Education essential ingredient to aiding economy, Hobby says

By LORRAINE BRADY University Daily News Reporter

Quality education is essential in bringing diversified industries into Texas to make its economy less dependent on energy production, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Friday in Lubbock. "The Texas economy is in a state of change," Hobby said in an interview with The University Daily. "That change is dependent on the quality of our education system."

Changing the emphasis of the economy from one relying on oil and gas revenue to one based on high technology industries is needed due to awareness that education is the foundation, Hobby said.

Texas will continue to upgrade public education and higher education as a means of attracting new industry into the state, he said.

Hobby cited Massachusetts, California and North Carolina as having successfully committed themselves to educational excellence. He said those states are prospering from the high technology industries their reputations for concern and quality are drawing into "An absolute key of the strategy of each of those states has been maintaining and expanding its commitment to higher education," Hobby said.

Hobby said Texas has made enormous strides in the past few years to upgrade its educational system. He said budgetary constraints during the last legislative session did not affect higher education as severely as it

"The last session took place when the budget was pretty tight, yet no instructional dollars were cut from higher education," he said. "Some administrative funds were cut, and properly so."

Hobby, whose father served on the first Texas Tech Board of Regents, said he always has been totally committed to the advancement of education. He said striving for educational excellence throughout the state is his first priority in attracting new business and industry in-

Hobby said Texas has been aggressive in attracting industry. The industries that have located in Texas recently have been successful in creating new jobs and bringing trade revenue into the state, he said.

He said specific examples of the state's aggressive policy toward attracting new industry are the location of computer-oriented companies based in Austin which pool technological resources in order to compete with the Japanese, and the U.S. naval base to be headquartered in Corpus Christi which will boost revenue by creating new jobs.

Change of the state's economic base is not something new for Texas, Hobby said. The last change of the state's significant revenue source came about 50 years ago with the development of the oil industry in Texas. He said before that time the state economy was based primarily on timber and cotton production.

Sagging state revenue due the worldwide drop in oil prices has forced the state to look for other means of generating funds. Gov. Mark White's call on all state agencies and universities to make a 13 percent voluntary budget cut has not been able to alleviate the estimated $1.3 billion revenue shortfall.

State comptroller Bob Bullock reported last week that state spending increased 15.2 percent during the first month after the governor's request.

Responding to speculation on a special session, Hobby said the state can make up for revenue losses by borrowing funds from other revenue sources.

He said borrowing from other revenue funds is normal operating procedure that takes place each year as the general revenue fund resources begin to deplete in November or December.

"The only thing unusual about this situation is that it's more severe than usual," he said. "It will be much tougher this year because of the size of the shortfall, but it can be done."

Hobby predicted there will be no increase in the amount of taxes the state collects during the next legislative session. He said the revenues lost due to the collapse of oil prices will have to be replaced, probably by an increase in the state sales tax. "I see zero chance for a state income tax," he said.

"Once it's built, we would anticipate something like a $6 million annual operating budget for it," Curl said. "I think we were right on the threshold of getting this lab about three years ago."

Curl also will testify before the corresponding Senate subcommittee later this spring. Whether funding has been granted probably will not be known before late summer or early

Curl said he is cautiously optimistic that final approval may not be far off. He attributed the congressional rejections of past years to the depressed economy rather than a lack of acceptance of the idea.

U.S. Reps. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and Jamie Whitten, D-Mississippi, are among those who have supported the proposal, Curl said. Whitten has been chairman of the agricultural appropriations subcommittee for more than 30 years.

Besides developing droughttolerant varieties of crops such as cotton and grain sorghum, the scientists of the research program and its complementary iaboratory seek to discover better irrigation methods.

"Because of our high evaporation rate, we lose a lot of the potential moisture through inefficient methods of putting water on the plants," Curl

The United States blamed Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal, whose real name is Sabry al-Banna, of carrying out the attacks and accused Khadafy of harboring him. Other Westerners in Libya include Europeans. The British community, for example, is estimated at 5,000. Hundreds of foreign workers already live in the desert oil fields, often on rotating one-month shifts.

Oil is Libya's largest single source of income, although Western analysts say revenues plunged from $22 billion

Fooling with Ma Nature'

University Daily Editor

Kirsten Kling

As the United States' population finds itself in the middle of an immigration crisis, Romania finds itself short a million inhabitants.

As Americans struggle with a fluctuating unemployment rate, Romania is literally fighting to increase its population to meet its labor force requirements. The number of people in Romania's labor force is an important item in the country's economic development plan.

Whereas American citizens grapple with moral concepts of abortion, birth control, a relatively high divorce rate and an increasingly trend toward smaller families, Romanian officials have urged women to have at least four or five children.

According to a report appearing in The Dallas Morning News, the Romanian Communist Party seeks to increase the nation's population to 25 million by 1990 and 30 million by the year 2000. A growth of 5 million per decade is not a small order to fill, but the Romanian government is strictly anything like the Texas-New Mexico ministering guidelines to reach the borderlines with Mexico; they'd have single adults have to pay a 5 percent surcharge for not marrying by 25; and married couples without children must pay a 5 percent childless tax.

Unfortunately for Romanian women, the country experienced a low birth rate in the early '80s because about 60 percent of all recorded pregnancies were aborted. Therefore, it seemed only natural for Romanian officials to set a new trend which would be economically feasible and profitable: force Romanians to have children - whether or not they can afford them, whether or not they want them.

Romania's stringent grip regulating the morality and lifestyle of its people not only is indicative of a true communist-controlled country, but it is humanely absurd.

Despite Romanian officials' reasons for promoting a high conception rate and thus a high pregnancy and child-bearing rate, enforced birth requirements are not exactly Mother Nature's way. And one does not fool with Mother Nature.

The information that companies fail to mention in their congenial letters is the fact that a good number of card owners become credit card junkies and run themselves into quick financial suicide. It is easy to buy now and deal with the bills (plus interest) later. It is easy, but it is greedy and

Way points

To the editor:

Although I am by no means an official spokesman for The Way International, I am in my final year of a leadership training program offered by this organization, and am visiting Lubbock for two weeks. I attend The Way College of Biblical Research in Emporia, Kan.

In response to Sheryle Grochocki's letter to the editor in the April 8 issue of The University Daily, I challenge her criticism of certain individuals associated with The Way International. At the same time, I think your readers should know the facts about the class Power For Abundant Living which she severely misrepresented in her

To begin with, the individuals who approached her were not "members" of The Way International as she states in her letter. The only members of The Way International are the three members of the Board of Trustees and the Assistant Secretary-Treasurer of The Way International. There is no membership to join.

She made the comment that she "was made to feel inferior and lacking in Biblical knowledge," which tells me that she either is lacking in Biblical knowledge or else she simply made herself to feel inferior. If a person is confident in their knowledge of the Bible, how could they be made to feel inferior?

Also, she stated that these individuals associated with The Way International "appeared to act in a manner very contradictory" to the teachings of the Bible, yet she did not bother to describe these supposedly unbiblical actions nor did she quote chapter and verse from the Bible to support her position. Basic, intellectual honesty would demand her to do so instead of simply making a vague, negative remark about their actions. In a similar vein, she mentioned "deceitful tactics" yet did not identify these tactics nor why she thinks them to be deceitful.

Her letter also tried to associate The Way International with the term "cult," which in the modern English language carries negative connotations yet has no practical meaning. To me this seems like nothing more than name-calling.

She also stated that "they demand a strong commitment, $40 for organizational literature, and your 'voluntary' labor." This statement is a gross misrepresentation of the facts. The facts are that there is a class called Power For Abundant Living (PFAL) which is offered by The Way International. The class is free; however, there is a $40 fee for the books which are required for the

There is a modest commitment involved in taking PFAL and that is to attend each session on time. I imagine that most classroom instructors at Texas Tech expect a similar commitment from their students. The remark about demanding "voluntary" labor is totally inaccuate.

Scantily clad students end up cancer clad

University Daily Staff Writer

Carla McKeown

When the temperature hits about 65 degrees, scantily clad students can be seen across campus turning their winter white bodies brown with the help of a few rays from the sun.

Phrases such as, "I'm so tired of winter I'm going to burn my body this weekend," or, "I really baked yesterday," are heard often among sunbathing beauties. Why the obsession to have one's skin a golden shade of brown? What is the point of lounging in the sun for hours just to turn the skin color a little darker for a few months?

Not only is suntanning a useless and time-consuming pastime, it is dangerous to one's health.

According to an article by Joseph Carey in the April 17 issue of U.S. News and World Report, doctors at the American Cancer Society's Annual Science Writers' Seminar in Daytona Beach, Fla., reported that even one case of severe sunburn during childhood can at least double the risk of melanoma.

The incidence of melanoma, the most common and severe type of skin cancer, has doubled since 1970. Health officials expect 23,000 new cases of melanoma and 5,600 deaths from the disease this year.

Can it really be worth the risk?

The article included a study by Dr. Arthur Sober of Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. Sober studied 111 melanoma patients and 107 healthy people and found that those who had been severely sunburned at least once in their childhood were twice as likely to develop the cancer as those who said they had not experienced a painful sunburn during childhood.

The cancer can be completely removed if it is detected early, but it spreads rapidly to other organs of the body. Only 15 to 20 percent of the patients respond to the treatment once the disease has spread.

A few dollars here and there for makeup and a few extra minutes a morning in order to produce appropriately curled hair are understandable, but the risk of cancer and the almost certain surgery that goes with it is an unreasonable price to pay for cosmetic reasons.

Women have known for years that extended exposure to the sun produces leathery, older-looking skin at an early age. Extreme precautions used to be taken to prevent the sun from damaging their skin as women worked in the open air.

Sun-darkened skin once was a sign of hard, outdoor work; now a golden tan seems to be an indication of money and leisure that allow people to spend an extraordinary amount of time lounging in the sun.

America should realize that a tanned body is not a sign of a healthy body, but one of a body with a much higher chance of contracting melanoma.

When it comes right down to it, students must decide whether to sacrifice their health in years to come for temporary tan bodies envied only for a short time.

Japan-U.S. trade relationship to change

THURMONT, Md. (AP) — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan assured President Reagan at a Camp David meeting Sunday he is "determined to effect an historic change" in Japanese lifestyle and culture to accommodate Western markets and interests, a senior American official reported.

The official, who attended the meeting and spoke to reporters afterward on condition he not be identified, said Reagan was "impressed by the commitment and determination of the prime minister" to eliminate the huge trade imbalance between Japan and the West.

Nakasone was quoted as saying, "Now is the historic moment" to make clear to the Japanese public and to the world at large that the time has come for fundamental reform of Japan's export-oriented economy.

Several candidates describe themselves as political innocents who first bought LaRouche literature at airports or on downtown sidewalks. They talk of being wooed by LaRouche supporters with frequent phone calls and personal visits.

Some said they mistakenly thought LaRouche and his National Democratic Policy Committee were affiliated with the Democratic Party when they were asked to make donations to the committee.

And now, in the wake of recent publicity regarding LaRouche's controversial ideas, they want out.

Engineers blame federal regulations for oil hike

By DON WILLIAMS University Daily News Reporter

The petroleum industry will bounce back from a recent price plunge, but government intervention is not the solution to the problem, two 1986 Texas Tech Distinguished Engineers said Friday.

T. Scott Hickman of Midland and George F. Watford of Houston, both Tech petroleum engineering alumni, said they are opposed to legislative proposals for a solution, including the placement of import fees.

"I think we have to take the medicine now, have the bloodletting, get it over with and not let this thing bleed on us for another how many years," said Hickman, a consulting firm owner.

He said some positive things could come from the crisis, however. The oil industry's tax situation should be straightened out, and now is the time to get the government completely out of the regulation of gas, Hickman said.

ficer of Prairie Producing Co., echoed those sentiments.

"I think an import fee would be a temporary relief that would cause more problems because it would introduce the government more into our business than it already is, which is bad enough," Watford said.

He predicted that the price of oil will be back up to $18 to $20 per barrel by mid-December and $22 to $24 within two years.

Watford said he would like to see the government buy some of the low-priced oil to fill up reserves.

A major problem triggered by the crisis, both agreed, is the number of engineers and prospective engineers who will be driven out of the industry. At least half of those who are just getting started in the petroleum business will seek jobs in other fields and never return,

"The 50- to 60- to 70-year-old people who lose their jobs, I don't think, have much chance to get another Watford, the retired president and chief executive of- one," he said. "Certainly not anything approaching what they made or were making."

Both Hickman and Watford cited optimism and greed without restraint as the cause of the oil recession, and Watford said banks' lending policies were based on badly overestimated current worth.

"People forget that somebody pays for every debt, either the lender or the borrower," he said. "People got to thinking in terms of servicing debt rather than

Watford said that during the early 1980s he believed prices would rise to $60 a barrel. "But I didn't go out and borrow money on that thought," he said.

Another Distinguished Engineer, Robert F. Hogan of Dallas, said professional liability, exorbitant lawsuits and a need for tort reform are thorns in the side of consulting engineers.

"As far as the consulting engineers of the country go, it's (problem) number one, number two and number three," said Hogan, a civil engineering graduate and municipal consultant.

Hogan cited an overabundance of lawyers, a willingness to take on any suit and high-percentage fees for part of the problem, but he also blamed jury members for awarding inflated punitive damages.

"People who are sitting on the juries must realize that giving somebody a million dollars just because he has insurance is not a gratuitous deed. Somebody has to pay for that," he said.

The price and format for obtaining liability insurance is also prohibitive, Hogan said. Instead of purchasing it by job, liability insurance for consulting firms must be bought based on all the previous year's jobs and earnings.

"A lot of consulting engineers who depend on insurance are out of business today," he said.

'Olden Bear' reaffirms he's golf's all-time best

University Daily Sports Editor

Colin Killian

It was only fitting that golf's greatest player won its greatest tournament Sunday in one of the greatest battles in the history of the game.

Jack Nicklaus, looking years younger than his 46 years, became the oldest player to win the storied Masters with his sixth victory on the legendary Augusta National Golf Club course. The magnitude of Nicklaus' win, perhaps the most outstanding of his 20 major championships, cannot be underestimated.

The Golden Bear reaffirmed Sunday with a magnificent 7-under-par 65 that he is the greatest player the game has known. The irony of it all was that almost everyone was rooting for him.

It wasn't always that way. In the 1960s and early 1970s, Nicklaus often was the target of the boobirds, who were known to stomp on his ball in the rough. No man in the history of sports was more maligned - and misunderstood — than Jack William Nicklaus.

You see, Nicklaus made a major mistake early in his career. He made a habit of beating Arnold Palmer, golf's favorite son. "Fat Jack," as he was known then, simply blocked out again.

the boos and catcalls and continued to beat Arnie and his army until the fans realized that Jack was the best ever to pick up a four-iron.

The 50th Masters always will be remembered for what it was - the best of the best giving it their best. For a time Sunday afternoon, golf became as exciting a spectator sport as any. For once, the leaderboard didn't look like the register for a weekend bridge club.

There was Tom Watson, who took Nicklaus' throne atop the golf world in the late 1970s, trying to regain his position in the game.

Seve Ballesteros fell short of winning his third Masters, but the 29-yearold Spaniard undoubtedly is the best player in the world today and will be trying on new green jackets for years

Australian Greg Norman, who needed only a par on the final hole to force a playoff but bogied, also will be back. He'll win more than one Masters before his career is finished, as will Bernhard Langer of West Germany, the 1985 champion.

Golf's young lions — Ballesteros, Norman, Langer - will dominate this tournament in the coming years, along with a host of youthful American stars. But none will ever surpass what Nicklaus has accomplished. The old man gave them an exhibition Sunday.

Men's golf...

Randal Strickland fired a threeunder-par 69 Sunday to lead Texas Tech in the third round of the Morris Williams Intercollegiate Golf Tournament in Austin, but it wasn't enough to keep the Raiders from finishing 12th overall.

The Raiders finished with a total of 1,119, well behind tournament champion Houston at 1,060 and runners-up Texas and TCU at 1,062.

Roque Baecker paced the Raiders with a three-day total of 219. Strickland was a stroke behind at 220, Dale Akridge, who led Tech most the tournament, finished third at 222, Terry Jackson shot a 228 and freshman Jim Woolley had a 243 total.

Texas A&M's Jeff Maggert was medalist with a 203 total. Bob Estes of Texas and Phillip Jonas of Lamar tied for second at 204.

Gymnastics...

The Texas Tech Twisters narrowly defeated Texas A&M, 172.80-168.60, to claim the Texas Gymnastics Conference crown Saturday in College Station. Tech, which finished the year 10-0, last won the TGC championship Twister David Brosig successfully defended his title as all-around champion, edging teammate Kern Arrott 46.60-45.75. Brosig also won the floor exercise and the parallel bars. Arrott won the still rings and long horse vault, while Tech's Jeff Headrick took first in the pommel horse.

Tech's undefeated season was the first in its history, and the third TGC trophy it has won. Brosig also set a school record with a score of 8.55 in the parallel bars.

Hogs, OSU extend Tech slump

By BRAD WALKER

University Daily Sports Reporte Phillip Maldonado cracked a threerun home run for Texas Tech, but it was not nearly enough as the Red

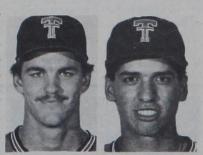

Raiders ended a fitful weekend of four losses with an 18-4 thrashing by Oklahoma State Sunday in Stillwater,

The loss, Tech's fourth in a row including a series sweep by Arkansas Hollock Friday and Saturday, pushed the Raiders deeper into their slump as they have lost eight of their last nine games. Tech is 30-17 overall and 5-7 in Southwest Conference play.

Clay Hollock, making his second start in three days, was chased early in the contest in taking the loss and dropped to 4-4.

Tech still is in fourth place in the SWC standings, tied with Houston, and a game ahead of both TCU and Baylor at 4-8.

Arkansas put the Raiders on the wrong end of a sweep for the second weekend in a row as they defeated grounder. Ralph Kraus' RBI double

Defense throttles Tech's run-and-shoot pass game

University Daily Associate Sports Editor

After being shoved around a bit last week, the Texas Tech defense reverted to its old form in the Raiders' third intrasquad scrimmage Friday afternoon.

Tech operated solely from the one-back set during the 21/2-hour scrimmage as coach David McWilliams concentrated on finetuning the Raiders' passing game.

But the defense, which gave up nine touchdowns in Tech's second scrimmage last week, constantly pressured the Raiders' quarterbacks as they held the offense to only 299 yards through the air.

McWilliams used six quarterbacks during the afternoon, but none of the signal-callers had much success against the Raiders' sticky

Starting quarterback Aaron Keesee, who replaced Billy Joe Tolliver at the No. 1 spot last week, completed only four passes on 18 attempts for 55 yards with three interceptions.

Sophomore Billy Joe Tolliver, who was operating with the secondteam, completed eight of 27 passes for 159 yards with one interception. Highlights of Tolliver's work included a pair of touchdown tosses to running back Ervin Farris.

Third-team QB Monte McGuire hit three of 18 for 50 yards.

Farris and walk-on tailback Dudley McAfee were the top receivers as each grabbed five receptions. Farris also led all rushers in the with nine yards on three carries.

Leading the Raiders' defensive effort were defensive backs Eric Everett and Roland Mitchell.
