

Mexicana Airline jet crashes, killing all aboard

By The Associated Press

MORELIA, Mexico — A Mexicana Airline jet carrying 166 people crashed into a mountain in central Mexico Monday shortly after leaving Mexico City for two Pacific resorts and Los Angeles, and all aboard were killed, the airline said.

The Boeing 727 went down about 90 miles northwest of Mexico City, near Maravatio.

It was the worst air disaster since a chartered DC-8 with a crew of eight that was carrying 248 U.S. servicemen home for Christmas from the Middle East crashed just after takeoff from Gander, Newfoundland, on Dec. 12, and all perished.

"Unfortunately, there are no survivors" among the 158 passengers and eight crew members, Mexicana spokesman Fernando Martinez Cortes told reporters. He said Federal Highway Police were the first to arrive at the scene and reported all those aboard apparently were killed on impact.

Rafael Cuevas of the Federal Highway Police said the only land access to the site was through a town called Contepec. "It's the only land route," he said.

"A little more than halfway up the mountain you could see a plume of smoke, white smoke. You could distinctly see the plume of white smoke and several small fires around it," said Associated Press correspondent Isaac A. Levi, who flew near the site in a chartered aircraft.

The airport at Morelia, the capital of Michoacan state, made arrangements to receive the bodies. One hangar was being prepared as a makeshift morgue, and airline officials requested lime, bags and other emergency supplies from Mexico City.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Vince Hovanec said airline officials reported 25 non-Hispanic surnames were on the passenger list, but the manifest did not list citizenship. "We have no way of knowing now if there are any Americans aboard," Hovanec said.

Marcy Pazmino, a spokesman in Los Angeles for government-owned Mexicana Airlines, said it had not been determined if anybody on the plane was destined for Los Angeles.

In an official statement, the airline said the plane left Mexico City at 8:50 a.m. CST (9:50 EST) and was to arrive in Los Angeles at 12:20 p.m. PST (3:20 p.m. EST) after stops in Puerto Vallarta and Mazatlan.

"The commander of the plane, captain and pilot Carlos Guadarrama Sistos, with approximately 15,000 hours of flight time and vast experience, reported shortly after 0900 hours (10 a.m. EST) to the Mexico center to inform that the plane was losing altitude and later all contact was lost with the plane," the statement said.

"The captain asked for permission to descend because they had problems about the pressurization of the plane," Jose Henonin, an airline spokesman in Mexico City, said in a telephone interview. "That was the last time they heard from the captain, when he asked for authorization to descend to 6,000 feet. He was flying at 26,000 feet."

A source at the Mexico City airport said contact was lost with the jetliner 14 minutes after takeoff.

Tech officials criticize proposed college test

By DAVID CORTES and JAY MILLER
University Daily News Reporters

The Governing Board of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association has criticized a state committee's plan to implement a basic skills test in Texas universities and colleges.

The Committee on Sophomore Testing heard testimony Monday during a public hearing in the Senate Room of the University Center.

"We would like to urge your committee to reject the idea of the test, because we consider it another waste of tax dollars," said Bill Dean, executive director of Tech's 21-member board of ex-students and an associate professor of mass communications.

The ex-students board also testified that a standardized test emphasizing English, math and science on the sophomore level would not necessarily reflect a fair or accurate measure of learning.

"We feel that the test could be highly discriminatory against minorities," Dean said. "We also feel that the time and money it would take to develop and administer such a test does not justify the end result."

The 12-member Committee on Sophomore Testing was formed last September in an effort by the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board to assess the basic skills of college students and to see if state institutions are appropriately reinforcing those basic skills.

The committee, chaired by Robert Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos, has been conducting public hearings at various state universities to look into the possibility of requiring Texas college students to pass a test before they can progress to junior level status, regardless of their class grades as freshmen and sophomores.

"This testing would also indicate the progress of an institution," Hardesty said. "How well a student does on the test reflects the quality of higher education of that institution."

The committee also is studying the possibility of requiring the test for all junior college students, either as a degree requirement or as an entrance level requirement upon entering upper-level studies at a university.

Joan Matthews, a program officer of the Coordinating Board's Universities and Research Division, said the committee will have a broad range of study areas. The tests could be mandatory for progressing to the junior year.

Commenting in a Dallas Morning News story on the possibility of mandatory sophomore testing, Coordinating Board Chairman Larry Temple said, "We are finding students in college now who are not prepared for college. A very substantial amount of our resources are being spent on remedial education classes. Is this what we want to be doing?"

As an example, Temple pointed out that state colleges and universities are spending $37 million a year on remedial English and math courses for their students.

Temple cited the success of the Florida "rising junior" testing program, but he said much more input must be gathered before determining whether the test can successfully be put into practice in Texas.

During a speech to the Select Committee on Higher Education — a committee designed to investigate the status of colleges and universities and to determine in what ways they can be improved — Tech President Lauro Cavazos said the administration is well aware of the decline in quality of undergraduate education.

"Tech's education reform has been under way for two years, and our faculty committee, representing all colleges, is working on a curriculum that will feature skills in writing, speaking, mathematical sense, logical thinking and the capability of foreign language use and computer knowledge," Cavazos said.

Cavazos also recommended that any statewide core curriculum be applied to any junior and senior college. That approach, in turn, would facilitate transfer from community to senior colleges.

Dean said the Ex-Students Association board agrees with Cavazos, and he urged the committee on sophomore testing to support his ideas.

"We believe it has more substance and more longer-lasting value than the proposed test," Dean said.

Exiled Marcos could return to Philippines

By The Associated Press

MANILA — Ferdinand E. Marcos said Monday he was not corrupt but that President Corazon Aquino is and that he may return from exile to rescue Filipinos from a "monster" bent on enslaving them.

The former president, who fled Feb. 26, commented in a message and handwritten letter, calling himself a victim of the "blackest of propaganda." He accused "elements of the American government" of helping oust him.

He said Aquino was the "No. 1 looter," a charge that has been made against Marcos. A source close to Marcos made a tape of the message and a copy of the letter available to The Associated Press.

Presidential spokesman Rene Saguisag said Aquino greeted the comments "with typical calm and equanimity." He said Marcos, 68, may be allowed to return "in the distant future, but not just now."

"The greatest service Marcos has done to the Filipino nation is to leave it," Saguisag said. "He should not negate it by threatening to come back."

In a telephone statement from Honolulu, which the source said was taped Monday, Marcos said: "We must war again against the monster who imposes slavery." The voice was clearly his.

A postscript to an eight-page letter dated March 21 and addressed to "My beloved Filipino countrymen" in his home province, Ilocos Norte, said: "Death, yes, we will accept perhaps, but slavery never, never, never."

Marcos told reporters in Honolulu on Sunday that he still considers himself president.

The letter was written on stationary of Malacanang Palace, which has become a museum to preserve what Aquino's government calls the excesses of Marcos and his wife, Imelda.

Marcos accused Aquino of allowing her followers to loot his palace and try on the hundreds of dresses Imelda left behind.

"There was looting not only by the poor but by the rich and powerful. ... The more outstanding ladies in the opposition started fitting and using the dresses of the First Lady," he said.

"Cry, my beloved people. ... There is trouble abroad in the land, trouble that reaches into every corner."

A dog could be heard barking in the background as he spoke.

Marcos said the "coup d'etat" against him "was apparently helped by some of the elements of the American government," but he gave no names.

"In one message from the U.S. Embassy to the Office of Media Affairs, the duty officer in the U.S. Embassy threatened the use of Marines, United States Marines, against Marcos to prevent President Marcos from utilizing his superior military power against the rebels," he said.

Associates in Manila have quoted him as saying he could have crushed the uprising that drove him out but did not want to shed blood. His tanks turned away from hundreds of thousands of people guarding rebel soldiers in two Manila military camps.

Marcos said he had insisted on being taken from the palace to Ilocos Norte, but instead the U.S. Air Force took him to Clark Air Base and later Guam. He said his personal luggage was opened and ransacked.

U.S. exercises may reduce Libyan leader's influence

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top U.S. diplomats said Sunday that U.S. naval exercises across Moammar Khadafy's "line of death" might not deter the Libyan leader from sponsoring terrorist acts but could reduce his international influence.

"I think we very likely will see" more attacks against Americans, said Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs.

Murphy said the naval operations — in which U.S. forces last week entered the Gulf of Sidra, twice knocked out a Libyan radar installation and sank at least two Libyan patrol boats — were part of a broader strategy to curb Khadafy's power.

Khadafy claims the entire Gulf of Sidra as Libyan territorial waters, although most of it lies beyond the 12-mile limit respected by the United States.

Voters to decide 911 issue Saturday

By LORRAINE BRADY
University Daily News Reporter

Reducing the response time of emergency services is one of the main benefits of the implementation of a 911 emergency telephone system for Lubbock County, said Bill Tinney, director of Texas Tech's office of development and chairman of Citizens for 911.

City and county voters will go to the polls Saturday to consider a referendum on the emergency telephone system.

If voters approve the system, Lubbock County residents will be able to dial 9-1-1 in an emergency situation and the name and address of the telephone location will appear on a telephone operator's computer screen. Operators then will dispatch fire, police or emergency medical services to the location of the call.

"We really can't afford to be without it," Tinney said. An advocate of improving the quality of Lubbock's emergency medical services since the early 1970s, Tinney and his group have been raising money to buy advertising making voters aware of the issue.

County Clerk Ann Davidson said only two absentee votes have been received concerning the referendum. She said lack of publicity probably is the reason for the low voter interest in the 911 system election.

If approved by voters, the system will be available to all cities in Lubbock County that wish to participate in the program.

Tinney said such a system is effective in emergency situations where the caller is panicking and cannot coherently communicate with the operator. He said it also is useful in cases where small children are able to dial the three digit number but cannot tell the operator their address or telephone number.

"There are many incidents throughout the country where the system is already in operation that provide examples of how effective the system is," Tinney said. "A small boy was able to save the life of his drowning mother. These stories are repeated over and over."

"It is dramatic situations like these that make you realize that a few minutes could mean an eternity for someone in an emergency situation."

Bill Johnson, Lubbock city director of administration, said a study of the 911 telephone system in Kansas City, Mo., showed the response time of emergency vehicles to have been reduced from more than one minute to about 40 seconds.

A tentative board of managers for the Lubbock Emergency Communication District already has been appointed and will design and operate the system if it is approved. The board, headed by Lubbock Mayor Alan Henry, also will set the monthly fee that will be used to finance and operate the system.

The board is authorized by state legislation passed this summer to implement a fee on a resident's phone bill that will be the sole financial support of the system. The maximum charge the board can levy is 3 percent of the base rate of the phone bill. Johnson said most residents will pay about 30 cents a month while businesses will pay about 40 to 60 cents a month for the service.

The initial cost of the engineering and design of the 911 emergency telephone system is estimated at about $700,000. If the system is approved, the fee for the program should show up on the customers' bills in three months.

If approved, it will take about 18 to 24 months to design, engineer and accumulate funds necessary for the payment and installation of the system. The board estimated the monthly cost of operating the system at $16,000.

The seven-digit telephone numbers of emergency agencies still will be operable after the implementation of the 911 system for emergency and administrative purposes. Telephone number and location will not appear on computer screens when dialing the seven digit numbers.

Daring stunts blamed for plane crash

DEL RIO (AP) — The pilot of a single-engine plane that crashed and killed four people had been flying dangerous stunts before the accident, a Department of Public Safety trooper said Monday.

The plane's four occupants — an Air Force pilot instructor, a student pilot and two women — died when the Cessna 172 Skyhawk they had rented crashed into a hillside and fell into the lake about 3:15 p.m. Sunday.

DPS Trooper John Allen said boaters complained that the plane had been flying too low over the lake. He said the plane reportedly flew under two bridges, both with spans about 60 to 75 feet above the water.

Fire damages priceless 16th century art

LONDON (AP) — Fire raged through the magnificent 16th-century Hampton Court Palace of Henry VIII Monday, burning out its south wing, damaging priceless royal art treasures and killing one person, believed to be the widow of a top British general.

The four-hour blaze sent the leaded roof of the three-story south wing crashing through into art galleries on the lower two floors, causing millions of dollars worth of damage.

Hampton Court, containing hundreds of rooms, is Britain's second most popular tourist attraction after the Tower of London.

Oil prices plunge hitting lowest levels

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices hit their lowest levels in eight years Monday, plunging more than a dollar a barrel to less than $11 on the futures market. Analysts said a continuing fall into single-digit figures was likely.

"There's nothing holding the market up," said Andrew Lebow, at the Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. securities firm.

In Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mana Saeed Oteiba was quoted as saying that oil prices would drop to "$8 to $5 a barrel" without cooperation among producers inside and outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Ortega says government attacks defensive

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega said Sunday that attacks by government troops on rebel base camps in Honduras were "totally defensive operations."

Ortega also said he was willing to negotiate with the United States and "the chief of the Contras, which is President Reagan," but he refused to say whether his government would meet U.S. demands to negotiate with rebel leaders.

Appearing on the CBS program "Face The Nation," the Nicaraguan president said, "We have not invaded Honduras. We have not committed any act of aggression against Honduras."

Ortega earlier justified last week's border incursion against rebel bases, calling the rugged area between the two countries a "war zone," where Honduras had given up its sovereignty by allowing the rebels to control and operate from the region.

He said military actions in the border area "have been taking place for years now all along the frontier area to attack the counterrevolutionary forces which ... have their bases in Honduras. They are totally defensive operations."

Ortega cast aside suggestions that his government should negotiate with the rebels, saying, "The policy is decided in Washington, so we have to talk to the White House."

"Isn't it in the U.S. Congress where U.S. policy is being formed against Nicaragua, where the war is being directed and financed? What other Congress in the world is discussing a policy of how to go about overthrowing another government?"

Ortega also said "as a product of a U.S.-Nicaraguan agreement," Nicaragua would support the removal of all foreign military advisers from Central America, a key component of the Contadora efforts to reach a negotiated settlement in Central America.

Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, responding to Ortega's remarks, said, "They don't want to negotiate. He said he doesn't want to sit down with the Contras. That's why we've come up with a policy of pressure to try to force them to the bargaining table."

Ortega said he spoke with Honduran President Jose Azcona last week and that the incursion was not discussed.

South Africans disregard outdoor gathering ban

By The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — About 20,000 blacks defied a ban Monday to attend a memorial for a Communist Party leader who died in exile, and an activist announced resumption of a regional boycott of white businesses.

The memorial for Moses Mabhida, a black nationalist who died March 8 in Mozambique, was held at a soccer stadium in Zwilde, a black township outside the Indian Ocean city of Port Elizabeth.

Security forces took up positions near the stadium, but a reporter said they did not interfere despite a government ban on outdoor gatherings. Anti-apartheid violence often has followed such mass funerals or memorials.

Mkhulesi Jack, a prominent anti-apartheid activist, announced during the four-hour service that a black consumer boycott of white-owned businesses in Port Elizabeth would resume April 7.

A boycott last year severely affected white businesses. It was suspended after four months.

Jack said the principal reason for renewing it was the recent killings of blacks by police, including 11 deaths last Wednesday during a disturbance in the township of Kwazakele near Port Elizabeth. Funerals for the victims are scheduled for next weekend.

"We are going to boycott until they come to speak to us on a man-to-man basis," Jack said. "The only thing now is to boycott the Boers until they starve to death. The boycott is the only language they can understand."

Gesturing to the nearby police and army units, Jack asked: "When are they going to get time to relax with their families when they are watching us all the time?"

More than 1,250 people have been killed, nearly all of them black, during 19 months of violence against apartheid, the official racial policy that assures supremacy for South Africa's 5 million whites and denies rights to the 24 million blacks.

At one point in the service, the crowd observed a moment of silence for Mabhida and many in the stadium waved clenched fists.

Professor foresees bleak agriculture future

By DON WILLIAMS
University Daily News Reporter

Kary Mathis can't paint a very bright picture when he gives presentations to agricultural or non-agricultural groups about the future of the farm economy and how the current crisis developed.

Mathis, chairman of Texas Tech's department of agricultural economics, has been giving talks to agricultural groups on request and also has spoken to church congregations and ministers who want to be better prepared to counsel farmers and their families under financial pressure.

"It's extremely depressing to have to give the same talk and say it's the same story as last year, except it's worse," Mathis said.

His presentations primarily deal with the economic causes of why the farm crisis has developed.

"It's a very complex problem. There are many factors involved," he said. "1979 was the last good year for most farmers in this part of the country. That's something that most people who are not directly connected probably don't realize, that we're looking at the seventh consecutive year of hard times."

Using visual aids and statistics from the USDA, Mathis tells groups that everything from mostly good weather to federal government policies have brought about the crisis. The total farming debt has gone from $50 billion in 1970 to more than $200 billion in 1985.

At the same time, capital investment was increasing from $10 billion in 1973 to a $20 billion peak in 1979. It has since dropped back to $12 billion.

"Steadily rising prices and price supports attracted farmers to produce more and more," Mathis said.

As a result, agricultural commodities exports were almost double in 1982 what they were in 1976, $23 billion.

Other factors, such as greater crop acreage, technological improvements resulting in increases of more than one-third in yield per acre over the past 20 years and excellent weather in the United States and other major producing areas between 1981 and 1985 caused the huge surplus of agricultural commodities.

"We have a year's supply of cotton and almost a year's supply of all grain crops," Mathis said. "If we didn't grow one pound of any of these major crops — cotton, soybeans, wheat, corn and rice — we could supply all of our needs and all of our export needs out of what's in stock."

At the same time the surplus was building up, factors abroad were driving down demand. Because of tremendous federal government budget deficits, the value of the American dollar was increasing in relation to the currencies of many foreign countries which the United States supplied.

Political instability in Mexico and Eastern Europe, such as the establishment of martial law in Poland, also cut American exports. The United States exported less than $1 billion in agricultural commodities to Eastern Europe in 1982, compared to $2.3 billion in 1980. During the same period, exports to Mexico dropped from $2.5 billion to $1.2 billion.

After an embargo placed on the Soviet Union by President Jimmy Carter, the American share of Soviet grain imports dropped from about 75 percent to 20 to 30 percent. At the same time, the Soviet Union was increasing its grain importation sharply, from 30 million metric tons to 45 million metric tons.

Unfair trade practices by European Common Market countries also have been an adverse factor, Mathis said.

Adding to the woes have been a 30 percent drop in the price of farm land since 1980, combined with soaring interest rates in the early '80s.

"If you borrowed money in 1982 at 20 percent interest rates, it doesn't do you any good that interest rates may be 10 percent now if you're still paying on that debt," Mathis said. "You're obligated to pay that 20 percent."

"In real terms, farmers are considerably worse off than they were back in the early '70s because of inflation," he said.

Callahan elected to RHA president post

By LAURA TETREAULT
University Daily News Reporter

Mike Callahan will be Texas Tech Residence Halls Association president for 1986-87 after defeating Kyle Colvet in a runoff for the position last week.

Callahan captured 58 percent of the votes cast by Tech housing residents during the runoff. During the regular election, Callahan won 44 percent of the votes cast, followed by Colvet with 26 percent and Steve Spicer with 24 percent.

"Next year we'll work on better marketing to get the residents involved in RHA so we can give them better service," Callahan said.

Callahan said he will use several old ideas in new ways, including mailing information about the RHA to incoming freshmen.

"We won the election on a campaign of word-of-mouth, and I think we need to go back to that to find out what the students want," Callahan said.

About 21 percent of the more than 5,900 Tech housing students participated in the election March 26. In the March 27 runoff, about 20 percent of the residents again cast their ballots, said Cathy Peterson, current RHA president.

In the race for treasurer, Adrienne Tinker won a runoff with Chuck Sweat. During the election, neither candidate received a majority because of several write-in candidates. During the runoff, no write-ins were allowed, Peterson said.

Libyan canoes clash with scouts; thousands flee

By EARNESTLY MAKINGWAY
 IUD News Reporter

Libyan war canoes crossed President Reagan's "line of grievous bodily harm" early Thursday and clashed with American forces.

The imaginary line, which cuts across the Gulf of Mexico from the Florida Keys to the tip of Texas, has been claimed as domestic territory by the United States, and Reagan has threatened to "kick the butt" of anyone who crosses it.

Col. Moammar Khadafy's Soviet-made canoes were boarded by three Boy Scouts of Troop 113 who reportedly roughed up the crew and bored holes in the vessels with Swiss army knives, leaving them to sink.

Khadafy said Libyan forces were exercising their right to sail in international waters. He also said he would bring every weapon at his disposal to fight off the American forces. Reagan responded by putting two extra patrols of Troop 113 on alert.

The canoes had been engaged in war maneuvers for two days prior to crossing the line. The canoes carry a crew of seven fanatical idiots and a number of innocent hostages who can be slaughtered at any time to satisfy Khadafy's urge to create Arabic heroes.

They are armed with six rubber bands and 25,000 spit balls. They also have a radio-controlled drone brought from Radio Shack stuffed with firecrackers. Khadafy has threatened to call for an all-out war on America if the confrontation continues. Reagan replied, "You come any closer and I'll rip your nads off."

Reaction to Khadafy's call for all Arab nations to stage attacks on American citizens and property was mixed. Egypt's president was unmoved by Khadafy's plea.

"That idiot, he really honks me off; what he needs is a direct hit. Honestly, the neighborhood has just gone to pot since he took over, training fanatics to nuke tourists and the like."

The Ayatollah Khomeini was more sympathetic. Calling Khadafy "a man after my own heart, religious, brave and intelligent," he promised to keep Khadafy's fleet well-supplied with fanatical idiots.

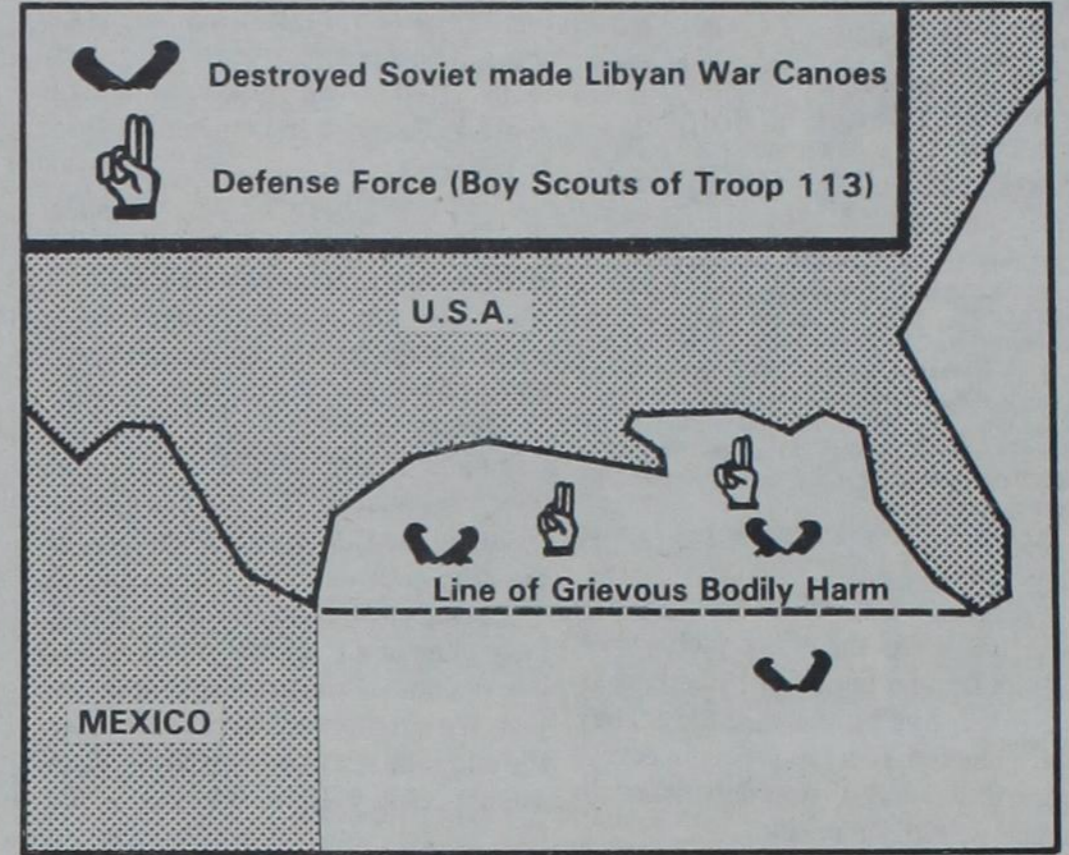

Unconfirmed sources have hinted that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is ignoring pleas from Khadafy to resupply his fleet with arms.

"What a putz. I hope Ronny dusts his fanny," Gorbachev reportedly said to an aide. "We give him 20 Migs because he wants an air force and he hasn't got any pilots, so he hires Englishmen to fly them. I couldn't believe it; I bet the queen read blueprints of the aircraft over tea last night. Tell Ronny if he needs a nuke or two we've got plenty to spare."

Khadafy has responded to critics by promoting himself to ruler of the universe and giving medals to a crack squad of granny bashers who beat up Ethel Dupenfitz of Pittsburgh at the Rome airport.

"We shall not lose; we shall win the glorious war," Khadafy said.

"We're sending in a team of Shi'ite Baptists to wreak havoc," Reagan said. "You've got to fight fire with fire."

Ed majors to seek hubbies

By LOOSE 'N EASY
 IUD News Reporter

In an unprecedented move by university administration officials, Texas Tech President Lauro Cavazos announced today that all students declaring a major in the College of Education must present proof that they are actively seeking marital status.

Cavazos said all students currently enrolled in the College of Education and all future education students will be required to either provide evidence they are married, engaged or have been consistently dating the same person for a six-month period.

The requirement comes after a controversial study done by The Idiotic University Drippy that showed 90 percent of the students in the College of Education are attending Tech in an effort to find a spouse.

"We think the new requirement is in step with the overwhelming evidence that the College of Education is simply a stepping stone for female students who were not satisfied with the selection of eligible males they attended high school with," Cavazos said.

"Many of these young women come to Tech as an alternative to the singles bar scene and have high hopes of catching an up-and-coming junior executive for a husband. We just want to see to it that we have some sort of consistency among our graduates," he said.

Cavazos said he hopes the new requirement will attract promising male students who eventually would like to have a stable, family-oriented lifestyle to attend Tech.

Suzy Catscan, Student Association senator for the College of Education, said she supports the requirement.

"We just want all the guys to know that we're over here whenever they're ready."

Student with acute kidney problems gets frontal lobotomy and a headache

By HAIRLIP MCGEE
 IUD News Reporter

A Texas Tech University student who received an accidental lobotomy in a recent kidney transplant operation is in satisfactory condition, according to Dr. Slice Q. Blade, director of the Health Sciences Center surgical department.

"He's as stable as any vegetable," said Blade. "It really is only a minor complication ... really."

The 17-year-old senior, Brian "Winky" Hinklemier Jr., lost all brain activity when the surgical accident occurred at approximately 11:42 a.m. Friday. Dr. Rupert P. Hakimup, kidney transplant surgeon for Hinklemier, said the incident was unfortunate.

"The incident was unfortunate. There I was hacking his kidney out when my knife slipped," said Hakimup, who still appears optimistic.

"I'm expecting him to jump up any moment and say something smart like 'E=MC times C' or something. It's very minor ... really." Other physicians are not as optimistic.

"He's brain dead. Totally. No hope whatsoever. It's quite minor, though ... really," said Dr. Nanny Fanny, exchange gynecologist from Great Britain. "Britain is a fabulous place. You should visit there. Brian was planning to, but I guess that has changed now."

Hinklemier was deemed a "whiz kid" by his professors. "Brian was a whiz kid. Before surgery he was investigating space trajectory possibilities for the Defense Department. I guess that'll have to come to an end now," said Newton Fig, professor of nuclear physics. Fig used to live in Canada.

"Canada is a fabulous place. You should visit there. Of course, I went there to avoid the draft. Brian wanted to go there someday. I figure his chances to aren't so good anymore," said Fig.

Defense Department officials said

Hinklemier had performed a valuable service for the nation. "He performed a valuable service for the nation. Due to him, our missiles can hit the teddy bear tattoo on Gorbachev's rear. It's really very minor ... really," said Slurp Henderson, a janitor for the Pentagon.

Henderson shackled up with a Libyan oil baroness at one time. "I've cleaned Libyan toilets. You shouldn't visit there. They're unsanitary. Brian didn't want to go there. Guess it's a good thing," said Henderson.

An unnamed official from Hinklemier's fraternity said the loss is tragic. "Hinklemier who? Oh, yeah. He was a loser. Total nerd. Couldn't even spell my name right. I'll miss his fraternity dues."

Hinklemier's parents were unreachable by phone, but his four-year-old sister was home. "Bwian's dead? Waaaaaaaaa!" she said with conviction.

KKs discover dorm nuke cache

By KEN AND BARBIE
 IUD News Reporters

A Texas Tech student is facing class C misdemeanor charges following the discovery of a small cache of nuclear weapons under his Murdough Hall bed early this week.

The student maintains the weapons, warheads from MX "Russkiflammers" intermediate missiles, were used to hunt large sea mammals and said he doesn't understand all the fuss.

"Man, a few nukes and everybody hits the roof; I don't believe it," said Sly Gutsucker, Tech philosophy major.

Also discovered was a SAM missile launcher and a number of hand grenades in a foot locker marked, "Nuke the Whales."

The weapons were discovered by Tech police who responded to an emergency call that entailed a large explosion and a blinding flash of white light on the ninth floor of the residence hall. The exact cause of the explosion has yet to be determined because the ninth floor is missing, and its whereabouts have yet to be ascertained.

However, police say at the time of the explosion Gutsucker was in the hall carrying a large electrical device resembling a ghetto blaster and when the explosion occurred he is reported to have said, "Whoops."

District Attorney Sam Slimelicker said Gutsucker will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law and could face a severe slap on the hand if convicted.

In an unrelated event, 80 percent of Murdough Hall residents have been suffering from severe hair loss and three former residents of the ninth floor have green tendrils growing from their left nostrils.

Medical authorities are baffled as to the cause of this disturbing turn of events and still are searching for a cure. "Kojaks" disease, as it has come to be called, is a devastating blow for the students.

Lucias Gormless, a Murdough resident who looks like a cue ball with a large piece of broccoli dangling from its left side, said the disease is ruining his life.

"My girlfriend has left me, my classmates point and laugh and my father sent me a paper bag to put on my head. God, it's worse than being at A&M," he said.

Tech student health facility officials have said the cause probably is a virus, possibly a virulent strain of Russian flu. Students suffering from these symptoms are being advised to take two aspirins and drink lots of orange juice.

Tech gets tough with standards

By MELVIN SNOTGURGLE
 IUD News Reporter

Texas Tech officials announced Monday that new entrance standards have been set for the university. Starting in fall 1986, students who wish to enroll at Tech must be warm and breathing.

The announcement brought a storm of protest from student leaders. Dudley Biffmunder, president of the Student Senate, said one of the requirements would be acceptable but that both of them are unreasonable.

"Honestly, this could cut down enrollment to the bone. And I'd like to know who on this campus is qualified to make those kind of judgments," Biffmunder said.

Muffy Sakfiend, Pan Hellenic representative, said the requirement unfairly singles out future members of the sorority community.

"I know of several girls who have raised the temperatures of plenty of people but who remain cold," she said.

Biffmunder concurred, saying that several times a sorority girl had raised his temperature to near meltdown proportions while she remained frigid to an almost polar degree.

The requirements are just the first in a series of stringent entrance regulations that are to be phased in over the next few years.

In spring of 1987, enrolling students will have to be able to recognize the letters SAT and identify them as vowels or consonants. A semester later they will have to be able to know what the acronym stands for. Sometime in the 1990s Tech students will have to take the test and spell their names correctly to qualify for admission.

"It's about time this school got tough and made its degrees worth something," said Bonzo, Faculty Senate president. "Why, I've got students in my class who haven't had a decent vowel movement in years."

Representatives of all the Tech colleges were in agreement with the faculty response and voted en masse to approve the new stipulations. The College of Engineering was the single absentee; its representative, Mustapha Quickwun, was moonlighting at a 7-11 when the votes were canvassed.

Where's the beef?
 Tech juniors Studley B. Hungwell and Anaconda Joe streak past an appreciative crowd at Stangel beach. Because of budget cuts, both students lost their financial aid and have been forced to give up clothes as a needless expense.

Campus station KTXT to sponsor open house for silver anniversary

By ERIC STEELE
University Daily Lifestyles Writer

Mayor Alan Henry has proclaimed today "KTXT Anniversary Day" in recognition of the 25th anniversary of the Texas Tech radio station's federal licensing.

A ceremony to honor the station is scheduled for 2:10 p.m. today in 101 mass communications.

Station Manager Stig Daniels will present a short history of the station to be followed by responses given by university officials and local dignitaries. From 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., an open house will be conducted in 209 journalism building.

KTXT-FM is a non-profit station that follows a contemporary hit format. In addition to its contemporary emphasis, KTXT-FM also offers a variety of alternative programs. The programs include jazz, reggae, new music and Westwood One programming. Classical music also is featured daily.

The station has evolved from its humble beginnings in 1951 when the Tech Broadcasting Club decided to create its own radio station, called MD-2, in the supervisor's room in Sneed Hall. The call letters later were changed to KTTC.

For two years, KTTC was available to the men's dormitories only through the use of cable. In 1953, KTTC was moved to the speech building and was made available to both the men's and women's dormitories.

It wasn't until April 1, 1961, that the Federal Communications Commission licensed KTXT-FM for public broadcasting. The KTTC call letters were discontinued because they were being used by a Marine operation.

In 1972, KTXT-FM was transferred to the control of the telecommunications division of mass communications. KTXT-FM, operating on 10 watts of power at the time, filed for several power increases during the 1970s and was granted an output of 18,500 watts in 1979.

KTXT-FM, currently operating from the second floor of the journalism building, also serves as a training facility for students interested in a broadcasting career.

The public is invited to attend both the ceremony and the open house.

'Candide' production to open Thursday

"Candide," the musical comedy version of Voltaire's satire on strict optimists, will be the next attraction at the Texas Tech University Theater.

"Candide" was originally, and remains in this production, a "picaresque novel" in reverse. In picaresque novels a hero fearlessly rushes from one hazardous adventure to another, rescuing lovely damsels from wicked villains by using his audacity and the skill of his swordsmanship.

Candide is no such dashing fellow.

He is kidnapped, shanghaied and dragged unwillingly from one horrifying adventure to the next. Candide wins no battles. Having been taught by the learned Dr. Pangloss that this is "the best of all possible worlds," Candide is continually surprised by the frightful injustices and miseries he encounters.

Candide goes from one kind of mass slaughter and vicious enslavement to another — always bouncing back from these disasters with his master's assurance that this is really "the best of all possible worlds." He remains an untiring optimist, or just a plain fool, in the face of the evidence. These traits have led Candide to be called "one of the great imbecils of literature."

Steve Berke and Chris Burchett will alternate as Candide, and Tamba King and Laurie Lane will alternate as his equally innocent, though often-ravished sweetheart, Cunegonde. Jeff Paul Johnson will play several characters, including Voltaire, the hypocritical Dr. Pangloss, a lascivious South

Ellison leads Louisville to NCAA crown, 72-69

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Freshman Pervis Ellison scored 25 points, including four in the last 41 seconds Monday night, as No. 7 Louisville beat top-ranked Duke 72-69 to win its second NCAA basketball championship in six years.

Louisville, although hounded by Duke's pesky guards Johnny Dawkins and Tommy Amaker, grabbed the lead for good at 66-65 on Billy Thompson's jump shot with 2:47 remaining.

Ellison, who had 11 rebounds, grabbed Jeff Hall's missed shot and put it in with 41 seconds left for a 68-65 advantage. Then he snared a rebound after a missed shot by Duke's David Henderson and was fouled. He made two foul shots with 27 seconds remaining.

Duke's Jay Bilas cut it to 70-67 with 18 seconds left, breaking a seven-minute drought without a basket. After Thompson missed a one-and-one free throw opportunity, freshman Danny Ferry's basket made it 70-69.

But Milt Wagner canned two free throws with two seconds left to clinch Louisville's 17th straight victory of the season and end the Blue Devils' 21-game win streak. The Cardinals finished 32-7 this season and dropped Duke to 37-3.

The loss spoiled the winningest season in NCAA history. Duke's 37 wins surpassed by one the previous record of the 1948 Kentucky team, which won the NCAA title.

Led by All-America guard Dawkins' 15 points and the ballhawking of both Dawkins and Amaker, the Atlantic Coast Conference champions built a 37-34 halftime lead.

Louisville went ahead 42-41 on Herbert Crook's tap-in, which gave the Cardinals the lead for the first time since they were up 4-0. Dawkins then hit three straight jump shots, including a three-pointer, for a 48-42 lead. Mark Alarie made two free throws to match Duke's biggest lead of the second half, 54-48.

Wagner and Thompson each picked up their fourth personal fouls during that period, and the Cardinals' chances seemed dim.

But the 6-foot-9 Ellison paced the Louisville comeback with the help of Wagner, a 6-5 senior who had only two points in the first half.

Wagner's three-point play cut Louisville's deficit to 61-60 with 5:33 remaining. Henderson then hit two free throws as Ellison picked up his fourth personal, but Ellison came back and hit from inside to cut the deficit back to one.

Wagner put Louisville ahead when he shook loose for a layup with 3:22 left. Duke regained the lead when Dawkins made a pair of foul shots but Thompson then pulled the Cardinals away for good.

Thompson, a 6-7 senior, added 13 points for Louisville, while Crook had 10. Wagner, who entered the game with a career total of 1,825 points, scored only nine, almost six points under his average.

Dawkins, the leading scorer in Duke's history, finished with 24 points. Henderson added 14, Alarie 12 and Amaker 11.

Louisville, which has been in four of the last seven Final Fours, previously won the crown in 1980. The Metro Conference champion finished strongly after playing the toughest non-conference schedule in the country, winning 21 of its last 22 games.

Duke has never won an NCAA title.

This was the Blue Devils' fifth trip to the Final Four and third loss in the championship game. They fell to UCLA in 1964 and Kentucky in 1978.

Duke jumped to a 15-8 lead with Dawkins hitting 11 points on long and short jumpers. The quickness of Dawkins and the 6-foot Amaker forced 14 Louisville turnovers in the first half.

Ellison was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, the first freshman to earn the prize since Arnie Ferrin won it for Utah's 1944 champions.

Amaker's four free throws gave Duke its biggest lead of the first half, 31-23. Louisville's backcourt of Hall and Wagner was not a factor, but the Cardinals' rebounding kept them in the game. Ellison scored three field goals, the last after his steal, to tie it at 33.

Louisville, the No. 2 seed in the West, knocked off Drexel, Bradley, North Carolina, Auburn and Louisiana State to reach the final.

Duke, with a nucleus of four seniors who had been 11-17 in their freshman year, took over the No. 1 ranking after North Carolina's 13-week hold on the top spot was ended. The Blue Devils only losses were at North Carolina on Jan. 18 and at Georgia Tech in their next game three days later.

They were top seeded in the East and beat Mississippi Valley State, Old Dominion, DePaul, Navy and No. 2 Kansas.

Duke, which didn't shoot particularly well from the field throughout the tournament, made up for it in previous games with rebounding and defense. The Devils shot only 40 percent from the field, while Louisville hit 58 percent.

But Duke's rebounding dominance was missing. Louisville had a 39-27 advantage on the boards.

Lady Longhorns celebrate national title

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — What is amazing about Texas' 97-81 defeat of Southern California for the NCAA women's basketball championship is that Texas' starters combined for only 39 points.

The Lady Longhorn "subs," however, outscored the Women of Troy 58-4, with Clarissa Davis leading Texas with 24 points, in Sunday's game.

Davis, a 6-foot-1 freshman described by Texas coach Jody Conradt as the "player of the future," was voted the most valuable player in the tournament even though she did not start.

She had 56 points and 32 rebounds in two games, playing 51 of 80 minutes.

The title is Texas' first in women's basketball, and 3,300 cheering, singing fans gathered at the Longhorn basketball arena Sunday night to welcome the team home.

"You are the best there is," former congresswoman Barbara Jordan, a regular spectator, told the team. "You've taught the United States of America a lesson. You have taught us what a team is."

The players, driven to court-side in open limousines, signed autographs for an hour.

Eleven Lady Longhorns played and all but one injured reserve scored in the championship game, which set a record for points scored and for best shooting percentage — 58.8 by Texas.

Texas finished the season at 34-0, with its closest games a 78-76 road victory over Ohio State in the Lady Longhorn opener and a 66-63 home triumph over Mississippi in the Midwest Regional finals.

"I told them in the locker room that I thought this was the best team ever in women's basketball," Conradt said. "We may not have any great players like Cheryl Miller (of Southern California), but we have some who are sitting here that would be starting elsewhere."

All-America Kamie Ethridge of Lubbock Monterey had only three points, Andrea Lloyd five, Annette Smith four and Gay Hemphill eight in the title game. Smith was a 1984 All-America but sat out last year with a severe knee injury. Hemphill was a 1983 NAIA All-America and transferred from Wayland Baptist.

Texas reserves — Davis, Hemphill, Priddy, Yulonda Wimbish and C.J. Jones — outscored and outrebounded the starters.

"This is the deepest team in women's basketball," said Conradt. "Who starts means absolutely nothing."

Conradt called Priddy, a 6-2 senior sub who scored 15 points and had five rebounds against Southern California, "my hero."

"We seniors wanted to win this game and get on with our lives ... If we hadn't won, I really don't know if we could have gone on," Priddy said.

The seniors are Fran Harris, Ethridge, Hemphill, Priddy, Smith and her sister, Audrey, who also has been hurt.

"I would be hard-pressed to put together a senior class like this," said Conradt. "I would be hard-pressed to put together a basketball team like this."

Chase for U.S. Boxing Championships begins

By The Associated Press

BEAUMONT — Vincent Phillips of the Army and Nick Kakouris of St. Louis opened defense of their titles Monday night at the U.S. Amateur Boxing Championships.

Phillips, a New York resident stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., had his hands full with Joe Gamache of Lewiston, Maine, but gained a 5-0 decision in a 132-pound class first-round bout at the Beaumont Convention Center.

The aggressive, awkward Gamache landed several hard hooks, but Phillips scored effectively with both hands to the head in the second and third rounds. Gamache was penalized two points for holding for failing to step back on the break.

The 5-foot-11 Kakouris had trouble solving the aggressive style of Brian Wright of Rapid City, S.D., in the first round of their 139-pound bout. But the champion found the range and the fight was stopped at 1:26 of the second.

Phillips and Kakouris were the only defending champions in actions Monday night.

Bernard Price of Muncie, Ind., the 1984 U.S. champion at 112 pounds, began his quest for the 119-pound title by scoring a 5-0 decision over Bobby Archuleta of Ribera, N.M.

Price, the 1985 North American and Sports Festival champion, missed the 1985 U.S. Championships last November because he was under a 90-day suspension after being knocked out in the first round by Moon Seung Kil of Korea in the World Cup at Seoul.
