Sensation Created By Behrman Sale; Will Be Continued

A real sensation was created in Pampa Monday when Behrman's opened their greatest overstocked sale of all time. Customers eager to take advantage of the hundreds of bargains offered, flocked to the store. Many interviews during the day it was necessary to limit the hours due to the immense crowds that came to buy merchandise. It is the first time such a thing has happened since the war. B. M. Behrman said, "I want to apologize to the many customers that could not be properly handled."

Carver Pupils Present Play

"Hazel and Gretel" the famous story of two lost children in a wonderful, will be presented at 8 p. m. Friday by elementary grades from Carver School. The opera will be performed at the B. M. Baker Elementary School auditorium. Portraying the character of Hazel will be Stanley Williams and Gretel, Willie Peasle Oliver. The production is under the direction of Mrs. T. Curry Nelson and Miss H. J. Friday. J. C. Randall, principal of Carver School, said that about 40 students will make up the chorus for the opera.

Vital Statistics

Married - J. C. Randall and Mrs. J. C. Randall were married at Pampa, Texas, on May 15, 1951. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Randall. The bride was Miss J. C. Randall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Randall. The groom was Mr. J. C. Randall, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Randall. The couple will reside in Pampa, Texas.

Two Queried In Burglary

The Pampa Police Department is questioning two men in connection with a burglary that took place in Pampa, Texas, on May 15, 1951. The burglary took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Randall. The police are looking for a man who was seen near the scene of the burglary. The man is described as being about 30 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighing about 150 pounds. He has dark hair and is wearing a dark suit. The police are looking for a man who was seen near the scene of the burglary.

Local Man 'Adopts' Crippled Italian Boy

A 17-year-old boy in Italy has acquired a friendship in Pampa through the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, Inc.

The local young man is R. F. Williams, who read an advertisement in the Time Magazine from the plan and wrote to headquarters in New York. He was "assigned" Antonio Bruno Cicchellero, a shy boy, who has suffered the effects of war.

ANTONIO BRUNO CICHELLERO

Antonio's case history shows that he was badly wounded in 1944 while in the fields sowing corn. As he fled military planes, a shell fell and burst nearby. A fragment lodged in his spine, paralyzing both legs.

He underwent a number of operations. Now he is able to use one leg though the other remains limp and stiff.

Antonio's father is a tanner and earns pitifully little to support his five children. He is most often unemployed as most others in his trade. The whole family lives jammed into a one room flat where there is no running water.

The boy wants to be trained as a stenographer so that he can support himself.

The Foster Parents' Plan was organized 14 years ago and has cared for more than 60,000 children. It is now operating in Belgium, England, France, Greece, Holland, Italy and is helping other children of 14 different nationalities. Each child is treated individually.

"Adoption" is financial, not legal. The foster parent promises to contribute $15 monthly towards the child's support for at least a year. Correspondence through the plan is encouraged.

Iceland's Airfields Said Nearly Useless

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Strategic Iceland's airfields will be almost useless for modern American heavy bombers and jet fighters until and unless they can be rebuilt.

None of the runways of the four fields constructed during World War II are long enough for handling fully-loaded warplanes like the B-36 or the swift jet fighters, a check has indicated.

But Iceland — where United States Army, Navy and Air Forces have landed under an agreement with Denmark (owner of Iceland) to help defend the island under the North Atlantic treaty provisions — has two other major functions in guarding against possible Soviet attack across the Arctic:

1. As location for radar air raid warning stations.
2. As a base for submarines and surface craft patrolling the high Arctic latitudes on watch for airborne attackers.

Extensive harbor facilities, including fuel storage dumps and unloading piers, were built by the United States during World War II and presumably are still usable after some repair and rehabilitation work.

Iceland, like its big neighbor Greenland, could have another valuable use in the future — as a launching base for long-range guided missiles. However, in addition to the question of whether Denmark would want her territories used for offensive warfare there is the fact that really long-range guided missiles so far are only experimental gadgets and not actual weapons.

The longest runways on Iceland are at the Keflavik Airport — four strips of about 6,600 feet. Jet fighters and heavy bombers, taking off with anything except a light load of fuel and few or no bombs, need from 8,000 to 10,000 feet of runway.

Three other fields were built in Iceland during the war — Kassar, Patterson and Reykjavik. Some of those strips were only 2,500 feet and the longest was 5,200.

Greenland, the subject of a recent agreement similar to that for Iceland, had three fields — all of them on the southern or western coasts. The longest strip there (and the only one now used by the U. S.) is the 6,600-foot runway at Narsarsuaq, near the south tip of Greenland.

In that same general area, the Navy started in 1947 to construct at Grondal a small naval operating base. Little was disclosed at that time about the project — and less has been said since. Such a base, however, obviously would be useful in fueling and providing light service for submarines and other scout craft.

The initial 200-man force that has landed in Iceland is only a tiny fraction of the approximate 60,000 there at one time in World War II. Of that total peak strength, about 32,000 were Army personnel.

Cleopatra Brings Furor

NOTTINGHAM, Eng. — (AP) — Cleopatra, whose swaying hips and roving eyes excited a lot of men and irked a lot of women way back in 88 B. C., was still at it today.

The sly-eyed queen of the Nile, said a joint standing conference of women's organizations, was definitely not a good woman.

The former Egyptian queen, who charmed Julius Caesar and Mark Anthony, among others, had been scheduled to quiver her way through a festival pageant — "Women Through The Ages" — which Nottingham will present this summer.

But Miss Emily Roseblade, chairman of the Nottingham women's group, said her organization didn't want Cleopatra parading alongside such heroines of history as Florence Nightingale.

"It might cause a controversy," Miss Roseblade announced. "Only good women should go in."

On the other hand, Miss Nellie Smith, 48-year-old author and producer of the pageant, said the show should include bad women as well as good ones.

"I think we should show both sides," declared Miss Smith. "Cleopatra stays or I resign as writer and producer."

Miss Roseblade said she would take the matter up with her committee next week.

Can't Keep Shamrock's Howard Twins Apart Long

SHAMROCK — (Special) — You can't keep the Howard twins apart for long!

Last January Louan left Shamrock high school to marry Jerry King and go to Corpus Christi. It broke up the team of 17-year-old twins for the first time in their lives.

Now they're going to be back together. Joan, who stayed on to finish her senior year at Shamrock high school, is going to marry Don Lea, another senior and fullback ace on the 1950 Irish bi-district champs.

They'll be married Monday, May 21, before the commencement exercises in which each will receive a diploma. Then they'll go to Corpus Christi, where Lea will be employed. The twins will be joined again.

Bob Louan and Joan were familiar sights during their four years here. They were twin yell leaders for the Irish grid crew last fall, and Louan was Hal-love'en queen.

They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Howard of the Bethel community.

Something To Anticipate

CHICAGO — (AP) — If you are a 29-year-old average male, a private tax and business law organization has estimated, you can look forward to paying a minimum of $34,700 in taxes by the time you are 65.

Commerce Clearing House, an organization that reports on tax and business law, identified the average 29-year-old male as follows:

He has an annual income of $4,300, a car, a mortgaged home, two children, smokes a pack of cigarettes a day and drinks a quart of whisky a month. He will buy his wife two fur coats in the next 36 years and an average number of taxed household appliances. He will pay telephone taxes and travel taxes on his vacations.

This is his supposed tax bill:

Federal income — $15,684, real property $7,200; social security $3,573; personal property $720; gasoline $842; licenses $738; excise $715; lubricants $28; sales or state income $2,035; cigarette $1,117; liquor $372; luxury $342; telephone — $267; transportation $246; admissions $187 and home appliances $75.

It amounts to 22 percent of Mr. Average American's 36 years of future earnings.

Letter in Reply to Jean Elsten, 924 Jackson Street, City

JEAN'S LETTER... Dear Editor: We people are from Lincoln school. We have a teacher, Dean Stephan. We think very much of him. He comes to visit us children in his spare time. He tries to do everything possible to make us like school.

SIXTH-GRADER'S LETTER pleading to keep teacher out of draft was answered in this page one fashion on Huntington, Ind.

TEACHER AND PUPIL, Dean Stephan and Jean Elsten, talk in the school gym after Jean got her answer from the editor. She also found Stephan plans to enlist if he isn't called soon.

Sixth Graders Learn That War Means Giving Up Teacher

By NEA Service HUNTINGTON, Ind. — (NEA) — The war in Korea and the tension in the rest of the world have suddenly come very close to the sixth-grade pupils in Huntington's Lincoln School.

They felt their teachers ought to be allowed to stay home and go on teaching because "if we had more teachers like him we would love school." And they thought the draft board ought to do something about it.

But Dean Stephan, 23, who is something of an idol to his young students, thinks teachers ought to go into the armed forces just like anyone else. When the school year ends, that's just what he's going to do.

This spring, when Stephan first got his draft notice, the Lincoln sixth-graders decided they'd better take some action. Acting as their spokesman, 12-year-old Jean Elsten promptly took her case to the Huntington Herald-Press.

"Dear Editor," Jean wrote. "We pupils are from Lincoln school. We have a teacher, Dean Stephan. We think very much of him. He comes to visit us children in his spare time. He tries to do everything possible to make us like school.

"We are begging you to help us, to not draft our wonderful teacher. He said if he wasn't drafted he would teach us next year. And I think if we had more teachers like him we would love school. . . . I am signing this letter for all our Lincoln children. I am looking for an answer soon."

Jean got her answer quickly, although it was not quite what she expected. Herald-Press Editor Howard Houghton replied on page one, right under the Korean war headlines. In his lengthy letter back to Jean, he wrote:

"What you say of your teacher is proof that he is a fine leader of boys and girls. There is no doubt that he belongs in the schoolroom, guiding his pupils by precept and example and inspiration, along with the lessons from the text books. . . . If the world today was the kind of world in which everybody could be doing what he does best and what he rightly should be doing, then there would be no question about your teacher remaining with you. . . .

"But there are evil men in the world who do not believe in boys and girls having the teachers they want. . . . The boys and girls in their schools are taught to fear and hate. . . . These men are not satisfied merely to rule their own countries that way. They want to rule the world, including us. . . .

"That is the reason, Jean, why our country has passed a selective service law. It means that every young man between certain ages, who cannot serve his country in a way even more necessary, must serve a certain time in the armed forces of our country. . . .

"Your teacher will not ask any further deferment. You may be before the board. . . . and tell why you want him to remain with his pupils. I will go with you if you wish. . . . And if your teacher, in spite of your wishes, goes to the armed forces, you must be a soldier, too. . . .

"Because, you see, if your teacher must go to the Army for a time, it will be because he must help make a world where boys and girls may go to school like you have, and grow up to be free men and women."

While Jean was studying her front-page answer, Stephan was granted a temporary deferment. Adam Wall, Lincoln school principal, had gone to the draft board without Stephan's knowledge.

Stephan, an Indiana University graduate and son of Huntington's school superintendent, says a lot of other men his age have gone to the armed forces on the first call.

If he isn't called by the end of the school year, he hopes to enlist.

Jean and the other sixth-graders, who now know they must be soldiers, too, promised they would stop trying to keep their teacher out of the Army.

Dr. SHARYU PANDIT: As health improves, birth rate declines.

Woman Doctor Baffles Indian Birth Rate Through Training

By RICHARD KLEINER NEA Staff Correspondent NEW YORK — (NEA) — She had presented a formally engraved calling card that read: "Dr. (Miss) Sharyu Pandit."

But it was the woman, not the scientist, that came to the surface when she explained why she was in America.

"Forty percent of all children in India die before they reach ten," she said, with a solemn look on her round face. "That is too much. That shouldn't be."

Because of that cold statistic, Dr. Pandit is just completing a nationwide tour to study maternal and child care here. She has been here since December.

On her way back to India, she'll stop off at many countries in Europe to continue her studies.

Since World War II, she explained, the maternal and child care situation in India has improved. But it's a painfully slow process.

"You know," she said, "in India there is one doctor for every 6000 people, and only one midwife for 60,000 people. Four out of every five births are unattended. We have a long way to go."

But a start has been made, through international organizations like the World Health Organization and the UN International Children's Emergency Fund. Dr. Pandit, who is an adviser on maternity and child health to India's director-general of health services, had had large hands in setting up the aid programs.

The keynote of all help, Dr. Pandit feels, should be training. Lack of pre-natal care, in her opinion, is the chief reason for the high infant mortality rate, although lack of proper nutrition is also vital. But it is the almost complete absence of education for prospective mothers that does most of the damage.

To fill the void, UNICEF has earmarked half of its $3,421,000 aid to India for training programs. Almost $1,000,000 will go to the All-India Institute in Calcutta, which will train public health nurses and maternal and child care experts. The Indian Government is matching UNICEF funds in this project.

The Institute is training people from all over Asia, not merely India, because the problem is widespread.

Another $300,000 is going for a program to train rural health officers. This is co-sponsored by India and the WHO. More funds

British Building Hong Kong Defenses Against Red Strike

By STANLEY RICH HONG KONG — (AP) — Along Hong Kong's 17-mile border with Red China, British police and Chinese Communist soldiers stand guard face to face in a silent cooperation.

For the past year Britain has been building a defensive network against the day when this silent cooperation might erupt into roaring hostility.

Today there are three jet airfields where last year there were only rice paddies. Exclusive Force Ling golf course sparkles with the sheen of newly-built gun replacements. Holes dug for other guns pockmark the landscape.

Ten new roads have been built. More are under construction.

Frank H. King, of Dallas, a general executive of the Associated Press, and I toured the eastern half of the border.

With Chief Inspector Roderick Mackenzie we visited three checkpoints through which Chinese farmers, traders and potential troublemakers may enter or leave this British crown colony.

At Lowu passengers of the train from Canton must get off and walk to the middle of a 30-year wooden bridge to show travel permits and pass through customs.

Officially, Hong Kong authorities are negotiating to do away with this. Unofficially, they're not too displeased. It's easier for them to screen possible troublemakers.

On the middle of the bridge stood three Chinese Communist soldiers. One appeared to be no death-rate of infants, in those areas, has been cut from 176 per 1000 births to around 100.

Dr. Pandit doesn't think the decrease in the infant death rate will result in a disastrous population rise in already over-populated India.

"After all," she says, "if you had a rose bush, you'd rather have two beautiful, healthy roses than a bush crowded with sickly, straggly flowers. Same way with people — if they can have two or three healthy children, they won't want lots of children. As the health improves, the birth rate will decline."

more than 14. Above them was an archway, with pictures of a smiling Stalin on the left and a smiling Mao Tse-tung on the right.

Enroute to the next point, a mile east, we saw a strange looking building high on a hillside.

"Observation post," said Mackenzie. "All concrete. We've got four of them now and are building more. Each post has seven men with a Chinese (Nationalist) Corporal or sergeant in charge. Everything that moves is marked down in their book."

Driving toward Shataukok we saw a shining steel fence topped with barbed wire.

"Took us six months to build," said Mackenzie. "It covers the whole border except for one mile."

The fence, and immigration restrictions, have cut traffic across the border from 10,000 a day last August to 1,000 a day now.

Just before we reached Shataukok we passed two Communist soldiers standing on a mound 10 feet to our left. If King had put his hand out the car window he could have said he'd been in Red China.

Shataukok is the Texarkana of the Far East. The border runs right through its center.

Only an un-marked stone in the middle of the street shows where Hong Kong ends and Red China begins.

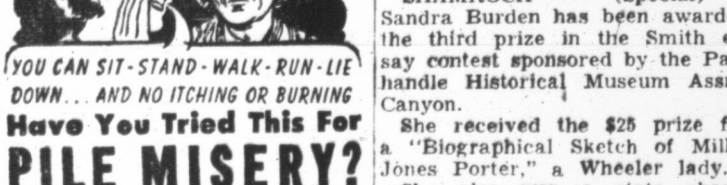

On the way back, King remarked that the rolling green hillsides reminded him of Scotland.

Said Inspector Mackenzie, a native of Invernesshire: "Aye, all it wants is a bit o' heather."

Warner's Sell-Out Ends Pioneer Era

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — The apparent sale by the Warner Brothers of their movie industry interests marks the end of the pioneer era of the movie industry.

This is the first time that any of the great builders and developers of the movie business has retired voluntarily from the Hollywood scene. True, recent years have brought new and younger men into the industry — notably Darryl Zanuck and Dore Schary.

But the great part of the film dynasty has remained in the hands of the men who got it early. These men — many of them immigrants — include Nicholas and Joseph Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, Adolph Zukor, Sam Goldwyn, Spyros Skouras, Jack and Harry Cohn.

Now the Warner brothers have announced their intention to leave that pioneering group after an American saga that led them from a bicycle shop to a multimillion dollar enterprise.

Benjamin Warner left strife-torn Poland in 1888 and brought his family to the United States. They landed at Baltimore and at first had difficulty making ends meet. Harry, the oldest of the boys, helped out by selling papers.

The family kept moving, seeking success in Bluefield, W. Va., Roanoke, Va., London, Ont., and Lynchburg, Va. In 1896, young Harry set out for himself. William McKinley was running for president from his Canton, Ohio, home, so Harry bought a $3 rail road ticket and opened a shoe repair shop to handle the crowds there.

He moved on to Youngstown, Ohio, and business got so good that he sent for his father. Harry was 15 at the time.

The Warners branched out with a bicycle shop. They also went into other enterprises — from selling vinegar and soap to working on the railroad. They began to shape up as a team: Harry the captain, Sam the mechanic, Louis and Albert and Jack the salesmen.

Sam, the mechanical mind, became interested in the new Edison kitescope. He got a job at $8 a week as assistant projectionist, then rented $300 equipment and a print of "The Great Train Robbery" for $180. Soon the whole family joined him in the enterprise. They opened a theater in New Castle, Pa., with a capacity of 99 people.

By 1912 the company had grown until it started making its own pictures. The first was a three-reeler called "Peril of the Plains," filmed at a St. Louis studio. In 1916 they opened a small studio in Hollywood.

The Warners came to prominence during the world war with a film based on Ambassador James W. Gerard's book "My Four Years in Germany." It was the kind of crusading that the brothers did later with such films as "I Am A Fugitive From A Chain Gang," "The Life of Emile Zola," "Confessions of A Nazi Spy" and "Mission to Moscow."

During the 1920's Sam was tinkering with the idea of sound movies. He sold his brothers on the idea and then went to work with Western Electric on a method.

Finally, on Oct. 6, 1927, Al Jolson appeared on the screen of the Warner theater in New York with the words, "You ain't heard nothin' yet, folks; listen to this." It was the first time an actor had spoken dialogue on the screen and it revolutionized the industry. Sam died before he could see the impact of his work on the business.

U.S. Rebuffs Soviet Effort To Control Japanese Treaty

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Washington has wasted no time in rejecting Russia's proposal that the drafting of a Japanese peace treaty—already well on its way to completion—be turned over to four Pacific powers, including Red China.

Such an idea would come only from the capital of Bolshevism. The maneuver is, of course, an undisguised effort to seize control of the treaty negotiations with the idea of establishing Bolshevik domination over Nippon.

Success along that line would make Moscow pretty well ruler of the Far East.

The Soviet proposal is that the treaty-making be turned over to America, Britain, Russia and Red China. That would return to Nationalist China, which was our ally during the world war, and would substitute the Red Chinese government which America hasn't recognized.

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache

Nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness may be due to slow-down of kidney function. Doctors say good kidney function is very important to good health. When some everyday condition, such as stress and strain, causes this important function to slow down, many folks suffer nagging backache—feel miserable. Minor bladder irritations due to cold or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages. Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. It's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 15 million kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

"No Wonder His Mother is Proud of Him"

IT'S enough to make any mother's heart swell with pride when her newspaper-boy son is pointed out as a good example of youthful American enterprise at its best—a young man using his spare time to get a head start in the business world!

Yes, Mother's Day has an added thrill for every woman whose son serves a newspaper route. For thinking people in every walk of life admire the ambitious boy who thus strives to earn his own money, learn business methods, build a savings account, and develop habits and abilities which make him a credit to his family, his community and his country.

A Word to Mothers and Their Teen-Age Sons

Experience shows that a boy improves his chances of success tomorrow—as well as enjoys many advantages today—when he takes over a newspaper route. It offers him steady profits, valuable business training, and many special incentives to succeed. Ask our Circulation Department if there is a route opening in your locality.

States Rights Party Marks Its Birthday

JACKSON, Miss. —(AP)— Today is the third birthday of the States Rights Party.

Nobody is cutting any candle-lit cakes but party leaders say the organization is far from dead.

It is seriously considering a proposal of Sen. Mundt (R-SD) that conservative Democrats, conservative Republicans and States Rights form a third national political party.

It is also considering the possibility of offering the voters next year a coalition presidential and vice-presidential ticket.

And it is planning to do all possible to preserve what it considers the southern Democratic balance of power in Congress.

For the first time, the party has planned no meeting today to mark the organization's birth. It was on May 10, 1948, that the party was formed.

There is some question whether the party will present a coalition presidential ticket next year. Talk of the matter has centered around Gen. Eisenhower for president and South Carolina's James Byrnes for vice president. Both have said they are not interested in running, but States Righters don't take their remarks too seriously.

No national meeting of States Righters is planned this year because of the war. Leander Perez, national director of the group, said.

The States Righters, he says, are not a third political party but merely members of the regular Democratic Party who think and act alike. In its four strongholds, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina, he said, the Democratic executive committees are made up of men who follow the States Rights line of thinking and have supported its principles.

Perez would not say whether they expect the party to back Eisenhower and Byrnes as a presidential ticket next year but both made it plain both men are very acceptable to them and have found favor with many of the leaders of their organization.

Brides-To-Be Learn Home Repairs Early

BOSTON — (NEA) — The graduates of a new-style bride's course in Boston's Franklin Square House for Girls loom as one of the most attractive offerings of the matrimonial season.

How many of this year's June brides, for instance, will be able to repair a broken toaster plug? Paint the inside and outside of a house?

In fact, how many June bridegrooms can do all these things? And how many who can would prefer to have their wives do them?

You can find some of the answers at Franklin Square House, one of the world's biggest hostels for women. There, young ladies, still wearing the dress-up clothes they wore to dinner, spend their evenings applying wrenches to plumbing fixtures, tearing apart electrical appliances, sawing and hammering at household articles of wood and metal.

They're all residents of the hostel, a block-long, eight-story stone building housing social halls, dining rooms, bowling alleys, a gymnasium, infirmary, laundry room, sewing room and roof garden for 900 working women and students, age 17 to 40.

They're probably the most efficient and talented of the estimated half-million women who've made Franklin Square House their home during the past half century.

The majority of the several score girls enrolled in the Bride's Course are engaged to be married, although Miss Olive Wilbur, hostess at Franklin Square, is quick to point out: "They don't have to be on the brink of matrimony in order to take the course."

Most of them couldn't tell an electrical plug from a blown fuse before enrolling. Now, in addition to thorough grounding in repairs by instructors from the hostel's maintenance staff, the young women make furniture for future homes in the woodshop.

They learn how to plan and budget nutritious meals in the cooking class. They get pointers on the care of floors and woodwork, the handling of colors and fabrics, in the housekeeping course.

And, in the sole co-ed class, they can invite their fiancés to the jewelry workshop, where, among other articles, wedding rings are produced.

Why do so many engaged girls whose marriage already is assured bother to learn the home jobs which men usually are supposed to do?

Most of the brides-to-be reply: "What if a fuse blows out when my husband's not home? Suppose there's an emergency?"

But one worldly young lady in her teens put it this way: "Why am I taking this course? Simple. To teach my husband things he'll never find out for himself."

In colonial America bowls, mugs and pitchers were blown from blue, amber, brown or green glass. Replicas of these famous pitchers are still being made in American glasshouses today.

Doctor Uses Porcupine Tale To Describe A New Treatment

By FRANK CAREY

CINCINNATI — (AP) — In treating the mental disease schizophrenia, psychiatrists might well take a tip from a parable about porcupines, a Kansas psychologist says.

Schizophrenia is the so-called "split personality" disease.

Saying that "love in all its myriad forms" now is the principal prescription in treating such cases, Dr. Milton Wexler of Topeka suggested instead that there first be a "blunt, direct-demanding approach" to invading the patient's private mental world — followed by treatment based upon affection and understanding.

To illustrate what he meant, the Menninger Foundation scientist told the American Psychiatrian Assn. of the philosopher Schopenhauer's "famous story of the porcupines who were freezing on a cold winter's day."

"They crowded at first so close together that their quills produced intolerable pain," he said. "When they separated they nearly froze and were driven back close together again."

"So they moved backwards and forwards until they finally found a mean distance at which they could most tolerably exist."

Wexler said that he once had been temporarily discharged by a woman patient who could "speak the violent language of a jungle tigress" and whom he had first tried to treat by means of understanding and sympathy alone.

"The more kindly she was treated, the more frightened and angry she became," he said.

Later, he related, he adopted a new approach in which he first "trespassed in a rude and determined fashion over the hostile barriers and found within a great fear and a deep longing."

Then, after a time, this forcible invasion of the patient's inner world appeared to generate a certain confidence on the woman's part towards the scientist. Finally, he made an abrupt reversal of procedure, in which treatment was based largely on affection and understanding.

Wexler said the patient has not fully recovered but that treatment can now go on in an easier manner.

At the same meeting of the psychiatrists, a team of Texas physicians described use of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) in the treatment of some of the undesirable side-effects produced by "antabuse," a substance designed to wean alcoholics away from the craving for drink.

Saying that one of the reactions to "antabuse" in some patients appears to "result from a means don't blow it," Dr. Marcus, assistant professor of otolaryngology at Illinois school of medicine, says the vitamin C seemed to lessen that trouble with blowing your nose, is that you set up pressure in the side that is stopped up. When you blow hard, the infected mucus goes back through the canals in your head and causes an infection. Later on, after repeated colds, a major hearing defect probably will result.

KILLER'S PACE

BY JULIUS LONG

COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Star Williams got Rose Bidault acquitted on a charge of murdering her husband, Barney Bidault, by gimmicking a gun, advertised as "unfailingly accurate," so that it accidentally goes off in court. A cupid comes in court to expose the trick and Star now faces dishonor. He sends Mr. Jim Marshall, his lawyer, to interview Rose, because he now must prove her innocent to save himself. "Somebody else," Rose confided to me that her story about the accidental killing of her husband was false, but she had told it to protect a playboy named Larry Stone. When I go to interview Rose a second time, I find a man searching her place. He has a gun and I have to shoot him in self-defense. Then I find that Rose has been murdered with a pair of scissors, and that her body is in the next room. I plant Rose's money and jewelry on the dead burglar and call the police. They accept my self-defense story reluctantly.

XI
I STUCK around till the coroner got there, then asked permission to leave which was granted. Sergeant Cost was still giving me the fish-eye, and he couldn't hold back a final dig as I started for the door.

"In case you have to have a lawyer, Marshall, I recommend J. J. McNamara. I hear your boss won't be in the law business after today."

I said nothing. It really hurt. I wondered what Star would say when he found out about Rose Bidault's murder. There was a fat chance to prove her innocent of Barney's death now—even if she had been, which I didn't think possible.

I wondered where I could find Star. He would surely be back in town by this time. I drove to the nearest drug store and phoned the office. Kitty Coyle answered.

"Jim! Where in the world have you been? Don't you know what's happened?"

"I've seen the papers. And I've seen Star. Have you?"

"No. I've been nearly crazy. I didn't hear about it till 1 o'clock when I came back to the office, and when I phoned Star's cottage there was no answer. I thought about driving out but I was afraid to leave the office. He knows!"

"Yes, he knows. There's something else he's got to know. Rose Bidault's been murdered. Stabbed. Tell him if he comes in."

"Someone else's looking for him, too. Larry Stone. He phoned half an hour ago."

"Thanks." I hung up. I wondered why Stone would be phoning Star. One way to get the answer to that one would be to go around and ask him. Of course Stone might not consider himself to be on speaking terms with me, but at times I have a persuasive personality. So I drove over to the Brentwood Arms.

The man who came out of Brentwood Arms was J. J. McNamara. He pushed his fat stomach under the wheel of his car and drove off without noticing me. I drove right off after him. Of course I had really little reason to think that McNamara had been to see Larry Stone. Only a hunch.

I followed him for 11 blocks, and then parked about a block behind him. I couldn't see the name on the door and windows of the place he entered, but I marked it with the street lamp in front. Then I sauntered casually by the place as if window-shopping. I wasn't really in the market for what was in the window. The sign on the door said: "PRATER HERMETICALLY SEALED BURIAL VAULT CO.," and in the window were three of the firm's samples.

I DROVE back downtown to the office. When I walked in, Kitty Coyle eyed me with farsome awe.

"You didn't tell me! You didn't tell me you had killed that man!"

"No, I didn't. Star in?"

Kitty's pallor showed through her make-up as she got Star on the inter-office unit. She thought I wasn't bothered. The truth was that knocking down the unknown prowler at the Bidault place had disquieted me no little.

Star told me to come in. He looked weary. He was sitting behind his desk, the afternoon paper in front of him.

"Bad, huh?"

Star shook his head.

"Very good photograph. Marvelous shots for that light. I must say that I entirely overlooked the possibility that Nick Ricardo could take such pictures."

"It does seem odd that he'd take shots at that particular time. The stuff shown in his pictures couldn't have been seen by the naked eye. You worked it so fast that neither the judge nor Andy Tanner saw you."

"What are you getting at, Jim?"

"Ricardo was tipped off."

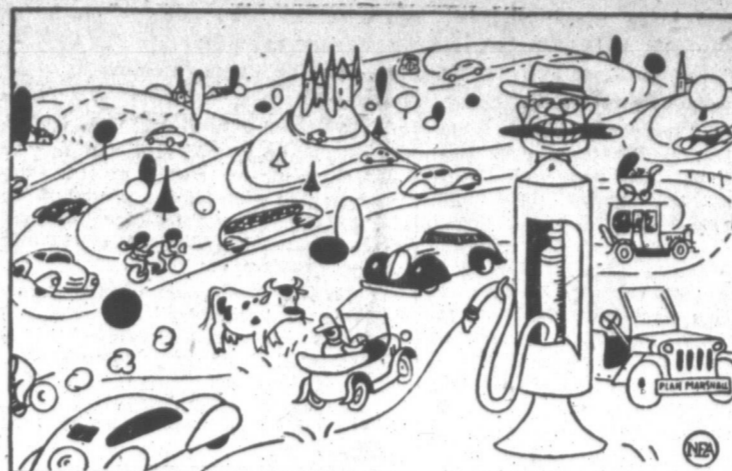

Star eyed me thoughtfully. "I must say that the possibility had already occurred to me. But why should Sonya work all night to teach me the stunt, send me off wishing me luck and then run to a reporter?"

"The man in her, boss. Once she rates publicity in newspapers all over the country and page photographs in the picture magazines, she can write her own ticket. She'll be the biggest lady magician in captivity."

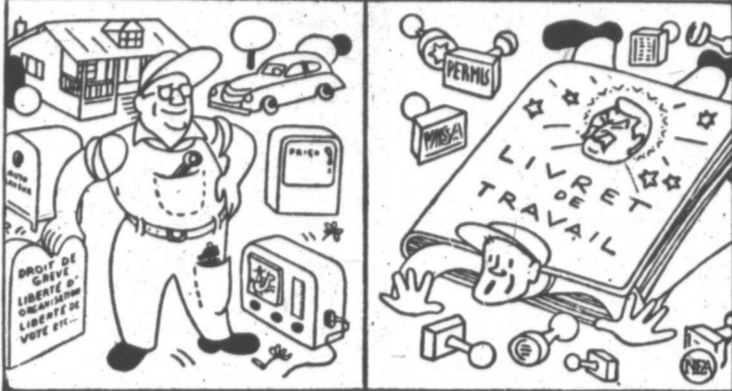

STAR'S thin lips curled. "I'm afraid you've got something, Jim. It looks like a double-cross." Star sighed. "Well, the milk is spilt. With Rose Bidault dead, it looks as if I'll never be able to throw any different light on Barney's death. It's a shame she had to be murdered at a time like this. And over a few dollars and a watch, the radio newscast said."

"The cops say, too, I hope. I planted the money and the watch. The prowler never killed Rose. She got it around noon—shortly after I left her. She was too full of booze to wake up and surprise a burglar. Somebody wanted to shut her up. Somebody wanted to make sure she never gave a different story about Barney's death."

MAN WITH CIGAR is depicted as a gasoline pump in this cartoon from French leaflet that uses satire to sell America in France. "His misdeeds can't be counted," says caption. "For instance, he furnishes us, under the name of the Marshall Plan, carburetors which we lack, thus multiplying our traffic difficulties."

COMPARISON between "wretched existence" of U. S. worker (left) with his home, car, household appliances and freedoms, and the "little paradise" of Uncle Samovar's (Stalin) workers (right), smothered by the "Handbook of Work," is depicted in this cartoon from French leaflet. Booklet was published by "Rapports France-U.S.," a society for promotion of friendly U. S.-French relations.

French Book Shows U.S. Aid In Satire

By NEA Foreign Service
PARIS — (NEA) — Evil, brutish Uncle Sam gets told off in a neat little red, white and blue propaganda booklet circulating here. But it's sarcastic propaganda, and even Communists can understand that it does a pretty good job of selling America and the Marshall Plan.

On the surface, it seems to be telling a story of how cruel America (pictured as "The Man With the Cigar Between His Teeth") is to France. But the cruelty takes very pleasant forms. To wit: "His misdeeds can't be counted. For example, he furnishes us, under the name of the Marshall Plan, carburetors which we lack, thus multiplying our traffic difficulties."

And it singles out Monsieur Metello, one of America's victims. Uncle Sam was horribly vicious to poor Metello. As the booklet tells it, this is what happened: "This brave young man was living in sweet idleness, leading, thanks to his unemployment, a princely existence. But The Man With the Cigar Between His Teeth saw all this.

"He brought machinery, raw materials. The factories reopened. Everywhere the big chimneys began to smoke again, the motors started to turn.

"Now this poor Monsieur Metello works every day. No more unemployment compensation; he has to be content with pay hardly four times higher. And water on his dinner table has been replaced by wine.

"And this is not an isolated case! No! The same bad luck has happened to thousands of dozens of thousands of Metellos, in the four corners of the lovely country of France."

Sadistic Uncle Sam wasn't content with just improving the economic condition of the people. The booklet makes it clear that America's cruelty went much deeper than that.

"By inundating France and the Continent with his frightful drugs (penicillin, streptomycin, sulfanilamides). The Man With the Cigar Between His Teeth has condemned to partial unemployment one of our most active corporations (the doctor).

"Our old locomotives are unemployed, too, thanks to him, and replaced by frightful modern machines. And the venerable boats we had left have been upplanted by steamboats, cargo boats, oil tankers and fruit boats.

"And our dear old oil lamps, relics of the Occupation! By getting our dancing oil lamps in order, he has made them useless. As for the wheat in our fields, it is harvested by the very last blade by his murderous engines."

The booklet, illustrated with drawings that bite as much as the sarcastic text, next draws a comparison between diabolical Uncle Sam and benevolent Uncle Samovar, "the founder of the celebrated Marshall Plan (Marshall Stalin, of course)."

This latter is truly France's friend (sarcasm drips heavily here). Listen to what the booklet has to say about Uncle Samovar's plan: "Ever since he knows this wonderful work of immeasurable social importance, destined to come to the aid of Europe's oppressed peoples. The system is simple:

B-36 Crash Survivor Is Off Serious List
FORT WORTH — (AP) — One of two men who survived the B-36 crash at Albuquerque, N.M., Sunday has been taken off the "serious" list at Kirtland Air Force Base. Twenty-three died in the crash.

Star! Sgt. Acie Eugene Erickson, 25, of Mexia, was reported much improved yesterday.

Cpl. Richard N. Fogwell, 26, of Los Angeles, remained in serious condition.

Both men suffered burns, lacerations and shock.

South America is the original home of potatoes and quinine, but today the center of potato culture is northern Europe and Indonesia has almost a monopoly on quinine production.

Texan Brings Britons Here

GOLDTHWAITE, Tex. — (AP) — E. B. Adams, tobacco-chewing monument maker who failed in his attempt to replace Britain's stolen Stone of Scone, has announced a new good-will scheme. He plans to import a Scottish stonecutter and his family to Texas.

When the famed British coronation stone was stolen, Adams offered to make an exact duplicate and ship it to Britain. This good-will move got a divided reception in England.

Adams was told, although delicately, that no substitute would suffice.

Two subsequent events made the whole matter unimportant: (1) Adams' stone was stolen from his shop near this central Texas town and (2) Britain recovered the real thing.

Adams said he was bringing Andrew Baxter of Greenock, Scotland, along with his wife and two children, to work in Adams' monument works here.

Baxter wrote Adams thanking him for the Texans' gesture of friendship toward the British.

Baxter disclosed in his letter that he was a stone cutter. Adams immediately encouraged the Scot to come to Texas and work for him. Baxter's son, his letter said, wanted to be a cowboy.

Adams said today that the Baxters are now applying for visas. The Texan believes that if the Baxters come to America and settle in Texas he will be well recompensed for the theft of his replica of the Stone of Scone.

Unemployment Drops 403,000

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Unemployment dropped 403,000 in April to a 1,744,000 total — the lowest since October of 1948 — the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

The unemployment decline approximated 135,000. It left the total number of civilian job holders at 60,044,000 in the week of April 8-14, the bureau said.

It has been estimated that less than 10 percent of the population of the earth can obtain food to provide a diet acceptable to a modern dietitian.

French Girl Finds Joy 'n Carillons

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
NEA Staff Correspondent
PARIS — (NEA) — For 32-year-old Jacqueline Goguet, there is nothing to equal the satisfaction of producing a peal of bells. Mile. Goguet has her satisfaction, too, because she is France's only woman carillon ringer.

Every other Sunday, she climbs 385 steps up the belltower of Sainte Odile, one of the most modern churches in Paris. It was completed in 1945, and is one of two in the city with a carillon.

Seated at her simple keyboard, with only an upturned wooden box for a seat, Jacqueline Goguet acts her bronze bells ringing. She is oblivious to all discomforts as she creates the rich music.

There are 30 bells, weighing close to three tons, and she has to pound on her keyboard with both fists. Each session lasts about 45 minutes, and to protect her hands she wears half-gloves, which she cuts out of any old pair she finds lying around.

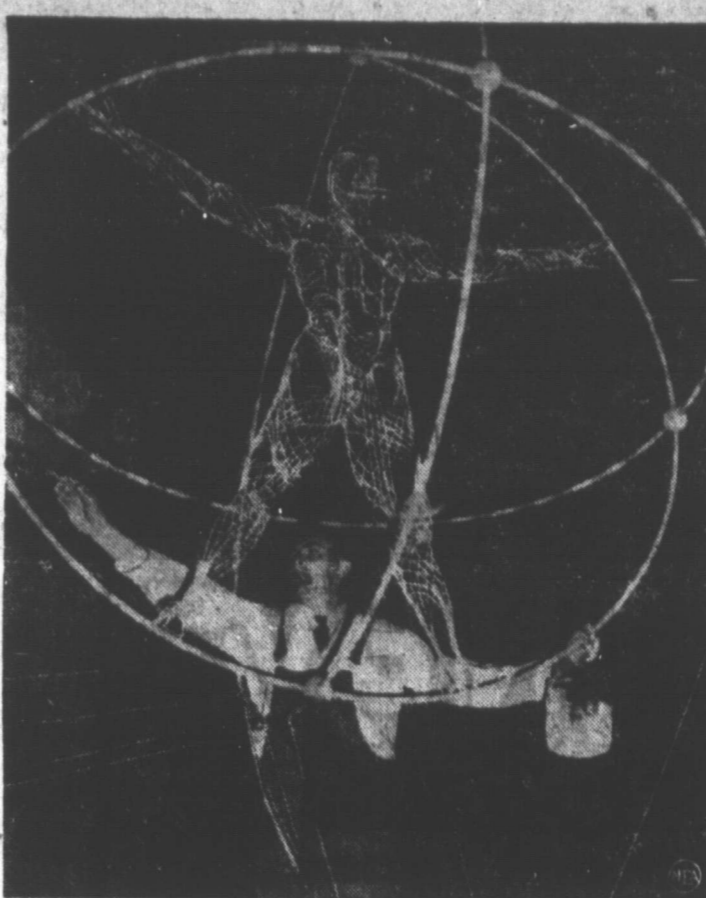

"I never feel tired at the end of it, though," she says. "I love the time I spend with 'my' bells. Up there I lose all sense of time and space, forget the pinpricks of the everyday world and the necessity to earn a living."

Her life is music. She hasn't the slightest interest in clothes or housekeeping. Although she is an experienced and talented musician, she's been at bell-ringing barely a year.

Before bells occupied her, Mile. Goguet had composed music. She has produced two masses, "a cappella," a symphony for the organ and another work in music and verse, "The Rosary," for choir organ and harp. Lately, she's written pieces for the carillon. And the versatile miss has also published several slim volumes of poetry.

Now, though, she's concentrating on the carillon. Already her fame has spread through Northern France and Belgium, where the instrument is more frequent and popular than in the rest of the country.

From Easter to Whitsun she travels from church to church, to set her bells singing on Sundays and feast days. Now she has two ambitions. She wants to ring the 83 bells that comprise the largest carillon in France, at the church of Chalons-sur-Marne.

BUT, "MAN" WHAT A TORSO!—Just "Man" is the title of this ultra-modern exhibit on which painter Leonard Crickmore puts the finishing touches at Southampton, Eng. The extraordinary man is one of the "Secrets of Nature" on display aboard the Festival Ship "Campania," a floating version of the Festival of Britain. It will tour various ports in the British Isles.

Sandra Burden Of Shamrock Is Contest Winner

SHAMROCK — (Special) — Sandra Burden won the Texas state championship in declamation at the interscholastic meet at Austin last week.

Miss Burden, a high school junior, won with her original declamation, "Our Living Constitution." She had previously won the District 2-A meet at McLean, and the regional contest at Lubbock.

Sandra's declamation was a feature of the English department assembly here April 18 and was also recorded for broadcast over the local radio station.

She has an outstanding scholastic record at Shamrock high and was an associate editor of the 1951 school annual. Sandra is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Y. Burden.

Expert Debunks Super Germs For Biological Warfare Use

By BEM PRICE
AP Newfeatures
ATLANTA — If scare writers have your nerves a little raw over this business of biological warfare, perhaps this will provide some slight consolation.

One of the nation's top experts, Dr. Alexander D. Langmuir, has discarded as baseless two of the pet theories of the gloomy guessers of the pen.

It is most unlikely that biological warfare, says Langmuir, would employ any new, laboratory bred "super virulent" disease. It is unlikely, he adds, that an enemy could start a chain reaction epidemic that would incapacitate the population from coast to coast.

In fact, Langmuir declares, biological warfare would employ the devil's own time convincing people that the typhoid may have occurred naturally from some local contamination. The public gets hysterical about these things.

Last Jan. 1 at Birmingham, Ala., there developed one of these potentially dangerous incidents. A rumor spread that the water system was poisoned. Public hysteria mounted. It took the combined and vigorous efforts of newspapers and radio stations to halt the potential panic. The rumor was "the Communists did it."

There is a controversy over the feasibility of bacterial warfare. Some pooh-pooh the idea; some carry it to frightening extremes.

Defenses are impossible you say? Langmuir concedes the problem a tough one; that every field, food factory and dairy would become a defense project in need of guarding.

A partial answer would be widespread inoculations against diseases for which remedies have been developed.

Another factor would be early detection of diseases loosed in its borne attacks. It isn't generally known, but the Communicable Disease Center (CDC) recently developed a portable pollen counting gadget. This device also picks up whatever else happens to be in the air.

Thus, it is conceivable that the U. S. in time could have a network, similar to a radar network, to help guard against a surprise attack.

CDC officials generally are mum on the subject, but one of their big worries is "the false rumor with some foundation in fact which could precipitate an international crisis."

For example, suppose a rumor started that a city's water supply had been poisoned. And say a number of typhoid cases did develop. One CDC official observed, "We would have the truth, says Langmuir, lies in between — and the truth is bad enough.

There are about 25 diseases which can be used against man and animals, Langmuir explains, and normally these diseases are transmitted by contact. However, it was discovered in laboratory accidents that concentrates of these agents sometimes escaped into the air and poisoned technicians.

It would be feasible to dump such concentrates over selected targets by air or shell, in containers like the bug bomb for insects.

Langmuir declared use of biological agents have a decided advantage to the saboteur in that he can plant the bacteria and be gone before the deadly organisms have gone through an incubation period and become dangerous to man. A few germs in an air-conditioning system could contaminate a building.

Death Has Its Sting

AP Newfeatures
BERLIN — For nearly 20 years, nine sons, daughters-in-law and grandchildren lived with Nikolaus Kaludrigkeit, who owned a small fortune and a country-house outside Berlin. Last year, at 82, Grandpa Nikolaus made out his will to them.

Two months ago, an excited stranger told the family he had just seen Nikolaus collapse on the street. "They took him away in an ambulance," he said. "Looked as if he was going to die."

Edward — Grandpa Nikolaus had paid his way through the university — rushed off to order a mass. Then he went on to a broker and sold the country-house on the behalf of the heirs.

In the meantime his brother sold the vault next to the chapel in the churchyard, where they had promised to bury grandpa, and secured a new site in the cheapest corner.

All this took three days. On the fourth, the Kaludrigkeits invited their friends to a party. The party came to an abrupt end when Grandpa Nikolaus walked in. He said he had suffered from light alcoholic poisoning after a drinking bout with a pal.

Country Boys Said Due To Lose Legislature Majority

By MARTHA COLE
AUSTIN — (P) — They say the country boys had better make hay while the sun shines on their legislative votes this session.

They say the country boys aren't going to have that whopping majority in the house when legislative redistricting goes into effect next session.

"They" who are doing all the saying are the majority of house members — but a lot depends on how you look at it.

However, it's understood that there's no straight line between the urban and rural votes. Groups break up and recombine.

"You can't say that the valley always votes with the city boys," Murray said. "We've got agriculture down there, and yet some people say the valley is just one big city. But extreme South Texas will have 17 votes next year. We can make them sit up and take notice and we won't get shoved around."

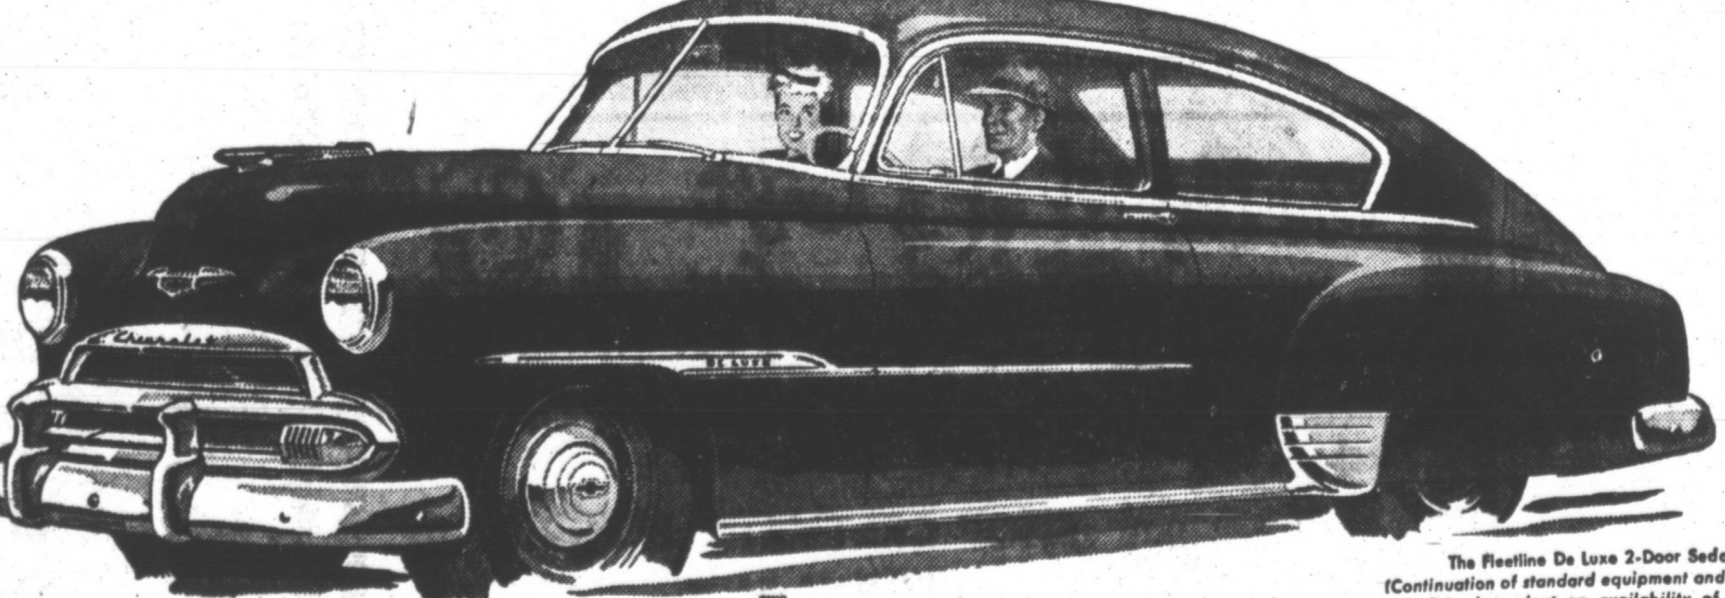

Paul Nipkow, German scientist who died in 1940, is regarded as the nearest to the "inventor" of television because of his development of the scanning disc, basis of transmission of pictures.

Rustlers Not Dead; Just Changed Ways

BY WILBUR MARTIN
FORT WORTH — (AP) — The cattle rustler didn't die when barbed wire tamed the wild west and left the open range a memory.

He's still there. His tools today are a pair of pliers and a truck. The two men who rustled 17 head of Harry Hardin's cattle near Miami, Texas, were bold and brazen.

Their cattle-loaded truck stuck in the mud on Hardin's ranch. They waited until daylight, then fetched a wrecker from town to pull them out. They played to the hilt the role of disgusted ranchers.

The risk is great but the stakes are high. Look at the market prices for cattle on the financial pages of any newspaper. Beef on the hoof is going for as high as $46 a hundred pounds.

The oldtime rustler might aim for a herd of 100 or more cattle. But he was lucky if he got $20 a head.

It's easy to snap barbed wire with a pair of pliers. You can load two, three, four head of cattle in a pickup truck quickly, quietly.

There are a few things the present rustler faces that plagued his counterpart in the old west. One is brands. The other is the range detective.

They call them "field inspectors" now and they, too, have traded their horses for horsepower.

A. T. Jeffries of Clarendon, found the thieves who stole Harry Hardin's cattle. He found the cattle at Olathe, Kansas. The trail led to Springfield, Mo., where they had been sold, then resold.

To find the thieves — and clear up $10,000 worth of rustling in Texas, Oklahoma and Missouri — was a check-and-ready rookie aims and fires

CLEVELAND — (NEA) — A few feet from the nervous police rookie, a gang of hoodlums were lined up against a truck they were in the midst of looting.

Suddenly one of them wheeled, pulling a gun from inside his coat. The rookie's gun blasted. But who fired first?

To make sure, they stopped the movie, since the only real person in this little drama was the rookie himself. The rest of the act was on film in what the Cleveland Police Department believes is an international training premiere.

Police veterans feel they have a foolproof way of giving newcomers to the force a realistic taste of shooting situations without exposing inexperienced men to death.

Capt. Richard Wagner, youthful head of the Police Academy, dreamed up the movie idea, in which policemen serve as the actors and the "plots" are all taken from situations in the police files in which a policeman's life was at stake.

When the rookie fired into the screen — a large sheet of newspaper — the movie automatically stops. He's scored on where he shoots the villain, if at all; and if the villain beats him to the draw, the rookie gets a minus score.

Old hands in the department like the idea so well they've started going to Wagner's movies, too.

Red Supplies Pushing South

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Communists are making strenuous efforts to supply their fighting forces in Korea, the Defense Department says.

A spokesman told reporters yesterday that 16,000 enemy vehicles of all descriptions were spotted in North Korea during the week ending Sunday and that "the bulk of them were moving south."

The spokesman defined the term vehicle as meaning "anything that moves on wheels, except bicycles." The total included numbers of animal-drawn carts, wheelbarrows and vehicles drawn or pushed by humans.

All registered Labrador retrievers today are direct descendants of dogs from the kennels of the 2d and 3d Earls of Almesbury.

MODEL GENERAL — During a tour of north Italian military establishments Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower tries on one of the hats worn by Italian Alpine troops. The hat is of gray-green felt, with a black eagle plume at the side and unit insignia in the front.

Ernest Duke, assistant secretary of the association. The brand inspectors keep a sharp eye out for doctored brands, or cattle with brands whose owners have reported missing stock. They're on the job at Denver, Colo., Kansas City, Mo., the National Stock Yards in Illinois; Oklahoma City; St. Joseph, Mo.; Texarkana, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Lubbock, Houston, Abilene, Alice, Amarillo, Austin, all in Texas.

The association was organized 74 years ago under an oak tree at Graham, Texas. Forty-odd ranchers gathered then with just one thought: to wipe out the rustlers. The aims of the association are broader now, but this is still a primary purpose. More than 8,000 members in 16 states are free to call for aid from a field inspector or from the association's legal department. Field inspectors are backed with the same authority they carried when the old west knew them as range, detectives: Texas ranger commissions in Texas and these are hangovers from the days of the open range.

Field inspectors ride in automobiles and use modern criminology. But the pattern on any case — 1883 or 1931 — is the same. A rancher loses some cows. He reports it to the sheriff, and, if a member, to his association. Sometimes the rancher discovers the loss immediately. But some ranches are big. It may be months before the cattle are missed. H. L. Hodges, inspector at San Antonio, figures the 318 cases on which he has worked have been "ninety percent hard work," starting with maybe only a tire track.

A rancher near Floresville, Texas, found a bellowing cow. Its calf was gone. Hodges found a tire track, then marks where something had been dragged to a low fence. The trail disappeared there.

Ask the kids down the road. "We saw a gray car." Ask a question and get an answer. "Who drives a gray car?" Thirty days later Hodges got his first break. A farmer remembered a gray car. Sure, it was around about the time the calf disappeared. He knew a man who had a gray car. Kin to one of his hired hands.

This man's daughter knew where the man was. In Lubbock, perhaps. He's a bad one. Always in trouble. Check the detective bureau in San Antonio. They knew the guy. Had his record.

The rest is easy. You pick him up, pick his story to pieces, get the facts: he stuffed the calf in the trunk of his car, then butchered it. He sold it for $20 on the San Antonio market plaza.

Two rustlers were involved. Both pleaded guilty. One was sentenced to four years, the other to two years.

Since 1883, field inspectors have brought back 138,409 head of cattle, valued at $5,170,409. A long rope and a good horse were all the tools an old time rustler needed. The modern rustler has even used airplanes.

Duke says the modern rustler usually "cases" a job. Sometimes dogs are used to haul cattle into a portable catch packing house that buys from the scene, throw the head and pen. Some rustlers butcher at hide away.

The rustler's market may be a place or person, or even a market at a big market — unless the forged bills of sale.

loss hasn't been discovered. The brand, burned into the hide, is indelible. Venting or changing it carries the same penalty as stealing and no records kept. It may be a retail butcher shop. It may be individual, with no questions asked of the animal.

But that was the favorite method of the old rustler, and some of them still try it. Some oldtime rustlers were artists with a branding iron. A lazy J, cross in a box, or a flying W tested their imagination.

Accounts of one, two, three head being rustled in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and other cattle states prove the rustler didn't die. And he didn't mend his ways. He just changed them.

Texas Leads Nation In New Accommodations At Hospitals

AUSTIN — (AP) — Texas leads the nation in the number of hospital beds added in the last four years, a survey made by the Federal Security Agency shows.

Bed space over that period was increased by 5,329 units as 100 new hospitals or hospital expansion projects were completed or gotten under way.

Eighty-three and 75 counties have or will benefit directly by the additions, State Health Officer George Cox declares.

Here's the way the construction status of the 100 projects shows up:

- 43 are complete, 37 are under construction, one is out for bids, 15 are on the drawing boards, four have been approved tentatively.

Texas is scheduled to use $24,555,440 in federal appropriations in making the new building stride. In fact the state marked up another $100,000,000 in total amount appropriated for construction cost.

Dr. Cox explains that doubling the federal dollars gives an accurate picture of total money involved. This is true, he says, because the national administration and city and county governments split construction costs fifty-fifty.

A breakdown of expansion figures shows Texas ranking:

1. First in the number of general beds added.
2. Third in number of beds added for mental patients.
3. Tenth in the number added for tuberculosis patients.
4. Twelfth in the number of beds added for chronic disease patients.

Cities and counties have sponsored most of the work. Sixty new hospitals or expansions are city or county projects. Eleven will be church-owned, 14 run by non-profit associations, three run by the state, and three operated by co-ops.

Public health centers have been completed in Port Arthur, Houston and Brownfield, and an addition has been made to the state laboratory in Austin. A health center for Austin is in the planning stage.

The largest hospital project undertaken in Texas is devoted to work on cancer. It is the 300-bed M. D. Anderson hospital for Cancer Research in Houston. The hospital is part of the University of Texas hospital system and has a state-wide clientele. Only seven percent of the patients come from Harris County.

START OF AN INTERNATIONAL RACE — Competitors in annual Luders 16 series, between Bermuda Yacht Club and Indian Harbor Y. C., of Greenwich, Conn., start in a race on Bermuda Sound. Americans won four of seven races for trophy.

Tobacco-Chewing Democrat New Foreign Affairs Head

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A cause he proved a great general tobacco-chewing South Carolina Democrat, James P. Pringle, is taking over as chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"I reckon you'd call me a fellow who'd like to stay out of world responsibilities, but realizes the United States can't stay out of it if it wants to," he drawled yesterday.

"I'm certainly not an isolationist although I've differed with the administration from time to time on some foreign policies. I don't think I'm an interventionist."

Richards has been acting as head of the committee much of this year because of the illness of Rep. Kee (D-W.Va.), the chairman, who died Tuesday.

Asked in an interview how he feels about President Truman's firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Richards replied: "In view of the clash between MacArthur and the President and joint chiefs of staff, the firing of MacArthur was inevitable. But I hated to see him go because he proved a great general and a successful administrator."

"So far as my views in regard to the Pacific are concerned, I felt all along we made many mistakes but the fact remains that the Pacific is not the principal area of conflict with communism."

"The center of communism is still Moscow, not Peking. The most important valley continues to be the Ruhr, not the Yangtze."

"If conflicts come with forces of communism, the world over, we've got to defeat it at the source of its power. That's Europe."

Richards said he has no "illusion about ever trying to get along with communism and the Russians unless we are strong. We made the mistake of thinking we could get along with Communists," he added.

"If we are going to stay out of the big fight — I mean out of another world war, we have to stay strong."

"I'm for helping any nation that is sincere in joining hands with us and helping by using

James Huffhines Is Named Best Actor At White Deer

WHITE DEER — (Special) — James Huffhines, a freshman, was chosen as best actor and Patsy Willis, also a freshman, was named on the all-star cast in the Class B Division of the Interscholastic League one-act play contest at Austin last Saturday.

The White Deer entry, a cutting from Macbeth, placed third with eight plays competing. These entries were the top eight out of 540 plays entered in the local contests throughout the state.

Beth Smith won third place in coproducing in the state journalism contest.

Dale Imel set a new record of 4:30.6 in the mile run to hold the title which he won in that event last year. This was his eleventh victory in as many starts this year. He also broke his own record at the regional meet.

Billy Wade Cofer came in second in the 880-yard run in the state meet. Max Jordan was seventh in the mile race.

their own resources. If they don't do that, charge them off as a liability, not an asset. There are some so-called democratic nations like that."

As for his plans as committee chairman, Richards said, "I'll go slow in the committee. Judge Kee's place will be hard to fill. I have no changes in mind."

Richards, a 58-year-old lawyer-farmer, is called "Dick" by his friends in the House and "Pringle" his middle name, by his family. He has been in Congress for 18 years.

His hobbies? Hunting and fishing, he said, adding: "I like to take my shoes off and put my feet in Hanging Rock Creek most of all."

To prepare lamb kabobs to broil over an outside fire cut a pound and a half of shoulder lamb in one-inch cubes; marinate in about one-half cup French dressing. Add a crushed clove of garlic if the dressing does not already contain this seasoning. Season with salt and pepper just before broiling slowly; turn to brown evenly.

Texas League At Cut-Down Time

(By The Associated Press)

Rain and the Fort Worth Cats pushed Dallas into the Texas League first division last night and with twelve more games at home the Eagles hope to fly high indeed.

Beaumont fell out of the upper echelon to allow Dallas to pass as Fort Worth plastered the Roughnecks 2-0 in a game cut to seven innings by a downpour.

Dallas, meanwhile, was beating Shreveport for the fifth straight time, this victory being 1-0.

Leading San Antonio was playing in the first inning at Tulsa when rain halted the proceedings while Houston and Oklahoma City never could get started at Oklahoma City.

Fete Mondroff cut down Beaumont with three hits in the abbreviated game at Fort Worth. He won his third pitching victory in four starts. Fort Worth got only four hits off Art Dyck but he walked two batters with the bases full to furnish the Cat runs.

Hal Erickson pitched a three-hitter at Shreveport but the lone Dallas run was unearned, coming in the fourth without the benefit of a hit. Dallas got only four hits off Jim Willis, three of them of the infield variety.

Meanwhile the clubs moved to cut to the 19-player limit which went on after last night's games.

Dallas sent Bob Prentice, third baseman, to Wilkes-Barre on option to cut to 20 and will let out another player today.

Tulsa sent Ted Tappe, young first baseman, and Everett Johnson, catcher, to Charleston and put pitcher Bud Lively on the inactive list to get inside the limit. Lively has a sore arm.

Beaumont cut four men off its roster. Outfielder Crawford Davidson and pitcher Bill Janowski were sent to Norfolk and Schenadsky, respectively, and announced that pitcher Walt Snider and infielder Dick Briskey would be sent elsewhere in the New York Yankee chain.

Oklahoma City shipped shortstop Merle Hughes to Midland of the Longhorn League and will reassign outfielder Jim Akers, who was called up from Midland but never reported.

San Antonio sold infielder Andy Anderson to Dallas on a five-day look to get inside the limit. Earlier in the week the Missions had sold outfielder Joe Frazier and pitcher Frank Biscan to Memphis and sent pitcher Billy Hyde to Dayton.

Oilers Announce Special Sunday

The Pampa Oilers announced last night that Sunday, which is Mother's Day, would also be a special day at the Park. The Abilene Blue Sox play at Oiler Park in a 2:30 game.

Every lady over 16 will receive a ladies' appreciation gift.

Sixty-five years ago baseball uniforms worn by professional players cost $4 apiece. Bats cost 95 cents.

A DOGGY FINISH—An unscheduled performer in a Minneapolis High Schools mile race was a dog that joined Frank Gurtin (front) and Bill Phillips at finish. Dog was third.

Rain Plays Havoc In Big State

(By The Associated Press)

A rainstorm that washed out the final game of the Austin-Gainesville series ruined Austin's chances of cutting into the lead held by Gainesville in the Big State League race. Austin trails by a game and a half and had planned on trimming the margin to a half game.

Two of the four games were washed out with Waco and Sherman-Denison joining Austin and Gainesville in idleness. Wichita Falls went ten innings to beat Temple, 8-6, and Texarkana defeated Tyler, 6-3 in the games played.

A sudden downpour stopped the Waco-Sherman-Denison game in the last of the first inning—but Waco was not too unhappy about the whole thing. Sherman-Denison had scored four runs and had the bases loaded when the rains came. Austin and Gainesville never did get started.

Temple pushed across two runs in the last of the ninth inning to overtake Wichita Falls and send the game into an extra inning. Two doubles and a single got the winning runs.

Righthander Darwin Dobbs scattered ten hits to pitch Texarkana to its victory over Tyler. Texarkana scored twice in the seventh and once in the eighth for the win after Tyler had tied the score in the top of the seventh.

San Angelo Is Hot In Longhorn

(By The Associated Press)

The San Angelo Colts, like old man river, just keep rolling along.

Last night the Colts defeated Rowell, 8-4, for their eleventh straight Longhorn League victory. The win increased their margin at the top of the standings to five full games.

Sharing the spotlight with San Angelo was Odessa. Odessa climbed out of the league cellar with a 3-2 victory over second place Vernon.

Artesia lost to Big Spring 11-8 to slip into the lower berth and Sweetwater edged Midland, 6-4.

San Angelo scored all of its runs in the first inning. Rowell fought back for single runs in the fourth and seventh and two runs in the sixth inning but went down in order in the final two frames. Wayne Wallace got a two-run homer for San Angelo.

Vernon rallied for two runs in the eighth inning against Odessa but couldn't overtake an early lead. Ray Sims gave up six hits and had a shutout going into the eighth.

Sweetwater pushed across three runs in the top of the ninth inning to tie Midland. Midland got two runs in its half of the same inning but fell two runs short.

Big Spring slugged three Artesia pitchers for 19 hits with Al Costa having a perfect night at the plate. Costa got four for four. Three runs in the third and four in the fifth were too much for Artesia.

Phillips Women In PWGA Lead

The Phillips Country Club women golfers took over the lead in the Panhandle Women's Golf Association Tuesday at the Amarillo Country Club. Phillips had a total of 732 strokes, compared to 763 of second place Amarillo CC. Pampa is in third with 771.

Eleanor Robertson, Ross Rogers, was low for the day with an 87. The 9-hole winner was Mrs. Glen Dial, RR, with a 41. Low net on 18 was Mrs. C. E. Laster of Phillips with a 114-51.

Mrs. Paul Eisebergh, Pampa, was low on 9 holes with a 49-31-31.

Other Pampa winners were Mrs. Carl Luedders with a 92 gross, and a low net of 87; and Mrs. John Austin and Mrs. Melvyn Watkins with low net on 9 holes.

Yesterday afternoon the Pampa Women's Golf Association held its regular weekly meeting with Mrs. Jean Duenkel and Beth Heisel tying for first flight honors with net scores of 36. Maisee Dee Howell won the second flight with a 33 stroke net.

Chinese Player Is Suspended By Twins

DENISON — (AP) — Texas' Chinese professional baseball player doesn't live here any more.

He was Adrian Wong, a Mexico-born full-blooded Chinese who joined the Sherman-Denison club of the Big State League. He had compiled an impressive pitching record in the Mexican winter league and predicted he would be in the majors within three years.

But, said business manager Dick King of the Sherman-Denison club, Wong never got in condition to play and "we suspended him and sent him to Mexico until he can do so."

"He did us wrong," punned King.

Giants Slump Is Traced To Overtime

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK — (NEA) — "It was our biggest run and total of the year yet it got to diagnose slumps since Amberus nothing but trouble. Doubleday started all the excitement at Cooperstown in 1839.

Many reasons have been advanced for an individual or a club falling apart like sand, but it remained for the Giants to come up with a new one.

It is overtime and the working conditions of modern baseball. The Polo Grounds trace their 11-game debacle to the evening it started at Braves' Field, April 19.

It seems that two marathons were run in Boston on Patriot's Day.

"We were at Braves' Field at 10:30 a.m. for a double-header starting at 1:30," says one of the New York Nationals. "Jim Hearn spun a seven-hitter to the Braves in the curtain-a picture ball play, but too frequently is out of focus: "That one out of the way, Leona, the Durocher shipped five pitchers like a greyhound in center home the right-handed Jan-field, but sometimes has a head on the left handed Bowman, while he muffs the big ball. "Durocher must have sensed what was coming, or did he never saw a ball game. For had not the left-hand hitting Leo Durocher has to go along pitcher, Dave Koslo, had to bat with Thomson, of course, but for himself against a left-handed pitcher, Chet Nichols, in the ninth, we might have won it, and never dropped into our loss to the Yankees toward the end of the 1949 season, Bobby Thomson was the lad who was the last shot wasn't fired until 5:10. The two clubs used 37 He hasn't come close.

Pirates Earn Recognition As Another Nuisance Club

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The Dodgers won 19 of 22 from the Pirates last season.

Finishing their season's series, the Buccoers bagged 11 straight. The Buccoers won only one game at Ebbets Field throughout the entire route.

They've already copped twice that many this trip.

They swept the opening set to serve notice on the favored clubs that they have nuisance value at least.

Moving out of Brooklyn, the Pittsburgh club had won four out of five one-run games.

In their initial appearance at the Polo Grounds, the Corsairs scuttled the Giants' first winning streak of the season in an extra-inning night affair.

They were getting good pitching from Chambers, Dickson, Queen, and Law, remarkable relief from Werle. Southpaw Bill Werle saved the first two games of the season, was rushed to the rescue in seven of the first 11. His curve and sinker did not yield a run in the first 12 innings.

Werle looked like the pitcher for whom Branch Rike, speaking of the Brooklyn side a year ago, offered the Pirates $200,000, and the Mahatma wasn't kidding, put it in writing, as a matter of fact.

Bill Meyer points to the Pittsburgh bench, and is toying with the idea of switching Wally Westlake from the outfield to third base.

That would put two-thirds of last year's pirate outfield in the infield. Ralph Kiner having made good at first base.

It would add power. Pittsburgh pioneered in the business of making a third baseman out of an outfielder, when Bob Elliott, now of the Braves, was transferred. Elliott never had played third. Westlake had a bit of it in the minors, and, like Pepper Martin has a strong chest and arm.

For an outfit that is supposed to finish dead last, Pittsburgh has a surprisingly good bench. There sit the infielders, Rojek, Dillingier, Murtaugh and Phillips, and the outfielders, Beard, Reiser, Saffell and Restell.

Fete Reiser was graduated from third-string catcher to an outfielder in the second half of a double-header with the Reds.

Manager Meyer kept Pistol Pete there in the Brooklyn set, hoping he would get mad at somebody. He did in the first game with two doubles, a single and a base on balls. He also got on through an error, so was on base five times.

A comeback by Reiser, the hard-luck kid, would be one of the greater stories of the season.

The Pirates tell you that Paul Pettit, the $100,000 left-hander, who now has a sore arm, can't throw hard even when it isn't sore. He has passed his Army physical, is IA, but gets paid for the next nine years anyway. What a contract!

The Pirates' newest phenom is Bill Koski, a 19-year-old Finn who was graduated from Modesto, Calif., High last June.

He is supposed to have been paid less than $6000. It's a living.

Mickey Mantle Had Predecessors

NEW YORK — (AP) — Baseball fans from coast to coast have been hearing the "Cinderella" story of Mickey Mantle, the 19-year-old switch-hitter, who made the jump from the Class C Joplin, Mo., Miners to the New York Yankees.

But there have been other players who have made the big jump from a low minor league to the majors.

The first to jump from a Class D league to the "big time" was Miguel Gonzales. In 1914 he came directly from Long Branch, N.J., in the New York - New Jersey League to the Cincinnati Reds. Gonzales became the team's regular catcher.

Rogers Hornsby bounced from Denison, Tex., in Class D to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1915. He played 119 games at shortstop for Denison that year and batted .277. On Aug. 20 the Cards purchased the Texan for a reported $500. He then finished the '15 season with the Red Birds and hit a lowly .246 in 18 games. The next year, his first full season with the Cards, he batted .313. During his long major league career the Rajah batted over 400 three times. His highest mark was .424 in 1924.

The pitcher to make the long haul from Class D to the major leagues was Sid Hudson. He hurried for Sanford in the Florida State League in 1939. In 1940 Sid was chucked for the Washington Senators and is still a member of that team's mound staff. He won 17 games that first year in the majors.

Israel To Visit West Point Today

NEW YORK — (AP) — Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel will make his first visit today to the U.S. military academy at West Point, N.Y.

Traveling by auto, he will arrive at the academy at noon and will visit the grave of Col. David Marcus, who died in Israel's War of Independence.

A West Point graduate, Col. Marcus was New York City commissioner of corrections under the late Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia.

The Israeli prime minister yesterday received Manhattan's typical ticker-tape parade welcome.

Vienna Says: Don't Expect Austria To Resist Commies

By RICHARD O'REAGAN
AP Newsfeatures
VIENNA — The Austrian flag has changed color so many times in recent history, it could become Red overnight without any trouble.

In the event of a new war, the Austrians cannot be expected to put up any resistance against the Russians.

Ninety percent Catholic, the Austrians are one of the most anti-Communist people in all Europe. But two factors would stop them from actively opposing the Soviets.

1) They are completely unarmed, and

2) They are spiritually and morally weakened by a succession of military losses dating back 200 years. The martial philosophy of the Austrians is well-told in a saying of the Hapsburg emperors: Let others fight wars. You, happy Austria, marry.

One fourth of Austria is occupied by Soviet troops. But because its capital, with 2,000,000 population, lies deep in the Soviet zone, more than half its people would already be captured slaves of the Russians in the event of attack.

Western troops, in the event of war, will fall back into the mountainous Tyrolean Alps. They may obtain moral support from the local population numbering less than 500,000, but any active support would be negligible.

In the event of war, there is no doubt that the Russians will overrun almost the entire country, with the possible exception of the Tyrol.

Western intelligence experts expect Austrian resistance to be confined to pro-Western propaganda under Soviet occupation, minor, inconsequential sabotage, and the passing of information to a 7,000,000 remnant of an empire that once totalled 54,000,000.

Its peoples are a fantastic conglomeration of Slavs, Latins, Magyars and Germans. Their lives, their thinking, their activities have been tuned to a tradition of Austria as a "crossroads of Europe."

This has meant that large numbers of Austria's population think favorably of the East — although they are opposed to Russian Communism.

But there is no doubt among Western observers that liberating Western armies, driving the Soviets back after the tide of battle changed, would be welcome with open arms.

Austria's greatest hope for passive resistance or open sabotage under Russian occupation would be the status of her neighbors.

Since then, she has lost one war after another. National moralization has been great since the fall of the Austro-Hungarian empire in 1918. Since then, Austria has been merely to the West.

They do not expect more from the Austrians because of their history and mentality. Austria's last military victory of consequence was in 1683, when she threw back the invading Turks from Europe.

If Yugoslavia remained free from Soviet troops, the Austrians would be more likely to find ways to irritate their occupiers. If part or all of Germany, or Switzerland, also were free from Soviet troops, Austrian resistance might be greater.

But positive active opposition cannot be expected of a tiny group of people, deprived of their arms by the Allies and without immediate hope of Western liberation.

New Material Offered For Men's Suits

NEW YORK — (AP) — A new men's suiting will be retailing stores by the first of the month — marking the wedding of fine apparel wool with Dupont's new synthetic fiber dacron. Remarkable claims are made for the new summer suits.

It is a further challenge to the supremacy of all-wool. The natural fiber has been taking it from all sides since the price of wool soared to record highs. Many makers of men's suits say they will hold the line for all-wool suits.

But one leader, Meyer Kestbaum, president of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Chicago, says: "You can't stand in the way of scientific development. There is a positive contribution to clothing in some of these fabrics and in their combinations with wool."

His firm will offer some 4,000 of the new suits for sale by June 1. The fabric is woven by Deering, Milliken & Co. and is called viracle. It is 45 percent wool and 55 percent dacron. Deering, Milliken is getting only small quantities of dacron now. But DuPont predicts an annual capacity of 25 million pounds of staple and 10 million pounds of filament yarn by 1953.

Roger Milliken, president of the fabric company, says larger quantities of men's suits will be available for the 1952 summer market, and by then perhaps viracle will be available for women's suits.

Kestbaum and Milliken make proud claims for their new viracle suits. It is an eight-ounce fabric, as against the ten-ounce in most summer suits, they say. Other claims: it requires fewer pressings, holding a crease after immersion in water; it is cooler than the usual summer suit; it is unaffected "by even the widest variations in atmospheric humidity"; can be sponged with soap and water; is easier for the professional cleaner to handle; "flights off tobacco-smoke burn satisfactorily"; and won't cling to the body with static action.

But the 45 percent wool content is necessary, the makers of viracle admit.

Any argument is more about qualities of the fabric than about price — at $79.50 the new suits will offer little challenge price-wise. It was this challenge that was so successful since the war in building up other synthetic fibers in the men's suiting field.

Wartime Minister Of Axis Puppet Released On Bond

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — Andrija Artukovich, wartime minister of interior in the Axis puppet state of Croatia, is at liberty on $1,000 bail today, pending a hearing to show cause why he should not be deported.

Artukovich entered the United States in 1948 on a visitor's permit and was granted extensions. Marshal Tito's Yugoslav government has asked for his deportation as a war criminal. Croatia now is a part of Yugoslavia.

Immigration officials arrested Artukovich yesterday on their own initiative. He had given testimony at a closed hearing last Monday on his application for permission to establish permanent residence in the United States. Congress would have the final say on whether he could remain.

Howard L. Field, acting regional director of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, says Artukovich's arrest doesn't mean his application for permanent residence has been denied.

Graft Bared In New York Police Investigation

NEW YORK — (AP) — "A picture of graft and corruption unrivaled in the history of the city," this is how Assistant District Attorney Julius A. Helfand sums up the indictment of 21 past and present policemen accused of accepting millions of dollars from the head of a $20,000,000-a-year Brooklyn gambling ring.

Fifty six other policemen or former policemen were named as co-conspirators in the alleged huge money graft when the Brooklyn racketeers - probing grand jury's indictment was opened yesterday in Kings County Court.

The nine-page document tells of police pay-offs by confessed boss bookie Harry Gross. From 1947 through 1949, it was charged, Gross handed over about $1,000,000 yearly to police.

Helfand said Gross even bought his way into the super racketeers squad set up to check on the honesty of other units within the police force.

This squad, Helfand said, "collected from the bookmakers money in bushel baskets."

The assistant DA added that

Dethroned Royalty Wed In Impressive French Ceremonies

NANCY, France — (AP) — Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the throne of the defunct Austro-Hungarian empire, wed a blue-eyed German princess here today in a lavish display of 18th Century pageantry.

Scores of Europe's throneless royalty thronged this eastern France city for the double rites uniting the 38-year-old Otto and 28-year-old Princess Regina of Saxony-Meiningen, whom he met while touring refugee camps in Bavaria.

A civil ceremony in the city hall was followed by impressive Roman Catholic rites an hour later in the Church of the Rope-makers, where many of the bridegroom's ancestors are buried.

Forbidden by Austrian law to visit the country where his father, the Emperor Karl, was the last Hapsburg ruler, Otto came here for his wedding because it is the ancient capital of the once independent Duchy of Lorraine over which his ancestors reigned. Otto still claims the title of Duke of Lorraine.

Mohammed's Tomb In Peril

AP Newsfeatures
CAIRO — The holy tomb of the great Islamic prophet, Mohammed, in Medina, needs immediate repairs to avoid complete collapse.

News of the shaky condition of the centuries-old tomb — one of sacred shrines of millions of Moslems — was first reported by the Arabic newspaper, Al-Misri, in Cairo.

The news spread rapidly throughout the Moslem world — a wide belt stretching from the Atlantic coast of Africa to the Philippines.

Campaigns have been instituted in many countries to collect funds to pay for the repairs. King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia has ordered that technicians be brought in to begin repair work immediately.

Medina is inland from the Red Sea, in the western part of the great Arabian peninsula ruled by Ibn Saud.

Mohammed, who was born at Mecca, 200 miles south of Medina, died at Medina in 632 A.D. He inspired a desert-born religion that within a few years after his death swept in conquering waves from the Persian Gulf to Gibraltar. Today there are 275,000,000 Moslems in the world.

Mohammed's tomb needs replacement of some pillars, and strengthening of other columns, joints and sections of the roof. The Saudi Arabian newspaper Al-Bilad reports that some of the pillars are cracked and "in danger of collapse."

U.S. Hobo Becoming Extinct With Government Paternalism

By SAUL FETT
NEW YORK — (AP) — Because of increasing paternalism in government and the high cost of living, the American hobo is rapidly becoming extinct.

"If this keeps up, there won't be one left in 20 years," says Ben Benson, four-time king of the hoboes ("don't," he warns, "go putting quotes around my name because it's official, damn it.")

In the last 50 years of bumming, Ben has covered more than 500,000 miles, he estimates.

"Been on the road since I was 17," he says. "Never seen anything like it. Not one tenth the boys travelling nowadays there was 10, 15 years ago."

"Right here in New York, out of 10,000 men on the Bowery, maybe 500 used to be travelling bums, now they're on relief or old age pensions. Can't travel. Got to show permanent residence to get those checks."

Migratory workers, Ben reports, don't get the work they used to around harvest time because of the increasing mechanization of farms. Besides, freight trains operate more efficiently, with fewer stops for block signals. Diesel engines pick up speed faster than the old locomotives and it's harder for a hobo to jump a freight.

Such conditions are converting many bums into "rubber traps" — hitch-hikers.

"Been doing a lot of that myself lately," Ben says. "More comfortable. Meet a better class of people, who slip you a buck or a meal now and then. Also, much cleaner than the hot shots (fast freights)."

"The high cost of living is changing everything. I used to specialize as a house cat. Sure, I ate in jungles now and then but most of the time I bummed at the back doors of houses. In the old days, when food was cheap, they wouldn't turn you away."

"Now, they don't have enough food for themselves. Why even the Salvation Army and other missions don't put up the feed the way they used to."

The character of American hoboes is changing, too. They used to be more intelligent, Ben reports, more interested in the world around them, more interested in working themselves.

"Now everybody is afraid of being called a Communist," he says. "Last summer, out in Colorado, a farmer asked me if I wanted a short job. How much? I says, Dollar a day, he says, and a good place to sleep, not in the barn next to the cows. Nothing doing, I says. I want

Boy's Body Found In Abandoned Box After Month's Hunt

NORWALK, Calif. — (AP) — A 10-year-old boy for whom sheriff's posse pressed a month long search in southeast Los Angeles County was found dead yesterday, locked in an abandoned icebox in a neighbor's yard.

He was Charles Henry Houghton, son of a railroad switchman. One of four children, he would have been 11 on May 28. His decomposed body was found in one of four old refrigerator hulks standing in a back yard less than two blocks from his home. Charles vanished from home April 12.

Deputies theorized that the child went out to play, crawled into the icebox, pulled the door shut behind him, and suffocated.

Marsh Howard, 3, in whose yard the iceboxes were standing, found the body when he took the latch from the refrigerator door to replace one on his own icebox.

The father, Charles Houghton Sr., 36, collapsed when told of the discovery.

Frank Fay And Big Rabbit Come To Parting Of Ways

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD — Another famous friendship has broken up — that of Frank Fay and Harvey.
 Thus ends an association that ranks among the most noted in the history of the American theater. Fay and the book (six-foot rabbit) cavorted together more than five years in New York and on the road. But the debonaire comedian indicated they will never meet again.
 "No, I don't believe I'll ever play the show again," he told me. I have had two offers to do it again in New York. Fabulous coin, too. But I turned them down.
 "I think it's a mistake to become too identified with one particular role. It can hurt your career. I remember a fine comedian in vaudeville — Jack Pearl. He had a great success on the radio as the Baron Munchausen. Everybody was saying 'Was you dere, Charlie?' But then the novelty wore off — and what has happened to Pearl since?"
 "It's not that I'm mad at Harvey. I love the little fellow. But I think it's better that we go our own ways."
 Fay added that he never tired of playing the role, despite his five years at it. He offered a hint as to why he was the most successful of the many stars who played it.
 "I didn't play to the audience, as the other fellows did," he explained. "I played to Harvey. He was a very good friend and he never let me down. I think playing to him kept the spirit of the play."
 "At least it seemed to pay off. When I went on the road we made $1,300,000 with it. And we were playing towns that had already been visited by other 'Harvey' companies at least once and sometimes twice."
 The actor expressed no bitterness about not doing the film version, which won James Stewart an Oscar nomination. "They didn't want me," he said frankly, adding that the character came out more as Stewart than Edward P. Dowd.
 But Fay has his consolation: He gets 10 percent of the author's rights to the film profits. Fay is now acting in "A Walk in His Life," his first movie in eight years. He has other film deals on the fire and intends to renew his movie career in the present at least. Eventually he plans to revive his review, "If You Please," which recently had a misadventure in San Francisco. The show was all Fay's. The program listed "Music, Lyrics, Scenes and Dialogue by Frank Fay." He even had $70,000 of his own money in it, as well as "too many of my friends, I guess." At any rate, the Bay City critics gave the premiere a drubbing.
 "They jumped me," Fay said. "They really poured it on. On the second night of the show, I took off on them, too. That didn't make them happy, but it seemed to help business."
 He added that he plans to revive the show in the East, aiming

Relaxation Is Key To Cure Of Stutterers

AP Newsfeatures
 NEW YORK — Relaxation is the key to a fast-growing school which makes normal speakers out of stutterers.
 The school, the brainchild of A. Edmund Turner, was conceived at a GI induction center during World War II. Turner, a New York speech teacher, was an induction officer at Fort Bragg and watched scores of youngsters turned down for the Army because of speech impediments. More study convinced him that speech troubles prevented thousands of sufferers from holding good jobs and enjoying normal social lives.
 In 1948, he opened his first class with 23 students. Now he conducts late-afternoon and evening classes in a dozen schools in the New York area. He has enrolled more than 700 students.
 "Nobody is a born stutterer, although everybody has an inherited tendency toward it," says Turner. "The stutterer simply does not breathe properly, control pitch and volume, or speak at a normal rate."
 "If a stutterer can learn to control these three factors," Turner says, "he usually can learn to speak normally, with practice."
 A typical pupil had stuttered for four years. He could not answer questions orally in school, but he wrote his answers on a blackboard. Scholastics ridiculed him and refused to play with him. The boy took a year's lessons and learned to relax. He has no signs of speech trouble now.
 BATHQUAKE FELT
 SANTIAGO, Chile — (AP) — The population was alarmed but no casualties were reported when an earthquake was felt at Coquimbo in northern Chile late last night. There were three successive shocks.
 Jesuit priests arrived in Paraguary in 1609 and were expelled in 1787.

Defense Agency Heads Fade Away

By JAMES MARLOW
 WASHINGTON — (AP) — Round Mike Di Salle is still around. Which is quite a distinction. This chubby former mayor of Toledo is the only one of the original defense agency heads who still has his job.
 How long he'll last, of course, is another matter since his job is another matter since his job is the kind that's custom-built to make enemies.
 He's boss of OPS, the Office of Price Stabilization, which right now is trying to apply price controls that will work.
 But he's a pretty calm character who doesn't back up easily. He doesn't seem to have any illusions about himself. He certainly has none about his job.
 And if the time comes when he has to step out — if that time comes he'll probably step out himself because he's fed up — he isn't likely to shed tears of pain.
 If you have any doubts that his particular job doesn't make for longevity in Washington's official life, just remember all the changes in the World War II agencies, especially in OPA.
 That agency, always embattled, had four bosses, starting with Leon Henderson who had the thankless job of getting OPA started, with price control and rationing and all that they involved. His successors were Prentiss Brown, Chester Bowles, and Paul Porter.
 When the defense program started last fall, the first agencies set up by President Truman were these four and in this order: National Production Authority (NPA), Economic Stabilization Agency (ESA), Wage and Price Stabilization Board (WSB) and Office of Price Stabilization (OPS).
 And this is what happened to them:
 NPA — Sept. 30. William H. Harrison, president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company. NPA had the job of controlling materials needed in the defense program.
 Later a kind of super-production agency was set up, called the Defense Production Administration. Harrison was boosted into the job of running that. He quit May 1, giving ill health as his reason. His successor: Edwin Gibson, executive vice president of the General Foods Corp.
 ESA — Alan Valentine, president of the University of Rochester, was given the job of running ESA on Oct. 17. He quit on Jan. 19 in a dispute over when wage and price controls should start.
 His successor — Eric Johnston, former movie czar — still bosses ESA. He took control on Jan. 26, seven days after Valentine left. Like Valentine, he's top boss over wages and prices.
 WSB — Cyrus Ching was made chairman of this wage board, to control wages. Ching, one-time business man who had been working for the government for some years, temporarily left his job as chairman of the government's mediation service to head WSB on Nov. 28.
 He got along all right until mid-February when the labor members of the board blew up over a decision by the rest of the board to limit wage increases to no more than 10 percent over what they were in January, 1950. The board collapsed. But Ching didn't really quit. Ching and his 12-man board didn't really die. It just faded away.
 Now the President has set up a new and larger board, named as chairman of it George W. Taylor, professor at the Uni-

Cal Betting Rain Today In Decatur

DECATUR, Ill. — (AP) — Old Cal Waggoner bets it will rain in Decatur today.
 Nobody will be surprised if it does. For Waggoner is a time-honored precipitation prophet in these parts.
 For 45 years in a row he has versity of Pennsylvania. Ching is back at his old job as head of the mediation service.
 OPS — DiSalle was named head of this on Nov. 30, two days after Ching was appointed to the wage board, and is still going with no signs of collapse or departure.
 Right here someone may say: "but what about Charles Wilson who was made head of the whole defense program? He still has his job."
 "It's rained so darn much already," he commented the other day. "I'm just a bit doubtful."
 Waggoner, 90, a retired bank employe, got the idea of making financial hay on a wet day from a brother. Back around the turn of the century, brother bet Ching it would rain on May 10. Cal Cal himself began making bets on May 10 rain in 1905. He's been collecting with regularity, but the amounts he won never have been made known.
 He can be a cheerful loser, too. "Got to lose once in a while," he philosophized, "or I wouldn't find any suckers."

wagered that it would rain in Decatur on May 10. He was wrong only nine times and right on 36 occasions.
 Today Waggoner was back in the arena of chance for the forty-sixth year. He said he had some bets. He also had his fingers crossed. He knew he was bucking the law of averages.
 "It's rained so darn much already," he commented the other day. "I'm just a bit doubtful."
