

Cavazos testifies before higher education group

By JAY MILLER
University Daily News Reporter

The state Select Committee on Higher Education heard testimony Thursday from individuals involved with Texas higher education, including Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos, at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

The committee, in a quest to define the issues and problems facing Texas' colleges and universities as they move into the 21st century, listened as Cavazos outlined key problems of higher education and offered possible recommendations.

Cavazos recommended the implementation of a statewide core curriculum in order to supply the college student of the future with a well-rounded education, with a knowledge in all disciplines.

"We want our students to become critical thinkers; therefore, we recommend that a rigorous core curriculum be instituted statewide," Cavazos said.

He cited the inability of Texas universities and colleges to attract and retain minority students as one of the major areas of weakness and recommended that the committee examine the problem.

"We must work vigorously to retain our minority enrollment in higher education," Cavazos said. "Our recommendation is that the state increase significantly the funds available for minority scholarships."

"There has to be a raising of the consciousness of the citizens of this state as to the magnitude of the minority retention problem."

Cavazos said Tech's minority enrollment is comprised of 2 percent Hispanic and 5 percent black students.

Cavazos also recommended that the committee look into admission requirements, university management audits and research communication problems of foreign teaching assistants.

Cavazos said the problems and recommendations he presented to the committee were compiled by a committee comprised of Tech deans and other administrators.

Several Select Committee members praised the work of the dean's committee, and Cavazos and said the testimony was unique in that it offered solutions along with problems.

Presentations also were given by Tech Faculty Senate President Margaret Wilson and Student Association President Lin Carter.

Carter asked for student representation on the Select Committee's specialized, issue-examining subcommittees and recommended that the committee ensure the continuance of financial aid for Texas' students.

Wilson recommended that the committee examine the areas of faculty governance in a university, faculty salaries, faculty evaluations and tenure.

She said she could not recommend a specific tenure policy, "because if faculty governance is alive and well, there will be no problem with a tenure policy."

Tech Regent J. Fred Bucy countered the presentation by Wilson. "Tenure is a policy which shields faculty and often locks universities into obsolete classes which cost money," he said.

Wales Madden, a Select Committee member, asked Bucy if tenure were eliminated, what policy could be instituted to protect academic freedom.

"I am very sorry that any look into tenure is immediately interpreted as an encroachment on academic freedom," Bucy said. "Any time a university drops an obsolete course, it is interpreted as an attack on academic freedom."

FDA issues warning against Tylenol pills

By The Associated Press

WHITE PLAINS, New York — Two more bottles of cyanide-laced Tylenol were found in stores in the New York area on Thursday, prompting the manufacturer and the FDA to issue nationwide warnings not to use the painkiller in capsule form.

Federal officials said the tainted bottles found in Westchester County on Thursday were not from the same batch that figured in the death of a woman last weekend.

The state health commissioner banned the sale of Tylenol capsules throughout New York, and a commissioner for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration issued a nationwide warning against taking any Tylenol capsules. Tylenol in other forms was not affected by the ban.

the area of immediate concern is New York, we are issuing a nationwide warning in the interest of giving the public the widest possible protection."

The company issued its warning minutes after the company learned from the FDA that the second bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol had been found.

Dr. David Axelrod, the New York health commissioner, issued the order banning the sale of Tylenol capsules and reiterated his warning to New Yorkers not to take any of the painkiller.

Marc Moran, a spokesman for the county executive's office, said a trace of cyanide was discovered in one capsule in a bottle retrieved from the Shrub Oak A&P. He said the Woolworth's bottle had been pulled from the shelf Monday night or Tuesday, picked up by the FDA and tested Thursday.

Aquino asks Marcos to resign presidency

By The Associated Press

MANILA — President Ferdinand E. Marcos was well ahead Thursday in the official vote count by the National Assembly, which his party controls. Corason Aquino, who claims she won the election, said he must resign to prevent violence.

Aquino's aides reported that another of her campaign workers was killed Thursday, bringing the total since the Feb. 7 presidential election to more than 20.

After seven hours of tabulating tally sheets from the archipelago's 74 provinces and more than 60 cities, the assembly had Marcos ahead with 6,403,785 votes to 5,584,581 for Aquino. That gave Marcos an edge of about 53 percent to Aquino's 46 percent with about 46 percent of the votes tallied.

The assembly's count determines the outcome under Philippine law. The National Movement for Free Elections, an independent poll-watchers' group called Namfrel, had Aquino ahead in its unofficial count. It gave her 7,158,679 votes to 6,532,362 for Marcos, based on 64 percent of more than 86,000 precincts reporting.

Aquino claims the elections were fraudulent and the National Assembly's canvass is rigged.

The tally sheet delivered to the National Assembly from the president's home province of Ilocos Norte said the votes came from 761 precincts. The province has 624 registered precincts.

"Where they got the other precincts, God knows," opposition assemblyman Marcelo Fernan said, bringing laughter from both the floor and the galleries.

According to the tally sheet, the vote in Ilocos Norte was 189,897 for Marcos and 718 for Aquino.

Marcos, who has governed the Philippines for 20 years, appeared on government television and pledged to "honor, without reservations, the people's verdict at the polls."

The president deplored the violence and said he also had lost supporters, including a town mayor he said was killed by communist rebels "encouraged by the opposition."

An official report by the military police said 35 Marcos supporters and 20 people who supported Aquino had been killed since the election.

"I ask all our supporters and sympathizers to join me in this effort to bind the wounds and hurt that this electoral contest has produced," Marcos said. "It is important that one side unilaterally take the first step to make conciliation possible, so that other hearts embittered by anger and hate may be softened."

Aquino said the president should resign because "the failure of the electoral process to move swiftly to a fair conclusion has dangerously heightened tensions." An aide read her statement soon after the Marcos broadcast.

She said the resignation would "defuse some of the swelling political anger" of Filipinos who feel they have been cheated, and allow the question of who won the election to be settled in a manner acceptable to all. She did not say how that could be done.

Her opponent is "perceived at home and abroad as having deployed the full resources of the state to snatch victory at any cost," she said in the statement.

Faculty salaries rise statewide, report says

By DAVID CORTES
University Daily News Reporter

Budgeted salaries for public university professors and instructors statewide have increased 5.1 percent from a year ago, according to figures released by the state Coordinating Board.

Faculty salaries increased from an average of $31,532 in 1984-85 to $33,130 for the 1985-86 academic year, the report stated.

Average salaries for university professors increased from $40,565 in 1984-85 to $42,436 in the 1985-86 academic year. The highest state salary for a university professor was $137,800 (University of Texas at Austin) and the lowest professor salary was $22,000 (University of Houston), according to the report.

Although the number of faculty positions declined, Texas Tech faculty salaries jumped from an average of $32,869 in 1984-85 to $35,189 for 1985-86. Tech ranked fifth among four-year public universities in Texas.

The University of Texas at Austin, University of Houston, University of Texas at Dallas and Texas A&M University all ranked higher than Tech for faculty salaries.

Margaret Wilson, president of the Faculty Senate pointed out that state public community college salaries have increased to an average of $29,916.

There has been some question among faculty members about their salary increases. Figures released in the Coordinating Board report indicate Tech's salaries have increased by about $2,300, or almost 8 percent.

One faculty member said his actual salary increase, as indicated by his department, was 2 percent.

Donald Haragan, interim vice president for academic affairs and research, offered a reason for the discrepancy.

He said salaries are based on formula and Tech has a certain mix of graduates compared to undergraduate students, forcing administrators to use a different formula.

For many years, Haragan said, Tech has budgeted more money for salaries than was actually allocated to it.

"Money has been transferred from other areas into faculty salary," he said. "We've been well over 100 percent of our allocation for many years. That's not real healthy from the standpoint of budget. It's healthy from the standpoint of faculty, obviously."

Highest Average Salaries Based On First Four Ranks

University of Texas at Austin	$37,650
University of Houston-University Park	$36,913
University of Texas at Dallas	$36,145
Texas A & M University	$35,626

Lubbock council authorizes use of city cable channel

By LINDA BURKE
University Daily News Reporter

The Lubbock City Council Thursday gave the go-ahead signal to city staff members to begin using the city's cable television channel, provided by Cox Cable.

During the council's work session, it was decided to begin using the channel to provide public service messages on the air. City officials said they hope to go on the air by Oct. 1.

Steve Lindell, public information specialist, said the city will proceed with a plan to redirect personnel responsible for disseminating information to begin work on the channel.

If resources and funding become available, Lindell said, a 30-minute news feature magazine show will be considered.

In other work session business, the council heard an update from the East Lubbock Redevelopment Plan committee. The committee told the council it is looking for funds to conduct a study on the economic development of the land.

About a third of the land in the city is in East Lubbock, and the committee would like to see how the land can be developed to make an economical impact on the city and make it attractive.

The council also voted to receive a recommendation from the Citizens Traffic Commission concerning the reconstruction of the intersection of 22nd Street and University Avenue.

The council ordered city staff to study the overall traffic impact on the Tech Terrace neighborhood if 22nd Street were closed at University Avenue.

Residents of the Tech Terrace area neighborhood, which surrounds Tech Terrace Park, told the council they fear their neighborhood will become dilapidated like the Overton neighborhood because of the increase of traffic.

In other business, the council approved several projects to be included in the federal revenue sharing fund improvement program.

Approved projects include a communications center, landscaping for the auditorium and coliseum, traffic signal installations at 69th Street and Slide Road and 34th Street and Frankford Avenue and bricking the rest of Broadway Avenue.

The City Council also authorized Mayor Alan Henry to enter into a contract on behalf of the city to purchase 800 million gallons of water from the city of Pampa.

The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority cut back Lubbock's allocation of water to 80 percent for 1986, and the city wanted to take advantage of the available water for sale.

Texas Tech College of Education survives many modifications

By CARLA R. McKEOWN
University Daily News Reporter

Texas Tech's College of Education (COE) was known as the department of education and philosophy in the Division of Arts and Sciences until 1967, when the School of Education was formed.

Until 1950, the department of psychology was included in the department of education; from 1950 to 1966 the department of philosophy was included within the education department. In 1966 the Board of Regents recommended the establishment of a COE, and philosophy became a separate department within the College of Arts and Sciences.

The College of Arts and Sciences remained the largest college at the university even after the department of education was separated, but the number of students decreased significantly with the separation.

The college was organized with the purpose of educating students who are preparing to teach. The college was opened to students on Sept. 1, 1967, and had its first annual college commencement exercises on May 11, 1974, in the University Center ballroom.

The COE was accredited soon after its organization. It was accredited by the Texas Education Agency, the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges and the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Only three deans have headed the COE. Glenn Barnett had the position from 1967 to 1973 when he resigned as dean to devote all his time to his position as executive vice president. Robert Anderson took Barnett's place as dean of the COE and remained dean until 1983 when the present dean, Richard Ishler, of COE took over.

In the early 1930s the planners of Tech thought the college would become just another teachers' school. Tech picked up the nickname "Texas Tech" as a result of the accusations.

Philosophy prof speaks on medical ethics

By DON WILLIAMS
University Daily News Reporter

The rights of a patient to receive medical care should not be reduced or compromised, according to Robert Audi, a professor of philosophy at the University of Nebraska.

Audi, an officer of the American Philosophical Association, spoke Wednesday in a lecture titled "Health Care Ethics" which is part of a lecture series sponsored by the Texas Tech philosophy department.

A patient has a right not to be lied to, to receive truthful, intellectual answers to his questions, and to have a reasonable setting in which his questions may be answered, Audi said.

He admitted that different medical personnel have different methods for handling the physician/patient relationship, but said the patient's concerns should be dealt with as long as the physician feels the patient is emotionally capable of handling information on his condition.

Audi did not discount, however, the right of the physician not to tell a patient difficult news if the physician thought divulging such news would cause undue emotional stress.

"One bit of prudence that I'm sure medical people practice widely is just not answering when the only thing one could say that one would be at all satisfied with would not be true, because one thinks the patient just can't handle the information," Audi said.

The patient should not be turned away or the situation avoided, however, if the patient indicates a desire to know, Audi said. He or she should receive answers to his questions in a comfortable setting.

"The opportunity can be a rushed moment in which a medical bag is packed or it can be in a situation where the patient is seated and really has an opportunity to ask questions and have them answered," Audi said.

A patient's right to privacy regarding his condition should also be protected, although a physician may sometimes face a moral dilemma in doing so, Audi said.

Audi discussed a situation in which a physician may want to encourage an AIDS patient to inform potential sexual partners of the illness, or a psychotherapist may face the moral question of informing a specific person of a patient's desire to do him harm.

"Clearly, there will be times when the obligation to try as a health professional to protect others from the patient will weigh against the obligation to preserve confidentiality," Audi said.

He also said he believed that psychotherapy should be conducted in such a way that a patient should forfeit as little individuality as possible.

Commitment to a psychiatric facility should be agreed to by a patient and he or she should not be forgotten, Audi said.

"Commitment certainly should not be parentalistic if there are no special circumstances like previous consent," he said. "Due process should be involved in assessing the probability of danger, whether the danger is to the patient or to others, the severity of the condition and the resources that are made available," Audi said.

"Committing somebody in a case when things just may get worse is much harder to justify than committing somebody to a place where resources are available for significant improvement.

Tech recreation center hosts Outdoor Program

By CHERYLE LOCKE
University Daily News Reporter

Before exams, migraines and dull Saturday Night Live reruns invade the spring semester, consider planning an outdoor escape and adventure with the Texas Tech Outdoor Program.

The Outdoor Program, sponsored by the Student Recreation Center, is hosting nine trips this spring and four this summer. Although there is a wide selection of trip options, student are encouraged to register early due to space limitations.

Some of the trips scheduled include downhill and cross country skiing, rafting in the Rio Grande, sand surfing in New Mexico and exploring various caves. The weekend excursions range from $10 to $45 with the exception of the week-long canoe trip during spring break.

Most of the trips are limited to 12 people. Outdoor Program Coordinator Wayne Taylor said the limit serves to preserve the outdoor experience.

"We want students to enjoy the outdoor experience. We don't want to take Dallas out to the woods," Taylor said.

In addition to the trips a number of outdoor workshops will be offered free of charge. Some of the classes include ski maintenance, winter camping, rappelling and rock climbing and canoeing. Registration for the workshops began in January. Students may sign up in the Outdoor Shop, in the Rec Center.

Professor says public often influenced by philosophy

By DON WILLIAMS
University Daily News Reporter

Public policy makers often make the mistake of assuming agreement on an issue when they actually may have philosophical disagreements, Robert Audi said Wednesday night. Audi, a University of Nebraska philosophy professor and a member of the board of officers of the American Philosophical Association, lectured on "Philosophy and Public Policy in a Democratic Society" as part of the Texas Tech philosophy department's "Philosophy Colloquium" series.

Audi said that public policy makers may agree on a program actually but be hampered by questions of what direction a program should take. He distinguished between factual and ethical arguments. How an affirmative action employment program is instituted and conducted, for example, could take many different forms, Audi said. The goal of such a program may be to bring as many minority and female candidates as possible into the employment application process while selecting employees on merit or at random, Audi said.

Different philosophies for the program may include preferring women and minorities or giving them preferential treatment if they are potentially qualified and could be trained for a job. The reasons behind preferential treatment could be to correct past injustices, Audi said, or to put a proportionate number of minority and female people into higher status jobs.

"These are quite different aims that a program may have and it's very easy to be insufficiently clear about what the purpose of one's program is," Audi said.

Allowing indefinite philosophies to remain vague could also have legal consequences, Audi said. In discussions regarding abortion, for example, it may be important to have a single definition of when an unborn child is considered a human being.

If the individual-at-conception view is taken, Audi said, "(and) a plane crash kills 12 passengers, one of whom is two months pregnant, then 13 people are killed and lawsuits may be brought on behalf of 13, not 12."

In another example, Audi cited the need for a distinction between different types of euthanasia. Rather than being one type of euthanasia and one policy toward it, there should be at least three, he said.

Euthanasia could be divided into the categories of letting a patient die according to his or her wishes, letting a terminally ill patient die by not taking extraordinary measures for him or her during an emergency or, if a comatose patient's wishes are unknown, allowing family members to make the decision to remove a life-support system.

Self-defense craze sweeps U.S.

© New York Times News Service

Crime, from kidnappings in South America to terrorist attacks in Europe to muggings in the United States, has sparked a new demand among executives for the products and skills that they hope will protect them from assault.

Executives are buying bullet-resistant vests, briefcases fitted with alarms, and lessons in karate. Their companies are investing in armored cars for the topmost managers, while subsidizing classes in self-defense for secretaries as well as executives.

Government and business surveys have shown that executives perceive crime as a major concern. Their visibility as representatives of well-known companies has prompted them to take extra, and sometimes extreme, precautions against kidnapping, theft and even random street crime.

One owner of a string of jewelry stores in Miami, for example, just bought himself a German-made bulletproof car. A Manhattan real-estate developer has enrolled in a self-defense program for executives. And the owner of a large New York construction company has taken to wearing a bullet-resistant vest. His reason is the not infrequently heard caution: "It is better to be safe than sorry."

Companies selling the products and services that cater to this heightened concern are experiencing a surge in demand. One major supplier of bullet-resistant self-defense items said that the demand for bullet-proof vests alone had soared 50 percent in 1985 from the year before. And while the sweaty karate and judo parlors of yesterday never attracted executive clientele, some plush martial arts schools today are getting hefty fees from prominent corporate managers.

While the demand may be strong for these personal defense measures, law enforcement agencies decline to endorse particular products or methods, or to comment on the effectiveness of any item. In addition, little more than hearsay documents how such measures may have helped to do more than ease the concerns of security-conscious executives.

Nevertheless, the demand persists. As a spokesman for one giant corporation, who declined for safety's sake to identify himself or his organization, said: "When our most senior executives travel, we take every precaution to see they remain safe, and today, that means a lot of precaution."

Though the items look run-of-the-mill in the catalogs and showrooms, they are anything but. The trenchcoat repels bullets as well as rain. The briefcase has an alarm that emits a shriek and 4,000 volts of electricity. And the elegant watch not only keeps track of the time but sports a built-in transmitter that allows someone else to keep track of the wearer.

The products, once used mostly by characters in James Bond-type movies and a small cadre of government intelligence employees, are regularly surfacing in the corporate world as executives gird themselves against terrorists and thugs.

"About the only way to put yourself in a defensive posture these days is to use such devices," said a Florida banker who recently bought a host of bullet-resistant items, including not only a vest and briefcase, but a specially treated clipboard.

That sort of attitude has meant a sales bonanza for companies that market personal defense. The products are not cheap. Liners that strengthen briefcases so they can be used to repel low caliber bullets cost $70; a bullet-resistant raincoat sells for $1,000, and attache cases with built-in alarms go for more than $1,200. Yet the companies that sell them say they are meeting little price resistance on the items, many of which are purchased for the executives by their companies.

Sesquicentennial events fill dancers' schedule

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

This Sunday in Slaton will be only the tip of the iceberg of events and appearances by the Texas Tech German Dancers this year.

The annual Wurstfest in Slaton always is one of the highlights of the year for the dancers. The Wurstfest traditionally has been a time for people from all across Texas to meet in Slaton for a German/Texas celebration.

Meredith McClain, director of the Southwest Center for German Studies at Tech, described the Wurstfest in a 1973 article published by Texas Highways. "The down-home food served up on Wurstfest Sunday in this rural Texas setting by spirited German-Texans of St. Joseph's Parish saves February for hundreds of food festival fans who feel a twinge of wander just after a bland January.

"Before or after they indulge at buffet tables laden with wurst, sauerkraut, beans, potatoes, homemade breads and cakes, guests can enjoy a variety of other activities," McClain wrote.

The Wurstfest is as much about eating as anything else. The event has grown in popularity through the years and in 1983, 6,500 pounds of meat was consumed during the festival. A 200-year-old Austrian recipe is tediously put into effect when the huge amounts of sausage are made.

The Tech German Dancers will be a part of the festivities when they performed at around noon Sunday. Slaton is about 15 miles southeast of Lubbock on U.S. 84 for those interested in attending.

Founder and Director of the Tech German Dancers, Randy Kirk, will be busy hosting two groups of 20 German visitors in late February and early March. The groups are visiting Texas as part of the Sesquicentennial celebration this year.

Kirk, a senior German major, has been the director of the German dancers since he first conceived the idea in 1978. He is responsible for much of the group's organization and management.

"They're going to see some things many Texans haven't seen. For many of these visitors, it's going to be like it was heaven sent. This is history-making for them," Kirk said.

The two groups, consisting of 20 band members from Munich and members of the Memmingen Western Corral, will have a hectic schedule that ranges from participating in the Governor's Parade in Austin to spending an evening at Billy Bob's in Fort Worth.

"We're going to expose them to as much Sesquicentennial events as we can manage within a week."

Kirk's responsibilities don't end once the visitors board a plane and head back to Germany. He'll be busy preparing for the arrival of a new batch of visitors from Heidelberg, Germany.

"They are the equivalent of a 4-H type club. The Heidelberg group hosted us when we were in Germany over the summer and now we have the opportunity to return the favor.

We're going to try to make them feel as comfortable as they made us feel," he said.

The German dancers will host the visitors at their homes during the group's stay in Lubbock. While in the Hub City, the group will meet with mayor Alan Henry and Tech president, Lauro Cavazos.

From Lubbock, the Heidelberg group will travel across Texas learning more about its history and culture. Their travel will take them to, among other cities, Dallas, Austin and Houston.

"It's extremely expensive for Germans to come here, yet they're all doing it because of what's going on in Texas this year. It cost us about $800 to go overseas last summer, but triple that cost for them (because of the money exchange)," Kirk said.

But the benefits of traveling abroad seem to outweigh the costs. Rose Hurst, a German teacher at Lubbock

High School, and McClain have been working to coordinate an exchange program between a high school in Munich and Lubbock High.

It may be as soon as March when the German half of the exchange arrives in Lubbock. They will be housed in the homes of the Lubbock students where they'll learn about Texas culture and lifestyle.

The Lubbock students may complete the exchange this summer by traveling to Germany and staying with German families, Kirk said.

The dancers have been asked to perform on German Day (Oct. 11) at this year's Texas State Fair in Dallas and they will also have a presentation at the Lubbock Civic Center March 2 as part of the state's Sesquicentennial Day celebration.

Minor problems don't disrupt intimate evening with Joe Ely

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Reporter

Not everything worked exactly according to plan Wednesday night at 82nd Street Live, but Joe Ely has a way of making you forget about those little hitches.

Comedian Bill Hicks, scheduled to open the show, canceled at the last minute once he was given the opportunity to perform on "Late Night with David Letterman."

Adding to the minor setbacks was Ely's little problem with keeping his feet off the guitar cord. He stepped on it twice during his solo performance but, to his credit, he recovered as only Joe Ely could.

Bend over, pick up the cord, plug it back in, and begin where you left off. The man, smiling all the while, didn't miss a beat.

It's incredible how little Ely loses by not having a backup band. The audience seemed to marvel at his energy level on stage. He is one of the few performers around today who is able to do so much with so little.

"Driving to the Poorhouse in a Limousine," "Hard Living" and "Old Mexico" all had the West Texas flavor that has elevated Ely to his current status. The sound system at 82nd Street Live, not noted for housing musical events, came across loud and clear — a pleasant surprise.

One of the best aspects of the show was the attitude that comes across through Ely. He looks as if he's having a genuinely good time playing rock 'n' roll on stage.

"I just went out there and played some songs I wanted to play," Ely said after the show.

Just going on stage and playing some songs earned Ely a standing ovation — twice.

Gary Bun Richardson replaced Hicks in opening the show and, although his comedy isn't to Hicks' caliber, he did a respectable job of keeping the audience entertained.

Richardson is a self-proclaimed "good ol' boy" who relies heavily on Texas humor. Talking about the number of traffic violations he's had, Richardson said: "I think I've had about 120 hours of defensive driving so far. A few more tickets and I'll have my master's degree."

For the most part, Richardson's material was worth some good laughs.

Despite the hitches, this interesting combination of comedy and music was a definite success.

Man to man

Research shows younger men becoming closer, more intimate in relationships with other men

Shane Tarry/The University Daily

© New York Times News Service

Fishing trips. The golf course (and locker room). The men's club. Drinks at a neighborhood bar. Those are some of the traditional settings for relationships among men. But how deep are those friendships, and how much of their feelings do men reveal to each other?

"When you look at what men give each other, it isn't enough to dispel loneliness," said Letty Cottin Pogrebin, whose book Among Friends: Who We Like, Why We Like Them and What We Do About It will be published in the fall.

But a "sea change" may be taking place in the way younger men view friendship with other men. "The intimacy quotient seems to be somewhat changed among younger men," Pogrebin said, based on her research. "I don't think the demands of masculinity testing are quite as rigorous as they have been in other eras. There are young men who know a lot about each other; they are more open with each other."

She and others think the women's movement has had an effect.

"For men who live willingly with an activist feminist, myself included, the tendency is to be more open to closer male friendships," said Jon Christian Suggs, a 45-year-old professor of literature at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York. "The ones I know the best and consider close friends are married to or live with feminists. It tends to validate what women are doing — I'm amazed at the depth and complexity of their relationships."

But even men who are open to such closeness may face the old attitudes.

Dan Kaplan grew up in what he calls a "feminist household." He is 28, and an aspiring opera singer who manages a restaurant in Manhattan and lives in Brooklyn. "The women's movement has had the effect of opening men up," he said. "Men are more able to express their feelings about being happy or depressed, but there's still a stigma. I still see men who are awkward when you try to talk to them beyond a superficial way."

How men often deal with that awkwardness was described by Scott Swain, a sociologist and researcher at the Wellesley College Research Center on Women. In his studies of men 19 to 32, he said he found that "men are able to self-disclose more easily when they are engaged in an activity, like working on a car."

"The main agenda is to spend time together," he said, "and this activity is the overt agenda to cover for any fears of a homosexual agenda. The activity allows them to bring up a subject, and the other person can respond or not, and they can go back to the activity."

That men have a way to go in that direction was affirmed by Stephen Hauptert, a psychiatric social worker at St. Joseph Hospital in Reading, Pa., whose master's thesis was on "Men and Friendship in the Fourth Decade of Life."

"Men have not yet gotten to the point of feeling that they are more than job, more than sportsman, more than breadwinner," he said.

Whether it is because they cannot find the intimacy they seek with men or with women, loneliness seems pervasive among young men.

"It seems they feel very lonely and don't seem able to make it with a woman," said Gerd H. Fenchel, a psychoanalyst who is dean and director of the Washington Square Institute in Manhattan. "It's a matter of companionship, which apparently they don't feel they can find with a woman because women make more demands, among them sexual, but also, 'How successful will you be?'"

Fenchel agrees that the women's movement may have caused "more male bonding, particularly among younger men." But he added that the concept of bonding need not be confined to relationships between men, or women for that matter. "You have heterosexual bonding that can be platonic, which is happening more and more today," he said.

Sliding Raiders hunt winning edge against Bears

By BRAD WALKER
University Daily Sports Reporter

Although Texas Tech has a 5-6 record in the Southwest Conference, it's not time for the Raiders to throw in the towel just yet. There still is the post-season tournament to consider.

However, at 1-6 over the past seven games, Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers must be waiting for a few answers to some of his questions.

The Red Raiders will attempt to solve its problems and start the long trek back toward the upper half of the conference Saturday afternoon when they travel to Waco for a battle with the Baylor Bears.

The game is set to tipoff at 1 p.m. and will be regionally broadcast by Raycom-TV and shown locally on KCBD (Channel 11).

Baylor, 9-14 for the year and 1-11 in the SWC, sits alone at the bottom of the league.

The Bears are Tech's third consecutive second-division opponent, but the seemingly favorable schedule has not worked to the Raiders' advantage. Tech has lost two games (both at home) in a row, including Wednesday night's 79-72 overtime loss to Arkansas.

"We're playing pretty good, but in the last couple of minutes things seem to fall apart," said junior guard Wendell Owens. "Coach Myers said we played the best we could (against Arkansas) but it just didn't fall our way."

Owens sparked a Tech comeback in the Razorback game, scoring a career-high 19 points, grabbing four steals, and leading the team in points for the first time since the Kansas State contest in December. The game possibly was his best ever as a Raider.

Owens and teammate Sean Gay have shown Raider fans some defensive quickness that is uncharacteristic of a Tech team. Owens liked the pace of the game with the Hogs and said the possibility is always there for a fast game.

"Arkansas played the way I did when I was growing up," Owens said. "They were running up and down the court, and I thought it was to my advantage to play that type of game."

Guards Tony Benford and Gay continue to lead the squad in scoring, averaging 13 and 10.7 points per game respectively. Ray Irvin leads all rebounders at 4.5 a game and is scoring at an 8.2 clip.

Baylor has yet to recover from infractions levied by the NCAA and the SWC for illegalities during former coach Jim Haller's reign. Eric Johnson and Darryl Middleton were on probation at the time the two teams met earlier this year. A game Tech won 62-48. Michael Williams and Robert McLemore had just come off suspension also.

Michael Williams is the only Bear to average double figures in scoring this season, pouring in 13.2 a game. Junior center Brandon Taylor is hitting at a 6.9 norm while rebounding 4.2 a game. Forward Frank Williams leads Baylor on the boards with a 4.9 average.

Frogs guide 'Killer' toward league crown

By The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Killer's Kids are back.

Texas Christian's venerable Jim Killingsworth, who has coached more than 1,000 basketball games at all levels in 36 years, could have his first Southwest Conference title team with the Horned Frogs.

"We're not in the driver's seat yet," said Killingsworth after a critical 70-53 victory over Texas A&M on Wednesday night. "SMU is just waiting for us in the bushes."

TCU is tied atop the SWC race with the Texas Longhorns with 10-2 records.

The Horned Frogs have yet to win a league title for Killingsworth in seven years but earned the nickname "Killer Frogs" in 1979 because of their near miss in the SWC postseason tournament.

TCU is at SMU on Saturday and the Mustangs, at 8-3, are still a title threat. The Frogs host Texas a week from Saturday for what could be the SWC title game.

Killinger says all those years pacing in front of the bench is making him feel very old.

"I told my assistant coaches I'm too old to coach and too broke to quit," he said.

He doesn't discuss his age, but the best guess is "about 63."

The Horned Frogs are 18-5 overall and 13-0 at home in Daniel Meyer Coliseum.

They got some revenge there Wednesday night.

The TCU sellout crowd of 7,200 fans kept chanting "Onsides Kick, Onsides Kick."

They hadn't forgotten a 53-6 rout of their football team by the Aggies last fall in which the winners tried an on-sides kicked late in the game.

A&M had beaten TCU 64-60 in College Station earlier in the year.

Killingsworth said it was the Frogs' biggest victory of the year.

"It has to be," he said. "It was our first sellout and they had beaten us earlier. 'I thought we did a great defensive job.'"

Now Killingsworth begins worrying about SMU.

"SMU Coach Dave Bliss has been poor mouthing himself all season and they're just laying there in the woods waiting to crack us over the head," said Killingsworth.

Killingsworth is a master recruiter.

Two of the stars on this year's team are junior college transfers, Carl Lott and Larry Richard.

With an excellent redshirt program, the Horned Frogs will be reaching out on a national level next year.

TCU will have a home game against Michigan State and will play Oklahoma.

"Killer told me we're going to have a good enough team to beef up our schedule and that's what I'm doing," said Athletic Director Frank Windegger. "That's what I'm doing right now. Anybody out there who wants to play us in an opener give me a call."

Raiders women chase fourth straight SWC win

By MICHAEL CORBETT
University Daily Sports Reporter

The Texas Tech women's basketball team will be looking for its fourth straight win Saturday when the Raiders travel to Waco for a Southwest Conference game against Baylor at Heart O' Texas Coliseum.

The Raiders, 16-6 overall and 9-2 in SWC play, moved into second place in the conference standings after knocking off the Arkansas Razorbacks 73-60 Tuesday at Municipal Coliseum. If Tech finishes in the No. 2 spot, the Raiders will have a bye to the semifinals of the SWC Post-Season Tournament and will not have to face No. 1-ranked Texas until a possible matchup in the finals.

Baylor, 6-17 for the year and 4-8 in the conference, is in sixth place in the SWC. The Bears snapped a four-game losing streak last weekend with an 80-77 win at TCU, but were clobbered 77-45 Wednesday by the Lady Longhorns.

The Raiders defeated Baylor 89-48 Jan. 15 in Lubbock on the strength of Tricia Clay's 18 points and 12 rebounds. The game appears to be an easy one for the Raiders, but Tech has had trouble in Waco in the past. Last year, Sharon Cain sank a jumper with just seconds remaining to allow Tech to escape with a 68-66 victory.

The Raiders continue to shoot well against conference teams. In the win against Arkansas, Tech burned the nets with 60 percent shooting. Tech has shot 56 percent in its last four games and is shooting 51.1 percent from the field on the year, the 11th best mark in the nation among Division I teams. Only unbeaten Texas at 53.2 has shot better among Southwest Conference schools.

Tech's 6-6 center, Julia Koncak, has emerged as an inside power for the Raiders in recent games. Koncak has scored in double figures the last four games and has led the Raiders in scoring the past three games, including a career-high 27 points against Houston.

Cain has connected on 23-of-30 shots for 77 percent in her last four games. Lisa Logsdon, Tech's first reserve off the bench, has hit 20-of-30 attempts, mostly from the 20-25 foot range, in her last four outings for 67 percent. Junior forward Lisa Wood has broken out of her shooting slump and has hit for 56 percent from the field (10-of-18).

The Bears are led in scoring by senior forward Rita Martin with a 14.5 average. Forward Debra Degrate is close behind with a 12 point average.

In the last game between Tech and Baylor, Degrate led the Bears' effort with 13 points and eight rebounds. No other Baylor player scored in double figures.

Before Tech's game with Arkansas, Camille Franklin was leading the conference in assists with a 6.0 average. Texas' Kamie Ethridge (5.4 avg.) had led in the assist category most of the season. Franklin also leads the conference in free throw percentage at 77.6 (59-of-76 attempts).

Three Raiders are ranked in the conference Top 10 in field goal percentage, more than any other team. Clay is fifth (55.4), Cain is sixth (55.3) and Koncak ranks ninth (53.8).

Record vaulters meet tonight in Millrose Games showdown

NEW YORK (AP) — The ballyhooed pole vault showdown among Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union and Americans Billy Olson and Joe Dial will take place tonight in the Wanamaker Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Each competitor is saying that he can vault higher than the world indoor best.

Olson, 27, owns the mark of 19 feet, 5½ inches, set last Saturday. His magnificent soar came only hours after Bubka, the world outdoor record holder at 19-8¾, had improved the indoor best to 19-5 and a week after Dial had established the standard at 19-4¾.

Earlier this season, Olson improved the best in each of his first three meets, and Bubka set the mark once, making a total of seven world bests over 19 feet in six weeks.

Olson never has beaten Bubka in five meetings, while Dial has beaten the Soviet once, when Bubka failed to clear 18-0 in a 1984 indoor meet at Cleveland.

"This is the first time I feel capable of beating him ... honestly," Olson said. "He's probably capable of jumping higher," Olson said of Bubka's best of 19-5. "But so am I."

The right touch

Texas Tech's Tricia Clay hits a bank shot in the Raiders' 73-60 win over Arkansas Tuesday at the Coliseum. The victory propelled Tech past the Hogs into second place in the Southwest Conference.

Tech wrestling team hosts meet Saturday

The Texas Tech wrestling club will host the Tech Open at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Student Recreational Center in the grapplers' only home meet of the year and their third of the season.

TCU, Texas-Arlington, Southwest Texas State, Texas A&M, Oklahoma Christian, Amarillo College and several independent wrestlers will compete alongside the Raiders.

Tech is led by Mike Moore, Scott Russell and Chad Rainsberry, all of whom placed last week in the Southwest Texas Invitational.

Tech shuns tradition, signs local grid talent

University Daily Sports Editor
Colin Killian

The sun has set on the 1986 winter recruiting wars and for once, the cows came home. Some of them, anyway.

In the past decade, Texas Tech has had about as much success recruiting West Texas as it has had winning Southwest Conference championships. First-year Tech coach David McWilliams came in and changed the first part of that and hopes the second part will be the result.

Of the 18 high school players Tech signed to letters of intent, half are from the West Texas area. Wide receiver Richard Ross was the first Lubbock Estacado player to sign with Tech since All-SWC running back Larry Isaac in 1973, and linebacker Brent Barton became Tech's first Plainview product since Kenneth Storey in 1972.

The success McWilliams' staff had in West Texas could set a much-needed precedent. If so, maybe the aspiring Jerry Grays, Tony Degrates and Charles Hunters will stay closer to home. Such a reality is instrumental to the future of Tech football.

The credit for this newfound West Texas selling ability belongs first with McWilliams, then with two of his foremost assistants.

McWilliams realized the importance of West Texas to Tech's future fortunes when he moved into Jerry Moore's old office two months ago. He made a commitment to emphasize West Texas in recruiting and immediately hired Texas assistant John Mize, a primary reason behind Tech's former difficulties in the region.

Mize, Tech's offensive coordinator, was responsible for luring Gray, Degrate and Hunter to Austin and is highly regarded throughout the conference for his recruiting abilities. Hiring him was like taking Rommel away from the Germans.

In addition, McWilliams put defensive coordinator Spike Dykes, another strong recruiter, in the south part of the South Plains, an area in which he has had notable success the past two years.

Making the recruiting effort even more impressive was the fact that McWilliams and his staff got off to a late start on the recruiting trail since he was hired Dec. 2. McWilliams rehired five of Moore's assistants, negating much of the disadvantage Tech would have suffered otherwise.

The established assistants already had made contact with many prospects and kept after them despite the status of their own jobs being in limbo after Moore was fired Nov. 19. It takes a lot of character to keep doing your job when you don't know if you'll still have it the next day.

McWilliams had little time to organize his staff into a coherent recruiting operation, but he managed to pull it off with as little damage as possible. If he can organize the Raider football team as well as he organized this effort, Tech may not be far away from producing the winning team for which we've waited so long.

Women golfers last in Arizona

There must be omens. Just ask the Texas Tech women's golf team.

The Red Raiders began the 23rd Annual Arizona Invitational red hot but floundered in the last two rounds to finish last in the 18-team tournament in Tucson.

Arizona State won the invitational with a total of 890, five strokes ahead of second-place USC's 895. ASU was led by the top two medalists of the field as Danielle Ammaccapane won the tourney with a 74-69-71—214 and Pam Wright finished at 72-75-72—219.

Kathy Fuertes Lindley shot a 73-84-85—242 to pace the Raiders, with Kay Linda Shive three strokes back at 76-84-85—245. Lisa Franklin Beck ended the tourney at 80-91-86—257, while newcomers Mona Jennings and Sherry Weatherby finished at 87-86-85—258 and 94-98-98—290.

Burns' 63 earns Hawaiian lead

HONOLULU (AP) — George Burns finished off a 9-under-par 63 with an eagle on the final hole and took the early first-round lead Thursday in the $500,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

With about half the field of 144 still out in warm, sunny weather, Burns held a three-shot lead over Tony Sills, who birdied his last three holes for a 66.

Fuzzy Zoeller, Jim Dent and Loren Roberts were next among the early finishers at 67, 5 under par on the Waiialae Country Club course.

Tom Watson, a five-time British Open champion, played his back nine in 32 and was in a large group at 68.

Jack Nicklaus had a 70. Japanese veteran Isao Aoki held a position among the leaders when he went five shots under par through the first 11 holes. But Aoki then four-putted for a triple-bogey, carelessly missing a one-handed tap-in attempt from about 12 inches.

Daring Daylight Robbery!

Law enforcement officials have surrounded a local audio-video store whose occupants are believed to be responsible for a daring daylight robbery in which hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of equipment was taken from major manufacturers.

Sources state that the event commenced in broad daylight. 'They struck while we were on a lunch break,' said one manufacturer. 'Since we've been hit nine years in a row, we planned on this and hired extra security. But the fake nose-and-glasses routine tripped us up.'

The suspects, reportedly the DYER DEALERS from Dyer Electronics, stage this sort of thing once a year in a protest against the high prices of their competition. Sources state that the gang garnered only the newest and best inventory.

In a telephone interview from their hideout, gang leader Jerry Dyer said that gang members from across the state had arrived to split up the loot. All Texas Dyer hideouts will be participating according to the don of discounting.

When asked what the penalty would be, law officials stated that the Dyer Gang would be doing without profit for a while. 'I guess we're all sentenced to a weekend of incredible prices!'

HAVE YOU SEEN THESE PEOPLE?

Steve "Deal" Goupil, Store Manager. Notorious price slasher. Vows to discount until the end.

Todd "The Bod" Garrett. Marks down prices and knocks down little girls. Known audiophile. Unknown origin.

Tim "Like Ted" Nugent. Undercover man. Can no longer show his face since competition found out how low his prices are.

Garry "Slash" Erdman, Dyer Vice President. Noted high tech expert. Thinks woofer and tweeter is a dog and bird act.
