MIAMI LOOSES TO AMARILLO

One of the largest crowds that ever gathered at a foot ball game in Miami witnessed the game last Saturday between what was said to be the Amarillo High School team and the Miami School team. Amarillo brought them more than twice as many spectators as has ever tried out with the Miami team. This alone is a very big thing in as much as they can get players every time one gets a short on breath.

The game was hotly contested from the first kickoff to the last whistle. Amarillo making the first touchdown but failed to kick goal. Miami received the ball and Hall Nelson for the locals made a sixty yard run for a touchdown, and when the score stood six to six in favor of Miami. Amarillo ended in getting two more touchdowns during the game and kicked one time, making the final score seven to seven.

Amarillo put up extra good interference in their runs, but failed to complete a forward pass. They lost most of their gains by sheer force, having a team that compared to ours in weight about like boiler makers would compare to watchmakers.

Some Miami people who claim to know say that part of the Amarillo team was composed of railroad shopmen, street car conductors and ex-convicts, this however, might be true and still they would come under the rules of the Interscholastic league, but we are doubting it very much if they do. The rules of the State Interscholastic league are to be eligible to play football on High School teams, the player is taking at least four subjects passing in not less than three of them.

That as it may, Amarillo won the game over Miami, but did not get away with as much as they expected when they came down. Some little disturbance was had during the game when an Amarillo player weighing about 200 struck at one of the Miami players of about 115 pounds. However, there were about seven hundred people who saw the play start and were on the ground in about five seconds to make up any difference in the weight of the two players.

Since the game Saturday, we can begin to see why Plainview has such a squabble with the Amarillo football team about the Amarillo methods of procedure. We still believe that Miami has the fastest bunch of High School kids in the Panhandle, there may be some High School (?) men who can beat them, but student bodies within the school and qualifications.

LOCAL CITIZEN MADE VERY HEAVY DONATION TO MISSION

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Stump left this week by automobile for Falfurrias, Texas, which is near the Rio Grande, where they will spend the winter of possibly longer. At this place the Southern Church are establishing a Mexican Mission School. Mr. Stump has given $35,000.00 to the school and will have charge of its establishment.

He has secured a nice tract of land within five miles of the town, and will begin erection of buildings at once.

LADIES BIBLE CLASS

The ladies of the Church of Christ met with Mrs. C. P. Pursley last Tuesday and had a good lesson. Will meet with Mrs. Claude Locke next Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. The Fourth chapter of Ephesians will be our lesson. Mrs. Lee Sanders.

TWO MEN CHARGED WITH TRANSPORTING WHISKEY

Canadian Record.—Two men, Vernon Cole and Gus Cree, of Wichita Falls, Texas, were arrested Saturday night in Canadian by Marshall J. C. Killebrew, charged with transporting whiskey. They were placed in jail and a preliminary trial was held before P. H. Loomis, justice of the peace, Wednesday. They waived preliminary and were bound over to await the action of the grand jury, their bonds being placed at $1,000 each. They expressed an opinion that they could supply the bond.

A Mrs. Anna Bell Connell, also of Wichita Falls, has been held as a material witness in the case, her bond being placed at $500 for appearance, and a cash bond was given by her husband, W. A. Miles, who married her just before the preliminary trial of Cole and Cree.

It seems that the men were coming to Wheeler County, they announced, to visit relatives, and Mrs. Connell, who desired to visit her parents near Wheeler, was given an opportunity to ride with them. After visiting her parents Mrs. Connell was brought by the young men to Canadian to take the train back to Wichita Falls.

At the Hotel Moody people soon were made aware that there was good corn licker somewhere near by the odors that came from the car the men came in. Mr. Killebrew was notified, and he soon interviewed the lady, who readily told him all she knew about the whiskey odor that came from the car.

She stated that after leaving the home of her parents near Wheeler the men drove to the Oklahoma line and left her at a farm house. They went into Oklahoma and were gone about three hours, and on coming back stated that they had had tire trouble, which kept them away so long.

Of her information and with her as a guide, Mr. Killebrew secured three gallons of whiskey in fruit jars, real genuine home brewed moonshine from Snaky Bend. The whiskey being in fruit jars, had leaked some and saturated a wagon sheet, and this trial of attractive at mosphere had led to the apprehension of the men under the charge of having whiskey in their possession illegally. The whiskey had been buried about two miles outside of Canadian.

The men appear to be about twenty-five years old. Their lady passenger is a young woman. An interesting sequel to the affair developed when W. R. Miles, the fiancée of the woman, on hearing of the trouble, came to Canadian from Wichita Falls, and he and Mrs. Connell were united in marriage in the court room immediately before the preliminary trial of the men.

TEXAS PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Austin, Texas.—President Wilson has written to the National Tuberculosis Association expressing his interest in the nation wide fight of that organization and its 1200 local anti-tuberculosis associations in all parts of the United States. He also endorsed the Christmas Seal Sale. This is a statement made today by the Texas Public Health Association which will direct the sale of Christmas seals in Texas, December 1 to 11.

The president wrote. "I cannot too often express my profound interest in the work being done to check tuberculosis. My interest in the movement is very great and lasting and I wish for it the most complete success. I hope that the little stamps that you are seeking to sell will find millions of purchasers."

Commander Evangeline Boothe of the Salvation Army has asked that all officers, cadets, and soldiers of the "Army" aid in manning Christmas Seal booths, lend their hands, distribute literature, and help in any way in the anti-tuberculosis campaign. The evening of December 8, and all day December 9, have been set aside by the Commander for special emphasis on the Christmas Seal sale and the tuberculosis work.

Miss Edith Kempthorne, national field secretary of the Campfire Girls has heartily endorsed the suggestion that the Campfire Girls could render a distinct community service by cooperating in the sale of the tuberculosis Christmas Seals. A prize has been offered any Campfire organization selling $50 worth or more of the little seals, and letters to that effect have been written to the 6,300 Campfire Guardians in the United States.

HEALTH HINTS

An unclean alimentary tract is a direct invitation to typhoid, colds, and Pandora's box of dangerous diseases.

Health is purchasable.—Invest. Mould will grow in the bread box as long as the smallest particle remains in it. It will also grow in ice chests, unless they are scalded often. Boiling and scalding kill mould.

Teachers: You cannot teach sanitation in school and tolerate insanitary conditions at school.

Health habits make for healthy living.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

At the Elite Saturday morning at an early hour, the Bazaar will supply you with most anything you need at a reasonable price. Sandwiches and coffee and cooked foods.

RED CROSS NOTES

Three hundred thousand children and 20,000 mothers die in the United States of causes which are entirely preventable each year, statistics compiled by the American Red Cross show. In addition to these deaths are many more that could be prevented, including 200,000 each year from tuberculosis alone.

It is to alleviate this condition and eventually to make it a thing of the past that the Red Cross will devote most of its energy henceforth; for the health work of the peace-time program of the organization, is its predominating feature.

Public health nurses of the Red Cross will teach mothers proper care of their children's health, touching upon various angles ranging from the eradication of any physical ailments the children may have to their proper nutrition and environments.

When the mothers themselves need the care of a trained nurse, the public health nurses will supply this need themselves or will see to it that the mother has a competent nurse.

Health knowledge will be imparted generally to the Red Cross nurses and workers throughout the United States and it is hoped that through this dissemination of information which heretofore has not been accessible to all of the people, that their health will have become more efficiently protected and that conditions which now exists, will have become impossible.

LEGION TEAM TO McLEAN

The American Legion team of Miami go today to McLean to play a return foot ball game with the McLean Cow Boys. The McLean boys think they got a little too much rough treatment in the game here Ananistic day and are anxious for revenge. The boys left this morning and will play the game and return today.

THE BAZAAR SATURDAY

The ladies of the Missionary Society will give a Bazaar Saturday November 27 at the Elite Confectionary.

The funds realized from the Bazaar are to be used for improvement on the local church and parsonage. There are several things that need to be taken care of locally and it takes money so we are taking this method to raise some of the money needed. We are asking every member of the church to help us with salable articles of any kind and cooked food also dressed chickens.

Any article from friends who are interested will be greatly appreciated.

Come to the Bazaar to buy Xmas presents, "We Will Have them."

We will serve chicken sandwiches and coffee through out the day.

We invite you all to come to our Xmas Bazaar. Local Supt.

FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I was poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."—Mrs. R. E. DEMING, 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moreover this reliable remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and owes its efficiency to the medicinal extractives of the native roots and herbs which it contains.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all drug stores for 50 cents a large box."

"I was an untold sufferer from old running sores and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars' worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6 inches in all, and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again."

"You may use this to recommend your ointment, if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Medina, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE LAST OF THE BARONS

By EDWARD BULWER-LYTTON

Condensation by Prof. William Fenwick Harris

Edward Bulwer-Lytton was brilliantly versatile. As a statesman, he was far-sighted and astute; as a dramatist, in "The Lady of Lyons," "Richelieu" and "Money," he struck and held the popular taste; as a novelist, he produced some twenty-odd romances of widely varying type; as a poet and political essayist, he was less notable.

During the early years of his marriage Bulwer was goaded to increased production by the greed of making money. Although his wealthy mother's purse was open to him, her disapproval of his marriage and his work was so irritatingly expressed that he finally had to refuse her assistance. The consequent driving necessity accounted somewhat for his facility and his quick sense of what the public was going to like next.

By means of sparkling epigram in his fashionable novel, "Pelham," he early achieved a reputation as a man of the world. He then occupied himself with the crime-novel and the romance of mysteries. The satire of Thackeray and others in Fraser's Magazine drove him away from the field of burglary and homicide, and he devoted his history for subjects. This produced "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Rienzi" and "The Last of the Barons." In "The Caxtons" he founded the "strange cult of the colonies." This and two more of his best works responded to the popular demand for domestic novels. Tales of terror next attracted the public and Bulwer created a sensation by "The Strange Story," which came to him in a dream, and "The Haunted and the Haunters," one of the most perfect ghost stories in English literature.

Finally, he wrote novels and satires of society. His very versatility perhaps prevented his digging deeply into reality.

LISTEN to an English nobleman paint a picture of the rise in his country of that trading bourgeoisie which is so much in the talk of today. The leaders in the strife are Edward the Fourth, trader-king, and Richard Neville, earl of Warwick, king-maker and "Last of the Barons." Around them cluster the lives of many others in the great struggle. The scene is set for the Battle of Barnet, April 14, 1471, in the Wars of the Roses.

"Raw, cold and dismal dawned the morning of the fourteenth of April, the Easter Sabbath. In the fortunes of that day were involved those of all the persons who hitherto, in the course of this narrative, may have seemed to move in separate orbits from the fiery star of Warwick. Now, in this crowning hour, the vast and gigantic destiny of the great earl comprehended all upon which its darkness or its light had fallen; not only the luxurious Edward, the perjured Clarence, the haughty Margaret, her gallant son, the gentle Anne, the remorseful Isabel, the dark guile of Gloucester, the rising fortunes of gifted Hastings—but on the hazard of that day rested the hopes of Hilyard, and the interests of the trader Alwyn, and the permanence of that frank, chivalric, hardy, still half-Norman race, of which Nicholas Alwyn and his Saxon class were the rival antagonistic principle, and Marmaduke Neville the ordinary type. Dragged inexorably into the whirlpool of that mighty fate were even the very lives of the simple scholar, Adam Warner, of his obscure and devoted child, Sibyll. Here, into this gory ocean, all scattered rivulets and streams had hastened to merge at last.

"But grander and more awful than all individual interests were those assigned to the fortunes of this battle, so memorable in the English annals—the ruin or triumph of a dynasty; the fall of that warlike baronage, of which Richard Neville was the personification, the crowning flower, the greatest representative and the last—associated with memories of turbulence and excess. It is true, but with the proudest and grandest achievements in our early history; with all such liberty as had been yet achieved since the Norman conquest; with that famous glory as had made the island famous—here with Runnymede, and there with Cressy; the rise of a crafty, plotting, imperious despotism, based upon the growing sympathy of craftsmen and traders, and ripening on the one hand to the Tudor tyranny, the republican reaction under the Stuarts, the slavery and the Civil war, but on the other hand to the concentration of all the vigor and life of genius into a single and strong government, the graces, the arts, the letters of a polished court, the freedom, the energy, the resources of a commercial population destined to rise above the tyranny at which it had first convulsed, and give to the emancipated Saxons the markets of the world. Upon the victory of that day those contending interests, this vast alternative in the future, swayed and trembled."

Despite the stilted language of another day and the portly size of the volume, "The Last of the Barons" is read today because the characters who play so large a part in one of the great human struggles toward liberty are all human beings and not mere puppets. The story is one of intrigue and of battle, centering nominally in the Wars of the Roses and the struggles of the two great houses of York and Lancaster; yet the interest is far larger than a mere dynastic one; the rise of the middle class to power at the expense of the baronial, the growth of a national spirit in place of mere individual loyalty to a feudal chieftain, is the important thing in this manifestation of class-consciousness, the plain people uniting with the trading townsmen against the nobles.

The great earl, who had made Edward the Fourth king, found himself for very personal reasons trying to unseat that prince and to put in his place another Edward, of the house of Lancaster, heir to Henry the Sixth, whom Edward of York was holding a prisoner in the Tower. Yet Warwick's path was not an easy one; while his younger daughter was married to Edward of Lancaster, his other daughter, Isabel, was the wife of the king's younger brother Clarence, who was as yet the male heir to the throne. However things might go, a Warwick might some day sit upon the throne of England—if one did not take thought of the possibilities that lay hidden behind the inscrutable smile of the king's youngest brother, Richard, duke of Gloucester. But Warwick was at heart fighting the battle of aristocracy, while the king was with the current which was converting an agricultural into a trading population. With Warwick was his powerful fighting brother, Montagu; with him—or against him, who could tell?—was his other brother, the facile archbishop who aspired to be a pope, whose mansion was at once a school for youth, a court for middle life, an asylum for age, whither as to a Medici fled the letters and the arts.

In the end Warwick found himself in open battle against the king he had placed upon the throne. The impetuous and fiery temperament of Edward the Fourth was rendered yet more fearful by the indulgence of every intemperance. His very virtues strengthened his vices; his courage stiffed every whisper. It almost seemed as if he loved to provoke a danger for the pleasure it gave his brain to baffle or his hand to crush it. And yet he had a shrewd policy which perhaps drew him knowingly into the quarrel with Warwick, which merely his evil passions seemed to provoke. "I wish to raise a fresh nobility," he said, "to counteract the pride of the old; only upon new nobles can a new dynasty rely." This was the Yorkist principle of humbling the baronial and raising the middle class. It was easy of execution at a period when a martial aristocracy was beginning to merge into a voluptuous court.

Warwick was defending freedom for the barons. Robin Hilyard was struggling to win freedom for the people as against king and nobles. Yet the earl and Robin found themselves fighting in the same army. "Neither white rose nor red shall be on my banner," cried Hilyard, "but our standard shall be the gory head of the first oppressor we can place upon a pole. We are taxed, ground, pillaged, plundered—sheep, maintained to be sheared for your peace or butchered for your war." Through the cause of the gentle Henry in the Tower Robin saw greater freedom for the people.

War is not the only theme of the book, however. The intrigues of the queen's family, the patient diplomacy of the bitter and revengeful Margaret of Anjou, queen of the king in the Tower, the love of the gentle Anne Neville for Margaret's son Edward, the influence of royal marriages on the fate of nations, the struggles of the Lollards, predecessors of the Puritans who caused Charles the First so much trouble; the fine Italian hand of Richard, duke of Gloucester; the long and patient toil of Adam Warner, scholar who dreamed of harnessing steam to his machine Eureka to do the work of the world long before the world was ready to have its work done by any such magical means; the chicanery of Friar Bungey, adept in all the secret arts of the time, who thought to steal poor Adam's secret from him; but above all else the troubled tale of love of the beautiful daughter of the scholar, Sibyll, and the great and powerful Lord Hastings, with fate ever playing cruel turns against the girl as well as against the father—all these are part of this fascinating historical romance which author and public united in calling one of the best that came from the prolific pen of Bulwer-Lytton.

Warwick lost and Edward won. And with the earl perished Hilyard, but as he bravely met his death Robin cried: "The People are never beaten!" Copyright, 1923 by the Post Publishing Co. (The Boston Post).

Iron Furnace to India.
Pioneers of the iron industry throughout the country may recall the stack erected several years ago at Battelle, Ala., which was abandoned because it was too far from raw materials and had inadequate transportation facilities, says a Christian Science Monitor's Birmingham (Ala.) correspondent.
For 11 years the furnace stood in active until the war brought the demand in Mesopotamia for railroads to move troops and supplies. In August 1917, the old stack at Battelle was bought by a group of iron makers who took it down piece by piece, shipped it to New Orleans and loaded it on a steamship for India. This is said to be the first iron furnace to cross the sea and make iron on two continents.

Highway Improvement

NEED FOR BETTER HIGHWAYS

Freight Congestion on Railroads Has Emphasized Importance of Our Country Roads.

We are being treated to a demonstration of what happens when the arteries of commerce become diseased, congested and run down. The lack of adequate transportation facilities on the railroads of this country mounts into the millions of dollars in the delays that are occasioned. Our railway system, like our agricultural methods, have grown up so gradually, keeping abreast, even ahead of the demands of commerce, we have come to look upon them as a matter of course. But the even balance between transportation facilities and demands of commerce is easily upset, as the experience of the past few months has demonstrated.

Our railroad system needs rehabilitation. But along with the improvements of the railroads there is great need for a material improvement throughout the land. Over the country roads move the raw materials that go to make up a vast proportion of the tonnage carried by the railroads. The present freight congestion has emphasized the importance of the country road. It has proved the value of hard surface roads as passageways for freight carried in motor trucks and automobiles.

Much relief for the railroads has come through the immense tonnage that has moved this summer on motor trucks. A greater tonnage would undoubtedly have moved in the same manner if our highway system had been fit. The time has come when the mileage of concrete, brick or other hard-surfaced roads must extend in an ever-increasing network until the remotest parts of the country can have the advantage of quick transportation every day of the year in a motor vehicle.—American Fruit Grower.

ROCK FOR HIGHWAY BUILDING

First Systematic Efforts to Determine Value Were Made in French Laboratory in 1878.

The first systematic attempts to determine the value of rock for road building purposes by means of laboratory tests were made in France, where in 1878 a road materials laboratory was founded in the French School of Bridges and Roads. Here the Deval abrasion test was adopted, and this test with slight modification has been accepted as standard throughout the United States. The test is named from its inventor. It was first used in connection with contract work in the city of Paris. Many valuable data were collected in this laboratory on the hardness and toughness of rock, and tests for these properties were developed which were, in principle, the same as those in use today.

ARGUMENT FOR GOOD ROADS

Judgment Rendered Against County Because Culvert Was Obscured by Weed Patch.

An argument for good roads that carries with it a sharp punch in the way of a substantial judgment for damages is disclosed in a recent decision of the supreme court of Wisconsin. In this case it appears that when a machine went out of the traffic path of an old-fashioned country road for the purpose of letting a tractor pass it struck the cement curbing at the end of a culvert which crossed the road at this point. Being covered with weeds the obstruction was not seen until the accident occurred. The county was held liable in damages for the accident.

Building Going on at Rate of Mile a Week With Equipment of Michigan Contractor.

With the ever-increasing interest in the necessity of building good roads there comes the effort to build them good and fast. With the special equipment that a Michigan contractor is using concrete roads are constructed at the rate of a mile a week.

BRUSH UP ANCIENT HISTORY

Possibly You May Not Have Heard of This Goddess and Her Temple at "Emphasis."

There is employed in a Richmond household an old dandy who prides himself on his learning. On one occasion, when he was engaged in cleaning up the library of his employer, he had with him his son, aged nine.

Now, this youngster became much interested in certain engravings hung on the wall. Stopping before one of them he asked his daddy: "What picture is that?" "You don't know what that's a picture of?" demanded the parent. "You ought to read your ancient history more. That is the temple of Dinnah at Emphasis."

Story "Took Like a Funeral."

The hostess suggested that we each tell a funny story. When my turn came I was laughing so hard over the joke I wanted to tell that I could scarcely speak. Every one was anxious to hear it, and at last when I had controlled my laughter I began. No one even smiled when I finished. I was the only one who thought the story funny.—Exchange.

Poppy as Memorial Flower.

The poppy seems fated to go down into history as the "memorial flower of the American Legion." It was the common scarlet variety of that flower that grows so freely in waste places that won the regard of the men overseas, for it bloomed on, about them, and often the flower was the only beautiful thing the soldiers saw for days upon days.

The poppy is one of the oldest flowers in the world's literature, and has been sung in verse and mentioned in holy books by all races. The Oriental poppies are of orange-crimson with black centers and large seed bags which burst and scatter the seed in all directions. Other famous varieties include the slender Iceland poppy, the yellow California variety and the big double flowers. None of them have any perfume, but depend upon their beauty of form and color to attract and hold the senses.

Japanese Industry.

If Japanese mills had been able to obtain deliveries of all machinery ordered from English and United States builders since 1914, their equipment would now aggregate about 5,000,000 spindles. The actual number, however, is not more than 3,250,000.

REAL THRILL IN 20,000 FOOT DROP

Lieut. A. C. Hamilton Breaks All Records for Parachute Leap From Airplane.

TAKES LIFE IN HIS HANDS

Through Miles of Cloud Floors to the Earth Hanging to a Parachute—None the Worse for His Harrowing Experience.

New York.—All records for parachute drops went to smash at Carlstrom field when Lieut. A. G. Hamilton fell 20,000 feet through space in the quick time of 12 minutes, bettering by at least a thousand feet the record for altitude made by Lieut. Wilson in Texas. It might be noted, says Air Service news letter, that Lieut. Hamilton jumped; his method of leaving the plane was not a "drag off."

Hamilton, who has had quite a little experience with parachutes, had remarked upon hearing of the previously established record that he thought he could better it and last Friday the attempt was made. He went aloft in a La Pere piloted by Lieut. P. H. Downes. Downes pushed on until an altitude just short of 21,000 feet had been reached when a miss in the motor made it impossible to continue higher. At four miles above the earth the air was biting cold.

Circling about for a glimpse of earth through rifts in the cloud floors, the aviators described what they deduced to be Dorr field, nine miles east of Carlstrom field. Judging the speed of the wind and its effect on the chute during the drop, Lieut. Downes moved west some two miles and signaled for Lieut. Hamilton to jump.

The Parachute.

Right here mention might be made of a circumstance which puts an added thrill into parachuting at high altitudes and lends interest to the establishment of a new record. The parachute used by aviators is folded snugly inside a pack carried on the back. The operator steps off, allows himself a couple of seconds to fall clear of his machine, then pulls a wire depending over his shoulder. This wire opens the spring doors of the pack and releases a small pilot chute some couple of feet in diameter. This pilot springs open automatically and catching the rush of air, draws the main chute from the pack. In the top of the main chute is an automatic vent which, opening to a width of five feet when the big parasol first unfolds, gives the air compressed within a chance to escape and lessens the danger of blowing the chute apart. When the fall has been checked rubber springs or shock-absorbers in the vent close it in until but a small hole remains. At the atmospheric pressure wherein most parachute drops from ordinary altitudes are made the speed attained by the operator in his couple of seconds fall is sufficient to create enough pressure under the pilot chute to cause it when released to yank the big one at once from its pack. Usually the operator is descending at normal speed after falling less than 200 feet.

Through Space.

Upon receiving his pilot's signal, Hamilton climbed to the edge of the cockpit, waved his hand and dropped into space. After the usual interval he pulled his release cord but instead of having his chute immediately checked, he fell a distance which was estimated by both him and Lieut. Downes to be 2,000 feet before his parachute snapped out and opened with a loud report. Looking aloft he saw that the springs which close the vent were broken. The chute is of a size designed to enable a man to reach the ground as quickly as is consistent with safety in landing and the shock upon touching earth is always severe. With the vent wide open the best Hamilton could hope for was a few broken bones.

To add to his dismay he found upon piercing the lowest layer of clouds that Carlstrom field had been mistaken for Dorr and that instead of drifting toward the former he was due to land in the timber between there and the town of Arcadia, with good prospects of serious injury to himself. Almost below him he discerned the outlines of Joshua creek and to prevent his drifting past this he devoted all his energies. Climbing the rigging to windward he managed to pull the edge down and created a planing effect which held him pretty well into the wind. By the best of luck he dropped between the overhanging branches on either side of the creek and was saved a crash against its bed by the cushioning action of the parachute, which had become entangled in the branches of the tree. It took him a quarter of an hour to extricate himself from a mass of tangled cordage and two hours for a searching party to discover him none the worse for a somewhat harrowing experience.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FIFTY CATS.

"I'm going to tell you a story this evening," commenced Daddy, "about fifty cats."

"Dear me, Daddy," said Nancy, "you aren't picking out many characters for your story. How are you going to get them all in?"

"Yes, Daddy," said Nick. "Have a cat or two."

"Oh, I'm not going to tell you about each one by name. I'm not going to tell you about what he or she did or said or thought. I'm going to speak of the whole fifty cats all at once, or as nearly together as I can.

"You see, there was a cat show which I was able to go to the other day, and I had to talk to the cats and see just what they all had to say for themselves, for I said:

"Listen, Cats, I have to tell Nick and Nancy about you, and Nick and Nancy have lots and lots of friends who want to hear about you, too—that is, if you are nice."

"The cats all purred and leaned back on their beautiful cushions and said: 'We're worth telling about. We're show cats, beautiful silver show cats. We have perfect heads and perfect tails and perfect eyes and perfect fur.

"In fact, we're beautiful, and we're so fine that we can stay in the hotel and not keep the hotel guests awake."

"That sounded interesting to me, so I asked the cats what they did to themselves. Did they sleep all the time, and never fight? Didn't they look for back fences and not finding them, pretend that the backs of their little homes were backyard fences."

"They drew up quite stiffly at that, for they were very proud cats.

"No," one of them said, "if we were ordinary backyard cats we probably would keep folks awake. But you see we aren't. We are fine, superior cats of great and noble aristocracy."

"We wouldn't raise our voices in the horrible way that some of the common members of our family will do. We sleep and rest in great luxury on our silken cushions.

In Great Luxury.

"Our voices are as strong as those of our common cousins, but we don't go walking around back yards and on fences at night. We don't want to pretend that we're there when we're not so we don't have to use our voices in that common, ordinary way.

"We are quite ashamed to think that some of the members of our family do do such things, but then of course they've not been brought up as we have.

"We've been brought up on cream and silk coverings. We have silk over us and cream inside of us, and so should all superior cats.

"We are doing some good, though, don't forget that about us."

"What good are you doing? I asked the cats. 'Nick and Nancy are fond of animals and they wouldn't want to think you were just here licking your paws and washing your faces and smoothing your fur and eating cream and boasting.

"They'd want to think you were doing something nice and sensible, even sensible playing."

"We'll tell you," said the cats. "We haven't been brought up to be anything else but lazy. It's bred in us. We're as lazy as lazy can be. We never do anything that takes any time or trouble or effort.

"But we can say this much for ourselves. This show we're at is being given for a league of animals. All the visitors who come to see us have to pay, as well they should, but the money goes toward the work of helping all animals of the city who are tired or sick or homeless or friendless."

"Well, I am delighted to think there is that about your proud show I can tell Nick and Nancy."

"They whisked their tails and purred contentedly.

"As we're lazy, it's an easy way of being kind and good—just sitting here and being well fed."

"Tush," I said, "don't tell me more about your lazy qualities, for I want to tell Nick and Nancy that at least the people who were looking at you were helping the animals who weren't so fortunate."

Good Thing for Father.

"I punished you merely to show my love for you," said the fond father after the chastisement. "That's all right," sobbed the small boy. "But it's a g-g-good thing for you I ain't b-b-big enough to return your l-l-love, that's all."

TREED BY CATTLE

Childish Adventure That Might Have Been Tragic.

Dog's Impetuosity Got His Little Companions Into Trouble Which Nearly Had Serious Ending.

During my early childhood at the old homestead in Illinois, writes a contributor, my older sister, Lois, my brother, Marion, and myself, in company with a neighbor girl, Martha Wilson, had many interesting experiences in rambling through the woods not far from our house.

We were accompanied on one trip by our faithful dog, Old Bull, as we always called him. While we waded through the tangle of vines, rose-bushes and other shrubbery, Old Bull raced through the woods in quest of rabbits and other game. Finally, treading a squirrel, he made the woods resound with his eager barks. Some cattle grazing on the hillside raised their heads and started out to investigate. Others joined them, and when they saw the dog they all made a rush for him. Old Bull bolted for the cemetery that we had entered out of curiosity and, leaping the fence, took refuge with us. My sister, Lois, scolded him and would have quieted him, but Martha kept sipping him at them.

He needed very little encouragement, and his constant barking and the bawling of the cattle attracted the attention of all the other cattle, and they came galloping up to join in the fray. As the fence did not appear very strong, Martha and Lois decided that we had better try to slip out at the opposite side of the cemetery. This plan might have worked successfully if I had been older, but I was only five years old and very badly frightened. Old Bull followed us, barking as he went, and the cattle were close behind. We had gone only a short distance from the cemetery when the whole drove came plunging and bawling after us.

Fortunately, there was a fallen tree in which we took refuge, but as it was only a few feet from the ground we were safe only as long as Old Bull could hold them at bay. Martha and Marion kept sipping him at the cattle, while Lois tried to quiet me. The noise of the dog and of the cattle threw me into a paroxysm of terror.

The cattle, standing all about us, would bellow and bawl, toss their horns and paw up the ground. Suddenly one made a lunge for the dog, and he ran back under our fallen tree, and the cattle moved in a little closer. Then the dog redoubled his efforts and dashed frantically at the cattle, first in one direction, then in another.

But Old Bull was becoming exhausted, and the cattle were gradually closing in. They acted more like wild beasts than domesticated cattle.

Even Martha was frightened, although she was too brave to cry. The maddened animals would soon toss us on their horns and trample us underfoot. Desperately the dog made his last rush and then dropped back under our tree exhausted.

The cattle were rushing in upon us with loud bellows when a farmer heard the deafening noise and came running toward us. He seized a big club and, calling up his two dogs, drove the cattle back to a safe distance.

Martha and Lois had almost to carry me, for I was prostrated from the fright and the noise.

Old Bull, after a good drink of water, crept under the welcome shade of an old apple tree, and our mothers welcomed us with open arms when they saw our disheveled appearance.

—Youth's Companion.

The Useful Volcano.

The scarcity of coal is stimulating the search for other sources of heat and power. Much has been heard of "white coal" or the ingenious use of water power. In Italy they have hit upon another plan which promises to revolutionize the industry of the country. There are several places in Italy where the internal heat of the earth comes so near the surface that it may be tapped. In other words, the volcanoes are being harnessed to supply power. The tests already carried on are reported to have proved very successful and the work will doubtless be greatly extended. The heat thus drawn from the earth is converted into electric energy which is transmitted for great distances and employed to run railroads and operate mills. There is practically an inexhaustible supply of heat or power and it is believed that the pressing coal problem of Italy will eventually be solved.—Boys' Life.

Red Plows for China.

Chinese farmers are becoming more and more interested in American farm tools, and as time goes on a steadily increasing number of such implements will undoubtedly be made in the United States and sent overseas to do their appointed work in the soil of China. Very likely, too—for such is the implied advice of John H. Reisner, dean of the college of agriculture and forestry, University of Nanking—such tools will be painted red and lettered with a Chinese name. The college is studying the Chinese farmer, his practical needs and his customary habits of mind and it appears that, whereas the American farmer's plow is often painted blue, the Chinese farmer likes his plow painted red. Also he prefers to work with a plow bearing a Chinese name rather than any other name, and what is true of a plow is presumably true of other agricultural implements.

Indian Cattle in the South.

Some years ago it was discovered that the zebu, or humped cattle of India, are immune to the deadly "Texas fever" which was poisoning the herds of the south. A few of the Indian cattle were imported and did well, though without gaining any great popularity. Then more were imported, and now there are quite a number of them in Texas, and one cattleman values his chief "Brahmin" bull at $30,000.

Electric Wires Kill Trees.

Electric wires which touch trees can easily kill the most beautiful shade tree. This may be due partly to the work of the electric current or to the wearing through the growing surface of the tree by the wire, which deprives the tree of its sustenance.

Home Town Helps

SHOULD ALL BE NEIGHBORLY

Spirit is of Immense Importance to the Upbuilding of Community, Small or Large.

Rent hogs have a social value rather overlooked in the turmoil. Though hardly attaining eminence as a moral force they remain a persuasive fact for a city neighborhood. They have made a social whole of many a four-walled community that had been merely an accidental aggregation. Common oppression makes humanity kin, including even the inmates of an apartment house. Neighborliness, in short, has begun to mean something.

Neighborliness is at once the kindest and the most powerful organization in our tradition. Neighborhood organizations, if not captured by schemers with private ends to serve, is the best basis for consumers' organizations in general. That American class called neighbors, the great unwieldy, battered 99 per cent, has suffered much of late through lack of organized effort in its own behalf.

Neighborhood associations will ameliorate the predatory ethics of urban life. When neighbors meet in public school assembly halls for community association in economic study, in politics, in music, in drama, in educational problems, good government and good living are likely to be furthered.

Better neighborhood understandings leading to intelligent co-operative effort are one of outstanding needs.—Chicago Daily News.

WAIT FOR TOWN TO GROW

Criticism Made That Too Many Small Communities Are Slow in Making Improvements.

It has been figured up that there are about 12,000 small towns in the United States, half of them with populations of 500 or less, says the Thrift magazine. It is these small towns that the rural people are intimately associated with. They sell their produce there, buy the things they need; in fact, these are a part of the rural community. Some of these small towns will become cities, but a very large per cent of them will remain as they are. It is no disgrace to live in a small town, but the rule is that these people are waiting until next year or some future year to improve their schools, put in sidewalks, a water system or a sewer system to safeguard the health of the people, or before taking any step to improve the social and living conditions of the children.

Proper Town Planning.

Scientific town planning takes into consideration the direction of streets and orientation of houses from a sanitary standpoint. There has been a tendency to make streets run north and south and east and west, but in a paper to the Royal Astronomical society of Canada, H. L. Seymour lately showed that they should run north-east and southwest and northwest and southeast. Houses correspondingly placed have sunshine in all rooms instead of having it cut off from north-easterly walls for more than one-half of the time. Also houses shall be so placed and of such height as to shade others as little as possible.

Theater and Church.

The problem of how to supply the community with both a church and theater on money sufficient for only one building has been solved in a small western town by building one large auditorium with a stage at one end of the hall and a pulpit at the other, according to a Y. W. C. A. dramatic director who visited the town recently. This novel arrangement diplomatically meets certain apparent objections and at the same time gives the proper setting for either. The seats are reversible.

City Planning Worth While.

City planning of the right kind is strictly a business proposition. Its function is to aid in facilitating business and maintaining property values. Its activity means a better looking city, a better city for business and a better city for homes.

Furthermore, city planning is not a matter of concern to the few. It will work to the interest of the large and the small property owner, and to the interest of any person who expects to make the place his home.

WAR CHAPLAINS ARE HONORED

Given Medallions Commemorative of Their Service to Their Fellows on Land and Sea.

PRESIDENT GETS FIRST ONE

Taken is Intended to Convey in Tangible Form the Appreciation of the Churches Whose Chaplain Sons Served in the War.

Washington.—Every one of the great and devoted company of chaplains in the army and navy during the World War, who represented the 27 Protestant denominations united for service in the general war-time commission, received a commemorative medallion recently. This beautiful token is intended to convey in tangible form the message of grateful appreciation from the churches to their chaplain sons who were ready to give up everything, even life itself, for their fellows fighting on land and sea.

To President Wilson went the first one, and this was followed by presentations to the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, Bishop C. H. Brent, chief chaplain of the A. E. F., Col. John T. Axton, chief chaplain of the army, and Capt. John G. Frazier, chief of the chaplain's corps of the navy.

Symbolizes Service.

This medallion is of bronze, 2 3/4 inches in diameter. It is the realization of a suggestion made soon after the armistice to the executive committee of the general war-time commission of the churches. The committee approved the proposal and made it one of the tasks committed to the general committee on army and navy chaplains when the general war-time commission dissolved. The design is by Mrs. Laura Gardin Fraser of New York, one of the best-known of American medallists. The task given to Mrs. Fraser was to produce a design expressing the spirit of the men who served as chaplains, which would represent both branches of the service.

One side commemorates in symbol the service of the army chaplain, and the other side the navy chaplain. In showing his service in the army a chaplain is presented in the act of ministering to a wounded soldier. In the center of the design the gas mask is seen ready for immediate adjustment. The suggestion is that the chaplain has removed it the better to succor the wounded man. Strength and sympathy are expressed in the finely modeled figure. The stricken soldier represents an artilleryman serving the big guns, stripped to the waist.

On the reverse side the fine record of the men who served as chaplains in the navy is symbolized by the representation of a battleship, with the cross as the central feature, and the inscription at the top, "Awarded to the Chaplains of the American Army and Navy." Below is the inscription "The General War-Time Commission of the Churches, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America." On the obverse is inscribed "1917-1918," the name of the designer and the date of the award.

Complimentary medallions will be presented to various museums of this country, and to representatives of the chaplains in France, England and Canada, in appreciation of their service to American boys.

The subcommittee of the general committee on army and navy chaplains having charge of the design of the medallion, was composed of Dr. Gaylord S. White of New York, Dr. E. B. Lauritz of Washington, Dr. Forest J. Priddyman of Washington, Prof. John R. Hawkins of Washington, Dr. W. Stuart Cramer of Lancaster, Pa., Bishop William F. McDowell of Washington and Dr. E. O. Watson of Washington.

In announcing the presentation Maj. Gen. P. C. Harris, the adjutant general of the army, says:

"Mrs. Fraser has achieved notable success in producing a medallion of such rare distinction and beauty; the judgment of competent artists and critics is unanimous in this. The gift will be sent out from the offices of the general committee of army and navy chaplains in Washington to all the chaplains in Protestant churches entitled to receive it at once."

The h. c. l. we don't suppose is now bothering the mail robbers at Council Bluffs, Iowa, who recently made a haul of $3,500,000, from the mails in a few minutes. This what we would call "getting the grass" in a hurry.

Cotton is reported to be worth only six cents per pound in some places, which not enough to pay the pickling, consequently farmers are leaving it in the field. The wheat farmer cribbed his grain before the price dropped to that level and now he is in worse condition than the cotton farmer.

The home merchants all over the country are invading mail order houses customers and showing them that home prices and home quality are beating catalogue prices a mile and a half this fall. It pays better now to do a little shopping than it ever did before. Investigate prices and quality and you will save money and also trade at home.

Just now it is about time of the year to begin to howl about high taxes. Every year most everybody thinks their taxes were higher than they were the year before, and would almost swear they had less than they did, but there would be few of them willing to trade back even for what they had the previous year.

The Lockney Beacon states that people of the South Plains are using Ford's to kill rats. They back one up to the rat hole, use a rubber hose to connect the exhaust with the hole, start the engine and goodbye rat. That is not all they will do. A fellow once told us of one in a large gathering of automobilists that got hot and began stinking until it bumped up the meeting.

One of the greatest forward steps of protestant churches today is the building of schols and colleges. How can any church expect to perpetuate their creed unless they build schools and educate their teachers and members. Education and schooling is possibly what has made the Catholic church so strong, and if the protestant churches will continue education, they will continue to grow.

If some of the great students of psychology see so much evil in the motion picture, and would condemn it from the public, then why not also condemn literature and fiction. The motion picture is but visualization of what the mind might read if it choose some of the modern fiction of today. It portrays to the mind in about an hour, more vividly, a story that it would take a whole day to read. There is less strain on the eyes for the same amount of knowledge and a much stronger remembrance of the happenings. True, there is bad pictures, but there is also bad preachers; there is bad citizens; and you can hardly find the good without also finding some bad. But lets not condemn all preachers because some of them are bad; or condemn all citizens because some are bad, and neither should we condemn the motion picture because some are bad.

Say, why be so scared about the money shortage. Some people are almost scared stiff because they think money is short. Possibly it is, but isn't people going to live on just the same. Why if we had no such thing as money, everybody must live. There is not such a shortage of money as there is a plenty of production. But why be so scared about the money shortage. Can't the cowman trade a beef for some corn and wheat? Can't the miller take a toll instead of cash for grinding? And the blacksmith swap work for some hogs, and a hundred other ways people will get by even if money does get short. The world has got to go on, business will go on and people will live just the same, eat, wear clothes and enjoy life. Main thing is, don't worry.

Bates walker declares he and Mr. C. M. Luttrell came to Armstrong county the year Palo Duro Canyon was dug. There are many others who claim they were here and assisted in digging the Canyon. Come to think about it The News man was living in Claude about the time Palo Duro was dug, but was such a small boy that he did very little work in trying to make the Canyon what it now is.—Claude News.

Several years ago, when the Beacon editor was traveling for the State Fire Insurance Commission, we heard this Palo Duro digging stunt pulled in a hotel at Canyon. There were several drummers in the lobby of the hotel when a stranger from the East came in. One drummer, who was an old man, stated to the bunch of us that he had not been to Canyon since the Palo Duro Canyon was dug by the government. He went on to tell about the big undertaking in digging the Canyon and its final completion, the raid of the Red Man, etc. He then got up and went to his room. The stranger looked at us for a few minutes after he left and said, "I believe that drummer was telling a damn lie."—Lockney Beacon.

Some of the wholesale jobbing houses say they are going to cut off a large number of traveling salesmen. Just why an army of traveling salesmen were ever necessary invading the towns every day we are unable to see. We expect that every salesman on the road will cost the house an average of $15 per day, or about $5,000 per year, and in many cases, a two cent letter would get as big an order as the $15 salesman. It is certainly time to cut the unnecessary salesmen.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.
Mr. J. W. Phillips, Redon, Ga., pioned to J. M. Floyd, the merchant there, for a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and said she had bought a bottle of it at his store recently and that it was doing her children so much good that she wanted to keep up the treatment. You will find nothing better for coughs and colds in children or for yourself. It keeps the cough loose, expectoration easy and soon frees the system from the cold.

ONLY A COLD
Are you ill? Is often answered? "Oh! it's only a cold," as if a cold was a matter of little consequence, but people are beginning to learn that a common cold is a matter not to be trifled with, that some of the most serious diseases start with a cold. As soon as the first indication of a cold appears take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Remember that the sooner you get rid of your cold the less the danger, and this remedy will help you to throw it off.

THE FORD SEDAN

This splendid car is growing more popular every day, because every day the demand for the enclosed car increase in volume, and when you think that the Ford Sedan, with its comforts and conveniences—an enclosed car, handsome in appearance, roomy for five passengers, nicely unholstered, sliding plate glass windows which make it an open car in a minute or so or a tightly closed car that is dust-proof and water-proof—ready for service every day of the year, rain or shine, summer or winter, and then think that this car is lower in price than any touring car (except the Ford car) and you will not wonder that we ask you to leave your order for a Sedan as soon as possible that we may be able to give you reasonable delivery.

Of course you cannot forget that matchless and reliable "Ford After-Service" that follows every Ford car the world over—always within arm's length a reliable Ford dealer or authorized Ford garage that can tune up your car and keep it in running condition every day in the year. We want your trade.

"Finally the old boy got up with the case held tight under his arm and went toward the door with the girl and the foreigner following him, and the foreigner talking fast and loud. They got outside and all got into the car, the girl beside the old boy, who was driving, and the foreigner behind.

"As the old boy started the car, the foreigner made a grab for the case, but the old boy was too quick for him and dropped it to the floor. The car swerved toward the ditch.

"You can't drive a car that way," I said. "You'd better tell that fellow to lay off."

"I've told him," said the old boy. "If he keeps on bothering me, I'll tell him with a gun. He'll kill all of us."

"So they started, but they hadn't gone a quarter of a mile when I heard the girl scream. I got my motorcycle, which was out in front, and went down the road after them. There was sure going to be an accident if the foreigner kept grabbing at the man at the wheel. They must have been going pretty fast. I chased them a mile and a half, and several times I heard the girl cry out ahead in the dark.

"I was within two hundred yards of them when the girl screamed louder than ever, and I heard a crash. I knew they'd get it, and they had. The car had gone into a tree at the side of the road.

"The old boy was dead, and the girl was unconscious—but the foreigner was gone."

"What about the leather case?" asked a man in the group about the constable. It was the question I could have shouted out myself.

"It was gone, too. The old boy did not have a single paper in his pockets, but after I got help and we got attention for the girl, we found a letter in her purse addressed to Miss Agnes Mitchell, Hartley house, Hartley. That was the only identification we had. I telephoned over to Hartley and a man said he would be over. That's all I know about it. I've got to be getting over to the station. It's about time that man from Hartley was looking me up."

As he went out, I followed him, and on the sidewalk I introduced myself.

CHAPTER XI.

The constable looked at me for an instant as if uncertain whether to regard my manner of getting his narrative as altogether friendly.

"You were telling what I wanted to know," I suggested. "I came in because I was directed to inquire for you there. I did not interrupt you, but it was without intent of gaining information that I did not expect to gain otherwise."

"It's all right," said the constable. "You see through me, though. I was just thinking how uncomfortable I ought to have been with you listening, and I was pretty near getting sore. The first thing is the identification of the body. For the time being, it is in the station-house."

There was no possible doubt, even before I looked at the face, from which the constable drew the sheet which covered the body as it lay on a bench. The shabby little lawyer's rascally schemes, timid but villainous—necessary, probably, in his gnarled and unhappy life—were closed by death.

A deputy of the coroner was present, and he took a deposition by me which gave merely the dead man's name, stated that he had called several times at Hartley house on business and that I had no personal knowledge of the manner in which he came to his death.

That was all the authorities needed of me. A maid by the name of Agnes Mitchell had been given temporary employment at Hartley house. It was undoubtedly she who was the companion of the man who had been killed.

I asked the constable where I might see the maid and whether she was too badly injured to talk to any one. He said that she had been taken to the nearest hospital, which was ten miles away. He did not know how serious her injuries were. I had my driver take me to the hospital and found that as a representative of the family for which she was employed I might talk to her.

She was in pain and heavily bandaged, but was conscious and willing to talk.

"Agnes," I said, when the nurse had left us, "I am not here to make a great deal of trouble for you, but if I show leniency it will be in exchange for your confidence. We have known that an unconscionable gang of rascals have had designs on Hartley house. Evidently you have yielded to some temptation they offered you. Deal with me frankly, and I'll be more than lenient."

She told me that the lawyer had tried to corrupt the maid, Anna, who had asked, later, for a month's leave. She found that she did not have the courage for the work. The lawyer evaded the plan of introducing a resolute and reliable woman into the house by the expedient adopted. Her instructions were to find and take away a manuscript she would find concealed in Jed's room. The abduction of Jed had made it easy for the maid to search through his belongings. Agnes did not know what value was attached to the manuscript. It was her obligation merely to get it.

The lawyer was to have an automobile waiting on the road beyond the oak grove. He was to be by the small door, through which the maid escaped. She ransacked Jed's room in the fashion of which I saw the result, and found the box cunningly hidden in his bed-springs in a manner so contrived that except to careful investigation it seemed to be a part of the structure of the bed.

Agnes said that she had planned to make her escape after my round of the house, but her excitement at finding the thing so earnestly sought betrayed her into incautiousness.

The lawyer's plan was to take the road we would think them less likely to take in case there were pursuit, and for that reason had gone toward Horwich. The Spaniard was not expected to meet them, but he knew they intended to go through Horwich, and he knew approximately the time they would get there if they were successful. The train which stopped at Horwich to let off passengers allowed him to act upon a plan which his suspicions of his lawyer's good faith suggested. He thought that if the lawyer saw a barroom light he would stop for a drink.

He was in Horwich unexpectedly to meet the girl and the lawyer. The scene in the Half Day barroom followed. The Spaniard was determined to have possession of the manuscript. The lawyer was determined he should not have it. They struggled as the lawyer tried to drive the car, having several narrow escapes from the ditch.

Then the Spaniard, in a rage, abandoned all caution and threw himself bodily on the lawyer, who lost control of the car and hit a tree. That was all the girl knew.

I thought a while, trying to make up my mind what further to do with the girl. Finally I said:

"Agnes, I am inclined to compromise with the law. I will prefer no charges against you now, and without forecasting the future, I may intimate that no charges ever will be preferred against you if I may have you removed to Hartley house, where you will have every care, but where you must remain under a sure but unobtrusive surveillance until we give you permission to go."

"Because I Am a Thief and Know the Business and Have a Record."

In spite of her pain the girl smiled. "You would amuse the police," she said.

"Why?" I asked.

"Why do you suppose the lawyer hired me for this job?"

"Because you were available, suitable and easily tempted."

"Because I am a thief and know the business and have a record."

"That was a facer, but it did not change the present reason."

"You have less reason, then, for wanting to come to the attention of the police again?"

"I have no reason at all."

"Then you will come to Hartley house as I suggested?"

"Sure. If you can get me there without billing me."

I made the necessary arrangements, and Agnes set out on her return, in an ambulance.

The servant who opened the door as we drove up was Jed.

I could not help showing by a start and by the expression on my face that I was astonished by his reappearance. This pleased him. When he acted he liked to produce effects. He looked inquiringly at the ambulance and then inquiringly at me. By that time I was able to accept him as a usual part of the household.

"Get someone to help you with a stretcher, Jed," I said. "Agnes, a maid, has been hurt. Then tell Mrs. Aldrich I should like to see her in the office as soon as it is convenient."

"Yes, sir," said Jed.

Mrs. Aldrich came immediately, and I told her the girl Agnes was to be treated with every consideration and that if it were possible to have the other maids regard her kindly so as not to make her feel obloquy, it would be only Christian.

Mrs. Aldrich was a very stanch churchwoman and I could see in the tightening of her lips that such soft treatment of a woman caught in crime did not satisfy her ideas of morality.

She went out dissatisfied, but I knew she would do her best. Jed came in still in his superserviceable mood.

"Would you like some coffee, sir?" he asked. "I was tired and did want a stimulant."

"Yes, Jed I would—thank you," I said as heartily as I could, determined to break down his triumph of imperiousness by a commonplace handling of him. He brought the tray.

"Sit down," I said. "Your schemes have come to a bad end in this house. It will do you no good, and it may destroy the family. Things are beyond your control or my control. The Spaniard has the manuscript he was after. Your power is gone. It is transferred to him."

"So you are familiar with this affair?"

"I am not. I only know what has happened since I came here. I do not want to know any more."

"You are wise. There is nothing but unhappiness and danger in knowing. It is not news to me that Dravada has Mr. Sidney's diary. They released me after they learned that the manuscript had been found and that the lawyer and Dravada had it."

Jed then sat down and told what had happened to him. I was very angry, remembering Isabel as she came humming in that night with her sleeve torn from her waist. I wondered that I could hear the man calmly, but he had extraordinary power, being moved by extraordinary emotions.

"In the first place," he said, "may I say that I have been preposterous? You think I am a lunatic. Sometimes I am, almost. It is easy enough to be a cabbage if you are one. It is sometimes hard to seem one if you are not. I've been a fool—but I've been hunting for something that I have not been able to find. I want happiness and importance. My egotism asks for it, but my common sense is going to have its way. That's preliminary."

Then he told his experiences. He had become violent with Isabel. He wanted it understood that he had been desperate but respectful. He had no idea of taking hold of her or of tearing her sleeve. He had been magnificent. She had given him a moral shock. He felt like a worm. He had been attacked suddenly by the men who had overpowered him. They had come upon him from the brush. He had recognized Dravada at once. He might have overcome the Spaniard, but the desperate little lawyer, in a frenzy of activity, had been just bold and strong enough to interfere so that Jed had been made helpless. Another man had come breathlessly to help. Jed had been bound and gagged. He had been hustled into the screen of woods and beyond them to a waiting automobile.

His captors, in the automobile, had headed for the city and entered it after midnight. They had taken their prisoner to a tenement on the East side. For several days the lawyer and Dravada had tried to extort the secret from Jed by threats. They had tried to buy it by promise of an equitable division of profits. The lawyer had been quite frantic part of the time. Jed said, bounding about in an ecstasy of rage. At other times he had been friendly and persuasive.

Dravada had been savage and wanted to try torture, but the attorney, enraged as he frequently became in his failure and disappointment, would not permit this and had got a trustworthy rascal of his acquaintance, named Sim with two other men, to keep a constant guard over Jed with a view not only to prevent his escape but to keep Dravada from doing him harm or taking him away.

The lawyer, both dismayed and enraged by Jed's obstinacy, had finally thought of corrupting someone in the house to find and steal the manuscript. The best he had been able to do was to persuade a maid to prove false enough to introduce the real thief.

"Dravada and the lawyer never had any hesitancy at having their quarrels in the room where they held me," Jed said. "Brown was afraid Dravada would corrupt the fellow Sim, torture me and get the story. Dravada was afraid Brown would corrupt someone in Hartley house and get the manuscript. Each one feared that the other would succeed independently and get away without making a division."

"Dravada pretended to be satisfied when Brown told him that he must not appear near Hartley. When they thought they were going to succeed in stealing the manuscript out of my room Brown proved to Dravada that the only one of them that could go to meet the maid was Brown. Dravada appeared to accept that as reasonable, and he must have put Brown off his guard, because Brown told him all the plans."

"Dravada used to be very stupid, but his cupidily has given him a sort of intelligence. He allowed Brown to think he was perfectly satisfied, but he wasn't at all. By seeming to be satisfied he learned all about the details of the plan, and he knew that Brown, to avoid pursuit, intended to take the way to Horwich."

"He knew that if Brown went through Horwich he would stop for several drinks. He would need them if he was disappointed. He would have to have them if he had the manuscript and was excited by it. So Dravada went to Horwich. It all worked out, and when Brown got to the village, he found Dravada. Then he telephoned to the fellow Sim to let me go. I was perfectly harmless. It was an interesting situation."

"I could wish Dravada had tortured you," I said to Jed. "He has the means now, through you, to torture this family."

"I said I knew Dravada had the manuscript," said Jed. "I did that for effect. What I ought to have said was that I knew he thought he had the manuscript. If I had no more than the intelligence you credit me with, doctor, I could not have conducted this affair so long. What Dravada has is not the diary of Mr. Sidney."

"Until I felt the relief following Jed's explanation that the blackmailers had stolen only a decoy, I did not fully realize into what despondency our predicament up to that time had thrust me. If Mr. Sidney's diary were being read by unscrupulous men, we might expect anything."

The lawyer, whose shrewdness and lack of morals made him formidable, was dead. The Spaniard would soon discover his disappointment and would be furious. I thought the physical danger to Jed was greater than ever and found some pleasure in telling him so.

He was convinced of that himself and was not happy.

"Why don't you end your rascality?" I urged him. "Why don't you give the manuscript to Mrs. Sidney and allow her to make whatever disposition she wants of it? Then your conscience will be easy—your position in this house will for the first time be tolerable to a decent man, and your physical security will be promoted."

He would not. He seemed to hesitate for a moment, but his purpose was too long fixed and too much a part of his life.

He no longer was surly with me, and I seemed to have lost my ability to enrage him. We parted with my telling him that there would be no possible truce or peace between us unless he respected the women of the household. He bowed.

"Anything else, sir?" he asked; and then he departed as the servant.

Mrs. Sidney's relief to find that the robbery had proved only a hoax on the robbers was such as would come from escape from tangible horrors. The lady had been keeping control of herself, as was necessary to protect her husband and daughter from her own agony of mind and to keep the household from finding significance in what could be passed over as a trivial piece of robbery.

When she learned that the alarm was over, she relaxed limply in her chair, and I feared that she might collapse; but in a moment she had struggled back to command of herself. Then she excused herself and went into her bedroom—for prayer, I knew.

Mr. Sidney's joy at the return of Jed was robust, and Jed went to bed very tipsy with two bottles of wine in him. I found him in the hall as I went my rounds of the house. He was singing.

I knew we'd hear again and soon from Dravada, but not in what manner. Naturally I was apprehensive, and no doubt Jed was more so, although to save himself from my contempt he tried to conceal his fears.

The Spaniard could not be expected to accept his failure as final. He would try again. That expectation was fulfilled in a disconcerting fashion.

Thus far we had been dealing with chance, with apparatus and threats. We now came to deal with inevitability. Our experiences had been disagreeable, but they had not presented unescapable consequences. We had a choice of ways. Now we entered a way from which there was no escape.

Four days after Jed's return a man came to Hartley house and inquired for me. He was a detective. His name was Morgan; he was the head of the Morgan Metropolitan Detective agency. I thought on first seeing him—while yet wondering what his business with us could be, and yet knowing instinctively that it had to do with Dravada—that this newcomer had more than a suggestion of shrewd malevolence in his face.

Before he was through his interview with me, or rather his inquiries of me, I knew that inevitability had entered our case. We were no longer progressing at the mercy of opportunity or chance. Morgan was fate. The whole aspect had been altered. Morgan, a muscular, black-haired, sordid, unscrupulous man of action and obviously of queer action, was pure Greek tragedy to us.

Eggstraordinary Coincidence.
The custom has prevailed with a certain Episcopal scholar in California of presenting each scholar of the Sunday school with an egg at the celebration of Easter. On one occasion, when that point in the service was reached which had been set apart for this interesting ceremony, the clergyman rose and made the announcement: "Hymn No. 419, 'Begin, My Soul, the Exalted Lay,' after which the eggs will be distributed."—Boston Transcript.

FOR AFTERNOON OR EVENING WEAR

There are a good many women who have no use for more than one or two frocks for formal wear and who are sensible enough to buy only what they can use, no matter how ample their means. These women want conservative styles, equal to serving for both afternoon and evening. They rely on accessories to tone up such gowns to the requirements of any dressy function.

With the return of nets and dyed laces to favor and the perennial black lace and satin dress there are offered two very safe choices. And there are added to these in the new displays, very handsome frocks in silver cloth embroidered with jet, in duvetyne combined with metallic and other brocades, in velvings draped over satin and, more than all, embroidered frocks in which silk or crepe de chine, satin, charmeuse or wool fabrics.

Two frocks that will prove an enduring joy to their wearers and serve for any sort of formal wear are shown in the picture. At the left a brown net with large dots is made up with a to match and worn over a white with accordion-plaited skirt. The one of pleated ribbon alternates rows of dots on it and the skirt is suspended from a yoke of satin on the edge to give it a flare. The girl is of satin, and there is a folded vestee of it and folds of finish the sleeves.

Black charmeuse and chastely flouncing make the dignified look of the picture. The lawns a long overdress extending across sides and back of the full skirt. The sleeves and underbodice are lace and the satin overbodice an example of a new and admired neckline. Even in dresses the low décolletage is replaced by a straight neck. The girl of this dress is worth notice for it is very pretty and new. It can be made in a soft satin ribbon twisted and with a twisted silver ribbon rope that encircles the waist looped and knotted at the side.

About the Season's Blouses

EXCEPT for some elaborate, much decorated and sometimes startling models, which might be classed as "exhibition blouses," the fall season has not brought in many designs that can lay claim to originality in these very popular garments. But why should designers strive for new ideas while we are well satisfied with those we have and continue to buy them?

The search for something new does not go entirely unrewarded even when the too-elaborate models are not counted in the finds. Among the tailored blouses there are some in which crepe de chine is used for long-sleeved models that have turned back cuffs of pique and collars of this material that roll high at the back and open in a long "V" at the front. This combination of materials is new and the collar unusually becoming and modest looking.

Plaits and points are outstanding features of the handsome new blouse pictured. A soft figured crepe de chine, joins forces with platted goods to make this ingenious model. The gette forming the upper portion of blouse and sleeves. It ends in from which are suspended loops of material fastened to the small, satin ornaments. The chine falls over the lower part which forms the lower part of blouse and the peplum. A crepe slips through the loops and confines the blouse to the waist line. The frills that the sleeves are wide and the sleeves selves rather large and slightly. The new neck line appearing model and, altogether, it is most promising in style and dress that has come up for thus far.

Another Royal Suggestion DOUGHNUTS and CRULLERS
From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

Doughnuts! There is nothing more wholesome and delightful than doughnuts or crullers rightly made.

Doughnuts
3 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening; add sugar and well-beaten egg; stir in milk; add nutmeg, salt, flour and baking powder which have been sifted together and enough additional flour to make dough stiff enough to roll. Roll out on floured board to about 1/2-inch thick; cut out. Fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread in 30 seconds. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Crullers
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and beat eggs; sift together flour, cinnamon, salt and baking powder; add one-half cup milk; add milk and remainder of ingredients to make soft dough. Roll out on floured board to about 1/4-inch thick and cut into strips about 4 inches long and 1/2-inch wide; roll in sugar and twist each strip and bring ends together. Fry in deep hot oil. Drain and roll in powdered sugar.

THE LUNCH BASKET.

Now that school has begun again, the problem of getting the lunch baskets ready has also begun. To prepare a good, wholesome lunch which will satisfy a growing child both as to appetite and taste is no small piece of work, for five days in the week, nine or ten months of the year. In many schools lunches are served, but in the great majority children still must carry the noonday luncheon when they live too far to go home.

A few suggestions as to the lunch-box: Buy a package of paper napkins and wrap food in them, or in paraffin paper, thus keeping the food flavors unaltered. When practical small paper cups for custards and jelly or gelatine desserts are light and attractive.

A meal in which all the important kinds of food are represented tends to keep the child in good condition and give him good habits of eating.

The following are some suggestions for a bill of fare for the lunch basket:

Sandwiches, with sliced tender meat for filling; baked apple, cookies and a few raisins or two or three pieces of pure, home-made candy.

Slices of meat or bean loaf, bread and butter sandwiches, stewed fruit, or a cupful of jelly and a small frosted cake.

Crisp rolls hollowed out and filled with flaked fish mixed with salad dressing, an orange or an apple, and cake.

Lettuce or celery sandwiches, cup custard, and jelly cake.

Cottage cheese, chopped green pepper with bread and butter sandwiches, fruit, cake and a few peanuts.

Crisp baking powder biscuit, buttered, hard-cooked eggs celery or lettuce, brown sugar or maple sugar sandwiches for dessert.

A bottle of milk, corn bread and butter, a handful of dates and an apple.

Raisin or nut bread buttered, cheese, orange and maple sugar.

Chicken salad in a crisp roll hollowed out, apple, sauce, a piece of sweet chocolate.

Who shall have vision to pierce the mist
Enshrouding the common thing,
Or see in the dark hours, sorrow
kissed,
The gleam of an angel's wing?
The world is wide, and the world is old.

Its mysteries pass our ken;
And only to God are the secrets told
Which live in the hearts of men.
—Christine Davis.

MORE GOOD THINGS.

For those who like rich pastry or cake the following will be a treat:

Scotch Short Bread.—Beat one cupful of butter to a cream, add one-half cupful of light brown sugar, then work in four cupfuls of pastry flour.

If the flour is slightly warm it will work in more easily. Form the mixture into two flat cakes seven inches in diameter. Decorate the edge with a fork or by crimping with the thumb and finger. Sprinkle the top with chopped cherries, caraway candies or preserved citron. Bake in a slow oven.

Tapoca, Pineapple Sponge.—Scald two cupfuls of grated pineapple and half a cupful of boiling water in a double boiler, add one-fourth of a cupful of minute tapioca and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Stir occasionally and let cook about half an hour, then add the juice of half a lemon and one-fourth of a cupful of sugar. Fold in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and cook until the egg is set. Serve hot or cold in glass cups with whipped cream as a garnish.

Marshmallow Cream.—Soften one teaspoonful of gelatin in two or three tablespoonfuls of cold milk, then dissolve by setting the dish in boiling water. Add half a cupful of sugar and one cupful of double cream and beat until firm. Beat the white of a small egg, then fold it into the cream with half a teaspoonful of vanilla, half of a quarter-pound box of marshmallows cut in quarters, half a cupful of skinned and seeded white grapes cut in halves, one banana cut in cubes, and mixed with a tablespoonful of lemon juice to keep the pieces from discoloring. Dispose in glass cups with a cherry here and there. Garnish the top with a quarter of a marshmallow, sprinkle with fine-chopped nuts and chill before serving.

Date Cornmeal Pudding.—Scald a pint of milk and pour it over one-half cupful of cornmeal, add one tablespoonful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, three-fourths of a cupful of well-washed dates cut in pieces, and two beaten eggs. Turn into a baking dish and bake until of the consistency of ordinary custard. Serve with hard sauce.

FEED FOR BEEF PRODUCTION

Three-Year Experiment Shows That It Costs More to Feed Calves Than Older Cattle.

Results of a three-year-old experiment with calves, yearlings and two-year-olds to study the influence of age on the economy and profit of feeding for beef production indicated that the initial cost per hundred pounds of meat produced was greater with the calves than with the older cattle; that the length of time necessary for finishing steers decreased with age; that the rate and the cost of gain and the proportion of roughage to concentrates consumed increased with age; and that the amount of gain necessary in finishing cattle of equal condition decreased as their age increased. The difference in total quantity of feed necessary for finishing cattle of different ages and fed to the same marketable finish was negligible.

The experienced farmer who feeds cattle should handle older cattle in preference to calves, while the farmer who produces and finishes his own cut-

Finished Steers of Good Breeding Brings Much Better Price Than Scrubs.

He may find calves more profitable. While this is regarded as the best practice under ordinary circumstances, there are advantages, especially at this time in feeding younger cattle, the principal ones being the obtaining of a higher market price for the finished steer, if of good breeding, and an opportunity to hold for a longer period of time when fattened with less loss than the more mature steer."

GIVE HOGS' FEET ATTENTION

Bad Underpinning Are Often Due to Lack of Trimming as Well as to Overfeeding.

When the new breeder is getting ready to exhibit his hogs at the county and state fairs he should pay attention to the feet of the animals as well as to fitting them. If the animals are overfed, very often they have a tendency to go down in the feet. Bad feet are also often due to lack of attention as well as to overfeeding and poor breeding. Animals that are not given an opportunity to take a proper amount of exercise on hard ground are apt to show this trouble more than those under ordinary conditions. In trimming the toes the pig is thrown on its side and with a sharp jackknife the ends of the toes can be pared off. Occasionally the sole of the foot may need paring also, so that the pig will walk flat on the foot. Care should be taken to smooth up the job and to not cut the foot too deeply, so as to bleed and cause lameness. The trimming should be done at least ten days or two weeks before the show.

BEEF PRODUCTION FALLS OFF

Nearly Half of Farmers Last Year Operated at Loss—Similar Conditions This Year.

Beef in the United States was last year produced at an average cost of 14 to 15 cents, according to figures furnished by H. C. Taylor, chief of farm management of the United States department of agriculture.

However, only 58 per cent of the cattle concerned were produced for that and 42 per cent cost more. Fifty-six per cent of the producers kept these costs at 15 cents or less, so that nearly half of the farmers producing beef operated at a loss. 1929 figures indicate that a similar condition exists and that production is falling off considerably as a result, since no one likes to produce at a loss.

Feeding prices and land values are given as the reason for the falling off of the profit. As a remedy for it Mr. Taylor suggests keeping of better records of all farm accounts, elimination of excessive marketing charges and good management.

SCREENINGS NOT POISONOUS

As Feed Substitute for Bran They Can Be Fed to Sheep With Much Advantage.

According to a recent report of the U. S. department of agriculture, sweet clover seed screenings are not poisonous to live stock. They can be fed to sheep to advantage, being a good grain feed, but they probably are not so good as bran. However, as bran is a marketable product and sweet clover screenings are not, being an otherwise waste product of the farm, as a feed substitute for bran it constitutes a net saving of the cost of bran and is therefore of considerable value to the producer who can use it.

Important to all Women
Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

Silliness Discouraged.

"There's one thing I like about the idea of women in politics," remarked Farmer Cornstossel.

"What is that?"

"They are not likely to encourage any of these fool election bets about people's not shaving until one candidate or another is elected."

USE "DIAMOND DYES"

Dye right! Don't risk your material in a poor dye. Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple that any woman can diamond-dye a new rich, fadeless color into old garments, draperies, coverings, everything, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods.

Buy "Diamond Dyes" — no other kind—then perfect results are guaranteed. Druggist has "Diamond Dyes Color Card"—16 rich colors. Adv.

WHEN A WOMAN IS NERVOUS—WORRIED

The lives of most women are full of worry. Men's troubles are bad enough, but women's are worse. Worry makes women sick. It pulls them down, and in their weakened condition they are subject to pains, aches, weakness, back-aches, headaches and dizzy spells.

Most women neglect their health, and for this they pay the penalty. Any woman will find that neglect does not pay. A little more attention to health would brighten up her life. If she asks her neighbors she finds that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription benefits a woman's whole system. It not only acts upon the troubles and weaknesses peculiar to women, but is an all-around tonic that braces the entire body, overcoming nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, dizziness and a run-down condition.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for general weakness and when run-down and suffering with nervousness, and can truthfully say it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken, and I find Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets very good to regulate the system. They did very much in keeping a person in a good healthy state."—Mrs. AMELIA THORN, 4204 John Avenue.

Pure, Rich Blood Will Keep Your Body Vigorous and Healthy

When impurities creep into your blood the first symptoms are usually a loss of appetite, followed by a gradual lessening of energy, the system becomes weaker day by day, until you feel yourself on the verge of a breakdown.

Nearly everybody needs a few bottles of S. S. S., the great vegetable blood remedy, to cleanse out all impurities about twice a year. It is an excellent idea to take this precaution to keep the system in a vigorous condition so as to more easily resist disease to which every one is subject. S. S. S. is without an equal as a general tonic and system builder. It improves the appetite and gives new strength and vitality to both old and young.

THE HOME PROGRESS CLUB

The Home Progress Club met in the spacious home of Mrs. Will Davis Thursday, November 18.

The President was in the chair and roll call showed a good attendance. The program was lead by Mrs. Dixon. The subject, "How is your Child," was unusually interesting. Mrs. Will Locke gave a paper on "Motion Pictures and the child mind," and uncovered some shameful facts concerning the influence of the "Movies" on the plastic mind of the child.

The moving picture can however, be a real factor in the physical, mental and moral training of the child of it is the proper film but on the other hand, it can, is proving to be, a menace and a force for evil, and is making criminals by the thousands out of our children all over the land. Lets have clean, moral, educative pictures for our children.

Mrs. Gething gave a paper on the "Sleep and Fatigue" which was extra good and full of helpful suggestions, especially impressing the meaning of "sleep" and why the child needs a certain amount of relaxation and the proper diet, etc.

This was indeed a very helpful meeting, and the discussions (round table) were helpful and interesting to all present.

A short business session followed and the club adjourned to meet Thursday November 25 with Mrs. Ewing at 2 o'clock.

The hostess served delicious refreshments. P. R.
