Shining Example

It never fails. Every time you give free enterprise a pushing around you run into trouble. It makes no difference how good your intentions are.

Take the shine boy licensing thing down at Donna, Texas, for an example.

Now there is a deal. It is not too hard to guess how it started. The police chief reported to the city dads that there was considerable mischief and petty thievery about the city. That same day a shine boy, after shining a Commissioner's shoes, had gone for change for a quarter and had not come back — the little thief.

So the Commission discussed the distressing state of affairs, consulted the city attorney on ways and means, and then shovelled through an emergency ordinance requiring a $10 annual license fee for any boy who wanted to operate his private, home-owned shoe shine business on Donna city property. City property means chiefly streets, sidewalks and alleys.

Before that happened it didn't require much capital for a boy to set himself up in business and earn a couple of bucks a week to help out with the groceries at home. All he had to do was make himself a shine box, hunt up some good popping rags and invest his cash in a can of shoe polish.

The ordinance made it different. Now he has to go to the bank and mortgage the shine box and get five co-signers so he can borrow the $10 license money. Otherwise he must rent a building, hire a lookout for the cops, or do all his shining business in the pool halls.

But as Krazy Kat in the old comic strip used to say, the Donna city dads had a warm glow among them. They had done a good deed. They had struck a blow for home and mother. They had made this a safer world.

The license fee requirement would force all the little shine boys off the streets. Naturally they would all go home and mow the grass or shine their own shoes, and everybody would be happy because there would be no more juvenile delinquency in Donna.

Of course there was no expectation that the license fees would fill the coffers of the city to overflowing, and sure enough not one license has been purchased although the opportunity is there for some enterprising little merchant to form a syndicate, float a loan and get himself a monopoly on all the shine business in Donna. He could clean up until the state moved in and charged him with violating the anti-trust laws.

However, the Donna shine boys just sat back and waited to see what would happen and the shoes of Donna citizens became dim and dusty. A local industry was dead except for possibly a few bootleg shines on back streets.

At that point another evil crept in, as it always does when a law interferes with free enterprise. Foreign competition took over. Members of the Pharr shoe shining industry grasped the opportunity, slipped in and skimmed off the cream of the Sunday morning business.

Local industry, forced into idleness, stood helplessly by. Those foreigners could shine and run back to Pharr. They had no fear that a policeman would be waiting at the door when they slipped home at night — a warrant for arrest on charges of shining without a license in his hand.

Protests have been lodged with the Donna city dads. There have been requests for the repeal of the ordinance. It has been pointed out that bread is being taken from the mouths of hungry citizens and fed to the outlanders from Pharr.

But the pleas so far have fallen on deaf ears. The commission takes the position that the ordinance is legal and was passed for a good purpose, so it should not be repealed no matter how foolish it may be and no matter what the consequences of its passage.

It is not our purpose to say the commissioners are wrong. But we would like to point out that we have on various statute books many laws and ordinances that were put there for good purposes but did not turn out to have the results intended.

Any time you turn over a log in the woods, you upset the whole economy of that end of the forest. The rabbits, skunks, and bugs that run out have to find new homes. When they do, they displace other animals and the effects may extend clear over into the next hollow.

What has happened to the shoe shine industry in Donna is only a small scale example of the things that have been happening all around the world since the dogooders and planners started tinkering with our economy.

They are forever setting out to accomplish something like curbing "juvenile delinquency" and winding up either wrecking business or hanging new shackles on personal liberty — or both.

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOILES

Excuse For Farm Parities

President Truman's overriding the Wage Stabilization Board and accepting the $1.90 a day additional wage for coal miners is the kind of thing that makes a demand for farm parities.

The reason people think that the farmers should have parity is because the government has made law after law that gives organized labor more than parity. It gives them a right to have a monopoly wage. It gives them a right to get more than they produce — if we are to measure what a man produces by an unhampered market.

And if what each man produces is not to be measured by an unhampered market, then it has to be measured by some other arbitrary way. That is all price controls are — arbitrary decisions made by bureaucrats holding government jobs.

Now Truman is granting 40 cents a day more than the Wage Stabilization Board would accept — and it accepted more than what a free market would sanction. And while the coal miners are getting around a 10 per cent increase, the price of what the farmers get has fallen from 8 to 10 per cent. And the cost of coal of course goes into the cost of everything. It lowers the real standard of wages of all other consumers because coal is used in creating power that is necessary in manufacturing and heating various other essential things.

At the Banker's Conference in Chicago they pointed out that the purchasing power of the nation's ruralists is falling. The Wall Street Journal reports that wheat in Kansas City is bringing $2.42 a bushel, a dime less than a year ago. Cotton is worth about 34 cents a pound at Memphis, compared with 43 cents a year ago.

The Nation's Press

MR. DURKIN'S MIND

The Chicago Daily Tribune's secretary of labor, says he thinks that the Taft-Hartley law can be amended in a fashion which will satisfy both labor and management. In Mr. Durkin's narrow view, that is all that is to be gained by a law which has not occurred to him that the primary purpose of a labor law is to safeguard the public by forbidding familiar abuses of power by either labor or management in their relations with each other.

Take, for example, the closed shop, the arrangement by which a union and employers agree that only those workmen who are already members of a union may get a job and only those employers who agree to hire union men exclusively may get help.

Mr. Durkin, as recently as Nov. 3 of this year, took the position that the primary purpose of a labor law was to gratify the desires of the labor bosses, of which he was one. That was why he worked for the election of Gov. Stevenson, who favored repeal of the Taft law.

Mr. Durkin says that in voting he always follows the advice of the late Sam Gompers to reward labor's friends and punish its enemies. Since Nov. 4, something has happened to persuade Mr. Durkin that Gen. Eisenhower is not labor's enemy.

Something has persuaded him, also, that a labor law ought to please management as well as labor.

Both labor and management are parts of what is called the public, but together they are only a minority in it and a small minority at that. The larger public is in need of protection against abuses by both, whether they pursue their interest separately or together.

That is why we have anti-trust laws and a labor law. The concept of a public interest, transcending the interest of any economic faction, ought to be foremost in the mind of anyone who is considered for a post in the national cabinet, but is not even present in Mr. Durkin's mind.

His ideal labor law is not one which establishes the rules of the game for the public interest but one which will sacrifice the public interest, if necessary, to gratify some large bloc of voters.

Guessing Game

National Whirligig

GOP Victory Frees Business From Washington Straitjacket

By RAY TUCKER WASHINGTON — Private industry and business have moved fast to capitalize on the Eisenhower election and to escape from "Trumanism." In every field they have "taken charge of the nation's economic machine, and with the apparent acquiescence of the lonely man in the White House.

The outgoing President and his Fair Deal associates, by their unwanted silence and inaction, seem to recognize that the 20-year era of federal domination, interference and controls has ended.

It amounts to an amazing but understandable surrender of ideologies and prerogatives. Although a political promise motivated Truman's decision to overrule his Wage Stabilization Board, Defense Mobilizer Fowler and Economic Stabilizer Futwin in granting John L. Lewis' coal miners an unjustifiable wage raise, Truman simply bowed to new economic trends and forces.

For the first time since 1933, manufacturers, the workmen and consumers meet and deal in a relatively free market. They do not have to submit their arrangements to the bureaucrats for prior approval.

Eisenhower may ask Congress to retain wage-price control laws for their reapplication in a serious emergency. But the outlook for federal intervention on a Truman-Koosevelt scale is remote, barring global conflict.

Businessmen's reaction — While natural, supply-and-demand forces appear to have brought about this great social and economic change, there is ground for suspicion that manufacturers and businessmen have combined consciously to effect it.

Whatever the reason or inspiration, they are turning out civilian and defense goods in unprecedented volume, paying higher wages, lowering prices and providing a growing market for satisfied buyers.

TRUMAN'S TACTICS — In another and ironic sense, it is argued that Truman may have been hoist by his own politico-economic petard.

WHAT YOU PAY IN FEDERAL TAXES BY KRANTZ KELLER Treasurer of Carrier Corporation in October issue of Carrier Courier

All too often people are heard to say something like this: "I'm lucky, with my large family I don't have to pay Federal taxes." Everyone pays Federal taxes — and State taxes — and city taxes.

Special tables prepared by the Carrier Corporation's tax department, based on President Truman's budget estimates, show this most clearly.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO IKE BOOM — But the extra plant capacity which Truman demanded and financed after June 25, 1950, has now become so productive a machine that the government has lost its dictatorial and bargaining power over the manufacturers.

For example, if you have not taken up your gladioli corms or bulbs, it should be done now. The new corms will be nearer the surface than the ones you planted.

South Koreans Cling Warily To Hill Post

SEOUL (AP) — Battered South Koreans cling warily to Little Nori Hill Saturday as the bloody battle for two Western Front outposts stretched into the third day of close range see-saw combat.

Chinese Communist fire forced Republic of Korea units to pull back after surging within 15 yards of the frozen crest of nearby Big Nori Hill.

South Korean First Division troops captured the lower slope after a day of furious 111 eed artillery barrages, air strikes and infantry charges.

Some 3,000 Reds had grabbed the twin heights in bloody, hand-to-hand fighting Thursday. Big and Little Nori overlook the loy Injin River 40 miles north of Seoul on the Northern invasion route to that city.

Frontline officers estimated the three-day battle had cost the Reds at least 1,100 in dead, wounded or captured.
