Best Bale of Cotton Brings $63.25 Thursday

Alfred Tischler Wins Premium

Albert Tischler brought in Mills county's first bale of cotton Thursday morning and J. E. Greathouse ginned it and bought it for 9c.

The bale weighed 500 pounds. The following premium was paid by citizens.

Long & Berry, $1.00; Ware's Bakery, 50c; Piggly Wiggly, $1.00; Kelly Saylor, 50c; Western Produce Co., 25c; Randolph's, 50c; Urbach, 25c; Farmers & Rancher's Supply House, $1.00; Bill Richard, 25c; Economy Store, 50c; Hudson Bros., 50c; Little's, $1.00; Dickerson Grocery, 50c; Clements Drug, 50c; H. C. Davis Variety Store, 50c; Brim Grocery, $1.00; Yarborough's, $1.00; Lewis Gartman, 50c; Hugh Moreland, 25c; Barnes & McCullough, $1.00; Louis Porter, 25c; Raymond Bledsoe, 50c; Steen & Son, 50c; J. W. Weatherby, 50c; Fairman Co., $2.50; Goldthwaite Eagle, one year subscription, $1.50.

Thanksgiving To Be Sooner

CAMPOBELLO ISLAND, New Brunswick.—President Roosevelt is going to move Thanksgiving Day up a week this year, he said at a press conference Monday at his mother's summer home.

O'Daniel Doubles
Governor W. Lee O'Daniel said that if President Roosevelt advanced the date for Thanksgiving day he would proclaim two days of Thanksgiving in Texas this year, one November 23 and the other November 30.

Marwitz and Hill Elected By REA

Walter Marwitz of Priddy and Willis Hill of Goldthwaite were elected directors of the Hamilton County Electric Co-operative Association at the annual meeting in Hamilton Saturday.

A complete account of the meeting will appear in next week's Eagle.

Baptist Jubilee

A Baptist Brotherhood Jubilee will be held at Lake Brownwood Dam, 8 miles from Brownwood on August 28 and 29.

Watch for the program in this paper next week.

Work to Start Soon On Bridge

Cage Brothers and L. A. Turner, contractors will start work today, Aug. 18, building a $189,000 bridge across the Colorado river on U. S. Highway 190, 10 miles east of San Saba.

Contract calls for 250 working days. There will be three continuous cantilever spans, two of 180 feet and one of 140 feet in length.

Methodist Church

FRED J. BRUCKS, Pastor

The first service of the meeting being conducted at the Methodist Church by Dr. H. G. Cooke, District Superintendent, Llano District, was held Wednesday night with a good congregation, despite the threatening weather.

Ero. Cooke brought a wonderful and very timely message on, "Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord."

Intense interest was manifested as Dr. Cooke always holds the attention of his hearers. Bunny Cooke is directing the choir and sang a pleasing solo.

Revival services at 9:30 a. m. on week days and 8:00 p. m. in the evening.

Evening services outdoors when weather permits

Regular services Sunday: Church School, 9:30 a. m. Morning Worship, 10:30 a. m. Leagues, 7:00 p. m. Evening Service, 8:00 p. m.

How To Select Long-Lived Hose

College Station.—Hose with extraordinarily long lives are not just "happen-so's." There's a reason behind their durability, says Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, specialist in clothing for the A&M College Extension Service.

Mrs. Barnes points out that most hose wear out because the weight selected is not suitable for the use of the hose, or because they are neither appropriate to the occasion nor to the shoes with which they are worn. Poor fit in hosiery often results in breaks or runs.

"Two-thread," "three-thread," or "four thread" means the number of fiber strands twisted or laid together to make one yarn. Crepe hose are manufactured from yarn that has been highly twisted, and this makes them more resistant to snags, Mrs. Barnes says. She points out also that four- and five-thread hose give better general service than two- and three-thread, the latter being more appropriate for dress and evening wear. Snags occur where there are open places to catch, due to too few stitches and too few courses. In hose, course are the round-and-round rows of knitting that show on the wrong side, the specialist explains.

For unusually long life, stockings need reinforcement where the shoe rubs and in the welt or garter top. Especially valuable, Mrs. Barnes adds, is a two-way stretch and a run stop in the garter top of the stocking.

Texas Black Gold Ceases to Flow

Black gold ceased to flow in Texas Tuesday. Operators of the state's 87,000 oil wells turned off the flow of crude at 7 a. m. on orders of the Texas Railroad Commission to shut off production for 15 days.

Texas produces 40 per cent of the nation's crude supply.

The commission's action was in protest against a 20 cents per barrel reduction instituted last week by most major buyers.

Texas railroad commissioners who ordered the 15-day closing of Texas oil wells made these comments:

Commission Chairman Lon A. Smith: "Ninety-nine per cent of the people are back of the order. Some wanted 30 to 90 days shut-downs.

Col. Ernest O. Thompson: "We took the lead. We expect other oil states to follow. If they do not we will stay shut-down anyhow."

Jerry Sadler: "The railroad commission will not be dictated to by Wall Street."

Brim's Store Improvements

Mrs. Jane Brim Hamilton is having some very convenient and attractive improvements made in her grocery store. She is having the floor space enlarged and is also enlarging and adding new fixtures to the market department and redecorating generally.

THE EAGLE LOSES FINE NEIGHBOR

The Eagle was indeed sorry to lose such a fine neighbor as D. Hartman, who closed his business establishment next door to The Eagle office last week. We hope he will soon engage in business here again, as the town needs such citizens as Mr. Hartman and family.

Dr. Truett To Fill Old Date

BAPTIST LEADER INVITED YEARS AGO TO PREACH ON BLOYS GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Fort Davis, August 12th.—The golden anniversary of the Bloys Camp Meeting Association—the cowboy camp meeting of the Davis Mountains—will be preached next Wednesday at 11 a. m., by Dr. George W. Truett, Dallas, Baptist, on the invitation, given many years ago, of a rugged old cattle ranchman who will not hear it because he died two years ago.

The man giving the invitation was John Z. Means. It is said he once controlled 1,000 square miles of West Texas grazing land. It was at his remote ranch house in Jeff Davis County in August, 1889, that there was a preaching service at which it was decided to hold a "cowboy camp meeting" in October. And it was from the October meeting that the Bloys association has grown on the spot where the original gathering was held.

Last year the association members renewed the old-time invitation for Dr. Truett to be the guest speaker this year. He is scheduled also to preach the opening service of this year's fiftieth gathering, next Tuesday night. Dr. Truett was the Baptist preacher at the meeting for years.

In addition to the tabernacle being enlarged this Spring to 72x90 feet, two cottages have been built by Tyrrel E. Smith, one by Jack McCutcheon, and one by A. R. Eppenauer, who stepped from the oil field industry to ownership of the Fowkes and Fisher ranches in the Davis mountains. — Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

More Street Paving To Start Soon

Arrangements are being made by the city to pave six more blocks. Probably the first will be on Fourth street, east from Fisher street. Since the state highway department paved the center of this street, when the cut-off to Highway 84 was constructed, it will only be necessary for the city to pave the strips along the sides.

Mills County 4-H Boy On Educational Tour

Billie Cooksey, Mullin, returned Tuesday from a 12-day educational tour through New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. The party was made up of 23 4-H boys and five county agents, representing the 19 counties of Extension District No. 7.

Boys having done outstanding club work the preceding year are eligible for this tour. A tour will be offered every year.

It will be remembered that Billie Cooksey made an unchallenged record with his lamb feeding project last year. He started two orphan lambs on a bottle and the proceeds of the sale and prize money amounted to $35.00. His net profit was more than $20. Billie hung up a record that will be hard to beat and richly deserves the trip.

The county agents in charge of the tour were: C. V. Robinson, Coleman; Sam Rosenberg, Eastland; J. A. Barton, Ballinger; Ross Jenkins, Blanco; C. E. Tisdale, San Saba.

W. P. WEAVER, County Agent.

Stacy Reunion

Morgan Stacy, Mrs. Borthel Roberts and baby, went to Coleman Saturday to be present at a two-day reunion of the Stacy family.

Mrs. Stacy and Wayne Featherston left Sunday morning on the early train to join the crowd. There were 160 relatives present.

A most delicious dinner was spread at the noon hour in Coleman Park and after dinner the younger set went swimming and the older ones enjoyed visiting together.

G. A. House Party

Each year, G. A.'s from District 16 meet in Brownwood in the Howard Payne College dormitory for a houseparty.

Those attending from the Goldthwaite G. A. were sponsor, Beatrice Bledsoe and the following girls: Mary Ann Miller, Mary Henry, Patsy Shaw, Evelyn Burns, Billie Louise May, and Frances Lang.

The theme this year being "Queenly Guests."

We are looking forward to the House Party next year and hope to have more to go next year.—Sponsor.

First Baptist Church

E. E. DAWSON, Pastor
Next Sunday morning the regular schedule of services will be held, beginning with the Sunday school at 10:00 and followed by the worship service at 11 o'clock. There will be no evening service out of deference to our Methodist brethren's revival. It is sincerely hoped that large crowds will attend that revival.

Ratler Revival Going.
Our revival at Ratler will run through Sunday afternoon next. There will be the morning service at 11:00 and then dinner on the ground and an afternoon service at 2:00 o'clock, at which time the revival will close. Every body is invited.

Revival Planned at Pecan Wells
A revival will begin at Pecan Wells next Sunday, August 20. The first service will be at 11:00 o'clock Sunday morning. Then at 8:00 in the evening another service, and then through all the following week. Everybody is invited.

M. C. Burton Now General Freight Agent of G. C. & S. F.

GALVESTON.—The promotion of M. C. Burton, General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Panhandle and Santa Fe Railway, Amarillo, to General Freight Agent of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railway, with headquarters in Galveston, was announced today by Paul P. Hastings, Vice-President in charge of traffic of the Santa Fe System Lines. Elmer B. Jackson, Assistant General Freight Agent for the Coast Lines in Northern California, was appointed to succeed Burton. Both changes are effective September 1.

Burton has been actively identified with railway traffic and development in the Southwest for more than thirty years. He moved to Amarillo in 1936 when he was appointed General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Panhandle and Santa Fe.

GENERAL FREIGHT AGENT

M. C. BURTON

succeeding Tom B. Gallaheer, who is now Passenger Traffic Manager of the Santa Fe System Lines at Chicago.

His outstanding activity in rail way exploitation resulted in his appointment as Secretary-Treasurer of the American Railway Development Association, in which position he served three years, and he also served one year as President of the organization.

In addition to manifold duties as a railway executive, he has devoted considerable time and effort in the development of civic affairs, not only in Amarillo but numerous other points served by the Santa Fe. As one of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce officials he aided in sponsoring many projects which benefitted the Panhandle-Plains area.

Burton came to the P&Sf territory from Topeka, Kansas, in 1936, where he had served as General Industrial Agent since 1922. He was born in Cloud county, Kansas, and entered Santa Fe service in 1901, subsequently serving as Traveling Freight Agent, General Agent, and Division Freight Agent.

In assuming the new position at Galveston, Burton succeeds J. S. Hershey, who is retiring voluntarily.

Burton is married and has three sons.

Cemetery Working

Thursday, August 24th, will be the day to meet at the Mohler Cemetery and clean off the grounds.

Everyone interested take notice and come prepared with tools and a basket dinner.

Revival Begins

Rev. J. C. Weathers will begin an old fashioned brush arbor meeting at Center City Friday night, August 18th. The public is cordially invited to attend all services. Night services will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

4-H Girls Project

Throughout the summer the 4-H girls have been busy carrying on their project. Last week club members were busy selecting one of the following projects: Bush Fruits, Green Beans, and Tomato Gardens, and our production. Some very good work has been completed.

The Mt. Olive club served 45 con tomato juice. The club used 45 con tomatoes that were processed in the bath. Maudine club has 36 quarts of tomato produce. The club has conserved 36 quarts of tomato juice. The club has conserved 36 quarts of tomato juice.

The Center club gathered five quarts of tomato juice. The club has conserved 36 quarts of tomato juice. The club has conserved 36 quarts of tomato juice.

Accidents

A driver for Coleman, was injured and his truck was damaged when he struck a small coupe driven by a young man just south of town.

While driving into Goldthwaite, a car was about to turn when the accident occurred. The driver was injured and the car was damaged.

More Farm Ponds Urged For Texas

College Station, August 17. — In addition to supplying needed water for livestock, properly managed farm ponds often afford a home for wildlife which otherwise could not exist, according to R. E. Callender, game management specialist for the A. and M. College Extension Service.

In portions of Texas where streams and natural lakes are few, protected water vegetation feeds and provides cover for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife of economic value. Some farmers and ranchers cooperating with the Extension Service in game preserve demonstrations report mallards, blue-winged teal, pin-tails, and ruddies nesting and rearing their young on small ponds constructed in Northwest Texas.

Muskrats also often become established, and Texas cooperators frequently report supplementing their annual farm incomes with sales of muskrat pelts.

At least a part of the pond must be fenced so that livestock will not trample out the aquatic plants. Some cooperators fence a narrow lane down to the water, and others fence the entire area and pipe the stock water through the dam. Experts in the United States Department of Agriculture recommend to cooperators that they build ponds at least one to two miles apart, so that concentration of livestock will not cause overgrazing about the watering places.

Texas Farmers Now Bug-Hunters

College Station, August 17th—Texas farmers are rapidly earning the title of "bug-hunters"—the old term humorously applied to entomologists.

Cameron Siddall, assistant entomologist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension Service, who held 69 "bug-hunting" meetings with cotton farmers during the first six months of 1939, says around 100 such meetings will be held before the end of the cotton season.

The primary purpose of the meetings is not to persuade the farmer to use control measures, but rather to help him recognize conditions that warrant spending money on insect control, such as learning to identify the nymph and adult flea hopper, to tell the feeding puncture of the boll weevil from the sealed over puncture where an egg has been deposited, and to make infestation counts.

Meat Adulteration To Be Curtailed

Austin, Texas, Aug. 17—At a meeting held by the State Department of Health with the meat packers of Texas to discuss new rules and regulations governing the preparation of meat and meat products, the rules adopted met with the approval of those present. Briefly the rules are:

Meat, meat by-products or prepared meats shall not contain cereal, vegetable starch or vegetable flour, individually or collectively in excess of three and one-half per cent.

To facilitate grinding, chopping and mixing not more than 3 per cent of water or ice may be added to sausage. These meats or meat by-products shall not contain any artificial coloring nor any quantity of soy bean flour or any other product of the soy bean.

Milk, skimmed milk, dried milk, dried skimmed milk, malted milk and analogous substances and products which may be approved for such purpose by the Federal Department of Agriculture, may be added to meat, meat by-products, prepared meats and meat food products, provided their use does not result in added water or moisture in excess of 3.5 per cent. Meat, meat by-products, prepared meats and meat food products shall not contain dried milk, dried skimmed milk, malted milk, or other dehydrated milk product, in excess of 3.5 per cent, and if cereal, vegetable starch or vegetable flour is added, the combined amount of cereal, vegetable starch, vegetable flour and dehydrated milk product shall not exceed 3.5 per cent. Meat, meat by-products, prepared meats and meat food products shall not contain any quantity of artificial color.

These regulations were prepared by the State Department of Health in order to protect the consuming public against adulteration and to assure their getting a 99.5 per cent pure product when making purchases of ground meat.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THE professor that was visiting with some of his friends, in San Francisco, was kinda proud of himself, when the little girl asked him what kind of work he did, he said, "Why, I'm a geologist."

"That's funny," she says, "because I'd like to know what a geologist does for a living."
"Oh, I just carry a little hammer around with me and use it to track open rocks."
"Now I know," says the kid. "I got an uncle that's a geologist. He got that way for killing a man. He'll be out in five years."

No moving parts in its freezing system— that's the reason behind a record like this. But there are Servel Electrolux refrigerators—plenty of them—in West Texas 10 to 12 years old. Still making ice cubes, keeping the baby's milk safe, saving leftovers, just as efficiently as the first month. And at the same cost. And remember, Servel Electrolux is the only automatic refrigerator with no-moving parts to wear, to get noisy, to lose efficiency, and to run up repair and service bills.

James E. Brewer, jeweler of Ballinger, Texas, has had a Servel Electrolux in the kitchen of his home for more than ten years, and he says, "We never spent one cent for service or repairs. It gives as good service as the day we installed it."

But say... a Servel Electrolux will make you the heroine of your home, when the savings begin to pile up. How the food keeps! Says C. Hines, Leuders, Texas, "The food we save, which we wasted before we bought a Servel Electrolux, almost made the payments." Vegetables seem fresher after a little while in the vegetable freshener than they were at the store. Leftovers keep until you can work them off. You can save plenty on Saturday specials. The fact is, you pay for one, anyhow; why not own it? Maybe you don't know what easy payments we can arrange for you. Why not come in and find out—or phone us, and we will come and see you.

Yes, one woman was forced to this, as a last resort. Only way she could get friend husband to agree to trade off that old jalopy in the kitchen for a new Servel Electrolux (the silent gas refrigerator). But friend husband led the cheers after that. Like any man, he could eat a quart of ice cream at a time, and in her new Servel Electrolux, this smart little lady kept a tray of ice cream all the time. And how crisp and fresh the green vegetables always were! And when he got the gas bill, and found all this cost only 2 or 3 cents a day, was his face red!

Mrs. W. L. Larche, of Stamford, Texas, says in 4 years' constant use her Servel Electrolux has cost about 75c a month to operate—"and I have gas bills to show that the operating cost has not increased one cent since the first month!... I have never had a service bill," she says.

SAN SABA GIRL, COLLECTOR OF NEGRO SONGS; SINGS THEM ONLY IN DARKNESS

Christoval, Aug. 3—An interesting character in this resort town is Miss Betsy Jane Walters of San Saba. Her hobby is collecting spiritual songs from negroes, and the odd ways she gets these songs is as fascinating to her as the songs. She has listened to the songs of negroes in the cotton patches in East Texas, has ridden along in a wagon with them just to hear a song. She has got them from "mammies" over a wash tub or ironing board. Betsy is a daughter of Judge and Mrs. G. A. Walters of San Saba. She started collecting these songs because of her liking developed when she was a little girl and heard the negroes singing while she sat in her father's lap. Her father wanted her to learn them, and as she grew up she began collecting them. She sings them on programs with the lights out because the dark, in her opinion, gives a better effect. Betsy also collects ghost stories from negroes.

Her ambition is to have a log cabin studio where she can write about interesting people. Betsy loves people. She carries a notebook with her everywhere she goes and writes interesting things about them. She has attended Cummock in California and Bonnavon in San Antonio, specializing in dramatic arts. Betsy, known as Betty of the Book House, has been with the Book House for four years. In 1935 she won an automobile in a subscription contest for the San Saba News. She says she walked and talked two and one-half months getting that car.—San Angelo Standard-Times.

Fruit Juice Saving Device

Drinking a tomato juice is securing vitamin C in diet, since the equivalent in this vitamin of three good-sized potatoes, according to Nora Ellen Elliott, Extension service food preparation specialist of Texas A&M College.

Miss Elliott points out that too many Americans depend upon cooked vegetables for the vitamin C element in their diet, and this is unwise since vegetables lose much of their vitamin content with cooking.

Especially in the summertime, the intelligent homemaker will let a cup of orange juice, half of a grapefruit, a bowl of fresh green raw cabbage and green pepper salad furnish the vitamin C for one day's diet. These are not only more refreshing than cooked foods with a similar vitamin equivalent, but Miss Elliott adds, they also help keep the diet from being overloaded with various other food-types.

"Weeping Jelly"

College Sta.—If jelly "weeps," it probably has sufficient reason, says Grace I. Neely, specialist in food preservation for the A&M College Extension Service, in diagnosing some of the most common types of jelly failures.

"Weeping," she says, is due to too high a concentration of acid, and it may be prevented by mixing the juice with another juice low in acid content or by adding more pectin and sugar. The most common cause of failure to jell is the presence of too much sugar. The jelly may be re-boiled with unsweetened fruit juice, and usually one-half as much juice as sirup will be sufficient, Miss Neely explains. Pectin may be added instead of the juice.

Lack of acidity may also prevent a jell from forming, and when this is the cause the mixture may be made to jell by adding a sour juice such as lemon, nad reboling the mixture to the jellifying joint. Propotions on the average are one teaspoon of acid to two quarts of juice, the specialist says.

"To prevent crystallization of grape jelly caused by too high a proportion of sugar, dilute the grape juice with sour apple or plum juice," Miss Neely advises. Canned grape juice never crystallizes in jelly, she says.

Other causes of jelly failures listed include toughness, caused by too little sugar or too concentrated juice; gumminess caused by overcooking; cloudiness caused by poor straining or skimming; mold formation caused by too low a concentration of sugar, storing in a damp place, incomplete seal, or incomplete sterilization; and fermentation caused by souring. The same factors which bring about mold formation result in fermentation, Miss Neely concludes.

Drink Milk To Reduce

College Station, August 17th—General belief that milk is a fattening food and detrimental to girlish figures is a lot of nonsense, according to W. V. Maddox, dairy manufacturing specialist for the A. and M. College Extension Service.

It is the excess of food, not milk itself, that fattens, yet many people, particularly women, deprive themselves of dairy products because of this false idea.

In a reducing diet it is necessary to cut the food intake of calories to the desired number; however, certain quantities of minerals, vitamins, and protein foods are essential in maintaining vigorous health. "The nutrition authorities tell us that foods necessary are milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables," Maddox points out.

A safe reducing diet includes the following protective foods daily:

Three glasses of milk—one glass with each meal, or its equivalent in some form of dairy product which will yield 500 calories.

One egg which will give 75 calories.

One serving of fruit, which furnishes approximately 100 calories.

Two servings of vegetables, furnishing from 200 to 300 calories. One vegetable should be of the leafy type.

This diet gives a total of 925 calories, while most ordinary reducing diets permit from 1,400 to 1,600 calories daily. The remaining 475 to 675 calories may be selected from meats, fish, cereal foods, butter, ice cream, and sugars. After the desired weight has been attained by use of the reducing diet multiply this weight by 15. The answer approximates the number of calories allowed per day in order to maintain normal weight.

AND IT'S A FACT THAT A PENNY IS BIG MONEY WHEN YOU SPEND IT FOR ELECTRICITY

The penny is Uncle Sam's smallest coin but it's big money when you spend it electrically. At this company's low average rate, one cent will light a 60-watt bulb nearly three hours. It will make 10 slices of toast or percolate 8 cups of coffee. It will wash a big tubful of clothes or vacuum clean two large rugs daily for a week. It will provide two hours of radio entertainment. In fact, if you paid for your electricity as you used it, pennies would pay your electric bill.

Center City

By Mrs. J. M. Oglesby

The Baptist revival closed Sunday night. Rev. Shepherd, of Coleman, did the preaching, assisted by the pastor, Brother Pattillo. All the sermons were good and we feel those who attended were helped and encouraged to be a little more helpful to others. A number of additions were received into the church, some by letter and others by baptism. Conference was held on Monday morning, followed by a baptizing. Brother Pattillo was called to be the pastor again for another year. He and his wife are church workers and are helpful to our whole community as they live here.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr.
 Fred Wild passed away at his home, east of Center City, after several days of illness. Burial
 Sunday afternoon at High Valley in San Saba County. Mr. Wild was a brother of Mrs. George Byrd and had lived in this community about ten years. He was a devoted Christian, a deacon in the Baptist church and a good neighbor to all. He leaves a wife, a number of grown children, his sister here and other relatives to whom we give our deepest sympathy in their hour of gloom.
 Many from here attended the funeral services.

Miss Euretta Ware is visiting in our community. She has been attending Howard Payne College, in Brownwood.

Mrs. Price and children, of Houston came Sunday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
 Allen Carter. Miss Hulda Carter returned home with them, after visiting in Houston for some time.

Mmes. Burks, Jackson, Doggett and Sauters, of Goldthwaite, attended several church services
 here last week.

Granny Hamilton, of Star spent several days visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Wilbur Waggoner and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Everett Evans, Misses Gladys, Wanda and Gladys Evelyn, of Goldthwaite, visited Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hill
 last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Welch,
 Charles Welch and Stacy Mc-Casland returned Friday after spending several days at Sterling.

Mrs. Aubra Hudson and little son, of Lampasas, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C.
 Blackwell, last week.

Worth Lee has moved from Hamilton County to live with his daughter, Mrs. Aubrey Head, and family.

Mrs. J. M. Oglesby, Glenda and John Mohler spent Monday in the Walter Simpson home at South Bennett.

Mrs. Davis and Irene have moved back from Zephyr.

Mrs. Shelton and children, of Star, visited her brother, Luther Arnold, and family Sunday.

Bill Reid and Duard Atchison have work on the highway near Coleman.

Mrs. Monroe Geeslin attended church Sunday night, after being absent for a long time.

Prof. Horace Cooke, of Rock Springs, was a pleasant visitor
 last week.

Rev. Page, who held a revival here several summers ago, was a pleasant visitor one day last week.

Mrs. W. W. Taylor was able to attend church one night last week. Her many friends rejoice that she is improving after suffering so much with a broken hip.

Star

By Mrs. Dora Goode

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Cook and Mr. and Mrs. James Teague of family are visiting relatives in Arizona.

Charles Douglas Rickle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Rickle; and Alva Merle Soules, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Soules, are having a fine time at the National Guard Encampment.

Mrs. Jim Goodnight, after attending the Sargent family reunion at Buchanan dam, came to visit for a few days with her sister, Mrs. T. E. Hamilton, and her many friends. While here she went with the Hamilton families to the Yose reunion held each year on the Cowhouse east of Evant. From there she returned to her home at Holland.

Who can account for the unthinkable amount and variety of bugs and insects and moths, big, little and minute, that crowd our window screens at night? It must be the bright lights of the electricity, which like the light of God's love, reveals many un-thought of sins in our lives.

Mullin Graduate Wed

 the legs to the wheels as driving rods.

In Memoriam

A few days ago a clipping from your paper of the obituary of Mrs. Clara S. Wilmeth, who passed away in June, was sent to me.
 her sister, Mrs. Mattie Abdill. I would like to correct two items in this obituary.

First, my sister did not take all of the family with her as stated in the obituary. Our mother, Mrs. Frederick William Schulz, born Terros Stanofield, died on May 5, 1875. Six children survived her, four daughters and two sons. Clara, the oldest, married J. R. Wilmeth on June 23, 1875. Another daughter, Mattie, had been left in Wiesbaden, Germany in 1868 with an old maiden sister of our mother, and did not come to Texas until 1884.

The other two sisters had a home with still another sister of our mother, but being dissatisfied there, joined Mrs. Wilmeth. Of the two sons, our brothers, one accompanied Mrs. Wilmeth, but stayed only a short while; and the younger brother, who was employed in a drug store in Houston, remained there.

The other error is that my sister,
 Mrs. Wilmeth, was not used to sewing and keeping house. Before she came over to this country, she spent two years with our Grandfather Schulz and his daughters, who paid to have her taught sewing and housekeeping and also paid for her passage to Texas. They told me (when I saw them before I came over here) that the money would be deducted from our part of the inheritance, and this is also mentioned in the copy of our grandfather's will, which I still have.

My sister, Mrs. Wilmeth, had no trouble in raising Mr. Wil-meth's five motherless children, because Mr. Wilmeth insisted that his children and their own
 "honor and obey" their mother,
 his second wife.

It has taken me a long time to write this for I will be 82 years old on August 28.

 truth will make you free."

Mrs. Crawford Dies

Mrs. J. R. Crawford passed away Saturday, August 5, at 9:00 a. m.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church Sunday afternoon at 5:00 p. m. and burial at the Goldthwaite cemetery. Services were conducted by Rev. Fred J. Brucks of the Methodist Church of Goldthwaite, and Rev. E. E. Dawson of the Baptist Church.

Mrs. Myrtle Wilson Crawford was born in Lampasas February 20, 1893. She lived there until the age of nineteen, when she was married to John Robert Crawford, and moved to their present home near Goldthwaite. Except for a few years, they spent their married life here. She leaves her husband, J. R. Crawford, and three children, Mae Dell, John Buren and Chas. Wilson Crawford, at home to mourn her loss. Also her mother, Mrs. M. J. Wilson of Lampasas, two brothers, Henry Wilson of Lampasas, and Seth Wilson of Athens, Texas, and three sisters, Mrs. M. R. Lee of Los Angeles, California, Mrs. W. T. Springer of Phoenix, Arizona and Mrs. Albert Hicks of Lometa, Texas. She united with the Baptist Church at the age of 15 and led a true Christian life until her death. Everyone loved her for her sweet smile and sunny disposition, and she leaves many friends to miss her through the years.

A GREAT DISCOVERY!

A publication of quite wide circulation, but which does not enjoy much advertising patronage, undertook to discredit the whole business of advertising recently, quoting from findings of the Twentieth Century Fund, a research organization. The principal point made was as follows:

"As a matter of fact, a survey recently completed disclosed that the advertising bill is added to the price of goods."

Well now, isn't that a great discovery! Any person with the slightest comprehension of business has always known that the cost of advertising is added to the price of goods and paid by the consumer. So are taxes added to the price of goods, and rent, and the money paid for wages, power, fuel, freight and every other item. Of course the consumer pays the advertising bill.

The only argument is: Would merchandise generally cost less to the consumer if advertising had not been developed as a part of the method of putting things into the hands of consumers? It is a well established fact that advertising has greatly reduced the cost of things bought. The clincher argument of the interests hostile to advertising is stated as follows: "The consumer often pays more for a nationally advertised branded article than for a similar article sold under a private brand or no brand at all."

We grant that this may be true, in a few selected cases. And do you know why this might be true? The reason is perfectly obvious, and well known to merchandising authorities. It is true only because the great mass of manufacturers, producers and merchandisers, by including advertising in their scheme, have developed a nationwide market, a huge demand, have acquainted people with the merchandise and built up a volume of sufficient size to bring about low per-item costs.

With this low item cost developed, by the expenditures of money for advertising, it is possible for a few isolated companies to slip in, take advantage of every benefit created by advertising paid for by others, and place their item on the market unbranded at perhaps a slightly lower per-unit cost. That's all there is to it. These fellows ride on the other fellow's ticket and can do it for a time.

This same situation often exists right in local communities. A group of business men who advertise, build up a prosperous trading center, get people in the habit of trading in a town. It is possible for one or two other business men to take advantage of this situation, save this little advertising cost. They ride on the other fellow's ticket, let the others pay the cost of building and supporting the market. But this "free ride" type of business man usually, in the long run, loses out. Just as the national manufacturer does. And for that matter he does not often sell for less. Usually he merely gets along with a lower volume of trade and is not, in fact, doing anything to benefit either the consumer or himself. In most cases he would be better off, and could actually sell for less, if he did spend a little money for advertising, and increase his volume.

It is only by manufacturing a lot of units that unit cost can be kept down. It is only by merchandising a good volume that retail costs can be kept down. Advertising is the only known method of making these things possible. Just try to imagine what living standards would be like if word of mouth were the only means of doing business in this country. The very idea is fantastic.

The point is not whether advertising costs are added to price of merchandise, for we all know they are. The vital point is that the total cost per unit of everything we buy would be materially increased in every other respect, were it not for the practice of developing volume and markets through advertising.

If you are still skeptical, you might just look around you. Do you not find it advantageous, to your pocketbooks, to do your trading in centers where business men do a lot of advertising, have large and varied stocks, do a good volume of trade? And further, do you not get your best values in the stores which do a reasonable amount of advertising? Of course you do. You get your merchandise for less money. If you didn't you would go to some place where the merchants think advertising is an economic waste, and don't do any of it.—J. F. Mott in the Turtle Mountain Star, Rolla, N. D.

Backwoods Conferences

IN HIS BOOK, "THE DUBLIN LETTERS," Lee Harriman tells about a famous national organization that found it a fine investment to hold what were called "Backwoods Conferences." All of the officials got together in a little hotel in a small town miles away from movies, golf courses, and other exciting amusements.

"Many's the time I've wished for more backwoods conferences," wrote James W. Dublin in one of his letters. "I know what they can do. A calm sweet mood, visiting over our problems, solving them, instead of trying to cover them up with a brilliant piece of patchwork to be delivered on an arbitrary date. Leisure to let thinking-power rise to the surface—a release of vision, too—conception—the building up of a characteristic philosophy of running a business."

One of the officials at the conference emphasized the value of backwoods conferences and vacations for executives in these words: "There are certain periods when business minds should stop trying to run a mile a minute, and when the most valuable thing they can do for their company is just to stroll and meditate."

School Bus Rules

The injustice in the school bus provision of the new law on equalization funds suggests that legislators must have adopted this measure hurriedly without taking time to consider its effects. There is no need to bring back frontier conditions by compelling children to walk two and a half miles to school, in all kinds of weather, when a school bus with empty seats goes past their door twice daily.

Two and a half miles is too far for a 6-year-old child to have to walk to school, especially in hot or rainy weather. True, some city youngsters are almost this far from school; but these are only high school students, and streetcars are available for their use. Since bus service must be maintained for those pupils who live far from school, there should be no objection to picking up those who live a little nearer. Parents of the latter pay the same rate for school taxes as those who live farther away.

In addition to the inconvenience and the danger to health, the new law—if strictly enforced—would add greatly to the hazards of Texas highways. Traffic deaths would be bound to increase, no matter how careful both the young pedestrians and the car drivers tried to be. Joe P. Harris, County Superintendent of Schools, deserves support in his effort to seek from the legislative committee in charge of allotment of transportation funds an exception for Dallas County. As the county pays two thirds of the bus cost, and as the new rule would save no money anyway, local authorities should have some say in determining which children are entitled to ride in school busses. — Dallas News.

A Man's Prayer

(The EAGLE is indebted to John A. Allen for the following prayer which he clipped from a now-forgotten paper.)

Teach me that 60 minutes make an hour . . . 16 ounces make one pound . . . and 100 cents make one dollar.

Help me to live so that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, without a gun under my pillow, and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I might have brought pain.

Grant that I may earn my meal ticket on the square, and that in earning it I may do unto others as I would have them do unto me.

Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money and to the rustle of unholly skirts.

Blind me to the faults of the other fellow, but reveal to me my own.

Guide me so that each night when I look across the dinner table at my wife, who has been a blessing to me, I will have nothing to conceal.

Keep me young enough to laugh with little children, and sympathetic enough to be considerate of old age.

And when comes the day of darkened shades and the smell of flowers, the tread of soft footsteps and the crunching of wheels in the yard . . . make the ceremony short and the epitaph simple . . . "HERE LIES A MAN."

Legion May Share In Sponsor Fund

(By Nugent Ezekiel Brown)

Austin—(Special) — Delegates to the annual convention of the Department of Texas of the American Legion to be held at Waco on August 26-28 will have an opportunity to help spread the work toward raising funds to "rehabilitate" the Confederate Home property in Austin to make it a home for veterans of all wars.

The 46th Legislature, by special statute, voted to open the Home to ex-service men and women of all wars but would not deed the property to the United States government for operation by the Veterans Bureau for the simple reason the property belongs to the Daughters of the Confederacy and the John B. Hood Camp, U. C. V. While actual operation of the Home will be under the Board of Control, yet the State cannot vote funds to repair the buildings, which cost will total about $250,000. In order to get federal aid, a "sponsor" fund must be raised by the veterans organizations.

Dr. C. H. Brownlee, of Austin, co-ordinator of the "Veterans Home Central Council," an organization formed for the purpose, announced at a meeting of veterans at the Home this week that "three of the veterans organizations, the V. F. W.'s, the D. A. V.'s and the Spanish-American War group, already have subscribed about $25,000 toward the sponsor fund which must be $100,000 or more."

"These three organizations have set the example," points out Dr. Brownlee. "This leaves it up to the Legion, the largest group, to take similar action at Waco. The 10th District Convention of the Legion went on record asking the State Department to allot a comparable appropriation, the amount to be around $75,000 as that will be only three dollars for each paid up member. Back in 1921, the Legion raised $117,000 with a state wide tag day sale, for the purpose of establishing the Legion Hospital at Kerrville. The federal government, after taking over the hospital, paid the Legion $120,000, which fund now is $145,000. Since this money was raised originally for hospitalization purposes, why cannot part of it be used for the sponsor fund for conversion of the Confederate Home into a modern fire-proof set of buildings? This question will be put up squarely to the Legionnaires at the Waco convention for their decision."

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND THE COMMUNITY

LESSON TEXT—Joel 1:5-7; Daniel 5:1-5, 17, 25-28. GOLDEN TEXT—Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink.—Habakkuk 2:15.

"None of us liveth to himself" (Rom. 14:7).

What concerns the individual concerns the community, for the community is made up of individuals. The man who uses alcohol has no right to claim that it is a personal matter, for alcohol is a poisonous drug which not only injures the individual, but makes him a danger and a liability to his community. Before going into our lesson let us look at only a few of the many facts available.

In the five years since repeal, it is estimated that $30,000,000,000 has been spent for intoxicants with a profit to the industry of $13,250,000,000. But what has it cost the people?

"In 1937, an entire city the size of Detroit was maimed and injured, and an entire city the size of Omaha was permanently injured, by the automobile. Sixty per cent of auto fatalities are due to alcohol" (Chief Justice of Municipal Court, Evans-ton, Ill.).

"Rape has increased 13 per cent and the more atrocious forms 40 per cent in the last eight months" (Police Commissioner, Boston, Mass.).

"Criminals are for the return of liquor, wet propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding, and with the coming of repeal will come the greatest era of wholesale crime this country has ever known. The criminal world is tensely expectant and is prepared to launch immediately into its millennium of crime. The return of the saloon inevitably will bring open prostitution and gambling" (Statement by a criminal in prison before repeal became effective).

"America is on the worst gambling spree in its history. A gross population, not including all rural districts, of 80,000,000 persons is dallying with $6,000,000,000 in winnings and losses, of which all but about $1,000,000,000 passes through the hands of the underworld, where much of it remains" (Courtney R. Cooper).

The American Business Men's foundation, Chicago, reports that liquor was responsible for the rejection of more than 93,000 applications for insurance last year, and that as a result widows and orphans will ultimately be deprived of over $200,000,000 of insurance, making some of them public charges.

Three words which are altogether appropriate for the liquor problem will serve to summarize our lesson.

I. Devastation (Joel 1:5-7). Drunkards are called on to awake from their stupor and weep and the drinkers of wine (note that!) to wail over the loss of their drink because of the devastation wrought by the locusts. This plague had come because of the sins of the people, and may well serve to exemplify the devastation which will follow the use of alcohol as a beverage. The nations of our day need not think that they will escape if they continue on their present road of reckless indulgence.

II. Debauchery (Dan. 5:1-4). The familiar story of Belshazzar's feast should be made to live again as we point out that we have "have vividly manifested three of the great characteristics of the day in which we live—a coming together of great multitudes for a riotous night of drinking, which must of course end for many in disgusting drunkenness; provision for acts of darkest sensuality in the fact that all the wives and concubines were invited to this feast . . . and a contemptuous, deliberate insulting of the name of God" (Dr. Wilbur M. Smith).

III. Death (vv. 5, 17, 25-28). Dramatically swift was God's judgment upon Belshazzar's presumptuous sin. Magnificently bold and direct was the condemnation by Daniel, the prophet of God. Reckless was the immediate judgment of physical death (see v. 30), and equally sure is the ultimate judgment when the drunken king stands before his Maker to answer for the deeds done in the flesh.

The fact that God does not write in our day in flaming letters on the sponoon wall before the beary eyes of the drinker does not mean that His judgment is any less certain, nor does it make it less dreadful.

Cost of Happiness. God has ordained that happiness, like every other good thing, should cost us something; He has willed that it should be a moral achievement, and not an accident.—Dr. Gasparin.

Walk in the Light. Walk in the light and thou shalt see thy path, though thorny, bright; for God, by grace, shall dwell in thee, and God himself is light.—Barton.

"Oh, I love you anything. B carry me." — wise I an impatience thinking of least. You are thinking of your pride. He caught her hand in his. "I am thinking of my pride. Do you suppose it is easy for me to let Jane—take money from him? To feel that there is no man in our family who can pay the bills? I am proud. And I'm glad of it. Edith—I want you to be glad that I won't take—alms."

Her wise eyes studied him for a moment. "You blessed boy. You blessed poet," she sighed, "I am proud of you, but my heart aches—for myself."

He caught her almost roughly in his arms and in a moment released her. "I'm right, dearest?"

"No, you're not right. If we married, we'd sail to Italy and have a villa by the sea. And you would paint masterpieces. Do you think my money counts beside your talent? Well, I don't."

"My dear, let me prove my talent first. As things are now, I couldn't pay our passage to the other side."

"You could. My money would be yours—your talent mine. A fair exchange."

He stuck obstinately to his point of view. "I won't tie you to any promise until I've proved myself."

"And we'll lose all these shining years."

"We won't lose a moment. I'm going to work for you."

He was, she perceived, on the heights. But she knew the weariness of the climb.

Coming out of the garden in the late afternoon, they were aware of other arrivals at the Inn.

"Adelaide and Uncle Fred, by all the gods," said Edith, as they peered into the dining-room from the dimness of the hall. "Oh, don't let them see us. Adelaide's such a bromide."

Adelaide had been plaintive. And she had hinted for the ride. "Why not an afternoon ride, Ricky? It would rest you."

"Sorry. But I'm tied up."

"I haven't seen you for ages, Ricky."

"I know, old girl. I've had a thousand things."

"I've missed you."

It wasn't easy for Frederick to ignore that Adelaide was an attractive woman.

"Oh, well. I can get away at four. We'll have tea at the old Inn."

"Heavenly. Ricky, I have a new blue hat."

She told him all the spicy gossip. Frederick, like most men, ostensibly scorned scandal, but lent a willing ear. What Adelaide had said, what Benny had said, what all the world was saying about Del's marriage.

"And they were married here to-day. I didn't dream it until Eloise called me up just before lunch. Edith had told her."

"Edith was here?"

"Yes, and young Barnes."

She stopped there and poured the tea. She did it gracefully, but Frederick's thoughts swept back to Jane behind her battlements of silver.

"Four lumps, Ricky?"

"Um—yes."

"A penny for your thoughts."

"They're not worth a penny, Adelaide. Lots of lemon, please. And no cakes. I am trying to keep my lovely figure."

"Oh, why worry? I like big men."

"That's nice of you."

Martha's little sponge cakes were light as a feather. Adelaide broke one and ate daintily. Then she said, "How's little Jane Barnes?"

Frederick was immediately self-conscious. "She's still in Chicago."

"Sister better?"

"Much."

"When is she coming back?"

"Jane? As soon as Mrs. Hemling can be brought home. In a few weeks, I hope."

Adelaide drank a cup of tea almost at a draught. She was aware of an impending disclosure. When the blow came, she took it without the flicker of an eyelash.

"I am going to marry Jane Barnes, Adelaide. The engagement isn't to be announced until she returns to Washington. But I want my friends to know."

"She put her elbows on the table, clasped her hands and rested her chin on them looking at him with steady eyes. "So that's the end of it, Ricky?"

"The end of what?"

"Our friendship."

"Why should it be?"

"Oh, do you think that your little Jane is going to let you philander?"

"I shan't want to philander. If that's the way you put it."

"So you think you're in—love with her."

"I know I am," the red came up in his cheeks, but he stuck to it manfully. "It's different from anything—ever that I've felt before."

"They all say that, don't they, every time?"

"Don't be so cynical."

She shrugged her shoulders. "I'm not. Well, I shall miss you, Ricky, dear."

"That was all, just that plaintive note. But Adelaide's plaintiveness was always effective."

Jane was home again. Judy was better. Philomel sang. The world was a lovely place.

"It's heavenly."

Baldy smiled at her. "The same old Jane."

She shook her head, and the light in her eyes wavered as if some breath of doubt fanned it. "Not quite. The winter hasn't been easy. I'm a thousand years older."

"And with a wedding day ahead of you."

"Yes. Do you like it, Baldy?"

He leaned back in his chair and surveyed her. "Not a bit—if you want the truth—I shall be jealous of Mr. Frederick Towne."

"Silly. You know I shall never love anybody more than you, Baldy."

She was perfectly unconscious of the revelation she was making, but he knew—and was constrained to say, "Then you don't really love him."

"Oh, I do. He's much nicer than I imagined he might be."

"Oh, well, if you think you are going to be happy."

"I know I am—dearest," she blew a kiss from the tips of her fingers.

"Baldy, I'm going to have a great house with a great garden—and invite Judy and the babies—every summer."

"Towne's not marrying Judy and the babies. He's marrying you. He won't want all of your poor relations hanging around."

"Oh, he will. He has been simply dear. I feel as if I can never do enough for him."

He rose. "I must run on. We're to dine at Towne's then?"

"Yes. Just the five of us. It seems funny that I haven't met Cousin Annabel. But she's able to take her place at the head of the table, Mr. Towne tells me. He told me, too, that she wants to meet me. But I have a feeling that she won't approve of me, Baldy. I'm not fashionable enough."

"Why should you be fashionable? You are all right as you are."

"Am I? Baldy, I believe my stock has gone up with you."

"It hasn't, Janey. You were always a darling. But I didn't want to spoil you."

"As if you could," she smiled wistfully. "Sometimes I have a feeling,

"You have the great art of looking lovely in the simplest things. But some day you are going to wear a frock that I have for you."

She thought now of the blue and silver gown, as Sophy said, "Miss Jane, I done pressed that white chiffon of yours twel it hardly hangs together."

"I'll wear it once more, Sophy. I'm having a sewing woman next week."

With the old white chiffon she wore a golden rose or two—and sat at Frederick's right, while on the other end of the great table, Cousin Annabel weighed her in the balance.

Jane knew she was being weighed. Cousin Annabel was so blue-blooded that it showed in the veins of her hands and nose—and her hair was dressed with a gray transformation which quite overpowered her thin little face with its thin little nose.

As a matter of fact, Cousin Annabel felt that Frederick had taken leave of his senses. What could he see in this short-haired girl—who hadn't a jewel, except the one he had given her?

Jane wore Towne's ring, hidden, on a ribbon around her neck. "Some day I'll let everybody see it," she had said, "but not now."

"You act as if you were ashamed of it."

"I'm not. But Cinderella must wait until the night of the ball."

It was while they were drinking their coffee in the drawing-room that the storm came up. It was one of those cyclonic winds that whip off the tops of the trees and blow the roofs from unsubstantial edifices. The thunder was a ceaseless reverberation—the lightning was pink and made the sky seem like a glistening inverted shell.

Cousin Annabel hated thunderstorms and said so. "I think I shall go to my room, Frederick."

"You are not a bit safer up there than here," Towne told her.

But she went up and Baldy and Edith wandered across the hall to the library, where Edith insisted they could observe other aspects of the storm.

Jane and her lover were left alone, and presently Frederick was called to the telephone.

"I'm not sure that it's safe, sir, in this storm," Waldron warned.

"Nonsense, Waldron," Towne said, and stepped quickly across the polished floor.

Thus it happened that Jane sat by herself in the great drawing-room of the Ice Palace, while the wind howled, and the rain streamed down the window glass, and all the evil things in the world seemed let loose.

And she was afraid! Not of the storm, but of the great house. She was so small and it was so big. Her own little cottage clasped her in its warm embrace. This great mansion stood away from her—as the sky stands away from the desert. All the rest of her life she would be going up and down those great stairs, sitting in front of this great fireplace, presiding at the far end of Frederick's great table—dwarfed by it all, losing personality, individuality, bidding good-bye forever to little Jane Barnes, becoming until death parted them the wife of Frederick Towne.

She sat huddled in her chair, panting a little, her eyes wide.

"Silly," she said with a sob.

The sound of her voice echoed and re-echoed, "Silly, silly, silly."

The noise without was deafening—the wind shook the walls. She stood up, her hands clenched, then ran swiftly into the hall.

A thundering crash and the lights went out.

She heard Frederick calling, "Jane, Jane!"

She called back, "I'm here," and saw the quick spurt of a match as he lighted it, holding it up and peering into the dark.

"There you are, my dearest." He lighted another match and came towards her, as Waldron, with a brace of candles, appeared in one door and Baldy and Edith in another.

Frederick lifted Jane in his strong arms. "Why, you're crying," he said; "don't, my darling, don't."

Then Baldy came up and demanded, "What's the matter, Kitten? You've never been afraid of storms."

At this moment Waldron reappeared to say that Briggs had pronounced the streets impassable. Branches had been blown down—and there was other wreckage.

"That settles it," Frederick said. "You two young things may as well sit here for the night. Jane's not fit to go out anyhow."

"Oh, I'm all right," she protested. Edith suggested bridge, so they played for a while. The big room was still lighted by the candles, so that the shadows pressed close. Jane was very pale, and now and then Frederick looked at her anxiously.

"You and Edith had better go up," he said at last. "And you must have Alice get you some hot milk—I'll send Waldron with a bit of cordial to set you up."

She shook her head. "I don't want it."

"But I want you to have it." There was a note of authority which almost brought her again to tears. She hated to have anyone tell her what she should do. She liked to do as she pleased. But later, when the glass of cordial came up to her, she drank it.

She did not go to sleep for a long time. Edith sat by the bed and talked to her. "I shouldn't," she apologized; "Uncle Fred told you to rest."

Jane curled up among her pillows, and said rebelliously, "Well, I don't have to obey yet, do I?"

"Don't ever obey," Edith, in her winged chair with her Viking braids and the classic draperies of her white dressing-gown, looked like a Norse goddess. "Don't ever obey, or you'll make a tyrant out of him."

"But I hate—fighting."

"You won't have to fight. I do it because it's my temperament. But you can manage him—by letting things go a bit—and coaxing will do the rest—"

"I don't want to manage—my husband," said Jane.

"All women do—"

"Would you want to manage—Baldy?"

Edith flushed. "That's different," she evaded.

"Not different. You know you wouldn't go through life with him, pulling wires, making a puppet of him—of yourself—you want comradeship—understanding. You'll flare up now and then. Baldy and I do. But—oh, we love each other."

Jane's voice shook.

Edith looked at her thoughtfully. "Jane, are you happy?"

"I ought to be—"

"But are you?"

"I'm tired I think. I don't know. Ever since I came home I've been nervous. Perhaps it is the reaction."

"Jane, I'm going to say something. Don't marry Uncle Fred unless you're sure. I went through all that with Del. And you see how little I knew of what I had in my heart to give—"

She stopped, her lovely face suffused with blushes. "I've learned—since then. And you mustn't make my mistake. And, Jane dear," she leaned over the younger girl like some splendid angel, "don't worry about material things. Baldy and I will want you always with us—"

Jane sat up. "Are you going to marry Baldy?"

"I am," sighing a little, "some day, when his ship comes in. He isn't willing to share my cargo—yet."

In the morning Towne had gone when Jane came down. She and Edith had had breakfast in their rooms—and there had been a great rose on Jane's tray, with a note twisted about the stem—"To my golden girl." Her lover had called her up by the house telephone, and had told her he was leaving for New York at noon. "A telegram has just come. I'll see you the moment I get back."

Jane had a sense of relief. She would have three days to herself.

Briggs took her out at noon, and Sophy came in to say, "Mr. Evans called you—all up. He's back from New York. He says he'll come over tonight."

That was news indeed! Old Evans! Jane got into the frock of faded lilac gingham and went about the house singing. Three days! Of freedom!

It was after lunch that she told the old woman, "I'm going down in the Glen—there should be wild honeysuckle—Sophy."

There were bees in the Glen and butterflies, and a cool silence. On the other side of the creek were pasture, and cattle grazing. But no human creature was in sight. Jane, walking along the narrow path, had a sense of utter peace. Here was familiar ground. She felt the welcome of inanimate things—the old willows, the singing stream, the great gray rocks that stuck their heads above the edges of the bank.

And now, around the turn of the path, came suddenly a man and two boys. They carried fishing-rods and stopped at a jutting rock to bait their hooks. One of the boys went out on the bridge and cast his line. His voice came to Jane clearly.

"Mr. Follette, there's a thing I hate to do, and that's to bait my hook with a worm. I'd much rather put on something that wasn't alive. Why is it that everything eats up something else?"

Jane peered down at the man poised on the rock. It was Evans! He was winding his reel against a taut line. "I've caught a snag," he said; "look out, Sandy, there's something on your hook."

As they landed the small catch with much excitement, Jane was aware of the strong swing of Evans' figure, the brown of his cheeks, the brightness of his glance as he spoke to the boys.

"It is dreadful," Evans sat down on the rock and looked across at the boy on the bridge. "But there are more dreadful things than death— injustice, and cruelty, and hate. And more than all—fear. And you must think of this, Arthur, that what we call a violent death is sometimes the easiest. An old animal with teeth gone, trying to exist. That's dreadfulness. Or an old person racked by pains. Much better if both could have been dead in the glory of youth."

He had always had that quick and vivid voice, but this certainty of phrase was a resurrection. He spoke without hesitation. Sure of himself. Sure of the things he was about to say.

"You boys needn't think that I don't know what I am talking about. I do. When I came back from France there was something wrong. I was afraid of everything. I lived for months in dread of my shadow. It was awful. Nothing can be worse. Then, one night I came to see that God's greatest gift to man is— strength to endure."

She did not go to sleep for a long time. Edith sat by the bed and he flung it at them—and their wide eyes answered him. After a moment Arthur said, huskily, "Gee, that's great."

Sandy sighed heavily. "I saw a picture the other day of a boy who wanted to play baseball, and he had to hold the baby. I reckon that's what you mean. Most of us have to hold the baby when we want to play baseball."

The others laughed, then young Arthur said, "It looks to me as if life is just one darned thing after another."

"Not quite that," Evans stood up. "I'm afraid I'm an awful preacher," he apologized, "but you will ask questions."

He stopped suddenly. There had been the crack of a twig and he had turned his eyes towards the sound. And there, poised above him, her hat off, the warm wind blowing her fobbed black hair, blowing, too, the folds of the lilac frock back from her slender figure, stood Jane . . . Jane . . .

He went charging up the bank towards her.

"My dear," he said, "my dear."

That was all. But he was there, holding her hands, devouring her with his eyes.

Then he dropped her hands. "I thought you were a ghost," he said, a little awkwardly. "I called you up this morning and Sophy said you were in town."

"I came out at noon. The day was so perfect. I had to see the Glen."

"It is perfect. When I found you were out, I got the boys. I am taking a half-holiday after my trip."

He was talking naturally now, smiling at her as she stood beside him. She found herself trembling, almost afraid to speak again lest her voice betray her. She had been more shaken than he by the encounter. She wondered at his ease. And so it happened that, woman-like, as they walked alone at last after the boys had left them in the little pine grove back of the house, that Jane said, "Evans, you haven't wished me happiness."

"No," he said, and his eyes met hers squarely. "I think you might spare me that, Jane."

She flushed. "Oh," she said, "I'm sorry."

He laid his hand for a moment on her shoulder. "Don't be sorry, little Jane. But we won't talk about it. That's the best way for both of us—not to talk."

He stayed to dinner, stayed for an hour or two afterwards—fitting himself in pleasantly to former niches. Jane could hardly credit the change in him. It was, she decided, not so much a resurrection of the body as of the spirit. His hair was gray, and now and then his eyes showed tired, his shoulders sagged.

When he went away, she and Baldy stood together on the terrace in the warm darkness and watched him.

They sat side by side. "When is Towne coming back?" Baldy asked.

"In three days."

Tree-tops were shrilling in monotonous cadence—from far away came the plaintive note of a whippoorwill. But there was another plaintive note close at hand.

"Jane, you're crying," Baldy said, sharply. "What's the matter, dear?"

He put his arm about her. "What's the matter?"

"Baldy, I don't want to get—married. I want to stay with you—forever—"

"You shall stay with me."

She sobbed and sobbed, and he soothed her. "Little sister, little sister," he said, "you are crying too much in these days."

At last Jane spoke. "Dearest, I must marry him. There's no way out. He's done so much for me—and some day, perhaps, I'll love him."
