Borden County Round-up

Rosser Announces For District Judge

James Rosser, Snyder attorney, has announced his candidacy for the office of District Judge of the 132nd Judicial District Court, which district is composed of Borden and Scurry Counties.

Rosser is a native of Snyder, having been born there in 1915. The son of the late M. E. Rosser and Mattie Rosser, he lived in Snyder until the death of his father in 1924. In 1948 Rosser returned to Scurry County and has practiced law there continuously since his return.

Rosser received his education in the public schools of Snyder and Abilene. He holds a B. A. Degree from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene and a law degree from the University of Texas.

Rosser taught school for three years in Breckenridge before he joined the Navy in World War II. During the war he served in the Pacific theatre of operations, and was released to inactive duty in 1946 as a lieutenant.

Since returning to Snyder, Rosser has engaged in the general practice of law. He has never held public office. He is a member of the American Bar Association, the State Bar of Texas, and the Scurry County Bar Association and is a past president of the latter organization. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Snyder.

In announcing his candidacy Rosser said: "The experience I have gained from a lifetime spent in this area of West Texas and from the eight years I have practiced law in Snyder has given me familiarity with the problems of those of us who live here and with the law relating to such problems. I feel that this experience has qualified me to serve the people of this District as their District Judge.

New Officers Elected For Borden County

The Sheriff's Posse met Monday night at the school building at which meeting new officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

Mardes Clayton, president; James Smith, first vice-president; Allen Stephens, second vice-president. About seventeen members were present.

"I have no interests which would divert my time or loyalties from the impartial and efficient administration of the affairs of the District Court.

"I believe that a considerable saving can be effected, particularly in the time of jurors, through the diligent and intelligent use of pre-trial procedures available to the Court. I shall make every effort to utilize such procedures available to the Court. I shall make every effort to utilize such procedures where possible.

"I believe that considerable savings in time and money can be effected for litigants by the full attention of the judge to the District Court docket and his diligent efforts to dispose of cases filed in his court. I pledge my complete attention and efforts to such matters.

"I sincerely feel that I can render a service for the citizens of this judicial district and pledge my best and fullest efforts to maintain and preserve the respect for and integrity of this most important court, if elected."

Grand Jury Actions For Borden County

SHORT STORY

Reputation

By ALICE MAYO

HE WAS TALL and rather thin and darkly handsome. There was a quiet air about him, a dreaminess. When Lydia told her he was a portrait artist, Babette wasn't surprised.

"His name is Malcolm. Isn't he adorable! I asked him over especially to meet you. But beware. The man has a reputation."

3-Minute Fiction

Later, when Malcolm asked her to pose for a portrait, Babette remembered the warning.

Yet she thought it would be thrilling. She was tempted. Of course there was Paul to consider. She was engaged to Paul. Earlier she had seen him talking to the artist. He probably knew all about him,

She prepared herself for what was to come. If he touched her she would strike him.

about his reputation. If Paul found out about her posing he would probably break off their engagement.

"I'll come," she said. "Where is the studio?"

His eyes gleamed. He gave her the address. Thinking it over that night she almost regretted her decision. If Paul were ever to find out!

Malcolm was waiting for her. His studio was a disappointment. There was nothing about it that bespoke glamor or romance. The floors were bare.

He posed her, paying attention to details. She was a little frightened. But nothing happened. She sat for an hour while he labored at his canvas. Her muscles felt cramped. It seemed he never would stop. But an end came.

She waited, tense, expectant. But he only asked her if she could come back tomorrow.

She came back. She posed again. For hours. Every muscle and bone ached. The portrait, she was sure, must surely be done. And then—But when finally she was allowed to look at the painting she knew it was not finished. He apologized again and complimented her on her beauty.

His flattery, she thought, was the beginning. He was preparing her. She almost decided not to return again to the studio.

But she did. She was there 15 minutes ahead of time. She sat for an eternity. She watched his face and became annoyed at his complete absorption in his work, at his lack of interest in her. She understood now: First he wanted to complete the picture, and then—She almost hated him for his selfish attitude.

"Tomorrow," he said, "will see the end."

Tomorrow! It came at last. Throughout her posing she was expectant, afraid, wondering. She thought again of his selfishness. Her annoyance became stronger, her dislike of him grew. Before he had finished she was seeing him in a new light. She hated him. She felt repulsed.

At last he laid down his brush. "My dear, it is finished!" There was pride and joy in his voice. "It is my greatest, my masterpiece!"

She prepared herself for what was to come. If he touched her she would strike him. How she loathed the man! He leaned over, and then straightened again. A knock sounded on the door.

Malcolm flung open the door. Babette caught her breath. Her eyes grew wide with horror. Paul was standing on the threshold!

"Paul! My friend! Come in, come in! It is finished! The great work is completed! How fortunate I am!"

Paul stepped into the room. He turned to Babette. "Darling, forgive me. I discouraged Malcolm from painting your portrait. I said you did not have what he wanted in expression. I was wrong. You did have it. He has interpreted it on his canvas."

"Paul, you—knew he was to paint my portrait?"

"Knew! Of course I knew. He asked me first if I might. I doubted at first that you would assent. When he said you had I was delighted. Malcolm is among the greatest of modern portrait artists. He has a reputation, my dear. A reputation!"

Christ and the Individual

Though Christ converts society more slowly than individuals, he converts society through converted individuals. The letter to Philemon shows what happens to one man, now, when Christ takes hold of him. Before his conversion, Onesimus had been a thief, a fugitive from duty. Afterwards, he was willing to go back, make good his theft, and take what was coming to him. Paul pleads that he may be taken back no longer just as a slave, but as a brother-Christian; but Onesimus did not know, of course, whether Philemon would take this advice. But he was willing to take his chance. A pagan owner and a pagan slave made a bad combination. A Christian owner and a pagan slave, or the other way around, would not be a good combination. But when they were both brother-Christians the whole relationship would be different. Once Christianize master and slave, and the end of slavery was in sight.

What Christian Brotherhood Is

People talk of the brotherhood of man; but the brotherhood of Christians is a higher brotherhood, indeed the highest possible. Christians recognize in one another not simply that they are all human, which is true enough, but that they are all Christ's brothers, they accept God for their Father—which goes much deeper than singing about him. Accepting the brotherhood of man, one can look at any man anywhere and think: He too is a man as I am; we belong to one race. But accepting the brotherhood of Christ, one can look at any Christian anywhere and think: He too is a man for whom Christ died as he died for me; we belong to one family. How deeply this enters into the heart, only Christians who have begun to realize this kind of brotherhood can know.

Heavy Grass Clippings Aid Soil and Plants

The home gardener who rakes his newly cut lawn is wasting a great source of nutriment and organic matter.

The wise gardener leaves his clippings on the lawn. The clippings will return a certain amount of organic matter to the soil.

There is always the possibility that the grass may get too tall and when it is clipped will make the lawn unsightly. Then it should be caught in a catcher or raked up, but not thrown in the ash can.

Clippings can be used as mulch on flower beds, around shrubs and evergreen cuttings or rose beds.

By spreading the clippings and applying complete fertilizer to feed bacteria while it decomposes, the gardener will greatly improve his soil.

Straw is used as a mulch by hundreds of home gradeners. Although it takes considerable more grass to make a good mulch, it is as beneficial as straw and is usually available.

Many gardeners build a corner box in which they toss grass clipping. As the clippings decompose the matter can be spread on gardens.

Rust-Proof Skillet

To keep an old cast-iron skillet from rusting in the cupboard, heat skillet slightly after washing, and rub waxed paper over it. Wax coating protects skillet, but is so thin it doesn't affect food flavor.

Infertile cows represent an annual loss of about $500,000,000 to the American cattle industry.

Produce Stand

The roadside produce stand converts crops into cash un-failingly, especially if it is neatly built, painted and clean. A stand like the one shown can be built quickly and economically. The framework is of two-by-fours lumber. The sides can be made of presd-wood or other material, which comes in panels. Note the drop shutters which close the stand at night and protect it through the winter. Painted it will make an attractive stand that will cause motorists to stop.
