Commissioners' Court Inspects New Bridge

The commissioners' court this week inspected the new bridge that is being erected at Regency for Mills and San Saba counties by the Austin Bridge Co. They found that much concrete work had been completed and cables were being strung. This bridge has a span of 340 feet and considerable earth work. Special precautions are being taken to protect it against floods such as the one that swept the previous bridge into the river.

Church of Christ Revival Begins

Friday night will mark the beginning of our summer evangelistic campaign. Brother C. W. Hoover, from Brady, Texas, will do the preaching. Brother Hoover is well known in Mills County and we feel confident that we will have large crowds to attend the preaching services. Brother Arthur Stark, of Lake Victor, Texas, will direct the song service. Brother Stark has been here many times before and is no stranger to the citizens of this county. The services will be held under the open air tabernacle. There will be plain Bible teaching and congregational singing. There will be no week-day collections; no embarrassing propositions; no miracles performed, no false claims made. Come and enjoy the services.

Church Services At Center City

There will be no services at the Center City Baptist Church Saturday night, July 15. Rev. Oliver Riley will fill the pulpit Sunday morning and Sunday night in the absence of the pastor, who is in a revival at Long Dam. R. L. Patillo, Jr., Pastor.

Joe Bailey Kerby to Enter Contest

Joe Bailey Kerby, 1939 Goldthwaite High School graduate, is now among twenty-five contestants in the state who are trying for the scholarship to Oglethorpe Institute in Georgia. This scholarship offers four years of college work with all expenses paid to the student in Texas who having a high scholastic record is also outstanding in extra-curricular activities in high school.

Joe Bailey maintained a average throughout his four years in Goldthwaite High. He was chosen president of the 1939 senior class. He won first place in the mile run in the Interscholastic League contest this past spring, and with a partner took first place in county-wide debate. The trustees of the Oglethorpe Institute will announce the winner of the scholastic contest about July 25th.

AGENTS TO SHORT COURSE

W. P. Weaver, county agent, and Miss Emma Scott, home demonstration agent, left Sunday for the agent's conference and the farmer's short course at College Station this week. Five hundred agents, specialists and U. S. department representatives attended the agent's conference on Monday and Tuesday and 3000 men and women registered for the short course Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The theme for both meetings is "Land Use Planning."

Fishing Club Elects New Directors

Rufus McKinney, Walter Fairman, Joe Long, M. Y. Stokes, Jr., Neal Dickerson, Marvin Hodges and R. H. Chandler. The directors then elected the following officers: M. Y. Stokes, Jr., president; Walter Fairman, vice-president; Rufus McKinney, secretary-treasurer; Joe Long, Supervising Director, and John Meadors, warden.

An amendment to the constitution providing that directors should hereafter be elected for two year terms, four being elected one year and three the next, was approved at the meeting and will be submitted to the stockholders for final approval.

A vote of commendation was given the directors and warden for their work and for the improvements completed during the past year.

It was announced that additional building sites on the lake front north of the present enclosure had been secured and new cottages were already being erected there by Walter Weatherby and Kelly Saylor.

Piggly Wiggly Store Celebrated Fourth Anniversary

Celebrating at the same time its fourth anniversary in Goldthwaite and the completion of extensive store improvements, the Piggly Wiggly store is offering special inducements this week.

Floyd Blair, popular manager, opened the store just four years ago and has seen it grow steadily in volume of business and number of customers.

The recent improvements include complete new and modern market fixtures with efficient refrigerating equipment. The addition of the new warehouse in the rear of the store has considerably increased the floor space available for display and sales, so customers will find shopping more convenient than ever. New display windows in keeping with the improved interior displays make an attractive entrance to the store.

Further details about the Piggly Wiggly anniversary will be found in the store's page ad in this issue of The Eagle.

Casing Is Set At Oil Well

Clyde Lane reports that his crew has completed setting casing in the well which is being drilled for oil near Williams Ranch. Drilling will be resumed this morning.

Stockholders Meeting Of Loan Ass'n's

The annual meeting of the stockholders in both the Goldthwaite and the Star National Farm Loan Associations, held on Saturday, July 8th, 1939, in the district court room was well attended. About one hundred were present at both meetings, and remained for the joint program, held at 11:30.

The Hungry Five made the court room ring with their brasses and woodwinds, and the Porter Quintette harmonized like veterans.

Miss Emma Scott, county demonstration agent, spoke as one with authority on how to make a few acres pay good dividends and furnish the home table.

R. C. Duren called attention to the Production Credit Association and its benefits.

W. P. Weaver, spoke on the rapidly diminishing cotton acreage in Mills county, and how to begin again the raising of cotton on a paying basis. Questions were asked, and some members urged the necessity of adopting Mr. Weaver's suggestions.

At the close of the meeting, the house extended by unanimous vote, the thanks of the body to W. P. Weaver for his long and successful work for the up-building of Mills county.

All members and husbands and wives, and those who took part in the program, then retired to the various cafes in Goldthwaite than which none better can be found, and had lunch provided by the Associations.

Social Events in Town and County

Strickland—House Reunion Held

July 9th more than a hundred guests gathered at the beautiful old pecan grove a few miles from Gatesville to be present at a reunion of the Strickland and House families. At noon a bountiful picnic dinner was spread in the shade of the immense trees. Those who attended from Goldthwaite were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Roberts, a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Joe Roberts and their two grandsons. They visited with Mrs. A. E. Martin and family and Mrs. A. D. Davenport, aunts of Mrs. J. W. Roberts, while in Gatesville.

There are more than four hundred descendants of these families and it has been their custom to celebrate each year. This year marked the 100th anniversary of the House-Strickland wedding and their long line of descendants who are scattered all over the United States, enjoy these get-together meetings. Circumstances prevented many from being present this year.

The families plan to meet again next year at the same time and in the same place to enjoy another reunion together, and it is hoped that many more can attend.

Birthday Celebration

On July 4th a number of Moreland relatives of Miss Mary Louise McGirk met at Brownwood to celebrate her sixteenth birthday. A most enjoyable time was had in this reunion and then on Wednesday Mary Louise and her mother went to Fort Worth to the hospital for a check-up of Mary Louise's condition after having been away from the hospital several weeks. The doctors pronounced her in fine condition, so the young lady returned home with her mother and all her friends were delighted to hear the good news.

Toland Reunion At Lake Merritt

"Tumble Inn," Lake Merritt, near Goldthwaite, was the gathering place of one of the most enjoyable events of the week end, the home-coming of the Toland's.

Both socially and intellectually the Toland's were in the front ranks among the people of our city in the yester years and today. Their talents and accomplishments obtained the admiration of all fortunate enough to know them and their amiability has won for them a still warmer place in the hearts of their friends.

On Sunday evening after six o'clock, friends had been invited to the unique and attractive Eacott's rock garden for tea and to meet and reminisce with the family.

"Ah how cruelly sweet are the echoes that start, When memory plays an old tune on the heart."

Four manly scouts: Lewis Townsen Hudson, Herman Tullos, Jerrell Davis and Lyman Saylor, directed traffic thru the garden drive.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Eacott, Mrs. D. Y. Fox, Mrs. S. T. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Northington, Temple; Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Toland; Mrs. Z. A. ### County Budget Is Being Prepared Now

County Judge R. J. Gerald states that forms for the annual county budget have just been received, and the budget will be presented at a public hearing sometime in August.

Mills county has the distinction of not having a deficit.

The new law returning one-half of the ad valorem taxes collected by the state to the counties will make $7000 or $8000 additional funds available next year.

Record Heat Wave Broken By Rain

A record heat wave which afflicted all of Texas last week with the hottest temperatures in 30 years has been broken by rains.

Practically every section of the state received moisture varying from a drizzle to a 15-inch cloudburst in Fort Bend county. Temperatures here dropped speedily from above 100 to the lower seventies and in Amarillo a low of 55 was recorded early this week.

Rain in Goldthwaite Wednesday amounted to 22 inches.

Masonic Lodge

To Confer Degrees

All members and visitors are invited to attend and to inspect the re-decorated lodge room. This is the first meeting since the improvements have been made.

COMMISSIONER'S COURT MET MONDAY

Tuesday afternoon the court visited the Regency bridge over the Colorado river on a tour of inspection.

dignity, which makes one very light-hearted and all fluttered about like butterflies among spring flowers.

Messrs. Walter Fairman and Jacob Saylor announced the register book at which Mrs. Walter Fairman presided in her pleasing manner.

Messrs. and Mmes. Dow Hudson and Joe Palmer added much merriment to the journey to the nook where punch was served so gracefully by Mmes. Jacob Saylor Lucile Fairman, and Al Dickerson.

Messrs. and Mmes. R. E. Clements, John Hester entertainingly led the guests through the gate into the driveway.

The strains of music floated on the air, the lights which glowed after the long shadows had faded into night, the little bird houses, electric lanterns, cactus and other gifts from the relatives added much to this "Garden of the Gods," as one called it. And will in behalf of everyone present that this occasion which has ended with a friendship feast and the association has been greatly enjoyed with one of the most loved families.

Out-of-town guests for the tea were: Mrs. Alonzo Bankmn, and son, John Allen, of Seguin; Mr. and Mrs. Will Little, San Saba; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCullough and daughter, Mary Ella, Hico; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin, Norman, Okla. Contributed.

Mindful of his campaign promise to reduce state expenditures, Governor O'Daniel amazed friends and foes alike on Wednesday by his wielding of the dreaded blue pencil.

Hundreds of jobs were abolished as the governor pared over five million dollars from the appropriations for the state departments.

The State Highway Department, with over a million dollars stripped from its allotment, was the hardest hit. District Engineer Leo Ehlinger is reported by the Brownwood Bulletin as saying that his office will not have enough workers left to prepare the payroll.

Austin's state institutions will lose nearly half a million dollars. While Governor O'Daniel did not abolish any jobs in his own, the executive department, he eliminated $10,000 for the return of fugitives to the state and $4,000 for furniture for the mansion.

Jackson Crossing Bridge is Started

Work was scheduled to start yesterday on the new bridge over Pecan Bayou at Jackson Crossing in the western part of Mills county.

FIVE SCOUTS LEAVE TO ATTEND CAMP GIBBONS

Sunday, July 15, will be visitors day at the camp and the parents of Scouts are urged to attend the camp.

GOVERNOR SIGNS TAX REMISSION BILL

Gov. O'Daniel signed a general tax remission bill Monday.

Half of the ad valorem taxes collected in the county will be returned to the county.

Beginning 1940-41 tax-paying period.

The governor stated the ad valorem tax unquestionably belongs in the field of local government and asked the home folks of each county to co-operate with their county officers and reduce county expenditures.

The governor stated that since remissions had been granted a number of counties that it should be granted to all and there is as much sound reasoning for tax remission in one county as in another with the exception of a very few cases, he said. This will be beneficial to our county.

TO LEASE LARGE RANCH

News comes that Walker Wigley is negotiating for a large ranch in the eastern part of the county.

Mr. Wigley and family have been one of the prominent families of this section for years.

Mr. and Mrs. Wigley were reared here and their three winsome daughters have been born and raised in our midst. Their places will be hard to fill and one ray of sunshine remains—they will probably be with us until the first of the year and that's good news. They have a host of relatives and friends here who will miss them. —Mullin Enterprise

By Mrs. Eula Nickols

We extend our sympathy to Mr. Ben Hurdle and children and other relatives in the going away of Mrs. Hurdle.

We welcome Jack Robertson and wife in our community. They moved to their new home July the fourth. Jack Kirby helped them move.

Last Monday afternoon Walter Weatherby's farm house burned to the ground. Mr. Hughes and family lived on the place. The fire caught from the cook stove. Mr. Hughes moved in Wick Webb's house. The neighbors and friends have helped them so they could go back to housekeeping again.

Bro. J. C. Wade preached two interesting sermons Sunday and Sunday night. He preached at Ratler in the afternoon.

Wedding bells rang once again in our community July sixth. C. E. Holcombe and Mrs. Bulah Pate, of Crowell, were married at the Baptist parsonage in the city by Rev. E. E. Dawson. Mr. Holcombe has lived here for several months.

We welcome his bride in our community.

John Roberts and grandson went to Brownwood early Friday morning to meet Mrs. Earline Roberts and Beryl who came to attend the Strickland reunion which met close to Gatesville.

Little Miss Kathlene Clements from town visited last week with Janette Roberts in Mrs. Eula Nickols home.

Duey Bohannon and wife, from Big Valley, spent Wednesday in the Circle home. They brought Miss Johnnie Belle home, who had spent a few days in their home. They also treated Mrs. Nickols, M. R. Circle and wife, John Roberts and wife, and Sam Self and wife to nice cantaloupes which they had raised.

Last Monday was John Earl Roberts' eleventh birthday. He celebrated it in the Circle home. After dinner Mesdames Self and Circle treated John Earl, his sister and his Grandmother Nickols and Mrs. Shipman to ice cold grape juice and cake. Mrs. Circle had baked the cake for Johnnie Belle's birthday, which was last Sunday, and she didn't come home, so she missed an awful good treat as the cake was fine. We wish John Earl many more happy birthdays.

B. F. Renfro finished the thrashing in this community Friday. He got his hand hurt so his son, Clifton, and Connie Knowles had to finish up the thrashing.

Mrs. Marion Robertson, from Big Valley, and Mrs. Maggie Traylor and Miss Myrna visited one afternoon last week with Mrs. J. F. Davis.

Miss Johnnie Belle Circle spent Saturday night with Mrs. Harvey Dunkle.

Mrs. Earline Roberts and Beryl, from Winters, accompanied John Roberts and wife and James to Gatesville to the Strickland reunion Sunday.

Rev. J. C. Wade and family from town are staying with Mrs. McClary while her daughter and husband are in Fort Worth getting their business in shape to come here to stay with Mrs. McClary.

Jack Kirby, from town, visited Sunday morning with Jack Robertson and wife. I'm guessing he will be their guest quite often.

Mr. Hughes moved into a house on Wick Webb's land.

Millard Cockrum bought the rest of Mrs. Kate Webb's home last week.

Horace Cooke made a regular hand in the Nickols' field last Saturday, helping stack hay. He also helped Friday at Davis' with the thrasher. He isn't one bit lazy—just getting him at it is the worst trouble.

Nena Roberson, from Dallas, and O. D. Irvin and family, from Ranger, spent last week in the E. D. Roberson home.

Mrs. Maggie Traylor and children visited until bed time with her son, Woody, and family on Thursday night.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
PICTURES AT BEACH AND POOL

In taking pictures at the beach, remember that sunlit sand and open water are quite bright. Be careful not to overexpose.

SWIMMING pools and bathing beaches are busy places in the summer time—and wherever there is activity, there's a field for your camera.

Since you find a lot of rapid action at these places, the finer camera with fast lens and rapid shutter provides definite advantages. But if you use a trusty inexpensive box camera, you'll find plenty to occupy it, too.

Among the things to picture are beach games, water sports, diving, children at play, sand castles, shadow patterns on rippled sand, and—at the lake or the seashore—scenic views and sunsets.

The chief thing to remember, in taking pictures at the beach, is that sunlit sand and open water are extremely bright. Therefore, exposures can be shorter than when snapping pictures inland. With "chrom" type film, 1/50-second shutter speed at f.16 lens opening is sufficient for a beach scene, and 1/50 second at f.11 suffices for average shots of individuals and small groups. These, of course, are "sunny-day" exposures—on a cloudy-bright day, use the next larger lens opening. With a box camera, on a sunny day, use the large lens opening for shots of individuals and groups, and the small lens opening for scenic views.

For shots of fast action, the fine camera is best—but you can also get good pictures with a box camera, if you are alert for momentary pauses in the action. These occur in most games or sports. Naturally, they don't happen during a dive—so with a slow camera you'll have to pose the diving pictures. Your subject can halt at the end of the board, in proper position to "take off"—and if he does it realistically, the picture will be about as interesting as a genuine action picture.

If you possess a finer miniature camera in the 35-millimeter or No. 828 size, by all means take a roll or two of full-color film along when you go to the beach or pool. Bright beach umbrellas, vivid costumes, blue water, and golden sand make these places ideal for full-color photography. And today, it's just about as easy to use full-color film as to take pictures in black-and-white.

John van Gelder

Davis and family spent Sunday afternoon in the Alexander home at Center City.

Milk Pitcher Back on the Table

J. COOPER, Home Economics Consultant
Breeder-Feeder Association

The milk pitcher back on the table is now an authentic and worthy of a place in the aristocrat of the kitchen. Whether placed there or made to order, it is a good nutritional advice. Milk with meals is sound nutritional practice.

Milk has no affinities. It goes with any food or any kind of a meal. Often we hear the remark that fish and milk or ice cream must not be eaten at the same meal. This is a fallacy. Any of the natural foods may be used together. It is the man made mixtures that offend.

Some of our most delicate fish dishes are made with milk. While there are few people who are allergic to fish and have to avoid all of the sea foods, the majority can safely eat them. The question is not one of combinations, but of the condition of the food. If the fish is not fresh, it will cause sickness if eaten in any way.

An often heard excuse for not drinking milk is that it is constipating. This is another fallacy. Milk in itself is not constipating. It is readily and easily digested and because of this, leaves no residue. The balanced diet furnishes bulk in the form of fresh fruits, vegetables and cereals for well-being. Milk is a vital part of this balanced meal. Not long ago a food quack went around this part of the country preaching that milk and citrus juices must not be taken at the same meal because the fruit juices curdled the milk. This is another ridiculous fallacy. The curdling of milk in the stomach is the first step in the digestion. Fruit juices aid in the digestion by helping to form a softer curd. The same reasoning applies to buttermilk.

Eat More Salt To Avoid Sunstroke

Austin, Texas, July 13th—"The beating Texas sun these July days is beginning to take its toll in heat prostrations, from reports reaching the Texas State Department of Health. A simple precaution to help prevent heat cramps and prostration is to add a pinch of ordinary table salt to each drink of water you take.

Laborers, mechanics, farmers and white collar workers whose work causes them to sweat profusely, are in danger of having their body salt content become deficient with resulting heat cramps or heat fag. Salt is a prominent constituent of sweat; the body loses large quantities of salt during hot days.

In industry, a method of preventing heat cramps is to take a tablet of pure salt or a mixture of salt and dextrose with each drink of water. Workmen whose duties require muscular exertion should be especially careful to add more than the usual amount of salt to what they eat and drink.

Salt deficiency may be prevented by taking salt in various ways. Where prepared tablets are not available, table salt may be used. Milk is a source of salt and will help to make up for the deficiency caused by sweating. Alcoholic drinks should be avoided.

Heat cramps are characterized by pains (cramps) in the abdominal region, headache, and in severe cases, by nausea and vomiting. The body temperature remains about normal, likewise the pulse rate. Body salt losses occur without the knowledge of the individual until there is a deficiency; then various muscles begin to cramp.

State Fair List Of Premiums Now Ready For Mailing

Dallas, Texas, July 13—Listing more than $100,000 in premiums for livestock, agriculture, poultry and other awards, the State Fair of Texas is now ready to mail its annual premium list. This will be the 51st mailing of the premium list, and this year's book shows an increase from a few thousand dollars to more than $100,000.

In many cases premiums have increased. Competition has again been taken from county exhibits and instead each county with a creditable exhibit will receive $125.

In addition to the regular premium list which shows every award offered by the State Fair of Texas, the fair has for distribution supplementary lists for special shows, as the poultry show, the 4-H Club Shows, Culinary and Textile, the school exhibits and contests and others.

Styes Caused By Eyestrain

Wedding rings may be useful for some things, but contrary to the popular superstition, styes on the eyelids cannot be cured by rubbing them with a wedding ring, according to the Better Vision Institute.

Styes are caused by bacterial infection of the glands at the roots of the eyelashes. These bacteria are usually present on the lids of everybody's eyes, but they do not get a foothold unless resistance is lowered. According to some authorities, styes almost always are due to astigmatic strain, often accompanied with an upset stomach. Instead of following the old superstition of rubbing the styes with a wedding ring, which is of no help whatsoever, a person with styes should consult an eyesight specialist to correct the underlying astigmatic conditions.

Very often one attack of styes lowers resistance, making the person easily susceptible to another attack. If the eyes are overworked, the circulation of the lid is impaired and another crop of styes make their appearance. Sometimes the attacks become so frequent that even after the astigmatism is corrected, the styes are difficult to clear up.

Starfish See With Their Arms

Some lassies may wear their hearts on their sleeves, but the starfish carries its eyes on its arms, according to the Better Vision Institute. Little clusters of light-sensitive cells, known as "eye-spots," are on each arm. These cannot focus or distinguish form, color or motion, as far as is known. They are able, however, to distinguish between light and shadow.

Any of the arms of the starfish can be used as a leader, or head. This "boss" arm apparently does the work of seeing and the eye-spots on the other arms seem to be dormant. If the starfish wishes to move in another direction, the eye on another arm gets on the job.

Going To The Fair? Advice From One Who Knows

Marjorie Hillis, who skylighted to fame with her book, "Live Alone and Like It," has another new book out, "Fair or No Fair," that will serve as a guide for the woman vacationist in New York.

She tells you everything you want to know. You even learn that it just isn't the thing to take white shoes to New York. "You may see white shoes on the streets of New York but you'll never see them on the best dressed people, however hot the day or however correct it may be in your home town."

She even tells you how to make your hotel room homey during your stay. She suggests that you buy a vase from the ten cent store the first day and keep it full of flowers. In New York flowers are cheap.

She stresses the fact that it isn't easy to get checks cashed in New York so you had best go well supplied with traveler's checks.

Her book is a valuable guide to the person making his first trip to New York. She even recommends certain hotels and certain places to buy this and that, and outlines a tour of places to see.

"Unless you have a beau in town, or friends who will entertain you, the chances are that you won't wear an evening dress during your trip. There's far less dressing in town in the summer than in the winter, and you wouldn't feel comfortable without an escort in the places where you need to dress."

Best Way To Spoil A Trip Is Not To Plan It.

She says that the best way to spoil a trip to New York is to plan it badly, or not to plan it at all.

She recommends the Frick Museum at 1 East 70th Street, as "The only museum I ever visited that contained nothing I wanted to skip."

"One thing that is definitely a 'must' is the Hayden Planetarium, where the stars come out in the heavens above you, moving slowly in their ordained order."

She also tells about the little shops down on Allen Street, "where people make such triumphant purchases in brass and silver, and the antique shops up and down Second and Third Ave., which are overflowing with fascinating things from every period and every country."

"Fair or No Fair" is crammed full of suggestions like that. Marjorie Hillis even goes into a list of places that you can go without an escort, for her book is written primarily to the "Live Aloners," who will not have escorts in New York. But you chuckle a bit at Miss Hillis' clever handling of this matter, when you know that since she penned these lines, she has become engaged to a New York chain executive, and though she once advised it, she no longer expects to "Live Alone and Like It." — Edith Alderman Guedry in the Fort Worth Press.

Many Athletes Wear Glasses

Good vision is essential to an athlete, no matter how steady his arm or keen his judgment may be, according to the Better Vision Institute. Some sportsmen, like Babe Ruth, have extraordinarily sharp eyesight. Tests have indicated that the eyes of Babe Ruth, who long wore the baseball crown, function 12 times faster than the eyes of the average person.

"Other athletes, however, need spectacles to help them to success. When Francis Ouimet, famous golfer, started years ago to play on the links, he did not need spectacles. But the passing of the years dimmed his eyes. Ouimet did not realize it until a friend noticed how he squinted in sizing up putts. Now he wears spectacles and his strokes are made almost with the precision of a micrometer. He astonished the sports world by winning his second championship 17 years after his first."

Many big league ball players have improved their game by wearing eye-glasses. Among them are George Toporcer, Danny MacFayden and Johnny Broaca.

Out With Cotton

Denton, Texas, July 13—"Let's Dethrone King Cotton," an article written by Dr. Walter Hansen of the geography department of North Texas State Teachers College is featured in the June issue of Texas Parade, state industrial magazine, and has drawn much reader comment, according to Charles E. Simons, editor of the publication.

Hansen's article points out that although most so-called authorities on the South seem to be working under the assumption that without cotton the South is doomed, "as a matter of fact, it largely the result of the tremendous wastefulness of King Cotton's regime that the South has become the nation's No. 1 economic problem."

Cotton, says the geography professor, by virtue of the fact that it is a clean-tilled crop, is one of the most destructive forms of land utilization practiced in the United States today.

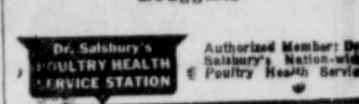

He points out that by price pegging, the government is encouraging the destruction of the remaining productive lands in the South. Hansen also says that the domestic allotment plan advocated by many leaders in the Cotton Belt have even less to offer than the present government plan because it would increase cotton acreage and thus waste "our greatest heritage, soil and water."

The author urges that the nation discourage the growth of cotton and develop new products from such crops as will conserve the soil, water, and human resources. Through the development of substitutes, he says, such countries as Germany, Italy and Japan are rapidly becoming independent of cotton producing nations.

ONE MOMENT, PLEASE

A few of the EAGLE'S good friends missed the point of last week's editorial in which Governor O'Daniel was urged to call a special session of the Texas legislature to pass a statutory tax bill to provide for old age pensions between now and a year from next January when the legislature regularly convenes.

On two separate occasions in the recent session, the House of Representatives passed such a bill with well over 100 votes. It was never voted on in the Senate because of a little group of men who wanted it held up in order to force SJR-12 on the people. Now that SJR-12 is out of the way, we believe another opportunity should be given to provide the pension money.

It is a long time between now and January 1941, and we see no good reason why the old folks should be kept in suspense from one month to the next about their pensions nor why money should continue to be borrowed from favored banks at interest when it could so easily be raised by taxes, just the same as it always has.

The EAGLE is not fighting anybody, but it is fighting FOR the old folks of Mills County and of Texas. And when the issue narrows down on one side to a few big banks who want to lend money to the pension fund and, on the other side, to a lot of old folks whose pensions must eventually be trimmed by the amount of interest the banks receive, we're still for the old folks. If the shoe pinches anybody else, it looks like he must have put his foot in it.

Another thing, the editorial did NOT purport to represent the sentiments of ALL Mills County voters but only of those who feel that a special session is necessary to protect the old folks on the one hand and the taxpayers on the other. Mills County voters are not unanimous about anything, not even about the best way to get to heaven or the best flour to make biscuits, and we hope they will continue to think for themselves always.

Again, we'd like to make it perfectly clear that last week's editorial was written by an owner of the paper and not by somebody on the outside. If it sounds like somebody else, don't blame him for it.

Finally the editor wishes to acknowledge the many compliments its readers have showered on the editorial. We particularly appreciate those from so many old folks themselves who, more than anyone else, have a particular interest in learning where the pension money for the next 18 months is coming from. They know the EAGLE is their friend, and we appreciate their confidence.

LAST MINUTE NATURALIZATION

The papers told recently about an old man 93 years of age who has just been naturalized as an American citizen. Some of them spilled a lot of gush about the old man's patriotic decision to become an American after living in the United States for half a century.

They did not recount the fact that for all these years he has been making his living in this state and country. They did not mention that for two years the country to which he owed allegiance was at war with the United States. All of the time that he was strong and active and making money the European flag was good enough for him. While others were paying poll taxes and voting as good American citizens, he was an alien. Now he is old and feeble.

What changed his mind at long last? Could it have been a desire to have his name inscribed on the old age pension rolls?

TEXAS OUT-O-DOORS

Austin, Texas, July 13 — Recommendations which, if adopted by the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, would give Texas duck hunters considerably better sport, was strongly urged upon Ira N. Gabrielson, Bureau Chief, by Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, at the recent annual meeting of the National Game and Fish Commissioners Association.

Tucker asked that Texas, which biological survey reports indicate had 100 per cent more ducks last season than the previous year, be allowed shooting to start at sunrise rather than at 7 a. m.; that earlier shooting be allowed in the northern half of the State and that the use of a few live decoys be permitted.

Those are the things Texas sportsmen have been urging ever since the biological survey set down stringent rules several years ago in an effort, which is proving successful, to save migratory waterfowl from extinction.

Final approval of the duck season and all restrictions will be made this year for the first time by Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the Department of the Interior, to which the biological survey was recently transferred. At present there are no indications of the season, its lengths or the limitations, Tucker said upon his return to Austin from the national meeting.

Coyotes, known as the most canny animal in Texas, get along! Old hungry coyote must have found the foraging rather tough recently, but he coped with the situation by catching and eating fish, believe it or not!

State Game Wardens P. D. Mosley, of Candaian, and J. H. Maggard, Amarillo, while patrolling near Tascosa, saw a coyote at the edge of the Canadian river, but paid little attention after the animal sneaked away. However, they saw the same coyote at the same spot at approximately the same time the following morning and were able to sneak up close enough to see the coyote scooping minnows five and six inches in length out of the river and devouring them.

Six more beaver have been trapped in southwest Texas and placed in the streams of Jasper and Walker counties, making a total of a dozen of the busy dam builders which have been put to work in East Texas.

The drought in certain sections of South Texas and the Hill Country has hit game birds and animals hard and it has become necessary for the State Game Department to feed wild turkeys in a dozen Hill County counties. Seven game wardens are engaged in feeding the birds, which is vitally necessary in order to save sufficient stock for breeding purposes next season.

The turkey crop this year will be well below normal in the Hill Country, Earl Sanders, Game Department Regional game Manager, at Kerrville, reports.

Texas can and is raising elk. The big game animal is protected the year 'round in the Lone Star State. A herd of forty-four planted in Jeff Davis county in 1937 has increased until there are now nearly 300 animals in the herd.

Triplet deer are very unusual, doe usually giving birth to a pair, but Texas has at least two does which are more than doing their share in keeping the State stocked with deer. A doe on the W. H. Ramsey farm three miles from Kerrville recently had three deer for the fourth consecutive year. She is not yet five years old. The other deer which has proved very prolific is one on the Hyatt Brothers Ranch near Johnson City. She recently had her third set of triplets. She has given birth to seventeen young, including four sets of twins, in the last seven years.

The Southwestern Sportsmen's Show, held in Amarillo for one week and which was the first show of its kind ever staged in the Southwest, will be repeated next year, it was announced by Gene Howe, of Amarillo, sponsor of the show and a member of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission. Several other cities in Texas have expressed interest in sponsoring such a program.

Sudden Death

"Drink, drive and die." Statistics reveal with startling clearness that two things are the cause of a vast majority of the highway accidents in this State and Nation, says Captain J. C. Tappe of the Texas Safety Council.

These two things are driving while drinking and excessive speed with faulty equipment. Leading in the cause of fatal and near-fatal accidents undoubtedly may be listed those who drive while drinking—and this does not mean driving drunk.

Statistics reveal, and the Georgia Safety Commission, for example, is stressing the fact that the driver with two drinks or two bottles of beer is, a more dangerous driver than the one who would come under the classification of drunk.

At first thought this might seem an extravagant statement. But have you ever noticed a young man, not necessarily addicted to alcohol, who becomes a show horse after the second drink? He becomes imbued with self-confidence. He races down the highway looking neither to the right or the left, and sometimes not straight ahead. Result—a fatal accident. The drunken driver, in most cases, realizes his condition. He is likely to drive slowly. If he has an accident it is more probable that it will be a minor one.

Postal receipts at the Comanche office for the first and second quarters of 1939 were $7,601.30 as against $7,344.30 for the first and second quarters of 1938, showing an increase of three and one half per cent for 1939 over last year.

As they slowed down for a curve the car skidded into a concrete bridge, and almost completely demolished the car which was driven by Delbert Morgan.

Why Blondes Are Hard To See

It's harder for a man to see a blonde out of the corner of his eye than it is to see a brunette, especially if the blonde is wearing a red dress and the brunette a black and white dress. That difference in visibility is explained by the fact that colors are perceived best when focused by the eye at the center of the retina. Colored objects far to the side are less easily distinguished than black and white objects.

Reports from Delbert Morgan who was injured in a car accident Saturday night are that his condition is still not very satisfactory, although it is not believed his injuries will be fatal. He is in the Breckenridge hospital in Austin where he was carried following the accident.

The largest amount of oats will be sold in Lampasas this summer since 1931, according to one of the outstanding buyers who was interviewed this morning. Up until this time 100,000 bushels have been sold and the price has averaged 28 cents per bushel, which would mean $28,000.00 of oat money so far.

A new home was just being completed on the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. Ryan Howard some 3 miles west of town, except the stone veneer which was to be started at an early date. The family planned to move into the new structure Saturday of this week. But fire Wednesday afternoon late razed it to the ground and not a thing was left.

How Long Should A Child Read?

Many persons think that it is possible to read for unlimited periods without tiring their eyes. Because of that mistaken belief, many eyes are strained, warns the Better Vision Institute.

A child in grammar school should not read more than an hour or so at a sitting, and even college students should do their reading in two-hour stretches. It is a good plan, continues the Institute, to look across the room or out of the window occasionally, to give the eyes a moment's relaxation. Reading requires close focusing and the eye muscles are performing tense work in sustaining a delicately adjusted coordination.

The length of time that a person may read without tiring his eyes depends upon his individual endurance. Eyes do not tire as easily under sunlight as under artificial illumination. That being the case, a student should do as much of his reading as possible with his back to the window and the daylight coming over his shoulder.

Usually, but there have been times," he laughed as he said it, "when each of us has sat on opposite sides of the hall in lonely state."

Jane laughed too. "Baldy and I do things like that."

They finished their coffee and he smoked a cigar. Edith and Baldy telephoned that the thing was more serious than they had anticipated. That perhaps he had better send Briggs.

"So that means I'm going to have you to myself for an hour longer," Frederick told Jane. "I hope you are as happy in the prospect as I am."

"I am having a joyous time. I feel like Cinderella at the ball."

He laughed at that. "You're a refreshing child, Jane." He had never before called her by her first name.

"Am I? But I'm not a child. I'm as old as the hills."

"Not in years."

"In wisdom. I know how to make ends meet, and how to order meals, and how to plan my own dresses, and a lot of things that your Edith doesn't have to think about."

"And yet you are happy."

"I'll say I am."

He laughed but did not continue the subject. "I've a rather wonderful collection of earrings. Would you like to look at them? Queer find, isn't it? But I've picked them up everywhere."

"Why earrings?"

"Other things are commonplace—brooches, necklaces, tiaras. But there's a romance in the jewels that women have worn in their ears. You'll see."

He went into another room and brought back a tray. It was lined with velvet and the earrings were set up on tiny cushions. It was a unique display. Cameos from ancient Rome, acorns of human hair in the horrible taste of the sixties—gypsy hoops of gold—coral roses in delicate fretted wreaths—old French jewels—rubies, emeralds, sapphires, and seed pearls, larger pearls set alone to show their beauty, and a sparkling array of modern things, diamonds in platinum—long pendants of jade and jet—opals dripping like liquid fire along slender chains. She hung over them.

"Which do you like best?" he asked.

"The pearls?"

"He was doubtful. "Not the white ones. These—" he picked up a pair of sapphires set in seed pearls—rather barbaric things that hung down for an inch or more. "They'll suit your style. Have you ever worn earrings?"

"No."

"Try them."

He helped her to adjust them—and his hand touched her smooth warm cheek. He was conscious of her closeness, but gave no sign.

There was a little mirror above the mantel. "Look at yourself," he said.

She tilted her head so that the jewels shook. The blue lights of the stones made her skin incandescent. Frederick surveyed her critically.

"You ought to have a more sophisticated gown. Silver brocade with a wisp of a train."

"It changes me, doesn't it? I am not sure that I like them."

"What a joy she was after Adelaide. As if the name had brought her, a voice spoke from the door. "I wouldn't let Waldron announce me, Ricky; may I come in?"

She stopped as she saw Jane. "Oh, you're not alone?"

"This is Miss Barnes, Adelaide. I think you met her brother today at luncheon. Edith telephoned that you and Eloise had found her."

"That's what I came about, to warn you. Eloise has the reporters on her trail. She'll be over in a minute. But the harm will be done, I am afraid, before you can stop her."

"Oh, I'm resigned. Edith's coming back tonight. Miss Barnes' brother is bringing her."

"Really?" Adelaide Laramore was appraising Jane. A shabby child. From the threshold she had had a moment of jealousy. But the moment was past. Frederick was extremely fastidious. He adored beauty and this Barnes child was not beautiful. Jane was unfasting the earrings. "Aren't they heavenly, Mrs. Laramore?"

"The sapphires?" Mrs. Laramore sat down on the couch. Her evening wrap slipped back, showing her white neck. Her fair hair was swept up from her forehead. She had a long face, with pink cheeks and pencilled eyebrows. She was like a portrait on porcelain, and she knew it, and emphasized the effect. "The sapphires? Yes. They're the choice of the lot."

She went on to speak of Eloise. "She is simply hopeless. She has told the most hectic tales and all the papers have sent men out to the Inn."

"Well, they escaped. They started early and have been hung up at Alexandria."

"Eloise and Benny and the Captain dined with me. She was still telephoning when I left. I told her that I did not sanction it, and that I should come straight over and tell you. But she laughed and said she didn't care. That she thought it was great fun and that you were a good sport."

"I shan't see her," shortly; "she ought to know better. Setting reporters on Edith like a pack of wolves."

"I told her how you would feel," Adelaide reiterated.

"I should see her if I were you, Mr. Towne," said a crisp, young voice.

Adelaide turned with a gasp. With her slippered feet crossed in front of her, Jane looked like a child. For the first time Mrs. Laramore got a good view of those candid gray eyes. They had a queer effect on her. Eyes like that were most uncommon. Fearless. The girl was not afraid of Frederick. She was not afraid of anyone.

"Why should I see her?" Frederick demanded.

"Won't it just add to her sense of melodrama if you don't? And why should you care? Your niece is coming home. And that's the end of it."

"You mean," Frederick demanded, "that I am to carry it off with an air?"

Jane nodded. "Make comedy of it instead of tragedy."

Adelaide slipping out of her wrap was revealed as elegant and distinguished in silver and black.

"May I have a cigarette, Ricky, to settle my nerves? Eloise is tremendously upsetting," Adelaide was plaintive.

Jane watched her with lively curiosity. The woman she knew did not smoke. Baldy's flappers did, but they were abnormal and of a new generation. Mrs. Laramore was old enough to be Jane's mother, and Jane had a feeling . . . that mothers . . . shouldn't smoke . . .

But none the less, Adelaide Laramore and her exotic ways were amusing. She had a brittle and artificial look, like the Mancu lady in the Museum, or something in wax. Jane was brought back from her meditation by the riotous entrance of Eloise and the two men.

"I knew Adelaide was telling tales."

"I told you I was coming, Eloise."

Eloise stared at Jane when Frederick presented her. "You look like your brother. Twins?"

"No," Jane decided that she liked Miss Harper better than she did Mrs. Laramore—which wasn't saying—much . . .

"The reporters are on their way to Alexandria—full cry," Eloise all in emerald green, with her red hair in a classic coiffure, was like some radiant witch, exultant of evil. "You mustn't scold me, Frederick. It was terribly exciting to tell them, and I adore excitement."

"They aren't there."

"Where are they?"

Frederick chanted composedly, "We three know . . . but we will never tell . . ."

"Adelaide will, when I get her alone."

"I will not."

"Then Miss Barnes will. Do you know how young you look, Miss Barnes? I feel as if you'd tell me anything for a stick of candy."

They roared at that. And Jane said, "Nobody ever made me do anything I didn't want to do."

And now Benny and the Captain looked at her, and looked again. What a voice the child had, and eyes!

Eloise, on the couch, hugged her knees and surveyed her good slippers. "They are putting my picture in the paper and Adelaide's. They saw one on my desk—"

Mrs. Laramore cried out, "Benny, why did you let her do it?" and there was a great uproar—in which Eloise could be heard saying: "And they are going to have a picture of the Inn, and one of your brother if they can get it, Miss Barnes."

Jane began to feel uncomfortable. She was, she told herself, as much out of place as a pussy-cat in a Zoo. These women and these men reminded her somehow of the great sleek animals who snarled at each other in the Rock Creek cages. Frederick did not snarl. But she had a feeling he might if Eloise kept at him much longer.

It was in the midst of the hubbub that Edith entered. She walked in among them as comely as she had faced them at the Inn.

"Hello," she said, "you sound like a jazz band." She went straight up to Frederick and kissed him. "I suppose Eloise is shouting the news to the world." She tucked her hand in his arm. "There are more than a million reporters outside. Mr. Barnes is keeping them at bay."

"Where did they find you?"

"Heard of us, I suppose, at the Alexandria hotel. We didn't realize it until we reached here, and then they piled out and began to ask questions."

Frederick lifted her hand from his arm. "I'll go and send them away."

Eloise jumped up. "I'll go with you."

And then Frederick snarled, "Stay here."

But neither of them went, for Baldy entered, head cocked, eyes averted—Jane knew the signs. "They've gone," he said. "I told you I'd get rid of them, Miss Towne."

He nodded to them all. Absolutely at his ease, lifted above them all by the exaltation of his mood. Finer, Jane told herself, than any of them—his beautiful youth against their world-weariness.

Edith was smiling at Jane. "I knew you at once. You are like your brother."

They were alike. A striking pair as they stood together. "It is because of Mr. Barnes and his sister that we got in touch with Edith," Frederick explained. He had regained his genial manner.

"Oh, really," Adelaide knew that she and her friends ought to go at once. Edith looked tired, and Eloise at moments like this was impossible. But she hated to leave anyone else in the field. "Can't I give you a lift?" she asked Jane, sweetly, "you and your brother."

But it was Frederick who answered. "Miss Barnes lives at Sherwood Park. Briggs will take her out."

So Adelaide went away, and Eloise and the two men, and Edith turned to her uncle and said, "I'm sorry."

Her face was white and her eyes were shining, and all of a sudden she reached up her arms and put them about his neck and sobbed as if her heart would break.

And then, and not until then, little Jane knew that Edith was not like one of the animals at the Zoo.

In Jane's next letter to Judy she told her how the evening with the Townes had ended. And that she had invited the Townes and Follette for tea the next afternoon.

When she had written the last line, Jane sat very still at her desk. She was thinking of Evans. She hadn't seen him for three days. Not since the Sunday night she had gone to the Townes. That night in the fog had impressed her strangely. She had felt for Evans something that had nothing to do with admiration for him nor respect nor charm. His weakness had drawn her to him, as it won't be so fatiguing."

He was smiling at her, and she smiled back. Yet quite strangely and inconsistently, she felt as if in changing his attitude towards her, he had robbed her of some privilege. "I didn't mind being a walking-stick."

"Well, I minded. After this I'll walk alone. And I'm going to work hard, and play around a bit. Will you have tea with me tomorrow, Jane? At the Willard? To celebrate my first tottering steps."

She agreed, eagerly. "It will be like old times."

"Minus a lot, old lady."

That was the way he had talked to her years ago. The plaintive note was gone.

"Take the three-thirty train and I'll meet you. I'll pay for the taxi with what's left of 'Alice.'"

"Don't be too extravagant."

"Nothing is too good for you, Jane. I can't say it as I want to say it, but you'll never know what you seemed to me on Sunday as you came through the mist."

His voice shook a little, but he recovered himself in a moment. "Here come the Townes." He rose as Edith entered with young Baldwin.

After that Evans followed Baldy's lead as a dispenser of hospitality. The two of them passed cups, passed little bread and butter, passed little cakes, passed lemon and cream and sugar, flung conversational balls as light as feathers into the air, were, as Baldy would have expressed it, "the life of the party."

"Something must have gone to Casablanca's head," Frederick Towne remarked to Jane. "Have you ever seen him like this?"

"Years ago. He was tremendously attractive."

"Do you find him attractive now?" with a touch of annoyance.

"I find him wonderful"—her tone was defiant—"and I've known him all my life."

"If you had known me all your life would you call me wonderful?" She looked at him from behind her battlements of silver. "How do I know? People have to prove themselves."

Dr. Hallam had driven Mrs. Follette over. He rarely did social stunts, but he liked Jane. And he had been interested enough in Evans to want to glimpse him in his new role.

Strolling up to the tea-table, he was aware at once of a situation which might make for comedy, or indeed for tragedy. It was evident that Towne was much attracted to little Jane Barnes. If Jane reciprocated, what of young Follette?

"I saw Mrs. Laramore yesterday," he said, abruptly, "lovely as ever—"

"Yes, of course," Towne wished that Hallam wouldn't talk about Adelaide. He wished that all of the others would go away and leave him alone with Jane.

"Mrs. Laramore," said Jane unexpectedly, "makes me think of the lady of Shallott. I don't know why. But I do. I have really never seen such a beautiful woman. But she doesn't seem real. I have a feeling that if anything hit her, she'd break like china."

They laughed at her, and Edith said, "Adelaide will never break. She'll melt. She's as soft as wax."

Then pigeonholing Mrs. Laramore for more vital matters, "Uncle Fred, I am going out to Baldy's studio; he's painting Jane."

Frederick was at once interested. "Her portrait?"

"No. A sketch for a magazine competition," Baldy explained.

"May I see it?"

Baldy, yearning for solitude and Edith, gave reluctant consent. "Come on, everybody."

So everybody, including Dr. Hallam and Mrs. Follette, made their way to the garage.

Edith and young Baldwin arrived first. "And this is where you work," she said, softly.

"Yes. Look here, will you sit here so that I can feast my eyes on you? I've dreamed of you in that chair—in classic costume. Do you know that you were made for a goddess?"

"I know that you are a romantic boy."

"How old are you?" she asked him.

"Twenty-five."

"I don't believe it. I'm twenty-two, and I feel a thousand years older than you."

"You will always be—ageless."

She laughed. "How old is Jane?"

"Twenty. Yet people take us for twins."

"She doesn't look it and neither do you."

The others came in and Edith went back to her thoughts. He wasn't too young. She was glad of that . . .

The sketch of Jane was on an easel. There she stood, a slender figure in her lilac frock—bobbed black hair, lighted-up eyes—the lifted basket with its burden of gold and purple and green!

Towne stood back and looked at it. Jane at his side said, "That's some of the fruit you sent."

"Really?" Frederick had no eyes for anything but Jane, in her lilac frock. Jove, but the boy had caught the spirit of her!

He turned to Baldy. "It is most unusual. And I want it."

"Sorry," said Baldy, crisply. "I am sending it off tomorrow."

"How much is the prize?"

"Two thousand dollars."

"I will write a check for that amount if you will let me have this."

"I am afraid I can't, Mr. Towne."

"Why not?"

"I don't break engagements."

"I don't break engagements," the cock of her head was like Baldy's. (Continued Next Week)

"Well, I feel this way about it. It isn't worth two thousand dollars. But if I win the prize it may be worth that to the magazine—the advertising and all that."

"Isn't that splitting hairs?"

"Perhaps, but it's the way I feel."

"But if you don't win the prize you won't have anything."

"No."

"And you'll be out two thousand dollars." The lion in the Zoo was snarling.

And above him, breathing an upper air, was this young eagle. "I'll be glad to give the sketch to you if it comes back," said Baldy, coolly, "but I rather think it will stick."

It was, in a way, a dreadful moment for Towne. There was young Baldwin sitting on the edge of the table, swinging a leg, debonair, defiant. And Edith laughing in her sleeve. Frederick knew that she was laughing. He was as red as a turkey cock.

It was Jane who saved him from apoplexy. She was really inordinately proud of Baldy, but she knew the dangers of his mood. And she had her duties as hostess.

"Baldy wants to see himself on the news stands," she said, soothingly; "don't deprive him of that pleasure, Mr. Towne."

"Nothing of the kind, Jane," exclaimed her brother.

"Baldy, I won't quarrel with you before people. We must reserve that pleasure until we are alone."

"I'm not quarrelling."

Jane held up a protesting hand. "Oh, let's run away from him, Mr. Towne. When he begins like that, there's no end to it."

She carried Frederick back to the house, and Evans, looking after them, said vindictively to Hallam, "Old Midas got his that time."

Dr. Hallam chuckled. "You don't hate him, do you? Evans, don't let him have Jane. He isn't worth it."

"Neither am I," said Evans. "But I would know better how to make her happy."

Back once more in the bright little living-room, Towne said to Jane, "May I have another cup of tea?"

"It's cold."

"I don't care. I like to see you pour it with your lovely hands."

She spread her hands out on the shining mahogany of the tea-table. "Are they lovely? Nobody ever told me."

His hand went over hers. "The loveliest in the world."

She sat there in a moment's breathless silence. Then she drew her hands away. Touched a little bell. "I'll have Sophy bring us some hot water."

Sophy came and went. Jane poured hot tea with flushed cheeks. He took the cup when she handed it to him. "Dear child, you're not offended?"

"I'm not a child, Mr. Towne." Her lashes were lowered, her cheeks flushed.

He put his cup down and leaned towards her. "You are more than a child to me—a beloved woman. Jane, you needn't be afraid of me . . . I want you for my wife!"

Her astonished eyes met his. "But we haven't known each other a week."

"I couldn't love you more if I had known you a thousand years."

"Mr. Towne—please." He was very close to her.

"Kiss me, Jane."

She held her slender figure away from him. "You must not."

"I must."

"No, really . . . Please," she was breathing quickly. "Please." She was on her feet, the tea-table between them.

He saw his mistake. "Forgive me."

Her candid eyes met his. "Mr. Towne, would you have acted like this . . . with Edith's friends?"

Edith's friends! The child's innocent Adelaide's kisses went for a song. Eloise frankly offered hers. Edith was saved by only some inner grace.

"Jane, they are not worth your little finger. I put you above all. On a pedestal. Honestly. And I want you to marry me."

"But I don't love you."

"I'll make you. I have everything to give you."

Had he? What of Robin Hood and Galahad? What of youth and youth's audacity, high resolves, flaming dreams?

She felt something of this subconsciously. But she would not have been a feminine creature had she not felt the flattery of his pursuit. "Jane, I'll make life a fairy tale. We'll travel everywhere. Sail strange seas. Wouldn't you love it—all those countries you have never seen—and just the two of us? And all the places you have read about? And when we come home I'll build you a house—wherever you say—with a great garden."

He was eloquent, and the things he promised were woven into the woof of all her girlish imaginings. "I ought not to listen," she said, tremulously.

But he knew that she had listened. He was wise enough to leave it there.

He rose as he heard the others coming back. "Will you ride with me tomorrow afternoon? Don't be afraid of me. I'll promise to be good."

"Sorry. I'm to have tea in town with Evans."

"Can't you break the engagement?"

"I don't break engagements." The cock of her head was like Baldy's. (Continued Next Week)

This Is Wool

Here is the definition of wool, according to an item in the Canadian Wool Grower: "Wool is the overcoat of sheep, that is reared and bred in Antipodes to keep the producer broke and the buyer crazy. The fibre varies in color and weight and the man who can guess the nearest length of fibre is called a wool man by the public, a fool by the farmer, and a poor business man by his creditors. The price of wool is determined in London and goes up when you have sold and down when you have bought. The wool is sheared in the spring, mortgaged in the summer and left in bond in the winter."

Free Shows at New York Fair For Millions

NEW YORK—Millions of "average" Americans, from Maine to California, will close their cottages, bungalows, and apartments for brief periods this year and start out for the New York World's Fair 1939. They will arrive by plane, car, bus, and some, perhaps, on foot.

About the wonders of the Fair they will have read much. They will expect the utmost of this $155,000,000 exposition. But the question they are asking now is "what will it cost?"

The answer: They may enjoy virtually all the wonders of the Main Exhibition Area without cost, except what they may spend for food which ranges from 10-cent frankfurters to de luxe swank meals in the cafes. Every night they will be treated to the greatest free spectacle in exposition history: the $1,000,000 fireworks and fountain displays which will bathe the 1,216 1/2 acres of the Fair in brilliant colors.

Free Shows Galore
Hundreds of free shows on the grounds will include such varied entertainment as a rocket ship which carries passengers through both space and time to remote planets; thrilling head-on crashes at the automobile proving ground, a model dairy where 150 prized cows will be milked daily. Industry, science and the nations of the world will offer their wonders and art treasures to the free view of all Fair visitors.

Admission to the grounds will cost 75 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. One day each week children will be admitted for 10 cents.

One of the most elaborate spectacles in theatrical history, Billy Rose's stage and water ballet at the 10,000 seat Marine Amphitheatre, starring Eleanor Holm and 300 dancing and swimming girls, will cost only 40 cents.

The World on Display
Sixty-two foreign countries whose magnificent pavilions face the Lagoon of Nations and the Court of Peace will be open throughout the Fair for free inspection. Here the treasures of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and South America will be shown. A list of the free wonders of the Exhibit Area would fill columns. Some of the highlights are:

The Railroad Building, center of a 6-acre exhibit, containing the most complete miniature railroad ever constructed; a thriving American homestead, complete with cattle, sheep, and chickens, with a singing fountain at the entrance; the most valuable wheat field in the world; a 135-foot schooner in New England's exhibit; the model Town of Tomorrow containing completely furnished homes; The Children's World, a fantastic miniature fair by itself; the House of Jewels where more than $5,000,000 worth of gems will sparkle.

All this and vastly more, may be seen—free of charge.
