VFW Commander-in-Chief to visit Pampa

DAVID BOWSER
 dbowser@thepampanews.com

The Commander-in-Chief of the Veteran's of Foreign Wars of the United States will be in Pampa next week.

Richard L. Eubank was elected Commander-in-Chief of the Veteran's of Foreign Wars in August, 2010, at the VFW's 111th national convention in Indianapolis.

He will be accompanied by the State Commander for the Department of Texas VFW Wayne Depute.

DANNY MARTIN, Commander of Post 1657 in Pampa, said having the Commander-in-Chief of the VFW in the Texas Panhandle is a rare occurrence.

"I think (it's happened) only one time, one made a stop on his way through,"

Martin said. "This time, we're going to have him three days."

Eubank will be in the Panhandle Feb. 14, 15 and 16.

"Monday morning, I'll pick the State Commander up in Amarillo," Martin said.

Martin and Eubank will visit a couple of area posts, including one in Clarendon.

Cornyn to run for Whip

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States Sen. John Cornyn will run for the No. 2 position in the Senate, officials in the senator's Washington, D.C. office confirmed Friday.

Current GOP Senate Whip Jon Kyl of Arizona announced Thursday that he will retire at the end of 2012.

Cornyn will face Sen. Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.) in the bid for the Senate Whip position. Cornyn was first elected to the Senate in 2002 and is chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

North Texas eyes Okla. water

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A North Texas water district is increasing its efforts to convince Oklahoma officials to sell water from the southeastern corner of the state.

Tarrant Regional Water District general manager Jim Oliver said Friday that he's encouraged by the business-like approach of new Gov. Mary Fallin and state lawmakers.

The district sued the Oklahoma Water Resources Board in 2007 to force the board to provide access to Oklahoma water. A federal judge dismissed the lawsuit last year.

District consultant Hopper Smith says the district would rather negotiate a solution than litigate one.

Fallin spokesman Alex Weintz says the governor is willing to listen to the district's proposal - but that Oklahoma's needs must come first.

The district serves about 1.8 million people in the Fort Worth area.

Alleged abuse victim testifies

LUBBOCK (AP) — A former inmate of a West Texas youth prison testified that the man accused of sexually abusing him tried to convince him their alleged sexual encounters were consensual.

The 26-year-old former inmate, who cried several times on the witness stand, testified for more than three hours Friday against John Paul Hernandez, the former principal at the school who is accused of sexually abusing teens and young men at the West Texas State School in Pyote in 2004 and 2005.

Two other former students of the school testified over the past two days.

Prosecutors allege Hernandez, 45, and another former school administrator gave inmates special treatment, candy and promises of financial aid before sexually abusing them in closets and classrooms at the state-run school, which closed last summer.

N.M. lawmakers question outage

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico lawmakers are hearing from state regulators, utility officials and residents who were without natural gas service for several days.

The state Senate is conducting a special hearing Friday on the natural gas outage that left tens of thousands of New Mexicans without service as temperatures plunged to record lows last week.

Among those testifying are executives with New Mexico Gas Co. and El Paso Natural Gas, members of the Public Regulation Commission and Gov. Susana Martinez's chief of staff, Keith Gardner.

The Public Regulation Commission has already taken the first steps to launch an independent investigation, and U.S. Sen. Jeff Bingaman is planning a field hearing of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee in New Mexico later this month to address the issue.

Execution drug supply to expire

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' prison director says he's optimistic the state can find the drug sodium thiopental or an alternative to carry out executions after Texas' supply expires at the end of March.

Rick Thaler, director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Institutional Division, said Friday outside a state prison board meeting the issue has been a top priority within the agency for several months.

Sodium thiopental is one of three drugs used in the lethal mixture given to condemned killers but the sole manufacturer in the U.S. has suspended production and supplies elsewhere have been scarce.

Two executions are scheduled this month, including one next week. Another is set for early April, days after the current Texas supply expires.

Texas is the nation's most active death penalty state.

1880s-era schooners unearthed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Utility crews digging out an area near San Francisco's Candlestick Park have unearthed two 1880s-era schooners that had once been used to ferry goods throughout the Bay Area, long before bridges and highways existed here.

Maritime experts say the ships are likely scow schooners, 90-foot long wooden workhorses common during the Gold Rush times. Only one of the some 400 scow schooners currently survives: the Alma is housed at the San Francisco Maritime National Historic Park.

Crews worked this week to excavate the area and examine the vessels.

Scott Baxter, the historical consultant on the construction project, told the San Francisco Chronicle that the boat frames will be measured, photographed and drawn, and wood samples taken.

Relics like shoes, pottery and bottles will be saved, but the ships will not.

Police ID slain man

FRISCO (AP) — Police have identified a man killed in a shooting in a Dallas suburb as a 47-year-old Frisco resident.

Frisco police Sgt. Adam Henderson says Kenneth James Andrews was found in an alley of a residential area Thursday with multiple gunshot wounds.

Henderson says the shooting appears to be an isolated incident, possibly related to Andrews' business dealings in a cash-for-gold exchange.

The violence caused the Frisco Independent School District to lock down three nearby schools for about an hour as police searched the area for a suspect.

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. gasoline prices have jumped to the highest levels ever for this time of year. The national average hit $3.127 per gallon on Friday, about 50 cents higher than a year ago.

The rise in gas pump prices has so far outpaced the increases seen in 2008. Gas prices began to soar in late February of that year, eventually hitting an all-time high of $4.11 per gallon in July.

While the dramatic price rise at the pump brings back memories of three years ago, when price spikes forced many drivers to join car pools and trade in gas-guzzling SUVs for more fuel-efficient cars, "it would be a mistake to think we're going to have that all over again," said OPIS chief oil analyst Tom Kloza.

Gasoline has climbed since November because of a temporary combination of forces that pushed energy prices higher; including stronger oil demand from China, a frigid winter in the U.S. and tension in Egypt, Kloza said.

The price of Brent crude, a key benchmark that influences U.S. gasoline prices, hit $100 per barrel in January for the first time since 2008.

"It was a perfect storm," said Kloza. Kloza thinks crude demand will slide in the U.S. by May, as refineries slow fuel production while they switch to summer blends of gas. World oil consumption also may not rise as much as expected.

One of the biggest differences between now and 2008 is that oil traders are more cautious. After rising above $147 per barrel three years ago, oil prices tumbled to below $33 per barrel in 2009. The market remembers that, Kloza said, and even the most bullish traders no longer think they can chase commodity prices higher without risk.

Meanwhile, oil prices tumbled Friday after Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak handed over power to the military and left Cairo.

Benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for March delivery fell $1.15 to settle at $85.58 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. That's lower than the price on Jan. 25, when the demonstrations in Egypt began.

Traders and investors have been concerned that the anti-government protests over the past 18 days could spread to other parts of the Middle East and disrupt oil supplies. Now that Mubarak has stepped down, the military says it will oversee a democratic transition to a new government.

"The market is getting whipsawed," oil analyst Stephen Schork said. "Everyone is playing the card that stability in Egypt is good for oil" shipments.

In other Nymex trading for March contracts, heating oil fell 1.49 cents to settle at $2.6958 per gallon and gasoline lost less than a penny to settle at $2.4652 per gallon. Natural gas lost 7.6 cents to settle at $3.910 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In London, Brent crude fell 50 cents to settle at $100.94 a barrel on the ICE Futures-Exchange.

Arizona gov. Brewer countersues Feds

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Jan Brewer sued the federal government Thursday for failing to control Arizona's border with Mexico and enforce immigration laws, and for sticking the state with huge costs associated with jailing illegal immigrants who commit crimes.

The lawsuit claims the federal government has failed to protect Arizona from an "invasion" of illegal immigrants. It seeks increased reimbursements and extra safeguards, such as additional border fences.

Brewer's court filing serves as a countersuit in the federal government's legal challenge to Arizona's new enforcement immigration law. The U.S. Justice Department is seeking to invalidate the law.

"Because the federal government has failed to protect the citizens of Arizona, I am left with no other choice," Brewer said as sign-carrying protesters yelled chants at her and at other champions of the immigration law.

Justice Department spokeswoman Tracy Schmalzer declined to comment on the filing. But a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, which is in charge of policing the country's borders, called Brewer's lawsuit a meritless action and said Border Patrol staffing is higher than ever.

"Not only do actions like this ignore all of the statistical evidence, they also belittle the significant progress that our men and women in uniform have made to protect this border and the people who live alongside it," spokesman Matthew Chandler said. "We welcome any state and local government or law enforcement agency to join with us to address the remaining challenges."

Brewer's lawsuit seeks a court order that would require the federal government to take extra steps to protect Arizona — such as more border fences — until the border is controlled. Brewer also asks for additional border agents and technology along the state's border with Mexico.

The governor isn't seeking a lump-sum award, but rather asks for policy changes in the way the federal government reimburses states for the costs of jailing illegal immigrants who are convicted of state crimes. Such changes would give the state more reimbursement.

Arizona's enforcement law was passed amid years of complaints that the federal government hasn't done enough to lessen the state's role as the nation's busiest illegal entry point. Its passage ignited protests over whether the law would lead to racial profiling, and prompted lawsuits by the Justice Department, civil rights groups and other opponents seeking to have it thrown out.

The law would have required police, while enforcing other laws, to question a person's immigration status if officers had reasonable suspicion the person was in the country illegally. That requirement was put on hold by U.S. District Judge Susan Bolton, along with a mandate that immigrants obtain or carry immigration registration papers.

The judge, however, let other parts of the law take effect, such as a provision that bans people from blocking traffic while seeking or offering day-labor services on streets.

Brewer challenged Bolton's decision in an appeals court in San Francisco. She argued the judge erred by accepting speculation by the federal government that the law might burden legal immigrants, and by concluding the federal government likely would prevail. Brewer's appeal is still pending.

Arizona Attorney General Tom Horne, one of the lawyers defending the law on behalf of the state, said Arizona bears staggering costs from illegal immigration, yet the federal government maintains the state is prevented from assisting in the enforcement of federal immigration law.

Horne said Washington has failed to protect the state against an invasion by illegal immigrants.

"The word 'invasion' does not necessarily mean invasion of one country by another country," Horne said. "It can mean large numbers of illegal immigrants from various countries."

The governor's filing hammers on the issue of the state's unreimbursed costs for jailed illegal immigrants. Brewer's predecessor, Janet Napolitano, who is now the Homeland Security secretary, regularly sent the Justice Department invoices seeking such reimbursement when she was governor.

The lawsuit doesn't say exactly how much reimbursement money the state is seeking. Instead, it asks the court to interpret the criteria on which the reimbursements are based, which the state believes will ensure it gets more funding.

Brewer's filing noted Arizona's latest annual reimbursement from the federal government totaled nearly $10 million and the state had to eat an additional $125 million.

Democratic Sen. Kyrsten Sinema of Phoenix, an opponent of the law, said Brewer's filing was intended to draw attention from the state's budget woes. Sinema noted the federal government has hired 8,000 new Border Patrol agents and added hundreds of miles of fencing along the U.S.-Mexico border in recent years.

In 1818, Chile officially proclaimed its independence, more than seven years after initially renouncing Spanish rule.

In 1915, the cornerstone for the Lincoln Memorial was laid in Washington, D.C., a year to the day after groundbreaking.

In 1940, the radio play "The Adventures of Superman" debuted with Bud Collyer as the Man of Steel.

In 1959, the redesigned Lincoln penny — with an image of the Lincoln Memorial replacing two ears of wheat on the reverse side — went into circulation.

In 1973, Operation Homecoming began as the first release of American prisoners of war from the Vietnam conflict took place.

In 1999, the Senate voted to acquit President Bill Clinton of perjury and obstruction of justice.

Thought for Today: "No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent." —Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790)

Stuck inside of Memphis with the Pampa blues again

The scene outside of the hotel shuttle bus reminded me of scenes from "Ice Road Truckers," with the lumpy outline of the Interstate barely visible through packed snow and ice.

We rode with tensed muscles while James, the driver, regaled us with must-see Memphis sites (the Civil Rights Museum prominent) and opined on the relative merits of Memphis barbecue.

"Corky's," he said, followed by Rendezvous then Neely's. The best ribs were off the tourist map in a "little shack" where he went for the best barbecue you've never heard of.

Alas, the weather would prevent us from following his advice the snowstorm in Amarillo Tuesday hit the Memphis area Wednesday, turning what was supposed to be an airline flight connection into a two-day stay while Mother Nature spent her cold wrath.

We had been in Indiana the previous week, visiting our daughters. On the homebound trip, we had a layover in Memphis to connect with a flight to Amarillo.

That was Tuesday. We soon learned we weren't coming home Tuesday evening. We were in a winter storm purgatory.

The weather was OK in Memphis, but not in Amarillo. It was close to 8 p.m. We found a hotel that qualified us for a "distressed travelers" discount and spent the night fully expecting to hit the skies early in the morning before the storm hit.

The airline had other ideas, so here we were, for the second night, traveling in the hotel shuttle as the weather deteriorated around us.

Since we spent almost two full days in the Memphis International Airport, we feel we can give a faithful accounting of life there.

First, there are a number of delightful beverages available for a somewhat stiff price.

The same goes with food. You won't starve, everything is at a premium.

Secondly, no matter how nice the facility or the people who work there, travelers who are delayed on the home trek get cranky.

Sue and I asked nicely and waited politely while a young lady worked some computer magic and managed to book us on an earlier flight on our second day of limbo.

Other people took a different approach with their frustrations evident in raised voices and demands for managers, etc.

It was like our own little airport reality show.

All of the airline personnel were obviously trained in irate passenger control.

They were oh-so-patient and attentive while traveler-with-a-nasty-attitude did everything up to hold-my-breath-until-I-turn-blue in protest of her predicament.

She was certain the employee "just didn't understand" what she had been through and that surely there was "someone else to talk to" who could tame the elements and make her happy.

I put down my book to watch.

The airline employees would have been fully justified in making the irate passengers stand in the nearest corner until they could be civil. In fact, I was hoping that would happen, or at least they would summon security. It was certainly justified, but it was not to be.

Instead, they just peered silently over their spectacles while the irate ones rambled irritably to a stop. Sometimes the "manager" was summoned who did the same thing.

Eventually, after all the wailing and gnashing of teeth, Miss Irate recognized that there was nothing to be done about the grand snowstorm howling outside and that, no matter how hard you stamped your feet, you weren't going anywhere lady.

It was truly entertaining and my only regret is that there was no popcorn to be found.

Well, that and the fact that the ubiquitous TV screens tuned to CNN seemed to be on an endless loop stating that Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak would be resigning at any time. After three or four hours of that, I was ready to offer him my seat if he would just go already.

The boarding announcement of our flight to Amarillo was like hearing angels sing. Our group waiting to board was well-behaved, but there was an undercurrent of quiet desperation — a feeling that a group of people were determined they were getting on that airplane and sleeping in their own bed that night.

Or they would be speaking to the manager.

Sunday Horoscope

(Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience. For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.)

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Feb. 13, 2011:

Aries: Your soaring creativity could define your year. Your mind breaks past previously self-imposed barriers, allowing a whole new set of options to open up. Excitement and newness mark your interactions. Communication flourishes, and a greater sense of happiness with your personal life emerges. If you are single, you could find it very easy to be in a relationship. Enjoy rather than look to the future. If you are attached, the relationship benefits from your new mind-set. GEMINI is an endless source of fun.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 Communicate, even if you would like to pull back. If you need inspiration, go into your imagination. Unexpected jolts will only strengthen an idea. Others cloud an issue. Decide what is more important: being with this person or having your way. Tonight: At a favorite munchies spot.

This Week: Getting out of the gate could be slow. Easily, it could be not until Wednesday that the bright-eyed Ram surfaces. Good news: You make up for lost time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Whatever you do, you do 125 percent. Enjoying yourself takes a high priority. Because there could be a toll, your tendency to go overboard might not be a possibility. Treat a loved one, but don't overdo it. Inspiration comes from a respected friend. Tonight: Stick to your budget — be it money or calories.

This Week: Schedule meetings, return calls and be the personality kid on the block. Wednesday, you opt for a little introversion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Use your magnetism to heat up a relationship and add that magic. Isn't that better? Others are naturally responsive at this moment, with the exception of one authority figure. You can count on this person to do the unexpected! Tonight: Your choice.

This Week: Confirm financially that your figures are accurate, then you can relax. Wednesday, you might be too busy for your taste.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 Everyone needs a day off to center and/or take care of personal needs. You could be exhausted by your own need to keep the peace. Though it might be good to be responsive, it is also important to remain responsive to oneself. Tonight: Take care of yourself.

This Week: Expect to be instrumental in a major project or situation. Demands ease up midweek.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 Do what you do naturally — socialize and be with others. You will be happiest where the crowds are, whether it is a movie, a favorite haunt or a ballgame. A loved one or dear friend often inspires you. Right now, you might wonder if this person is reality-bound! Tonight: Living the moment.

This Week: Your timing is off until Wednesday, when you energize and hit this month's peak days.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Taking a stand gives you an opportunity to express your values and good will. On the other hand, this type of leadership might limit your options as far as enjoying yourself. A partner or close associate might decide to go in a different direction. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

This Week: Act as if you have a magic wand Monday and Tuesday. Return to normal Wednesday!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Keep someone who's at a distance in mind. Meeting this person midway could delight you and bond this tie even more. Escaping your present environment helps relieve stress. What is to stop you but you? Tonight: Express your inspiration.

This Week: Others eye your performance. Don't kid yourself — use good sense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Bond with a favorite person. Indulge in what this person loves most. Do what makes him or her happy. At the same time, you will innately relax, knowing you are eliminating an inner tension that might exist between you. Follow an idea that proves to be inspirational. Tonight: Add your unique touch.

This Week: Sign up for a class. Decide to do something you have never done before.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 Defer to loved ones, honoring the fact that really nothing has to be done today. Ease up when dealing with someone who can be vague and maybe even deceptive. Unexpected developments could force another set of plans.

Tonight: Go with another person's ideas.

This Week: Negotiations could take on an intense quality through Tuesday. You might decide to go back to the drawing board.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 A project could become very frustrating. You might decide to toss it in your cosmic wastebasket. You could be wasting your time, and might enjoy going to the movies or some other pastime instead. Use care with spending. Tonight: You don't need to treat all the time.

This Week: Others dominate. You don't make the best "yes man." Go off and do your own thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 Your playfulness emerges when dealing with a child or another person. Your sense of humor helps others understand a foible that they too might have. Be careful not to spend wildly without reason. You could feel pushed by what you think is someone's expectation. Tonight: Be your happy-go-lucky self.

This Week: Don't worry; just get your work done.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 Perhaps your unpredictability causes other people to leave you out or to not want to get together. If this pattern bothers you, the time has come to change it. Your intuition guides you with a personal or domestic matter. Tonight: Invite a friend over.

This Week: Plug some of your innate creativity into your work. You'll see the difference!

Democracy protests finally bring down Egypt's Mubarak

CAIRO (AP) — Fireworks burst over Tahrir Square and Egypt exploded with joy and tears of relief after pro-democracy protesters brought down President Hosni Mubarak with a momentous march on his palaces and state TV. Mubarak, who until the end seemed unable to grasp the depth of resentment over his three decades of authoritarian rule, finally resigned Friday and handed power to the military.

Mubarak

"The people ousted the regime," rang out chants from crowds of hundreds of thousands massed in Cairo's central Tahrir, or Liberation, Square and outside Mubarak's main palace several miles away in a northern district of the capital.

The crowds in Cairo, the Mediterranean city of Alexandria and other cities around the country erupted into a pandemonium of cheers and waving flags. They danced, hugged and raised their hands in prayer after Vice President Omar Suleiman made the announcement on national TV just after nightfall. Some fell to kiss the ground, and others chanted, "Goodbye, goodbye" and "put your heads up high, you're Egyptian."

"Finally we are free," said Safwan Abou Stat, a 60-year-old protester. "From now on anyone who is going to rule will know that these people are great."

The success of the biggest popular uprising ever seen in the Arab world had stunning implications for the region, the United States and the West, and Israel.

Mubarak was the symbol of the implicit decades-old deal the United States made in the Middle East: Support for autocratic leaders in return for their guarantee of stability, a bulwark against Islamic militants and peace or at least an effort at peace — with Israel.

The United States at times seemed overwhelmed throughout the 18 days of upheaval, fumbling to juggle its advocacy of democracy and the right to protest, its loyalty to longtime ally Mubarak and its fears Muslim fundamentalists could gain a foothold. Those issues will only grow in significance as Egypt takes the next steps towards what the protest movement hopes will be a true democracy in which the Muslim Brotherhood will likely to be a significant political player.

Neighboring Israel watched with the crisis with unease, worried that their 1979 peace treaty could be in danger. It quickly demanded on Friday that post-Mubarak Egypt continue to adhere to it. Any break seems unlikely in the near term: The military leadership supports the treaty. While anti-Israeli feeling is strong among Egyptians and future ties may be strained, few call for outright abrogating a treaty that has kept peace after three wars in the past half-century.

From the oil-rich Gulf states in the east to Morocco in the west, regimes both pro- and anti-U.S. could not help but worry they could see a similar upheaval. Several of the region's authoritarian rulers have made pre-emptive gestures of democratic reform to avert their own protest movements.

The lesson many took: If it could happen in only three weeks in Egypt, where Mubarak's lock on power had appeared unshakable, it could happen anywhere. Only a month earlier, Tunisia's president was forced to step down in the face of protests.

Perhaps more surprising was the genesis of the force that overthrew Mubarak. The protests were started by a small core of secular, liberal youth activists organizing on the Internet who only a few months earlier struggled to gather more than 100 demonstrators at a time. But their work through Facebook and other social network sites over the past few years built a greater awareness and bitterness among Egyptians over issues like police abuse and corruption.

When he called the first major protest, on Jan. 25, they tapped into a public inspired by Tunisia's revolt and thousands turned out, beyond even the organizers' expectations. From there, protests swelled, drawing hundreds of thousands. The Muslim Brotherhood — Egypt's powerful Islamic fundamentalist movement — joined in. But far from U.S. fears the Brotherhood could co-opt the protests, the movement often seemed to co-opt the Brotherhood, forcing it to set aside its hard-line ideology at least for now to adhere to democratic demands.

Mubarak, a former air force commander came to power after the 1981 assassination of his predecessor, Anwar Sadat by Islamic radicals. Throughout his rule, he showed a near obsession with stability, using rigged elections and a hated police force accused of widespread torture to ensure his control.

He resisted calls for reform even as public bitterness grew over corruption, deteriorating infrastructure and rampant poverty in a country where 40 percent live below or near the poverty line.

Up to the last hours, Mubarak sought to cling to power, handing some of his authorities to Suleiman while keeping his title. But an explosion of protests Friday rejecting the move appeared to have pushed the military into forcing him out completely. Hundreds of thousands marched throughout the day in cities across the country as soldiers stood by, besieging his palaces in Cairo and Alexandria and the state TV building. A governor of a southern province was forced to flee to safety in the face of protests there.

Mubarak himself fled to his isolated palace in the Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheikh, 250 miles from the turmoil in Cairo. His fall came 32 years to the day after the collapse of the shah's government in Iran.

Vice President Suleiman — who appears to have lost his post as well in the military takeover — appeared grim as he delivered the short announcement.

"In these grave circumstances that the country is passing through, President Hosni Mubarak has decided to leave his position as president of the republic," he said. "He has mandated the Armed Forces Supreme Council to run the state. God is our protector and succor."

Nobel Peace laureate Mohammed ElBaradei, whose young supporters were among the organizers of the protest movement, said, "This is the greatest day of my life."

Weather puts the big freeze on most agricultural activities

COLLEGE STATION — Freezing cold hammered agricultural operations, halting fieldwork, damaging crops and stressing livestock, according to Texas AgriLife Extension Service personnel.

Though there were some positive aspects noted — death of overwintering insects and moisture from melt-off — most reports the winter storm's affects on agriculture were negative.

"Producers were busy tending to livestock by putting out feed ahead of the storm, placing livestock behind wind breaks, thawing water and busting ice," said Mike Bragg, AgriLife Extension agent for Dallam County, northwest of Amarillo. "There was one report of a dairy being completely without water due to frozen pipes and producers had to hand-deliver water to cows. With record temperatures being broken as far back as early 1900s this was definitely the coldest period to date."

"Extremely cold temperatures had cattle producers feeding extra hay and cake to cattle across the county," said Steven Sparkman, AgriLife Extension agent for Hardeman County, northwest of Wichita Falls. "A cold, dry snow fell Tuesday and Wednesday; little if any beneficial moisture came from the system."

"Recent cold weather had mixed affect on production," said Glenn Avriett, AgriLife Extension agent for Comal County, near San Antonio. "Cold weather caused stress on animals, damaged some winter pastures and recently emerged spring wheat, but the moisture was welcome. Time will tell how much crop damage there will be on winter pastures and spring wheat, but there were no reports of animal deaths."

AgriLife Extension district reporters compiled the following summaries:

PANHANDLE: The region had extremely cold temperatures, with a few days of wind chills as cold as minus 35 degrees. Some snow fell early in the reporting period but was blown around by 30 mph winds. Producers were busy tending to livestock, putting out feed ahead of the storm, placing livestock behind wind-breaks, thawing water and breaking ice.

The cold, windy weather was very hard on the cattle that did not have shelter. Effects of this weather on crops cannot be fully determined at the time of this report, but record lows dating back to early 1900's were broken. The ground was frozen so hard that no land preparation for field crops could be done. Supplemental feeding of cattle on rangeland continued.

ROLLING PLAINS: The region received much needed moisture but it arrived as more than 6 inches of ice and as snow. It was extremely cold, with temperatures dropping into the single digits and with wind chills below zero. The upside was that when the snow melted most of the moisture was directly absorbed by the soil. The hard freeze was expected to dramatically reduce insect populations. The weather was hard on livestock, and producers had to supply large amounts of supplemental feed and hay. Livestock were in generally fair condition with some in poor condition. The extreme cold froze stock ponds, and some producers had to haul water to livestock.

SOUTH PLAINS: Sub-freezing temperatures lasted for three days and five nights. Some days, temperatures dipped into the single digits, which along with high-winds caused extremely low wind chill factors. Snowfall ranged from 0.2 inch to 4 inches. Soil-moisture levels were very short to short. Winter wheat was in poor condition and maturity levels were minimal. Pastures and rangeland were in poor to fair condition. Livestock were in fair to good condition. Many ranchers were struggling to keep their livestock hydrated as many water troughs were frozen over. Supplemental feeding of livestock continued.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old girl who is obsessed with remaining a virgin. I'm uncomfortable around guys my age for fear they will want sex.

I am tormented all day long by thoughts of losing my virginity. If I see a mildly racy scene in a movie or have a sexual thought and experience some sort of physiological reaction, I become extremely upset. I must repeatedly reassure myself that any arousal was not deliberate.

I'm sick of feeling so anxious over this stuff. I sometimes wish I didn't know about sex at all. What can I do? — EMBARRASSED IN NEW YORK

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Stop beating yourself up for having normal feelings for someone your age. As young women (and men) mature, sexual feelings happen.

They are not shameful, and experiencing them does not mean they must be acted upon.

The more you tell yourself NOT to think about something, the more you will. (I feel similarly about chocolate.) One way to deal with obsessive thoughts is to divert the thought into an action that IS acceptable. In your case, becoming involved in sports might rechannel some of your sexual energy. The key is to stay busy. But if your obsessive thoughts persist, they should be discussed with a licensed mental health professional.

DEAR ABBY: After entertaining family and friends with BBQ holiday dinners, which includes purchasing all the food and beverages, must I send guests home with leftovers? Over the years, it has been "expected" that I'd give them a take-home dinner at my expense. What's right — pack the leftovers for my own personal use or divide them up for guests? — LEFT HOLDING THE BAG

DEAR LEFT HOLDING THE BAG: People "expect" you to send the leftovers with them because that's the pattern you set all these years. Because you now prefer to keep them for your personal use, pare down the menu and prepare less food.

You might also clean up earlier and put the excess food away — out of sight, out of mind. If you are questioned, deal with it by pointing out that in this economy everyone needs to cut back — and while in the past you sent food home with your guests, for the foreseeable future "charity" begins at home. YOUR home.

Last year alone, those volunteers provided 549 hours and 15 minutes of service to 77 different people, a contribution of $11,122 to the Pampa community.

Tillery

...helping, when they finally got it figured out, and they were so excited. You just get so excited for them and all their hard work. It really made me want to help other children that opportunity."

That moment gave the young Tillery the jolt of affirmation she needed to know that she'd chosen the right path for herself.

"I always wanted to be a teacher, ever since I was 5," said Tillery with a chuckle. "It was my dream. My father, I was in high school, just to make sure I wanted to do it, I was an aide for several teachers throughout those years. There are lots of teachers in my family, so I wanted to follow their footsteps."

It was all so good on that career choice. This is Tillery's second year teaching kindergarten at Austin Elementary and she's loving every minute of it.

Not bad for somebody who originally didn't want to teach kindergarten in the first place. Originally, Tillery said, she was interested in teaching between second and fourth grade.

"I actually did not want to teach anything under second grade," Tillery said, laughing. "I was like, 'Oh, baby, baby babies. I don't want to teach them.'"

But then she was hired on as a kindergarten teacher, and she says, "The kids are just so fun. They come in every day, and they love school. You never know what they're going to tell you."

Tillery said that it was about halfway through her first year when she realized that she'd fallen in love with teaching kindergarten.

"We do our beginning-of-the-year testing about the first of September," she said, "and it was really when I saw that middle-of-the-year test that that I saw the tremendous growth of my students." Tillery said. "I was like, 'I was a part of that.' It was very rewarding for me to know that I helped those kids achieve that goal."

Part of helping her kids reach those goals involves praising them even at their age, Tillery said.

"I expect a lot from my kids," she said. "I expect the most from my kids, and I strive to get it from them. It starts from the very first day that I get them. The first thing you have to teach them is responsibility. Even at five years old, they can learn to be responsible. You just have to work with them and be very consistent with them."

"That is the key to kindergarten. It's consistency."

Consistency and accountability, Tillery added. "I hold them accountable," she said. "I'm like, 'If you didn't do this, here's the consequences.' They don't know. They know what I expect from them, and it hasn't changed since the first day of school."

Tillery said that while many people underestimate kindergarteners because of their age, kindergarten is the perfect time to encourage kids to learn because of how willing they are to try new things.

"A lot of people just think, 'Oh, they're 5,'" she said. "They can't do that. They just need to play."

"I say no. They are 5. They can learn to bring their backpack every day. They can learn to put their clothes up and everything."

A lot of kids, when they really see the rewards, they're willing to work hard for them. They're like, "I could do that now. I used to not be able to do that at all. It's really cool when they see what they've accomplished."

That enthusiasm to try is the most important thing to impart to her kids, Tillery said.

"I always teach them to try. I always say, 'Just try for me.' Even if they get it wrong, I try to encourage them just so they know that it's important to put in that effort. Right or wrong, I always want them to try. That's my big thing."

While Tillery said that she's very big on positive reinforcement, she also said that it's important to have rules in a kindergarten classroom.

"I'm just that kind of teacher," Tillery said. "I was brought up that way. My kids have to be very respectful. They say, 'Yes, ma'am' and 'No, ma'am.' I'm the same with them. We respect each other."

Tillery said that her own childhood has had a large impact on her teaching style.

"I was raised very, very traditionally, and that makes a difference with me," she said. "You respect others. You respect your elders. You don't speak when somebody else is speaking. You wait your turn. Things like that. I learned those growing up, and I think that it's important to teach our kids that, too."

That teaching style has earned Tillery rave reviews from parents and co-workers alike. Still, it's always been about the kids for Tillery; all the accolades don't compare to getting to be a part of their learning experience, she said.

"I just love my job, and it's because of the kids," Tillery said. "I love my kids. They're so much fun and happy and eager to learn. It's so great to get to be around them and be a part of them learning."

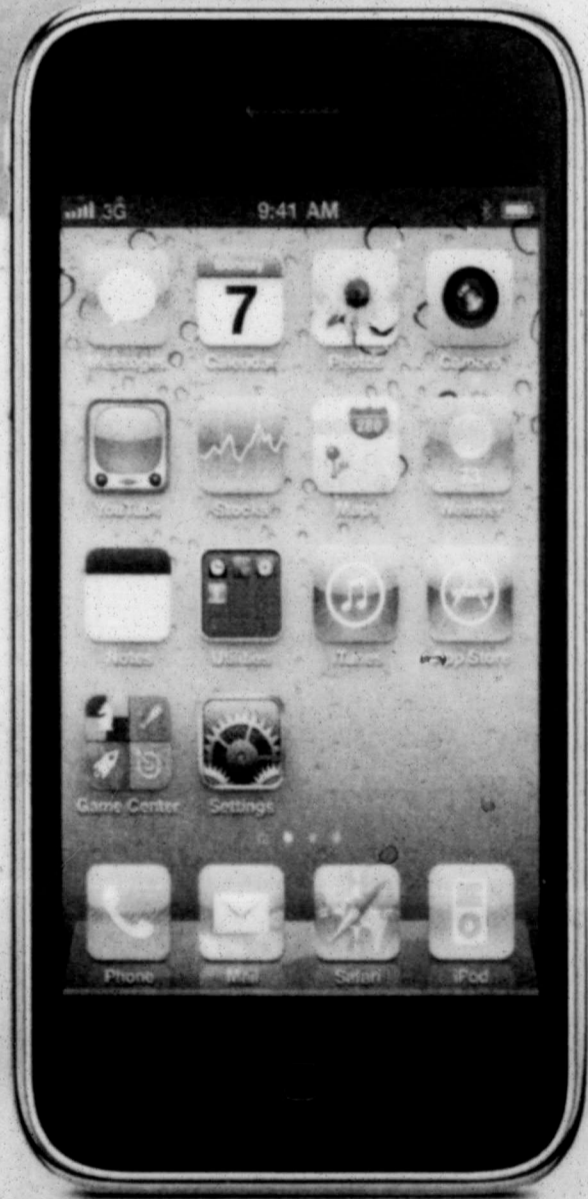

"That's why I wanted to be a teacher. It's what I wanted to do from the beginning, and it turned out great."

Harvesters clinch district with win over rival Borger

ANDREW GLOVER

There couldn't be a more perfect way for the Pampa Harvesters to clinch their first district title since 1996 than to beat their arch rival the Borger Bulldogs on their home court. The irony was Pampa didn't know they clinched until they found out about Dalhart's victory over Perryton in the locker room after their 73-61 victory Friday.

Pampa clinched the title with Dalhart's win over Perryton. Head coach Dustin Miller said it personally means a lot to him.

"Pampa basketball means a lot to me," Miller said. "Not for Coach Miller but for Pampa basketball. It's back where it belongs, it's back where it's supposed to be. In my mind it's like the Lombardi trophy going back to Green Bay."

Senior forward Garrett Ericson said it was a goal since he was a freshman.

"I've grown up watching Harvester basketball," Ericson said. "It's been a long time since they've won a district championship. To bring the district championship back to Pampa my senior year, it means a lot."

Senior swingman Jonathan Polasek said winning district was a lifelong goal.

"I've been waiting 18 years," Polasek said. "It's one of those things you dream about as a little kid. After you've seen Palo Duro dominate all those years, it's kind of nice to be district champs in our new district."

The Harvesters shooting which struggled Thursday, came alive in the first quarter. Ericson nailed two threes and scored nine points in the first. Polasek nailed a three and scored seven points and junior guard Latigo Collins also hit a three and scored seven. Pampa jumped out to a 25-4 lead halfway through the quarter and led 25-10 after one.

Ericson said when the team got their shots to fall it built confidence.

"Once we got rolling in the first quarter, a couple of us hit shots and everyone else hit shots," Ericson said. "Last night we couldn't get any shots to fall. It's a transition thing. If nobody is hitting, nobody is hitting and if everyone is hitting, everyone hitting."

Pampa maintained their lead in the second quarter and didn't allow Borger to get closer than 13. The Harvesters led by as many as 20. Collins and Ericson scored six points each to lead Pampa's offense. The Harvesters outscored Borger 15-12 and led 40-22 at halftime.

In the second half, the Bulldogs put the Harvester faithful at the edge of their seats. Borger opened the third on a 15-4 run and cut Pampa's lead to seven. Jeremiah Jones led the Bulldogs' offense with seven points. Senior swingman Joseph Mechelay put an end to Borger's run with a layup. Pampa didn't allow Borger to get closer the rest of the quarter and led 51-43 after three.

The Bulldogs drew as close as six in the fourth quarter but didn't get closer. Collins made a free throw and junior post Reid Miller put back an offensive rebound to expand Pampa's lead to 64-55. Polasek followed with a jumper to put Pampa in front by double digits. The Harvesters outscored the Bulldogs 22-18 in the fourth.

Coach Miller said he was pleased that they shot the ball well.

"I told them at halftime, where was that team in Dalhart," Miller said. "If we shot like that last night would have been a different story. It does make me nervous when we shoot the ball well early because we tend to relax. We kind of did in the second half."

Jamon Hearon led the Bulldogs in scoring with 14. Tyrell Haynes and Grant Boren followed with 12 each. Collins led all scorers with 25. Ericson followed with 18. Polasek scored 12 and Miller put up 10 points.

Coach Miller said his son had his best offensive game of the season.

"I'm not talking just point-wise," Miller said. "A lot of stuff Reid does goes unnoticed."

The junior varsity (7-13, 2-5) lost 32-29. Coach Matt Embry said the defense played well but offensively they couldn't hit a shot.

"My leading scorer had six points," Embry said. "You're not win games scoring 29 points."

The Harvesters (16-11, 6-2) clinched a bye in the bidistrict round and advance to the area round. Pampa hosts Perryton (15-14, 4-4) 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Junior post Miller said he wants to win the finale.

"I ain't cutting them down after a loss," Miller said. "It's going to be a great moment and it better be packed."

Polasek said he wants to have a happy net-cutting after the game.

"We will have to focus," Polasek said. "The last time Perryton came it was exciting, it was Pack-the-Pit and there was a lot of people. We are expecting a lot of people Tuesday. We just have to focus and give a good show so we can cut down the nets for real."

Garrett Ericson leaps to contest a shot from Borger's Jeremiah Jones in the first half Friday at Borger. Pampa won 73-61 to clinch their first district title since 1996, when they also last won state.

Harvesters earned district in March

On Friday night, the Pampa Harvesters clinched their first boys basketball district title since 1996, when they won the state title. It was in third grade in Littleton, Colo., and most of the current Harvesters weren't older than three.

Though the title was clinched in February, it wasn't earned then. The Harvesters started to earn their rights to a district championship in March, a month after they ended the 2009-10 season short of the playoffs.

After last season, head coach Dustin Miller was trying to figure out why his team wasn't successful and came to the conclusion that his team needed to work harder. For the first month of offseason, the Harvesters didn't touch a basketball and focused on getting in shape.

"We laid a foundation of work ethic in the offseason," Miller said. "Let's build a house on the foundation we laid."

Entering their first season in their new district, Pampa wanted to reestablish the tradition of Harvester basketball that started when Clifton McNeely led five teams to state titles in the 1950s. Pampa started the season strong winning 10 of their first 15 games. The Harvesters won the River Road Tournament and finished second in the Caprock Classic. Most of Pampa's nine non-district losses were to large 5A schools, as well as a Top 15 4A school and a Top Five 2A school. The grueling non-district schedule helped prepare Pampa for district.

In the district opener, it looked like the Harvesters were going to get off to a shaky start, when Dalhart opened the first with a 14-2 lead. Pampa responded and took control of that game as they did with most of their district opponents. The Harvesters gained momentum with a rout of Borger at home, when the very players McNeely coached were being honored.

Pampa's season took flight when the Perryton Rangers visited on senior night February 4 and the Harvesters put the district title within grasp. After Thursday's setback against Dalhart, Pampa made sure they had no hangover from the loss and dominated their arch-rival

Borger in the first half. In the second half, the Harvesters made sure the game didn't go to the dogs and closed the door when they had to.

Pampa's success starts first with senior forward Garrett Ericson and junior guard Latigo Collins. Both of these players led the Harvesters' offensive attack in just about every game. Senior point guard Zach Murray developed into a solid floor leader and is great ball distributor on offense. Defensively Murray gained a niche in getting steals, and leading the fast-break. Senior forward Jonathan Polasek always played with high energy and though he may not be a scorer every night, his play helped lead to scores. Defensively, Polasek would occasionally be one of the team's leader's in rebounds and produced several turnovers. Junior post Reid Miller does the little things necessary to win ball games. On offense, Miller kept possessions alive with offensive rebounds and on occasion would be one of the scoring leaders. Defensively, Miller would swat the ball away from opponents and also crash the boards. The junior post is also good at ending the opponents' possessions by taking charges.

For a basketball team to achieve the starting five needs a good bench behind them. The Harvesters' bench supported its starters adequately. Junior swingman Cole Engle developed into the sixth man this season and often found himself in the top three in scoring. Engle made several key three-pointers during the season, two which helped the Harvesters pull away from Dalhart in the district opener. Sophomore Derrek Pollard has provided nice relief for Reid during the season and has established himself as a shot blocker on defense. Pollard has also been amongst the leaders in rebounds and points in a few games. Senior Brandon Chairez has emerged in his role to create a spark for the team. Chairez really fulfilled that in the February 4 game against Perryton, when he made the game-tying and game-winning shots. Senior Joseph Mechelay has provided solid minutes all-season and usually relieves Pampa's big men when they get in foul trouble. Defensively, Mechelay has stopped some of the opponent's hot scorers. A prime example was when he shut down Floydada's post in the Caprock tournament. Greg Cabrales always goes all in when he is on the floor and is dangerous when he's left wide open beyond the arc.

Great basketball teams have great support behind them and the Harvesters definitely have a strong fan base. Pampa to date is 5-3 at home and have won their last three games. The R.I.O.T. (Rowdiest Individuals of Texas) student section is an opponent's worst nightmare. The Harvester faithful also travel well as there is a strong contingency on the road.

Clinching district is only one accomplishment the Harvesters want to achieve this season. In two weeks, they start their road to state in the area round. Pampa would love nothing more than to collect six more wins and add on to the legacy of Harvester basketball.

Simon earns special achievement award at PSHOF

aglover@thepampanews.com

Pampa office supply owner Max Simon gained a passion for golf at a very young age.

"Since I was five I would go with my dad to the driving range," Simon said.

Simon found he had skill in the sport and will be awarded a special achievement award at the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame (PSHOF) induction ceremony 2 p.m. Sunday at the Ordway Auditorium in Amarillo College.

Simon placed in a long-drive competition in Oklahoma City and qualified for regionals in St. Louis. In St. Louis, Simon placed and qualified for the national competition in Mesquite, Nev. Simon said it's neat to be honored.

"It's great to be honored for something you're passionate about," Simon said.

Former Pampa coach Tex Nolan will be inducted into the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame. Nolan, a native of Lefors, coached at Pampa from 1963-1966. Nolan spent the last 18 years working in Amarillo Independent School District and was athletic director for 13. During his time as athletic director 16 Amarillo ISD teams won state championships. Dick Bivins Stadium was renovated in 2005 and was the second field turf surface in the U.S. in 1998 and started a girls softball program in 1998. The former Pampa coach was inducted into the Texas High School Athletic Directors' Hall of Honor in 2006.

Speeds go over 200 mph on Daytona's new repaved oval

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The recently repaved surface at Daytona International Speedway is fast. Really fast. Maybe too fast.

In the most significant test on the 2 1/2-mile superspeedway, cars topped 203 mph Friday during practice for the Budweiser Shootout.

Joey Logano turned the fast lap with an average speed of 203.087 mph in the second of two practice sessions. Joe Gibbs Racing teammate Kyle Busch also topped 203 mph. Several others were close behind. In all, 10 cars hit 200 mph. Four more were in the 199 mph range, creating some concern at NASCAR's most famous track.

"The conditions are great," four-time NASCAR champion Jeff Gordon said. "It's really smooth, it's got a lot of grip. Fast."

But will the sport's governing body allow those speeds to last? Two-time Daytona 500 champion Bill Elliott topped 210 mph during qualifying for the 1987 Daytona 500, and NASCAR responded by introducing horsepower-sapping restrictor plates the following year.

"I don't think the plate is going to change the speeds a lot," Gordon said. "We're locking up and that's what's making it fast. I'm curious to see if they do anything."

NASCAR already reduced the size of the Daytona restrictor plate following a tire test in December. The top speed then was 197.5 mph.

Another adjustment could be on tap. "Yea it is cool. But no way it'll last," driver Brad Keselowski posted on Twitter.

NASCAR spokesman Kerry Tharp said officials would monitor speeds during Daytona 500 practice Saturday "and see how things settle out."

All 24 cars entered in Saturday night's exhibition race turned laps in practice. But instead of the three-wide pack racing many expect when the green flag drops, drivers hooked up in bumper-to-bumper, tandem formations and drafted their way around NASCAR's most famous track.

The two-car drafts were faster than anything seen at Daytona in years.

"The game has changed, man," Gordon said. "We just figured it out. Everybody's figured out how to get locked in behind the other guy. It used to be you'd get in there, and you'd hit him and knock him away. Now we've realized, we've figured out how to hold the brake and get the car in there. Once you get in there, they're just locked on."

"You just didn't think you could drive around this track, and you certainly couldn't before, but with the new pavement and as smooth and as much grip as it has, now you can."

Daytona recently completed its second repaving project, the first since 1979. The notorious bumps in turns two and four are gone, as is the pesky pothole that plagued the race last February. Pit road is wider for increased safety. The result is a smoother track that causes less tire wear, makes handling almost a non-issue and creates faster laps.

The Shootout could be a wild, 75-lap event.

"Who knows how it's going to work out?" Dale Earnhardt Jr. said.

Drivers with teammates in the field should have an advantage, especially if the race ends up being decided by two-car hookups.

"Everybody is trying to figure out who to push, when to push and how long to push," Busch said.

The speeds weren't the only eye-opener Friday. The lights on the backstretch went out during the second practice session, with several cars racing through the dark at 200-plus mph. Track officials quickly halted the session, parked the cars and got the problem fixed.

Cowboys hire Packers aide

IRVING (AP) — Jimmy Robinson was hired Friday as receivers coach for the Dallas Cowboys, joining their staff less than a week after coaching for the champion Green Bay Packers in the Super Bowl.

Robinson, who spent the past five seasons in Green Bay, replaces Ray Sherman. Robinson also gets the title of assistant head coach with the Cowboys.

Sherman was the receivers coach the past four seasons and interviewed for the Cowboys' head coaching vacancy after the season. Jason Garrett became the head coach and Sherman's contract as an assistant coach wasn't renewed.

Robinson has been an NFL assistant for 21 years after six seasons as a player. He has coached for Atlanta (1990-93), Indianapolis (1994-97), the New York Giants (1998-2003), New Orleans (2004-05) and Green Bay.

During Robinson's time with the Giants, Garrett was a backup quarterback in New York.

As an assistant coach, Robinson has worked with several star wide receivers, including Donald Driver, Donte Stallworth, Joe Horn, Amani Toomer, Marvin Harrison and Andre Rison.

Among the receivers Robinson will work with in Dallas are two-time Pro Bowler Miles Austin, Roy Williams and Dez Bryant, coming off a shortened but solid rookie season.

Robinson played for the Giants (1976-79), San Francisco (1980) and Denver (1981) after being a 15th-round pick in the 1985 draft out of Georgia Tech. He had 85 career receptions for 1,437 yards and six touchdowns in 58 NFL games.

He led the Giants in receptions in 1977 and 1978. He scored the first New York touchdown in Giants Stadium history, on a 30-yard pass from Craig Morton against Dallas on Oct. 10, 1976.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Feb. 14, 2011:

This year, you waver more than usual. Take time alone to sort through issues and to reduce tension. At times, demands in your daily life could be overwhelming. It is imperative that you take better care of your health, eat well and exercise. Often, what is said could change radically given time. Be smart, and don't force any issues. If you are single, take your time before committing. Someone might not be all he or she appears to be. If you are attached, you might differ from your sweetie a little more. Accept his or her opinions with respect. Both of you come from different perspectives. CANCER might be hard to work with.

A baby born today, Feb. 14, 2011, is an Aries Sun with a Cancer Moon.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5 - Dynamic; 4 - Positive; 3 - Average; 2 - So-so; 1 - Difficult

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

★★★★ You could be overly emotional, with everything that is swirling around you. Take a deep breath. Trust your abilities. Pressure builds as you juggle many different concerns. You will land on your feet like a cat with nine lives. Tonight: Homeward bound.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

★★★★ You could be hard-pressed to get anything done. Don't try to juggle too much at one time. You are unusually resourceful and buoyant. Walk in someone's shoes who is at a distance. Tonight: Run errands on the way home.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

★★★★ You know your limits. Establish a better sense of direction. Rework a personal matter with a partner. Set aside time for this discussion when you are not so driven. Understand that someone only wants to please you! Tonight: Talk turkey.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

★★★★ You could hit your share of obstacles, only because so many people feel you are capable of nearly anything. A partner or associate supports you. Don't feel pressured by his or her difficult questions. They are only questions. Tonight: Talk over dinner.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22)

★★★ Observe from behind the scenes. The situation could become a problem if you don't handle it properly. Understanding evolves between you and a confidant who understands your work. Resist a power play by not playing. Tonight: Get some R and R.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)

★★★★ Realize what a friend really means. Your supporters are clear as to the point at which they can go no further. A partner encourages you, and a meeting with this person gives you the courage to do what you really want to do. Tonight: Where you want to be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)

★★★ Sensitivity to an older relative or friend might distract you from the tasks at hand. You could be overly tired. Someone might feel like you are pushing him or her. Try not to get in a quarrel with a family member. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)

★★★★ Reach out for more information. If you get a bad feeling about a situation, honor it. Someone might push to get an agreement. Establish limits. Let others know how much you don't like getting into games of control. Tonight: Choose a mental stress-buster.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)

★★★★ Understand that certain limits might be necessary within a partnership, whether it is personal or professional. A friendship can be demanding. Use caution when dealing with banks, authority figures, etc., regarding your finances. Tonight: Let someone else make a suggestion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)

★★★ You could come off far stronger than you intended to. Relax. Being thoughtful as opposed to more challenging could work! Investigate a situation for what it has to offer. Let the other person talk. You will learn more anyway. Tonight: Defer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

★★★★ If possible, focus on work. An emotional situation could be a bit demanding. Your inner dialogue might be problematic and off. Give this situation time to simmer. You could be delighted by the difference later. Tonight: Squeeze in at least a brisk walk.

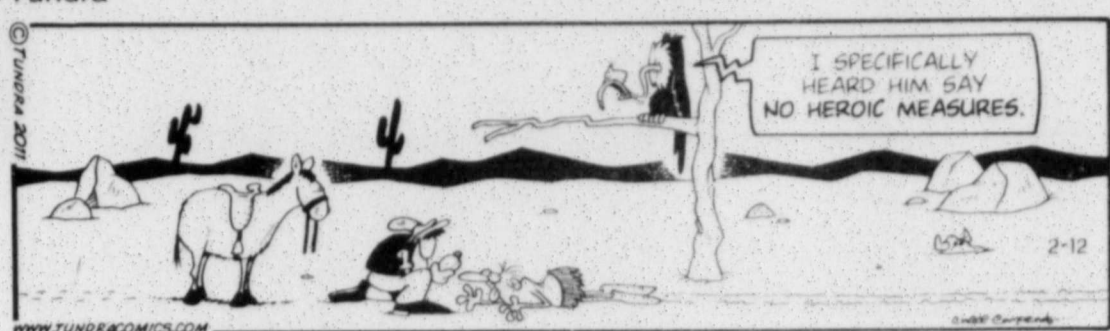

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20)

★★★★ Your creativity could save the day, if you so choose. You also might want to walk away from a demanding, pushy person and let the cards fall where they may. The call is yours, in any case. Investigate what is key in the long run, and decide what is best. Tonight: A quiet talk settles a problem.

THE PAMPA NEWS

Interesting choices headline 83rd Academy Award list

Recently, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced the nominees for the 83rd Annual Academy awards. While there were a couple of surprise inclusions and shutouts the nominees stuck pretty close to the previous awards of this season. "The King's Speech" lead the nominations with 12, "True Grit" walked away with 10, and both "The Social Network" and "Inception" scored 8 nominations each.

While its good to see "Inception" in the Best Picture category, it's a bit disappointing that Christopher Nolan was not nominated for Best Director. It's also disheartening to see "The Town," one of my favorite films of the year, left out of both the Best Picture and Director categories, as I really thought this might be Ben Affleck's year for another win.

Another surprising shutout is Andrew Garfield, whose performance in "The Social Network" was one of the year's best. And personally I was hoping "Scott Pilgrim vs. The World" would have at least been nominated for some visual effects awards, so it's a big disappointment to see it shut out.

In the Best Picture category the biggest surprise was the inclusion of indie drama, "Winter's Bone," which, while well-liked by critics, wasn't expected to be this nominated. Meanwhile "True Grit," which was all but shut out by the Golden Globes, was rightfully nominated for Best Picture, Best Director, Best Actor for Jeff Bridges, Best Supporting Actress for Hailee Steinfeld, Best Adapted Screenplay, Best Cinematography, and 4 technical awards.

I myself look forward to the Oscars every year and this year is no different, especially with James Franco, who is nominated for Best Actor for his performance in "127 Hours," and Anne Hathaway hosting. You can view a list of big category nominees below, and don't forget to pick up the paper on February 26th for our complete list of predictions for the big show.

BEST PICTURE:

David O. Russell, "The Fighter"

Bland humor, characters torpedo 'Just Go With It'

Let's start with the good.

Brooklyn Decker is in "Just Go With It," and she is very pretty.

I'd keep going, but, well, that's pretty much it.

"Just Go With It," starring Adam Sandler and premiering in theaters just in time for Valentine's Day, really does try. Still, it's hard to give a film good grades for effort when you spend the entire thing waiting to leave.

A misguided remake of 1969's "Cactus Flower" (which itself was a film version of a Broadway farce adapted from a French play), "Just Go With It" puts Sandler in the role of Danny, a Beverly Hills plastic surgeon who hooks girls into sleeping with him by wearing a wedding ring and pretending he's married. He leads a perfectly wonderful womanizing life this way until, on the one night he doesn't wear a wedding ring, he meets stunning, 23-year-old Palmer (Decker), who thinks he isn't married until she does find the ring, upon which Danny tells her he is married so he can trick her into falling in love with him. I'd explain it further, but, well... just pretend it makes sense.

To perpetrate this ruse, Danny enlists the aid of a fake wife: his nurse Katherine (Jennifer Aniston, who's apparently settled in nicely in the role of "beautiful everyday woman beneath frumpy exterior"). Because Palmer loves kids, Danny convinces Katherine to string along her two children, who Danny proceeds to bribe into participating. Palmer then proceeds to fall for a series of the most transparent lies in the galaxy, and Danny's charade of philandering is painted over with a veneer of well-meaning schmaltz.

Oh, and Nicole Kidman shows up at one point for some reason, but by then it's really not worth trying to explain anything anymore.

The premise, to be honest, probably isn't as ridiculous as it sounded just now. It's worked before, in fact; Goldie Hawn won an Oscar for "Cactus Flower" in 1969.

"Just Go With It," though, lacks the charisma and heart that the original brought to the table. Every character in it just comes off as a terrible person (Sandler and Aniston) or too dumb to care about (Decker). It's a shame, because Sandler's genuine, self-effacing charm does shine through at points. Those points, though, are few and far between, and it just serves to remind you how terrible the rest of the movie actually is.

Just Go With It ★
PG-13 for frequent crude and sexual content, partial nudity, brief drug references and language
