O.U. Debacle

The University of Oklahoma football team recently had a bid to play in the Orange Bowl come New Year's Day but the conference rules of the Big Seven, of which Oklahoma is a member, forbid such post-season encount-

As a result, the decision as to whether the team should play was tossed back and forth among the coach, the team and the university president.

Those who followed the almost puerile conduct of each of these factors found bemusement in the age-old endeavor of buck-passing, but underneath there was an extremely important issue, an issue so far-reaching in its moral implications that the whole incident degenerated into a heart-breaking and discouraging spectacle.

Here we had an institution of so-called higher learning where the administration couldn't make up its mind whether it would maintain the sanctity of its agreement with the other six schools represented in its athletic con-

Since the question was whether to break the contract, the round robin to avoid responsibility for a decision started and the fact that it was finally decided that OU should turn down the offer in no way can mitigate the moral lassitude of the parties involved.

This incident should make every parent with a youngster at OU stop and think!

How can your child emerge from an institution such as OU believing in the sanctity of contract, the honor of giving one's word and the necessity of forthrightly taking responsibility when it has men so lacking in basic moral understanding directing the institution?

One can discourse for hours on the fair play engendered among youth by athletics but when it is observed that every member of the team expressed the desire to negate the university's solemn word, the sportsmanship factor is shadowed into insignificance.

Of course it isn't hard to appreciate why the members of the football team can't discern the difference between right and wrong when those who are supposed to be setting the example are so morally inept.

The fact that little indignation has arisen over this incident should cause us to stop and reflect seriously for it shows an indifference which completely contradicts the tradition of Jewish-Christian morals and the Amer-

Looted Savings

One problem that didn't get much of a play in the presidential campaign, chiefly because candidates, when they are playing their role of politician, shy clear of difficult issues, is the case of personal savings.

Since the end of 1945, the living-cost index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics has risen 62 points. This inflationary spiral has swept away 32 per cent of the value of the $142,700,000,000 held as savings by the American people at that date.

According to figures of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, that drastic cut is 20 times the loss suffered by U. S. bank depositors in all the bank failures the country has had since the end of the Civil War. In money terms, the cut is $45,700,000,000. Thus inflation has each year taken a toll averaging five per cent from all our money in whatever form - pay checks, pensions, savings bonds, bank accounts.

The loss is staggering and it is personal - felt by every one of us. And it points a lesson about the state of our home-front affairs.

There was a time when one of the most important things to an average man was having the assurance that the money he had in the bank was safe against the bank's failure.

The federal government has enacted legislation offering alleged protection against bank failures, but at the same time it has adopted a fiscal policy destroying fundamentally sound coinage. The man who saves a dollar today can't be sure what it will buy ten years or even a year from now.

Remorseful Morse

It is not often that we ordinary tend-to-our-ownbusiness Americans see eye to eye with such militant and self-righteous do-gooders as Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, However, on those rare occasions when we do concur with Little Hubert, it seems not only the part of a good sport to give him a rousing cheer, but an act befitting the occasion; particularly at the moment. For the law-maker whom the Saturday Evening Post once described as a "one-man filibuster" has urged his

Does The Government

Make Things Orderly? Evidently most people believe that the government no matter what it does, does things in an rderly manner. But order is a permanent principle. It does not change with time or place. The fact that the U.S. government at one time contended that it was immoral and not orderly for people to own whiskey and then later repealed the law and crime to own gold coin other than

So the government doesn't deternine what is orderly. The government should determine what is orderly or in agreement with moral law. Anything that is in agreement with the Commandments or noral law is orderly. Anything that does not agree with the Commandments no matter how many governments claim it does, is not

It is largely because people believe that the government can repeal the commandments - oppose the Coveting Commandment that we are in the wars we have been in during this century. It seems to me that all the wars the American people have been in, with the exception of the Revoltionary War, have been a violation of moral law. They have been a violation of the Coveting Commandment. America violated the Coveting Commandment when it passed tariff laws that prevented ndividuals from exchanging their labor with other individuals who will reward them the most for their labor. Labor laws like the Wagner Law and the Norris-La-Guardia Law are a violation of the Coveting Commandment, They take away from some individuals their right to use their conscience selling their services.

Probably most of our trouble omes from people believing that whatever the government does is noral and orderly. Most of our disorder comes from big govern-ment. The framers of our Constitution recognized that government could be very tyrannical and very disorderly. That is probably the reason our Founding Fathers passed the Second Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It reads:

"A well regulated Militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to eep and bear arms shall not be.

The Founding Fathers were afraid of the tyranny of a big centralized government and most state governments when their Constitution was formed didn't think for a minute that individual citizens would not have the right to own and possess arms - either to proiduals or from acts by the govrnment that were out of harmony with the principles of the Declaration of Independence, and thus the principle of the Commandments. One thing the American people badly need is to know that when government disobeys moral laws and wants to have a government without the consent of the individual that it is the individual's moral duty to resist in every way he possibly can.

TRYGVE LIE ERRS ON RED EMPLOYEES (The Dallas Morning News)

The suicide death of Abraham Feller is regrettable. Trygve Lie, has paid tribute to his efficiency as general counsel and head of the United Nations legal departnent. But it would be regerttable indeed if the issue which Mr. Lie has raised should impede a very necessary investigation into Red infiltration.

Lie thinks that Feller broke down under the strain of defending U. N. employees "against indiscriminate smears and exaggerated charges." This can hardly be applied to the fact that several American employees of U. N. have either been discharged or quit under fire. Regardless of Mr. Lie's opinions, it important to this country that t should not be represented in any capacity at U. N. by American Communists. No sound reason has been advanged for us to think

Almost at the same moment that Lie was making his New York statement, former Governor George H. Earle was testifying in Washington to the late President Franklin Roosevelt's part in suppressing Russian responsibility for the Katyn massacre. The President, said Earle, just refused to believe it. The evidence meant nothing, an ingrained personal opinion meant everything. It is to this, as Martin Dies can attest, too, that we owe the present necessity of rooting the Reds out of Washington. So far, this has seemed a mustard plaster removal job. There is another aspect of the situation currently reported in the Nov. 17 issue of the magazine, The Freeman, by Richard L. Stokes. This is the account of the extreme co-operation our bemused administration gave Russia in bilking us for $250,000,000 by printing occupation marks on plates and paper we furnished the U. S. S. R. This was over the objection of the Treasury and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. That could have been overcome only by the President. This one has proved too costly a mistake to be regarded merely as a sidelight.

If Counsel Feller's troubles arose from the burden of defending U. N. employees, the responsibility can be placed. It must fall properly on the careless or callous who overload our government rolls with people whose loyalfy seems to be

The Eisler brothers, Hans and Gerhardt, German refugees who gnawed the hand that fed them, after Sleanor Roosevelt had personally wheedled the State Department to let in Hans and his wife, were glad to be deported. We sent them back to Germany where, ever since, they have been doing us all possible harm, which may be more or less than we suspect.
