BAKER TELLS JURY WHY HE SHOT JIM ROGERS

The main feature of the W. H. Baker trial Wednesday was the placing of the defendant himself on the stand just before noon. On the direct examination he proved a good witness for himself. He was on the stand forty minutes before noon when court adjourned until one-thirty.

At eleven-thirty Baker was put on the stand. He stated that he is a farmer, having lived about six years near Winters, coming there from Bell county, that he had never been convicted of any felony, or even tried. He said that he had known Rogers since 1913, and had never had any trouble with him up to the time of the shooting.

The defendant described Rogers as a tall man, much larger than the defendant, and stated that he was no match physically for Rogers. Continuing he said: "I had been sick for about a week, and was in bad health. I had not been sleeping well, or eating heartily, and was taking medicine. I had not eaten anything that day.

"I was in favor of the United States and the allies, and was taking three daily papers carrying the war news, and kept up with the war closely." (Objections to these statements by the state were overruled.) "We had some unpatriotic and disloyal citizens in our community.

"My financial condition was bad. I had only about forty dollars in the bank. I had one mule, two horses, one cow, and two hogs. I owed on my land, and my crops were very light." (The jury was removed just here, until matters to which the state objected could be taken up. The objection, were overruled.) "My wife was the only one living with me. I was at home the night before the trouble with Rogers, and read the reports about the war in the papers. It seemed that the Germans were going into Paris, and this worried me. My son, Lee, was in Camp Bowie.

"I was giving two dollars a month to the Red Cross, but had not bought any liberty bonds, because I was not able. I was trying to sell my horses to buy some bonds. I had no income outside of my farm.

"I had helped the officers, in enforcing the loyalty acts, and was in town on the day that Gottschalk stabbed Charles Grant. I went with Grant to the doctor's office.

"The pistol I had on the day of the shooting, I had owned since the fall of 1914. Many people had been held up that year going to and from the guns, and I did not feel safe in carrying money. The gun was a Colt's 25 calibre, holding seven cartridges. I usually kept the pistol at home, and had no other weapon. However, threats had been made against me by the Germans of the community.

"I had a letter from my son the day before the shooting, wanting money, fifteen dollars to pay on a liberty bond that he had bought. I went to town on Saturday, drew out sixteen dollars from the bank, and gave fifteen to my wife to send to our son. I had just mailed this letter at the post office. I was in my shirt sleeves. I had not seen Rogers. I stayed in town, and did not eat any dinner. There was a liberty loan drive going on, and a large crowd was in town.

"I was standing talking to Mr. Mills, his son Earl, and Mr. Bell, in front of the bank, speaking about the war. Mrs. Owen came up and asked us to buy liberty bonds. I told her I was not able, but intended to buy as soon as I sold my horses. I told her I had four boys, and would sacrifice every one of them for the war. After she left Jim Rogers came up, and said, 'Anybody is a slacker that does not buy liberty bonds.' I told him not to call me a slacker, and he said, 'You are a damned slacker.' I told him he was a liar, and he hit me twice on the head. I backed off, and when I was close to the edge of the walk he struck at me, and I stepped off to avoid the blow. Rogers threw his hand back toward his hip, and I drew my pistol and shot from the hip first, and then raised my hand and shot three times."

"I smelled whiskey on Rogers' breath while he was talking. His first blow hurt, but the second did not. Rogers was usually a sober man, but had been drinking at the time."

At this point court recessed for noon, to resume at one-thirty, to take the rest of Mr. Baker's testimony.

When Defendant Baker took the stand in his own behalf again after noon Wednesday he said in reply to what his counsel's question, what effect calling him a slacker had on him, he said that it hurt his feelings and embarrassed him.

"Were you a slacker, Mr. Baker?" asked the counsel for defense.

"No sir, I was not."

Baker stated that he carried his pistol to town with him on the day of the killing because he was expecting trouble with other parties who had made threats against him. He said that he knew all the loyals were against him because of the interest he took in the allies.

The defendant said that he was afraid of Rogers, and was afraid Rogers would take his life. He said he had heard that Rogers carried a pistol, and understood that he was disagreeable and overbearing when drinking. He stated that he had never had trouble with Rogers before.

On cross-examination Defendant Baker said that he was talking to other parties on the streets when he was approached by Mrs. Owen and asked to buy a bond. Said he could not remember all that was said, but remembered that Mrs. Owen told him she would beg her bread before she would be called a slacker. "Lady I am not a slacker," Baker said he told Mrs. Owen, "and I told her that I would call a lady down as quick as I would a man for calling me a slacker.

Defendant admitted that he called Rogers a liar when Rogers called him a "G—d— slacker," but could not recall what was said after Mrs. Owen had left him and several other, standing on the sidewalk just before Rogers came up and took part in the conversation which led to the killing.

Sam McCasland, a Taylor county farmer, was the first witness placed on the stand Wednesday morning, being introduced by the defense.

McCasland testified that he was in Winters on the day of the tragedy, heard the conversation between the defendant and Rogers and saw the shooting. They were discussing the purchase of Liberty bonds, and the witness McCasland testified that Rogers called Baker a d— slacker. "Baker said, 'I have stock if I could sell I would buy a bond,' said the witness." and Rogers said that every man who does not buy a bond is a d— slacker. Rogers called Baker a d— slacker. "Baker Baker called Rogers a liar. Rogers hit Baker, striking him twice and striking at him the third time. Baker did not make an attack on Rogers, Baker staggered back when Rogers hit him the second blow, and Baker pulled his gun and began shooting."

On cross-examination witness McCasland said that he did not hear any of the conversation between Mrs. Owen and Baker. The witness said that Rogers was making no effort to get to Baker when Baker shot, and that the two men were six feet apart and facing each other.

Walter Mitchell was introduced by the defense. He was not present when the shooting took place, but heard the shots and went to the scene of the killing. He met Baker coming away from the crowd and testified that he appeared to be stirred up and was talking to himself about bonds. Said Baker had a pistol in his hand.

On cross-examination witness Mitchell said that he was a friend to Baker and when asked if he was not interested personally in the case he said "yes."

On re-direct examination Mitchell said that he had known Baker for twenty years, but had never visited him and that the families had never visited each other, that they did not belong to the same church or lodge, and were only passing friends.

The third witness to be introduced by the defense Wednesday was Louis Ratliff, a farmer living near Winters. He testified as to the shooting, and also testified as to the character of Baker, having known Baker both in Bell county and in Winters. He stated that he saw the shooting affair, and did not see Rogers draw any weapon or attempt to do so.

Oscar Hobbs, who lives near Winters, was next called up, and gave testimony about as others had done about the shooting. On cross-examination, he stated that Rogers struck at Baker as Baker stepped off the sidewalk, but did not hit him, and said that about five seconds elapsed between the attempted blow by Rogers and the shot by Baker.

There was a very small crowd in the district court room Tuesday when the case of the State of Texas vs. W. H. Baker was called for trial. The evidence introduced began immediately with the killing which occurred in Winters in April, 1918.

The first witness called to the stand by the counsel for the State was W. L. Bell of Winters. He stated that he was well acquainted with both Rogers and Baker, and was in Winters on the day of the killing, and was an eye-witness of the affair. In telling of the incidents that led to the killing, his evidence was as follows:

"Baker, J. M. Mills, Baker's son Earl, and I were standing talking near the Winters State Bank

400,000 TO WALK OUT NOV. 1ST

INDIANAPOLIS Ind. Oct. 15. Acting President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, today sent out orders for four hundred thousand coal miners to strike on November 1st.

Mr. Lewis refused a request of Secretary of Labor Wilson to postpone the strike call, but agreed to meet Secretary Wilson in Washington next Friday to discuss the situation and see if any thing could be done to bring about the granting of the demands of the strikers and prevent the strike.

LACY BUYS WELL; DRILLING RESUMED

D. J. Lacy is due here in a few days with a crew of drillers and helpers to resume drilling on the Lacy well on the Russell ranch east of Ballinger, according to R. P. Kirk, local representative for Mr. Lacy.

It will be recalled that drilling was suspended on this well a short time ago upon instructions from Mr. Lacy and a report that he had sold one-half of his holdings including the well.

The later report says that Mr. Lacy has purchased the entire interest of all those associated with him in the contract for drilling this well, and that he will now take charge and prosecute the drilling as fast as the work can be done.

Since it was reported that Lacy sold out there has been considerable speculation here as to what would follow, and the report that he has purchased instead of selling will add new life to the oil game in this field.

WHY DO WOMEN SUFFER

When There is Such a Remedy for Their ills as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Mishawaka, Ind.—"I had such a severe female weakness that I could not do my work and I could not get anything to relieve me. A physician treated me, but it did no good. I had been in this condition for three months when I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) and it cured me. I keep house and am able to do my work now. I certainly praise your medicine."—Mrs. SUDA OLDFATHER, 648 West Second Street, Mishawaka, Ind.

Women who suffer from such ailments should not continue to drag around and do their work under such conditions, but profit by the experience of Mrs. Oldfather and thousands of others who have tried this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and found relief from such suffering. If complications exist write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience in advising women on this subject is at your service.

Mrs. Owen and some other ladies who were soliciting subscriptions for a liberty loan drive came up and asked us about buying some bonds. Mills and I told Mrs. Owen that we had bought bonds. She then asked Baker to buy some bonds, but he replied that he was not able to buy any bonds, but that if he could sell some of his stock he would buy some bonds. His son made the same statement. Mrs. Owen said that she was not able to buy, but had bought anyway. After Mrs. Owen had left, Baker spoke in anger, and said that he would call a woman down as quickly as he would a man for calling him a slacker.

"Just here Jim Rogers came up, and asked what the conversation was about. When told, Rogers, said that he had bought all the bonds he could, and said that he thought every man should buy all he was able to. Baker said that he had not bought any bonds. Rogers said, 'If the shoe fits you, wear it.' Baker said, 'You are a liar.'"

The witness said that he was standing only two or three feet away from Rogers and about five feet from Baker. Rogers, he said, slumped at Baker, and brushed Baker's hat down in his face. Baker backed off from Rogers, and the witness said that he himself walked back up, at the way, going around the column at the corner of the bank. Witness said that he did not see the shooting, but heard four shots. He came around the column, and saw Baker standing in the street, and the body of Rogers on the sidewalk. He said Baker walked toward the body, but did not say anything.

The witness described the location of the bank and surrounding objects, and stated that Baker at the time of the shooting was about fifteen feet from the point where the trouble first came up. He said that the defendant carried an automatic pistol in his right hand, and that the shot, followed each other in quick succession. He said that he was standing very close to the body of the deceased, and could not see the wounds, but could see blood.

The witness's mind was not clear as to whether or not Mrs. Owen had said anything in reply to Rogers before she left. The court ruled that the signed statement of the witness made soon after the killing could not be shown to the witness to refresh his memory on the subject. He then said that Mrs. Owen had said that she did not call Baker a slacker, and witness told Baker that Mrs. Owen had not meant anything of the kind.

Upon cross examination by the defense, Bell stated that he knew Rogers and Baker both. He did not remember how either party was dressed, and saw the body taken to the drug store. He stated that his hearing was bad at times, and could not be certain as to whether anything was said that he did not hear, by either Baker or Rogers. He repeated what he had said with reference to the surrounding objects, and as to the position of each man. He did not know whether Rogers had been drinking or not, or whether he had been to San Angelo. He stated that when the trouble came up that he in backing away turned his back, and did not see anything after Rogers had struck Baker. He did not hear Baker or Rogers say anything between the slap and the shooting. He did not hear Rogers call Baker a 'Damned slacker.' He stated that he did not know why Baker called Rogers a liar, and says he was not excited. He said that he did not see any knife or pistol on the ground after the killing.

J. M. Mills was the second witness called up by the state. He stated that he was present when the shooting occurred, and corroborated the statements of Bell as to the conversation with Mrs. Owen. He said that Baker said, 'Don't call me a slacker,' and Mrs. Owen replied that she did not mean to call anyone a slacker. After Mrs. Owen had left, he said, and Rogers came up, he repeated his statement about calling down any man or woman for calling him a slacker. Baker told Rogers not to call him a slacker, and Rogers said, 'If the shoe fits you, wear it,' according to the witness.

Mr. Mills in speaking of the affair, said that when Rogers slapped Baker, Baker backed off, and reached toward his hip pocket. After stepping off the sidewalk, he drew his pistol and fired at Rogers, firing four shots. After the killing, according to the witness, Baker said, 'No damned man can call me a slacker,' as he walked toward the body of Rogers.

Witness, made practically the same statements as Bell as to the surrounding objects, and the position of the men at the time of the killing. He said that Baker pulled his pistol from his hip pocket, and began shooting, while Rogers was standing still. The witness said that Rogers did not call Baker a liar.

Upon cross examination, witness stated that he saw the deceased when he fell, shot from the left side, with his head toward the northwest. He stated that Rogers did not knock Baker off the sidewalk, and only slapped at Baker once. He did not see any weapon picked up off the sidewalk, but that some one picked up a knife after the killing. He did not think that Rogers was drinking. He stated that Rogers had said to Baker that he thought Mrs. Owen had said 'sacrifice,' and Baker thought she said 'slacker.' Witness did not remember whether Baker mentioned having a son in the army. He stated that he saw

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy
This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. This alone is enough to convince one that it is a medicine of more than ordinary merit. Give it a trial and you will find this to be the case.

Notice! Notice! Notice!
I am the Runnels County Agent for the famous SINGER SEWING MACHINE, and have a stock in Ballinger for distribution and sale I will be glad to go to your home and demonstrate its merits any time you notify me.

If there ever was a time in the history of the country when the Sewing Machine was a necessity that time is, certainly now. With prices of ready-to-wear merchandise mounting higher and higher, the sewing machine seems to offer the only possible relief. With the resources at the command of the housewife, it is entirely possible for her to save from 50 to 75 percent on the cost of dressing the children by making their clothes. The cost of labor in all factories where clothing is made is so high that the ready-made article is now very high, and this is no fault of the retail merchant—it simply costs him more money, hence he must sell it for more.

With a cow, chickens, a garden, and a SINGER SEWING MACHINE in the home the High Cost of Living can Largely be Solved—Better get one.

The Singer machine stand, with out a peer in the sewing machine world, and has enjoyed a great reputation, for many years of hard use, and is made better than ever. Let me demonstrate.

a handkerchief on the sidewalk after the shooting, but did not see Baker pull it out of his pocket with the gun.

"Baker did not keep backing off," continued the witness, but turned back before the shooting. Rogers fell backward, with his hand on his breast. At the first shot, he still stood facing Baker, but fell at the second or third shot, both very close together. Rogers only took about eight steps toward Baker, but Baker continued on off the sidewalk after Rogers had stopped, and after stepping off the walk, turned back and shot.

Dr. Tinkle, of Winters was next called to the stand. He stated that he examined the body after the shooting, and said that Rogers was shot thru the left temple, and that another shot had gone thru his left arm and into his side, striking his heart, and a third bullet lodged in his shoulder. Upon cross examination, he said that he could not be certain as to whether the same bullet went thru Rogers' arm and into his side.

The State rested its case at this point, and the defense began introducing testimony, calling J. P. Knight to the stand first. He stated that he was standing in front of Owen's Drug Store at the time of the killing, and could see Baker firing the gun, but could not see at whom the shots were aimed. Statements made by other witnesses were corroborated.

When cross-examined, he stated that he was very excited at the time, and did not know who was on the scene of the killing, except that he saw Baker shooting, and saw Roger's body afterwards. He said that after the killing, Baker walked up the sidewalk north, and turned northeast.

Miss Virgie Euman was next put on the stand. She stated that she saw the killing from a window of an office over the City Drug Store, across the street. She said that Rogers shoved Baker off the sidewalk, pushing on Baker's shoulder, and immediately Baker pulled his gun and fired three times, and Rogers fell. No questions were asked by the state.

Floyd Smith, seventeen-year-old son of A. E. Smith, of Wingate, was next called up. He stated that he was sitting on the steps of the bank at the time of the shooting. He stated that after Mrs. Owen had left, Rogers came up, and said, "I don't give a d— who hears it, anybody that has money in the bank and won't buy a liberty bond is a damned slacker." He said that Baker resented the statement, and Rogers said, "You are a damned slacker." Baker called Rogers a liar, and Rogers hit Baker once, knocking him off the sidewalk. Rogers followed Baker, but Baker told Rogers not to come any closer. When Rogers came on, Baker drew his gun and shot three or four times quickly.

Upon cross-examination, the witness said that Rogers came from the South toward the group of men standing on the corner of the bank, and began talking before he reached them. "I didn't see who Roger was talking to," said the witness, "but Baker spoke up and said, 'Don't go too far with it,' to which Rogers said, 'If the shoe fits you, wear it.' Rogers called Baker a damned slacker, and hit Baker and knocked him off the sidewalk."

After this witness was dismissed, court adjourned until Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, when the defense continued its testimony.
