TEXAS
OUT-O'-DOORS

While Texas is not generally regarded by Texans as a leader in trapping, the state ranked sixth in the nation, a report for the 1938 fiscal year by the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey reveals. Texas was not only sixth with a total of 590,400 animals taken for their pelts, but leads the entire United States in five species, badgers, ringtail cats, wolves, Canada lynx and foxes. Ohio and Louisiana are tied for the lead in fur production.

Fifteen species of pelts are taken in Texas. A report for the 1939 fiscal year made by J. C. Burr, statistician for the State Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, shows an increase, the take being 729,244. However, trapping is declining almost annually in the state, the present output marking a decrease of 48 per cent over the 1933 crop, which was 1,407,884 pelts.

The Biological Survey report reveals that 397,300 o'possums, 75,900 skunks, 28,900 gray foxes, 2,500 badgers, 14,400 ringtail cats, 5,100 wolves, 1,000 Canada lynx and 29,400 foxes were taken during the 1938 fiscal year.

A couple of Texas coyotes are probably far more curious animals now than they were recently, that is if they survived the attack of a pair of huge eagles. J. H. Maggard, state game warden at Amarillo, reports seeing a pair of eagles chasing two coyotes over the plains. The birds swooped down time and again, striking the coyotes with beaks and talons so hard that each of the animals was knocked to the ground before the principals in the unique battle disappeared out of sight of the warden.

Loy W. Duddleston didn't have far to go fishing one night recently. Part of the city of Houston was flooded by a rise in the streams and Duddleston, seeing five feet of water in his driveway, rigged up a pole and line. He caught three catfish while sitting on his front steps, the Houston Press reports.

Just how hard-working beaver are is shown in a report to the state game department by Arthur Cook, field biologist, who recently cut a beaver dam on the John Mason ranch near Eagle Pass. The dam had backed up approximately 200 acres of water. Ten days later the beaver had restored the dam and the water was back at its former level. Beaver are being trapped in west Texas and transplanted in east Texas by the game department.

Thousands of fish were saved for sportsmen earlier this month through the quick thinking of Game Warden John Taylor, of Marble Falls. Flood waters of the Colorado River, which had been checked by the huge Buchanan dam, were being released in an orderly manner and water from one of the flood gates emptied into a small creek, which otherwise is dry.

Fishermen were quick to find out that the small creek offered wonderful bass and crapple fishing.

Then, without warning, the Lower Colorado River Authority closed the gates feeding the creek, since enough of the flood water had been let out. Taylor chanced to be on the creek bank when the water started going down. Realizing what had happened, he jumped into his car, reacted to the foreman in charge of operations and explained the situation. The foreman agreed to let enough water keep flowing through the creek to save the fish.

Interest in conservation education is mounting. Will J. Tucker, executive secretary of the game department; Phil Goodrum, director of research and education and Dan Lay, region game manager, reported after each had delivered lectures before conservation classes in ten of the leading schools of the state. Each of the game department speakers appeared before more than 2,000 students.

Conservation as a summer school course was introduced last summer by North Texas State Teachers College, of Denton, and spread this year to include many other schools.

Wild mountain sheep, of which there are several hundred in the mountains of west Texas, are among the most keen sighted of animals. They take fright at moving objects as far as two miles away. Bob Snow of the game department reports.

Miss Lucile Bledsoe
Wed July 15th

Simplicity marked the setting for the wedding when Miss Lucile Bledsoe became the bride of Mr. George R. Hill, of Winters, at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, July 15, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bledsoe, in San Angelo. Rev. Lawrence Hays, pastor of the Park Heights Baptist Church, read the single ring ceremony in the presence of members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

Potted ferns with white Cathedral tapers in floor holders and tall baskets of pink gladiolus formed an improvised altar where the couple, unattended, stood to repeat their vows. Preceding the ceremony tapers were lighted by Kathryn Bledsoe, sister of the bride, and Lillian Ruth Steele.

Nuptial music was given by Miss Anna Lee Cobb, who accompanied Miss Marie Hill, sister of the groom, to sing "Because" by d'Hardelot and "I Love You Truly." For the entrance of the couple Miss Cobb played the "Wedding March" from Lohengrin by Wagner and during the ceremony softly played "Nocturne" in E major by Chopin.

The bride was becomingly dressed in black sheer with full pleated skirt and lace bodice over pink. Her accessories were black and she wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Mrs. Hill received her early education from the schools at Goldthwaite and attended John Tarleton College at Stephenville her freshman year. She took her degree from Texas State College for Women at Denton and taught in the Winters Public schools the past year. She is a member of the faculty of the local school for the coming school term and is a talented reader.

Mr. Hill is an only son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Hill and is associated with his father as owner-publisher of the Winters Enterprise. He received his early education from the Gatesville and Hamilton schools and graduated from the Winters High School with the class of 1929. He attended Baylor University at Waco.

The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a short wedding trip and are at home in the Smith residence in Southeast Winters.

Reception Is Held

A reception was held in the lovely outdoor setting at the Bledsoe home following the ceremony, with Mrs. L. E. Low presiding at the refreshment table. She was assisted by Kathryn Bledsoe and Lillian Ruth Steele in serving individual decorated wedding cake and punch.

Guests were Miss Elizabeth Blalock, of Brownwood, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner, Joe V. Hinds, Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Rives, Jr., Miss Marie Hill, Miss Anna Lee Cobb, all of Winters, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Rudd, Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Hays, Mrs. Sid Evans and Miss Lillian Ruth Steele, all of San Angelo, and Lawrence Bledsoe, of Brownwood.

Trip To A. & M. Short Course

On Tuesday morning, July 11, Mrs. Laughlin and Mrs. Black, from Scallorn, Mrs. Hale, Mrs. Sykes and Mrs. Robinson, from Big Valley, Mrs. Tesson, from Mullin, and I left Goldthwaite by car en route to College Station. We arrived the same afternoon and all reported a fine time, in spite of the fact that it rained on us most of the way front Lampasas on. We got rooms at the Law Dormitory and took our meals at the college mess hall.

Tuesday night we saw the show "Man of Conquest," which was shown free of charge at the assembly hall. This was an educational piece and very interesting to Texas history lovers.

There was also a short subject that impressed me. It was "How To Butcher a Hog and Prepare It For Market."

Wednesday morning was started off by some two to three thousand people who took part in the community singing, led by Walter Jenkins. The theme song was "God Bless America."

After a short recess we listened to talks from representatives from different counties on how they had developed or were going to develop their farm land.

Exhibits of interest were: home made lamp brooder; books for the family; fire prevention; play equipment for the yard; self help equipment for children; slp covers; and wiring and electrical equipment.

The part of Wednesday's program that impressed me most was the "Fruits Festival," which displayed all the fruits grown in Texas, which includes almost every kind of fruit. A number of appetizing desserts and drinks were displayed that were made from native fruits.

Thursday morning found us rested and ready to go again. The day was started off by the community singing like the day before, which was followed by lectures on club work, etc.

The lecture that impressed me most was "The Kind of a Parent I Would Like to Be," by Dr. Alice Sowers, from the University of Oklahoma. I wish every parent could have heard this, as it would have caused a better understanding between the parent and child.

I will give a brief summary of what it took to feed us at the mess hall Thursday at noon: 500 pies, 600 pounds of meat, 1000 pounds of flour, 700 pounds of potatoes, 2000 loaves of bread, 150 gallons of iced tea, and 75 gallons of ice cream were a few of the items we ate. There were 300 waiters and 125 attention workers. About 2600 ate at the hall at noon.

The Cooperative Institute Banquet was held on Thursday evening at the Mess Hall, with Gov. Hill, of the Farm Credit Administration as speaker. The meeting and banquet were open to everyone attending the short course.

The pageant "I Pledge My Heart," closed the program for the day.

Friday morning we had the pleasure of visiting the Textile Engineering Building and saw the different steps of making thread and cloth. We also visited the Floral House, where every kind of flower is grown. We also made a tour of the poultry and dairy farms, pean orchards and wild life reserve.

After noon we heard a very interesting lecture "Living Safely Every Day," by George E. Schaver. We learned that 60 per cent of the accidents are caused by girls and boys from the ages 16 to 24. 65 per cent abide by the law. The highway patrol has only been in use 10 years. Rugs cause more deaths than anything else in the home. 18 per cent of deaths are caused in the kitchen, 8 per cent in the living room, 7 per cent on the porches and 7 per cent in bedrooms.

There were a number of good programs Friday afternoon, but the one that impressed me most was the "Style Show For The Family," directed by Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, specialist in clothing. It showed us what clothes to wear for every occasion. It was very interesting to everyone, especially to the club members who have been working along this line.

"Agriculture on Parade," sponsored by the Agriculture Department of the college, concluded the program for the short course. In this they showed all the different livestock, poultry and wild life.

Of course, there were dozens of interesting things displayed and lectures too numerous to mention, but I have tried to give you a brief sketch of the most wonderful trip I have ever taken.

We returned home Saturday morning, glad to get back to good old Mills County, and thankful to our home demonstration club and our agent, Miss Scott, for the many things we learned while working together all through the year.

Of course, the three day short course was a special treat we will never forget.

Respectfully,
 Vela Stephan

Wilcox Reunion

The annual Wilcox Reunion was held Saturday and Sunday, July 15th and 16th, at the Mullin Creek Park with ninety relatives and friends in attendance.

There were many from other parts of the state and New Mexico who gathered for this happy occasion.

Mrs. Ira Alldredge was elected president and Mrs. Walter Doggett secretary and reporter. The time for the annual meeting was set for the second Wednesday in July. The place: Brownwood State Park, at Lake Brownwood. Our hearts were sad over the departure of four of the close relatives since last year's reunion, namely, Mrs. William Wilcox and Dan, Mrs. Celia Hansom, Mr. Hugh Evans and Mrs. Dave Morris.

Those who visited in the Walter Doggett home and attended the Wilcox reunion were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Rogers and two children, Tommie and Carol Ann, of Wink, C. H. Evans and Dan, Melba and Wasanna DePriest, of Mexia, W. B. Evans, of Houston, and Mrs. F. A. McCasland, of Grady, New Mexico.

More than 20,000 Texas farmers in some 500 communities, who pooled their land to plant one-variety cotton in their several communities, sold their crop for approximately $5.00 a bale more than run-of-market cotton brought.

Regency By Community Reporter

The Regency Homemaker's Club met Friday, July 7th, at 2:30 p. m., in the home of Mrs. Alvin Brown, with the hostess as leader. Her program "The Characters of the Home," was as follows:

Song, "America," led by Mrs. Bruce Moore.

"Help me, O Lord, to live so that the world may be a little better because Thou didst make me," was adopted as our Club Prayer.

The roll call by Mrs. Edgar Jones, secretary, was answered by each member relating a childhood experience.

"A Place for Each Member of the Family in the Home" was discussed by Mrs. Edgar Jones.

"Husband and Wife a Team, and What Characterizes Good Team Work," Mrs. Tom Dennis.

"Things That Give a Security and Permanency to the Home," by Mrs. Ben Egger.

"Why and In What Ways Are American Husbands The World's Best?" by Mrs. Henry Egger.

The contest prizes were awarded Mrs. Ben Egger and Mrs. Otho Calder. The club prize went to Mrs. Edgar Jones.

Mrs. Brown then served punch and cookies to nine club members, while Alvin and Calvin Brown entertained eleven children with games and refreshments.

The next meeting is scheduled for July 21 in the home of Mrs. Hery Egger at 2:30 p. m.

The Missionary Baptist revival held by Rev. Bedford Renfro, at Ridge, resulted in eleven conversions and additions to the church. The ordinance of baptism was held on July 2nd and 9th in a large reservoir on the Fairman Ranch, with Rev. Renfro and Rev. Louis Sparkman officiating. The work of Brother Don Norris, of Lamkin, as singer and pianist was greatly appreciated and helpful.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Brown, Alvin and Calvin, motored to Lometa Sunday and visited with Mr. Brown's parents and a sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner visited in the home of Mrs. Tom Dennis Sunday afternoon.

Preaching services at Ridge Saturday night and Sunday were held in the absence of Rev. Renfro, who is suffering from an infection caused by cutting his hand with a hatchet.

The Primitive Baptist Association will begin a meeting Thursday, July 13, in a grove just south of the Egger Brothers' store. Visitors are expected from all over the state.

The Regency Bridge is well under way, with portions of the spans already erected. This bridge has a beautiful location. The high, rocky bluff on the south is very picturesque when viewed from the north side.

MR. AND MRS. E. HOLCOMBE VISIT IN FORT WORTH

Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Holcombe spent Tuesday in Fort Worth visiting his mother, Mrs. B. P. Holcombe, and his brother, H. G. Holcombe, at 1129 Travis Avenue. They were married two weeks ago and now are making their home on a ranch near Goldthwaite. Mrs. Holcombe, before her marriage, was Miss Beulah Sauls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sauls, of Hamlin.

Holcombe is well known in ranch circles, as he was at one time a top hand on the SMS ranches, where he went to work as a youngster. His father, the late B. P. Holcombe, lived at Albany many years and he was sheriff of Shackelford County at one time.

Elmo Holcombe was one of a group of cowboys that went to South America to work on a ranch. During the World War he volunteered and was a sergeant in the Remount Service and was stationed near New York. At the close of the war he ranched a while in New Mexico and then returned to the SMS ranch and was straw boss for a while. He then went to the Rio Grande valley and was connected with the Texas Livestock Sanitary Commission as tick inspector.

Mrs. B. P. Holcombe gave her son as a wedding present a pair of andirons her father, Chesley Dobbs, had made at a blacksmith shop at old Fort Belknap more than 80 years ago. Dobbs later was killed by Indians.—Fort Star-Telegram.

WHITE COLLAR JOBS

Speaking in different cities at almost the same time, Dr. Homer P. Rainey, University of Texas' new president, and Dr. D. B. Harmon, mental health consultant of the Texas State Department of Health, discussed two phases of the same problem of modern education.

This is the inability of present day college graduates to find the white collar jobs to which they believe their diplomas entitle them.

Dr. Rainey, in an address to the student body at Austin, warned that 65 per cent of today's jobs require no vocational training of any sort; 20 to 25 per cent can be filled after technical training in short term courses.

"That means, briefly, that while we're requiring more and more education in preparation for jobs, the present working world is requiring finer and finer skills—but fewer and fewer people for anything except the routine, rapid work."

On the other hand, Dr. Harmon in a conservation lecture at North Texas State Teachers College placed the responsibility for present conditions at the door of American parents. It is the desire of ambitious parents to lift their children to a higher economic level than they themselves have enjoyed, and particularly to the "white-collar" class, that has caused parents force their children to conform to type and resulted in a standardized program of general education, Harmon said. General intelligence derived from such a program is a myth, he declared.

Formal education failed to produce insight and has been largely confined to giving mere accounts—ignoring the nature of individuals, their needs, and the processes going on within them that permit them to absorb and use knowledge, the speaker stated.

"Until we can produce in man an insight into the powers that science and technology have given him in controlling his environment and himself, and until we teach him to understand and use the gifts of science in advancing his own welfare and adding to his wealth and happiness, the half of the jobs we are now doing will, in the long run, be of little value," he declared.

Twisted bodies, thwarted, immature personalities—social wreckage which is the product of attempting "to fit square pegs in round holes"—are met every day in their consulting rooms by the physician, psychiatrist and neurologist, Harmon said.

Contentment, happiness, security and social progress can be obtained only by providing an educative process more in accord with the ends intended by nature, the psychologist said.

It is apparent from these statements of recognized authorities that better and more practical education rather than simply more education is the need of Texas youths today.

FAIR WARNING

The very difficulty which assailed all the attempts to pass SJR-12 in the House of Representatives at Austin by the required two-thirds majority is a serious warning that this is the wrong procedure.

Even its most zealous advocates cannot be sure that the tax measures included in it should be perpetuated indefinitely. But if SJR-12 should be incorporated in the Constitution of Texas, a minority of only 51 representatives or 11 senators could keep it there indefinitely, no matter how great a need

Colonel and Mrs. W. W. Carr and daughter, Mary Margaret, left Friday for Houston accompanied by her mother, Mrs. M. Y. Stokes. They will visit in the home of Mrs. Carr's sister, Mrs. J. T. Rather, Jr., a few days before Col. and Mrs. Carr and Mary Margaret leave for Charleston, W. Va., where they will sail for Panama.

Cloyd Sanders, local representative of the Fidelity Union Life Insurance Company, of Dallas has been notified by the company that he made a sufficient increase on business in force from April 1 to July 1 to qualify both he and Mrs. Sanders for the fishing trip to Port Aransas.

An outstanding achievement of Mr. Sanders' record was that he was the only salesman of the company who earned a trip for his wife in the contest. As Mrs. Sanders was the only lady to accompany the fishing party, the company offered them an optional trip two days and nights at the State Fair in Dallas with all expenses paid by the company.

Man's Greatest Weakness!

JAMES T. MANGAN, ace writer of inspirational copy, believes that laziness is man's greatest weakness. In his little book, "Push," published by The Black Cat Press of Chicago, he vigorously attacks the habit of laziness. He points out that almost all other negative qualities are due to laziness.

"Conquer laziness and you conquer fear," he writes. "It's easy to see that you can't be afraid, you can't worry, while you are busy doing other things. Conquer laziness and you conquer procrastination, for when you are keyed up to do all things and to do them promptly, you just can't bring yourself to put things off. A world of time is at your disposal and your life is released for the happy work of producing. Conquer laziness and your inferiority complex disappears overnight. The man who is full of action cares nothing for excusing himself, explaining his action, finding fault with others. The busy man is the happy man, the Superior man.

"Goodbye to fear, to sensitiveness, to worry, to inertia, to procrastination, to all inferior feeling, once you have conquered laziness. And when you bid laziness a final farewell, the world suddenly will discover you and say: 'Here is Somebody!'"

Hamilton

Progress in league boots has stepped off 3,932 miles of electric transmission lines over the area included in the rural electrification project under the Federal grant to the Hamilton County Co-operative Electric Association. In this gigantic improvement program, almost inconceivable by the ordinary citizen as yet, and the greater part of which improvement covers Hamilton County. V. A. Rogers, project superintendent, informs the Herald-Record that up to date 700 rural farm houses in the prescribed area are receiving satisfactory electrical service.

Irvin Loyd, who lives in the Ireland country, is a patient in the Hamilton sanitarium, suffering from injuries sustained in a car wreck on Wednesday night at about eight o'clock.

His car was completely demolished and Mr. Loyd has a broken right hip and many cuts and bruises about the body. A highlight of the season for the members of the Lions Club and their wives, was the delightful mid-summer "Ladies' Night" party in the attractive gardens of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Little, West Story Street, who generously provided the charming setting for the affair, Tuesday evening.

Included in the list of Texas postmasters nominated by President Roosevelt at Washington last Monday we note the name of William A. Smith, of San Saba, the present postmaster, who is completing his first term here. His nomination by the president is tantamount to confirmation. Under the new set-up a confirmation now for a postmaster of this class of office is equivalent to a life time job, it is generally believed.

Capt. Smith was editor and publisher of the San Saba News for more than thirty years and is probably one of the best known citizens of San Saba county.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Isham and baby and G. M. Fletcher, of Mullin, are leaving Sunday for a trip to the World's Fair in San Francisco. The Ishams will go to Washington from California and then back to Texas. They plan to stay about three weeks on their trip.

Mrs. J. W. Jones, who enjoyed a week's vacation from her duties at the Dickerson Variety Store last week, spent part of the time in Goldthwaite. — News.

Dedicating a new irrigation system in Navajo, Sonora, recently, President Cardenas gave his listeners a piece of advice which is food for thought on this side of the Rio Grande, as well. "Mexico," he told his hearers, "should forget political activities and think more about work."

They all stood up. There was a second's silence. Evans drank as if he partook of a sacrament.

Then Edith said, "It seems almost heartless to be happy, doesn't it, when things are so hard for her?"
Adelaide interposed irrelevantly,
"I should hate to spend Christmas
in Chicago."

There was no response, so she turned to Frederick. "Couldn't Miss Barnes leave her sister for a few days?"

"No," he told her, "she couldn't."
She persisted, "I am sure you didn't want her to miss the ball."

"I did my best to get her here.
Talked to her at long distance, but
she couldn't see it."

"You are so good-hearted, Ricky," Frederick could be cruel at moments, and her persistence was irritating. "Oh, look here, Adelaide, it wasn't entirely on her account. I want her here myself."

She sat motionless, her eyes on her plate. When she spoke again it was of other things. "Did you hear that Delafeld is coming back?"

"Who told you?"
"Eloise Harper. Benny's sister saw Del at Miami. She is sure he is expecting to marry the other girl."

"Bad taste, I call it."
"Everybody is crazy to know who
she is."

"Have they any idea?"
"No, Benny's sister said he talked quite frankly about getting married.
But he wouldn't say a word about
the woman."

"I hardly think he will find Edith heart-broken." Towne glanced across the table. Edith was not wearing the willow. No shadow marred her lovely countenance. Her eyes were clear and shining pools
of sweet content.

Her uncle was proud of that high-head. He and Edith might not always hit it off. But, by Jove, he was proud of her.

"No, she's not heart-broken," Ad-
elaid's cool tone disturbed his reflections, "she is getting her heart mended."

"What do you mean?"
"They are an attractive pair, little Jane and her brother. And the boy has lost his head."

"Over Edith? Oh, well, she plays around with him; there's nothing serious in it."

"Don't be too sure. She's interested."

"What makes you insist on that?"
irritably.
"I know the signs, dear man," the cat seemed to purr, but she had claws.

And it was Adelaide who was right. Edith had come to the knowledge that night of what Baldy meant to her.

As she had entered the ballroom
men had crowded around her.
"Why," they demanded, "do you wear mistletoe, if you don't want to pay the forfeit?"

Backed up against one of the marble pillars, she held them off. "I do want to pay it, but not to any of you."

Her frankness diverted them.
"Who is the lucky man?"
"He is here. But he doesn't know he is lucky."

They thought she was joking. But she was not. And on the other side of the marble pillar a page in scarlet listened, with joy and fear in his heart. "How fast we are going.
How fast."

There was dancing until midnight,
then the curtains at the end of the room were drawn back, and the tree was revealed. It towered to the ceiling, a glittering, gorgeous thing. It was weighted with gifts for everybody, fantastic toys most of them, expensive, meaningless.

Evans, standing back of the crowd, was aware of the emptiness of it all. Oh, what had there been throughout the evening to make him think of the Babe who had been born at Bethlehem?

The gifts of the Wise Men? Perhaps. Gold and frankincense and myrrh? One must not judge too narrowly. It was hard to keep simplicity in these opulent days.

Yet he was heavy-hearted, and when Eloise Harper charged up to him, dressed somewhat scantily as a dandy, and handed him a foolish monkey on a stick, she seemed to suggest a heathen saturnalia rather than anything Christian and civilized.

"A monkey for a monk," said Eloise. "Mr. Follette, your cassock is frightfully becoming. But you know you are a whitened sepulchre."
"Am I?"
"Of course. I'll bet you never say your prayers."

She danced away, unconscious
that her words had pierced him.
What reason had she to think that any of this meant more to him than it did to her? Had he borne witness to the faith that was within him?
And was it within him? And if not,
why?

He stood there with his foolish monkey on his stick, while around him whirled a laughing, shrieking crowd. Why, the thing was a carnival, not a sacred celebration. Was there no way in which he might bear witness?

Edith had asked him to sing the old ballads, "Dame, get up and bake your pies," and "I saw three ships a-sailing." Evans was in no mood for the dame who baked her pies on Christmas day in the morning, or the pretty girls who whistled and sang on Christmas day in the morning.

When all the gifts had been distributed the lights in the room were turned out. The only illumination

'was the golden effulgence which encircled the tree.

In his monk's robe, within that circle of light, Evans seemed a mystical figure. He seemed, too, appropriately ascetic, with his gray hair,
the weary lines of his old-young
face.

But his voice was fresh and clear.
And the song he sang hushed the great room into silence.

"O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie,
Above thy deep and dreamless
sleep,
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth,
The everlasting light,
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight."

He sang as if he were alone in some vast arched space, beneath spires that reached towards Heaven,
behind some grille that separated
him from the world.

And now it seemed to him that he sang not to that crowd of upturned faces, not to those men and women in shining silks and satins, not to Jane who was far away, but to those others who pressed close—his comrades across the Great Divide!

So he had sung to them in the hospital, sitting up in his narrow bed—and most of the men who had listened were—gone.

As the last words rang out his audience seemed to wake with a sigh.

Then the lights went up. But the monk had vanished!

Evans left word with Baldy that he would go home on the trolley. "I am not quite up to the supper and all that. Will you look after Mother-
?"

"Of course. Say, Evans, that song was top notch. Edith wants you to sing another."

"Will you tell her I can't? I'm sorry. But the last time I sang that was for the fellows—in France.
And it got me—"

"It got me, too," Baldy confided;
"made all this seem—silly."

It was just before New Year's that Lucy Logan brought a letter for Frederick Towne to sign, and when he had finished she said, "Mr.
Towne, I'm sorry, but I'm not going to work any more. So will you please accept my resignation?"

He showed his surprise. "What's the matter? Aren't we good enough for you?"

"It isn't that," She stopped and went on, "I'm going to be married, Mr. Towne."

"Married?" He was at once congratulatory. "That's a pleasant
thing for you, and I mustn't spoil it
by telling you how hard it is going to be to find someone to take your place."

"I think if you will have Miss Dale? She's really very good."
Frederick was curious. What kind of lover had won this quiet Lucy?
Probably some clerk or salesman.
"What about the man? Nice fellow,
I hope—"

"Very nice, Mr. Towne," she flushed, and her manner seemed to forbid further questioning. She went away, and he gave orders to the cashier to see that she had an increase in the amount of her final check. "She will need some pretty things. And when we learn the date
we can give her a present."

So on Saturday night Lucy left,
and on the following Monday a card
was brought up to Edith Towne.

She read it. "Lucy Logan? I don't believe I know her," she said
to the maid.

"She says she is from Mr.
Towne's office, and that it is important."

"Miss Towne," Lucy said as Edith approached her, "I have resigned from your uncle's office. Did he tell you?"

"No, Uncle Fred rarely speaks about business."

With characteristic straightforwardness Lucy came at once to the point. "I have something I must talk over with you. I don't know whether I am doing the wise thing.
But it is the only honest thing."

"I can't imagine what you can have to say."

"No you can't. It's this—" she hesitated, then spoke with an effort. "I am the girl Mr. Simms is in love with. He wants to come back and marry me."

Edith's fingers caught at the arm of the chair. "Do you mean that it was because of you—that he didn't marry me?"

"Yes. He used to come to the office when he was in Washington and dictate letters. And we got in the way of talking to each other. He seemed to enjoy it, and he wasn't like some men—who are just—silly."

And I began to think about him a lot. But I didn't let him see it. And—he told me afterward, he was always thinking of me. And the morning of your wedding day he came down to the office—to say "Good-by."
He said he—just had to. And—well, he let it out that he loved me, and didn't want to marry you. But he said he would have to go on with it.
And—and I told him he must not,
Miss Towne."

Edith stared at her. "Do you mean that what he did was your fault?"

"Yes," Lucy's face was white, "if you want to put it that way. I told him he hadn't any right to marry
you if he loved me." She hesitated, then lifted her eyes to Edith's with a glance of appeal. "Miss Towne, I wonder if you are big enough to believe that it was just because I loved so much—and not because of big money?"

"You think you love him?" she demanded.

"I know I do. And you don't. You never have. And he didn't love you.
Why—if he should lose every cent tomorrow, and I had to tramp the road with him, I'd do it gladly.
And you wouldn't. You wouldn't want him unless he could give you everything you have now, would you? Would you, Miss Towne?"

Edith's sense of justice dictated her answer. "No," she found herself unexpectedly admitting. "If I had to tramp the roads with him, I'd be bored to death."

"I think he knew that, Miss Towne. He told me that if he didn't marry you, your heart wouldn't be broken. That it would just hurt your pride."

Edith had a moment of hysterical mirth. How they had talked her over. Her lover—and her uncle's stenographer! What a tragedy it had been! And what a comedy!

She leaned forward a little, locking her fingers about her knees. "I wish you'd tell me all about it."

So Lucy told the simple story.
And in telling it showed herself so naive, so steadfast, that Edith was aware of an increasing respect for the woman who had taken her place in the heart of her lover. She perceived that Lucy had come to this interview in no spirit of triumph.
She had dreaded it, but had felt it
her duty. "I thought it would be easier for you if you knew it before other people did."

Edith's forehead was knitted in a slight frown. "The whole thing was the most unpleasant," she said.
"When are you going to marry
him?"

"I told him on St. Valentine's day. It seemed—romantic." Romance and Del! Edith had a sudden illumination. Why this was what he had wanted, and she had given him none of it! She had laughed at him—been his good comrade. Little Lucy adored him—and had set St. Valentine's day for the wedding!

There was nothing small about Edith Towne. She knew fineness when she saw it, and she had a feeling of humility in the presence of little Lucy. "I think it was my fault as much as Del's," she stated.
"I should never have said 'Yes.'
People haven't any right to marry
who feel as we did."

"Oh," Lucy said rapturously,
"how dear of you to say that. Miss Towne, I always knew you were—
big. But I didn't dream you were so beautiful." Tears wet her cheeks.
"You're just—marvellous," she said, wiping them away.

"No, I'm not." Edith's eyes were on the fire. "Normally, I am rather proud and—haughty. If you had come a week ago—" Her voice fell away into silence as she still stared at the fire.

Lucy looked at her curiously. "A week ago?"

Edith nodded. "Do you like fairy tales? Well, once there was a princess. And a page came and sang—under her window." The fire purred and crackled. "And the princess—liked the song—"

"Oh," said Lucy, under her breath.

She stood up. "I can't tell you how thankful I am that I came."

"You're not going to run away
yet?" Edith told her. "I want you to have lunch with me. Upstairs.
You must tell me all your plans."

"I haven't many. And I really oughtn't to stay."
"Why not? I want you. Please don't say no."

So up they went, with the perturbed parlor maid speaking through the tube to the pantry.
"Miss Towne wants luncheon for two, Mr. Waldron. In her room.
Something nice, she says, and plenty of it."

Little Lucy had never seen such a room as the one to which Edith led her. The whole house was, indeed, a dream palace. Yet it was the atmosphere with which her lover would soon surround her. She had a feeling almost of panic. What would she do with a maid like Alice,
who was helping Josephine set up
the folding-table, spread the snowy cloth, bring in the hot silver dishes?

As if Edith divined her thought,
she said when the maids had left,
"Lucy, will you let me advise?"
"Of course, Miss Towne."
"Don't try to be—like the rest of
us. Like Del's own crowd, I mean.
He fell in love with you because you were different. He will want you to stay—different."
"But I shall have so much to learn."

Edith was impatient. "What must you learn? Externals? Let them alone. Be yourself. You have dignity—and strength. It was the strength in you that won Del. You and he can have a life together that will make a great deal. If you will make him go your way. But you must not go his—"

Lucy considered that. "You mean that the crowd he is with weakens
him?"
"I mean just that. They're sophisticated beyond words. You're what they would call—provincial.
Oh, be provincial, Lucy. Don't be afraid. But don't adopt their ways.
You go to church, don't you? Say your prayers? Believe that God's in His world?"

Lucy's fair cheeks were flushed.
"Why, of course I do."
"Well, we don't—not many of us,"
said Edith. "The thing you have got to do is to interest Del in something. Don't just go sailing away with him in his yacht. Buy a farm over in Virginia, and help him make a success of it."

"But he lives in New York."

"Of course he does. But he can live anywhere. He's so rich that he doesn't have to earn anything, and his office is just a fiction. You must make him work. Go in for a fad; blooded horses, cows, black Berkshires. Do you know what a black Berkshire is, Lucy?"
"No, I don't."
"Well, it's a kind of a pig. And
that's the thing for you and Del.
He really loves fine stock. And you and he—think of it—riding over the country—planning your gardens—having a baby or two." Edith was going very fast.

"It sounds heavenly," said Lucy.
"Then make it Heaven. Oh, Lucy, Lucy, you lucky girl—you are going to marry the man you love. Live away from the world—share happiness and unhappiness—" She rose from the table restlessly, pushing back her chair, dropping her napkin on the floor. "Do you know how I envy you?"

She went to the window and stood looking out. "And here I sit, day after day, like a prisoner in a tower
—and my page sings—that was the beginning of it—and it will be the end."

"No," Lucy was very serious,
"you mustn't let it be the end. You
—you must open the window, Miss Towne."

Edith came back to the table.
"Open the window?" Her breath came fast. "Open the window. Oh, Lucy, Lucy, how wise you are..."

When Lucy had gone, Alice came in and dressed Edith's hair. She found her lady thoughtful. "Alice,
what did they do with my wedding clothes?"

"We put them all in the second guest-suite," she said; "some of them we left packed in the trunks
just as they were, and some of them are hung on racks."
"Where is the wedding dress?"
"In a closet in a white linen bag."
"Well, finish my hair and we will go and look at it."

As they entered it, the second guest-suite was heavy with the scent
of orange blooms. "How dreadful, Alice," Edith ejaculated. "Why didn't you throw the flowers away?"
"Miss Annabel wouldn't let me.
She said you might not want things touched."
"Silly sentimentality," Edith was impatient.

The room was in all the gloom of drawn curtains. The dresses hung on racks, and, encased in white bags, gave a ghostly effect. "They are like rows of tombstones, Alice."
"Yes, Miss Towne," said Alice, dutifully.

The maid brought out the wedding dress and laid it on the bed.
Edith, surveying it, was stung by
the memory of the emotions which had swayed her when she had last worn it. It had seemed to mock
her. She had seen her own tense countenance in the mirror, as she had controlled herself before Alice.
Then, when the maid had left, she had thrown herself on the bed, and had writhed in an agony of humiliation.

And now all her anger was gone.
She didn't hate Del. She didn't hate Lucy. She even thought of Uncle Fred with charity. And the wedding gown was, after all, a robe for a princess who married a king. Not a robe for a princess who loved a page. A tender smile softened her face.

"Alice," she said, suddenly,
"wasn't there a little helleprouse
dinner frock among my trousseau things?"
"Yes, Miss Towne. Informal." Allice hunted in the third row of tombstones until she found it.
"I want long sleeves put in it.
Will you tell Harding, and have him send a hat to match?"
"Yes, Miss Towne."

The helleprouse frock had simple and lovely lines. It floated in sheer beauty from the maid's hands as she held it up. "There isn't a prettier one in the whole lot, Miss Edith."

Edith, having dispatched the box
with a charming note to Lucy Logan, had a feeling of ecstatic freedom. All the hurt and humiliation of the bridal episode had departed.
She didn't care what the world thought of her. Her desertion by Del had been material for a day's gossip—then other things had filled the papers, had been headlined and emphasized. And what difference did it all make?

ANSWERS

TO QUESTIONS ON PAGE SIX

1. Milk in one form or another comprises over 25 per cent.

2. In the U. S. — wages from an hour's work will buy 5.3 quarts of milk; in France—3.5; Germany—3.3; Great Britain—1.8; Russia—1.0.

3. Calcium Milk also contains liberal quantities of Vitamin A and phosphorus; smaller amounts of iron. Carotene is the pigment giving milk its yellow color.

4. A train nearly 17,000 miles long. Over two million tank cars would be required to haul the 50 billion quarts.

5. From the discoveries of the French scientist, Louis Pasteur.
The process includes heating milk to not lower than 142 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes and promptly cooling to 50 degrees or lower to "destroy any harmful bacteria."

6. The United States has the best fluid milk distributing system in the world. Economical, efficient delivery, stringent health regulations, rigid inspection, meticulous sanitation, pasteurization having made it the world's best.

7. 30 million bottles.

8. It would take 8 cents postage for delivery alone. Your local dairy—for just a few pennies
more—supplies the milk pasteurized, refrigerated and bottled;
delivers it to your door and picks
up the empty bottles.

9. Milk is the largest single source of farm cash, totaling $1,430,000,000 for 1938.

10. In 1938, dairy farmers received 43 per cent of the consumer price of manufactured dairy products, according to the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, exceeded by only 5 other commodities.

11. It is estimated that one out of every 15 families is dependent on the dairy industry
for a livelihood.

12. In order of importance:
Wisconsin, Minnesota, New York,
Iowa, Pennsylvania, Texas, California, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

13. Casein wool, belt buckles, buttons, fountain pen barrels,
radio knobs, combs, knitting
needles, glazed papers.

14. It takes 10½ quarts of milk to make a pound of butter, 4½ quarts for a pound of cheese.

15. Nearly 32 per cent of the total milk is used for butter, over 29 per cent as fluid milk and cream in cities and villages, 12
per cent on farms for fluid use, 10.5 per cent for farm butter, 5.9 per cent for cheese, 4.3 per cent for canned milk, 2.3 per cent for ice cream, remainder miscellaneous.

16. The United States, with 153 quarts per person, ranks 2nd;
Switzerland 1st—232; Great Britain, France, Germany, 3rd—92 each.

Wax Vegetables?

College Station.—Just as waxing floors protects them from deterioration and blemishes, waxing vegetables produces similar results.

One method is the use of a cold
wax emulsion applied by dipping
carrots, beets, squash, cucumbers,
tomatoes, eggplants, peppers,
and many other vegetables now plentiful in Texas.

On drying, a very thin film,
one-thousandth of an inch thick,
is left on the vegetable. Despite the thinness of this coating, it is effective in reducing water losses and shriveling. The wax is tasteless and harmless, and it may be removed with warm water.

Experiments reveal that waxed vegetables may be kept from two to three times as long as the un-
waxed ones before they show signs

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking our many known and unknown friends of Mills county for their generous help after the loss of our home and most of its contents by fire July 7th, and especially do we thank L. FANCY EGGS BRING FANCY PRICES

The Poultryman who is producing fancy eggs is really "Going to Town" right now. You can produce these fancy eggs just as easy and at NO ADDITIONAL COST. But LOW GRADE FEED WILL NOT PRODUCE HIGH GRADE EGGS. MID-TEX Feed does not contain either cottonseed meal or peanut meal—and will produce the very highest quality eggs. You had better look on the tag on the sack and see just what the feed you are using contains.

MID-TEX EGG MASH is guaranteed NOT to produce DARK YOLKS as some cheap feeds produce. Put your hens on MID-TEX and note the greater number of fancy eggs you will have.

Bring us your POULTRY, EGGS, and CREAM. We appreciate your patronage.

Pleasant Grove H. D. Club Meets

"The length of time vegetables should be cooked depends upon their freshness, the forms in which they are cooked and the temperature at which they are kept while cooking," said Miss Emma Scott at the Pleasant Grove H. D. Club, which met in the home of Mrs. L. O. Kelley on Tuesday, July 18th.

We had a very interesting program on vegetable cookery, and then Miss Scott prepared some vegetables.

The club members present were Mrs. Oran W. Caruthers, Mrs. A. C. Miller, Mrs. R. C. Berry, Mrs. M. D. Crawford, Miss Ruby D. Berry, Mrs. A. D. Robbins, Mrs. W. T. Moreland, Mrs. S. S. Benningfield, Mrs. L. O. Kelley, and Mrs. O. Z. Berry.

Visitors were Mrs. Harriet Cloud, Miss Novaleen Berry and Mrs. Charlie Perry.

Our next meeting will be with Mrs. W. T. Moreland on Tuesday, August 8th.

area. The Authority plans to sell on a wholesale basis only.

Properties involved in the 16 county area agreement are located in San Saba, Lampasas, Burnet, Llano, Kerr, Blanco, Hays, Guadalupe, Caldwell, Travis, Bastrop, Lee, Washington, Austin, Fayette and Colorado counties.

The 16 area transaction and the power sale contracts, it was pointed out, will put to the highest use all of the power which may be generated from the Authority's hydro-electric plants—Buchanan, Inks, Marshall Ford and Austin dams—, and, at the same time, will permit the Authority to divert the maximum of its storage capacity, consistent with its financial obligations to the control of floods and to water conservation.

Star H. D. Club News

The last meeting was at the home of Mrs. Vada Guice. Only seven or eight members were present, but there were varied and interesting discussions.

Among the highlights of the afternoon was the report of Miss Vela Stephan of her trip to A. and M. She made us feel like we, too, had almost been there, minus the expense and worry of the trip.

It was decided to have the club picnic the third Thursday in August. All members take notice and be on hand promptly at sundown at the tabernacle with ice cream and cookies, along with the men folks and the kiddies.

The first meeting in September will be with Mrs. Oleta Wall, Miss Scott being with us.

Waffle Supper

One of the most delightful affairs of the season was the waffle supper given in honor of the bride-elect, Evelyn Gartman by Virginia and Clara Bowman.

The rooms were gaily decorated with colorful, informal garden flowers with the color scheme of yellow and green predominating.

The delicious waffle supper was served buffet style, to the following:

Misses Evelyn Gartman, Lillian Summy, Beatrice Bledsoe, Louise Goosby, Gertrude Johnson, Charlie Brim, Alieene Dickerson.
