Missionary Society

The Woman's missionary society of the Methodist church met with Mrs. Guy Rudd Monday afternoon for the study of the World Outlook lesson, which proved to be a very interesting lesson. Parts were taken by Mesdames Doggett, Keese, Bayley, Reynolds, Marshall and Rudd. Mrs. J. S. Bowles gave a splendid talk on personal service. Mrs. C. E. Bayley was in charge of the program. A short business session was held, after the program was concluded. A splendid attendance was noted. REPORTER

Methodist Notes

The Methodist folk had the largest attendance in Sunday school last Sunday that they have had in many a moon. There were reported one hundred and ninety-eight present. This is a good increase and should be further argued. There are plenty of people in, an about town, to put more than this number in most all the Sabbath schools of the town, and then leave a goodly number to keep up the Sabbath desecration job. Come on. Let's make it unanimous for the Sunday school and the right.

Boiler Explosion Causes Fatalities

The influence of the Methodist church—the new building, I mean—is extending itself into the business of the town. It is surprising how this works. I felt all along that it would work wonders.

As an example, just go into Clements drug store, and see what effect it has had on that place of business. Mr. Clements attended services at the church dedication and became so enamored of the beauty of the hardwood floors that he at once began placing of hardwood floors in his place of business. Doubtless others will go and do likewise.

Executive Committee Holds Meeting

Definite plans have been made for our next revival meeting to be held September 13-27. Rev. E. G. Theus of Bethany, Oklahoma, will be the evangelist. Bro. Theus is outstanding in his field of labor, and is one of the most efficient evangelists in the Church of the Nazarene. Those that are acquainted with Bro. Theus and heard him when he was with this church some eighteen months ago are delighted to know he is returning for this meeting.

Baptist Worker's Conference

The conference is to meet with Center City church Friday the 26th of this month. The time is over due for brethren to renew interest in these religious meetings and the church at that place will accept your interest joyfully.

Sewage Work Making Progress

Good progress is being made on the sewage plant for this city. Several of the streets have been made impassable by the ditches for the sewer piping, but this inconvenience is gladly endured by the citizens, with the knowledge that the work will be soon completed and the sewer system installed, which will be of vast benefit to the community in the way of health and sanitation.

Boiler Explosion Causes Fatalities

Carroll and Pate were operating the threshing machine on a farm two miles south of Comanche all morning. Some defect developed and they drove it into town for repairs.

The blast occurred in front of the Luper and Frank Clarke homes, both of which were ignited and damaged by fire.

Pate's body was blown 75 feet, Carroll's 30 feet and debris from the machine was hurled a distance of two blocks. With the exception of Luper and his children, the injured were following the lumbering machine down the street.

All were cut and burned by the explosion.

Nazarene Remarks

It is believed that the oil burners under the threshing machine's boilers, were not cut off when Carroll and Pate left the farm and that the water reached a low level as they drove into town, causing the explosion.

An automobile in front of the Luper home was demolished by the blast, which was heard all over the town and Mrs. Luper, who was inside her residence, was severely shocked, but otherwise unharmed.

Pate is survived by his widow and four children and his father, J. W. Pate; Carroll by his widow and two step-daughters.

Boiler Explosion Causes Fatalities

The above account of the fatal tragedy in Comanche is taken from an account published in the Star-Telegram. Mr. Carroll was reared in this county and lived here until a few months ago, when he moved to Comanche. After his tragic death his remains were brought here for interment. He was a son of Mr. Sam Carroll of this city and has a number of relatives and a host of friends in this city and county.

The Purple Tantrum

Brother Duke announced a training school to be held at San Saba next week and then suggested the possibility of one to be held here the following week. This might be made useful, if all who could do so would attend one, or both of the schools. I am sure that many could attend, and that great benefit might be derived from them. Think it over.

I learned, indirectly, that our Woman's missionary society purposes real soon to give an entertainment and ask for a shower for their kitchen in the lower story of the church. This should appeal strongly to all. This lower story set apart for social purposes can be made very useful if the people properly appreciate the opportunity.

Once more our people have been called upon to visit the silent city of the dead. Mrs. Mollie Woody, one of our old and respected citizens, has been called into the great beyond. This writer received her into the membership of the Methodist church twenty-nine years ago. Broken health brought about the greatest tragedy that can come to any member of the human race. Before the tragedy, came she was possessed of a brilliant mind. I remember that

MAGNOLIA SEED OIL

Widespread interest has been caused by announcement of a process for extracting aromatic soap oil from magnolia seeds. The method is credited to Austin W. Curtis of Tuskegee Institute, founded by Booker T. Washington for the uplift of the negro in the south. The method has been pronounced commercially feasible, and the resultant product to possess many beneficial qualities. The discovery came about, it is reported, through study of various free substances in nature which at various times, and in various places, have been used for cleansing purposes. The process offers several possibilities. It might result in denuding the south of those magnificent trees which form one of its chief charms to visitors, however much they may be taboo in modern cities whose street cleaning departments look only upon the withered leaves that fall into the gutter and never see the rare and glossy green on the branches, or the great, creamy blooms spreading a fragrance almost potent enough to offset the aroma of municipal trash wagons. On the other hand, magnolia soap might mean that the south would burgeon into a vast garden of these exquisite trees, their growth sheltered and their erstwhile worthless burrs yielding red pearls of as great price as the consuming public would stand. — New Orleans Times-Picayune.

TEXAS OIL PRODUCTION
If all the oil produced in Texas to date was placed in barrels of 42 gallons each and stacked in a single perpendicular column, it would make a monument 2,800,000 miles high!

Analysis of the world's oil production statistics shows that Texas has, with one exception, produced more oil than any other state or foreign nation.

The black column on the chart may well be termed a monument to the courage and determination of the pioneers of the Texas oil industry.

While the efforts of the "wildcatter" have undoubtedly been the "back-bone" of Texas oil developments, yet, the uncertainties of that method imposed such great cost upon the industry that the field of geology and geophysics was called upon to help reduce the tremendous financial hazards.

Today, there are more than 4,000 "independent" oil operators in Texas, in addition to the so-called "major" companies.

LONG COVE
News is rather scarce this week, as it seems no one had time to visit.

Farris Gadberry was in Lampasas on business Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Barton Hodges have adopted a seven-week-old baby girl from the Viola Dawson home at Copperas Cove.

Will Elmore called in the Dennis Worthington home Saturday night and listened to the radio.

CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY

The Republicans have already nominated their national candidates and the Democrats are to hold their national convention next week, with their nominations already known. Death alone could prevent Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner from being the standard bearers of their party. Hence, we may as well begin now to study the issues and line up for the campaign. Of course there will be many issues injected into the campaign and the voters will be bewildered by a vast amount of oratory on every phase of the party platforms and issues between this time and the election in November, paramount among them being the New Deal and the national administration spending. There is no denying and certainly no effort to evade the fact that the Roosevelt administration has far outstripped all of its predecessors in the matter of appropriations. All of these appropriations, or at least most of them, with the one outstanding exception of the soldiers' bonuses or adjusted compensation have had the sanction of the chief executive and the party in power must take responsibility for the vast expenditures. The only issue, however, is the necessity for the outlay of the great amount charged against the present administration. The fact that the cost of the unemployment relief has been greater than all of the wars in the nation's history proves the great need that confronted the administration and while there will doubtless be much criticism of the manner of administering these funds, it must be admitted that without the government aid there would have been wide spread want and suffering.

The attitude that will be taken toward this spending both by denouncers and defenders is obvious. The supporters of the president will hold, as he has held in the past, that when he came into office the country faced a great crisis—that it was necessary to unleash an unprecedented number of federal dollars if the crisis were to be met. They will argue that the measure of industrial recovery so far gained is largely the result of his policies, and that the money paid out to help farmers, the unemployed, the unemployables, and the indigent has produced such results that every dollar of it is justified. They will say that the course was inevitable and unavoidable.

The opposition will argue that the vast volume of spending, reflected as it is in an astounding federal debt must create a deficit for future generations and is holding back industry. It will point out that the employment problem is approximately as serious today as it was three years ago. It will say that emergency bureaus have wasted millions. It will demand rigid federal retrenchment, and a program looking to the earliest possible balancing of the distorted budget.

The two viewpoints represented are irreconcilable—and that may not be good for the country, but it is the stuff of which first-class political campaigns are made. Get your radio in order, attune your ear to astronomical statistics—and see if you can survive the oratory and arguments of the next five months without developing mental hallucinations.

CONTROLLING INDUSTRY

With the decision of the supreme court in the New York state minimum wage law has come renewed criticism of the court and various proposals for curbing the court's powers, but these critics do not appear to realize that their quarrel is with the constitution and not with the court at all. The court simply interprets the provisions of the constitution as they are written and has no right or power to add to or take from these provisions. No matter how one may desire to have the decisions and interpretations, it would be unwise to advocate or advise judgments in conflict with the constitution under which we live and have our freedom. The United States government was founded by a group of pioneers who had lived under the oppression of a regime which controlled their every activity. That regime even tried to tell them what they should think, as well as what they should and should not do. With that in mind, the students found, the men who established our government and wrote our constitution sought to establish safeguards against an all-powerful regime. They thought they had put those safeguards into the original constitution, which became effective on March 4, 1789. But in September of the same year, the records showed, these men decided the safeguards were not strong enough. Congress proposed ten constitutional amendments, which were ratified and declared in effect on March 4, 1791. These protected the rights of freedom of speech, religion and the press; of trial by jury, of private property, of security from unwarrantable search and seizure, and the last two amendments said: "The enumeration in the constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people. The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people." Thus, we find good grounds for opposing government control of private enterprise and industry.

BUILDING EXPANSION

The building industry is one of the best indexes to the financial and business trend of the country and by this rule the entire nation is returning to normal. Residential building operations all over the country increased rapidly during April, according to reports compiled by the bureau of labor statistics in Washington. These operations were not confined to any one section, but were widely spread. They extended from the great lakes to the gulf and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Some sections indicated more advancement than others; yet, all are included in the report. As an example: Among the states most active in this classification were California, with sixteen cities and towns reporting an excess of $100,000 for the month of April; Pennsylvania with seven; Massachusetts, New York and Texas with six; New Jersey and Ohio with five and Florida and Wisconsin with four. During April new home loans by savings and loan associations, amounting to $16,521,242, exceeded the total of any month since federal supervision of thrift and home-financing institutions were authorized by congress in 1933. This total represents an increase of 18.9 per cent over March lending by the same 980 reporting associations. This condition makes for confidence in the permanency of the improved conditions.

TYPHOID VACCINATION

Parents of boy scouts, girl scouts and other young people going to camps of any kind, are urged by the state health officer, to have the family physician vaccinate each individual against typhoid fever. Some of the danger points for spread of typhoid it was said, are creeks, swimming holes and flowing springs. Even though the water at these places may appear clear and sparkling, there is danger that it is contaminated.

"Typhoid fever is an unnecessary disease," he said. "Every case is due either to community negligence or to the carelessness or ignorance of some individual. Eternal vigilance in maintaining sanitary surroundings and a pure water supply is necessary.

"Three 'shots' of typhoid vaccine—a week apart—will put your child in the 'protected' class. As it takes several weeks for the protective treatment to establish itself in the body, have it done now.

"Typhoid fever is an intestinal complaint caused by the typhoid bacillus. The digestive tract of a patient is consequently infected with typhoid germs. Anything that may be contaminated by the body discharges is apt to be infectious and dangerous.

"The prevention of typhoid fever is peculiarly a matter of community responsibility. In cities large and small most urgent control measures are those providing for (1) proper disposal of human excreta through sewage disposal plants and toilets of sanitary type; (2) safe public and well water supplies; (3) extermination of flies; (4) healthy food handlers; (5) supervision of disease carriers and (6) public milk supplies of high quality with the added safeguard of careful pasteurization.

"Prevention of single cases or of epidemics of typhoid fever is dependent upon co-operation of individuals with public health officials in endeavoring to stamp out typhoid entirely."

ENGLAND AND THE LEAGUE

A "test vote" on the question of the League of Nations, recently taken by the London Morning Post, has had surprising results. The ballot was widely and impartially distributed and it covered the ground without and reservations. The voters were asked if they approved the league as at present constituted, if they would have its powers increased or diminished, if they would have it continued even without one or more of the great powers, or restricted to Europe only. The alternatives were defensive alliances or isolation. There was an overwhelming majority against the league in its present form, and the sentiment against reconstruction was from four or five to one in the negative. On the other hand, the vote for defensive alliances was nearly two to one, while 29 per cent, approved a policy of isolation, which was rather remarkable in view of the forces making for internationalism. Quite obviously the general feeling of the country has greatly changed since the peace ballot just before the last general election, when thousands declared for the principles which the league represents. So radical a change in opinion is undoubtedly due in large part to the failure of opposition to the Ethiopian war. Italy was named the aggressor, and sanctions were invoked against her. Nevertheless she won her object, though Great Britain took the lead in opposing her, to the extent of sending a great fleet to the Mediterranean, but not of closing the Suez canal, the only effective measure. Had there been no league, and had Great Britain and France stood together in opposition, it is possible that Mussolini would have hesitated—possible, but not certain. That there should have been a 29 per cent vote in favor of isolation is really the most significant feature of the ballot. It reveals a powerful swing toward a policy which has been thought pretty thoroughly discredited. It may be doubted, in fact, if Englishmen are as eager to wash their hands of European affairs as this might suggest. Their attitude may be more expressive of dislike of the league than of anything else. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

FOUR RULES FOR LIVING

Angelo Patri, in a recent syndicated article asked, "Does your child know the Ten Commandments?" He then went on to deplete the high value of this knowledge in the mind of the average child. His ideas were so good that I desire to reproduce some of them, adding some of my own.

I realize that the Ten Commandments do not need my defense. One does not need to bolster up the forces of gravitation; they can look out for themselves. God's moral laws operate in fixed courses; we may break any of them, but we can never repeal one of them.

Some people object to the negative nature of the Ten Commandments. "Thou shalt nots" are never popular, yet nature is full of them. Thou shalt not overeat, nor trip up on the stairs, nor put your flesh against the fire. The simple fact is that those who so loudly object to what Jesus chose to call "the strait and narrow way" have failed to see that nature has made most of her roads to worth while attainment "strait and narrow."

Considered from any angle, it is well to teach these ancient and honorable laws of God to your children, and at the same time, give intelligent reasons for keeping them.

A little boy in Nazareth was taught the Ten Commandments. As he grew, and thought about them, he saw farther into what was back of them than anyone else who has ever lived. He knew that commandments cannot be kept unless love is back of them, so Jesus took these laws, as found in Exodus 20:1-17, and compressed them into almost one comprehensive sentence—found in Matthew 22:35-40. Upon love to God and man hangs the whole law of God. Do not allow your children to grow up without these precepts fixed in mind.

Another bit of the Old Testament which was taught to Jesus, was the classic interpretation of life's duties by the prophet Micah—Micah 6:8. Jesus mullied this great truth over and finally gave utterance to the essence of all personal goodness and social helpfulness in what we call the Golden Rule—Matthew 7:12.

These four things which may be easily memorized, may be called the Four Mountain Peaks of Inspiration and it is a favor conferred upon any child who is led to memorize them. To all parents I should like to say, do not turn this task over to the church teachers to do for you. Let your children grow up feeling that you took this special interest in their spiritual welfare.

It was said of old "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?" The answer was, "By taking heed thereto according to Thy Word." No one can forever remember all that God's Word commands to be retained. Yet it is easy for everybody to concentrate on these four concise and sublime condensations of Bible doctrine. —The Progressive Farmer.

MILITARY COLONISTS

It is clear now what Mussolini is going to do with Ethiopia. He will colonize it with the army that has conquered it. Thus he will solve at once the triple problem of occupying the country, developing it into a colony profitable to the mother country, and disposing of Italy's surplus population.

Nearly half a million young soldiers who have been sent to that savage land will remain there, and others will join them. It would be interesting to know how they like the prospect. Possibly they would have rebelled if their destiny had been made plain to them before they went. Now they will probably acquiesce, despite the terrific heat and disease of these lowlands, and the difficulties and dangers of subduing and civilizing the uplands, with savages and resentful natives always nearby in the jungle.

Ancient Rome colonized distant lands in this way. It is clever statesmanship for Mussolini—as long as it works. Hitler will be studying the experiment. The British government probably looks on with some envy. It has vast areas it wants to develop under the English flag, but the poverty-stricken masses in England do not want to leave their cities and no British government can colonize them against their will.—Omaha World-Herald.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

VIEW OF THE NATION'S PRESS ON TOPICS OF INTEREST AND IMPORTANCE

UNEMPLOYMENT

The New York Sun has found in the government's own records a complete refutation of the administration's indictment of private business for not re-employing more workers. Seeking an answer to the question: "Who keeps them out of work, industry or Roosevelt?" the Sun cites the case of Texas. The Lone Star state, it finds, had 135,000 persons employed in its manufacturing industries in 1929, their most prosperous year. In April, 1936, Texas had 170,000 persons employed on Federal relief jobs. This means 35,000 more Texans on relief than were ever employed by private industry there and 35,000 more than private industry could re-employ if it were restored to 1929 prosperity. Seeking the reason, the Sun finds it in the fact that in 1934 and 1935 the AAA paid Texas landowners nearly $133,000,000 to cut down their cotton and wheat acreages. As a result, some 43,000 Texas share-croppers were thrown out of farm workers, farm tenants and their normal employment and either went on relief or into competition with factory and business workers. With the AAA in its new disguise, going right on, who is responsible for the 35,000 whom Texas industry, even if fully restored, will be unable to re-employ? Again, remarks the Sun, the records show that in 1929 the three farming states of North Dakota, Nebraska and Oklahoma combined had about the same number of wage earners in manufacturing industries as did New Hampshire—around 65,000. In April of this year the same three states had 165,000 on relief work against 13,500 in New Hampshire. The latter got $63,000 in AAA "benefits," the three states together got $152,000,000 for not raising farm products and thereby reducing farm employment.—Los Angeles Times.

WAR PENSIONS

The war of 1812 is almost paid for, but not quite. One surviving pensioner still draws a monthly check from Uncle Sam. Great Scott! You may be tempted to exclaim, he must be an ancient one; the war ended more than 120 years ago. Pretty old, yes. But not so old as your imagination, playing with dates, suggests. The pensioner, it turns out, is not a veteran of the war at all, not by a stretch of the imagination a person who could have suffered any personal damage from that conflict. She is a widow of a veteran of that war, born 34 years after it ended and now 87 years old. With reasonable care of her health, she may go on drawing this pension for some years yet. An old-timer recently died in Nebraska at the age of 115. The payment of this pension illustrates the absurdity of the American war pension system. The same system that pays Mrs. Caroline King a pension on account of a war that ended 34 years before she was born has been applied to the Mexican war, the civil war, the Spanish war. Unless it is resisted more vigorously than bonus and pension demands have so far been resisted, it will ultimately be applied in the case of the world war. Even if no more wars are fought between now and then, America may still have widow pensioners on its rolls in the year 2041. Since Mrs. King has been a pensioner so long it would, of course, be cruelty to take her pension away from her. She has acquired a vested right in it. But this pension must be carefully distinguished from an old-age pension. It is being paid because she is 87 years old or is in need, but simply because she married a man who fought in a war 34 years before she was born. It is stretching a debt of gratitude pretty far to make it cover so long a span of years. There may be justifiable social reasons for paying this woman a pension, but they have no connection with a war fought more than 120 years ago. They are reasons which apply equally to all persons of the same age and in the same circumstances.—Omaha World-Herald.

A LARGER FARM POPULATION

The farm population of the United States hit its low point in 1930. Since then reversing the trend that had manifested itself since the pre-war period, the number of persons on farms in this country has increased by approximately 8 per cent, and is now back to the peak level reached about 1910.

The division of land economics in the United States department of agriculture has recently studied the question of whether this return movement of population to the farms is a temporary phenomenon or a lasting shift. The answer to this question has broad significance. It will largely affect industry and trade, for if millions of Americans are going to live rural lives, consumption habits will be changed profoundly.

The depression years witnessed enormous unemployment in the cities. As a result, many persons returned to the farms, where the cost of maintenance is lower and number of farms increased by approximately 500,000 in the 1930-35 period.

Even with the passing of the depression, however, several reasons are advanced to support the view that the farm population will increase further, and that the growth of urban communities will slow down correspondingly. Among the arguments advanced are the prospective declining proportion of young people, the likelihood of continued heavy unemployment in industry and the greater ease in obtaining planned employment in small communities. It is further pointed out that in view of the higher birth rate on farms, the rural population will increase more rapidly.

These reasons are all cogent. On the other hand, the fact remains that with improvement in productive technology in both agriculture and industry, it becomes necessary to find new industries to absorb released labor, and such industries are far more likely to be located in urban communities than in rural.—New York Journal of Commerce.

GULF COAST SLOWLY SINKING

It may not seem important to the members of the present generation that the entire Gulf coast from Mississippi to Texas is sinking at the rate of no less than one foot a century, but in time it will be important to the region.

The subsidence, however, which is reported in a bulletin issued by the Louisiana department of conservation and the Louisiana geological survey, has reflections of importance that should be extremely interesting to farmers throughout Mississippi valley states whose moving land is the cause of the phenomenon. For the depression is caused by weight and the weight comes from the load of silt and sand carried from the farms to the coast by rushing surface waters, borne chiefly by the Mississippi river, after collection from its tributaries.

In fact, Missouri and the other states of the drainage basin are paying immediately and continuously in contribution to an embarrassment of the coastal region that is so gradual in its development that it will never be felt seriously by any single generation. And then, in many places near the discharge of the great waterway, the rate of building is more rapid than subsidence, even though subsidence be accelerated by the greater new weight carried to it. This is proved by a theory not touched on by the study and report referred to that much of the ground of the lower valley almost as far north as Carlo is ground made of soil carried by the erosive qualities of running surface waters—through many centuries, of course. Though the Louisiana study does calculate that in the 30,000 years since the glaciers started their slow retreat from the North American continent, the Mississippi river has taken to south Louisiana enough sediment to bury the entire state (48,000 miles in area) to a depth

WORTH CONSIDERING

Pardon and parole would be removed from the hands of the government amendment to the constitution upon which Texas will vote next proposed amendment from the state's chief executive the power to pardon convicts is one of structural amendments to be proposed by the Texas election in the general election in the election is as yet months distant, but think it is too early to bring attention to the amendments, for there is no question that proposed change the basic law ought to receive careful consideration instead of being edged with more or less "swat 'em all" or "all" advocates an opportunity to do their truth is that some amendments should be adopted, which are not so good, each should be considered on its merits. But getting the amendments which change our present giving pardons and finding that it is proposed to construct the board of pardons and paroles so that it consist of three members six-year overlapping terms member to be named governor, one by the chief of the court of criminal and the other by the chief of the supreme court would be given full power granting pardons and with the governor serving advisory capacity. In words, the governor was restricted, under the amendment, to granting and commutations of ment and pardons on mendment and advice majority of the board rules to be set by the governor would be authority to grant more than thirty capital cases; he would have the power to revoke partial conditional pardons. This be seen, is a drastic change the present set-up. The governor appoints all three members of the board, which is powerful, anyway, being the power of recommendation. The proposed amendment provides for the appointment of the board members in the manner outlined above, and appointments would be subject confirmation by the senate legislature would have power make laws covering the of paroles. In short, this amendment if adopted will eliminate such future abuses of the doning power as Texas has in the past. We can hardly believe there will be any very over this amendment. We think its improvement the present system is so such that the people of Texas adopt it by a large majority any rate, it should be adopted for no other reason than will spare Texas from a curance of such political works over the pardoning as have blasted the peace state in the past.—Texas of 188 feet, and that even away as the present movement the Mississippi as the and Mississippi borders sinking at the present rate has been enough to account well over 199 feet of sediment. It is said that when the began the first European settlement on the Gulf coast in St. Bernard parish, in Louisiana, was relatively high land, many plantations were built there. These old plantations now wash or below water, are trapping, hunting and ing grounds. The point of interest outside Louisiana, of course, is farms and denuded hills hundreds of miles away, offering their tolls of silt to up the necessary weight to press the coast, offering and lvering it to the floor of Gulf at the rate of more 1,000,000 tons a day.—St. Globe Democrat.

The Comanche summer school opened Monday with a total attendance of 37. Twenty were enrolled in the high school department and seventeen in the grades.

Pouring the first coat of asphalt on highway No. 10, at the Comanche-Erath county line, is scheduled to begin today and the work will be pushed rapidly to completion towards Comanche through Proctor. It is estimated that the road will be completed by July 15.

Miss Eva Long, Breckenridge school teacher, who is at home here for the summer, was painfully injured Saturday afternoon when a truck driven by Lionel Slider and the automobile in which she was riding collided at a street intersection in west Comanche. Miss Long was carried to a Brownwood hospital for treatment and examination. Her injuries were found to be painful but not serious.

EBBING TIDE

At Shreveport this week the thinned ranks of the men who followed Lee and Jackson and Longstreet met in their forty-seventh gathering, seventy-one years after Appomattox. Today in Dallas a great statue is unveiled to the knightly leader of the South, the man the followed as "Marse Robert."

Said Henry Grady in far-away 1889, their cause "was adjudged by a higher and fuller wisdom than theirs or mine and I am glad that the Omnipotent God held the balance of battle in His almighty hand, that human slavery was swept forever from American soil."

In that spirit, the men and women of the southland, too, can turn today to the memorial to a great soldier, who was a greater man, a great Virginian and a great American.

Robert E. Lee has been dead for more than a half century. Yet at Shreveport this week you would have found him enshrined as a living presence in the hearts of the broken oldsters, all who are left of those who followed him. It has been long since High Tide at Gettysburg. The ebb that set in that day is almost out. There can be few more meetings of the men who wore the Gray, though grandly they resolved at Shreveport to meet each year so long as there is a single survivor.

Their spirit and their veneration for their leader lives in the memorial that Dallas unveils today.—Dallas News.

Nervous, Weak Woman Soon All Right

"I had regular shaking spells from nervousness," writes Mrs. Cora Sanders, of Paragould, Ark. "I was all run-down and cramped at my time until I would have to go to bed. After my first bottle of Cardui, I was better. I kept taking Cardui and soon I was all right. The shaking quit and I did not cramp. I felt worlds better. I gave Cardui to my daughter who was in about the same condition and she was soon all right."
