

Five killed and four injured in bridge collapse

ANTWERP, Ohio (AP) — Four cars drove off a collapsed bridge one after another, toppling into a dry drainage ditch with a sound "just like dynamite" and leaving five people dead and four others injured, authorities said.

The cars were left stacked on top of each other where they crashed about 9:30 p.m. Sunday, while state and federal officials continued their investigation, the Ohio Highway Patrol said.

"We believe the cars just went through the bridge, one by one, on top of each other," said Jerry Flaugh, 42, Paulding County Chief Sheriff's deputy.

Gertrude Rister, whose house is about 50 yards from the county bridge, said she heard the cars topple off within a few minutes of each other and also heard cries for help.

"Every time one went in, it sounded like a big blast, just like dynamite," she said.

Mrs. Rister, 70, said she lives alone and that an unidentified passerby stopped and called police.

"I was getting ready to call and a woman came to my door," Mrs. Rister said. "She was driving by and she wanted to call, so I let her do the calling. She said she had seen that the bridge was out and got out of her car and heard people screaming and calling for help."

The bridge, about three miles east of Antwerp near the Ohio-Indiana border, was on County Road 180, a generally straight, black-topped, two-lane road. Antwerp is about 60 miles southwest of Toledo.

Highway Patrolman Daniel Hardeman said the 30-foot bridge may have crumbled before the cars drove onto it.

"It's speculation right now," he said. "But they believe that it had collapsed and the cars drove into it."

All four cars toppled within a span of about 15 minutes, dropping about 20 feet, Flaugh said. Three of the cars were headed east and one west, and emergency crews had to use crowbars to pry open doors and windows to free the injured.

A 10-foot asphalt section dangled above the cars and officials feared it too would drop.

The deaths were caused by head and internal injuries, Flaugh said.

There was no water in the 10-foot-wide ravine, known locally as Zuber Ditch. During periods of high water, the ditch drains into the Maumee River, about a mile to the south.

A 55 mph speed limit was posted on the road and there were no skid marks leading into the ravine, Flaugh said. Although there was about an inch of snow on the ground, the road was dry.

Paulding County Engineer Dan Stouffer said he had no idea what caused the collapse.

Stouffer said the bridge was about 10 years old and had been inspected annually.

Hardeman identified the dead as Samuel E. Smith, 75, of Paulding; Glendale Glass, 56, and his wife, Rosemary, 52, of Antwerp; Louise Underwood, no age available, of Antwerp; and Janice Goshia, no age available, of Defiance.

Elevator to be installed in museum

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Gray County Commissioners Friday signed a contract with a Pampa architectural firm to draw up specifications for the elevator to be installed at the White Deer Land Museum.

The contract calls for Johnson & Riemer, Inc., of Pampa to draw up specifications and inspect the construction of the elevator, according to County Judge Carl Kennedy, who presides over the court.

The elevator is the gift of Louise Bowers Slenz of Pampa in memory of deceased members of her family. The contract will use $6,000 of the $70,000 Slenz has pledged to the project.

Commissioners also tentatively named three county residents to the Salary Grievance Committee, which hears grievances from county employees. The three named were LaJuana Quarles, Keith Robertson and Erie Ray Jones. Kennedy said they will be asked if they will serve on the committee, as they were chosen from 1982 Grand Jury lists and did not know they were in the running.

The commissioners also approved development of a residential subdivision two miles west of Price Road in the northwest corner of the county. Royse Acres, developed by Kenneth and James Royse, will contain one-family homes and spaces for mobile homes.

In connection with the approval of the subdivision, commissioners also voted to change the name of a county road that runs through it. It will be renamed Royse Road from the Amarillo Highway and continuing to its north terminal point.

Commissioners also voted to become a member of a federal job training consortium that replaced the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA), now renamed the Job Training Partnership Act.

The court tabled a request from the new constable of Precinct 3, Robert Payne, to buy a mobile-base radio. Payne presented two price quotes for the radio, which he says will help him keep in contact with Department of Public Safety troopers and area police departments.

He also told the court he will take a law enforcement certification course in Amarillo, which will run eight hours a day for eight weeks and cost $80. Payne did not ask the county to pay for it, he said, but wanted them to be aware of it. He also asked the commissioners for a salary, to help with expenses.

Commissioners voted to close all misdeemeanor cases dated prior to 1980 at the request of County Attorney Robert McPherson. McPherson told the commissioners he wanted to "get his department out of the collection business." The cases in question date back to 1969, McPherson said, and it costs his office more money to try to find people who owe money on fines than the fines are worth.

All the money already paid on the fines in the cases in question will now be transferred to current county accounts, Kennedy said. Until now, the county could not touch the money because the cases were still officially open. However, McPherson said, if any of the people involved ever come back into the county, every effort will be made to recover the lost money.

Commissioners also discussed the installation of an emergency generator at Perry Lefors Airport with two members of the airport board, but took no action on the matter.

The court also named Ann Kirksey of Pampa to the county Child Welfare Board to replace Wes Langham, who moved away from Pampa.

Social Security bailout

Something for everyone to hate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drafters of a $169 billion plan to rescue Social Security concede it has something for almost everyone to dislike, but they say the reluctant support of President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. should help it pass Congress.

Organizations representing retired people, government workers and small business already have served notice they will try to pressure Congress to change or drop the package, which would affect nearly all taxpayers and retirees, some as early as this summer. It includes a speed-up in scheduled increases in the payroll tax, taxing benefits received by upper- and middle-income retirees, a one-time six-month delay in this July's cost-of-living increase and an expansion of Social Security coverage to new federal employees beginning in 1984.

In addition to generating $169 billion in new revenues and savings over the next seven years, experts said that, barring severe economic conditions, the compromise also would help keep the Social Security system in the black for at least 50 years.

The package was approved by the Social Security reform commission on a 12-3 vote Saturday night following days of negotiations with White House officials.

Reagan and O'Neill, D-Mass., who had communicated only through intermediaries, publicly endorsed the deal after the commission vote.

But, as the president noted, he, O'Neill and other congressional leaders were backing the plan because they saw it as the best deal that could be struck on the politically sensitive issue.

Police who shot down Jim Grandstaff are still on the Borger force

(Ed. note: Cowboy Jim Grandstaff, 31, was shot and killed in front of his north camp home on the 6666 Ranch on Aug. 11, 1981. Borger police chased a fleeing man east from Borger on Texas 152. The fugitive's car crashed onto the ranch, where officers lost sight of him. Grandstaff drove the few hundred yards from his house to investigate, and was cut down by police gunfire. No one has ever admitted shooting the ranch worker — and no one ever apologized to his widow. The cowboy's wife, Sharon, and his family hired "Racehorse" Haynes and filed a $3 million lawsuit against the police and others. Trial for the suit is pending in federal court in Amarillo. Sworn testimony on file in the lawsuit and investigators' reports following the shooting provided most of the information for this series.)

BORGER — The officer who allegedly shot cowboy Jim Grandstaff in the back and killed him is still working for the Borger Police Department.

His name is John Robert Alonzo. Another officer, John Wayne Turner, who was also involved in the Borger officers' shooting episode that night, was 19 years old, on his first night on the job as a Borger police officer and still had no uniform. About five hours into his first night as a policeman, he was pumping rounds out of a military-type rifle at a human target, Lonnie Cox.

Another officer who fired shots at an innocent man that night in 1981 was a two-month veteran of the Borger force.

And during the shootout which claimed Grandstaff's life, the Borger Police Department had no supervisors on duty.

Nobody ever said they were sorry

Four Borger patrolmen fired bullets at Jim Grandstaff that night, two more Borger patrolmen and a Carson County deputy sheriff saw the cowboy fall and die.

The man identified in federal court testimony as Grandstaff's killer is John Robert Alonzo, a Borger policeman who turned 23 years old last week.

Texas Ranger Jim Gillespie, who conducted the investigation into Grandstaff's death, testified it was Alonzo who fired the fatal shot into Grandstaff's back.

In his deposition under questioning by lawyers for the estate and family of Grandstaff, Alonzo denied shooting Grandstaff.

"I did not shoot Grandstaff. I don't know who did," Alonzo said.

But while Alonzo denied shooting the cowboy, he said he did shoot at Grandstaff's pickup truck and rear tire "five times."

Lawyers for Jim Grandstaff's family say it was a case of heavily-armed, inexperienced and young Borger police officers out to find a man who allegedly said he was "out tonight to kill a cop," which set off events leading to the killing of an innocent 6666 ranch worker and the wounding of a desperado.

Alonzo was born Jan. 12, 1960, and grew up in Amarillo. He graduated from Caprock High School there in 1978. Alonzo attended Amarillo College and worked as a patrolman in Dumas before going to work at the Borger Police Department on Dec. 27, 1980, a little more than seven months before the fatal shooting.

He said he bought his personal police weapon, an AR-15 rifle, at a Furr's supermarket. An AR-15 is a semiautomatic, rather than fully-automatic, version of the M-16, the same rifle used by U.S. soldiers in Vietnam.

John Wayne Turner, now 20, was 19 at the time of the Grandstaff killing.

Turner went to work at the Borger Police Department at 11 p.m. Aug. 10, about five hours before Grandstaff died. He was so new to the job he still had been assigned no uniform and thus wore street clothes his first night on the job.

Turner grew up in Amarillo, Dumas and Sunray. His father, Wayne Turner, is Sunray's police chief.

Before his first night as a Borger cop was over, Turner had AMARILLO — Texas Ranger Jim Gillespie of Dumas, who investigated the shooting of Jim Grandstaff, testified in a deposition filed in federal court here that the fatal shot which killed Grandstaff was fired by Borger policeman John Robert Alonzo.

Gillespie was called into the investigation by Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed.

Gillespie was notified of the shooting in Dumas about 8 a.m. the day Grandstaff was killed. He said he arrived at the Borger Police Department about 9 a.m., about four hours after Grandstaff died.

The cowboy's body had already been embalmed at a Borger funeral home; one of the vehicles involved had been towed away; a Borger detective was processing physical evidence; and Borger police were asking the questions and controlling the investigation of their own actions when Gillespie arrived.

Gillespie said Borger police were being questioned about the shooting by Borger Police Chief Arthur Waight in Waight's office.

The Texas Ranger said he "sat in" on the questioning. He said that when he later drove out to the 6666 Ranch,

Unidentified Borger police officers and sheriff's deputies gather around Lonnie Cox's pickup, a short time after police wounded the fugitive Cox and killed innocent cowboy Jim Grandstaff in the summer of 1981.

After being chased by police, Cox crashed his pickup on the Four 6s Ranch, just a few hundred yards away from Grandstaff's ranch home. Shots between Cox and police were exchanged. When Grandstaff went to investigate the commotion on his property, he was gunned down in a hail of police bullets. (Photo by Don Rice courtesy of the Borger News Herald)

Gray county commissioners postpone action on ambulance rate hike

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
 Staff Writer

The Gray County Commissioners Court Friday postponed any action on the user-fee hike request by Pampa Medical Services (PMS) the area's six-month-old, private, non-profit ambulance service until its next meeting on February 1.

PMS is proposing a $10 hike in the basic transport fee, from $75 to $85, a $1 hike in the mileage charge, to $2.50, and similar hikes in charges for other life support services offered by PMS, ranging from less than 10 percent to 40 percent.

According to Joe Zillmer, PMS president, the contract between PMS and the county stipulates that if no action is taken on a rate increase request within 30 days, the increase goes into effect automatically. Zillmer had given the city and county 60 days from the original November 15 request date, which ran out on January 15.

However, when the Pampa city commissioners postponed action at their meeting last Tuesday, Zillmer gave both the city and county another extension, until February 1, to take action on the request.

At Friday's meeting, John Smith, a Miami resident, requested that the commissioners and PMS examine PMS policy before granting a rate hike. Smith cited an incident in Miami, on December 7, when a man was killed by a Sante Fe freight train at the Birge Street crossing.

Smith said PMS employees responded to a call at the scene of the accident, and determined that they should not attempt to resuscitate the victim, Eldon Flowers, who was killed instantly. The PMS crew then returned to Pampa, being available for a call on the way in from Miami. According to Smith, Flowers' body lay on the ground for an hour and a half before funeral home employees arrived to remove the body, but that the Roberts County Justice of the Peace Mildred Cunningham arrived shortly after the PMS crew had left. He contends that PMS employees should have stayed until the J.P. had pronounced Flowers dead, and then taken his body to Pampa, where the funeral home was located.

Zillmer told Smith that at the meeting that PMS's primary purpose is to transport the critically ill or alive, and that it was more important to have the crew on duty available for another emergency call where they might save a life.

According to Doug Carmichael of Carmichael-Whalley Funeral Directors, PMS could not have moved the body without first getting the J.P.'s permission. With her permission, a PMS ambulance could have transported the body to the funeral home in Pampa.

Carmichael said there are morticians rules that prohibit anyone but a licensed funeral director from removing a dead body from the place of death, even after the person has been pronounced dead. If PMS had removed the body, it would have been as a professional courtesy to the funeral home, he said.

Carmichael also disputed Smith's claim that it took him an hour and a half to get there. He took the call himself, he said. "I speeded all the way down there," he said, "and it only took us 25 minutes to get there." Carmichael did say it may have been an hour and a half between the time Flowers was killed and the time he arrived, but he said he left Pampa as soon as he got the call. Smith asked at the meeting if an agreement could be struck between the funeral home and PMS, since Miami has neither an ambulance service or a funeral home, and depends on Pampa for both these services.

Carmichael said when PMS was established, his firm approached the company about an agreement, but no agreement was reached. Zillmer said it would be prohibitive on more than one level for PMS to begin transporting bodies of dead people.

Zillmer said if PMS were to transport dead bodies, he would have to add another crew to either transport the body or to cover for the crew that was transporting the body, which would be cost prohibitive. He said PMS answers calls in Roberts County as a courtesy because the county has no ambulance service of its own.

In reference to the Miami incident, Zillmer said the call was probably made to PMS by Department of Public Safety employees who did not know that Flowers had been killed. If the PMS crew had known that Flowers was already dead, they would not have left Pampa, he said.

Smith suggested that PMS might talk to Roberts County officials about a contribution from the county and a contract, but Zillmer said "if that means we have to haul dead bodies back, we won't do it."

Zillmer told the commissioners court that he would review PMS policy on the matter, and he later told The Pampa News that he had reviewed the policy and he will not change it.

Borger Detective Mike Smith was gathering evidence at the pasture, taking measurements, searching the ground, looking for fingerprints.

The ranger said he has "faith" in the work done by Smith that morning.

Gillespie testified it is his opinion the fatal shot was fired by Alonzo, though he said ballistics tests on the fatal bullet cannot positively identify which weapon fired it.

But he said his opinion is based on ballistics in that the "twist" on the fatal bullet ruled out other weapons.

The .223-caliber copper-jacketed slug was recovered from Grandstaff's body, the investigator said.

Gillespie said, basing his conclusion on statements given by the officers involved, that both Alonzo and officer Bailey Roberts were firing from near the same spot on the passenger side of Grandstaff's pickup. He said both officers were firing .223-caliber weapons. Alonzo was firing a Mini-14 taken from the pickup abandoned by fugitive Lonnie Cox and Roberts was firing an AR-15 loaded with ammunition taken from Cox's truck.

Both officers also testified that either the ammunition or the weapon used to fire at Grandstaff were earlier taken from Cox's truck after the suspect disappeared near Grandstaff's home.

fired an AR-15 "10 or 15 times" at a fleeing Lonnie Cox out the window of a moving vehicle.

No supervisor was on duty to give the new recruit his orders to shoot. In the Borger police force, there are only patrolmen, lieutenants and a chief, and only patrolmen were on duty that night.

Turner is still working as a Borger officer. Officer Bailey Hal Roberts also fired his gun that night, but at an innocent man, one he couldn't even see clearly.

Roberts had been on the force for just more than two months. He previously worked as a guard at the Potter County Jail for a few months. Before he went to work on the Borger force, Roberts was a pipeline operator in San Angelo.

Roberts' weapon of choice as a police officer was also an AR-15, which he said he bought from an "ol' boy" whose name he couldn't remember.

Roberts was shooting his .223-caliber AR-15 from about the same position as Alonzo - from the passenger side of Grandstaff's pickup truck, which was obstructing the policemen's view of the cowboy - when Grandstaff was killed.

When Roberts gave his sworn statement to lawyers for Grandstaff's family, he also denied shooting Grandstaff. He said he shot his weapon three times into the air over Grandstaff's truck.

He said he fired when it looked as if Grandstaff was "going for something in his waistband."

"In my opinion, the shot was fired by John Alonzo. It can't be positively determined through ballistics. I have that opinion because the two firing (at Grandstaff) from that position were both firing the same caliber weapon. But one (weapon) had rifling with a left-hand twist - the other had a right-hand twist. Due to that, the other was eliminated," Gillespie told The Pampa News.

Besides the slug recovered from Grandstaff's body, Gillespie's evidence included numerous cartridges gathered in the pasture and some weapons involved in the shooting.

The Ranger first refused to comply with a subpoena for evidence from his investigation, which was issued by lawyers for Grandstaff's family in the lawsuit against the officers and various governmental entities.

He also refused to testify on advice of the attorney general's office.

Gillespie later relented and turned over some evidence and testified under a threat of contempt of court and after an "agreement to produce evidence" reached between the parties and Federal Judge Mary Lou Robinson of Amarillo. That agreement states it is "subject to an agreed order of confidentiality to be entered into between the parties and the attorney general's office."

Hart was asked by the Grandstaff family's lawyers how many times he thought Grandstaff had been shot.

"I would have believed he had been shot 10 or 12 times from the amount of gunfire there was. It turned out there wasn't, but that would have been my idea at the time," Hart testified.

The deputy said Grandstaff fell to the ground towards the end of the burst of police gunfire. He said the cowboy was "squirming around a little bit" after the Borger patrolmen handcuffed him and threw him face down in the dirt.

The officer who set the night's events in motion was Hutchinson County Sheriff's Deputy Ricky Morris, 27.

He was born October 7, 1955, at Victorville, Calif. He attended school in Muleshoe and was trained in police work by the Pinkerton Detective Agency in Lubbock. Morris is a former dairy farmer who previously worked as a patrolman in Spearman and Dumas. He went to work for the Hutchinson County Sheriff in October, 1980. He has moved to South Texas since the shooting.

On the evening of Aug. 10, 1981, Morris told Borger officers to watch for Cox and said the wanted man should be considered armed and dangerous. The Borger officers testified Morris told them Cox was vowing to "kill a cop" that night.

A theft warrant for Cox had been issued by the Beckham County, Okla., sheriff. Morris added the erroneous information that Cox was also wanted for kidnapping an Arkansas woman, according to the other officers.

Morris was armed that night with a Mini-14, a .223-caliber rifle and a Charter Arms .38 special; he also carried a shotgun in his squad car.

Morris testified he arrived just after the shooting of Grandstaff. He said he heard gunfire as he neared the cattle guard on the road leading to Grandstaff's north-camp home.

According to the depositions, other officers who arrived at the Four 6s ranch just after Grandstaff was shot included Hutchinson County deputies Harry Vermillion, Bob Smith and Ed Wheeler; Pampa Police Officer Charles Love; and Gray County deputies Paul Ortega and Rocky Ferguson.

Pomp and circumstance for legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — The legislative agenda for the second week includes pomp and circumstance for all to see and possibly hardball politics which few will witness.

Senators returned from a 3½-day weekend at 10 a.m. with apparently little to do until the afternoon, and the House convened at 1:30 p.m.

On the schedule was the official canvass of the votes in the Nov. 2 election for governor and lieutenant governor. Also, a joint session was called for Chief Justice Jack Pope of the Texas Supreme Court to tell legislators what kind of shape state appeals courts are in.

Four new statewide elected officials — Attorney General Jim Mattox, Treasurer Ann Richards, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower — scheduled "open houses" in their offices.

They planned a three-block procession to the Capitol for an informal "inaugural." All four already have been sworn in.

"We feel that Monday is an important day for the people of Texas, and we are looking forward to seeing as many folks as possible," said Hightower. "It's an Andy Jackson-style inaugural — no charge to come, no fancy dress needed to get in, no engraved invitations required. Ya'll come."

The $50-a-person Democratic Victory Dinner is expected to attract most Democratic legislators Monday night.

Tuesday at noon, Gov.-elect Mark White and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby will be sworn on the south steps of the Capitol. There will be a luncheon on the Capitol grounds, a downtown parade and three inaugural balls Tuesday night.

But White may face his first legislative test Wednesday when the Senate may vote to return Gov. Bill Clements' lame duck appointments to White, who would decide which ones he favors.

Two West Texas senators, freshman John Montford and Bill Sarpalus, contend White already has been "twisting arms" over the appointments.

Sarpalus, D-Hereford, said his colleagues had been informed that White "would know who his friends are by how they voted."

Montford, D-Lubbock, told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a telephone interview that he had been pressured to vote for a blanket rejection of the pending appointments. Later, he told the Associated Press he was joking when he said "both arms had just about been twisted off ... I was just using political jargon."

Montford said he approves of at least two of Clements' appointments — former House Speaker Bill Clayton as a Texas A&M regent and Pope as chief justice.

Pope, who admits privately that he may be "in trouble," has requested a hearing before the Senate Nominations Subcommittee, which considers appointments to boards and commissions.

Mother of victim demanding answers

HOUSTON (AP) — The mother of a slain 20-year-old woman is demanding answers from city officials about how police investigated Coral Eugene Watts, the man they say admitted to killing her daughter and 12 other women.

"Maybe I am wrong, and maybe they did all they could," said Harriet Semander. "But with what some of the experts have said there is a doubt. The same thing could be happening right now."

Mrs. Semander said she has been haunted by one nagging question since police say Watts admitted to the murders.

"If Houston police knew other law enforcement agencies suspected Watts of murder, why was he able to do what he did without getting caught?" she asked.

Mrs. Semander says she has asked the same question of detectives who tracked Watts, Police Chief Lee Brown, Mayor Kathy Whitmire, City Council members, lawyers and FBI agents.

Police claimed they did all they could, council members referred her letters to the City Legal Department and Mrs. Whitmire forwarded her letter to Brown, she said.

One detective who handled the case walked out of their meeting after she asked two questions, she said. "He said I was being too critical," she said.

Mrs. Semander said she's hasn't received an answer that convinces her that other mothers won't experience the grief she suffered after the daughter's body was found in a trash bin last February.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Semander says she'll take petitions bearing more than 1,000 signatures to the City Council and demand an investigation into the procedures police used while tracking Watts.

"My concern is that whatever they were doing obviously didn't work. My daughter's life was lost. I can understand that a man could slip away and kill one person and get away with it, but 12 in less than two years?"

"Something they are doing is obviously wrong, and other children, other girls, other people are still threatened by whatever procedures they are using," she said.

Last August, Watts admitted killing Miss Semander, 11 other Texas women and one Michigan woman after his attorneys secured an agreement with prosecutors that allowed the 28-year-old former bus mechanic to plea guilty to burglary with intent to commit murder.

Watts now is serving a 60-year prison sentence. Prosecutors defended the plea bargain, saying it was the only way many of the victims' bodies could be found and the cases closed.

Brown has admitted the department had been warned that Watts was a suspect in the murders of several Michigan women.

He defended the department's actions, saying he didn't have the officers to watch Watts 24 hours a day. He also said the department believed it would be illegal to place a man under constant surveillance.

But Sam Longoria of the U.S. attorney's office here said it was "preposterous" for police to think that constant surveillance of a suspected mass murderer would be illegal.

"All I know, all I have been able to find out, is that nothing in the Houston Police Department has changed since Watts was arrested," Mrs. Semander said.

Texas is fifth nationally in foundation money

DALLAS (AP) — Two Texas foundations rank among the top 25 private foundations in the nation in assets, and Texas ranks fifth nationally in the amount of money held by private foundations, a Dallas newspaper has reported.

The Houston Endowment, largest in the state with $242.6 million in assets, is 15th largest in the nation. The Brown Foundation, with $239.7 million, also ranks among the top 25, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

The assets of Houston Endowment Inc. have grown continually since its creation in 1937, according to records at the Foundation Center library in Austin, even though millions of dollars are doled out each year to various causes.

Founded by Houston publishing magnate Jesse H. Jones, the Houston Endowment annually gives more than $15 million to colleges, medical research and the arts. Some of the larger grants were awarded to Southwestern University in Georgetown and Trinity University in San Antonio.

Jones, the son of a Tennessee farmer, founded the South Texas Lumber Co. and by the mid-1950s, his company had built much of Houston's skyline. He established the Houston Chronicle, of which he was publisher.

The Brown Foundation of Houston was established in 1951 by Herman Brown, founder of Brown & Root Inc., and his younger brother George. The foundation, which grew by $40 million in 1980 alone, yearly awards gifts of about $18 million. Most of the gifts go to higher education generally and Rice University in Houston and Southwestern University specifically.

Most foundations are established to keep family fortunes intact and because they offer tax advantages, experts say. Money placed in a foundation is not taxable, nor is the interest it earns.

But another major reason many Texans started foundations is because they wanted to create a perpetual means of helping people, said Dr. Charles Bonjean, vice president of the Hogg Foundation in Austin.

"Many of these men came from very humble beginnings, and they wanted to help give others a better start than they had," Bonjean said. "One interesting aspect of Texas foundations is that women were involved in establishing many of them."

One was Ima Hogg of Houston, who helped establish the foundation that Bonjean administers.

Madison Alexander Cooper, founder of a wholesale grocery chain, established a $1 million foundation "to make Waco a better, more desirable city in which to live." The foundation is now worth $10 million.

Caesar Kleberg, whose family holds interest in the King Ranch in South Texas, established a foundation to "aid in conservation of game and other wildlife in Southwest Texas."

The third-largest foundation in Texas is the $195 million Moody Foundation in Galveston, which awards $11.3 million annually to the arts. Houston's Welch Foundation, with $148 million in assets, gives $8.9 million annually for research.

Dallas Meadows Foundation now has $123.5 million in assets. Algur H. Meadows was a developer of East Texas oil fields who, with his wife Virginia, established the foundation in 1948. The foundation, with $8.9 million in gifts each year, continues to be a source of revenue for Southern Methodist University, the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts and the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, foundation reports show.

Two Fort Worth foundations rank sixth and seventh in the state. The Carter Foundation, with $117.8 million in assets, gives $10.1 million to colleges each year. The Richardson Foundation, with $105 million in assets, gives $7.7 million yearly to hospitals.

Colleges are beneficiaries of Houston's Cullen Foundation, worth $81.4 million, which gives $13.6 million each year.

In Richmond, the George Foundation has $80.4 million in assets and gives $5.8 million yearly to civil organizations.

And Dallas' Hobbitzelle Foundation gives $4.2 million of its $64.6 million in assets to hospitals each year.

Prosecutors lay groundwork for murder connection

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — More than three years of investigation work is unfolding in a federal courtroom here, where prosecutors say they have evidence to prove Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra had reason to plan the assassination of a Texas federal judge.

Testimony enters its third day today in Chagra's trial, moved from San Antonio, Texas, because of pretrial publicity about the sensational May 29, 1979 murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood.

He was the first federal judge to be assassinated in his century.

The government, which contends Chagra paid $250,000 for the murder to remove Wood from a narcotics case, opened its case Thursday after three days of screening potential jurors.

Dr. Reuben Santos, the Bexar County, Texas, medical examiner in 1979, testified that Wood's was slain by a rifle bullet that shattered into 15 pieces in his back.

The judge's widow and others testified about the morning of the murder and one of them placed convicted hit man Charles V. Harrelson at the scene.

As prosecutors moved to connect those events with Chagra, one of Wood's former docket clerks testified about Chagra's court involvement on narcotics charges.

In April of 1979, said Grace Sampson, Chagra's attorneys filed 30 motions, including one that Wood step down because he was biased in favor of prosecuting attorney James Kerr.

She testified that at the April hearing the flamboyant Las Vegas gambler "was carefree. He was out on bond."

But after Wood denied all the motions except one moving the trial from San Antonio to Austin, the atmosphere "was explosive," she testified.

Chagra, 39, was indicted in April on charges he paid Harrelson to murder Wood, known as "Maximum John" because of his stiff sentences for drug defendants.

After a 12-week trial in San Antonio, Harrelson was convicted Dec. 14 of murder, conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to obstruct justice. His wife, Jo Ann, was convicted of conspiracy to obstruct justice and Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, was convicted of both conspiracy counts.

A week later, Chagra's brother, Joseph, an El Paso attorney, was sentenced to 10 years after pleading guilty to conspiracy in the case.

Those developments caused U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions to screen more than 100 potential jurors before a panel of 12 members and three alternates were selected Wednesday.

Prospective jurors who admitted reading or hearing about the convictions were automatically excused from the case.

Sessions also questioned jurors about their feelings about Chagra's Lebanese heritage, and his reputation as "a well-known high-stakes gambler."

Chagra's attorney, Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas, told the jury in his opening statement that Chagra didn't order the assassination. Goodman said Harrelson threatened to implicate Chagra unless he was paid thousands of dollars for his silence.

Rock fans protest format change at Tillis station

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — More than 200 rock 'n' roll music fans picketed studios of a radio station owned by country music signer Mel Tillis to protest a switch in formats to Tillis' type of music, an organizer says.

The station management says the protests are falling on deaf ears.

And no more than five people protested at the station a week ago when the station, KYTX-FM, dropped its album-oriented rock format and began playing country and western music exclusively.

But a local night club organized the protest Sunday that the club's general manager said he hopes will stir another station to start airing the popular rock 'n' roll sound.

Fritz Blanke, who runs the Hot Rocks club, used several promotions to motivate the protestors, awarding prizes to patrons with the most imaginative signs.

"Take the sawdust out of Mel's ear," read one sign carried by KYTX Sunday.

Blanke said he knew the protest was "not going to change things."

"They'll stick with country and western. We might be able to entice some other station into changing their format or we might be able to talk some people into buying available stations into changing their format," he said.

Tillis, who also owns an AM station in Amarillo, bought

KYTX a year ago.

General Manager Richard Haines, who has said the protests will not cause the station to change its format back to rock music, said Sunday that he didn't know about the protest until contacted by a reporter.

"This is news to me," he said. "I couldn't tell you anything about it."

Haines said after Tillis bought the station that it would keep its album-oriented rock format. But two weeks ago, Haines said a study had determined that Amarillo needed another country music station.

Blanke said the protest Sunday was peaceful.

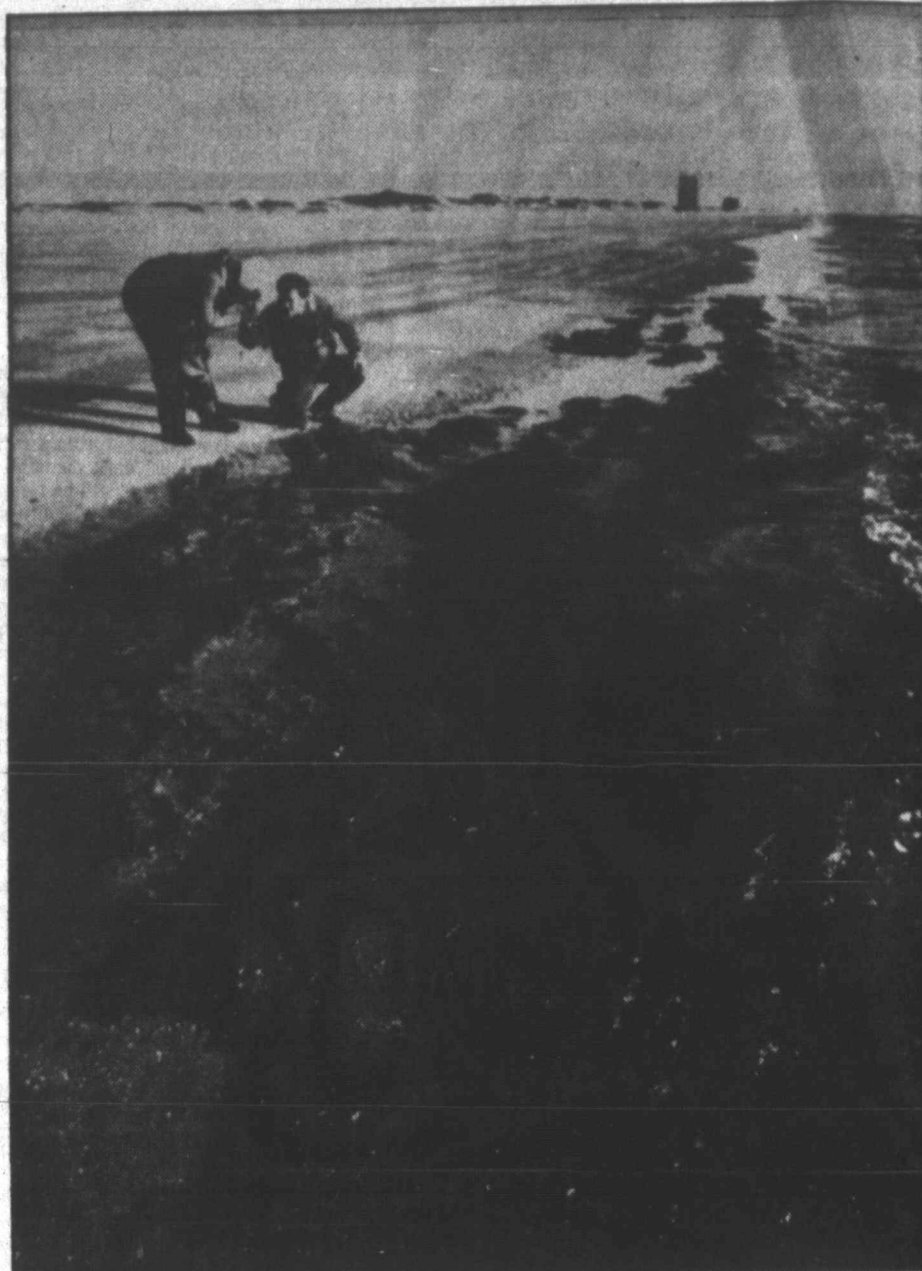

"Everything was quiet and peaceful while I was out there," he said. "That was one of the big reasons I was there, to make sure everything stayed that way. I hate to see these people get out of hand and ruin things."

admitted reading or hearing about the convictions were automatically excused from the case.

Sessions also questioned jurors about their feelings about Chagra's Lebanese heritage, and his reputation as "a well-known high-stakes gambler."

Border arrests rise 20 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Agents with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service say they're "getting run over" by an exodus of illegal aliens from Mexico into the United States.

"We're almost to the saturation point, where our people physically cannot apprehend and process this many (illegal aliens)," said an agent who asked not to be identified.

Arrests of aliens along the border from California to Texas rose about 20 percent in the first two weeks of January. The Dallas Morning News reported.

Figures will be released this week that show that apprehension rates for the first two weeks of 1983 are up about 70 percent in McAllen, 50 percent in Del Rio, and 35 percent in El Paso, the News reported.

Sources told the News that INS national director Allen Nelson will release the data this week on those and other border towns that reflect an overall 20 percent increase.

The exodus coincides with rising unemployment in Mexico.

Almost 1 million construction workers have been laid off in Mexico in the last six months, and Mexican officials announced Friday that contractors for Pemex, the national oil company, have furloughed 40,000 workers.

The Mexican government estimates that 1.4 million to 1.5 million people have been left unemployed since August by the nation's financial crisis. Government officials estimate 1.2 million more Mexicans will lose their jobs.

'Year of betrayal'

His most disillusioned critics are billing 1982 as Ronald Reagan's "year of betrayal." He refused to back away from the military draft. He solidified the hold of his former foes over his own White House staff. He helped to push into law two major tax increases. He gave up trying to abolish the energy and education departments. He sent our soldiers to foreign soil.

We cannot dispute that the year just ending was no 1981. The heady accomplishments of those first 12 months will mean a real tax cut for most of us unless the final and most important stage cutbacks in some programs, though these have been more than eaten up by rapid growth in others. But, if we are to say that we realized those dreams last year only because Reagan was in office, we must also acknowledge that we got stuck with a $100-billion tax increase last summer and a 5-cent-a-gallon gasoline levy this past month only because the president put the full force of his office behind them as well.

Reagan's embracing of higher taxes and unsavory budget deals took him off high ground and stalled his momentum even before the mid-term elections finished it off. Yes, he is to blame. But in the larger sense, has his administration to date been the bitter disappointment some would aver? That would depend on one's base of expectations.

Consider what we wrote a month before he was elected:

"What Reagan seems to promise is a shift in emphasis: taxes that are higher but not as high as they would be under the Democrats, more regulations but not as many as we'd get otherwise - the hope being that though the public sector would continue to grow in an absolute sense, the private economy would be able to expand so quickly, if not further hamstrung, that it could overcome the current proportional trends in favor of government. Instead of cuts in existing programs (Reagan's meaningless promise to reduce spending through elimination of 'mismanagement and waste' tells you that few items would be eliminated), the coming years would see a paucity of new schemes. Reagan offers the prospect of a careful, corporate manager averse to abrupt changes and resigned to the firm's impetus.

The economic mess he inherited has been too great to allow the sort of private-sector revival we saw overtaking a restrained government. As a result, conditions have grown somewhat worse instead of somewhat better: the ballooning deficit is a symptom of this. It may be that we won't be able to dig ourselves out of this hole through moderate measures. But the 1982 compromises and the continuing setbacks aside, we should not minimize the importance of what the Reagan revolution has meant to American politics. It has changed the focus of the national debate. And, it has yet to play itself out. The question as we enter 1983 is whether the president is ready to return some character to the starring role.

Berry's World

"My wife is having a software party at home."

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Amid all the political posturing about fiscal responsibility, Congress and President Reagan are poised to perpetuate one of the federal government's most extravagant but least justifiable spending programs.

As in previous years, the hand-wringing about the need for austerity budgeting will be temporarily abandoned on Capitol Hill and at the White House to facilitate the enactment of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act.

That bill appropriates hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funds for scores of "public works" projects whose dubious utility is matched only by their outlandish cost.

By far the most expensive "pork barrel" project in the legislation is the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, a 253-mile-long barge canal along the Mississippi-Alabama border whose only purpose is to duplicate the Mississippi River. The canal would provide an artificial link between the Tennessee River, in the northeastern corner of Mississippi, and the Tombigbee River, in the west-central Alabama community of Demopolis. In 1972, the Army Corps of Engineers' cost estimate for the project was $323 million.

Today, the official estimate stands at more than $2 billion — and that figure doesn't include an additional $1 billion required to dredge the Tombigbee River south of Demopolis as well as assorted other items which probably will bring the price of the complete project to more than $4.2 billion.

One man's recession

By Don Graff

We're in Grand Central Station shortly after eight in the morning.

The peak of the rush. Human rivers flow from commuter train platforms across the cavernous concourse to street exits, subway entrances and the four-abreast escalators to the Pan Am building where an agitated young man is thrusting green handbills at the crowd. Few hands accept them.

It could be any morning in the heat of a political campaign. But this is a month after Election Day. And Rob Seitz is not making a pitch for votes.

"EXPERIENCE" — the handbill tells us — "BETTER THAN AN MBA." It goes on to detail a six-year career in public relations that ended, at least for the time being, last May when Seitz lost his job with Newsome & Co.

He isn't the first job-hunter to go public in Grand Central. A young woman, fresh from campus with a master's in business administration, tried it a few weeks earlier and at least got a story in the New York Times. His wife warned Seitz he couldn't expect a sympathetic response, but he thought his professional record would compensate for the sex and age disadvantage.

It didn't. As of this writing, the Times hasn't found Seitz news fit to print and I am the only handbill recipient to contact him.

The experience was demoralizing. He wasn't personally humiliated. There were no unkind comments, nothing like that. But desperation turned to anger at having to beg for work after months of trying to find a job through the accepted channels.

He has tried the agencies and the want ads. The pages of job openings Ronald Reagan makes such a case of, Seitz says, run mostly to sales positions or call for technical skills. There's virtually nothing in his own field, one of the hardest hit of New York's service industries. Still, he checks out every job change he hears of, on the chance an opening has not been filled, even calling when he hears someone has died. It hasn't worked.

There have been moments of hope. Once he was one of 10 interviewed out of 400 applicants for an opening. He didn't get the job.

The day we talked he had been called in for an interview by a corporation that, he was told, had received 500 responses to a blind ad in the Times. He didn't get that one, either.

Then there was the one that fell through because because Seitz was too good. "You'll get something if you sweat it out," the prospective employer told him, "but I wouldn't want to hire you for ten thousand less than you're worth." Rob Seitz is still sweating it out.

Contrary to the impression around the White House that unemployment is "attractive," Seitz finds it one of the worst experiences he's ever gone through. He applied for benefits reluctantly, knowing it was the only way he and his wife could survive in New York, although she is working.

Today in history

Today is Monday, Jan. 17, the 17th day of 1983. There are 348 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 17, 1945, Soviet troops and Polish patriot forces liberated Warsaw from the Nazis during World War II.

On this date:
In 1707, Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston.

In 1893, Hawaii was proclaimed a republic.
In 1917, the United States bought the American Virgin Islands from Denmark for $25 million.

In 1977, convicted murderer Gary Gilmore was executed by firing squad in Utah, the first time capital punishment had been carried out in the United States in a decade.

Ten years ago: President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines proclaimed a new constitution, extending martial law in the islands indefinitely.

One year ago: One of the worst cold waves of the century continued, with temperatures below zero in the Northeast, Midwest and parts of the South.

Five years ago: Middle East peace talks opened in Jerusalem with the foreign ministers of Israel and Egypt and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance taking part.

Today's birthdays: Major league catcher Darrell Porter is 31.

Thought for today: "You cannot climb the ladder of success with cold feet of fear." — Anonymous.

Pork barrel as usual

That's a lot of money, but there's a lot of work involved — moving enough soil to create the equivalent of a solid wall of dirt 25 feet high and 20 feet wide stretching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean.

Described by the Birmingham, Ala., Post-Herald as "a boondoggle of epic proportions," the project owes much of its success to its influential political sponsors, including Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the Senate majority leader, and Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Not far behind the $194.7 million earmarked for the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway in this year's appropriations bill is the $171 million destined for the Central Arizona Project, whose purpose is to divert more water from the already overburdened Colorado River. The total cost of constructing facilities to pump that water 2,000 feet uphill and across hundreds of miles of desert to Phoenix and Tucson is estimated to be almost $3 billion.

This year's bill also contains a deceptively modest $4 million for the Garrison Diversion Unit in North Dakota, a scheme devised by the Interior Department's Bureau of Reclamation which would destroy almost as much productive farm land as it is supposed to irrigate. In addition, the project would violate the International Boundary Waters Treaty, decimate fisheries in Canada and damage or destroy a dozen natural wildlife refuges in this country — all at a projected cost of $1.15 billion.

Also included in the bill is $16.2 million for the Stonewall Jackson Dam in West Virginia, a project which would require government seizure of more than 20,000 acres of land and the displacement of about 1,800 people, some of whose families have farmed the land for more than a century.

After the dam is built for the purpose of "pollution dilution" — a discredited technique to flush pollution downstream — the Corps of Engineers plans to construct condominiums, a golf course, clubhouse, restaurant, tennis courts and Olympic-size swimming pool — at a total cost of $201 million.

There's more. The $368 million O'Neill Project in Nebraska would flood a valuable nature preserve standing at the biological crossroads of the country. The $97 million Yatesville Dam in Kentucky would drown oil and gas wells and inundate 14 million tons of recoverable coal at precisely the time the country is searching for more fuel.

Other unwarranted projects identified by the Coalition for Water Project Review, a group of more than 20 national organizations, are located in Tennessee, Colorado, Oklahoma, Utah, Louisiana and Hawaii.

Those projects have been criticized for many years, but never before have budget realities made it more imperative to finally bring a halt to the pattern of wasteful spending.

Taking on the system

The case began five years ago in 1977 when her son, Paul, was 11 and she was away from home 55 hours a week because of her job.

"I couldn't see leaving a 13-year-old baby sitter in charge all day. Nor did I feel I could ask neighbors or my parents to take care of Paul," she said, explaining that her parents were in their 80s and not well.

She decided to send her son to an eight-week camp in Canada where he would get good care, plus instruction in swimming, archery and other recreational activities. She put down the cost of camp, $1,180, as a deduction for child care on her 1977 income tax return.

Because the IRS has traditionally defined child care as fees for a housekeeper to stay in the home, or the use of local day care facilities, the tax collectors vetoed the deduction. "What's the difference if the child care just happens to be out-of-town?" questioned accountant Zoltan.

She took her case to court without hiring an attorney. She paid a $15 court filing fee and handled the case herself with some advice and help from friends.

On her day in court, she argued that her only other option during school vacation was paying $1,000 or more for day care services and/or a baby sitter.

"The judges listened carefully to my case. I was given all the time I needed to make my points. I was impressed that here I was questioning the system and I was receiving respect and consideration," she says.

In the end, the U.S. Tax Court agreed with her. Presiding Judge Samuel Sterrett said there is nothing wrong with child care that provides incidental benefits, such as recreation at summer camp, as long as the chief purpose is to protect the child.

He also wrote, "There is no general requirement... that the child be bored stiff in order for the expenses rendered for his care to qualify for the credit."

Ms. Zoltan's win this fall has far-reaching implications for the 4 million working parents who claim child care tax deductions. On a sliding scale, deductions range from 20 to 30 percent of child care costs subtracted directly from the tax owed.

Says she: "Most of all, I hope single-parent mothers, like myself, will hear about this decision and be able to benefit from it."

Just what kinds of experiences give a woman the gumption to take on the IRS?

My friend, Edith, says she was brought up to be inquisitive.

"My parents believed strongly that reason should govern, and they always encouraged me to come to conclusions on my own," she says.

She admits to asking a lot of questions: "I have spent most of my adult life questioning doctors," she says, laughing. "Once, after surgery, the doctor threatened to put me out of the hospital if I asked one more question."

Long before it was accepted procedure, she insisted drug-gists list on the bottle the drugs contained in any medicine prescribed for her. She is the kind of mother who asks school officials why children are taught some things and not others.

It was her divorce experience, however, that made her truly outraged. "That taught me women must crusade for their rights in the courts," she says.

Every one of us needs a friend like Edith Zoltan to jolt our complacency and inspire us to challenge the status quo.

She gets us to ask: "So what, if it's always been that way? Why not change it? Why not make it better — and more fair?"

Dear Abby

Mother's will isn't daughter's will

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother died recently, and it has come to light that all the money I've been sending her for years was saved by her! This is very upsetting to me, as I sent money to her hoping she would use it for luxuries for herself — but now I know she spent none of it and lived quite frugally instead.

Mother did not leave much, but her "estate" (according to her wishes) shall be shared equally among her three children.

I feel that since most of the money she left was "mine" in a sense, it should be returned to me. My sister and brother are well aware that the money Mother had saved came from me and me alone, but they have not offered to return it to me.

Am I wrong to feel that my own money should be returned to me instead of shared with my brother and sister? Should I make that suggestion? I do not want to create a rift in the family, but fair is fair.

THE ONE WHO GAVE

DEAR ONE: Fair is indeed fair. But once a gift is given, it becomes the property of the recipient — in this case, your mother. Since your brother and sister are aware that the money came from you, if they don't offer to return it, don't ask for it.

DEAR ABBY: Artie and I have been married for 10 years. We have two nice children. When we got married, I was 18 and Artie was 19. We had gone steady since the eighth grade and neither one of us ever had another sweetheart. We've had our ups and downs, but compared to most, we have a good marriage.

All of a sudden Artie says he wants to be free to have sexual experiences with other girls. He says he was so young when we got married, he thinks he missed out on something. He says he doesn't want to sneak around behind my back, he wants to be open and honest about it. He also said it would be OK with him if I had flings with other guys.

Abby, I love Artie and it would tear me up inside to know that he was having sex with other girls. I sure don't want any flings with other guys. I love Artie and don't want to lose him. Please tell me what to do.

TORN APART

DEAR TORN: Tell Artie that you are committed to your marriage vows and have no desire to break them. Of course, you can't prevent him from doing what he wants to do, but to condone his "flings" would be flinging your marriage out the window.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for devoting an entire column to warning parents that a toddler can actually drown while playing in a toilet!

We lost a beautiful 8-month-old son that way last August. We, too, were so careful with our precious little guy, we never dreamed such a "freak accident" could happen. One of the firemen who tried to revive him told us that this occurs more frequently than most people realize.

Our baby wasn't even walking yet, but he crawled to the toilet, pulled himself up, put his face in the bowl and fell in. He wasn't out of my sight for more than a few minutes!

I pray that the grieving parents who were good enough to write to warn others will throw this heavy burden on the Lord, for he will indeed sustain them. It still hurts terribly, but having faith in the Lord does lighten the burden. We know.

MR. AND MRS. D.E.S. IN CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married earlier this year in a formal ceremony. We considered asking my husband's 9-year-old niece to be the flower girl, but we decided against it when we learned that another niece (age 13) felt left out.

However, we did use my husband's dog, Lady, in the ceremony as the ring bearer. Lady is 11 years old and my husband raised her from a pup. Everyone who knows us knows that my husband rarely goes anywhere without Lady. Our friends are still talking about how cute Lady looked trotting down the aisle with the ring box in her mouth.

Now, nine months later, we receive this very upsetting letter from my sister-in-law telling us how badly we hurt them by using a dog in the ceremony instead of their daughter.

Abby, we never promised that their daughter would be in the wedding — we only considered it briefly. Don't you think we had the right to plan the kind of wedding we wanted?

S. IN NOVATO, CALIF.

DEAR S.: Yes. Your relatives have no bone to pick with you since Lady did not replace their daughter in the ceremony.

CONFIDENTIAL TO C. IN KINGSTON, N.Y.: Emerson said, "The only true gift is a portion of thyself." You don't have to spend money to give something of value.

Growing Child:

Children react differently to change

Young children respond to new events in their lives in ways that can't always be predicted, according to "Growing Child," a monthly child development newsletter.

One city child may eagerly explore everything in sight on a visit to a farm. Another will find the animals strange and frightening, the sounds and smells unpleasant.

Much of this has to do with the feeling of security a child has in a particular situation. This in turn depends a great deal on how the new situation differs from what he knows and is used to.

If we could always see the world the way a child sees it, it would be easier to understand his behavior. Failing that, an understanding of how a great many children behave at a given age helps provide clues to a child's feelings and needs.

Children seem to do best with a certain combination of sameness and variety. First of all, there are some activities where a child demands a highly structured routine. He wants to do things the same way each time and he gets upset if the routine is changed even a little bit. This is most evident in bedtime and mealtime rituals.

Eating and sleeping satisfy a child's most basic physical needs. Adults have long since taken these for granted, but a child does not. He feels very keenly that they have to do with his well-being. As a result, they arouse strong emotional feelings for the child.

In eating and sleeping, predictability means security to a child. If his basic needs are always met the same way, he is able to face the world with much more confidence.

It's the same with ideas. After discovering that a toy car has wheels and can roll, a child spends some time making sure of this by rolling the car back and forth under his hand and giving short pushes. Only later does he begin variations, like rolling it on all kinds of new surfaces or letting it roll down an incline.

Once the basic idea is down pat, variations are interesting and a challenge for him. For best results, remember: not too much change and not too fast!

For more information on the physical and social development of children up to the age of six, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Ind. 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter is $11.95. Free samples available on request.

"Children + Change"

Counselor's Corner

By DAVE BRUMMETT

It's easy to be negative in these times. On the contrary, it is sometimes disturbing to be around a positive person. News received through the media, information shared by friends often seems to be related to unpleasant circumstances which have happened. We address few good news issues because we appear to expect inevitable loss or gloom. Whenever the news is good, we say it's "luck."

One thing you can believe: nothing happens as a result of luck. Good things are a conclusion of timing, proper judgement and decisions or living with a positive attitude.

A good thing about positive people is that they are punctual and well-equipped. They are reliable. They begin on time and finish on time. They're always welcome. When they say they can be trusted, we believe them. They can be counted on to come through.

Positive persons recognize the need to change, update, move in another direction and they know there's more than one way to do things. They are willing to negotiate and they are not afraid of alternatives. They compliment others' advice or opinions by listening carefully and keeping an open mind.

Positive persons are more satisfied. They don't complain or put down ideas that are unproven. They're at ease with themselves and are easy to be around. Their positive attitudes influence others.

Another special quality of positive persons is involvement. They are volunteers, partners, companions, willing to offer their skills to the group's best interest.

Positive people are usually unaware of their warming vibrations that draw others to them.

In thinking positive thoughts, people handle most encounters in a satisfactory way. Despite bad moments, a positive frame of mind leads one back to good news. Luck is fantasy, an excuse, a rationalization.

City Realtors win state honors

Several local Realtors were honored by the Texas Association of Realtors in Austin early today when they were presented with two achievement awards for community service programs.

Of the 134 local Texas boards, Pampa is the only one to receive two awards. Receiving the honors were the Community Revitalization Committee, chaired by Eva Hawley, and Private Property Week Committee, chaired by Dena Whisler. The committee on community revitalization won the honor by their work in helping recognize Pampa citizens' efforts in neighborhood restoration and rehabilitation. Private Property Week committee members won the state award for their efforts in promoting citizen awareness of their private property rights during the week of April 18, 1982.

Many Pampa Realtors were in Austin this weekend for the Texas Association of Realtors mid-winter meeting.

Those attending were Dena Whisler, president of the Pampa Board of Realtors; Gail Sanders, vice president; Rolisa Utzman, secretary; Marilyn Keagy, past president and TAR director and Judi Edwards. Members participated in various state committee meetings, round-table discussions and workshops during the state meet.

Consumer Reports

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: On Halloween, an egg must have been thrown quite high against our painted stucco house. We noticed it weeks later. The egg is brown now and sun-cooked. How do we remove it without repainting?

DEAR READER: An egg left to mold in the sun produces a horror of a stain. We can't guarantee that you'll be able to remove it without repainting. However, you might try scrubbing it with a stiff scrub brush and a strong solution of TSP, Solax or Oakite, followed by scrubbing with a solution made from a cup of liquid laundry bleach and a gallon of water. Rinse the solution thoroughly, and good luck.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: I have a brand new Hotpoint refrigerator/freezer. It smells terrible every time the door is opened. I've scrubbed it with everything. Can you give me any help?

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: Some time back, you told another reader that the rancid odor in a refrigerator or freezer might be eliminated by placing an open box of baking soda in the main part of the refrigerator and also by wiping the refrigerator out with a bleach solution.

In my experience, baking soda doesn't work very well as a filter of rancid air that's caught in the system. However, if you line the shelves with charcoal briquets and let the unit run for two to three days, this will take care of it.

Presidential signature

Jerry Richards, Pampa's resident cartoonist and contributor to The Pampa News' editorial page, recently received the Presidential signature on his caricature of Ronald Reagan's face. Richards says he mailed the caricature to President Reagan, hoping on a chance that Reagan would sign it. About six weeks later, after he had given up on it, the drawing arrived in the mail with Reagan's "John Henry" scrawled across the bottom. (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Diet facts & fallacies

More than 10,000 food products confront you at the supermarket. Stretching food dollars in today's well-stocked market can be a challenge, particularly for those on tight budgets. Grocery products are designed to get your attention and trigger impulsive buying.

Diet Center makes the following suggestions to ease the strain on your food dollar:

- Shop the outside aisles of your grocery store where you will find fresh fruits and vegetables, lean red meats, poultry, fish and dairy products.
- Make a list and stick to it!
- Check your newspaper for "specials." At these prices you may be able to buy meat cuts that are normally beyond your budget.

Sherry Cavellin
Owner

- Select lean cuts of meat, poultry and fish that provide the most for your money.

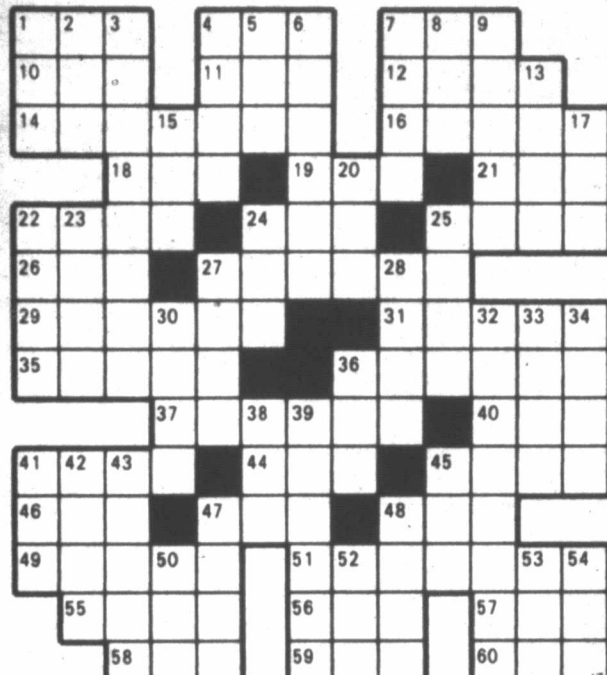

Fresh foods in season will be the highest in flavor, quality and nutrition. They are often priced lower than the prepackaged equivalents.

Include fresh foods in your list that require preparation; they are more nutritious and less expensive.

By using these ideas, Diet Center guarantees you will purchase nutritious food, reduce your waistline and grocery bill.

Dallas sends Green Bay packing

Whoa

(AP) — Dallas outlasted the Green Bay Packers 37-26 Sunday in a wild, free-wheeling battle to setup a Cowboys vs. Redskins shootout Saturday for the National Football Conference championship.

Washington's only loss this year was 24-10 Dec. 5 — to the Cowboys.

The Redskins' fans rocked RFK Stadium on Saturday with the chant "We Want Dallas" in Washington's playoff victory over Minnesota, 21-7.

And how will Dallas Coach Tom Landry feel being surrounded by all those Redskins, not unlike his American Express commercial?

"It's for the championship, we'll go anywhere," Landry said, wishing it was going to be as easy as swinging through the saloon doors of his commercial and leaving his adversaries behind.

"The first time we played Washington it was a matter-of-fact game," Landry said. "We did them a favor by beating them. If they had beaten us they would have gotten cocky."

The Cowboys had to survive a pumped-up Packer team to make it to their 10th NFC championship game in 13 years.

It took 14 points in 14 seconds, three field goals by Rafael Septien, a fourth quarter touchdown pass by Danny White, a 49-yard "receiver-to-receiver" pass, an 89-yard kickoff return by rookie Rod Hill, and three interceptions by Dennis Thurman to subdue the Pack.

"It was a great game for the fans," said Landry. "Most people hadn't seen Green Bay play. They can play. But we made the plays we had to."

Dallas built a 20-7 halftime lead and most teams would have wandered to their dressing room in shock.

After two Septien field goals in the first quarter, Green Bay took a 7-6 lead on a six-yard Lynn Dickey to James Lofton pass.

Then Dallas struck. Timmy Newsome scored on a two-yard run with 1:18 left. Fourteen seconds later Dennis Thurman returned a Dickey pass 39 yards for a touchdown.

Refusing to belly up, Green Bay's Jan Stenerud kicked two field goals to another one for Septien after Hill's kickoff return. Then the Packers struck.

Lofton dashed 71 yards for a touchdown on an end-around to narrow the count to 23-19 in the fourth period after Hill blocked the extra point.

Stung, White took the Cowboys 80 yards and flipped a seven-yard scoring pass to tight end Doug Cosbie.

Green Bay retaliated on Mark Lee's 22-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Then Landry decided enough was enough. He ordered wide receiver Drew Pearson to throw to wide receiver Tony Hill. The play covered 49 yards and fullback Robert Newhouse rushed the final yard for the game-clinching touchdown at 4:22 to play.

Thurman intercepted his third pass at the Dallas goal in the final minute to beat back the Packers' final thrust.

Packer Coach Bart Starr said "I wish we had caught them a couple of weeks ago when they were having some problems. Dallas was very, very good today."

Landry said Washington "executes better than any team I've seen this year."

He said the home-field crowd would be a big advantage to the Redskins.

"Up there you just hope you can hear the signal count," Landry said. "But we have played there before so we know what to expect."

"Washington is on a roll now much like the (San Francisco) 49ers last year. We'll have to eliminate the errors we made against Green Bay, because Washington will not make any mistakes."

Landry added, "The Washington fans wanted us and we are happy to accommodate. It should be a great game."

Dolphins shut down Chargers

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Coach Don Shula wore a broad smile and his eyes glowed in anticipation of next Sunday's American Conference championship game against the New York Jets.

"Two teams from the AFC East... It should be some kind of battle," Shula said Sunday after the Dolphins' top-ranked National Football League defense shut down the San Diego Chargers' high-powered offense in a 34-13 semifinal victory.

"We all have a great deal of respect for the Jets," said Shula, whose club defeated New York twice during the strike-shortened, nine-game regular season. "We didn't beat them for four years, so we know what they are capable of doing to us."

The 8-3 Jets, who defeated the Los Angeles Raiders 17-14 in the other AFC semifinal on Saturday, and the 9-2 Dolphins will collide at 1 p.m. EST in the Orange Bowl. The winner will advance to Super Bowl XVII in Pasadena, Calif., on Jan. 30.

"The Jets have always been tough on us," said Miami quarterback David Woodley, alluding to New York's string of seven victories and one tie against the Dolphins from 1978-81.

"We've been doing some good things against them this season and we'll need to continue."

The Dolphins snapped the eight-game winless streak with a 45-28 season-opening victory at New York, and nipped the Jets 20-19 on Uwe von Schamann's last-minute field goal last month.

Sunday's triumph avenged a bitter 41-38 overtime loss to the Chargers in the AFC semifinals a year ago, and again left San Diego frustrated in its pursuit of the Super Bowl.

"I still think this is a great team and I'm proud to be a part of it," said quarterback Dan Fouts, rejecting suggestions that the Chargers added to their reputation of not being able to win "big" games. "I wouldn't trade places with anyone."

Fouts, however, did not try to hide the frustration. "The older you get, the disappointment is a little more," said Fouts, who has led the team into the playoffs the past four years.

The keys Sunday undoubtedly were Miami's ability to control the football offensively, and contain Fouts, who averaged a NFL-record 325.9 yards per game passing this season.

The Dolphins held the ball for more than 40 minutes, amassed 413 yards total offense and stifled Fouts, who completed only 15 of 34 passes for 191 yards, with five interceptions. The Chargers also fumbled two kickoffs that set up 10 points in the second quarter.

San Diego wide receiver Wes Chandler, who caught 49 passes for a NFL-high 1,032 yards this season, had only two receptions for 38 yards. Tight end Kellen Winslow caught a playoff-record 13 passes against Miami a year ago, but caught only one Sunday.

For Fouts, it was his worst day passing since Cincinnati held him to 185 yards in the AFC championship game last January. The Chargers' total offensive output of 247 yards was the lowest since Nov. 18, 1979 when the club amassed only 218 in a 35-7 victory over Pittsburgh.

Arnie's Army hopes for miracle; Morgan wins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gil Morgan won the golf tournament and hardly anyone noticed.

They were still cheering — cheering thankfully and gratefully — for Arnold Palmer, who gave them a moment of Camelot, a brief and shining moment of a joyous past.

"I suppose they didn't think it was possible. Maybe they were right," Palmer said Sunday after his bid to turn back the clock failed over the last nine holes of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

He was out of it when he came to the 18th. By that time Morgan had the victory locked up. But the gallery was still Arnold's.

He received a resounding ovation from the crowd surrounding the 18th green, standing a dozen-deep and announced at 26,890.

They'd come to see Palmer, the most popular player the game has ever known. Old friends who had watched him in the glory years, youngsters who couldn't honestly claim to remember his last Professional golf tour triumph, now 10 years back, all came to watch the 53-year-old Palmer make a bid to become the oldest man ever to win on the tour.

They perched on roof tops. They climbed trees. They hung from the wire fence surrounding the driving range at the Rancho Park Municipal course.

And Palmer, at least for a time, gave them what they came for. Starting one shot back, he birdied the first hole and was tied for the lead. A 4-iron shot to one foot gave him a tap-in birdie on the fifth. And, for that moment, he had the lead alone. But he 3-putted for bogey on the sixth and never led again. The dream was over.

"Just terrible, that back nine," he said after finishing off a 1-over-par 72 that left him at 275, nine under par but five back of Morgan, who played in the group behind Palmer and enjoyed something approaching solitude.

Morgan added this title to the Tucson Open championship he acquired a week ago with a back-nine move that separated him from a closely bunched pack that had seven men either leading or sharing the lead at some point during the day.

He got in position with consecutive birdies on the 12th and 13th and nailed it down with a critical, 15-foot birdie putt on the 17th.

The victory, the sixth of his career, was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and pushed his earnings for a 2-week, unbeaten season to $108,000.

Lanny Wadkins, beaten by Morgan in a playoff in Tucson, again tied for second, this time at 272, two shots back. Wadkins had a closing 70. Sharing the No. 2 spot were Gibby Gilbert, with a 69, and Mark McCumber, 70.

Police won't arrest Harvey Martin on dealer's testimony about cocaine use

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas police chief says he doesn't know whether a drug dealer was telling the truth when he testified he and Harvey Martin used cocaine together, and says that his department won't pursue the allegation against the Dallas Cowboys' defensive lineman.

Avowed drug dealer Danny Stone, who has pleaded guilty to conspiring to participate in a cocaine ring, made the allegations last week in federal court.

Martin called the accusations "a lie" and said he knew Stone only casually. Stone, a barber, cut his hair, Martin said.

"There's nothing here to go on except what this guy has said," Dallas Police Chief Billy Prince said Friday. "I don't know if he's telling the truth. Even if he is, we have no case on Harvey Martin."

"There's nothing we can investigate on this. To make a case on someone for selling or trafficking or using the cocaine, you have got to have the cocaine to test," he added.

"It would be a waste of time to assign an officer and a series of investigators, two or three officers, on the basis of the information that we've been given so far."

Stone testified for the prosecution in a plea-bargain agreement under which other charges against him were dropped. He also said he had told federal authorities earlier that Martin had purchased and used cocaine in Stone's home.

Testifying in the trial of four people accused of dealing cocaine, Stone said he and Martin used the drug "two or three" times and that the defensive end had paid for his share of the cocaine.

Federal authorities declined to comment specifically on Martin, but said they usually do not investigate the simple procurement or use of cocaine, because such activities are misdemeanors under federal law.

Dallas police did acknowledge that they investigated alleged use of cocaine by Martin three years ago on the basis of leads provided by an informant.

Investigators "got information that this was going on, and they were not able to substantiate it in any way," said Lt. J.D. Wood of the police intelligence division.

National Football League officials declined to comment on the testimony concerning Martin. Spokesman Joe

WINTER WEATHER DRIVING: HOW TO AVOID CLOSE ENCOUNTERS

Hardly a winter goes by that somehow, somewhere, you don't face a close encounter in your auto... it's enough to scare the wits out of you, and have your passengers question the safety of riding in your car.

The fact of the matter is that even if you are a proficient driver, driving during the winter can be dangerous. With wet roads, snow and ice—all elements that are difficult to predict—it takes a combination of good skills, good coordination, a keen sense of alertness and a car that is in good shape to maintain control.

While there are no sure answers to beating the elements in your car, there are certain precautions you can take to avoid danger. Let's start with the car itself.

Assuming you have checked the anti-freeze and put on the snow tires, there are other considerations that are important.

- Make certain car is lubricated and steering is checked.
- Check your battery solution level: any battery cables which are corroded or loose should be repaired. Keep a set of jumper cables in the trunk for an emergency.
- Check level of windshield-washer liquid. Use a solvent concentration that prevents freezing. Do you have scrapers and a snow brush? Clear vision is important to safety.
- Lubricate all door locks and hinges so they won't freeze, and so you won't get "frozen out."
- Check your car's exhaust system for leaks. During winter when car windows are kept closed, the possibility of a harmful leak becomes much greater than at any other time of the year. Even a few seconds of carbon monoxide poisoning can be deadly.
- Carry an emergency storm kit in your trunk. Place a few blankets, an extra jacket, matches and candles, emergency non-perishable food, a shovel, a signal light and flashlight, booster cables and chains. It's a good idea to have a first aid kit as well.
- If you are caught in a storm, stay in your car. People become easily disoriented and lost in drifting snow, especially at night. Move around in the car as much as possible, swing arms and legs, clap hands frequently. You should run the heater and the car engine only sparingly; be certain to leave a downwind window open slightly to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

That takes care of your car. Now, let's talk about you. How prepared are you?

The pathetic truth of the matter is that most people take better care of their cars than they do themselves. Mechanical fault or human fault, the result of an accident can be the same—death, disablement and pain.

How's your vision? Your hearing? Your physical coordination?

Is your brain clear to concentrate on driving, or is it clouded with aches and pains in various parts of your body?

Are you mentally alert, or are you "hung-up" on medications?

The American Chiropractic Association recommends a seasonal check-up, which would involve a complete physical examination, before winter. It should be part of a preventive health program for you and your family. Not only will it take you through the winter with greater confidence, it should also help you enjoy your winter activities with more proficiency and pleasure.

There's one other important point to remember about winter driving. If you happen to have an accident, no matter how minor, make certain you and your passengers have an examination of the back, neck and spine, for even the slightest bump or jar can affect the structural integrity of the body. This could result in serious illness that may not show up until a later date. If injury should be diagnosed, your family doctor or chiropractic will treat the problem or refer you as necessary to a specific health specialty.

Assuming your car and your body are in good shape, it takes another important ingredient for safer winter driving—caution.

Administration wooing angry farmers with PIK plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, trying to revive the rural economy, is mounting a major campaign to win support for its new crops program from farmers whose mood grows angrier as market prices grow more depressed.

"We've got to sell the program (because) we don't have another program in the bag," one Agriculture Department official said of the drive to convince farmers that the offer of surplus crops for idled acres will bolster prices.

A special 5-minute Agriculture Department television program on the payment-in-kind, or PIK, program was beamed across the country by satellite Friday. Tapes explaining it are being sent to radio stations, and publications and farm organizations are being inundated with material on the program.

"This is more intense than for any of the other farm programs we've announced," said Dave Lane, a top aide to Agriculture Secretary John Block.

President Reagan, in announcing the plan last Tuesday, urged farmers to sign on, saying it's at least a temporary solution to all the problems that have driven the nation's farm economy into a depression.

That depression, marked by four straight years of plunging farm income and the lowest overall farm prices on record, has seen farm sales skyrocket amid increasing protests and demonstrations.

In recent weeks, militant farmers blocked a Farmers Home Administration farm auction in Illinois, tear gas was used to disperse an angry mob of farmers at a sale in Colorado and scores of police and sheriff's deputies were called in to make sure another Colorado farm sale last Wednesday could be held without disruption.

Commodity markets reacted almost immediately to Reagan's announcement. Based on USDA's five-day average, prices for wheat, corn and sorghum were up a cent to 3 cents a bushel the day after the announcement as compared to the day before.

Murray Olderman On Sports

By Murray Olderman

On the face of it, delaying the NFL draft until April, while the new USFL goes out and hustles draftees for the March 6 start of its season, doesn't make sense. Especially since the NFL Players Association insisted on the later date (this year only) and forfeited the chance of having teams from both leagues compete for talent to drive salaries up.

But NFL people tell me that it was an Ed Garvey play that it was the USFL under way in good shape so he could then go out and organize its players.

SUCH A JOKER is Ralph Sampson, the big man from Virginia, who has expanded considerably as a person, literally and figuratively, in his four years at Charlottesville.

First, living on "The Lawn," which was designed by Thomas Jefferson and is an honor accorded to the top

58 students in school, he has put on 20 pounds, up to the neighborhood of 230. There is also a suspicion that his official height may have to be adjusted over the listed 7 feet, 4 inches. (If you're wondering how he sleeps, it's still on the special bed his parents had made for him when he first enrolled.)

Now for the figurative part. On a recent trip to Richmond for a basketball tournament, the Cavaliers were accompanied by Teresa Rennoe, the assistant sports information director, and another young lady, who is one of the team managers and quite naive. They shared a room.

While Teresa was out, there was a knock on the door. The roommate opened the door. In trooped the entire Virginia basketball team, led by the towering Sampson, who announced that the room had to be done over.

Later, Teresa returned to find the beds short-sheeted, the furniture rearranged and the whole room topsyturvy.

Zoeller shot a 70 in the second round. Arnold Palmer, with a 2-under-par 69, completed two trips over the 6,655-yard Rancho Park Municipal course in 135, 7-under-par, and was four back of Gilbert.
