—The Lehigh and Schuylkill Coal Exchanges have agreed to advance prices twenty-five cents per ton for September.

-A divorce suit now pending at Brook-lyn, N. Y., entitled Trice vs. Trice, is attracting some attention. Both parties are col-ored, and both claim a decree. The woman charges the man, who is a waiter, with various misdeeds, and he alleges that when he married her she was the wife of the king of Ashantee. It is admitted she married a son of the African monarch in 1866, and that he

House on September 27. -The St. Paul Railway Company will not take back any of the striking machinists recently employed in its shops at Milwaukee on any terms, and their places will be supplied with other men.

—Hot weather made the parade of Knights of Pythias at St. Louis an exceedingly painful affair. The local militia companies turned out in force, and added not a little to the brilliancy of the procession. -George M. Brooks, a traveling salesman for a Detroit house, married a pretty servant girl in Cadillac, Mich., and taking her to Im-

—Cincinnati, as well as St. Louis, has been compelled to admit that the census in that city was fairly taken. Two wards were selected on which to try a recount, policemen being selected to make the canvass. The footings are a trifle higher than those of the official census, but the percentage of gain is so small that nothing further will be said about another count.

—Four young white men went on a "nigger hunt" near Cochran, Ga. They broke down the door of a colored man's hut and fired a volley into the hut. The occupant seized a gun and, with one well directed shot, killed two of his assailants in their tracks. A coroner's jury very appropriately rendered a verdict of justifiable homicide.

The Horse in England. Richard Grant White in the Atlantic. The Egyptians mummied all sorts of sacred brutes, including bulls, cats and crocodiles. If Englishmen should ever ake to embalming beasts I am sure that notwithstanding the national name and piace which roast beef kolds in English ong and story, they would pass by the bull and swathe the defunct horse in muslin and spices. For if the horse be not a god in England at least the cult of the horse is a sort of religion. There are tens of thousands of English gentle men who have horses on their minds vacancies that may occur on the State during the greater part of their waking ticket nominated this day and in such hours. The condition of the animal their grooming; the cut of their tails and manes; the way in which they stand, or step, or stride; the fashion of their harthe build, the look, the dress of coachman and groom—these are matters o them of deep concern, of uneasy anxety. And this is so not once a year, or once a quarter, or once a month, but every day and two or three times a day; every time, indeed, that they ride or drive. Nor do I mean only those who are called "horsey" men, gentlemen drivers of mail coaches and the like, who are grooms in everything except taking wages, and some of whom, I was told, will carry their coachmanship so far as to take a "tip." Apart from these there is a very large class to whom the perfection in the minutest point of their eques trian "turnout" is a question of the major morals. When one of this class feels sure that his horse, his "trap" and groom will bear the criticism of his friends and rivals, the ineffable air of solemn self-sufficiency with which he sits the saddle or the box is at once amusing and pitiable. These men criticise each other's equipages as women criticise each other's dress, as pedants criticise each other's scholarship. Indeed, in England there is a pedantry of the stable.

Chills and Fever. The proprietor of this celebrated medicino justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a g reat many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is however prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

otwithstanding the national name and place which roast beef holds in English song and story, they would pass by the bull and swathe the defunct horse in muslin and spices. For if the horse be not a god in England at least the cult of the horse is a sort of religion. There are tens of thousands of English gentlemen who have horses on their minds during the greater part of their waking hours. The condition of the animal; their grooming; the cut of their tails and manes; the way in which they stand, or step, or stride; the fashion of their har-ness; the build, the look, the dress of coachman and groom—these are matters to them of deep concern, of uneasy anxiety. And this is so not once a year, or once a quarter, or once a month, but every day and two or three times a day; every time, indeed, that they ride or drive. Nor do I mean only those who are called "horsey" men, gentlemen drivers of mail coaches and the like, who are grooms in everything except taking wages, and some of whom, I was told, will carry their coachmanship so far as to take a "tip." The proprietor of this celebrated medicino justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a g reat many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is however prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if it sues is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Literary Revolution & Universal Knowledge.

An Encyclopædia in 20 volumes, over 16,000 pages, 10 per cent. more matter than any Encyclopædia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $10, and printed on nne heavy paper wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, for $20—an enterprise so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent in book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

The Library of Universal Knowledge is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburg edition of "Chamber's Encyclopædia," with about 40 per cent. of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority of those who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopædia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style will be sent for examination, with privilege of return, on receipt of proportionate price per volume.

Special Discount to all early subscribers, and extra discount to clubs. Full particulars, with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, Leading principles of the AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE: I. Publish only books of real value.

II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one-half what it vas a few years ago.

III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 and 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.

IV. The cost of books when made ten thousand at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.

V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heaviry-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.

VI. The moles all and eligible is better than to make $50 and an enemy.

VI To make $1 and afriend is better than to make $5 and an enemy. STANDARD BOOKS.

A SAPPER AND MINER.

The Habits of The Mole-How He Doe His Work. Harper's Weekly.

"Well said, old mole! Cans't work the earth so fast? A worthy pioneer!"
So says Hamlet to his father's ghost—a remark which points to the fact that Shakspeare was no mean observer of nature. As to the rapid working of the working of the little animal he named, if any enthusiast will take a spade and start fairly against a mole to try and dig in substance, in place of so much sentiir out, he will throw down the implement at the end of five minutes and confess himself thoroughly beaten; for almost in a twinkling the little fel ow has bur: ied himself: and the effort to dig himself out will be a vain one, so rapidly can he bore, and tunnel through ordinary, mod-

It may be taken for granted that there are many hundreds of thousands of people who have never seen, and never may see this little animated subsoil plow and drainer, who, if allowed to follow the bent of their inclinations, will complete ly undermine a field, running through it a series of veins and arteries, opening the one into the other-making, hundreds of yards subterranean passages, just large enough to admit his body, and depositing the soil taken out of the tunnels in the neatest of little, soft, crumbly heaps on the surface of the grass.

Fields or gardens so treated are gener ally beside a wood, and out of this the mole-or, as the learned call it, Palpa europoea-starts on his hunting trips, his hunting grounds being subterranean.

Here is the little fellow, just caught in a noose by an ingenious arrangement placed in his burrow, and the first feelperform so much work. For we have here what looks to be a little, round, sausage-shaped bag some five or six inches long, made of the most delicat black silk velvet, the pile, which lies smooth in any direction, being so soft and fine that beside it velvet plush is a coarse and ing is one of amazement that such a litbeside it velvet plush is a coarse and barbarous production. Our little defunct nuisance seems to have no shape beyond being round and long. One end comes to a point, and on examination you find that it is flattened at the extremity, being, in fact, an exact pig-like snout; and at the other rounded end there is a tail like an elongated camel's hair pencil. There is no shape of head, no trace of shoulder or hip. Even the eyes are invisible, being completely covered by the

Alas for tho velvety pile; and but for the legs it would be hard to tell that it was an animal at all. The legs: it should be feet, for the legs are almost entirely within the skin while the feet are wonderfully developed, especially those in the anterior part of the body. The ordinary illustrations of our natural histories give a very accurate idea of the fore-foot, or hand of the mole, which is almost circular and of enormous strength. It is covered with a very tough skin, and its claws are solidi-

On examining these implements-for such they really are—the surprise at the mole's power of locomotion, and sapping and mining process, ceares at once, for they are wonders of construction; and models of perfection. Set in motion by exceedingly powerful muscles, it is seen that they are not placed, like the forelegs of an ordinary animal, with a palm flat upon the earth, but edgewise, and somewhat like the foremost fins of a fish, and they play on the earth in a similar manner, making, of course, some allow-ance for the denser medium. With these claw-armed hands the mole tears through the soil and casts it back to where its hind feet-which are about a third of the size and strength-continue the task, and kick the loosened earth up to the surface. Here, in this orchard, is a favorable place for the workings of the mole—at least so much as you are likely to see. Take your stand with me here, and be perfectly silent, or our labor will be in vain. You see nothing? Indeed! Watch that spot a couple of yards away. Can you not see about a tablespoonful of earth lying on the surface like so much exceedingly coarse brown sugar? you can see that; and now, on watching it carefully, you see that it is in motion that it is growing, in fact, for there might be a volcanic disturbance going on below there upon a minaeture scale, and this might be an eruption of fine disintegrated earth.

The.

See how it comes to the surface, more and more welling up, so to speak, like water out of a spring. We know what is doing it—a mole; but no sign of the little sapper is manifested to our sight.

Look! there he goes—or, rather, there goes his work—just beneath the surface, and so close that the soil is slightly raised, though held toget'er by the strands of grass and fibres of the trees. It is so close to the surface because a little lower down the alluvial soil ceases, and hard, gravelly stone begins, such as would wear out the tough, strong claws of even a mole. To avoid this, then, and its harsh; jagged stones, the mole keeps at times so close to the surface that he can almost be seen to work. We trace him, then, and see that at every few yards hillocks are thrown up, which keep in-creasing in size as the little animal toils

You ask where? Oh! down one or other of the old channels that have been made at former times, perhaps by the one in question, perhaps by some of his relatives: and while we are looking at the traces of the new workings, the little sapper may have retreated back into the wood, or gone forward right across the garden and into the field forty or fifty yards away, which you can see is dotted over with mole-hills.

HANCOCK AND GARFIELD.

In Important Difference Between the two Presidential Candidates.

New York Sun. Gen. Hancock is a man of correct, high, and noble instincts. Nobody disputes that; nobody doubts it. No one imputes to him a mean act during his whole life. No stain of pecuniary corruption rests upon him; nor any accusation of conduct of doubtful integrity.

Such a man in the White House will naturally surround himself with men of like instincts and of similar character. Gen, Hancock would never knowingly appoint a dishenest man to office; and if by mistake he should appoint such a man, he would be prompt and decided in rectifying the mistake by an unceremonious remoyal as soon as it was discovered.

With Gen. Hancock President the country would enjoy that substantial practical, desirable reform in the civil service which naturally comes from having a pure, robust, upright man, intolerant of dishonesty and of negligence, at the head of affairs. We should have what is attainable of civil service reform mental twaddle, without performance, on that subject, as we have now.

In these respects Gen. Garfield is the very opposite of Gen. Hancock. His training is that of the mere party politician. By instinct and habit he is a demagogue. His strength consists mainly in the adroit practice of the arts the partisan. For money he betrayed his trust as a member of the National Legislature; for office he basely betrayed his confiding friend in the Chicago Convention. If elected he would environ himself with low and venal characters like Richard Harrington, who is one of his prominent and most ardent supporters. With a man for President who has once dishonorably put money in his purse, what sort of characters may we expect to see in subordinate places? Let the thoughtful, intelligent, conscientious, patriotic voters of the United States consider these great differences between Hancock and Garfield.

A Wonderful Cure.

BEAVER CROSSING, NEB., July 23, 1880. Drs. Dickerson and Stark—We left and hour earlier than we expected when we started for home, so missed seeing you on that morning. The people here thought the change in Coralie most wonderful, and she has continued to improve beyond my expectations. She threw aside her crutches a week ago and has not used them since. She has some one take hold of one hand and she has some one take hold of one hand and she in that way walks quite well. Can walk a short distance entirely alone. Her limbs are straightened so she rests her heels on the floor now, and is so much larger she thinks she won't be able to wear her braces a great while. She is really interested in walking now. The ankle of her worst limb has become sore and troubles her some, though it is better now, and she has had several boils, otherwise she is well. How are all the patients that we knew at the Institute? Would like to see all this afternoon. Remember like to see all this afternoon. Remember me to them. Would like to have the pumping apparatus soon, as it will be beneficial to use it. Please let me hear from you soon. Respectfully, MRS. N. M. PARKER. The above is only one of the many commendatory letters Drs. Dickerson and Stark are constantly receiving. The patient was a little girl only eleven years of age, and when she came into the Institute she crawled about on her hands and knees. It is truly

A SAPPER AND MINER.

The Habits of The Mole-How He Does Harper's Weekly.

"Well said, old mole! Cans't work i' the earth so fast? A worthy pioneer!"
So says Hamlet to his father's ghost—a remark which points to the fact that Shakspeare was no mean observor of nature. As to the rapid working of the working of the little animal he named, if any enthusiast will take a spade and start fairly against a mole to try and dig ir out, he will throw down the implement at the end of five minutes and confess himself thoroughly beaten; for almost in a twinkling the little fellow has bur ied himself: and the effort to dig himself out will be a vain one, so rapidly can he bore, and tunnel through ordinary, moderately soft soil.

It may be taken for granted that there are many hundreds of thousands of people who have never seen, and never may see this little animated subsoil plow and drainer, who, if allowed to follow the bent of their inclinations, will completely undermine a field, running through it a series of veins and arteries, opening the one into the other—making, hundreds of yards subterranean passages, just large enough to admit his body, and depositing the soil taken out of the tunnels in the neatest of little, soft, crumbly heaps on the surface of the grass.

Fields or gardens so treated are generally beside a wood, and out of this the mole-or, as the learned call it, Palpa europoea—starts on his hunting trips, his hunting grounds being subterranean.

Here is the little fellow, just caught in a noose by an ingenious arrangement placed in his burrow, and the first feeling is one of amazement that such a lit tle, round, soft, shapeless creature could perform so much work. For we have here what looks to be a little, round, sausage-shaped bag some five or six inches long, made of the most delicat black silk velvet, the pile, which lies smooth in any direction, being so soft and fine that beside it velvet plush is a coarse and barbarous production. Our little defunct nuisance seems to have no shape beyond being round and long. One end comes to a point, and on examination you find that it is flattened at the extremity, being, in fact, an exact pig-like snout; and at the other rounded end there is a tail like an elongated camel's hair pencil. There is no shape of head, no trace of shoulder or hip. Even the eyes are invisible, being completely covered by the velvety pile; and but for the legs it would be hard to tell that it was an animal at the The legs, it should be feet for the all. The legs: it should be feet, for the legs are almost entirely within the skin while the feet are wonderfully developed, especially those in the anterior part of the body. The ordinary illustrations of our natural histories give a very accurate idea of the fore-foot, or hand of the mole, which is almost circular and of enormous strength. It is covered with a very tough skin, and its claws are solidi-

On examining these implements—for such they really are—the surprise at the mole's power of locomotion, and sapping and mining process, ceares at once, for they are wonders of construction; and models of perfection. Set in motion by exceedingly powerful muscles, it is seen that they are not placed, like the forelegs of an ordinary animal, with a palm flat upon the earth, but edgewise, and somewhat like the foremost fins of a fish, and they play on the earth in a similar manner, making, of course, some allowance for the denser medium. With these claw-armed hands the mole tears through the soil and casts it back to where its hind feet-which are about a third of the size and strength-continue the task, and kick the loosened earth up to the

Here, in this orchard, is a favorable place for the workings of the mole-at least so much as you are likely to see. Take your stand with me here, and be perfectly silent, or our labor will be in vain. You see nothing? Indeed! Watch that spot a couple of yards away. Can you not see about a tablespoonful of earth lying on the surface like so much exceedingly coarse brown sugar? Yes, you can see that; and now, on watching it carefully, you see that it is in motion that it is growing, in fact, for there might be a volcanic disturbance going on below there upon a minaeture scale, and this might be an eruption of fine disintegrated earth. See how it comes to the surface, more and more welling up, so to speak, like water out of a spring. We know what is doing it—a mole; but no sign of the little sapper is manifested to our sight.

Look! there he goes—or, rather, there cook! there he goes—or, rather, there sees his work—just beneath the surface, and so close that the soil is slightly raised, though held toget er by the strands of grass and fibres of the trees. It is so close to the surface because a little lower down the alluvial soil ceases, and hard, gravelly stone begins, such as would wear out the tough, strong claws of even a mole. To avoid this, then, and its harsh; jagged stones, the mole keeps at times so close to the surface that he can almost be seen to work. We trace him, then, and see that at every few yards hillocks are thrown up, which keep in-creasing in size as the little animal toils

Now just stamp with your foot. The earth carries the concussion to where the busy little creature is at work, and the loose soil ceases to rise. He is gone.

You ask where? Oh! down one or oth er of the old channels that have been made at former times, perhaps by the one in question, perhaps by some of his relatives: and while we are looking at the traces of the new workings, the little sapper may have retreated back into the wood, or gone forward right across the garden and into the field forty or fifty yards away, which you can see is dotted over with mole-hills.

HANCOCK AND GARFIELD.

An Important Difference Between the two Presidential Candidates.

New York Sun. Gen. Hancock is a man of correct, high, and noble instincts. Nobody disputes that; nobody doubts it. No one imputes to him a mean act during his

Such a man in the White House will naturally surround himself with men of like instincts and of similar character. Gen, Hancock would never knowingly appoint a dishenest man to office; and if by mistake he should appoint such a man, he would be prompt and decided in rectifying the mistake by an unceremonious remoyal as soon as it was discovered.

With Gen. Hancock President the country would enjoy that substantial practical, desirable reform in the civil service which naturally comes from having a pure, robust, upright man, intolerant of dishonesty and of negligence, at the head of affairs. We should have what is attainable of civil service reform in substance, in place of so much sentimental twaddle, without performance, on that subject, as we have now.

In these respects Gen. Garfield is the very opposite of Gen. Hancock. His training is that of the mere party politician. By instinct and habit he is a demagogue. His strength consists mainly in the adroit practice of the arts of the partisan. For money he betrayed his trust as a member of the National Legislature; for office he basely betrayed his confiding friend in the Chicago Convention. If elected he would environ himself with low and venal characters like Richard Harrington, who is one of his prominent and most ardent supporters. With a man for President who has once dishonorably put money in his purse, what sort of characters may

we expect to see in subordinate places? Let the thoughtful, intelligent, conscientious, patriotic voters of the United States consider these great differences between Hancock and Garfield.

A good report from New Orleans. G. A. Pickett says: "My habit has been costive all my life: Have used a great many remedies, but never found any that could compare with Tutt's Pills. I believe they will cure any case of chronic constipation. Knowing them to be compounded on scientific principles, I commend them to all who are troubled with this dreadful affliction."

The landscape, like a veil over beauty's breast, heightens the charm it half conceals.—Washington Irving.

The right thing in the right place is without doubt Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, the best remedy for babies while teething. Price 25 cents a bottle.

A Wonderful Cure.

BEAVER CROSSING, NEB., July 23, 1880.

Drs. Dickerson and Stark-We left at started for home, so missed seeing you on that morning. The people here thought the change in Coralie most wonderful, and she has continued to improve beyond my expectations. She threw aside her crutches a week ago and has not used them since. She has some one take hold of one hand and she has some one take hold of one hand and she in that way walks quite well. Can walk a short distance entirely alone. Her limbs are straightened so she rests her heels on the floor now, and is so much larger she thinks she won't be able to wear her braces a great while. She is really interested in walking now. The ankle of her worst limb has become zero and troubles has seen and troubles. come sore and troubles her some, though it is better now, and she has had several boils, otherwise she is well. How are all the patients that we knew at the Institute? Would like to see all this afternoon. Remember me to them. Would like to have the pumping apparatus soon, as it will be beneficia to use it. Please let me hear from you soon Respectfully, Mrs. N. M. PARKER.

Respectfully, Mrs. N. M. PARKER.
The above is only one of the many commendatory letters Drs. Dickerson and Stark are constantly receiving. The patient was a little girl only eleven years of age, and when she came into the Institute she crawled about on her hands and knees. It is truly a wonderful cure.
