Income Verification Mandatory In Food Stamp Program

All income received by food stamp recipients must be verified if it is expected to be received during the certification period or is meant for use during the certification period. This includes total salary and wages, gifts or awards for maintenance and bonuses paid as income (such as the crop bonus commonly given by farmers).

Charges are occasionally made that employers do not report total wages paid to employees, particularly the crop bonus. However, local welfare officials are somewhat skeptical of these reports. Both the employee and employer commit criminal offenses when income is intentionally reported incorrectly to obtain benefits or increase benefits from the food stamp program. Local officials feel it is not likely an employer would conspire with his employees to defraud the government. Employers simply have nothing to gain when their criminal offense when he intentionally signs a false income verification statement. The provisions are contained in The Penal Code of Texas, Section 32.32, subsection b.

It is recognized that some abuse is possible in any program. Consequently, an investigation unit has been created by the State Department of Public Welfare, This unit is composed primarily of former police officers who are familiar with investigative responsibilities and the proper legal procedures. If you have knowledge of any attempts to defraud the government, you should report it immediately to the welfare office at Drawer H. Tahoka or telephone 998-4405.

Many farmers have cotton up, and much of the remaining acreage planted, also,

However, there are still a number of dryareas, some in the northeast and some in the southeast, as well as other spots, where there has not been sufficient moisture to plant.

(2) Federal Water Pollution Control Act of 1972; (3) Marine Protection Reserch and Sanctuaries Act of 1972. It is Congress that provides the authority for administrators to run the affairs of the citizens.

The purpose of the regulations, as stated, reads as follows:

This regulation prescribes the policy, practice and procedure to be followed by the Corps of Engineers, installations and activities in connection with applications for permits authorizing structures and work in or affecting navigable waters of the Wnited States, the discharge of dredged or filled material into navigable waters, and transportation of dredged materials for the purpose of dumping it into the ocean wa-

USDA reported on May 6, 1975 that there had not been a single reported case of hog cholera in the United States during the past year. DRINKING WATER STAN-DARDS

The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed national drinking water standards. These standards set maximum permissible levels of a variety of comtaminants as classified by EPA to be used in monitoring public water supply systems. These standards are due to become effective in December 1976 and will apply to most of the nation's 240,000 public water wupplies.

These standards come as a result of Congress' Safe Drinking Water Act of December 1974. As usual, the Federal government will attempt to force the State, through the use of Federal moneys, to enforce the standards. However, the Federal government will take action to enforce standards where a state fails to enforce or they choose not to enforce the standards. COTTON GIN POLLUTION? LEGAL: Alan Ritchey who operates a cotton gin in Valley View was sentenced to 30 days in the Cooke County jail on the second contemt citation against him for air pollution. In 1973, Ritchey paid a $500 fine for failure to install abatement equipment at the Ritchey Cotton Gin. The following year he was cited for contempt, fined $100 and given a 30day suspension. This year, there was no fine, but the judge ordered him to spend the 30 days in the county jail. Ritchey is out on a $5,000 bond, pending application for a writ of habeas February 1975 fertilizer consumption was 14 percent less than a year earlier, but 16 percent more than February 1973 , based on reports submitted by State Fertilizer Control Officials in 15 States for which comparable monthly data are available. WORLD MILK PRODUC-TION Preliminary data indicate that declines in milk production during 1974 in Australia, New Zealand, and the United Kingdom were almost offset by increases in most West European countries. As a result, world milk production (excluding the Communist countries) increased slightly over that of 1973.

Among the Communist countries, the USSR and Poland led in milk production increases during 1974, with output increasing by 4 percent. This gain far exceeded the increase in the non-Communist countries.

Altogether, the estimates from which this report is derived cover countries which account for about threefourths of the world's cow mils.

The year past was not a good one for dairymen. In addition to highter prices for important cost items such as fuel and transportation, fertilizer, feedstuffs, and labor, they were subject to lower returns for calves and for cull cows to an extent that generally was not fully offset by higher milk prices achieved during the year. In addition to these economic factors, weaher factors served to hold down output in Oceania and in U.K. and Ireland. Also, a reorganization of the Australian milk price support system may have contributed to the 1974 production decline in that country.

At the end of 1974 and in January 1975, production recovery seemed underway in New Zealand, but Western European production seemed to be sustained only in the Netherlands, Spain, and Portugal. For the European countries, it may be appropriate to discount early conditions as an indicator of full-year 1975 production because current high feed prices may be restricting winter milk output, while summertime pasture presumably will not be limited correspondingly by economic conditions.

Dairy cow numbers in some countries declined in 1974 by greater percentages than the past trend. However, in countries where dual-purpose cattle are the norm, cow numbers may be sustained by low prices for slaughter cattle. While past trends toward higher output per cow may be alowed by this development, the general outlook is for increased milk output during 1975 in the major reporting countries. cotton exprt cotton export

Still- unresolved contract problems in Asia held February U. S. raw cotton exports to 380,000 running bales, 36 percent below shipments of a year earlier, and cumulative August-February exports to only 1.9 million bales, down 33 percent from the same period last season.

U. S. cotton exports for the 1974-75 marketing year are currently projected at 3.3 million running bales, down 2.4 million bales from 1973-74 shipments of 5.7 million. The sharp drop, almost entirely to Asian destinations, reflects cancellations and expected postponement of delivery against some contracts into next sea-

February shipments to Europe of 89,000 bales declined 21 percent below those of a year earlier, but cumulative August - February exports remained 12 percent above the level of the same period last season because of higher shipments in the 3 previous months. February shipments to European Community destinations of 34,000 bales brought the cumulative total during August- February to 218,000 bales, down percent from the same months of last season. Total 1974-75 shipments to European destinations are forecast to rise by about 7 percent to around 800,000 bales, reflecting larger exports to previously marginal U. S. customers such as Portugal and Finland, rather than an overall rise in exports. In fact, total cotton imports by most West European countries are expected to drop as much as 10 percent this season, reflecting the deepening textile recession in that region.

February shipments of 265,000 bales to Asia and Oceania lagged 42 percent below year - earlier levels, and held the cumulative August-February total to nearly 1 million bales, 43 percent below shipments for the same period last season. Depending on settlement terms of contract problems, 1974-75 shipments to Asia may approximate half of last season's total.

Slightly higher February shipments to Ghana and Nigeria increased cumulative August-February ahipments to Africa and the Middle East by 14 percent above those of the same period last season. Nigeria continued to account for about half the cumulative shipments through February. Season shipments are forecast to about equal the 100,000 bales exported to that region in 1973-74.

Lower shipments again in February to Western Hemisphere destinations held the cumulative August-February total for 1974-75 33 percent below those of the same months a year ago. Canada accounted for 94 percent of cumulative shipments. Exports to Western Hemisphere destinations...mainly Canada are expected to decline this season to a little over 200,000 bales, nearly 30 percent below 1973-74 shipments.

Asia accounted for only two-thirds of total U.S. shipments during the August-February period of 1974-75, compared with 77 percent for the same period last season; Europe's share for the period climbed to 24 percent from only 15 percent a year earlier. Western Hermisphere destinations ... mainly Canada .... acounted for 7 percent in both sea-

BILL GRIFFIN SAYS

Despite the fact that more than a year has passed since the last case of hog cholera occurred in the United States producers must continue to be ever conscious of the dreaded swine disease which for years was the nation's number one hog killer.

Swine producers should report any suspicious illnesses in their herds to their local veterinarians or to state or federal animal health officials.

Those producers visiting foreign countries in search of breeding stock are especially urged to exercise every resonable sanitation precaution. Hog cholera as well as other dangerous livestock diseases must be kept out.

The virus that causes hog cholera can be carried in contaminated pork products. boar semen or vaccine brought into this country illegally. It can also be carried on the clothing or footwear of a foreign visitor or an American who visits a contaminated swine facility in another country.

Outdoors in Texas

"No other sport in Texas h grown like bass fishing. anglers are chasing the largemouth in surprising numbers, and some basics on bass are in order. Ever wonder why fishing on dark, cloudy days is almost always better than on bright sunny ones? Well, Mr. Largemouth hates the light . . . the brighter the day, the deeper he goes, headed to that magic level where light penetration is about 5%. How do you find that level? Try lowering a bright lure into the water, mark the line where it disappears, then multiply by two . . . and you have about the right depth. Early and late, try the shallows just prior to sunrise, and after sunset. Even though bass have been caught in water as cold as 5 or 10 degrees, they prefer the ideal 72 degrees. Tip of the Week: sharpen those hooks often with a small stone carried in your tackle
