SANTA ANNA FIRE LOSS ESTIMATED AT $25,000

Estimated loss of between $20,000 and $25,000 was caused by fire in the business section of Santa Anna shortly after 6 o'clock Monday afternoon, according to the Brownwood Bulletin. The two story First National bank building and the building of the Santa Anna Gas company suffered the greatest damage.

Brownwood fire department received a call for assistance at 7:35 o'clock Monday night and made the run to Santa Anna over the detour of highway 7 in Brown county in about 30 minutes. The fire, however, was practically under control when the department arrived.

Origin of the fire, according to the reports, is undetermined. The blaze apparently started in the second story of the bank building and quickly spread to the gas company building next door. Both buildings were badly damaged, both being practically total losses. Surrounding buildings were damaged by smoke and water.

The Santa Anna fire department and the Coleman fire department both fought the fire with a low water pressure, the report says. The Coleman department was on the scene with the ladder truck and pump truck. Brownwood fire department took one truck from fire station No. 2. The Brownwood firemen returned about 10:30.

LEWIS HUDSON HONORED

Last Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock a group of relatives and friends of Mr. Lewis Hudson gathered at the Odd Fellow's hall, where the Rebekahs had prepared a celebration in honor of Mr. Hudson's 76th birthday. He was not aware of the honor being shown him, until he was called to attend a business meeting at the hall. It was indeed a pleasant surprise to him, when he walked in and saw a long, well laid table, beautifully decorated with cut flowers and ferns. The immense birthday cake graced a place of honor.

After all had eaten the delicious dinner, W. D. Carroll, Deputy Grand Master of the Odd Fellows of Texas, gave a talk on the service of Mr. Hudson in the Odd Fellow and Rebekah lodges, and presented him with a forty year membership jewel, which was given him by the Odd Fellows of Goldthwaite. Mr. Hudson responded with his sincere thanks and appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him. After this, all had a general round table talk, which was much enjoyed.

Those present were Messrs. and Mmes. John Schooler, L. P. Huddleston, and Leonard Huddleston; Messrs. L. B. Porter, Oscar Simpson, W. W. Saylor, J. E. Greathouse; Mmes. Lewis Gartman, Emma Farris, T. E. Todd, A. T. Pribble, Orville Greathouse, Myrtle Forehand, Misses Lillian Hunt, LaVera Oltrogge, Fay and Clara Corts and Mrs. Lewis Hudson and the honored guest. MARLOW FOR FERGUSON

J. B. Marlow, state campaign manager for Tom F. Hunter in the first primary gubernatorial race, has announced that he will support Mrs. Ferguson.

Baptist Church

Something out of the ordinary has happened at the bakery, for the proprietor sent to the pastorium the other day an old fashioned pound cake, and that without cost. Someone said he had the blues. We wouldn't care for some of the rest to have blues if it brought about the same results.

A quartette of watermelons went to this preacher's home last week and we were just making arrangements to have Joe Ritchie baptized again, when he confessed that a gentleman who stays part of the time at the Clements' drug store paid him to see that these melons put in their appearance at the right home. Many thanks to the donor.

A lady passed along the street the other day and asked where we got the quilts that were hanging on our back fence. We immediately summoned the choir director of the Baptist church and his explanation was that he found them in the balcony of the church and turned them over to the pastor for safekeeping. So our record is clear, and the gentleman who found the quilts cleared himself, but the question is, how did these quilts happen to be in the Baptist church when all doors are locked? The county attorney was called into conference, and we found out that these quilts were used for camping purposes at the lake, and about the only thing that can be done is to have a Baptist grand jury and make thorough investigation. But as the quilts were found and turned over to the right owner, and the fellow that carried them there is a "scared to death," suspect we will just pass it up for the present.

Many thanks to the gentlemen who were responsible for oiling Fisher street. We are going to (Continued on Page 4)

GOVERNOR STERLING MAKES SPEECH HERE

Tells What He Has Accomplished Since Taking Office and Asks Voters for a Second Term

Governor Ross S. Sterling and party made an unannounced stop in Goldthwaite Wednesday morning on their way from Brownwood to Cleburne, and while here the governor made a 20 minute speech to more than 100 people assembled on Fisher street.

Former state Senator R. A. Stuart of Fort Worth, West Texas campaign manager for the governor, introduced him. He devoted most of his talk to telling how much the tax payers would be saved by Governor Sterling's plan to apply a part of the gas tax to the payment of the interest and sinking fund of road bonds.

Governor Sterling began by telling the condition of the state highway system when he became highway commissioner six years ago, after the federal government had withdrawn its support of Texas roadbuilding. He recounted the road work that had been completed during his administration, described the progress that had been made toward making the penitentiary self-supporting, and explained how he had stopped the padding of fees by state employees, and had made other economies.

The governor did not devote much time to his opponent, but called attention to the amount of income tax Jas. E. Ferguson had paid while his wife was governor. He denied that any shortage existed in the funds of the highway department at this time and quoted from the state auditor's report in support of his statement.

Governor Sterling explained in detail the famous Humble oil deal for which he has been often criticized. He said that it was a strictly business proposition, which had been concluded five months before he became a candidate for governor. He admitted that he had lost his personal fortune while serving as governor, but declared that he had given the business of the state his undivided attention and had handled it honestly and economically. In answer to a question, he explained that as Mills county has no outstanding road bonds to be retired, it would receive its part of the gasoline tax in road construction, if his plan is adopted. He declared against any bond issues at present.

The governor is a better speaker than he was two years ago, when he first took the stump. He appears to be in fine physical condition and does not seem worried over the outcome of the race. He spoke through a microphone connected with a loud-speaker in an automobile that is accompanying him on his speaking tour of the state. There were several Houston men in the party which was also accompanied by Adjutant General Bill Sterling.

THE UNSOLVED PROBLEMS

Although congress enacted 500 measures in the session just ended, it scarcely scratched important controversial issues or permanent problems and half a dozen of only slightly less importance were passed along to the next session, and most of them probably will be handed over to the seventy-third congress.

Prohibition was discussed frequently and at length, but without conclusive action. Legislation was left pending in both houses, but the November elections will have much to do with its fate.

Farm aid was overshadowed by the relief question as a whole, but unless commodity prices improve greatly before December the familiar march of panacea legislation and demands will be seen again.

The war-debt problem, despite an emphatic vote against cancellation or revision, is not yet settled. There is even talk of a special session to deal with that issue. Certainly it will be among the next session's major worries.

Add to these the matters of Philippine independence, approved by the house, but not voted on by the senate; of Muscle Shoals; of naval construction, the bonus, banking law reform and inflation, and the calendar already awaiting the next session assures a busy winter. — Philadelphia Public Ledger.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT

The conditions under which an aged Texan, jailed in default of payment of a breach of promise suit judgment, was recently released from a New York prison revive interest in a not generally understood fact that imprisonment for debt still exists. There is no prohibition in the Federal constitution of the practice. The signers of that document were men in whom respect for property rights was strong. The legal procedure which long made imprisonment for debt a penalty is an outgrowth of that sentiment. In this country, however, in the forty years between 1821 and 1868, save for the few existing exceptions, imprisonment for debt was gradually eliminated state by state.

In some states, failure to pay alimony to a divorced wife can result in imprisonment. The obvious absurdity of the situation does not seem to have impressed lawmakers to this good day, although there is no reason why proceedings to levy on property or sequester wages for this type of obligation would not be sound. Alimony itself becomes an absurdity in the light of the equitable adjustment of marital property rights represented in the community property principle of Texas law.

The Texas constitution specifically forbids imprisonment for debt, but in the case of wife or child desertion a phase of it exists. That is, pending trial, the court may order the necessary allowance made for support and on failure to pay may punish for contempt.

It is questionable whether imprisonment for debt is justifiable under any of the few laws providing it that remain. Notoriously the New York alimony law has worked out to the result that many divorced husbands unable to pay continue under imprisonment in that forced status. No present debt imprisonment procedure contemplates punishment, only enforced settlement of the obligation, but in many cases the imprisonment nevertheless becomes punishment that the circumstances of the imprisoned render them powerless to avoid.

COUNTY CONVENTION

Mills county Democrats held their county convention Saturday, Aug. 30, at 3 p. m., in the district court room in the court house. John W. Roberts, chairman of the Mills county Democratic executive committee, called the convention to order and was elected its permanent chairman. M. Y. Stokes, Jr., was appointed secretary.

Delegates elected to the state convention at Lubbock, Sept. 13, were John W. Roberts, delegate, and Mrs. John W. Roberts and M. Y. Stokes, Jr., alternates. M. Y. Stokes, Jr., was elected delegate to the Congressional convention in Abilene and John W. Roberts was elected delegate to the State Representative convention.

The following resolution was presented to the convention by G. W. Jackson and was unanimously adopted:

Be It Resolved by the Democratic convention of Mills county, Texas, in convention assembled on July 30, 1932:

First, That we view with alarm the increased cost of administering our state and national government and the increased burden of taxation placed on the people, and we demand of our lawmakers in both state and nation a reduction in the expense of administering the same, by eliminating all superfluous offices and boards and a reduction in the salaries of our officeholders to correspond in some degree with the prices that the farmers, ranchmen and others have to take for their products.

Second, That knowing the baleful influence of the saloon and the legalized sale of intoxicating liquors in our state and nation, we regret the propaganda that is being spread abroad in our land to discredit our constitution and laws and has for its end the introduction of this nefarious traffic again, and we pledge ourselves to take a stand against this evil and for the endorsement of all laws.

Texarkana firemen drew black beans last week to determine which would leave the service, when it was ruled that nine of the 26 men must go. The beans, 9 black and 17 white, were placed in a hat and the men filed past and drew one. Eight of those to go are married, and the ninth is supporting his parents.

MORE SLANG- LESS SWEARING

Nerts... horsefeathers... applesauce.

Match those phrases against the old mouth-filling oaths that used to come rolling out of saloons.

Are American men growing weaker, particularly verbally? "No," says Prof. Albert Lovejoy, formerly associated with the Cambridge school of the drama at Harvard.

"No, one thousand times no, instead we are evolving a new 'language'."

The Easterner is in Hollywood as dramatic coach at a studio, and he has just completed a survey of the speech of typical American cities.

"The general use of rip-roaring profanity died with the corner saloon," he explained.

"With prohibition a new situation arose. Men and women found themselves drinking together—in speakeasies, in homes, or on parties.

"Men who had formerly given vent to profanity in saloons now began to invent slang phrases for use in mixed company.

"These terms, such as 'eye-wash,' 'bologna,' 'jump in the lake,' 'so-and-so,' 'horse radish' and others, have the same purpose as profanity, but are inoffensive.

"The staccato tempo of modern newspaper columnists has fostered the use of these pseudo profane expressions. The modern personality columnist chooses to express himself with harmless ejaculations in tune with the times.

"It provides a short cut for expression and is entirely within keeping of the American tempo of things.

"Whatever may be said against the use of slang, one thing must be said in its favor; it has greatly decreased the use of profanity."

AN OLD BILL

There is a scarcity of gold. The skilled craftsman is without work. The man who reaps the harvest gets nothing for it and he who does the plowing secures none of the profit. The land is depleted. There are more rulers than ever. The country turned upside down, is in a bad way.

ACCIDENTAL IDEAS MAKE INVENTORS RICH

Necessity is not always the mother of invention. Many discoveries have been purely accidental, or hinged directly on some slender thread of circumstance.

Something goes wrong. The expected fails to happen, but the unexpected points the way to something better. Occasionally, even in some blunder or misfortune, somebody gets a lucky break—gets it because he is able to recognize it when it comes along, says James M. Chalfant in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Consider the discovery of anti-knock gasoline, for instance. "Accident had a lot to do with the discovery of ethyl gasoline," its inventor, Thomas Midgely, says.

"I was working on the theory that a colored gasoline would not knock. That isn't true, but of course I had no way of knowing that at the time. I took some kerosene to the chemical laboratory and told the man in charge of the chemicals that I wanted an oil soluble dye.

"What do you want to color?" he asked.

"I want to color some kerosene, I said.

"Well, there aren't any oil soluble dyes in the stockroom," he replied, "but if you want to color kerosene, this iodine will do it."

"Of all the thousands of chemicals he might have picked, by sheer chance he picked the one that turned the trick, for when we used the iodine to color the kerosene, took it back and ran the motor on it—the knock was gone. Then it took seven years of hard work to find out why it killed the knock and to find the tetraethyl lead used today as an anti-knock."

There would seem to be no connection between a cut finger and the high explosives of modern warfare, but there is. Alfred Nobel, the Swedish chemist, cut his finger one day in the laboratory. Dissolving some gun cotton in ether alcohol, he swabbed the cut. He had been searching for an absorbent and solidifier of nitroglycerin. And as he watched the sticky substance slowly hardening to an elastic film on his finger, the thought came to him that may be this substance would do. He mixed the extra collodion with nitroglycerin. It set to a jelly. Thus blasting gelatin was discovered.

The present generation well remembers when Lee De Forest introduced a small grid of wire into an exhausted tube of glass, containing two elements and known at that time as the "Fleming valve." The Fleming valve had a filament which could be heated to incandescence, and a circular plate surrounding this filament. Had it not been for the introduction of this grid broadcasting would probably not exist today.

King Camp Gillette, was once told that he should try to invent something which, when once used, would be thrown away. In 1895, Gillette had the good fortune to try to shave himself with a dull razor. He hit upon the idea of a safety razor and made a model of brass and clock spring. In less than seventeen years after the patent was allowed, this little contribution to modern man was earning $4,500,000 a year in profits.

The paper shopping bag, with the piece of cord running through holes in the top and down the sides of the bag and under the bottom to reinforce it, was the product of Walter Henry Deubener.

A shipping tag, in its first form, had a hole punched at one end. Denison pasted two small rings of paper around this hole to reinforce it, and realized a new paying industry. Buttons were at one time sewed on shoes and easily ripped off. A man by the name of Heaton invented a small wire staple to take the place of the sewing operation, and realized a fortune. A small hump, in a piece of wire, was the forerunner of two industries. One of these humps was put in a small wire hook which together with an "eye" was used to fasten women's dresses together. The hairpin with a hump also made a fortune for its inventor.

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Ten parts of alcohol and 90 parts of benzol, mixed together, will make a solution for removing dried printers ink from furniture.

Caterpillars and crawling insects may be trapped by smearing the vines and plant stalks with a sticky mass prepared by mixing 6 oz. of venice turpentine, 5 oz. of linseed oil and 75 gr. of melted paraffin. Heat helps make a smooth mixture.

Driven into the edge of the seat and through the leg, finishing nails will spread the end of the leg and tighten wobbly chairs. If the rungs are loose, they can be tightened in the same way, driving the nails through the legs and into the end of the rungs.

Undyed goods may be freed of rust stains by soaking the spot in a solution of tin chloride in water. As soon as the spot has vanished, rinse the material thoroughly in large quantities of clear water. This method should not be used on colored goods, as they are likely to become bleached.

Water-softening salts suitable for use in the bath may be made by intimately mixing 2 pounds of baking soda, 1 1/2 pounds of tartaric acid and 1-1/2 pounds of starch or rice flour. If desired, a perfume may be added. A few table-spoonsful in the bath will increase the lathering ability. Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Some ants eat greasy food, while others like sweets. Tartar emetic has been found the most effective poison for either kind. For grease-eating ants, mix tartar emetic, 1 part, with grease 20 parts, and for those that like sweets, mix tartar emetic, 1 part, with honey or syrup, 20 parts. Smear the bait on objects near the runways or other places where the ants are known to be. Care should be taken in spreading the mixture to see that only the ants can get it.

GIRL AVIATOR EATS
FRUITS IN THE AIR

Did you ever hear of a girl who lost 15 pounds in 13 hours? Page Elinor Smith, who weighed 110 to start with, and didn't want to drop an ounce. It was her first endurance solo flight and it nearly finished her.

Elinor went to a doctor. He told her she might know all about fuels for a motor, but not for a human stomach. She needed a diet for maximum endurance, both before she left the ground and during her grueling hours in the air. Guess what it was? Fruit.

For three weeks before a flight, here's the menu, as given by Collier's Weekly:

For breakfast, oranges or grapefruit, with whole-bran muffins and buttermilk.

For lunch, a fruit or vegetable salad with light oil dressing, fruit-flavored gelatin and buttermilk.

Dinner consists of a fruit or tomato-juice cocktail, lean meat (chicken, beef or lamb), green vegetables and rye, whole-wheat or bran bread with plenty of butter.

Three days before leaving the ground, Elinor goes on a liquid diet—soup, buttermilk and all the water she can drink.

In the air she eats whole-bran raisin muffins, mixed and baked by her doctor. Aside from these, she has oranges, for sustenance and liquid.

How does it work? The first time, she stayed aloft twenty-six hours and never lost an ounce. She felt grand—so grand that she came down and stuck to her diet. She never has nervous indigestion beforehand, as many pilots do.

The Eagle can do your job printing to please you and the price will be right.

quackgrass, Canada thistles and others can be exterminated by spraying them with a solution of sodium chlorate, 1 pound and water 1 gallon. This treatment is especially desirable in places where it is difficult to dig out the weeds. An ordinary hand sprayer can be used. Two or three applications are necessary. Clothing saturated with the spray becomes inflammable when dry and should be washed out before it dries.

CONSISTENCY STILL RARE

Archibald Roosevelt, son of the former president and himself a colonel in the world war, got in the spotlight recently by opposing the payment of compensation to veterans of the war.

His demands for economy in government rang long and loud and were enthusiastically cheered by representatives of big business.

But Archie failed to tell what he and his crowd were getting out of the treasury of the U. S. Here is what Wright Patman has to say about them:

"Archie says that the veterans are a 'specifically favored class receiving a great subsidy' and that 'this vast legalized abuse must be abated and that this grievance must be redressed.' Let us see if Archie and the four M's, who are really behind this petition are in a position to grieve about the government paying subsidies to anyone. The four M's represent Morgan, Mellon, Mills and Myers, depicting mortgages, misery, misfortune and malfeasance.

Archie and J. P. Morgan are invested in steamship lines. The lines were purchased from the government for a very small price. They received a subsidy from the government in the purchase of the vessels. The government did require certain payments to be made over a period of twenty years. However, the government gave them contracts to carry the mail in their steamships. They are being paid as high as $25,000 a trip for carrying one and two pounds of letters. One of their lines has a ten-year contract to carry the mail from Baltimore to Hamburg. The first few months of their first year, this line rendered a service for the government in carrying the mail that other steamship lines would have rendered for not to exceed $15,000. This company was paid under its liberal contract with the government the sum of $792,246 for this service.

Another Morgan-Roosevelt line has a very liberal contract with the government to carry ocean mail. It receives a similar subsidy. This line borrowed $15,750,000 from the government's shipping board. The date of the loan was May

HOME CANNING

The home canneries, now so plentiful, are examples of local industries taking its raw materials from the immediate vicinity of the plant. The era of household handcraft was superseded by the era of steam power factories. The latter endured for 100 years and then were largely absorbed by great central organizations representing merger and concentration. Now the concentrated mergers are giving way to smaller units. The cost of distribution from a distant concentration point has been found too heavy charge against profits. Consumers are no longer crowded into the states of the Atlantic seaboard or the area north of the Ohio river. They are dwellers in all the states, and in many lines small semilocal producers can undersell their long range competitors. At all events the merger mania seems definitely ended. All the great combinations have not approached the precipice and looked down into insolvency, but many of them have developed slight cracks under the strain of heavy overhead. We can never return to handcraft, to one-man factories, to household shoemaking and roadside tanneries, but we may come, if we have not already arrived, to an epoch marked by decentralization. American industry hereafter appears destined to evolve from the continental to the localized idea.—State Press in Dallas News.

"NOISE HOUNDS CHASE SOUND FROM TALKIES!"

One of the strangest jobs in the talking picture studios is that of the "noise hound." He does not make noise but hunts it down and eliminates it. It is his job to find the unwanted sounds that seem always to be echoing about the studios and remove the causes, says a magazine article. For this purpose, he uses a voltmeter testing apparatus and an ear trumpet. Whenever the man who regulates the sound apparatus reports some extraneous noise that interferes with recording, the sound detective goes to work.

Time was wasted not long ago, when a gurgling sound was heard while one picture was being made. It finally was traced to a drinking fountain just outside the camera's vision, difficult to find because it was heard only when an actor or workman took a drink. Sometimes a "bug" brought on by electrical vibrations, causes the trouble, and once a cricket stopped work on a picture until it could be removed.

24, 1930, and it will mature in 20 years. The interest rate is 1-2 of 1 per cent or 50c for the use of every $100 of the government's money for one year. Contrast this with the $4.50 and $6 on the $100 paid by the veterans for the use of their own money.

"The government is paying out more than $18,000,000 a year, in excess of what other steamship lines would render the service for, to the Morgans, Roosevelts and others who are talking about subsidies to veterans."

Wherever a veteran is receiving compensation without being entitled to it, he should be exposed and the money stopped. No honest citizen, whether veteran or not, condones graft, little or big.

But veteran Archie is not the man to prefer charges against his brother veterans of squandering government funds. His hands are not clean!

Thousands of Women
Have Taken Cardui
on Their Mothers' Advice

It is an impressive fact that many women have said they learned of the value of Cardui from their mothers.

What stronger evidence of her confidence in a medicine could a mother have than that she advises her daughter to take it!

Cardui is given the credit for relieving so many cases of womanly suffering that it is widely and favorably known. Druggists, everywhere, sell it.

If you are weak, run-down, suffering monthly, take Cardui. Take it for a reasonable length of time and try it thoroughly. As your health improves, you will share the enthusiasm of thousands of women who have written to say: "Cardui helped me."

THE ONLY ISSUE

The main issue of the presidential campaign of 1932 is economic relief.

That statement by Nominee
Franklin D. Roosevelt in launching his Democratic campaign is certainly the challenge upon which Mr. Hoover would like to have the coming fight based.

Upon no other major issue should it be based. Prohibition and all the others are only side issues compared to the one all-important question of economic recovery.

Roosevelt might have been carried into office by pitching his campaign on the main issue of prohibition law repeal. That would have been the line of least resistance.

The real issue of the campaign
as Gov. Roosevelt has rightly recognized, could not have been dodged. Whether we shall have legal liquor is of insignificant importance compared to whether we shall work out a rehabilitation of our economic structure.

Besides that, all else is mere political fodder. The candidate who would fail to recognize it certainly is not worthy to place his name before the people as candidate for the highest responsibility in the gift of the people.—Temple Telegram.

PLATFORMS COMPARED

Here is the way the most important economic and political issues of the day are treated in the platforms of the two major political parties:

Armament

Republican—Full influence to be exerted for arms reduction,
but navy defenses are not to fall
below other nations.

Democratic—Navy and army
adequate for national defense, with a reduction in the cost of military protection.

Foreign Affairs

Republican—A continuance of the Republican policy of protecting national interests and at same time promoting harmony with other nations without entangling alliances.

Democratic—Peace with the world, and settlement of all disputes by arbitration; adherence to World Court; co-operation with other nations to maintain Monroe Doctrine; cancellation of debts opposed; independence for Philippines.

Labor

Republican—High wages are favored, and the shorter working week and day. Present immigration laws to be strictly enforced; collective bargaining by responsible representatives of labor is approved.

Democratic—Unemployment relief by extension of federal credit; reduction in the hours of labor; unemployment and old age insurance.

Social Control of Business

Republican—Constructive
regulation of all transport systems; continuance of efforts to bring about conservation of oil;
the enactment of a law authorizing federal power commission to regulate rates for electric current crossing state lines.

Democratic—Regulation to the full extent of federal power of holding companies selling securities in interstate commerce and regulation of rates of utility companies operating across state lines; strict enforcement of antitrust laws.

Taxation and Public Economy
Republican—Prompt and drastic reduction of public expenditures; resistance to unnecessary appropriations; maintenance of gold standard; opposition to currency inflation.

Democratic—Reduction of at least 25 per cent in cost of federal government; a system of taxation based on the ability to pay; preservation of a sound currency, the forwarding of an international conference to consider rehabilitation of silver.

Banking

Republican—Better protection of depositors through revision of banking laws; the creation of a system of federally supervised home loan discount banks to make possible long term credits for homes.

Democratic—More rigid supervision of national banks;
quicker methods of realizing on assets of suspended banks; further restriction of federal reserve banks in permitting use of facilities for speculative purposes; severance of affiliated securities companies from commercial banks.

Tariff

Republican—Maintenance of the Republican policy of protecting American industries.

Democratic—Competitive tariff for revenue; reciprocal agreements with other nations; encouragement to international trade.

Agriculture

Republican—Maintenance of farm board; assistance to farming to see that Mr. Dan Yates and his fellow helpers have comfortable seats at the meeting next week.

This leads me to say, that our meeting starts Sunday. Dr. Hornburg will be here for the Sunday evening service. Let's give him a large audience at his first service. In fact, you might come Sunday morning and hear the announcements, because there will be very little time given over to any announcements during the week. Many chances have been ruined for a revival because of the pastor or someone else taking half of the time before, and after, making announcements. Some announcements are necessary and ought to be made, but all ought to be as brief as possible, and that will be our aim during this meeting.

We are going to have services at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m., and possibly some kind of service in the afternoon. Now let's be honest about this meeting and see if we can not make some kind of arrangements to attend. Every business in town ought to be represented at the morning service. Our policy has always been, never ask any business to close their doors and attend church, because you will always find a few that won't and we are not going to embarrass anyone. However, if we were going to have horse races, a carnival and a few other side shows, every business could close and attend for at least three or four hours a day. But when it comes to putting on a campaign to get men to be better, and to promote righteousness, saving the youths of our community from many of the pitfalls about them, it's unthinkable. Gentlemen, we are not saying one word about the picnic, with its allurements. We attended and really enjoyed it.
The question is this: Will a meeting, where Christ is preached and righteousness promoted be worth as much to our town as was the horse racing, carnival and other things? Look the situation over and answer the question in your own heart. All I ask of you is to be honest with God and honest with yourself,
and, regardless of the verdict,
we would not say an unkind
word.

But we do want you to attend this meeting. We believe it will help you. We believe it will make you a better man or woman, and really don't you have a desire to be a better man? Come to these services.

Any church wanting church
letter for associational purposes, we have them and will supply
you if you only ask us.

WOODS DEFEATS SHAVER FOR SUPERINTENDENT

Complete reversal of the standing of the two candidates for the Democratic nomination for State Superintendent of Public Instruction came late last week when L. A. Woods of Waco assumed a lead of more than 15,000 over C. N. Shaver of Huntsville on the face of additional returns from the July primary.

Shaver, who was appointed state superintendent by Gov. R. S. Sterling after the death of S. M. N. Mays, had been leading Woods by a narrow margin in tabulations by the Texas Election Bureau. The reversal came when complete returns were received from Tarrant county, throwing several thousand votes into the Woods column. More than 35,000 votes were polled in Tarrant county, the heaviest balloting in the history of the county in a state primary election.

Returns to the bureau from 253 out of 254 counties, 213 complete, gave Woods 412,002 votes, against 396,794 for Shaver, a lead of 15,298.

CALL ISSUED TO PAY STATE WARRANTS

A call was made in Austin Saturday by State Treasurer Charley Lockhart for payment of general revenue warrants amounting to $1,500,000. All general revenue warrants up to and including No. 162,210, will be paid regardless of whether or not they have been discounted.

Treasurer Lockhart also announced that he was paying all Confederate pension warrants up to and including the less of whether or not they have November, 1931, issue regardless of whether or not they have been discounted. The Treasurer is purchasing at full value up to and including the July, 1932, issue provided they are properly indorsed and supported by affidavit showing that they have not been discounted. These warrants are purchased under a special act of the legislature authorizing the state treasurer to purchase them not discounted.

MAJOR FORCED TO DRIVE OUT VET WHO SAVED HIS LIFE

One of the most dramatic sidelights of the army's drive on the B. E. F. in Washington last week centered around Maj. George O. Patton, of the cavalry, who was compelled by duty to rout from Camp Marks a man who once saved his life on a battlefield in France some 14 years ago.

During the war, Major Patton held the rank of colonel in charge of light tanks. His aide was a youth from Camden, N. J., named Joe Angelo.

One night seven men, including Major Patton and Angelo were out on a patrol when a shell struck nearby. The officer was badly wounded, but Angelo dragged him into a shell hole and stayed with him all night.

Angelo was one of those who fled from Camp Marks last week before the advance of Major Patton's cavalry.

BIG STILLS

Houston's liquor supply was diminished materially Friday, following federal seizure and demolition of an elaborate 3-story distillery and 2800 gallons of whiskey.

The stills, running full blast at the time of the raid were housed in a tall silo-like structure. Pipes took the "cooked" liquor down to the barreling department on the second floor. Other pipes connected the stills with a big underground vault.

Barrels of whiskey in the house and in the vault bore dates. One was inscribed "Christmas Stuff." A ventilator fan in the electrically lighted vault kept it free of fumes. Electric buzzers provided for communication between the still house and other parts of the building.

Two men were arrested and charged with manufacture and possession of liquor making apparatus and maintaining a nuisance.

SWINGING AROUND THE CIRCLE

The master strategists of the Democratic party are now busily engaged in discussing whether or not their candidate for the presidency shall make what is popularly called a "front porch" campaign or swing around the circle on a speaking tour which will take in most of these United States. Some insist that Governor Roosevelt should emulate the oyster and retire within his shell. Others want him to shell the woods near and far with an oratorical barrage reminiscent of William Jennings Bryan in his prime.

There is something to be said on both sides, of course. As a matter of fact, the Democratic party in general and Franklin D. Roosevelt in particular have nothing to fear from a strenuous speaking campaign. The New York governor has a good presence and considerable oratorical powers. He should put in a pleasing appearance on the stump. Just so, the vice presidential nominee, John Garner, is able to hold his own on the nation's political rostrums, his rough and ready style of speaking finding favor with the masses who like a plain man to make a plain speech in a plain way.

It is possible that the day when political campaigns are won by a tremendous volume of oratory are about over. The radio, that impersonal instrument of political destiny, has to a certain extent dehumanized politics. The voice and not the personality reaches millions. President Hoover, whose platform presence leaves much to be desired, speaks creditably when safely entrenched behind the microphone. Gov. Roosevelt is also blessed with a good radio voice and suffers not at all in comparison with his opponent, so it is possible that both candidates will curtail their travels.

The Democratic party is, of course, attacking the ramparts of the G.O.P. and wishes to present its candidate to as many of the electorate as is possible, hence the solicitude with which the leaders map a plan of campaign which will take Gov. Roosevelt to as many "key cities" of the country as possible. It can be overdone, however. It was said of the late William Jennings Bryan that he could get more people to run after him to hear him speak and fewer to vote for him than any politician of his generation. The statement was far from accurate, but contained enough truth to make future generalissimos of the party cautious in the extreme. Neither Hoover nor Roosevelt will probably permit himself to be called on to the limit of human endurance as was Bryan in the memorable campaign of 1896. The American people have too much sense to expect it of them. —Houston Chronicle.

AMELIA TELLS WHY SHE FLEW OVER OCEAN

Why did Amelia Earhart fly the Atlantic? "I have always enjoyed doing new things, first time things," she writes in the American Magazine. "It is a desire I have had as long as I can remember. I recall the special glee with which my sister and I, in Atchison, Kan., 25 years ago, put on our new gymnasium suits and went out to shooek all the nice little girls. It seems a trivial thing now, but it was tremendously daring in those strictly conventional days.

"In those staid days even bloomers were considered 'rough' for little girls, and riding 'belly-whopper' on a sled was simply beyond the pale. All dignified young ladies must ride sitting up. So, of course, I delighted in violating the rule, and to this, perhaps, I owe my life. One day, on a particularly steep and slippery hill, I was nearing the bottom at zipping speed. A junkman's cart, pulled by a heavy old horse equipped with enormous blinders, came out of a side road and moved directly across my path. The junkman did not hear the shrieks of warning, and the hill was too icy for me to turn. In a flash my sled shot under the horse, between his front and back legs, and safely out on the other side! If I had been sitting up, my head would have gone straight into that horse's ribs. At the speed I was going, either the ribs or my head would have cracked—possibly the ribs. Thus my avoidance of the conventional, in this one case at least, may have saved my life.

"When I left Ogontz school, in Philadelphia, to become a nurse's aide in a Toronto war hospital, I was discouraged by all my friends.

"When I wanted to learn to fly, in California in 1920, and set out to earn the money for flying lessons by working for the telephone company, I was ostracized by the more right-thinking girls. When I got a job driving a truck delivering sand and gravel, I became a simple nobody. Such things were not done.

"All this adverse talk, was so far as I was concerned, smoke up a flue. I have enjoyed life since I was a little girl. I intended to go on enjoying it. Whether it was considered the thing to do or not was irrelevant. As a little girl I had ridden my buggy in the stable; I had once climbed up a delivery horse; I had explored the fearsome caves in the cliffs overlooking the Missouri; I had invented a trap and trapped a chicken; I had heard my grandmother tell of the days when in Kansas, the guns were kept ever at hand to fight off Indians; I had jumped over a fence that no boy my age had dared to jump, and I knew there was more fun and excitement in life than I would have time to enjoy if I lived to be a thousand years old."

A HUGE JOKE

If the News had printed all the unsolicited political matter offered it you certainly would not have wanted a interest in that peerless medium. A newspaper is like a hotel—not precisely, but illustratively. The hotel keeper can fill his rooms every night with free guests, but he couldn't pay his taxes or help from the proceeds of nonpaying guests. Besides, those who used his rooms gratis would be dissatisfied with the service. Some one in a small room would want to know why he couldn't have a parlor suite. And some one in a parlor suite would criticize the management for not answering the room phone promptly when he called. It is that way with a newspaper. A newspaper could fill up every day with free ads, but it couldn't pay the printer. Besides, those who got the free publicity would condemn the paper vehemently for not putting them top of column on page one. Each nonpaying advertiser would accuse the management of favoring another nonpayer in preference to the complainant. Just as in the case of the gratis guest at the hotel, objecting to a west room when he thought he deserved a corner apartment with southern exposure. This is a peculiar world, but lots of fun. The human race thinks of itself in tragic terms. As a matter of fact, the human race is a joke. —State Press in Dallas News.

BIGGEST WHEAT FARM NOW TO BE DIVIDED

Division of the 22,000-acre tract which Hickman Price, one-time $50,000 a year executive of New York, operated on a gigantic scale as a wheat farmer was seen at Tulsa, Texas, following Price's announcement he was "broke" and unable to continue his operations. Price met with creditors last week and told them he had invested $250,000 in the project, every dime he had. A creditor's committee of five will investigate the holdings and appoint a manager. Two suits against Price totaling slightly more than $11,000 have been filed and Price said a third will be filed. An analysis of his operations, made by the creditors, showed loans against his acreage totaled $142,000; other outstanding obligations, some secured by machinery and equipment, total $120,000.

"Every creditor will be paid in full," said Price. I do not know when, but all will be paid."

Price told his creditors he believed his plan of operations was sound, that conditions over which he had no control were responsible for his failure.

Investments made on the expectation of fifty cent wheat were lost when the price dropped to 15 cents. This year's yield was cut to 3,000 acres by a March freeze, hails, drouth and outworm damage. The average yield is 11 bushels an acre.

"I am at the end of my resources," he said. "I have no plans for the future. Right now, I am living with my wife and son, 15 miles east of Kress, where we have a few cows, chickens and a garden."

The committee asked Price to continue as manager of the project, but he said he was unable to do so. It was thought that a division of the property would be arranged.

In 1930, when Price farmed 22,000 acres of land and harvested a half million bushels of wheat he was said to be the world's largest wheat farmer. His project was widely known.

Price's plan of operation called for factory-like production. He used motor driven outfits instead of horse-drawn equipment, operating the combines and plowing outfits on a 24-hour a day basis.

ROBOT MOVIE CAMERA DANCES WITH ACTRESSES

Adjustable for a waltz, fox-trot, tango or straight walking, a robot movie camera has been designed for photographing the film stars as they dance. The mechanical dancer, electrically driven, guides the actress around the floor, taking her picture in such a way that audiences get the impression of dancing with her. Dress details, a chalked face on the camera and wooden arms give a realistic touch.

EASY MONEY

Big hearted Uncle Sam, under the direction of Herbert Hoover and company, has just offered the national banks of this country a nice, fat bonus with the expressed hope that the common man will get some of the drippings.

A bank by depositing a United States 3 per cent bond worth $1000, but on sale right now for $960, will get back $950 in brand new currency. Just like having a cake and eating it too. And on top of that the bank will still draw $30 interest every year. If it lends the $950 new money out at six per cent, the bank will thus be able to make $87 out of a $950 investment in a bond guaranteed by the government itself.

According to news reports, the banks are tumbling over themselves to get this easy money. Most of them already hold the bonds, some of which they bought a few months ago at the bargain price of $850. In such a case they will be able to secure $100 more money now than they paid for the bond, and still get the bond interest every six months. The Riggs National bank in Washington has asked Uncle Sam to print $3,000,000 of the money for it, the Denver National bank wants $1,500,000 and the really big banks have not made public how much they will take. All in all, nearly a billion dollars is slated to be exchanged for bonds if all the banks who are eligible take their share.

The money is perfectly good money and it is likely to help business if the banks that get it put it in circulation. But it makes practically impossible the payment of the soldier bonus now. Congressman Wright Patman showed how the bonus could be paid in exactly the same way that this new money is being issued, except it would go to the veterans in payment of their certificates. Many leading bankers protested then that printing this new money would bankrupt the country. The bill was killed. Now it turns up as a bonus for the national bankers and the same big bankers say it will help the country. At any rate it ought to help them.

BLAME RESTS ON ADULTS

Education of motorists in traffic safety is still in the little red school house stage of development, in the opinion of Harold G. Hoffman, motor vehicle commissioner of New Jersey, who believes that adults are largely responsible for the slow progress of safety training.

Although good work has been done in instilling safety codes in the young, Commissioner Hoffman comments, "Our efforts in teaching safety to children can not come to full fruition until we have been successful in bringing to the adult motorist a full sense of responsibility to his own children and others. We must engender, too, a general and wholesome respect for the motor laws designed to promote safety on the highways and insist upon their equitable enforcement.

Commissioner Hoffman also points out that while the younger children have demonstrated an aptitude to assimilate safe practices, the elder ones, now in high school and college have not shown the same tendency.

"Statistics show," he says, "that these youngsters are notoriously unsafe drivers, and for the tragic accident record of youth, I am convinced that our high schools and colleges must accept a large share of responsibility. The high schools prepare these boys and girls for various activities of life; but when it comes to an activity that we are sure most of them will take up, that of driving a car, they do comparatively little.

"Education in the traffic field is universal in its application. Too often we are tempted to confine consideration of it to children, and even to the motor vehicle owner and operator, forgetting that the automobile manufacturer, the motor vehicle administrator, the highway engineer, the legislator, and even the corner traffic cop always must go on acquiring new and more useful knowledge."

SIX HUNDRED MILES AN HOUR IS TOP RATE OF FLYING

Ultimate top speed for airplanes with present wing characteristics is 600 miles per hour, according to conclusions reached by the National Advisory Council for Aeronautics following a series of experiments in the world's highest speed wind tunnel at Langley Field, Va. These tests, run at air speeds as high as 800 miles per hour, demonstrated that racing airplane wings designs now employed develop prohibitive "drag" above 600 miles per hour. Present day propellers which turn at 1800 revolutions per minute also may waste power, the experiments showed. At that speed, the tip of the blade is traveling so fast that it hinders rather than aids performance.

AVERAGE PERSON WALKS 8 MILES IN DAY'S WORK

"People do not realize how much they use their feet, yet no part of the body is more commonly abused. Statistics prove that nine out of every ten persons have some form of foot trouble, nearly all of which could have been avoided." These statements were made by Ethelwyn Dodson, extension specialist in clothing of the University of California, upon completion of a survey of foot ills and their causes.

"By using pedometers a survey was made to determine the distance traveled by men and women in various stations in life," Miss Dodson declared.

A farmer behind a plow, according to the survey, walks an average of 25 1-2 miles a day. A housekeeper, without leaving home, in one year walked a distance equal to the mileage from San Francisco to Boston. A school girl, combining walking, running and playing, traveled 11 1-2 miles a day, while a boy averaged 15 miles.

The average distance walked in a day was found to be 18,000 steps or approximately 8 miles. "Ill shaped shoes and short shoes," according to Miss Dodson, "are responsible for most foot troubles. Bedroom slippers cause much trouble if worn for any purpose except for which they are made."

BEAUTY in the HOME

Up-to-Date Luxury in The Bathroom

The really modern bathroom has become, without doubt, one of the most beautiful rooms in the home, not only fulfilling its requirements as a place devoted to cleanliness, but making use of the most up-to-date fixtures and meeting the decorative scheme of the home perfectly. It makes use of a profusion of the latest and most beautiful materials that have been developed by American chemists.

The above picture of a model bathroom, designed by George Sakler and shown at the recent exhibition of National Master Plumbers in New York, well illustrates the beautiful efficiencies of such a room. It is carried out in three pleasingly contrasting colors. The washable walls are in yellow, the floor is in a contrasting blue, and the fixtures are in a contrasting blue. As are also the towels and sponge pillow, and the silk and rayon net curtain at the window is creamy white. The tub is notable for having a narrow shelf with chromium plate railing on the back wall side for holding book, cigarettes, bath salts and other accessories to a lady's bath. Fabrikoid is used for the portable yellow air cushion mattress along side the glass table beneath the sun lamp. This mattress matches the color and material the upholstery of an aluminum chair beside a dressing table of glass and wood in another part of the room. Chromium plate is used for wall cabinet trim and one of the newest features of one cabinet is a shadowless shaving mirror.

LAMPASAS

At a meeting of the school board of Lampasas city schools Wednesday it was decided to open school on September 5.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Swain of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Trent and Miss Adeline Little of Goldthwaite visited here Sunday in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Walton and Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Little.

Foster Alley, 20 years of age, was kicked in the stomach early Monday morning while attempting to harness a pair of mules. He was in the camp near Ogle, where they are getting gravel to put on highway No. 74, and was rushed to Lampasas for medical attention.

Frank Casbeer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Casbeer, received a fall Wednesday morning, which broke his right arm just above the wrist. It was a rather bad break and he was suffering considerable pain soon after the bones were set. He was out at Hancock Park with some boys and in some manner attempted to jump on the back of a pony and the pony was not expecting this stunt and moved and Frank hit the ground instead of the pony's back.

All of Lampasas has been interested for some time now in highway No. 66 through Lampasas county. Engineers have been here for some time making a survey through the county and a committee has made an estimate of the cost of securing the necessary right-of-way and it is now up to Lampasas county to furnish the right-of-way in order to get work started. As we understand the proposition the commissioners court is in favor of going ahead with this road work and it is now to the point where the finances are the main thing that holds up the actual work.

Worth Harmon and T. H. Haynie were badly hurt Saturday afternoon in an airplane crash at San Antonio. The pilot of the plane was also injured and the plane was wrecked. Indications were that the engine died and they were attempting to land, when the plane struck a telephone pole and crashed to the ground. Mr. Harmon had both jaw bones broken and severe cuts about the head and face and was badly bruised. Mr. Haynie had his left arm fractured, cuts on his face and a severe cut on his tongue. The pilot, Norman McLeod, suffered a broken leg and cuts and bruises. The most severe injuries were received by Mr. Harmon, but it is thought he will recover unless complications arise. Mr. Haynie will probably be dismissed from the hospital in a few days. —Leader.

The stage is now fully set for the Old Settlers reunion on Thursday, August 11. It is also fast getting in shape for the American Legion two days jubilee to immediately follow the old settlers.

The big red barn of T. A. Garrett, a few miles south of Richland Springs, was discovered on fire between two and three o'clock Monday morning. The leaping, scorching flames had the whole barn enveloped, when it was discovered and nothing at all was saved. For completeness of room and arrangements, this was one of the outstanding barns in the county, and the loss must have been above $5000 at a low estimate.

W. W. (Pete) Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dit Shaw of the Locker community, was killed almost instantly Tuesday. He was driving a small herd of cattle down the lane. No one saw the accident. But a couple of boys came up soon after and found him helpless on the road. Apparently the horse had been in the ditch and it is believed stumbled and threw the rider, resulting in a broken neck. —News.

COMANCHE

Fifty bottles of beer were taken in a raid on one of the main streets of Comanche Saturday morning.

While hundreds of people thronged the public square at Comanche Saturday night to watch the election bulletin board, the fire alarm threw a near panic among them, when at 11 o'clock, the residence of J. V. Carter in northwest Comanche caught on fire. The building and contents were almost a complete loss, partially covered by insurance.

Comanche county schools, according to the annual report compiled by County Superintendent R. S. Walker, showed an average daily attendance of 87.2 per cent for an enrollment of 2020 in the 28 common school districts. The percentage of promotion was slightly above 80 per cent. The average length of the school term was 144 days or seven and one tenth months, as compared to seven and one half months a year ago.

Leading his nearest opponent nearly two to one, J. R. Eanes, of Comanche with a vote of 2294 led in the race for representative from Comanche and Mills counties, leading George Rollins of De Leon, who was in second place with 1161. Mrs. A. B. Haworth of Comanche was third with 1050 votes. Cadhead of Comanche polled 833 and Sanders of Comanche 857. A total of 4104 votes were polled in the contest in Comanche county and 1801 in Mills county.

At a meeting of the county school board Friday afternoon in the county superintendent's office, the board by a vote of three to two went on record as favoring recalling the map for the proposed grouping of schools. Several months ago the county board adopted a map for grouping of schools and sent it to Austin for approval of the state department of education. However, the department never acted on the map and the result of the vote at Comanche Saturday withdraws the proposed grouping plan and leaves the status of the school as they were before the map was ever drawn up. HAND PROPELLER ELIMINATES OARS

Oars are not necessary for a row boat equipped with a propeller that can be turned with one hand, says a mechanical magazine. The propeller is run with a crank and can be attached to the stern, bow or even the side in half a minute with one thumb screw. It weighs 16 pounds and will move the craft forward or backward as desired. It is particularly handy for fishermen, since it leaves one hand always free for other activity.

A thorough cleansing of the digestive tract is of great assistance in the removal of sickening constipation symptoms. "It is unfortunate for President Hoover, the passionate advocate of European disarmament," the English paper said, "that on the eve of the presidential election he should discover a lively battle in progress on the White House doorstep between the armed forces of the United States and certain American citizens who stood in arms for the salvation of Europe in 1917 and 1918."

INSECTS TURN SEA RED TO KILL FISH FOR FOOD

Ancient sea stories, long regarded as whoppers, which recounted the turning of tropical seas into the color of blood, have now been proved to be based on an actual fact.

The "reddening" of huge sections of ocean water, science reveals, is due to certain strange organisms known as "peridiniales." Although long regarded as insects, they are really red single-cell plants.

Under favorable conditions, says a scientist, these organisms multiply so profusely that they turn the water for miles into a red fluid almost exactly the color of blood. One of the results of the process is to remove most of the available oxygen from the water, which

District Attorney of the 27th Judicial District of Texas.

TEXAS IS STILL TEXAS

Whatever else may be said of Texas, the state is consistently inconsistent. The victory of Mrs. Ferguson in Saturday's primaries ran counter to all common sense. And the victory of the wets in the referendum on prohibition was as unexpected as would be a wet victory in Kansas. But there they stand, and the Fergusons can claim "vindication" for the fourth or fifth time, while both arid Senator Sheppard and hopeful Tom Love shake their heads in wonder and disappointment over the power of the wets.

It is perhaps as well that the Fergusons should gloat over their latest "vindication" now. The gubernatorial nomination, which is equivalent to election, is not yet settled. Mrs. Ferguson and Gov. Ross Sterling, who trailed by nearly 80,000 votes in a field of nine candidates, will settle the matter next month in the run-off. Two years ago, when Mr. Sterling first sought the governorship, the Fergusons were "vindicated" by Mrs. Ferguson's victory in the first primary. She led Mr. Sterling by 72,000, but in the run-off Mr. Sterling defeated her by about 100,000.

The mystery of "Fergusonism" hold on Texas has always baffled the East. Mr. Ferguson was a banker before he was elected governor of Texas in 1914 and re-elected in 1916, only to be impeached and removed in 1917. But he then and thereafter proclaimed himself a "dirt farmer" and an enemy of privilege. Mrs. Ferguson was elected governor in 1924 on a "vindication" and anti-Klan platform. She was defeated for a second term in 1928 and again beaten in 1930, but each time she rolled up impressive votes. The Ferguson stand on prohibition has been a family straddle—Mr. Ferguson is a wet and his wife is generally known as a dry. But they go out and get the votes, as they've just demonstrated once more. By all the figures, Gov. Sterling should repeat his 1930 victory in the run-off, but figures don't always count in Texas, which after all, is still Texas, the Lone Star Republic. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

WATCH THE GRADES

When we look at the statistics and realize that out of every 1000 children who enter public schools 974 reach the sixth grade, but only 260 graduate from high school, it is evident that the education, the establishment of principles, character—in fact, all the preparation for the greater part of our citizenship must be given by the classroom teacher in the elementary school grades and a large percentage of it must be given by teachers of pupils who leave school at the end of the sixth grade or before. Perhaps the figures will be interesting: 974 reach the sixth grade. 855 reach the seventh grade. 768 reach the eighth grade. 610 reach the ninth grade. 438 reach the tenth grade. 321 reach the eleventh grade. 268 reach the twelfth grade. 260 graduate from high school.

According to these figures the greater proportion of our taxpayers upon whom we are dependent for the financing of our plans and projects in education receive their ideas of life in the elementary schools. Does it not then follow that all of us are dependent upon the character, the initiative, and the civic consciousness of the classroom teachers in the elementary grades?—School and Safety.

MRS. FERGUSON SPENDS $4614

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson already has spent more in her campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination than the office will pay her the first year, if she would be elected. Her expenses through the first primary were $4614.

Gov. R. S. Sterling, running for re-election, listed his expenses over the same period as $3441.17. Sterling will be in the runoff this month with Mrs. Ferguson.

Tom F. Hunter spent $4362.36. These figures were from expense accounts filed with the Secretary of state Saturday. Of the amount Mrs. Ferguson spent, supporters contributed $1216. Sterling had $1450 in contributions. Hunter said he did not receive any contributions.

GAS TAX RUNS HIGH

The average Texas motorist during 1931 paid just a little less than $22 to the state in gasoline tax, according to figures released by the United States bureau of public roads, based on gasoline consumption and automobile registrations for the year. Texas was fourth among all the states in the amount of gasoline tax paid, a total of $30,514,558 from this source going into the state's coffers. Ahead of Texas in this form of revenue were California, Ohio and New York, in the order named. Texas showed a gain of over $900,000 over the previous year's gas tax collections.

In spite of this tremendous volume of tax money and the increase over 1930, the state lost some several millions of dollars through the activity of the gasoline tax evader, who during the year became recognized as a major problem confronting the authorities and the oil industry. It has been variously estimated that this loss to the state was from two to six million dollars, and that from five to fifteen per cent of all the gasoline sold was disposed of without payment of the state tax of four cents a gallon.

A GENERAL AVERAGE

Considering that Nevada is famous for its export divorce tonnage, how shall we explain the close race Wyoming runs with its neighbor state in divorce percentage? Wyoming divorces are mostly homegrown, whereas Nevada caters to a national, even an international, clientele. It can not be that Wyoming gentlemen are less working mates than the average mill run of gentlemen. Wyoming is a rugged state topographically and all authorities agree that a rugged country produces rugged men. May it be that Wyoming husbands are too rugged, that they argue with their wives by the laying on of hands, not gently, but too well? We refuse to believe Wyoming husbands are rough, even though their state runs largely to rocks and gulches, high hills and brawling streams. On the other hand, we abhor the very idea of Wyoming wives being naggy, negligent of their housewifery, or hard to get along with politically. Wyoming ladies may not be rugged like the men of that commonwealth, nor would we suppose them hardboiled like the Mormon ladies of Utah. The true fact may be that many Wyoming gentlemen marry school teachers from the east, and the latter soon tire of the men as well as the mountains of Wyoming. School teachers from New England do not make the best wives 'way out west. The culture of Connecticut does not merge readily with the customs of the Rocky Mountain regions. But, aside from all that, it seems to be statistically demonstrated that marriage in Texas is more stable than in three other states. The few things we do not altogether excel in we almost excel in—State Press in Dallas News.

WHO SAID HARD TIMES?

This week a strapping, big fellow told a grocer whom he owed that he couldn't pay anything on his account because of the hard times and low prices. Just then an old man who had heard this excuse, butted in:

LISTEN HERE, BUD—

He said to the young fellow, "I knowed your pappy afore you was born. He had a house full of young uns when he was your age, and you ain't got but two. He had a two room shack to live in and you've got a nice four or five room house. He had just one team and you've got a good team, an extra horse or two and an automobile besides.

BUT ONE THING SURE

He never failed to meet a debt when it was due, and he never had as much in his whole life as you've got right now. Hard times, shucks! You don't know what that means."

The harder the times, the more important it is to keep your credit good.
