Local Grocery Store Vote Canvass Burglarized Monday Is Underway

Unidentified persons — probably youngsters, police say — have broken into a community grocery store at 1709 W. Montana and made off with some cartons of cigars, candy, cookies and soda pop.

Total loss has been estimated at approximately $15. Police report that the break-in occurred sometime after the 7 p.m. closing time Monday.

Investigating officers said a screen had been torn loose from a window and a pane of glass in the front door had been broken.

It is surmised that burglars first tried the window, then entered their entrance through the door.

The Gray County Democratic Executive Committee convened this morning to canvass the returns of Saturday's Democratic runoff election.

The canvass was still incomplete by 11 a.m., returns from McLean only remaining to be checked.

Party Secretary Bob Baker reported that the official tabulation would be virtually same as the unofficial count given Saturday night and Sunday.

The runoff tantamount to election in most instances, gave the county a completely new commission. Members with the exception of Adrie Carpenter of Lefors, nominated were J. B. Maguire, county judge; W. E. (Bill) Jarvis, commissioner, Pct. 2; and O. L. Ribbotts, commissioner, Pct. 4. Jarvis must face a Republican, Clayton Huston, in the November general election.

Other nominees in the county is E. A. Vance, justice of the peace at Lefors.

Grandstaff, 50, is accused of burglarizing McLean's home on May 16. He has pleaded innocent. An attempt to win his release on the contention there was insufficient evidence to hold him for trial failed.

Grandstaff was pardoned in 1950 from the Tennessee prison in which he was serving life as an habitual criminal after he composed his "Big Spring Cantata" for the 100th anniversary of Big Spring, Tex.

Rites Today For Drowning Victim SHAMROCK (Special) — Rites for Caudel Howard Bider, 34, were held at 10 a.m. today in Clay Fidelity Home Chapel, Shamrock.

Mr. Bider was drowned at Grand Junction, Colo., Tuesday, Aug. 19. Identification by authorities at Grand Junction took three days. The family has learned nothing about the accident.

He was born Nov. 18, 1917, in David, Okla. He was a member of the Church of Christ in Budo, Okla.

Survivors include two daughters, Jean Charlotte, 10, and Donna Gay, 8; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bider, Shamrock; one sister, Mrs. L. D. Brashears, Shamrock; two brothers, Leon of Sayre and Wallace of Shamrock.

"I stabbed her once," the detective further quoted Moskal, "but it did not bring death and I had to do it again. I wanted to help my daughter and my wife. I think I did the right thing."

Sapp said the father went on: "I felt I would suffer the consequences for doing it, but no matter what happens, it doesn't matter. My girl is all right now."

Sapp said Moskal was being held for investigation of murder.

Buyers Get A Break From One Side, Slapped Down On Other

NEW YORK (AP) — You get a break in one direction. Then you get slapped down from another. That's the story of the rising cost of living.

The family shopper finds the price of some meats a little easier to pay. But eggs go up, and so do fruits, vegetables and dairy products. So the family food budget ends up by being a more painful dinner-table topic than it was a while back.

Sure, you get a break on clothing prices, which are lower than they were a year ago.

But whatever you save there is more than wiped out by rising costs in other lines.

Rents continue their slow advance in many places. Doctor and hospital bills are higher.

Auto drivers pay more for insurance.

All of these things add up, little by little, to raise the overall cost of living.

Apparel prices are running well below a year ago. But the price slide has already turned in many of the raw materials involved. Raw wool started up again last spring.

Some 1,800 fabricators and manufacturers have asked the Office of Price Stabilization for higher ceiling prices because of the recent price hikes in steel, aluminum and copper.

And OPS plans to let users of metals pass along to consumers this increased materials cost. Some OPS officials think that for the nation as a whole the price tags might go by nearly one billion dollars a year.

The meat industry thinks that this fall may see lower prices on beef—but possibly higher on pork. Eggs, fruit, vegetables and dairy produce may follow sea-

Funeral Service For Thirza Ragsdale, 96, Slated Wednesday

Funeral services for Mrs. Thirza Ragsdale, 96, will be held in the Duemmel-Carmichael Funeral Chapel Wednesday at 3 p.m. with Rev. Tom Johnston, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Pampa, officiating.

Mrs. Ragsdale died Monday at 5 p.m. near Kellerville where she had lived for the past year. She was born June 25, 1856 in Iowa and came to Pampa in 1928 from Newton, Kan. She made her home in Pampa with her son, Glen Ragsdale, at 853 W. Foster.

Survivors include her son, Glen, another son, L. W. of Hanford, Calif.; five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The body will be sent to Newton, Kan., where Mrs. Ragsdale will be buried beside her husband, C. D. Ragsdale, who died in 1928. Graveside services are scheduled for Friday.

Duemmel-Carmichael Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

sonal uses and events. Prospects are still good for a large grain harvest. And the family pocketbook may get some help from that quarter.

But chances are that services—the fees, fares and rates you pay—may go still higher. And rising costs of materials and labor may send many manufactured goods higher.

One way or the other, that take-home pay will continue to melt away.

Opening Of Polio Center Ends Remarkable Civic Endeavor

ORANGE (AP) — A new 20-bed polio treatment center will be opened here about Sept. 1 and its completion will wind up one of the most remarkably successful civic activities ever undertaken by this community.

In mid-July the facility was just a dream of a harassed hospital staff. By the end of this month it will be a dream come true. In between lies a story of generosity, hard work, and resourcefulness with few parallels.

The idea of the center was born one sweltering July day during a staff conference in the office of Mrs. Besa Paddock Schofield, superintendent of City Hospital. Its birth followed several hours of frantic telephoning in an unsuccessful attempt to arrange for physical therapy treatment for three young polio patients of the hospital.

Orange had no provisions for such treatments and had been sending its patients to Houston, Galveston and Beaumont. But facilities in these cities — and most others with treatment centers in this area — were already overtaxed.

Kindly, grey-haired Dr. E. H. Kent, head of the city hospital medical staff, said "the peak of the polio season is still ahead and God help us if we don't do something and do it quick."

Mrs. Paddock and the hospital business manager, Bob Hodges, called on the Navy department and the local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for emergency assistance. The Navy flew in equipment and personnel for a temporary treatment center. National foundation also dispatched equipment. Emergency treatment facilities were in operation less than 24 hours later.

Two days later Dr. Kent called a meeting of representatives of Orange County's civic organizations. The response was instantaneous and overwhelming.

First there was a problem of a building. A new one would cost $30,000. But there wasn't a dime in sight.

A former housing official presented that a vacant gov-

Hank Throws Rocks At Stalled Automobile To Get It Started

By HENRY McLEMORE
CUERNAVACA, Mexico — This will horrify all garage mechanics who happen to read it, but the best way to fix a balky automobile motor is to pelt it with rocks about twice the size of hen eggs.

I learned this trick the other day when I was driving to Mexico City and was waved down on a steep grade by three American women with gray hair and distress written on their faces.

"Help us," they implored as I came to a stop beside their car man stop to help them, side of the road. "Help us, or we'll never get back to Onio."

They explained that their car simply refused to run, and they were so grateful to have an American man stop to help them, because they knew that all American men knew all about cars, and could fix them in a jiffy.

"Why, if Frank—that's my husband—were here," one of the women said, "he'd have this car going rest guns in a minute. There's nothing he likes better than to tinker with the motor."

"Just like my Joe," another of the women in distress said. "There's nothing he doesn't know about cars. He never takes our car to the garage. Always fixes it himself."

The women didn't know it, but they had flagged down probably the only living American man who up until a few months ago had difficulty in telling the difference between a spark plug and a hub cap. Asking metadiagnose who up until a few months ago had difficulty in telling the difference between a spark plug and a hub cap. Asking me to diagnose the ailments of a gasoline motor was every bit as ridiculous as asking a jungle witch doctor to head the staff at Johns Hopkins.

But they had me on a spot. Here, on a mountain road in a foreign country, they had turned to me as a knight in shining armor. All of a sudden I had become the symbol of the mechanically minded American male, who can tear down engines, fix lawnmowers, hang pictures straight, replace blown out light fuses, stop leaks, repair plumbing, build his own barbecue pit, and shingle a roof.

I couldn't let them down. I knew I had to do something. I stalled as long as I could. I talked knowingly of how the high altitude was probably at fault; that it was well known that for every hundred feet of altitude the average motor lost 10 per cent of its horsepower. I knew this was tommyrot, but trusted they didn't.

"Might be the change in gasoline, too," I said. "You know, ladies, that the Mexican gasoline is not as highly refined as ours, does not contain as much high octane lead and pewter to the spare inccn, and lacks the will power to drive a spirited engine like the one in your car."

When I had finished my speech I realized that I hadn't done a fool thing, and that their car was sitting there just as dead as I was when they stopped me. I got behind the wheel and pushed the starter, and banged my feet on the floorboard, took a peek in the glove compartment and hemmed and hawed.

I told the women the trouble was in the carburetor. I got out, opened the hood, and prayed there would be a tag on the carburetor so I could identify it. There wasn't any, so I leaned over and put my ear to the motor. I burned my ear.

Desperate, I told the ladies the carburetor was clogged and I would have to resort to drastic measures, there being no carburetor tools handy.

ing and other business of remodeling the treatment building was taking place. Kanette lay in a respirator less than a dozen yards away.

Once a workman who came into the hallway for the motor, I opened the hood, and walked over to the respirator where the child's father was patiently feeding her water a drop at a time through a pipette.

Kanette paused in her drinking and asked the craftsman: "What are you doing out there, big man?"

"I'm building a piece to get you well," the workman replied. "Well, hurry up," the child whispered. "This thing pinches my neck."

The dirt-stained craftsman turned away suddenly, retraced his steps, wiped what may or may not have been sweat from his eyes, picked up his hammer and started banging furiously away.

Men Breathe Easier Now; Male Wins Driving Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — You can relax now, men. A steady-nerved 18-year-old boy is the teenage automobile driving champion. Those girls some men feared might win and humiliate the male race were far behind.

Martin G. Desilets of Longmeadow, Mass., who can drive a car unwaveringly down a line and then back straight along it, too, won the first national teenage Road-e-o title Friday with an amazing display of control and driving skill.

He defeated 34 other state champions—including two girls by piling up 801.18 points of a possible 1,000. That's 27 points better than the runnerup, Milton J. Vaverek of Pontiac, Mich.

Martin, who has been driving for two years and five months, finished the way a champion should. He started out only so-so on the written tests, but when it came to testing driving skills he was superb.

He scored 375.70 points out of a possible 400, far ahead of anyone else in this department. The simplest looking test proved to be the hardest. It consisted of driving a car in a straight line and stopping it so that the bumper and then the wheels would be inches from a finish line.

Almost all contestants had trouble with this, losing as high as two-thirds of their points here.

Settlers To Gather In Mobeetie Sept. 1

MOBEETIE — Settlers of what is claimed the oldest town in the Panhandle will get together Sept. 1 when Mobeetie will hold its Old Settlers Reunion.

The reunion, an annual event, is being sponsored by the American Legion with the support of the area residents.

There will be a free barbecue at noon with many other types of entertainment planned for the day. Harry Woodford of Wheeling will serve as master of ceremonies.

Reunion officials have invited residents from over the area to the Labor Day celebration.

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence. Should we, at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

Another Move To Control Economy

Ellis Arnall, the federal "price stabilizer," has recommended that the President reconvene Congress in special session to give OPS the legal authority to repair the damage done by the drought.

Since every act of the present Federal administration is open to suspicion we cannot be sure this "recommendation" is not merely an excuse to get the Congress in session as a sounding board for the fall presidential campaign and to make several hundred political appointments helpful to the cause of the Democratic party.

But if the motivation is actually based on plans for drought relief and new food control measures it is without merit and the program should be sternly resisted by the Congress.

Droughts have in the past cut down the crops with resulting decreases in the food supply, and food prices have gone up. There have also been many years when nature was bountiful with rainfall and sunshine and crops were abundant with the result that prices to farmers and processors of food were extremely low.

Congress authorized the use of price control measures to meet the abnormal demand situation that arises in wartime and intended that such price control authority be used only when the productive capacity of an industry could not adequately fulfill the requirements of both the government and civilian demand.

Following the outbreak of the Korean war, prices of canned fruits and vegetables advanced sharply. The challenge of this price increase was met head-on by the canning industry with the result that a record pack of well over 300,000,000 cases of canned fruits and vegetables was produced in 1951.

Prices of other foods in the meantime were advancing. Thus the disparity in prices between canned fruits and vegetables and other foods became greater as the season advanced with the result that more and more consumers increased their canned purchases considerably.

After careful calculation of the losses due to the steel strike and can shortages, as well as reduction in yields due to drought conditions, the Nation's supplies of canned fruits and vegetables for this year promise to be within ten per cent of the record supply of last year, and considerably larger than any one of the four preceding years.

Prices of canned fruits and vegetables are now lower than at this time last year. Furthermore, canners' prices are on the average 7 1/2 per cent below the 1951 ceilings allowed by OPS. This disparity would be greater if the 1951 ceilings were adjusted to reflect the increased cost of packing the 1952 crops.

There is no denying the fact that there may be advances in the prices of some canned fruit or vegetable. Such increases could obviously have taken place under the OPS regulations establishing ceiling prices.

In the light of this picture the question arises as to whether or not the function of OPS is to control abnormal price advances arising from wartime demand, or whether under the direction of Mr. Arnall it is to become an agency to control the price economy of the nation under conditions arising from natural fluctuations in supplies.

If the latter situation is the goal, we have ceased to be a free enterprise nation.

"Civil Rights" Bid For Votes

(The Commercial and Financial Chronicle)

Possibly all of us by now should have grown accustomed (we should have said "accustomed" to the cold-blooded, ad hominem tactics with which the politicians at election time aim to corral this, that and the other element in the population. We should suppose all good Americans with the best interests of the country as a whole at heart would, however, find it difficult to accept this behavior with equanimity.

All this is nowhere more in evidence than with respect to the issue now known as "civil rights." There was a time when the term "civil rights" had a wide and pervasive connotation, today it has about two special meanings. One of them has to do with attitudes toward certain racial minorities.

It is in connection with the Negro population that "civil rights" have become loaded with TNT. Negroes have of late years migrated in increasing numbers to certain large cities in the industrialized States where the two parties are more or less evenly divided. Here they hold, or are believed to hold, a sort of balance of political power.

Then there are, of course, the "underprivileged." It was Franklin Roosevelt who popularized the term—and the technique of corraling their votes. Of course, many of those who used possibly to be entitled to some such description are today anything but underprivileged.

THE BASS QUESTION We pass over the question that might be raised as to the low opinion evidently held by the candidates of the minorities themselves. We do so that we may get at once to the more vital phase of this matter. The real root of the conditions complained of is found, of course, in the basic attitudes of large sections of the population at large.

These attitudes are deeply imbedded in the minds and emotions of the people. A visitor from Mars would doubtless find it difficult to understand their presence, as a good many foreigners often do when in our midst. These attitudes may be foolish—often they unquestionably are; they may do great harm to the nation; but that there can be little doubt. But there they are, and who in his right mind supposes for one moment that this element of American folkways can be excised by legislative fiat?

The fact is that most legislation, and all proposed Federal legislation, merely demands that employers act as if no such attitude existed in the minds of their customers. It is quite easy to talk of "equal employment opportunities." In the abstract, and viewed superficially, it is an appealing ideal, but, of course, equal employment opportunities for all individuals implies an obligation upon other individuals to provide it. This latter aspect of the case is not often thought of by those who concern themselves with "civil rights" legislation.

THE FARMERS, TOO But not far behind this issue of "civil rights" comes another which has the tendency of the hour. States must cause thoughtful men and women to feel ashamed. The Republican candidate is currently reported to have been advised that he must "come across" with promises of substantial "benefits" to the farmers of the Middle West if he hopes to recall a number of these States to Republican fold. He is being told, by all accounts, that these States were not to Dewey, but 1948 because the Democrats outbid him. Meanwhile, the Administration at Washington is licking its chops over the opportunity the drought has brought it to "prove" by liberal aid that it is "the" friend of the farmer.

It appears to be conceded that here again we have a situation where a minority (the voters of a half dozen "deweyite" States) might very well control the returns next November. The remedy to which the politicians turn naturally is subsidy—the purchase of the desired votes. And there is all too much to suggest that this is precisely what the contending parties intend to do this year.

Most Beautiful Sight In The World

National Whirligig... Ike Plans Attempt To Absolve Himself Of European Blunders

WASHINGTON — General Eisenhower plans to absolve himself of all blame for the Roosevelt-Truman Administration's post-war "blunders" by arguing that he was only the military agent for his presidential superiors.

It will enable Ike, despite his prominent role in Europe during and after the conflict, to conduct a positive and frontal attack on diplomatic defeat in Europe, the Balkans and the Far East.

FRUSTRATED — Possibly looking forward to his present political predicament, Eisenhower has kept copies of all directives, issued to him by President Roosevelt and Churchill. These documents, in his adviser's opinion, free him of partisan charges that he was even indirectly responsible for Russia's penetration into the heartland of Europe and her eventual absorption of the satellite area.

He may reveal certain personal details not hitherto known, if the Democrats defend these postwar and wartime decisions — Yalta and Teheran — by charging that the G. O. P. candidate was a party to them. He may tell how frustrated he, Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Gen. George Patton left when ordered to halt their advance into Germany.

Fair Enough... Eastern New Deal Bloc Works To Defeat Senator McCarran

By WESTBROOK PEGLER (Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A citizen who is intimate with Nevada politics has given me further details of the eastern bloc's intrusion of Arthur J. Goldsmith, a New York manufacturer and under-contractor-politician, in the elections of many states. Goldsmith runs a number of letter-head "societies" which actually are not political organizations in the normal sense but slush funds, working secretly to defeat incumbents or aspirants who offend Mr. Goldsmith's political ideas.

The offices of these layouts are in Goldsmith's apartment in the Waldorf Tower, but as I have reported, the address is given as "100 East 50th Street, New York."

A form letter sent to George Franklin, a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination against Sen. Pat McCarran, dated May 15, 1950 by Goldsmith's committee on National Affairs, said: "We need money now because the outcome of the primaries in several states this summer, rather than the election in November, will determine who will represent those states in the Senate. If Senator McCarran, described in the enclosed item, wins, he is almost assured of re-election. Had enough of him? Or do you want six years more from a state other than their own seems not to have occurred to McKee, Goldsmith, Wilcox or anyone else concerned. The plain implication that foreigners to the state of Nevada might properly use money to frustrate the normal exercise of the franchise by the citizens of the state is equally interesting. In Who's Who, Wilcox describes himself as a banker and "financial consultant."

He was a partner of Dillon Read, international bankers, in charge of European business. He is a member of several advisory groups from the Marshall Plan to arrange for gifts of American money abroad.

On July 30, 1950, Goldsmith wrote to Franklin that he would pass on information of value to him in his campaign from his New York apartment. In fact, it became known that at least as far as the Korean Aid Bill was up on a roll call, and was not paired on it.

"When he tries to indicate how right he has been in wanting the United States to protect itself in the Far East it can be called to public attention that on a major measure he did not even bother to indicate his position," Goldsmith wrote Franklin.

Memorandum circulated among the "officers" and "directors" of the committee in 1948 told them "for your information" that it had made certain contributions. The members, if any, of the Committee on National Affairs, indeed, even the "officers" and "directors" apparently had not voted on these donations. It seems that they were arbitrarily decided by some high authority who was now reporting his action confidentially. This authority might have been Goldsmith himself, but he refuses to talk so I cannot tell you.

A $5,000 donation to the extension of the New Deal Bloc, Matt Neely, of West Virginia, led the list. Neely was put up to oust the incumbent Revercomb, a Republican and a better than average Senator, because Revercomb had enraged easterners who objected to any limitations on immigration, particularly restrictions to keep out Communists. Revercomb had been handed in the hot potato job of writing an immigration law. For his pro-American attitude he has knocked off just as McCarran and Joe McCarthy have been marked for liquidation ever since.

But these things were done by the average citizen of Staunton and the town's Memorial Hospital, with its 50 beds, ultra-modern operating room, and iron lung too, today stands as both a piece of merciful service and a monument to the determination, single-mindedness and self-reliance of the people of Staunton, Ill.

There's an old saying: "If you want something done, do it yourself." Americans have long been familiar with the wisdom of this advice. Self-reliance has been part and parcel of our national experience from early settlement and pioneer days. And evidence abounds that such self-reliance is still very much in the fibre of our life today.

Take for instance the story of Staunton, Ill., a mining town of 3,000 people, a town which four years ago had no hospital and needed one badly. Staunton now has that hospital. The citizens themselves resurrected an old abandoned school house to get it, virtually rebuilding the structure brick-by-brick. There was no outside help. Funds for a modern hospital, especially in a small town like Staunton where the actual cost was a staggering $254,000, are extremely difficult to come by.

But people of Staunton raised the necessary funds out of their own wallets and purses. They skimped and saved. And the hospital was built by their own work — manual work, head work, leg work, hard, long and all but frustrating work — built by miners, mail carriers, grocers, housewives. Women's clubs lent a hand. Church groups, Boy Scouts, civic organizations, all contributed in one way or another. There was plastering to be done and painting, wiring, hammering and sawing — even sewing.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were known as the ideal couple—never a dispute as the harsh word but a warm smile. Thompson asked how he did it, explained: "Why, it's a very simple thing. I never let the morning sun see what she wants and the afternoon sun see what she wants."

OUR TOWN

One of the Kiwanis Club's students from Germany, Gretchen Johannsen, was a surprised young woman last night. It was her 17th birthday and a group of Pampa High School seniors gave her a surprise party at Lillian Young's home. It was quite a problem to keep Gretchen "in the dark," but Marilyn Fitzgerald, co-hostess, explained the plan they used. Mrs. Jim Nation, in whose home Gretchen is staying, took Gretchen to Mrs. Ray Kuhn's where they were to have ice cream. Then Mrs. Nation suggested they drive over to the J. V. Young home and return a book she had borrowed. Of course, Gretchen was elected to take the book inside. Guests were waiting, and when the honoree entered they popped out from every direction. Gretchen could not say or do anything but smile, and as her new friends gathered around, her smile kept getting bigger and bigger, and she didn't stop eating all evening. It was a wonderful surprise for her. Besides celebrating her birthday, Gretchen got acquainted with girls who will be her classmates next year. She plays the piano, and had a chance to hear some of the Pampa pianists after she played. Among the guests were Nancy Adams, Shirley Bird, Sue Kennedy, Nihla Morrison, Janet Weathered, Carol Ann McClelland, Ann Ouhler, Patricia Johnson, Sue Stewart, Betty Ann Williams, Joan Carrrell, Joan Lundford, Shirley Olsen, Marlene Leder, Kay Wilson, Joyce Moyer, Jane Prichard, Pat Cargile, Lynn Cornelius, Vivian Wilkinson, Ann Jordan, and Mary Lee Blackmore of Canadian. The birthday celebration was a genuine welcome to Gretchen from the Pampa girls, and they hope Gretchen is going to like them half as much as they like her!

Prolong Life Of Good Lingerie
By ALICE HART
NEA Beauty Editor
Daily care of your lingerie is an important grooming asset. It only takes a few minutes every evening to wash out your stockings, shields, slip, etc., but the habit will help you to keep your clothes in much better condition. As soon as you undress, fill the basin with soapy water and allow the lingerie to soak. Then, whenever the mood moves you, do the rinsing, and wrap the wet clothes in a towel. The towel will absorb all excess moisture, and the clothes will dry much faster. If you have no place to do the hanging, the shower curtain rod will hold wire hangers. Allow enough space between each piece so there will be no problem of colors running. Your lingerie will last a lot longer if you have at least two sets. Then you can alternate every day. It is also a good idea, before you begin to wash, to check for any tears, loose snaps or buttons. Do any necessary repair work when you see it. You'll only forget if you wait, and the job may turn into a major one. No matter how well-dressed you may be, if you know your lingerie is not in perfect condition, you can never have confidence in your grooming.

Readers of The News are invited to send their problems to Grace Friend. Letters not published will be answered personally if stamped although they will not be printed without the writer's permission.

Dear Mrs. Friend:
Sometimes I think I shall have to leave my husband and get a divorce without waiting for my little girls to grow up.
We don't get along at all but I am making every effort to keep our home together until the girls are through high school as I realize the importance of their having both parents.
This is not easy as my husband will make no effort at all. He doesn't like to do any of the things I do and I don't like the things he likes so we really don't have anything in common but the children.
DOES HER DUTY
I try to do my duty and keep the house comfortable and the children neat and have meals ready promptly but he doesn't seem to appreciate it at all.
Do you think it is terribly important to keep the home going for the sake of the children?

RUTH MILLETT

The wife who resents her mother-in-law might get a new slant on the situation from this mother-in-law's letter:

"I feel my two daughters-in-law have the wrong idea about their rights. When my husband was living I had no reason to ask anything from my sons. But now, alone and living by myself, it is often necessary to have them help me.
"They think my sons should not come to see me often, so sometimes it is months before I see them if I am not able to travel.
"They do not think I have any claim at all on my sons.
"They even open my letters to my sons, denying me even the privilege of knowing that I can write a letter meant only for them. I know my sons' wives come first, and expect them to, but doesn't a mother have just a few rights of her own?
Of course she does.
No wife should resent a mother's asking for a son's help if she really needs it. The question for the mother, however, should always be: "Do I honestly need the help or am I leaning on my sons in order to keep them close to me?"
No wife, of course, should open her husband's mail no matter who it is from. But that is a matter for the sons to handle, not reason for the mother-in-law to interfere.
No wife should resent her husband's love for his mother nor make it difficult for him to visit her.
And yet there are some mothers who work so hard on their sons' sympathy, the wives have to cope with the unhappy results of each meeting.
A mother does her rights but she should be careful not to mistreat them.

Woman GOP Leader Up From Social Worker To Politics

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Oswald Eisenhower-Nixon, an amateur Lord, co-chairman of Citizens for Politics.

She entered the political fray last spring because of a wartime acquaintance with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and because she likes "being helpful."

Tall, dark-haired and with a quiet, tactful manner, Mrs. Lord's grey eyes twinkle when she tries to trace her path from social work in her native Minneapolis to the smoke-filled rooms of politics. With Walter Williams, she is directing the work of a citizens committee to elect Eisenhower president.

She has devoted many of her 47 years to social work, civil defense, recreation, health and various national and international committees concerned with activities of women and children.

One thing led to another. She met Eisenhower during the war while touring Europe as an adviser to the Women's Army Corps. She got that job through civil defense and she got into civil defense when the late Mayor Fiorello La Guardia suddenly announced at a luncheon that she was his new assistant CD director in the New York area.

She was at the luncheon in her capacity as a director of the New York World's Fair.

She became a director of the fair because she was president of the New York Junior League. That tied in with her social work after she moved here from Minneapolis. Mother of two grown sons, she has found time to give advice to the Army. She was national chairman of the WAC's Civilian Advisory Commission, to the secretary of defense on housing and to the New York State Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences.

She has held posts in an array of organizations both during and since the war. They include the East Side Settlement House, the state and national war funds, the Women's Council of Greater New York, the New York Defense Recreation Commission and the chairmanship of the U. S. Commission for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

To get back to her friendship with Eisenhower: After their first meeting in a tank soon after VE Day, they worked together in Washington on legislation which made the WAC part of the Army, rather than an auxiliary.

And she ran into Eisenhower again when she was trying to re-

Bankers Take Close Look At Depositors

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Some bankers are beginning to look even more closely at their depositors' financial prospects than they are at their borrowers' ability to repay. And that's pretty close, as you know, if you ever borrowed money at a bank.

Most banks have more depositors than ever, and more deposits which means they have more money to lend.

And banks as a whole are doing fine and are unworried about the present. The depositors are protected by insurance. Some banks are working hard to get still more depositors.

But some older bankers explain that it is their duty always to remember that a depositor who is green in the ways of getting and keeping money could change overnight from an asset to a liability if the nation's long-time boom should peter out—by needing to have his money and thereby causing the total of deposits, the bank's money-making life-blood, to shrivel.

It's a long-time view these bankers are taking, because they don't expect the boom to go sour soon. They say it's just been given a longer lease on life by the new stretch-out in defense spending which President Truman indicated in his revised budget predictions.

Their problem is set forth by the daily banking newspaper, The American Banker. It says "unsound depositors and had deposits as a first in the factors" that lead to trouble. It lists as unsound depositors:

1. New, untried business men with little working capital and a lot of goods.

2. Wage or salary earners with annual savings or checking accounts but with a lot of installment and other debts.

The conservative bank which hasn't promoted too much new business, says the paper, is likely to have the sound and seasoned depositor:

1. The business well rooted in the success of the past with "resources outside the business capital on which to draw to add to bank deposits when storm clouds gather."

2. Individuals with "a substantial backlog of savings bonds or other sound investments on which they can draw to keep their bank books filled."

The sound depositor sustains the bank. The unsound one, draws his money out and causes trouble. The banking paper isn't making scare-talk. It's just reminding younger bankers who may be so-licious new deposit business: "The sound depositor factor has simply been covered up by high on 20 years of continuous inflation."

Former Inmate Sets Off Riot In Delinquent Girls' Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a summoned police officer denied entry to a delinquent girls' home here, sitting on the fire escape, police said Saturday, 20 of its said, but her friend got away.

Three of the eight were re-captured, officers said, but the live others were still at large. The uproar, in a dormitory at the National Training School for Girls Friday night, was described this way by one policeman:

"They tore the place apart, pulling radiators loose from the walls, breaking the water-cooler and jerking the wash-cooler loose."

Inspector William Cunningham led police on a charge up the steps to the third floor. They were met by a barrage of mops, buck-open seas off Casablanca harbor etc. odds and ends of furniture and shrill female screams.

Police said the disturbance was visited him to wait for more favorable winds, but Bombard insisted returned with a friend to visit some of her old classmates.

Denied entry, they climbed a marie toward North or Central fire escape. The matron on duty America, he explained, "and wants

Frenchmen Adrift Off Canary Isles

CASABLANCA (AP) — Alone on a frail raft, French Dr. Alain Bombard drifted today toward the Canary Islands 500 miles south-west of here.

With America as his ultimate goal, he hopes to prove that shipwreck victims can live on what they can find in the sea.

A yacht towed him out to the open sea off Casablanca harbor yesterday and he disappeared into a fog. Oldtime fishermen had advised him to wait for more favorable winds, but Bombard insisted returned with a friend to visit some of her old classmates.

Denied entry, they climbed a marie toward North or Central fire escape. The matron on duty America, he explained, "and wants

Two Boys Disappear

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities in two states were alerted yesterday to watch for two San Antonio youngsters said to have disappeared Friday at Okmulgee, Okla., after a YMCA baseball tournament game there.

The boys were identified as Robert T. Neal, 15, and Donald Woo, 14.

Doxie Moore, new Supervisor of Officials for the NBA, played on two Big Ten championship football teams while starring for Purdue.

His gear also included a filter to trap plankton, a tiny sea organism on which smaller fish live. He hopes to find some nourishment from the plankton in case fishing is poor.

He plans to drift from the Caribbean toward North or Central America, he explained, "and wants

Combination Table Is Easy To Make

Occasional furniture like this combination table can be built with plywood by almost anybody who can muster a hammer and saw.

The table is 48" long, 16" wide and 30" high. It can be finished to harmonize with any decorative scheme and will serve for books, magazines or knickknacks in living room, den or bedroom.

You can build the piece with 3/4" Handy Panels—the new stock small sizes of Douglas fir plywood now available at many retail lumber yards or you can cut all the parts from one 4' by 8' sheet of plywood. Plans can be obtained from local lumber dealers or from Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma, Wash.

Why Do We Need A New Bible? Revision Turns To Old Recipe

By FRANCES DUNLAP HERON (Distributed by NEA Service) NEW YORK (NEA)—Each Christmas the women in the Jones family make plum pudding, using a recipe handed down from their Great-great-grandmother Jones.

Not long ago, a new Jones bride, clearing out the attic, made a remarkable discovery. She uncovered, in the painstaking script of Great-great-grandmother Jones, a copy of the recipe three generations nearer the original than any other known.

And lo and behold, a comparison shows great variation. Somewhere along the line a cook left out half a cup of molasses—most likely because it was stuck in between half a cup of citron and half a cup of grape juice, and the copyist's eye simply slid over the middle half cup.

Next Christmas, the Jones wives will return to the attic recipe, the nearest to the original.

As with that plum pudding recipe, so it is with a very, very old book—the Holy Bible.

It is some 3000 years since the Old Testament began to take written form. Almost exactly 1800 years ago the New Testament was completed. Until printing was invented about 1450, the Bible was kept alive by the only method known—copying by hand.

Just as with the pudding recipe, it is unlikely we will unearth a first copy of a Bible book. But manuscript discoveries and archeological research of the last 75 years have pushed our knowledge ever nearer to the originals.

The "Revised Standard Version of the Holy Bible," due from the presses Sept. 30, is the result of these discoveries and research.

To John Wycliffe, rector and college afterward, we owe the first translation of the Latin Bible into English, completed in 1382.

The first English version of the Scriptures to be made by direct translation from the original Hebrew and Greek, and the first to be printed was the work of William Tyndale. His New Testament of 1535 was to become the basis of all later revisions.

Accused of perverting the meaning of the Scriptures, he was burned at the stake in 1536.

Soon afterward, however, his dying prayer—"Lord, open the King of England's eyes"—was answered and a succession of versions began to win favor.

King James' instructions to his 54 translators was for a revision "as complete as the work of the original Hebrew and Greek." That they realized they were but one point in history is evident in their statement of purpose in translation: "To make a good one better, or out of many good ones, one." But whereas in 1611 they had access to only a dozen or so late medieval manuscripts of the New Testament, full of the accumulated errors of centuries of hand-copying, today's revision committee could draw on hundreds of old manuscripts far afield—dating back to the fourth century.

Recent archeological findings throw new light on the meaning of the Old Testament Hebrew.

The Chester Beatty manuscripts of parts of the Bible, turned up in Egypt in 1890, go back as early as the second century, B. C. Fragments of Deuteronomy have been found from the first or second centuries—B. C. The Isaiah scroll rescued from a cave near the Dead Sea by a shepherd lad in 1947 appears to date from the late second century, B. C. It becomes the basis for 13 readings incorporated in the Revised Standard Version of Isaiah.

Throughout the new revision are changes correcting the additions, commissions, substitutions traceable to ancient and medieval copyists. These and other inaccuracies have been corrected because the committee could be back nearer the original manuscripts than any other group of scholars in history.

Just the cook copying successive "half cups" out of the molasses, so in Revelation 8:7 a long-ago scribe overlooked the clause "and the third part of the earth was burnt up" and went right on to the next, "and a third part of the trees."

Another ancient copyist substituted "Joseph" for "his father" in Luke 2:33. In RSV the verse (referring to the baby Jesus) is correctly restored: "And his father and mother marvelled at that which was said about him."

Someone in the seventh century up-to-date by adding to the original statement, "We are members of his body," the words "from his flesh and from his bones." The King James translators did the best they could by treating the inserted words as appositives. "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." The flesh and bones are no more in the Revised Standard Version.

Thus it stands—on minor points and on significant interpretations—the newest version with the oldest authority.

Plays A New Game

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Two year-old Alexis Polina spied a roll of pretty green stuff on a table.

To her father, Alex, it was $95 a week's salary. He had peddled the money on the bedside table before stretching out for a nap.

To Alexis it was material for a new game.

Bill by bill, she happily threw the $95 out of a third floor window. A search by the family of the street below netted only $10.

Farm Women War On Home Mishaps

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. Texas farm women are setting an example for the rest of the nation by conducting a war against accidents in the home. The drive has enlisted 43,000 members, of whom more than 227,000 already have removed accident hazards from their homes, according to Mrs. R. M. Almarode, president of the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety committee.

Some of the members have eliminated a major fire hazard by replacing combustible roofing with asbestos-cement shingles, she said. Others have repaired stairways, mended leaky pipes to insure full water pressure in case of fire, put anti-slip rubber mats in bathtubs, replaced worn electrical equipment, checked gas and electrical connections on stoves, and cleared their homes of combustible debris.

The kitchen, the committee reported, is the most dangerous room in a farm house. It advised farm women to: wipe up spilled grease at once, keep hot liquids and matches out of reach of children, lift covers of steaming utensils away from the body, use pans that do not tip easily and use pot holders that are thick and dry.

Home demonstration club women and 4-H club girls are co-operating in the campaign.

Among the discoveries that Columbus made in America was rubber.
