United Fund's Advance Drive Opens Tuesday

Volunteer United Fund workers Tuesday morning go after a good chunk of the $45,150 that is slated to be raised in the advance and general drives.

The first part of Pampa's first United Fund drive gets underway at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday with a breakfast in the Palm Room of City Hall, according to Paul Brown, drive chairman.

Scores of volunteers are expected to be on hand for the affair; the kick-off of the advance drive of which Floyd Watson is chairman. Exactly one week later — 7:30 a.m. Nov. 10 — another breakfast will be held for the purpose of getting the general drive underway.

Brown emphasized that the women volunteer workers, unless phoned today to the contrary, are NOT to attend Tuesday's kick-off breakfast. Those not contacted will attend the breakfast Nov. 10 for the general drive.

Final plans for the Tuesday morning program have been announced. Dr. Douglas E. Nelson, First Presbyterian Church pastor, will give invocation. John Campbell, associate drive chairman, will give the introduction. A Girl Scout and a Boy Scout will lead the assembly in a Pledge to the flag. Hugh (Buck) Burdette, fund director, will give the keynote address which will be followed by two-minute talks by representatives of the seven participating agencies. Brown will be master of ceremonies.

FROM THE LEADER FUND — Ed Myatt (left), head of the Frank Leder Charity Fund, presents a check for $181 to Paul Brown, chairman of the Pampa community's United Fund drive, the advance part of which is slated to get underway at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. As no flowers were sent for the funeral of Mr. Leder, who died some two months ago, contributions to a Leder Fund were solicited from Pampans and turned over to Mrs. Leder. Mrs. Leder, in turn, handed back the entire amount to Myatt to give to the United Fund. Announcement of Mrs. Leder's action will come at the kick-off breakfast. (News Photo)

Benson Will Launch Program Immediately

IN RADIO SPEECH

Coke Denies SCS Will Be Scuttled

FORT WORTH, Nov. 2 —UP—Assistant Secretary of Agriculture J. Earl Coke stoutly denied charges that proposed departmental reorganization means scuttling the Soil Conservation Service in a Texas speech Sunday night.

He attempted to soothe such fears in a statewide radio speech on the weekly Republican Report to Texas program.

The talk originated at Fort Worth now a regional headquarters for the Soil Conservation Service whose director, Louis Merrill, resigned last month because he would not preside at a "wake" for SCS.

The reorganization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture proposed by Secretary Ezra T. Benson would abolish regional SCS offices.

Not Curtail Program
Coke maintained, however, that this would make no difference and would by no means curtail the SCS program.

"We doubt if farmers over the country will miss the regional Soil Conservation Service offices," he said.

Benson, said Coke, proposed to eliminate regional SCS offices "because we believe the most effective line of operation is from the federal government directly to the states, the counties and local communities for services rendered."

He said technicians would be placed in the states "in order to be nearer to the individual farms where soil conservation work must be done."

"There would be no change in the services to the soil conservation district," Coke said.

Have Signed Agreements
He said that "like farmers, we are interested first in conservation of the soil, all that we can get for the money spent, and not so much in maintaining more government offices."

The technical specialists now in regional SCS offices only number about 300, Coke said, and "most of these will be transferred to the state and to the Washington offices."

The Department of Agriculture has a signed memorandum of understanding with each soil conservation district, he said, and "we shall continue the cooperation provided by these memoranda."

Lt. Shoulders On Vacation In Hawaiians

WAILUKU, T. H., Nov. 2 —UP—Louis Shoulders, who quit the St. Louis, Mo., police force after cracking the Greenlease kidnap case, looked for a chance to "settle down" in the Hawaiian islands Monday with his landlady, whom he wants to marry.

Shoulders and the landlady, June Marie George, arrived at Honolulu by plane Saturday night under assumed names. They spent the night in a Honolulu hotel and flew Monday to this town on the island of Maui southwest of Oahu in the Hawaiian chain.

Shoulders, who is separated from his present wife, said he hoped to get a divorce in Hawaii and marry Miss George. He said he came here because he "wanted to be alone" and to visit his son, Bruce, who is a Civil Aeronautics administration employe on Maui.

Use Assume Names
Shoulders and Miss George flew from Los Angeles under the names "Sherman Woodlawn" and "Mrs. Mae H. Rossi" with Long Beach, Calif., as their address. By time their plane reached Honolulu, however, their true identity was known.

At least four FBI agents wearing loud aloha shirts were among the crowd at the airport when the plane arrived.

MILK FLOWS FOR NEW YORKERS — Rudolph Bruns, plant superintendent of a New York milk processing plant, tightens drouth-dried connections as milk once more starts flowing for consumers, upon settlement of a six-day milk strike. Milk goes up one half cent a quart, to pay an average $8.50-a-week wage boost to some 13,000 dairy workers in the New York area, according to an industry spokesman. (NEA Telephoto)

Says Measure Has Approval Of President

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 —UP—Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson Monday announced he will start "immediately" to put into effect his controversial plan for reorganization of the Agriculture Department.

Benson told a news conference the step is being taken with "full knowledge and approval of President Eisenhower."

Asked about suggestions from some members of Congress, including Chairman Clifford R. Hope of the House Agriculture committee, that the reorganization be postponed in view of vocal opposition, Benson said:

"The plan has unusually wide approval. There has been very little opposition—much less than anticipated."

Opposition to Soil Plan
Much of the opposition has centered about the plan to abolish the seven regional soil conservation offices and shift their functions to state offices.

Benson said he had talked to Hope, who asked that the reorganization be postponed if some "rumors" he had heard were true.

The secretary said those rumors were not true and he asserted most opposition came from a "small group" of leaders of the National Association of Soil Conservation Districts (NASD).

They have spread "doubt, misrepresentation and actual falsehood," Benson said.

Complained to White House
The NASD leaders complained to the White House last week about the proposal to close the regional soil conservation service offices.

Benson said the soil conservation program can operate "more efficiently" without the regional offices.

The "whole purpose" of the reorganization will be to give more efficient administration and "more effective service," he said.

Besides eliminating the regional SCS offices, the reorganization plan proposed elimination of the Production and Marketing Administration.

Says Reds Browbeat GI Nonrepatriates

PANMUNJOM, Nov. 2 —UP—Die-hard Communists have browbeaten some of the 22 unrepatriated American prisoners held by the Reds into a "bunch of scared kids" who now are afraid to come home, competent sources disclosed Monday.

A revealing picture of why many of the so-called "pro-Communist" GIs are staying with the Reds was painted by highly responsible informants after Indian guards killed a Chinese prisoner in a murder investigation.

The informants, who cannot be identified, said more than three of the 22 American stay-behinds "really believe in communism."

The others are victims of threats and blackmail, the sources said. A Chinese Communist officer, known only as Col. Chong, has tried to get the Americans' past and uses this knowledge over the GIs, the informants said.

The Americans have been told they face certain death if they return to the United States.

They have been told they will be "pumped dry" by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and then killed.

The 22 American POWs whom the Communists say have rejected democracy have been promised free travel, Chinese wives and a good Communist life if they continue to refuse repatriation.

But they also have been told they will be sent to the U. S. in about five years to lead a Marxist revolution against the American government.

To help the POWs accept these Red offers, Chinese Communists have given the GIs complete instructions on how to disrupt their coming interviews with American officers who urge them to return home.

Officers Catch Young Kidnapers

DALLAS, Nov. 2 —UP—The FBI announced Monday it caught two men in New Bern, N. C., charged with kidnaping a Houston, Tex., postal employe and leaving him tied up in woods near Lake Dallas, Tex.

J. K. Mumford, agent in charge of the Dallas office, said the two men were Eugene Charles Everingham, 19, and Donald Gene Scharnell.

He said both have been charged at Sherman, Tex., with violation of the Lindbergh kidnaping law. A third man, Lloyd Clayton Lay, 18, was charged after his capture in Hamburg, Ark., the day after the man was allegedly kidnaped.

All three men have admitted their part in the crime, Mumford said. He said Lay and Everingham escaped Sept. 20 from Butner prison farm at Camp Butler, N. C., where they took Marsh down a side road into some woods, tied him with two belts and a towel, and took his car and $21. The car was later wrecked near Hamburg, where Lay was arrested.

They pretended to be having car trouble, but after getting into the car pulled a knife and a gun on Marsh and made him drive them to near Lake Dallas, Mumford said.

Although the game is nearly two weeks away, only about 1,000 reserve seat tickets remain, McMillen reports.

About 1,200 tickets are being sent to Odessa, and, in all likelihood, there won't be any returned by the Broncos.

After the remaining 1,000 tickets for Pampa fans are gone, there won't be any more put on sale. The tickets are on sale at the school business office in the City Hall.

Three bids — one sealed, one unsealed and one oral — were on tap at 11:30 a.m., but only the sealed one had been opened and announced.

That was from E. W. (Walter) Anguish, Midland, who entered a bid of $50 per full mineral acre bonus for rights in Block 7 of League 280. After perusing Gaines County maps, though, commissioners came to the conclusion that Anguish was bidding on land that had already been leased.

George Pratt, Midland, Gulf's head landman for this district, was on hand to make an oral bid, but remained outside the doors of the county courtroom while commissioners talked over the situation. He had not made a definite bid by 11:30 a.m. and the unsealed bid had not been announced either.

The county commissioners' court has offered for bid oil and gas rights in Leagues 287, 288 and 290 of Gaines County, with a total acreage of 2,788. Gray County does not own any of the surface rights, County Judge J. B. Maguire Jr. said.

Before the lease discussion got underway, Maguire and the commissioners okayed the county salaries.

Accompanying Pratt was W. D. Blackmon, Amarillo, Gulf geologist. Only Commissioner Arlie Carpenter was absent as the meeting began at 10:20 a.m.

The commissioners' court was slated to continue its deliberations into this afternoon.

Russian Plan 'Is A Winner'

TULSA, Nov. 2 —UP—Russia has a "formula that is a winner" and doesn't want a shooting war with the United States, former UN Far East commander Gen. James A. Van Fleet said at Tulsa.

The Far East forces commander during the Korean fighting, asked what he thought about fears on the part of many Americans that Russia would wipe out major U.S. cities with atomic bombs, answered:

"That's just it. We don't want to get frightened and start running. Russia will never start a shooting war, because they have a formula that is a winner."

"Look at the gains they have made in the past 10 years," he said. "Look at the territory they have conquered. Whole parts of Asia and Eastern Europe have been taken under their wing. They will use the atomic bomb only as a cover. They know that in order to defeat the United States, they would have to out-produce us and out-deliver us. And they must know they never will be able to do that."

Van Fleet, who was retired from the Army March 31, addressed a Rotary club conference Sunday night in recent months, he said, Russia got the United States into the position of asking for peace.

"Certainly we want peace," he said. "But we must not let the Russians frighten and cow us into peace."

The general also repeated earlier statements that he never has approved the Korean truce and that "it will take a military victory in Korea to keep the peace."

Gas Well Blows In At Graham

GRAHAM, Tex., Nov. 2 — Oilfield workers increased their efforts Monday to cap an oil and gas well that blew in wild Saturday night.

The well, meanwhile, still near Graham.

Workers mixed hundreds of sacks of cement and poured it into the well to daylight, from fear use of lights or motors would produce a spark that would ignite the well.

The well is the Larson and Thomas of Dallas No. C-1 J. F. Hall. Oil already has overflowed several small pits and necessitated construction of a dam on a nearby creek. For a time the well spit out rocks and State Highway 254 was closed to traffic between Graham and Grafton.

Its pay zone was reported to be the conglomerate, topped at 4,172 feet. Drillers had penetrated about 100 feet past that point to get a core when the well blew in with a roar. Some witnesses said oil belched 200 feet into the air. Tremendous bottom hole pressure hurled the rocks skyward.

Oilmen in the meantime, disagreed on the wildcat's worth when it is controlled. Estimates of flow range from 100 to 150 barrels daily to as high as 50 to 100 barrels an hour. Gas flow estimated ranged from 20,000 to 10 million cubic feet a day.

The well was the second one to be brought in in the area and confirms pay found at the No. 1 J. J. Gibson 2,000 feet away.

Pampa Cops Probe Puzzling Burglary

Pampa police had a puzzling burglary on their hands today.

The home of J. E. Kirchner, 1910 Mary Ellen, was burglarized Sunday between 8 and 9 p.m., but apparently nothing was stolen from the home, Chief of Police Jim Conner said.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirchner were attending church services between those hours and returned home shortly after 9 p.m., to find a screen had been torn off a bedroom and that the window was open.

The burglar or burglars had used matches and apparently had not turned on any lights, they told police. They checked to see if anything was missing, but everything seemed to be in its place.

Mrs. Kirchner said that some packages she had placed on a bed, which were to be shipped overseas, had been untouched.

Adenauer Wins German Control

HAMBURG, Ger., Nov. 2 — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's rightist coalition won absolute control of both houses of Parliament Sunday's Hamburg state elections, and Adenauer said Monday he plans to put 500,000 Germans in the planned European army.

His coalition, campaigning on a straight platform of support for Adenauer's policies, was empowered by the election victory to amend the constitution — if necessary — to rearm West Germany.

The Socialists, who had controlled Hamburg as a political stronghold since 1948 under the leadership of German-born, one-time American labor leader Mayor Max Brauer, were swept from power.

In a ballot battle billed as a confidence showdown on Adenauer's policy of rearmament and tight alliance with the West, the coalition won 82 seats in the Hamburg state legislature to 58 for the Socialists.

McLean Lions To Entertain Faculty

McLEAN — (Special) — Odell Lantooth, president of the McLean Lions Club, has announced plans of the Lions Club to entertain the members of the McLean faculty on Tuesday night. This is a regular project of the local Lions and it has not been carried out for two or more years.

The program is to be planned by Boyd Meador and he has secured the Berger High School boys' chorus for the event.

Lester Dysart and Amos Page are the food committee and they plan to serve a barbecue platter through the usual "chuck wagon" trimmings.

Four Main Sections

All agriculture department agencies will be regrouped into four main sections — federal-state relations; marketing and foreign agriculture; agricultural stabilization; and agricultural credit.

Benson announced the reorganization details on Oct. 13 and gave interested parties until Nov. 1 to comment. His decision, to move ahead came close on the expiration of the deadline for comments.

Moisture Slows Cotton Harvest

McLEAN — (Special) — A week-end check on the local cotton situation showed that there had been 369 bales ginned to date. S. R. Jones of the McLean Gin Co. estimates that about one third of the crop had been gathered and still expects to gin 900 bales this year.

The recent rains, while of vast benefit to the wheat and pastures, has slowed the cotton harvest and has damaged such bales about $5. Jones says that there are plenty of boll pickers available but that there will likely be a shortage after the cotton completely dries out.

Another point Jones made was the fact that this year's cotton staple is considerably longer than that in previous years. Jones said that this year's staple ran from 7-8 inch in length to 1-1 3/4 inches.

Nearly all of the cotton ginned to date has been placed in the Government Loan program since the market is about $5 per bale under the loan value.

Jones also buys grain sorghums and has shipped four cars of grain and is loading two more cars. Most of the grain is being sold on the market as it contains more than the 13 per cent moisture that is allowed when it is placed in the loan program. The present market for such grain is $2.10 per hundred and the loan value is $2.20 per hundred. Jones thinks that about ten cars of grain will be shipped this year.

Pampa Resident Dies In Amarillo

Funeral services are pending for H. P. Ransdell, 70, who died Sunday about 3 p. m. in the Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo. He had been a Pampa for 11 years and was employed as a night clerk for the Schneider Hotel.

Ransdell became ill Tuesday and was taken to the Amarillo hospital Friday by the Dueneck-Carmichael ambulance, a funeral home spokesman stated.

Before coming to Pampa, Ransdell had an insurance business in Tulsa, Okla. The only known survivor is a niece in San Antonio who had not yet been reached late this morning.

Scout Election Slated Tuesday

The three top posts in the Boy Scouts' Santa Fe District will go on the election ballot in a little more than 24 hours.

For the annual nomination and election is slated for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the city commission room of City Hall, according to Phil Pegues, district Scout executive.

Up are the positions of George Newberry, district chairman; Don Cain, district vice chairman; and E. Roy Smith, district commissioner.

A nominating committee has been working on a list of potential Scout officers for the last two months.

Methodist District Conference Slated

Pampa's First Methodist Church will host to a Methodist district conference Nov. 18. Pastors, delegates and their wives from 29 churches are expected to attend.

The meetings will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the church chapel under the direction of Pampa's Dr. J. E. Kirby, district superintendent. At noon, there will be a luncheon in the Fellowship Hall, sponsored by one of the local church groups.

congressional election year. The political punching has been painful to the President so far, but the campaign slugging for keeps really has not begun. It will be considerably rougher from here on out.

More trouble may be just around the corner, notably in New Jersey and California. A so-called safe Republican House seat and the governorship are at stake in a New Jersey election Tuesday. Loss of either would be a hard blow to the President. A normally safe Republican House seat will be in jeopardy next week in California.

Truce is Top Achievement

The Eisenhower administration's top achievement to date has been the truce which ended Korean war casualty lists. That was a must on the President's program. It also trimmed billions from the fiscal 1954 budget.

Republicans also can point with pride to the national unemployment figure — 1,162,000 in October. That was the lowest since the end of World War II.

The Federal Reserve Board has reported industrial production this autumn slightly higher than a year ago. The Labor Department reported, as of September, that the hourly wage of 14 million factory production workers was $1.78 this year against $1.69 in 1952. There are other indications that no depression is upon us.

The Wall Street Journal pointed out editorially that the widely advertised and debated steady rise in the cost of living index had amounted only to 1.6 index points since March, when it began to rise. The increase from a year ago to the present was even less, 1.1 points.

In 1949-50 the index went up 6.5 points. It soared 12.1 points between 1946 and 1947. The journal concluded that the cost of living index showed that a relatively stable dollar had been achieved. And that was one of Mr. Eisenhower's campaign promises.

Politicians Keeping Eyes On Elections

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 — UP — Trend-watching politicians Monday focused a spotlight of national interest on Tuesday's off-year elections in New Jersey, Virginia and New York.

New Jersey will elect a governor and a congressman, Virginia a governor and New York a mayor. Although local issues have played a major role in all of the hard-fought contests, political leaders from the White House down will study the results closely for a sign of things to come in the crucial battle for control of Congress in 1954.

Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Little Rock, Ark., more than 100 other cities also will elect mayors Tuesday but national issues in these contests, if present at all, have played an insignificant part.

On form, the Republicans should have an edge in both New Jersey and Virginia. Democrats in the Virginia and New York city contests. An upset in any of the races would doubtless be greeted by the victorious party as evidence that the national tide is flowing its way.

Democrats would particularly like to repeat in New Jersey the surprise victory they recently scored in Wisconsin's special congressional election. The Wisconsin seat had never before been won by a Democrat. The congressional vacancy at stake in New Jersey's Sixth district has been safely Republican since 1932. The candidates are Republican George L. Hetfield and Democrat Harrison A. Williams Jr.

New Jersey Republicans are confident that a recent blessing from President Eisenhower will help carry their gubernatorial candidate Paul L. Troast, to victory. The Democrats hope that their man, Robert B. Meyner, will profit from the disclosure that Troast sought clemency for Joseph Fay, imprisoned labor extortionist whose links with politicians have also been an issue in the New York City mayoralty race.

Democrat Robert F. Wagner Jr., is running in New York against Republican Harold Riegelman and Independent Liberal Rudolph Halliday. The big city has not elected a mayor on the straight Republican ticket in decades.

Although Virginia was in the Eisenhower column in 1952, it is normally Democratic by a wide margin in state elections. The very Republican candidate Ted Dalton has put up a strong race for governor against Democrat Thomas B. Stanley is regarded by GOP strategists as a hopeful sign that a real two-party system is emerging in the South. If Dalton should defy the term chief and win it would be a major feather in the GOP hat.

We believe that one truth is always consistent with another truth. We endeavor to be consistent with truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule, the Ten Commandments and the Declaration of Independence.

Should we, at any time, be inconsistent with these truths, we would appreciate anyone pointing out to us how we are inconsistent with these moral guides.

The United Fund

Back in 1888 in Denver 10 health and welfare agencies banded together to conduct a money-raising campaign, a drive that marked the birth of the united way of giving in this country.

The Denver agencies raised more money at less cost than all 10 had ever obtained in their individual campaigns. Since then this method of voluntarily contributing money to aid the sick and needy has been made even more effective. United community campaigns have taken a long step toward achieving the greatest good for the greatest number at the lowest cost.

In the past, Pampa agencies have solicited funds individually for their needs. However, for the first time in local history, directing heads of seven welfare organizations this year have agreed to conduct a united drive to obtain money for the needs of all.

First half of the drive will get under way tomorrow morning when more than 100 volunteer workers will meet in the Palm Room of City Hall to begin the job of personally contacting heads of business firms for donations. One week later — Nov. 10 — solicitors will begin visiting individuals in their homes in a general drive to complete the campaign.

A goal of $45,150 has been set to distribute among the seven participating agencies for their expenses during the ensuing year. These organizations include the Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Salvation Army, Milk Fund, United Service Organization and the Heart Fund.

There is no way to measure the value of the good done by a dollar contributed to the United Fund. Each agency performs a service to mankind that is calculated only by the joy and satisfaction received by helping our fellow men.

Campaign leaders have adopted a slogan, "Everyone Can Give at Least $1 a Month," for the drive. Most of us, however, can give more. Let's dig a little deeper in our pockets and put the campaign over with an appreciable surplus.

Hunting Accidents

The return of the hunting season increases the threat of firearms accidents which take about 2,000 lives annually in the United States, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's statisticians warn.

Activities most frequently responsible for firearms fatalities in hunting, the statisticians report, are:

1. Walking into the line of fire.
 2. The unintentional discharge of loaded guns when men carrying them trip or stumble, or handle the weapon carelessly.
 3. Hunters being mistaken for game.
- More hunters are killed by the guns of their own companions than by the members of other hunting parties. In the insurance company's experience, at least four out of every five of the hunters reported killed by others were shot by members of their own group.

It is pointed out, however, that firearms accidents in and about the home actually account for more fatalities than hunting. Many fatal mishaps also occur in outdoor activities other than hunting and in such indoor places as garages, barns, taverns and stores.

"Firearms are owned and used safely by many people," the statisticians observe, "but many others fail to exercise adequate precaution in handling and storing weapons. Too often firearms are left where young children can get at them. Many inexperienced hunters go afield without proper supervision, and even experienced people in moments of excitement or overconfidence forget the caution required in handling guns safely."

Nearly 90 per cent of all firearm accident fatalities are among males, teen-age boys frequently being the victims. In the insurance experience, the highest death rate from such accidents was at ages 15 through 19, with ages 10 through 14 following close behind.

Although the death rates during adult life were appreciably lower, every age period contributes to the toll of lives lost, it was noted.

An Ancient Idea

The October issue of Fortune carries a thoughtful article on the Interior Department's new electric power policy and things to criticize. One of the latter is that the policy is behind the times in its understanding of what private enterprise can do. It is based in part, on the old idea that government must undertake power projects which "are beyond the means of local, public or private enterprise." Yet the fact is that today private enterprise is both willing and able to build any needed project, no matter how large or costly.

The Fortune article also shows the grave fallacy in the preference clause in the law, under which public bodies and cooperatives must be favored in disposing of power from the federal systems. As it says, "Congress should consider whether the U. S. as a whole still has an obligation to subsidize certain power consumers and favor certain kinds of distribution systems."

Finally, Fortune points out that socialized power can cause power shortages. To quote the magazine again, "In the Pacific Northwest the formidable threat of federal monopoly has actually paralyzed most private company growth. The result has been that an area endowed with 35 per cent of the nation's hydro potential is the only one that suffers from an acute shortage of power."

Interior's present policy is a commendable step in the right direction. But it is only a beginning. Great and costly inequalities and injustices remain to be corrected.

BETTER JOBS

Communist-Socialist Propaganda in American Schools

I want to continue to comment and quote from the above named book by Verne P. Kaub. It is just off the press.

It is a much needed book by a great American. The reason that this book is so important is that most believers in public coercive schools do not know what is being taught on moral and political subjects in these schools.

Those who have given tax supported coercive schools careful study know that coercive collectivism is the only kind of ethics and morals that can be taught in these schools. The reason this is the case is because they are based on the theory that the end justifies the means and that might makes right.

One can learn what kind of a man the author of this book is by what he writes as to its dedication.

Dedication
"To all my teachers—

"Those noble Christian men and women who, during the years of the decades spanning the turn of the century, strove mightily to guide a reluctant scholar into the paths of learning; and, by precept and example, pointed the way to an upright Christian life, this little book is respectfully and lovingly dedicated. Not once did any one of them hint to me or my classmates that it is silly to believe in spiritual things because science has wiped out all reason to believe in any such foolish notions. Never from one of them did I get as much as a tiny suggestion that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution are sham documents, craftily drafted to cement the power of wealth over the poor and downtrodden of the nation. All these teachers have removed to places unknown to me, or, as is more likely in the case of the majority, have gone to their rewards. But they live on, in my heart."

The author has this to say in his introduction:

Wheels Within Wheels
"Thucydides, Greek historian who lived twenty-four centuries ago, observed that history repeats. All down through the centuries men have pondered this saying and repeated it so often that it may be called a cliché. Few have dared to disagree; millions have agreed, and lauded the wisdom of the man who first made the statement.

"The National Council of Education was one of the more important 'wheels within wheels' that went to make up that vast, complicated machine which is the National Education Assn. NCE was organized in 1880, growing out of a paper read by Thomas W. Bicknell before the Department of Superintendence of NEA. In the intervening years, until dissolution in 1948, NCE was a powerful factor in determining the policies and programs of NEA.

"When the Department of Superintendence was in session in Cleveland, O., in February, 1934, Willard E. Givens, then superintendent of schools at Oakland, Calif., brought in the report of the fourth of seven 'topic groups,' which he served as chairman. The group's report, 'Education for the New America,' Chairman Givens declared, 'comes directly from the thinking of more than one thousand members of the department.' Here are excerpts from the report, which seems to have set the pattern for the policies and programs of NEA since that time:

"In this critical transition period, great issues confront us, especially the issue of building an economy of plenty for all. . . . engineers assure us that the production system cannot be kept going unless we distribute a very large amount of purchasing power to all of the people. . . . But to achieve these things, many drastic changes must be made. A flying jumbo plane must be completely destroyed and all of us, including the 'owners,' must be subjected to a large degree of social control. A large section of our discussion group accepting the conclusions of distinguished students, maintain that in our fragile, interdependent society the credit agencies, the basic industries and utilities cannot be centrally planned and operated under private ownership. Hence, they will join in creating a swift, nationwide campaign of adult education which will support President Roosevelt in taking these over and operating them at full capacity as a unified national system in the interest of all the people. . . .

"Moreover, this kind of adult education is necessary if we are to take the next educational step, namely, the building of a great program of studies for the schools of the new America. One central core of that program will be a new social science which will be built directly from the factors and problems of our contemporary society: 'Corresponding changes must be made in the life that the young people will live in the school. The whole competitive regime and its scheme of rank-order marks and promotions will have to be replaced by a program of cooperation and self-cultivation. . . .

"In a planned economy we may expect improvement of education by reason of: (a) Continuous improvement within the social order whereby education shall have available better mores to transmit; (b) the operation of a planning organization or agency, which may consider a new and better social framework within which society may operate; and (c) the functioning of the school as an agency in the work of planning. Such a planning agency must necessarily consist of individuals made up from groups fully representative of the society and favorable to the modification of the established order toward more desirable goals. The machinery for such planning should be national in set-up and operation."

International Whirligig.. Tuesday Votes Will Provide A Test For Ike's Partisan Stand

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON Tomorrow's special elections in several politically strategic sections of the country — New York, New Jersey, Virginia and California, as well as in local contests elsewhere — will furnish a field test of President Eisenhower's recent retreat from partisan Republicanism rather than of his accomplishments since he entered the White House.

The results may influence the future attitude of professionally active GOP'ers toward him, including the party's leaders from top to bottom and the key legislative operators on Capitol Hill. It will determine whether the political hesitancy and reluctance will accept and support him as one of their own. As of today, they are extremely skeptical and standoffish. They do not regard him as one of their kind, in view of his seeming indifference to principles and loyalties so dear and so traditional to them.

LOCAL ISSUES INVOLVED—This reaction may be unfortunate and unfair to Eisenhower, because it is possible that professional active members of local issues, with the national and international scene still so clouded and uncertain, most of the office-seekers on both sides have preferred to stick to a discussion of strictly local questions and personalities.

NO RECORD FOR PLATFORM—Clinging to Ike's coat-tails is no guarantee of victory for a GOP entry because these appendages of the presidential apparel are flying in the wind. There is no record that would serve as a successful platform. And only the more hardy Democrats would dare to revive the New Deal and Fair Deal as current issues.

The voters may take Ike at his word, literally and politically, even though they know that a Republican sweep would be welcome at the White House.

PSYCHOLOGY OF BOSSES—But the party bosses will not be so charitable to the President. If tomorrow night's returns reflect a sharp recession from last November's high tides and hopes. Then they were congratulating themselves that the triumph of such a popular figure as Eisenhower would keep them in power for an indefinite period, possibly as long as they could.

WHY KIDNAPING DECLINED

(The Omaha World Herald)

Until the Greenlease case, kidnaping for ransom seemed almost to have vanished.

The great surge of such crimes came in the 1930's. The kidnapers were mostly old-time professional criminals. Many of them ex-bootleggers who had been put out of business by repeal.

The kidnapers were generally caught. In part this was due to the efficiency of the FBI, after the Lindbergh law was passed. In part it was due to the fact that local police departments, spurred on by public outrage, left no stone unturned in kidnap cases. When the odds against pulling a successful kidnaping mounted to something like 100 to 1, the mobsters turned to safer rackets—such as gambling, "business protection," and seizure of labor union locals, where they were relatively safe.

The truth is that if law enforcement is sufficiently vigorous, almost any type of crime can be virtually wiped out. For example, such diverse offenses as labor racketeering and drunken driving would become mighty unpopular if all concerned knew that punishment would be swift and certain.

PRIVATE PROPERTY ESSENTIAL TO FREEDOM (Christian Economics)

Private property is desirable. It is good. Otherwise there would be no reason for the Commandment "Thou shalt not steal."

The philosophy of freedom—individualism—seeks and promotes the widest possible ownership of private property. The objective is not only to relieve suffering and abolish poverty, but to promote education, culture and spiritual well-being.

Mr. McCarthy's estate consisted of $3,070,000 cash in banks; $4,530,789 in securities and other wealth to a total of $8,122,000. To a sister he left $500,000 and a safe in his house which held $386,000 in bonds and additional securities plus the income from the residuary estate for the rest of her life. She is now in her 70's. Poor Fish-hooks, after all his thrift, now finds himself in the custody of servants and too old to enjoy corned beef and cabbage and something with it at Dinny's.

The residuary legatee is the Catholic Charities of the archdiocese and that was why the Messrs. Fair Enough... Interesting Operations Of N. Congressman Told By Pegler

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

(Copyright, 1953, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I have news about Congressman Arthur G. Klein, of the 19th New York district, on the Lower East Side of New York.

This statesman's interesting career includes the commodification of a lobby-gov named Joseph Rieca on the government payroll in the guise of congressional clerk in which synthetic job Rieca did absolutely no work for his salary, as he testified before the New York State Crime Commission.

In that poignant little passage in the official record, Rieca said his $1,500 a year was "a gift" from the taxpayers by Klein's favor, and that he didn't know where he was supposed to work because he wasn't supposed to work.

Our moral for the day, however, is the Hon. Klein's experience as "special guardian" of John A. McCarthy, better known as Fish-hooks, a rich and horny-handed New York construction contractor who fell down stairs in his home and was declared incompetent by reason of his injuries.

Mr. McCarthy was called Fish-hooks because of a theory, possibly fallacious, that he had first taken a bath in a bathtub which made it painful for him to get out money to pick up a tab. It is to be hoped that he had a similar difficulty getting it out for the AF of L extortioners who run up the bill every yard of rock and soil excavated all the way from the Delaware water gap to the subways for the last 50 years.

At any rate, Mr. McCarthy still had a magnificent bundle of wealth when he hit on his head at the bottom of the stairs and lawyers came a-running to administer his affairs as guardians, custodians and the like of that.

By a sweet coincidence, Justice Morris Eder of the New York Court of Appeals, a political neighbor of Congressman Klein, selected him for "special guardian." He stated on March 12, 1951, and when Mr. Klein's term was done on April 26, six weeks later, Justice Eder allowed him $20,000 as his compensation. Mr. Klein actually put in for $25,000 for his toil and the wear and tear of his genius, but Justice Eder seems to have thought that that would be a little too raw and cut him back 20 per cent.

But the tragic chapter, in a few short and simple words, is that when Joseph or Holy Joe McKee, who was for a short time mayor of New York some years ago, appealed the case in the interests of the Catholic charities of the archdiocese, Mr. Klein was cut down to $5,000.

John J. Boyle, Mr. McKee's associate, did an artistic job on Congressman Klein and on some others, too, including George Trusk, who was the Communist Party's which is said to be investigating both Republican and Democratic larceny in the harness-racket racket, the union "welfare" insurance racket, and the union rackets themselves. Mr. Trusk put in for $110,000, was allowed $75,000 by the court and, like Mr. Klein, had his ears bobbed by the appellate division. He came out of it with $25,000.

Two psychiatrists were cut from $3,500 to $1,500 and from $2,500 to $1,000, respectively, and one of the documents says of the $3,500 doctor, marked down to $1,500, that "on the basis of three full days of services he received compensation at the rate of $1,167" before the job. As to the other learned doc, the same document said he was awarded compensation at the rate of $1,250 a day before the job.

As to Mr. Klein, the brief said "The allowance amounts to approximately $1,540 a day" before the reduction, and this at a time when Congress was in session. However, it appeared that he did no work on the case on seven particular days and on some other days did less than a full day's toil.

Mr. McCarthy's estate consisted of $3,070,000 cash in banks; $4,530,789 in securities and other wealth to a total of $8,122,000. To a sister he left $500,000 and a safe in his house which held $386,000 in bonds and additional securities plus the income from the residuary estate for the rest of her life. She is now in her 70's. Poor Fish-hooks, after all his thrift, now finds himself in the custody of servants and too old to enjoy corned beef and cabbage and something with it at Dinny's.

The residuary legatee is the Catholic Charities of the archdiocese and that was why the Messrs. Holy Joe and Boyle got into the act, which turned out to be a slaughter of lawyers and a dramatic lesson in the careful selection and generous compensation of lawyers to watch over rich old parties who fall to watch their step on the cello stairs.

Ft. Worth Shows New '54 Styles

By ANNE LEE
 FORT WORTH, Nov. 2 (UP)—Two former European models lent a Continental flavor to the screening of prophetic fashions for spring 1954 at the capacity-packed Fort Worth Fashion Market this week.
 Brunette and beautiful Hedy McGuire admitted modeling for buyers representing over 800 Southwest specialty stores proved a welcome change from acting as a human "pincushion," which she was accustomed to doing for European fashion heads such as Christian Dior and Jacques Fath. Those styles were often "pinned on," recalled the former Casablanca model who now calls Fort Worth home.
 But red-haired show stopper Christel Schack contended that there was really little difference in presenting fashions to Southwest spectators and the Berlin courtier houses. Christel, Miss Germany for 1953, now hails from Long Beach, Calif. She came to the United States to compete in the recent "Miss Universe" contest.
 The two professional clothes horses, along with a bevy of other beautiful models, kept fashion runways a-spark with frocks, suits, coats, sportswear and millinery tagged by the country's foremost style houses during the week-long showings, the first under the name of the Fort Worth Fashion Market.
 The girls noted the long-range showing maintained the trend toward the slimmed down look—but noticeably stripped of its former sheath appearance.
 Also written into the fashion rule-book for spring were the fine imported silks, linens and cottons so dear to a lady's heart.
 Color favorites point to the pinks, beiges, grays and navys—all kind to the complexion and often used in striking contrast.
 The flattering bolero look turned up often. Full skirted styles for the junior set brought much applause.
 The six style lines of millinery left little doubt that millinery will top her spring costume with small, decorative creations—all hair-bingers of the spring season in soft pastels and popular white with flower accents.
 As a special feature of the mart, a hospitality suite was maintained for the use of visiting stylists at the concentration of buyers.
 The combination of the Fort Worth market with that at Dallas represents the largest style mart in the country, bringing to the watchful Southwest the latest in fine wearables for around-the-clock living.

GRACE FRIEND
 By MURIEL LAWRENCE
 A few weeks ago, a mother and teenage daughter came to see me. For some time, it appeared that they had been embattled in a conflict of wills.
 Said the mother, "Go on. Tell Mrs. Lawrence how much money you spent last week. Tell her that you didn't get home until 2 o'clock this morning."
 After I had listened for a while, I gave them the address of an agency that employs people who have been especially educated to arbitrate the conflicts of other people.
 I wish I had not had to refer them to anyone, no matter how well trained. I wish I could have made sense just by saying, "Let me suggest that you consult the will of God in your problem. There you will find the answer to these attempts to invade each other's privacy and rest."
 I did not say this. I knew that any mention of the will of God would have overwhelmed my callers with great embarrassment, even though I had hastened to reassure them that I meant no harm and really intended to say "the will of love."
 It is a pity that so many of us suffer from this curious prejudice against any mention of the will of God outside of church pulpits and cemeteries.
 It suggests that if we have any interest in it at all, we'd rather keep it a Sunday special. It implies that we are perhaps a little too sure that our everyday wills are so beneficent that we can afford to dispense with any inquiry into God's until next Sunday morning. It hints that we actually believe our wills are never angry, fearful of suspicious wills and must never be protested.
 If this is true, it follows that we do not see it as our responsibility to give Ann or Jimmy any demonstration of how and when the human will surrenders to God's.
 How can we expect them to know how and when to surrender their will, under such circumstances, beats me.
 Perhaps this attitude in us accounts for some of our nervous exhaustion. I can think of nothing that must be quite so burdensome as trying to make the human will look divine.
 Hard as such an effort must be

RUTH MILLET

"We've lived in this town a year," a woman writes, "and so far I haven't been able to find one real friend. How can a woman of 50 go about finding friends in a new place?"
 It may be that what you need is to quite thinking in terms of "finding" friends, and to start thinking in terms of "making" friends.
 You don't often just find friends waiting around to jump at the chance of getting to know you better.
 You usually make friends by showing genuine interest in those you meet casually, by seeing and acting upon opportunities to do things for others at the very moment when they need a helping hand. Being generous with your talents and abilities shows your ability to willingly take on jobs that need to be done. They often go begging simply because they take time and energy.
 Start thinking and acting along those lines, and one day it will dawn on you that when you offered to care for a neighbor's children so that she could go to the hospital with a relative, you took the first step toward friendship.
 You get out and do things for and with others. You try to be helpful and useful. You accept the help of others graciously.
 And one day you realize that you have friends who are interested in you just as you are interested in them.
 It is difficult to "find" friends, but it isn't at all hard to make friends if you are friendly and helpful toward those who are only acquaintances.
 Are there "low bridges" in your basement? Tack several lengths of string, knotted at the lower end, to the ceiling a few steps ahead of the obstruction. Make them just long enough to brush your forehead. They'll scare you, but save many bumps and bruises.
 Cut flower stems on a slant to keep an ample supply of water flowing into the stalk and up to the blossom.
 On us, I must say my sympathy is with the children who live in such a rarefied atmosphere. No wonder their emancipation from childhood is so tough on everyone. No wonder their breaks for liberty are corroded with defiance, guilt and fear. No wonder they often make an irresponsible hash of liberty. Dependence upon the parenthood of God is of great support to children whose needs require them to withdraw from their dependence upon us. We don't seem to teach it as we should.

About all there is to making this tasty meat loaf is measuring ingredients and mixing them together thoroughly in one large bowl, but the result is as delectable a meat dish as if you had spent much more time in preparation. Shredded raw carrots add unusual color and flavor to the loaf and evaporated milk keeps it moist—a necessity for a good meat loaf.
 And besides being easy to make and having an "easy to take" taste, meat loaf has the third and important advantage of being easy on the budget—it's a real three way winner.
Meat Loaf
 2 pounds ground beef
 1 pound ground pork
 2 cups bread crumbs
 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup shredded raw carrot
 1 tablespoon salt
 1 egg
 1 cup evaporated milk
 1 teaspoon pepper
 Place all ingredients in a large bowl and mix together thoroughly. Pack lightly into a loaf pan 10 1/2 x 5 1/2 x 3 1/2 inches. Bake in moderate oven (350 F.) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Makes 8 servings.
Miss Hutchison Is Honored With Party
 WHEELER — (Special) — A farewell party was given in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Douthett recently in honor of Miss Lucille Hutchison, who is being transferred to Carlsbad, N.M.
 After gifts were presented to the honoree, cake and coffee were served to Mrs. Doyle Greenhouse, Clarence Robison, Doris Hutchison, A. D. Speck, Ernest Dyer, Bob Holdeman, Maurice Burgess, Burdella Genthe, and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hibbitts.
 That last-key situation may confront you some one of these days. Why not select an out-of-the-way nook or cranny in your garage, hide an extra key there? It's well worth the small expense of having a key made.

Prairie Village HD Club Meets

The Prairie Village Home Demonstration Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Raymond Lash, 1117 Huff Road for the purpose of reorganization. Officers elected were Mrs. J. M. Hahn, president; Mrs. C. Wayne Briester, vice president and Council delegate; Mrs. Clyde Tidwell, secretary treasurer; Mrs. Richard S. Aubyns, recreation committee chairman and Mrs. Billy Hahn, reporter. Other club members are Mmes. B. E. Jones, Bob Cllett, George Phillips, Raymond Lash, and Eryle Dean Briester.
 Plans were made to exchange secret pal gifts. The club will meet with the Home Demonstration Nov. 5 in the home of Mrs. Clyde Tidwell.
Masquerade Party
 Mr. and Mrs. John Schunbaum, 720 Sloan, entertained with a Halloween party in their home recently. The guests were entertained with stunts games with prizes for the winners. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Daugherty and Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Hubbard won costume prizes. Refreshments of popcorn balls, caramel apples, doughnuts and coffee were served.
 Attending were Messrs. A. and Mmes. A. J. Winegart and children, Sonny, Richard and Joan, Raymond Boyd, and son, Johnny; Lewis Eggs, and children, Barbara and Andy; Harold Dougherty, Brooks Hubbard, and daughter, Linda; Mrs. Vivian Halmon and son, Bobby, Calvin Mayo, Fred-Baley, the host and hostess, and their children, Penny, Gwendolyn and Vinita.
 Plan for one of those "What will we do, Mommy? It's raining outside," afternoons. Save old milk containers, wash thoroughly, and store away. They're ideal material for making houses, boats, cars and what-have-you. Ask any youngster.
 Long, narrow-necked vases may be easily cleaned with a long-handled bottle brush.

Thursday Review Club Meets

WHEELER — (Special) — The Thursday Review Club met in the home of Mrs. Carroll Pettit with Mrs. Thurman Rives assisting with hostess duties.
 The program was on mental health and Miss Wilma Hoxley, program leader, had an interesting moving picture on that subject. After the program was concluded the members repeated the club collect.
 Sandwiches, pumpkin tarts and coffee were served. Favors were miniature jack-o-lanterns filled with candy.
 Members present were Mmes. Earl Barnes, Lowell Farmer, Roy Ford, Glenna and Wilma, Helen Robert Holdeman, R. J. Holt, J. C. Howell, Albert Marshall, R. W. McNeil, Carroll Pendleton, Lowell Pendleton, Cecil Richardson Jr., N. D. Ware Jr., Harvey Wright, and associate members Mmes. Dorothy Rushing, Ray Siegmund, Joe Weatherly and Neva Harrison. Guests included Mrs. Willard Harvell of Shamrock and Mrs. Carroll Killingsworth of Brisbane.
 Cooking dinner on top of the range instead of in the oven is a cooler way to prepare food in the summertime.
 Save yourself endless flopping. Tie baby's rattle and soft, rubber doll to his high chair with lengths of cotton string. He'll drop them as often, but you won't have to reach so far to retrieve them.

REMOVES MILDEW
 Dear Grace Friend
 I have read your column ever since I came here nearly two years ago and I enjoy it very much. You give such wise council and help.
 Could you tell me how to safely remove mildew from a cotton embroidered scarf? The embroidery is in colors.
 M. L.
 A small amount of starch and two tablespoons of bleach diluted in a gallon of water will remove mildew. Let the scarf soak in this mixture for an hour, then wash. The solution will not harm the colors in the scarf since the amount of bleach is so small. Be sure to use the right proportions.
CHINA MENDED
 Dear Miss Friend
 Is there a place where broken china can be mended?
 I will appreciate it very much if you can help me with this.
 Mrs. L.
 I don't know of such a place, however if any of my readers do and care to write me, I will see that you receive the information.

Drouth Effects Lingering Over Southwestern Areas

By ELDON CORRILL, United Press Staff Correspondent

The great Southwest drouth appeared broken in some sections and eased in others Monday, but its effects lingered on.

Giant pecan trees that had lived for 300 years died and died before the rains came. They shook the earth as they thundered to the ground along dusty beds of once-full streams.

Some farmers and ranchers who were out of debt a few years ago now have mortgages on their property as drought mortgages.

Stock herds have been reduced, bank balances depleted and the economy of an entire region dealt a heavy blow.

Still Need Good Luck

But with good luck and plenty of rain, it looked Monday like the situation may become normal again soon.

An automobile dealer in the Texas Panhandle, where recent rains brought a great revitalization, looked at the lush growth of winter wheat and said:

"I sold only a few vehicles this past summer, but if that wheat makes out as good as it looks now, I can sell every car and truck I can get my hands on next year."

Cattlemen were hanging on to what stock they had left in most cases, and some were cautiously buying again, planning to put the cattle out on the greened-up ranges and on the wheat acreage. The buying pushed the price of cattle in the Panhandle area a little higher.

Prices generally jumped $1 to $2 in Southwest cattle markets last week.

Retail Sales Up Slightly

Retail sales, a key to economic conditions, were reported up slightly in September, last month of completion.

Member banks in the Dallas federal reserve district reported total resources of $3,222,000,000, a record high for all months.

And at Goodwell, Okla., the president of Panhandle Agricultural and Mechanical College said the rains in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles have definitely brought the area out of its two-year drouth.

The college president, Dr. Marvin McKee, remarked that the drouth ended without resulting in the sandstorms and wholesale "grapes of wrath" evacuation that followed the dire Dust Bowl days of the 1930's.

He said optimism was spreading throughout the twin Panhandles—and also noted higher cattle prices.

McKee cautioned that more rain was needed to keep the "boom" going. Some areas still are suffering greatly from drouth.

But the heart of the billion-dollar disaster region was softened by heavy rains late last month, and hopes of easier days soared.

Trading Increases

Car dealers and appliance dealers were among the first to cash in on the new feeling. One automobile agency said he had made more trades in the past few days than in all the summer months, when most persons were hanging on to their money and keeping their eyes peeled for rain clouds.

A Baptist minister at Spearman, Tex., was enthusiastic again about plans for an education building to be added to the church property. Spearman was doubly happy. About the time the rains came, two wildcat gas wells came in, hiking the prices for oil leases.

The amount of land available for rent decreased sharply. In most areas, there was no farm for sale. And, although some irreplaceable trees were lost and there were many personal cases of economic tragedy, the drouth also brought some improvements. Cities in the drouth area have gotten together to plan water storage facilities and many new water wells have been drilled.

If the 1954 wheat crop comes through, the Panhandle for one will be "alive" again and ready to go,

Old Waterways Are Center Of World History

By PHIL NEWSOM, United Press Foreign Analyst

Since the dawn of history, much of the story of mankind has been written along the banks of the world's great rivers.

Today, three world disputes center on control of three ancient waterways.

This week the United Nations take up again the Arab-Israeli dispute, part of which revolves around control of the Jordan river and the subsequent benefits to be gained from hydro-electric and irrigation projects.

Soon the first parliamentary elections will be held in the Sudan which in the next three years must make up its mind whether it will be independent or linked with Egypt or Britain. At stake is control of the Nile, which rises in the Sudan but is Egypt's life line.

Negotiate on India

In the next few weeks, India and Pakistan will try again to reach agreement on the future of Kashmir. At stake is control of the Indus River upon which Pakistan must depend not only for power but for irrigation of the Punjab.

No post ever sang of the Punjab, spreading out through malaria-ridden marshes and finally emptying disconsolately into the Dead Sea, 1,300 feet below sea level.

The Jordan is only 230 miles long, and compared to the Nile or Indus, never can produce much in the way of irrigation or water power.

Cut Off Aid

Last week the United States cut off aid to Israel because of Israeli insistence on continuing a hydro-electric project which Syria protested as a threat to world peace. Aid was restored when the Jews agreed to halt work on the project while the UN discussed it.

The value of turning the Jordan into hydro-electric and irrigation projects is not contested. What is contested is who shall benefit. The United States is pushing a plan which would be of benefit to Jordan and Syria as well as Israeli. None of the states involved can finance the project alone. It must be done with United States money. The question is can the United States bring enough pressure on the long-standing enemies to force agreement which might at last lead to the end of the whole Arab-Israeli fight.

Versatile Dick Powell Tells Role Of Movieland Producer

By VERNON SCOTT, HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 2 —UP—

Dick Powell today answered the frequently asked questions of visitors to movieland—"what in heck does a producer have to do with making a movie?"

Powell, who's been around Hollywood since 1932, is in a position to know. In addition to his acting he has worked as writer, director and producer.

"A producer is the poor soul who goes about getting a picture started. And you have no idea what a job that can be. I'm in the middle of producing two pictures for RKO right now," he said.

"The producer has to have a property to begin with (a story)," he added.

"Then it's his responsibility to see that it is worked into shape to be filmed. He has to get the stars and make the decisions on where the picture will be made, how long it should take, how much money it will cost and all the legal complications that have to do with getting the cameras rolling."

"In other words, before a movie rolls everything has to be set up in advance so the director and actors will know what they're doing," he explained.

"And sometimes that can be just plain murder. It's taken four months so far to prepare the musical and outdoor picture I'm working on now."

"Once everything is all set up, the director takes over and the producer hasn't got anything to do but sit on his hands and hope for the best. The producer is helpless to do anything about a film once it gets underway."

"Sure, he can see the rushes and maybe make a few suggestions, but that's all. When the director is through he hands the producer his idea of the finished version. And after that the producer can do the editing."

"Powell shook his head and added he'd much rather direct than produce."

One of the most versatile men in the business, the wavy-haired jack of all movie trades admitted he's looking for new worlds to conquer. Thus far he's directed and produced for movies, radio and television and acted in everything from musicals to cloak and dagger dramas. His latest stint is producing and directing television's Four Star Playhouse in conjunction with Charles Boyer and David Niven. He also directed the stage play "The Caine Mutiny Court" Martini which stars Henry Fonda, Lloyd Nolan and John Hodiak.

"I guess the thing I want to do most is direct my wife (June Allyson) in a picture, but I'm waiting for the right story. And if you think a producer has problems, you ought to be around the house when June asks when we're going to do a movie together!" Powell grinned.

Local Salvation Army Never Refuses Aid To The Needy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Date for Pampa's United Fund advance drive is Tuesday, while the main campaign opens Nov. 16. Following is the sixth of a series on the seven organizations to receive funds from the drive.)

Another organization which will benefit from the coming United Fund drive is the Salvation Army.

"Our main purpose is religious rather than welfare," stated Capt. William Hough, head of Pampa's post. However, the Salvation Army never turns anyone away and has many welfare services.

One of these services is its transient relief program. If a man, woman or child arrives in Pampa without money, the Army feeds him, clothes him and provides him with a night's lodging.

The family relief program offers practically the same services for families stranded in Pampa. If medical attention is needed, the Army sees they get it. This program also includes families living in Pampa less than six months. They are given grocery orders, money for rent and the father is aided in finding employment.

Other than welfare services, the Salvation Army offers spiritual counseling to anyone in need of it and to people in trouble who have no church affiliation. It also issues a weekly publication, sends flowers to the sick, holds many religious services during the week, and conducts funerals for non-church members. It also sends unwed prospective mothers to a Salvation Army hospital in San Antonio where they receive free care for three months.

Under its character building program, the Army has many youth activities. Each summer vacation Bible camps are held to which the Army also sends underprivileged children. A six-year Bible course is sponsored for young people 13 years old and over and scholarships are available for Salvation Army trainees.

Ninety per cent of the proceeds the Salvation Army received from the United Fund drive will be used in Pampa. Ten per cent will go to the state organization, which, in turn, will send 1 per cent of that amount to the national organization.

Among other Salvation Army workers, Captain Hough is aided by his wife, who holds the same rank as he.

Ezio Pinza Stars With TV Children

By JACK GAVER, NEW YORK, Nov. 2 —UP—

Fortunately, Ezio Pinza likes children. There are eight of them on his NBC television program.

"But how would you like to have eight children in your own home?" the opera star was asked.

"Would be fine," he replied, "if they were as nice as the family they give Bonino."

"Bonino is both the name of the program and each Saturday night, and the character played by Pinza. He is right at home in the role playing an opera and concert singer, but he has never in real life had the problems of Bonino.

Cares for Children

Bonino is a widower who, when the series began, was in the position of being an absentee father, spending only a few days out of a year at home because his engagements kept him on the go. He is made to realize the extent of his neglect of the children and settles down for a time.

"In real life I am never away from my wife and children for long periods," Pinza explained. "My concert dates are broken up so I don't become a stranger at home. And when I want to Hollywood the family went along and we made a home there."

There are three children in the Pinza home at Stamford, Conn., ranging from 12 to three years.

Children Watch Program

"They all watch the programs on the set at home," the singer said. "The older boy and girl don't have much to say about it. The little girl is the one with comments. She wants to know who all those kids are they see on me with."

The two oldest Boninos are Conrad Janis and Lenka Peterson, both well known actors on the stage. Janis also is a musician and has his own small jazz combination that is in good demand around town.

Versatile Phones

VIENNA, Nov. 2 —UP—

Vien's versatile telephone service, which gives subscribers everything from fairy tales to recipes at the dial of a number, added a new gimmick Monday.

By dialing R-39-5, the bored housewife can obtain 15 word-twisting puzzles each month. If she can answer 15 of them correctly, she wins a lottery ticket.

Other services offered by the telephone company include weather and ski reports, sports pool results, stock exchange quotations and suggestions for excursions.

Patriotic Prank

DALLAS, Nov. 3 —UP—

It was a star-spangled haloween at the home of city Fireman Leroy Cole.

Franksers smashed bottles of red paint against the walls of his house early Sunday and tossed a bottle of blue paint against the roof. Cole turned white when he discovered the damage.
