"THOU SHALT NOT KILL" NOR BE KILLED

Mills County Vocational School

By J. OSCAR SWINDLE, Instructor

A few days ago a little booklet came into my hands entitled, "Book of Street and Highway Accident Data," which I read and discussed in class with our distributive education group. It shows an alarming death and accident loss in this country. We learn that there were 32,500 persons killed and 1,365,000 injured in traffic accidents during the year of 1947. Why do we have such enormous losses of life, such suffering and misery for those who are permanently injured? And "we, the people" do but little or nothing about it. Our state and federal governments spend millions of dollars each year for special trappers and hunters to kill wolves and other predatory animals that destroy sheep, goats, cattle, etc. Think how excited we all get about the foot and mouth disease in cattle over in Mexico, how much money the government is spending to curb the disease. How much money does the government spend each year in controlling insect pests that destroy our crops? Or if some baby or child in our community suddenly becomes ill with infantile paralysis—how we all get excited. If a "mad" dog bites some person in the community everyone is ready to go out with a gun and kill the hateful beast. Which, of course, is all proper and right. Certainly we should do no less. But if a neighbor is killed on the highway or a baby run over in the street—well, it is just another unavoidable accident.

Cars, trucks and all types of modern vehicles are just as truly killers and destroyers of human life as the diseases mentioned above. And the drivers of these cars are responsible for this awful toll of human life. Not every person who happens to be in an accident or collision is responsible but someone is to blame in each case.

Yes, the war is an awful thing but if we multiply the death toll for one year by the number of years any given war lasted we would find that in most instances there are more lives lost, more people crippled during the same period of time than during the war. This would probably not be true for the last World War. But when we stop to think on this awful tragedy of highway accidents, all of us should bow our heads in shame. A human life is God's greatest creation. And the American people place so little value on it. What should be done about it?

SPENCER TRACY LANA TURNER TRIUMPH IN 'CASS TIMBERLANE'

One of the topflight pictures to stem from the M-G-M studios this year is on view on the Melba screen Saturday night, Sunday and Monday with the showing of "Cass Timberlane," based on the best-seller novel by Sinclair Lewis, and starring Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner and Zachary Scott in an imposing cast.

The teaming of box-office champion Turner with the vibrant Miss Tracy is in itself an exciting film event, and in this spellbinding story of a dynamic young girl who marries a staid judge and turns his placid life upside down, these two colorful stars have dramatic material worthy of their mettle.

Since the readers of "Cass Timberlane" approximate 17,000,000 people, it is hardly necessary to go deep into the plot of Lewis' turbulent tale of married life between two people of opposite temperaments. It is all here—Cass Timberlane's first meeting with the disturbingly attractive Jinny Marshland, his infatuation and ardent courtship, leading to a marriage filled with a passionate devotion on one hand and doubt and jealousies on the other. Then, in a dramatic crescendo, are pictured Jimmy's disillusionment with her husband's habits and friends, his desperate attempts to keep their marriage on an even keel, and the clashing climax in which Jinny tries an easy way out.

'IF WINTER COMES'

With Walter Pidgeon, Deborah Kerr and Angela Lansbury in its pivotal roles, M-G-M has turned out an impressive and gripping filmization of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel of bigotry and injustice, "If Winter Comes," Tuesday and Wednesday at the Melba Theatre.

Laid in a small English village at the outbreak of World War II, the story tells of the liberal-minded textbook writer Mark Sabre and the lovely Nona Tybar, each of whom has made an unhappy marriage—Mark to the narrowminded and unimaginative Mabel; Nona to the gambling playboy, Tony.

Nona is resolved to leave her husband but honor and compassion prevent her from doing so when the war sends Tony away with his regiment. Mark, in the meantime, has become the target of a scurrilous attack due to his having befriended Effie Bright, daughter of a fellow employee who has been thrown out of her home because of an alleged misconduct. When Effie, waiting in vain to hear from the soldier who has gotten her into trouble, learns that Mark is being sued for divorce, her feeling of guilt is so great that she commits suicide. It is now that the whole town turns against Mark with vindictiveness and hatred and brings him to trial in one of the most powerful courtroom scenes ever depicted on the screen. Mark's refusal to take the easy way out and his ultimate vindication in the eyes of the woman he loves brings the narrative to a close in a moving climax.

NOTICE

Attention is hereby called to the public as to the laws governing fires whereby the alarm is given and the Fire Department is called for the purpose of controlling said fires.

It is now a State Law for any person or persons not a member of fire Department to hinder in any way the action of the firemen in their effort to control fires either at the fire or going to said fire or by running over fire hose.

It has been more or less a hazard in the past that when an alarm is sounded the general public rushes to the fire regardless of the thought of the Department of the fire apparatus and have and do get in firemen's and equipment's way to such an extent that firemen are hindered in their efforts to do their duty.

Please in the future if you are not on fire Department wait long enough after an alarm is given to allow the firemen to get there and then stay out of their way in their course of fighting fire.

The disregarding of these rules is punishable by a fine of $10 and is supported by state laws, and will be enforced if the general public does not abide by same.

Each and every fireman has the authority at a fire that any law enforcement officer would have and will act accordingly—please co-operate with us.

CHESSER VALLEY

LOUISE GARTMAN SMITH's Note—"Chesser" written by Louise Smith, formerly of Chesser Valley, was published in "The Cattleman" in 1944. It is reprinted here by special permission of the author and "The Cattleman." Louise Gartman is the author of "The Chesser Ranch," which was reprinted in The Eagle...

to live his life in West Texas and there leave his mark and his name on the history of the state. His wife, who helped him build in Chesser Valley, was born in Tennessee.

Elizabeth Epley was also born in 1842, and she and a younger sister were early left to the care of an aunt and uncle in Tennessee who were not too glad to be charged with them.

The trail by which Elizabeth came to Texas and eventually joined John Dan was not an easy one.

Sometime after 1850, after old John Williams had found the springs on Head Pen Branch and established Williams Ranch, he encouraged his sons and relatives to follow him to the new land in Texas. Bill Williams formed a wagon train, and the Epley girls, hearing of it, determined to run away and go with the Williams to Texas.

Nothing is known of Avery Toby, except that he slipped the Epley girls out of a window one bitter winter night, and delivered them to Bill Williams. Elizabeth was barefooted, but she wrapped a bit of old blanket around her and clung behind Bill Williams on his horse as they rode through the night to join the wagon train. They rode all night, and Elizabeth's feet were frost-bitten when at last she reached the wagons. They were in bad shape throughout the whole trip, and for a long time it appeared that she would lose both feet. She was fifteen years old.

Mrs. Bill Williams cared for both of the Epley girls, though eventually other members of the Epley family came to Texas and settled at Williams Ranch and Chesser Valley. In 1860, John Dan Chesser and Elizabeth were married in the Williams home. John Dan prepared for the future by staking a claim six miles from the Ranch, in the valley that was later to bear his name, and then went to support his wife. They were both eighteen years of age.

They walked, carrying their meager possessions in their hands, and eventually got to Burnet, Texas, where John Dan had a job carrying the mail. They honeymooned in the one-room rock house that constituted the post office. John Dan carried the mail to Fredericksburg, where he carved his name on one of the old stone buildings. There it still stands, plain for all to read.

Then John Dan became a Texas Ranger, a position he held for several years and which kept him from serving in the Civil War. He took his wife back west and established Chesser Valley.

The first settlers, who went into the Indian area with him, were Wes Head, Bud Foresyth, Bill Epley (an uncle to Elizabeth), and two sons of old John Williams, Bill and George. The Indians were still troublesome in Chesser Valley, so the Williams brothers lived at Williams Ranch and rode over to work their land, but John Dan stayed on his place and built his home. This first home was a one-room log cabin. Later, as the family enlarged—there were in all eleven children—more rooms were built on to the cabin and eventually the whole thing was covered over with lumber to form a frame house.

The original log cabin room remained the bedroom of John Dan and his wife until their deaths.

This house was more than just a home for the ever-growing Chesser family. As the Indians were pushed out and more people came in, it was the center of the community, the hotel for the stranger. No charge was made for accommodating and feeding any traveler who wished to stop there. John Dan began to be called Uncle Dan, and it was to him that the injured, the poor, or the homeless drifted.

The last Indian raid in this section of the country occurred in 1878 (see The Cattleman, December, 1943). But on May 23 of 1863, the Comanches took a scalp in Chesser Valley itself.

John and Bill Morris had made a trip to Ft. Sumpter, New Mexico, passing safely through the Indian country. They returned with a small pack train. About dawn on the morning the twenty-third they were attacked by a small group of Comanches. Bill escaped, but John was shot and scalped. They had gotten within twelve miles of home.

Just before breakfast Bill arrived breathless at the Chesser farmhouse. He stammered out his story. Elizabeth, convinced that John Dan could do nothing to aid John, and realizing that the little party of Indians would not attack farther into the valley, calmly cooked breakfast and insisted that the men eat before leaving the house.

They found John's body and brought it in on one of his own pack animals. His was one of the first graves in Williams Ranch cemetery, and it lies under a heap of great slabs of stones built up like a crypt above ground.

In later days, there was a doctor at Williams Ranch, six miles away, but in the sixties it was necessary to go to Austin for a physician if anyone insisted on having one. One day Elizabeth fainted and could not be revived. Half crazy with fright, John Dan jumped on his horse and started for Austin. When he returned with the doctor three days later, Elizabeth was still unconscious. But the doctor was able to save her, so the 250-mile journey was worthwhile.

Chesser Valley was famous for the frequency and fervency of its camp meetings. They were the biggest held in the country and whole families came by wagon for many miles to attend. They camped out in a grove of live oak trees near the tabernacle, built of brush laid up on poles, and they stayed for a week or two of preaching and praying. The preacher always stayed at the Chesser's regardless of his denomination, though the Chessers were devout Methodists.

Sometimes there might be two or three ministers, of different sects, living at the Chesser's while they rode across country to their congregations. John Dan would kill a deer or a fat hog when the preacher came and entertain lavishly. The Chesser smokehouse was full of meat and the cellar was always full of potatoes, dried beans, and vegetables. John Dan thought nothing of setting a table for fifty people. Fifty was, in fact, almost an every Sunday gathering, as John Dan asked his neighbors home from church for Sunday dinner. His wife and three daughters got up before dawn on Sunday to prepare for it.

Family prayer was retained as a daily custom in the Chesser home until John Dan's death in 1914. Each night the entire family, the servants, and whatever company there might be, gathered in the living room and listened to John Dan read the scriptures and then pray. A visiting preacher might occasionally conduct the service. The family Bible is now in the possession of Mrs. Henry Williams, of Mullin, who was Ola Chesser.

In 1869, when the mob troubles were first beginning at Williams Ranch, the first mob swept down on Chesser Valley and searched John Dan's home. Mrs. Felix Johnson of Brownwood, who was then Mary Chesser and a child of five, remembers it as the most frightening moment of her life. She says that adults and children alike were scared almost to death, more frightened than they had ever been of Indians. But no one was molested, and no one ever knew why the house was searched.

None of the Chessers was involved in the mob trouble, largely because John Dan was such an old settler and so highly respected. However, as the terror grew through the 1870's, it lapped over into Chesser Valley and the stories of murder and hangings were whispered up and down the valley.

In 1887, Andrew Smith, who lived in a rent house belonging to the Chessers, found a Mexican hanging to a live oak tree near Blanket Creek, about three miles from the Chesser Valley Farm.

Investigation found the Mexican quite dead, and it was later reported that he had been hanged by mistake. He was a close friend of a man named Henry Leal. When the mob searched for Leal—for a reason long since lost—they caught the Mexican in the dark and hanged him without too close inquiry about his identity.

The lumber for the first school at Chesser Valley was hauled from Round Rock by ox-wagon by the men of the community, who divided the work among them. It was the biggest school in Brown county, at one time having about fifty students. It was a one-teacher school in a one-room school house. The floor was of hard-packed dirt, and the first benches were split logs, later replaced by plank benches and desks. The plank floor came in 1890. The principal subjects were the three "R's," reading, 'riting,' and 'rithmetic.' Geography was taught, but no history.

One of the most exciting tales still told in the Chesser clan is "how Aunt Nancy was eaten by the bear." One day in 1876, Nancy Epley, Elizabeth's cousin, went down from her uncle's log cabin to the old John Williams place to borrow some smoothing irons. She started home and was attacked by a black bear cub, one of two chained to stobs in the Williams yard. Old John had trapped them and was having cages built to transport them to Austin for sale.

The bear, his stake and chain dragging behind him, seized Nancy's arm. She screamed and tried to run back to the house. Old Rock, the Williams' blue shaggy dog, attacked the bear and tried to pull him away, but the bear was too big. He threw off the dog and caught at Nancy again, tearing her face and shoulders. The dog kept worrying the bear and Nancy finally got into the house.

But the door was not very strong and the bear started to tear it down. The house was full of women who that morning had been washing at the spring. They brought some fresh-killed beef from the kitchen and cut it into strips. The meat was thrust out the window of the cabin to the bear, and he left the door to eat it. Another woman slipped out the back door, got on a horse, and rode down to the mill at Williams Ranch for help.

Ben White, who worked in the mill and was then building cages for the bears, heard the screaming and started for the cabin. He met the woman coming for help but had to ride back to the mill for his gun. He finally killed the bear.

Elizabeth Chesser bound up Nancy's wounds and stopped the flow of blood which had so maddened the bear, but Nancy forever after bore the scars of the mauling.

Part of the old Chesser Valley community, is now occupied by the maneuvering area from Camp Bowie at Brownwood. Camp Bowie officials have also repaired and used part of the old Wire Road, which ran through Chesser Valley and Williams Ranch. The Wire Road was so named because it was the trail worn during the building of the first telegraph line through this country from Austin to Ft. Concho, now San Angelo.

One of the tragedies that the old Chesser Valley Farm saw was the death of three-year-old Ellen Williams, daughter of George and Jackie Williams and granddaughter of old John, on September 21, 1881. The Williams were spending the day with the Chessers, and all the children old enough had gone grape-hunting. Ellen, too small to go, took a piece of bread from the kitchen and wandered out to the front porch to eat in the shade.

Her short legs carried her too near the edge of the porch and she stumbled against a long wooden flower box. In falling she struck the edge of the porch and broke her neck.

In the hot September weather, the dead did not linger long at Chesser Valley. Elizabeth Chesser and Mrs. Bud Foresyth sewed all afternoon and through the night to make a burial dress for the funeral service to be held the next day at the Chesser home. Just at dusk the grape-hunters returned, laden with a bumper crop of mustang grapes, themselves purple stained and dirty. There was no way to remove the stains before the funeral. Burial was in the Williams Ranch cemetery, where Ellen Williams lay not far from the graves of John Morris, several Indians, the victims of a dozen or more mob murders, and a few children who had died peacefully not by violence.

Though there was sorrow and sudden death in the pioneer days, there was laughter and practical joking also. Walter Chesser, one of John Dan's boys, was an inveterate prankster, and tales of his escapades still are told in Mullin and Goldthwaite.

The Chessers had an old egg-sucking dog that they one day instructed Walter to destroy. He killed the dog and then he and one of the younger boys dressed the carcass in some of Walter's clothes and hung it to a tree. The next day the hanging was reported in Mullin, a town still sensitive of the memory of hangings and the violence of mob days. The news spread that the body of a man was suspended from a live oak tree off the Wire Road.

The justice of the peace and all the men in town rode out to see, and when it was discovered that it was only a dog they were so mad they wanted to prosecute the boys. Bill Williams, son of old John and benefactor of the young Elizabeth, rode into Goldthwaite ahead of the Mullin delegation and cooked up another practical joke with the district judge at Goldthwaite.

When the justice of the peace, a man named Bellu, who had long been the butt of jokes in Mullin, arrived, the judge inquired sternly who had last handled the dog's body. The J. P. replied that he had cut it down. Asked if he had buried it, he said that he had left it lying where it fell, in the old Wire Road.

The judge then warned that the nearest residents, the Chessers, were going to file a complaint against the Mullin men for leaving dead livestock in the right of way. So the J. P. got into his hack and went back to bury the dog as fast as he could, and Walter Chesser wept unpunished for his prank.

One of the most picturesque figures of the early days was Columbus Chesser, who is thought to have been a brother to John Dan, but may have been half-brother or cousin. He was a huge man, weighing nearly five hundred pounds. On Saturdays he used to come to Goldthwaite, setting serenely in a rocking chair placed in the bed of a wagon, his son driving. He was a full wagon load. Though most of the colored people brought into Williams Ranch in the sixties were later expelled by the mobs, one at least benefited from having served there. Harriet, an old Williams Ranch slave, was a specialist in the preparation of infare suppers, and she passed the talent to her daughter, Alice. In 1880, Alice cooked the infare supper at the Chesser Valley Farm for the wedding of Mary A. Chesser and Felix Johnson.

It must have been a memorable banquet, for in 1890 Alice, then living in Fort Worth, appealed to the Chessers to help her prove her age and secure an old age pension. Memory of the infare supper for the wedding was about the only thing the Chessers could recall, but from that it could be proved that Alice was over sixty-five. She was actually about eighty.

John Dan Chesser died in 1914, aged 71 years, 11 months, and 24 days. Elizabeth disposed of the original Chesser Valley Farm. She died in 1924, and in 1926 the old farmhouse and out-buildings were destroyed by fire and the place was incorporated into Sleepy Hollow cattle ranch.

Of the early settlers who braved Indians, isolation, and death in many forms to settle the ranch land near Herd Pen Branch, little remains except stories passed from father to son. Their descendants forsook Chesser Valley when the railroad was built through Goldthwaite and Mullin, and the boys and girls of Foresythes, Heads, Epleys, Williams and Chessers go to newer school houses now, living only in story and adventures of their grandparents and great grandparents.

Post Offices Sell U. S. Savings Bonds

Washington D. C.—Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson displays Security Loan poster which will remind millions of Americans as they visit local post offices to buy extra United States Savings Bonds now to build security for themselves and their country.

U. S. SECURITY COMES FIRST

The job of administering the European aid program must be accomplished without disabling the U. S. economy and security.

There is not the slightest reason why we should hamstring at home the enterprise system which alone makes it possible for us to help abroad.

The goal of the ERP can be reached only if we go about it in a businesslike fashion—if we apply to this gigantic problem the same reasoning we use when we set out to give the old house a new paint job!

DISCIPLINING OUR EMOTIONS

The statement by safety specialists that the majority of traffic accidents can be traced to emotional disturbances on the part of drivers is not particularly surprising when we think of our own days when everything goes wrong. We stub a toe getting out of bed, cut ourselves shaving, slip on the soap, growl at the coffee and snarl at the wife. Then we slam into the car, race the motor, strip the gears, graze the garage doors and are off in a fog from the flooded carburetor. We may be a 4-star driver other days, but today we're a menace to all and sundry and a natural for a bad accident.

All this is human nature, of course, but that does not mean that nothing can be done about it if drivers are willing to make a sincere effort for the sake of safety. Disciplining one's emotions is always hard, but it's nowhere nearly so hard as the physical and mental sufferings that follows an accident.

What is called for, figuratively speaking, is a Safe Driving Personality, to be donned the moment the motorist gets in the car and kept on until he gets out. Specifically, it means being so safety conscious (or danger conscious) that when he puts his hands on the wheel, he automatically puts aside irritations and worries and lets a completely new set of reflexes take over. That isn't impossible; it can be done; it saves lives.

Driving is a full-time job. It demands not only automatic skills, but alertness and plenty of emotional control. With thousands more cars on the roads than ever before, deaths and injuries will increase proportionately unless motorists will take the trouble to discipline their emotions in the cause of safe driving.

HEALTH NOTES

A warning against the hitchhiking germ of typhoid fever has just been issued by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. They must catch a ride from an infected person to the well person; this is generally accomplished by water, milk, flies, fingers, or food. Every case is contracted by way of the mouth and digestive system.

A carrier is a person who has had typhoid fever at some time and who even after recovery carries the germ of the disease in the urine and discharge of the bowels. Carriers who are careless in their personal habits are likely to infect any food they handle with unwashed hands. Some of the most serious and far-reaching outbreaks of the disease have been caused by drinking milk or eating foods that have been handled by carriers. Persons may be carriers without knowing it.

Typhoid fever is unnecessary and preventable. Every case is due either to community negligence or to the ignorance or carelessness of some individual. Persons planning a vacation or trip where sanitation may not be rigidly enforced should protect themselves against this disease by being vaccinated. Inoculation with typhoid vaccine, a week apart, is all that is necessary to secure protection against this disease for two years. The purity of water, milk, or food cannot be judged by looking at it so the best thing to do is to play safe and have your physician protect you.

Plenty of young, tender green feeds often save as much as 15 percent of the mash usually fed to growing pullets. Some of these good green feeds are: rape, turnip greens, lettuce, ladino clover, lespedeza, soybeans, Bermuda grass and lawn clippings.

SCRIPTURE: Esther.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 44: 1-5.

Esther's Zeal For Her People

Lesson for June 13, 1948

GEORGE MEREDITH has a line that runs like this, "God's rarest blessing is, after all, a good woman." In this study of Esther, you may wish to think of her primarily as a courageous woman—most people do, I guess. But back of her courage was a solid goodness, else she would never have been able to say, "And if I perish, I perish."

Dr. Newton

One must read the Book of Esther, of course, to have any grasp of this great story. It requires but a few minutes, and every reader will be richly rewarded. I have a lawyer friend, a prodigious reader, who tells me that once each month, for the past 50 years, he has read the Book of Esther.

A QUEEN WHO WAS BRAVE

DANIEL, we agreed, was a brave person; but not more brave than Esther. There is a verse in Hebrews 13:6 that serves admirably to interpret this first stage of Esther's manifest courage. "The Lord is my helper."

We go to the palace in Shushan, where reigned Ahasuerus. His kingdom stretched from India even unto Ethiopia. His queen, Vashti, refused to come before him when he had made a feast. As a result of this refusal, the king ordered young maidens brought before him that he might choose a new queen. There was in the court a Jew, Mordecai, who had been brought there from Jerusalem. He had in his care the daughter of his uncle, a beautiful maiden, named Esther. Mordecai saw here a great opportunity, and he brought her before the king. She was chosen. This brief sketch accounts for her position.

A QUEEN WHO HELPED HER PEOPLE

HAMAN, who was next to the king in authority, discovering that Mordecai was a Jew and was not worshipping as Haman had commanded, caused a decree to be issued which would put to death all the Jews in the kingdom. Mordecai, learning of this decree, sent word secretly to Esther, urging her to intercede on behalf of her people to the king.

Here is the heart of the story. Space does not permit a detailed recital. It is sufficient to say that Esther, though still in her early twenties, managed this delicate situation with such skill that the gallows which Haman had built for Mordecai turned out to be the instrument of death for Haman and his sons. Instead of the Jews being slaughtered, those who had planned the death of all the Jews lay dead.

ESTHER RISKED ALL AND WON ALL

IF EVER there was a perfect illustration of staking one's all on one great moment, Esther provides such illustration. "Who knoweth whether thou art not come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" said Mordecai as he bolstered her nerve.

It is such a challenge as young people may be facing today. Obviously, the moment now confronting us calls for great faith and great sacrifice if this world is to be saved from utter destruction. It may be that this situation calls for hitherto unknown tactics. And let us pray God there is somewhere an Esther.

THE MESSAGE OF ESTHER

WHICH leads me on to suggest that racial hatred was never more bitter than at this moment. Unless the winds of God blow, unless some mighty manifestation of divine intervention is granted, the world will break up on the rocks of prejudice and selfishness and ambition and all the forms and fashions of sin.

"God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." Let us pray that we may early witness some mighty stroke of his mercy and deliverance, ere the night let down.

Atomic Hope

Terrifying as is the prospect of atomic energy running wild in the hands of a generation of men morally and spiritually unprepared to handle it, even more thrilling is the prospect of a Divine Will subjecting even such a diabolic thing as the atomic bomb to discipline and control.

Mills County Veterans' Vocational School

The T. and I. Class under Jack Locklear is cleaning and repairing the old building on the east side of the school lot and working it over for a shop room. After July 1, a full time class in shop and cabinet work will be started. Equipment is being installed for the different types of work to be offered. Veterans interested in this course should contact the coordinator or Mr. Locklear.
 Changes are being planned by the Veterans' Administration and State Dept. of Education for complete revision of courses of study for all T. I. and distributive education classes. These classes will go to full time training after July 1st and veterans and employers should be making their plans accordingly. It is the purpose of the school to arrange schedules to the best advantage of all concerned. Anyone interested in the new program should confer with the office of the coordinator or with the instructors of these subjects.

The Star agriculture class moved into their new building one night this week and are well pleased with it. The veterans with their families met for a house party sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Carothers. They played games of progressive dominoes, giving prizes to the winners. Mrs. Othel Lucas and Mrs. Carothers were the winning players. The women furnished cakes for the occasion while the men supplied ice cream and lemonade. Some 40 adults were present and about half that number of children. All report a delightful time. They had some lemonade and cream left over. Wish more of us could have been there. Well, we hope that the class will try this again and will invite the writer and his wife. Social functions of this sort are very helpful to any community.

United Nations and Used Fats

"Fats and oils, the food commodity probably second in importance to cereal," says the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations, "are unfortunately appearing to be almost as inadequate as a year ago while prospects, do not warrant any real optimism for the next year or two at least." Fat saved in your kitchen and sold to your meat dealer helps ease the most critical shortage of fats and oils in history.

FOR CHEVROLET CO.

The revolutionary new Ford four-door sedan for 1949 is lower, wider, roomier and provides nearly 25 per cent more visibility.

Revolutionary changes in the 1949 Ford cars are reflected in the styling, utility and ruggedness of the station wagon and convertible models.

The 1949 station wagon is the only one in the low-priced field with a two-door, all-steel body. Beauty of wood paneling has been enhanced by this modern design. Plywood veneer panels of selected hardwoods are bolted directly to the steel body.

A number of new and important safety features have been engineered into the new station wagon. Outstanding is elimination of the rear doors and enlarging the two front doors. Careless or playful children can't accidentally lean against or bump the door handles to open the doors while the car is in motion.

The new type of construction is designed to eliminate squeaks and rattles. Ruggedness has been achieved by transfer of all body stresses and strains to the all-steel construction as well as elimination of two doors.

To provide greater strength and safety, because of heavier loads often carried in station wagons, it is equipped with a special X-type frame. Ford engineers say there is enough built-in protection in the 1949 station wagon to meet the exacting safety requirements for school buses.

The station wagon has seats for eight passengers but the new arrangements permit easy loading of baggage without the end-gate at the rear. The extra large doors provide easy access.

Two rear seats may be removed easily so that large loads may be carried. The wagon also is equipped with end-gate and easily operated life-door at the rear.

The 1949 convertible is long, low and graceful yet embodies all the advanced engineering provided in other body styles. There is greater comfort, performance and economy.

Front seat is six and a half inches wider, and the rear seat two and a half inches wider than the 1948 models. There is ample room for three persons in each seat. Luggage space under the rear deck totals 28 cubic feet, nearly twice as much as in previous models, and all useable.

The ride of the new convertible has been improved with low-frequency "hydra-coil" springs in front, and extra-long longitudinal springs at the rear combined with direct acting airplane type shock absorbers.

According to a veteran Ford test driver: "It rides like a car and performs like a car five hundred pounds lighter."

GHS SENIORS TRIP

Thirty-six seniors left at seven o'clock Friday, May 21 on their long-looked-forward-to senior trip. They were chaperoned by Mrs. J. H. Harrell, Sr. and Mrs. Floyd Sykes. Mrs. Thompson, senior sponsor, and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Patton went along. Two buses were taken and were driven by Elton Horton and John Flores.

The party arrived in Austin around ten-thirty and immediately went to the library tower of Texas University. After everyone enjoyed reviewing the sights for miles around from the twenty-ninth floor observation tower, they moved on to the State Capital, visiting the Senate and House chambers.

By this time everyone was ready for the lunch which they had with them. The same was thoroughly enjoyed after a swim in beautiful Barton Springs.

With the afternoon ahead, the journey to Houston began. A stop here and there, of course, and Houston was sighted about six o'clock.

Mrs. Thompson completed arrangements for hotel rooms in the San Jacinto Hotel. After everyone was registered and had received his room key, he headed for his shower.

Greatly refreshed and feeling gay, students went in groups to picture shows or just window shopping.

Twelve o'clock was the deadline; naturally one and all (?) fell into bed to get a good night's rest for the day ahead.

After breakfast at seven on Saturday morning, the busses turned toward Galveston, carrying the group of wildly excited students.

The drive through Galveston was beautiful because all heartily agreed that the millions of blooming oleanders and palm trees were indeed a thrilling sight.

Perhaps, though, the most thrilling event of the entire trip was the sight of the Gulf from the huge causeway.

That thrill was not felt momentarily because after reaching Stewart Beach and soaking in sun-tan oil the group of happy people waded out into the waves. For about an hour and a half, the party enjoyed swimming, surf riding, and sun bathing. They then went in search of food after which the loaded busses headed across town to the boat docks where the class had rented two cabin cruisers. The next two hours were spent in an 18-mile boat ride around the Gulf coastline and up the channel a way. Everyone was very thrilled at the sight of all the ships. There were many kinds—cargo vessels, freighters, and many smaller boats, including two ferries. The large ships were being loaded with oil and sulphur.

After getting back to dry land, the group turned back toward Houston.

Upon arriving in Houston, they went to their hotel rooms and refreshed themselves for an evening of fun in Playland Park. There the seniors had a hilarious time riding the roller coaster and other devices of merriment. They arrived back at the hotel by 12:00.

The group arose early, had breakfast, and checked out of the hotel at 8:00. A ride round the campus of Rice Institute and an hour's stop in the Herman Park Zoo filled up the time to 10:30.

At that time the busses headed toward the San Jacinto Battle ground. Upon arriving there, the group immediately went on board the battleship "Texas". The exploration of the ship was very interesting.

After leaving the ship, the group enjoyed a rest and snack under the shade trees.

About 2:30 they drove over to the San Jacinto monument, where the surrounding country was viewed from the top of the tower which is about 500 feet high.

After an interesting visit through the museum, they headed back to Houston. The group stopped to eat in Houston and then started the return trip to Goldthwaite.

Several stops were made, including the one to eat supper in La Grange.

The very tired and sleepy, but happy group arrived back in Goldthwaite at 2:00 a. m. Monday morning. That ended the most wonderful event of the seniors' lives. It will always be in their memories and they want to thank the ones who made it possible for them to raise the money to take the trip. Many thanks to the mothers and to Mrs. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Patton for helping give the seniors such a grand time.

Fats and Oils Still Below Prewar Level

The U. S. Department of Commerce 1947 fats and oils industrial report for the U. S. shows supplies of fats and oils were increased by net imports of $475 million pounds, but net receipts were still more than 1 billion pounds below the prewar average.

Homemakers can help our domestic output by saving used kitchen grease and selling it to their meat dealers. These used fats are processed and reused for industrial purposes.
