies to you, Larry."

He smiled ruefully. "Not angry. Just disappointed. But I guess it's my own fault for not playing my cards right. Or would you say it isn't the way you play them but should have known it never could be. When she fell in love she wanted it to be sudden, swift and sure. Something that would hit her and make a definite impression, not a vacillating one.

Barbara knew she could never learn to love a man, as though it were a lesson, taking it by stages until the whole thing was mastered and understood.

She felt a little ashamed of herself, too. Larry probably wouldn't have proposed if it hadn't been for Dugan Blake. Poor Larry. Of course, he had figured—just as she knew he would—that Dugan Blake might blossom into a rival.

BARBARA lay back and closed her eyes. "Haven't seen him in the last 15 minutes," said Uncle Hank. "Haven't seen him all night, in fact," said Uncle Hank.

There was a troubled frown on Larry Grover's face as he drove Barbara home. "Funny, about Dugan disappearing, wasn't it?"

"I hadn't thought much more about it." "Larry," he said matter-of-factly. "Why don't you admit you're in love with him?"

"I'm not," she flashed. "Nor have I any intentions of falling in love with him." "Well, at least you're a beautiful liar," he added cheerfully.

Which makes it all right, of course." Larry offered his hand as he took her to the door. "We've got to be very impersonal from now on," he said gravely, and she laughed.

Then Barbara reached up swiftly and kissed him lightly "That's for good luck tomorrow. I'll be darned if I'll get up for your morning game, but I'll be on hand if you advance to the afternoon round."

Barbara sat up in bed and hugged her knees. She liked to think that way, and she wanted to do a lot of thinking just then.

Larry Grover—sweet old Larry Grover—had finally neglected his ponies long enough to get around to proposing to her. She knew he would, sooner or later, of course.

Texas Cotton Labor Shortage Averted

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—A threat of a labor shortage in south Texas cotton fields was believed removed today when the Works Projects Administration and Immigration Service officials worked out a plan to supply all needed cotton pickers.

Elmer Moore of San Antonio, representing the South Texas Chamber of Commerce, declared officials of the two governmental agencies had promised to cooperate fully with south Texas farmers in making ample labor available when the peak of the cotton picking season was reached about Aug. 20.

Under the arrangement, Moore said, the WPA was to lay off industrial workers or suspend entire projects wherever necessary to supply labor. Should this source of labor prove insufficient—and he expressed belief it would not furnish all the help that would be needed—the immigration and naturalization service would, upon one other condition, permit the entry of any number of Mexican nationals necessary.

That condition was that the Texas Employment Service certify that it had no further applicants for jobs left on its rolls who were able to pick cotton.

Latin Pilots Will Train At Randolph

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—In a move described as a gesture of friendship intended to strengthen the ties between western hemisphere countries, the war department announced today that 14 army pilots from 8 Latin American republics would begin a refresher course August 22 at the army air corps flying school at Randolph Field, Texas.

The aviators are part of a group of 65 junior officers who will serve in various branches of the U. S. army for six months. They were selected by United States attaches or missions in Latin America after invitations were extended by the secretary of war to all Latin American republics.

Countries sending the officers are: Brazil, Mexico, Chile, Bolivia, Honduras, Nicaragua, Paraguay and Peru.

LESSONS IN LOVE

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Dugan tells Barbara he loved her on an impulse. Later, Uncle Hank explains that Dugan's love for Barbara is only a passing fancy.

BARBARA SAYS "NO"

CHAPTER XI

LARRY GROVER took Barbara's face tenderly between his two hands.

"Okay," he murmured. "You win. Here I am broken down like an old pair of shoes."

His arms went around her again and his lips sought hers, but she turned her face against his chest instead of kissing him.

"Larry," she said quietly, "I think I've always wanted you to kiss me the way you did just then. It was the first time you—well, it was the first time you really ever put your heart into it."

She looked up at him then. "Yet even now you take me for granted. You confess your love unreservedly, so of course you figure I'll start marching right down to the altar with you."

Barbara patted his cheek tenderly. "I'm glad you finally kissed me that way, Larry. It woke me up."

He frowned slightly. "What do you mean?"

"I'm pretty sure I don't love you, Larry," she said softly. "You're sweet and swell, but—" she pointed to her heart—"but something didn't go click in here when you popped the question."

She looked at the moon streaming from behind a feathery cloud, and she felt as though a big load had been lifted from her mind.

"It's funny, Larry," she mused, "the way we think we want something, and then discover we never really did want it when we get it."

She poked him in the chest playfully. "That applies to you, Larry?"

He smiled ruefully. "Not angry. Just disappointed. But I guess it's my own fault for not playing my cards right. Or would you say it isn't the way you play them but the cards you have to play?"

"Let's not analyze it," she whispered. "Let me know if you change your mind?"

She nodded. "But I don't think I'll change it."

He took her by the arm. "Let's go inside. As I recall, you haven't danced with Dugan yet," he said pointedly.

She stiffened slightly. "No, I haven't."

"I hadn't thought much more about it."

"Liar," he said matter-of-factly. "Why don't you admit you're in love with him?"

"I'm not," she flashed. "Nor have I any intentions of falling in love with him."

"Well, at least you're a beautiful liar," he added cheerfully. "Which makes it all right, of course."

Larry offered his hand as he took her to the door. "We've got to be very impersonal from now on," he said gravely, and she laughed.

Then Barbara reached up swiftly and kissed him lightly. "That's for good luck tomorrow. I'll be darned if I'll get up for your morning game, but I'll be on hand if you advance to the afternoon round."

Barbara sat up in bed and hugged her knees. She liked to think that way, and she wanted to do a lot of thinking just then.

Larry Grover—sweet old Larry Grover—had finally neglected his ponies long enough to get around to proposing to her. She knew he would, sooner or later, of course. Seriously, and not jocularly in that threatening manner he liked to employ.

There was a time when she would have accepted, she mused, and then hurriedly amended the thought in her mind.

Looking at it, objectively she should have known it never could be. When she fell in love she wanted it to be sudden, swift and sure. Something that would hit her and make a definite impression, not a vacillating one.

Barbara knew she could never learn to love a man, as though it were a lesson, taking it by stages until the whole thing was mastered and understood.

She felt a little ashamed of herself, too. Larry probably wouldn't have proposed if it hadn't been for Dugan Blake. Poor Larry. Of course, he had figured—just as she knew he would—that Dugan Blake might blossom into a rival.

Barbara lay back and closed her eyes. A silly thought, of course. Larry should have known that was an impossibility. For her to fall in love with that wild Indian didn't make sense.

It didn't, did it? she asked herself and then, as though an inner voice had answered her, Barbara sat bolt upright again.

She knew then and there she would have to be careful. Her falling in love with Dugan Blake could make a lot of sense. There was no use kidding herself. And there was only one thing she could do about it.

She had to avoid Dugan as much as possible in the two days remaining before he returned to Oklahoma.

Briar Hill beat Spring Mountain the following morning, 8-6. Dugan got four of the eight goals, and as they dismounted at the end of the game, their faces latched in sweat, Larry swung an arm around Dugan's shoulder enthusiastically.

"This is the year," he chortled. "We can't miss, or I'm a left-handed Ubangi."

Larry picked up a sponge impulsively and sponged Dugan's face. "Honest, Injun, I wish you weren't going home Monday. Everyone around here is completely sold on you. I'm not kidding when I say there's going to be an awfully let-down feeling when you pull stakes."

He helped Dugan into a fleecelined jacket to keep his muscles from getting cold. "Can't you transfer your interests to New York?" Larry asked appealingly.

"Old Man Chase probably can make just as good use of you here as he does down in the sticks."

Dugan smiled wryly. "Thanks, Larry. It's swell of you to say all that, but I think I'll be a lot better off in Oklahoma. Yes," he said slowly, "a lot better off."

soil conservation bill in the history of Texas.

The others were further protection of labor, completion of the social security program, liberal support of eleemosynary institutions, proper use and regulation of highways and liberal provision for schools and colleges teaching fundamental concepts of the democratic life.

"He said the legislature evidenced its sympathy with working men by passing laws to improve their condition.

It enacted the largest tax bill of any legislature and allocated funds liberally to old age assistance, teachers retirement aid to the blind and aid to the dependent and neglected, he continued.

Legislation was passed to remove all insane from jails, he said, adding "when the hand of misfortune is laid on one of our fellow citizens through no fault of his we should provide every possible relief."

He also noted that laws were approved to make drivers licensing more effective, add more than 100 members to the highway patrol, plug loop holes in the motor fuel tax law and otherwise improve effectiveness of highway transportation.

New buildings and other provisions for educational institutions together with generous appropriation for rural schools were authorized, he said.

Stevenson did not claim credit for the enactment of such measures but said he had "dared to mention a program" which perhaps "was already in the minds of the legislature."

He said the program was evidence of collective ability to work together for the best interests of the majority of the people of Texas.

As a private citizen he always had considered it as much his duty as that of a public official to support and sustain the government in its essential forms, he went on.

"To me the plan of government of our forefathers is of divine inspiration," he said. "It came from the same creative source from which laws and not government of men. A government of law is not controlled by the weaknesses and prejudices of men. . . .

"A government of men is subjected to all the whims and caprices, all the passions and cruelties of men. In a government of law nothing is secure. The will of one man of a few men constitutes the authority to which all men must submit in all things. This is the government of Hitler and Mussolini.

granted deferments because of their occupations, because they are not physically capable of undergoing service in the armed forces, General Page said. Nevertheless, he added, they are qualified to perform some work in connection with civilian defense activities and should offer their services to existing agencies or those which are being organized.

By granting certain men deferment, congress, when it adopted the selective training and service act of 1940, gave no indication that it intended to excuse these men from the obligation which rests upon every young man—that of helping his country in times of emergency, General Page pointed out. Every man is expected to do his share, in one way or another, when crisis threatens the national security. He said:

"Many of our young men have entered the armed forces, leaving at home others who for one reason or another have had their military training deferred. Those who remain owe it to those who have been called and owe it to their country to help in its defense when and wherever they are needed.

"They can do their part by offering their services in the interests of civilian defense. In the very near future almost every community will be engaged in civilian defense activities. Such activities, of course cover a wide range and should include tasks for all young men who are deferred from military training."

NAZI TROOPS

that Russian warplanes had bombed Berlin during the night for the first time in the war.

The Germans reported that hostile planes attacked the capital overnight for the 80th time killing some civilians and inflicting minor property damage. London officials said that Russian raiders were based in Estonia or in the Smolensk sector.

Soviet planes would have to fly more than 800 miles to raid Berlin—1,200 miles round trip.

The Soviet high command, officially labeling Hitler's claims of vast successes as "Arabian fairy tales," declared that the 48-day-old struggle had cost the Germans more than 1,500,000 men against 600,000 Soviet losses, and termed the blitzkrieg a complete failure.

According to Soviet figures, the ratio of Nazi losses would be nearly 3 to 1, or about the normal toll for an attacking army.

Russian military dispatches again reported fierce overnight fighting in the familiar sectors of Katskimi, 75 miles north of Leningrad; Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow; Bel Tserkov, 50 miles southwest of Kiev; and in Estonia.

The Soviet high command, countering Nazi claims of having broken the Stalin line, declared that actually no such line of fortifications ever existed and that the fiction of a vast Russian defense works comparable to the German's Maginot Line was invented by the Germans to justify their tremendous losses.

As to the German report of 895,000 Russian prisoners taken, the Red army communique commented: "Occupying the territory, the city hall Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. At 10:50 o'clock he will speak on 'The Present Challenge to Christianity,' and at 8 o'clock on 'The First City and the Last.'"

ALL-OUT TAX

President Roosevelt suggested that the exemptions be $1,500 and $750. The house ways and means committee rejected the idea.

"We have now come," Morgenthau said, "to the point where it is a matter not merely of fundamental equity, but of the utmost necessity that all exemptions from taxation be reduced to the absolute minimum."

"Under the bill before you the base has been broadened to add about 2,000,000 new taxpayers, but even so there will remain a relatively large proportion of the population in the lower income groups which will not be directly affected by the income tax."

"A further lowering of the exemptions would produce some additional revenue and in addition it would give millions of Americans an opportunity—a welcome opportunity—to make a direct contribution through taxes to the defense of their country."

Morgenthau coupled this suggestion with a proposal that all the traditional complexities of making out an annual income tax return should be abolished for the small taxpayer.

He said complicated returns were necessary "for persons with substantial incomes who can afford high priced lawyers and accountants, but for the small taxpayer there ought to be a simple form on which would be printed a table of tax liabilities so that no computations would be necessary."

Despite the fact that just before passing the tax bill earlier this week, the house rejected a proposal to require all married couples to file joint income tax returns regardless of whether husbands and wives earn separate incomes, Morgenthau proposed reinstatement of this provision "with appropriate relief granted only where both husband and wife work outside the home."

Morgenthau and Mr. Roosevelt objected in letters to the house against the house committee proposal for joint returns because it lacked a special credit for husband and wives working outside of their homes and treated their earned income in the same manner as unearned. Experts estimated that when the house eliminated this provision it reduced the revenue from the bill by $23,000,000 a year.

The secretary also reiterated the administration proposal that excess profits taxes on corporations should apply to earnings in excess of specified returns on invested capital. The house committee and the house rejected this proposal and gave corporations the choice of computing excess profits taxes on the basis of either normal earnings or return on invested capital.
