Miami 20—McLean 13

THEY SHALL NOT PASS

To the men who are acquainted with the noble traditions of football, its never dying fighting spirit, its last game was a classic. All the spirit and sentiment of old college rises again when stirred by the passions aroused by a clean, hard gridiron battle. The game which was of utmost interest in the Panhandle was the game last Saturday between McLean and Miami.

The game from over the Panhandle were present in body and spirit. The Miami team was outfitted fifteen pounds per man and as a whole lacked the speed experience of the McLean Tigers the spirit to carry the honor of "purple and gold" high was the which caused the light Miami to fight so fiercely. Time after time substitutions were made in the McLean eleven to stop the fierce attacks of the Miami eleven but to no avail. The game was hard fought many McLean players went to the sidelines from injuries. Not one substitution was made in Miami's eleven. Turn-out the game McLean players were piled on the field or picked out of the interference every play around end. The Miami boys hit, and hit hard.

The story of the 20 to 13 victory of McLean is only another example of what has happened on many another bitterly fought field in football—a team, arrogant and confident in their confidence—relying on the power of their offense and playing with complete indifference to the lighter trimmed and more carefully trained team lined up against them. The orange jerseyed team came on to the field with its "Tiger" roosters like a conqueror with flaunting colors and its noisy congratulatory followers. Well they should be proud for McLean had the team she had ever had in the history, and it unquestionably was one of the very strongest and fastest in the Panhandle. They fought tooth and nail like men, but at the end of the game the "Tigers" were out of the game. McLean had the upper hand, and when the sun had gone behind the hills of the canyon of the greatest games in the annals of Miami athletics had been into history. The "Tiger" roosters backed to his den—whipped. "Purple and gold" warriors had a knot in his tail.

In the first quarter Miami's team stood out superbly above McLean. Had the good old coach from McLean seen this game he would have seen a shifting defense copied from that of the Aggies and plays looked very much like the veritable attack of the old "Maroon and Blue" crumpling up the McLean and backfield. Not one man—the whole team won the game. As a whole, McLean was clearly and out-fought and out-generated Cunningham the local captain played his best game. He hurried his best men in passing, running, and tackling. Much credit is due to him for his headwork. The McLean eleven worked like a machine—interference was perfect, and the line backs carried the ball all day for good gains. The clumsy line backs from the mass formation of McLean's team contrasted sharply with the quick-opening plays used by the Miami backs. The way our backs hit the McLean line sprutters was a feature of the game. In the first quarter McLean carried the ball to within the 15 yard line and missed a trial at goal. McLean took the ball and added it by backs and passes to

SMALL FIRE SUNDAY

Sunday evening early, a small two room residence, belonging to Mrs. Joan Van, in which Chas. Harris and family were living was burned to the ground with all contents. The residence was located near the Harden place north of the track. The cause of the fire is unknown. No insurance was carried, and the occupants of the house were left with only their clothing which they were wearing.

CAMP FIRE GIRLS ENTERTAIN THEIR MOTHERS

The Camp Fire Girls entertained their mothers at the home of Mrs. J. D. Lard, Saturday night. A short program was given, as follows: Origin of Camp Fire.—Leo Coffee. Reading.—Carrie Lee Mathers. Duet.—Lora Seiber and Dona Locke. Reading.—Dona Locke. Piano Solo.—Beulah Boney. Story, Hazel Talley. Piano Solo.—Carrie Lee Mathers. After this the girls served refreshment of sandwiches, cake and cocoa or coffee.

within one yard of Miami's goal. Here they were held for four downs, making just three backs more than was needed on the last play of four. In thirty seconds after they had kicked off to Miami, Nelson had carried the ball 92 yards down the field for a touchdown and goal was kicked, making the quarter stand 7 to 6 in Miami's favor. Miami's team work showed in this play perfectly. The mark of Nelson's path was the line of prostrate orange-jerseyed players, bowled over by the charging Miami team—Humphries laid out the last two by himself. Once again in this quarter the Miami should have scored from the fifteen yard line back a pretty drop kick missed by a couple of inches.

In the second quarter Miami ran rough-shod over the opponents. Sweeping end runs, short and long passes, all of which were worked with machine like accuracy, and terrific line plunging took the fight out of McLean and in this quarter Cunningham plunged thru the "Orange and Black" line for a touchdown and Nelson rounded the end for another one. McLean made one first down in this quarter, and only two in the fourth quarter. The half ended 20 to 6 in Miami's favor. Between halves a loyal student body gave a victorious snack dance and threw their tomahawks over McLean's goal. For the rest of the game Miami played a strict defensive game. Alexander, Smith, and Russell played strong defensive games and Russell's interference contributed more towards winning the game than any other one factor—he was only assisted by the fierce blocking of Humphries. Whenever Humphries blocked a man—the man stayed blocked. No attempt was made to take the offensive until McLean had made a touchdown. Then Miami during the last quarter played havoc with McLean's passes and backs and carried the ball twice to within the fifteen yard line, but the "Tigers" were fighting with their backs to the wall and the ball went over, Miami in the last minute of play had the ball on McLean's 8 yard line and first down when the whistle blew-saving McLean.

The game was well officiated and cleanly though fiercely played. Only one penalty was given—Miami drew that for five yards. A spirit of good sportsmanship permeated the whole game. Messrs. Flake George of Miami and Smith of Pampa referred. Mr. Doucette of Pampa and an old Aggie football man was head-linesman. The time keepers were Supts. Gilley—Cain.

Department of Commerce

BUREAU OF THE CENSUS WASHINGTON

Age in Texas School Attendance and Other Facts

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21, 1921. —The Department of Commerce, through the Bureau of the Census, reports that according to the census of 1920, 35.4 per cent, or over one-third, of the people in the state of Texas are either infants or children under 15 years of age; 10.5 per cent are young people 15 to 19 years old; 37.7 per cent, or slightly less than two-fifths, are men and women in the prime of life, being from 20 to 44 years old; while 16.4 per cent, being 45 years of age and over, are well along in middle life if they have not reached old age.

The urban population as compared with the rural shows some rather striking differences in age, the percentage 20 to 44 years of age being 44.7 for the urban population as compared with 34.3 for the rural, while the percentage under 15 years of age is 28 in the urban population as against 39.1 in the rural. These differences may indicate larger families of children in the country than in urban communities, but more probably indicate the influx of adult foreign immigrants in cities and the fact that the native country children, as they grow up, have likewise a tendency to flock to the city, thereby adding to the active adult city population at the expense of the rural districts. To sum up, in the country as compared with the city, there are relatively more children and relatively fewer old people and people in the prime of life. "Urban," it may be explained, as the term is used in the Census, includes all incorporated cities and villages of over 2,500 population.

Hardly more than one-half of the population, 52.1 per cent, are old enough to vote, being 21 or over; and in this class the men outnumber the women in the ratio of 112 to 100. The males of military age, 18 to 44, constitute 41.3 per cent of the male population and 21.4 per cent of the total population.

Texas: Percentage Negro by Counties

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21, 1921. —The population of the state of Texas, as recently announced by the Department of Commerce, through the Bureau of the Census, is 84.0 per cent white and 15.9 per cent Negro. In 1910 the percentage Negro was 17.7.

The Negro population, which was 690,049 in 1910, increased to 741,694 in 1920, an increase of 7.5 per cent. The white population in the same period increased from 3,204,165 or 22.3 per cent.

Over three-fourths (79.4 per cent) of the white people in the state are native American born or of native American parents, the total native white of native parentage being 3,112,262, while the foreign element is represented by 360,519 foreign-born whites, 276,670 native whites who had foreign born parents, and 168,714 who had one parent foreign born, the other being native. The Indians, 773 Chinese, 449 Japanese, 30 Filipinos, 4 Hindus, and 4 Koreans.

In most of the counties of the state the percentage of Negroes has decreased and in 91 of the 253 counties there was also a decrease in the number of Negroes.

Texas: School Attendance

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20, 1921. —The Department of Commerce, through the Bureau of the Census, announces that according to the census of 1920 there are 779,222 children 7 to 13 years of age in the state of Texas and of this number 652,476, or 83.7 per cent, were reported as attending school. In 1910 the percentage attending school was 76.8, thus indicating a gratifying improvement as regards school attendance between 1910 and 1920. Of the children 14 and 15 years of age in 1920, 76.1 per cent were attending school, and of those 16 and 17 years of age 48.8 per cent.

Of the white children 7 to 13 years of age, 78.4 per cent were attending school in 1910 and 83.8 per cent in 1920. For the colored children of the same age the percentage in the same interval increased from 70.2 to 84.

The percentage of children attending schools was considerably larger in the cities than in the country districts, the percentage for children in the urban population 7 to 13 years

Marketing Farm Products

Austin, Texas.—No system that has ever been evolved to market gradually and in orderly fashion the products of the farm, ranch and orchard can be operated with success unless behind that marketing system there stands a system of substantial, bonded warehouses or elevators in which to store and conserve these products of the soil until the right buyers at the right price has been found.

This, in substance, was the statement of Charles E. Baughman, Commissioner of Markets and Warehouses, here today during a conference of the heads of his divisions, at which the Panhandle section of Texas and its lack of storage facilities for its wonderful crops of wheat and other grains, came in for consideration. A campaign to increase storage facilities in northwest Texas was determined upon during the conference, the campaign to begin the first of the year.

I understand that a movement is already on foot in the Panhandle for the perfection of County organizations which plan to market the crops of the region in an orderly way and upon a co-operative basis," continued the Commissioner. "I feel that it is the part of this Department, in no niggardly fashion, to offer to the people of that section our fullest co-operation in the matter of organizing, wherever they are needed, state bonded elevators in which to store for an indefinite time the grains they produce, thus making more certain of success any plan of co-operative marketing which the farmers of that region may subscribe to."

Commissioner Baughman, S. M. Ramsey, Director of Warehouses, and Judge T. W. McBride of the Warehouse Division, recently spent several days in Dallas during which they called on officers of the Texas Farm Bureau and discussed problems of age being 88.4, while in the rural population it was 82.1. "Urban," according to the census definition, includes all cities and other incorporated places of 2,000 population or more.

Texas: Illiteracy

The Department of Commerce, through the Bureau of the Census, announces that according to the census of 1920 there are 295,844 illiterate persons 10 years of age and over in the state of Texas, "illiterate" meaning unable to write. Of this number 50,424 are native whites of native parentage, 30,219 are of foreign or mixed parentage, and 112,417 are of foreign birth. The number of illiterate Negroes is 102,053.

In the total population 10 years of age and over the percentage of illiteracy is 8.3, which shows a slight diminution since 1910, when it was 9.0. In the case of the Negroes the percentage declined from 24.6 to 17.8, and in the case of the native white of native parentage from 3.3 to 2.2. For the foreign-born white the percentage was 30 in 1910 and 33.8 in 1920.

By counties the percentage of illiteracy ranges all the way from 44.6 in Willyay County to one-tenth of 1 in Hansford County.

which they have in common. They found the officers of the Texas Farm Bureau strongly behind the new movement for the perfection of a sturdy system of permanent warehouses and elevators in the State.

Mr. Baughman further stated that letters sent to a number of leading organizations in the Panhandle by the Warehouse Division of the Department had brought out the fact that the people of that section are keenly interested in finding a way to lessen the margin of difference between the price paid to the farmer for his products and the ultimate price paid for these same products by the consumer.

Concluding his remarks at the conference, Mr. Baughman further declared that the warehouse division of the Markets and Warehouse Department stood ready, at any time, to send a special representative to any city within the State to assist in the organization of permanent bonded warehouses or elevators. In fact he made the request that the entire personal of the field force of the several divisions of this Department take advantage of every opportunity to furnish the office with any information that would aid the Department in rendering assistance to the producer of every section of the State.

AMERICAN LEGION FOOT BALL

The Local American Legion foot ball team played the Wheeler town team here last Friday afternoon, and a rather interesting and hotly contested game was the outcome. The final score of the game was Miami 6, Wheeler 3. Quite a large crowd gathered to witness the game, and a return match is to be played at Wheeler tomorrow.

Two Weddings

Two weddings were solemnized last week, one in Miami and the other near, and both parties being well known here.

Miss Jessie Cunningham was married to Mr. Chester Terry on the 18, by Rev. Whatley. Both the contracting parties are residents of Miami and will make their home among us.

Another wedding of interest to Miami people was that of Bill Webb, a former student of the Miami High School to Miss Lorena Busch of McLean. This wedding took place at McLean on the 17th, Rev. Pennington of Miami officiating and Mr. and Mrs. Webb will make their home in Gray County.

INTERESTING PARTY PASSES THROUGH MIAMI

E. H. Wilson and family, passed through Miami Friday of last week enroute from Ft. Riley Kansas to Amarillo.

While in town Mr. Wilson stated that he was with the F. G. Haden Geological Survey that was camped on Johnsw creek on the north side of the Canadian river in Roberts County in 1874, when the Adobe Walls Indian fight took place. He said the whole party went into the Walls the next day after the fight.

This party of men, with the buffalo hunters scattered around in different camps has caused the report to go out so often that two hundred men were in the fight.

Mr. Wilson is now sixty six years old, well preserved and in vigorous health. He is interested in the oil development in the Panhandle and will spend the winter in Amarillo.

ROAD BUILDING

FEDERAL COMMISSION URGED

Highway Question Concerns Agriculture, Commerce, Military and Social Needs.

"National development and the need for economy demand the formation of a highway policy under a federal commission," said George M. Graham, member of the highway committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the senate committee on post offices and post roads.

"The economic barrier now confronting us is the lack of adequate highways. There is urgent need to build these highways as quickly as possible, and with the maximum economy.

"Highways should be planned with consideration of their relationship to railway and waterway communication. The highway question concerns agriculture, commerce, the military and the social needs of the nation. The roads program is national in scope and is related to all departments of the government.

"Highway policy, therefore," Graham continued, "should be unified under a federal highway commission directly responsible to the chief executive, as is now the policy in state road administration.

"Economy will be served by such a measure as roads will be with regard to all the needs of the nation. It will be possible to pay higher salaries than can now be done under the bureau system. Millions of dollars are to be expended on roads, and it is the highest economy to secure the ablest brains in the country for the administration of these funds.

"Selection of roads of primary interstate importance and concentration of federal funds in conjunction with state funds on these roads is the first step needed. States should be required to meet the federal aid as states rather than passing their responsibilities along to counties as many states do now. In this way, it will be possible to have state policies correlated with the national program. The counties will benefit from the general interstate highway system, and the funds which the counties formerly used in conjunction with federal aid can be devoted to more specifically local purposes.

"Maintenance should be provided for by the states in all cases," Graham emphasized, "in order that as the public highways are developed they may be depended upon as permanent avenues of communication, in order that the original public investment be protected.

"States which have been sufficiently progressive to build their share of federal aid are now in a position to develop secondary systems, and are therefore that much ahead in economic development.

"A wise highway policy will construct and maintain roads through government forest reservations from federal funds, without calling upon the treasuries in the states wherein these are located. Wherever a state contains large areas of federal lands due modification should be made of the present 50-50 expenditure of federal and state funds."

WOMAN AS ROAD CONTRACTOR

Manitoba Municipality Awards Contract to Elizabeth McCoy to Build Highway.

Elizabeth Ann McCoy of Pipestone, Manitoba, has the distinction of being the first woman in the province to be awarded a contract in construction of roads. She recently secured a contract from the good roads board for road building in the Pipestone municipality.

IS LONGEST PAVED HIGHWAY

Possible for Motorist to Travel From Atlantic to Mississippi on Hard Surface.

From the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi river on paved roads! This may sound like a motorist's dream, but it will be actually possible to make such a trip this fall. The last stretch of the national pike in Illinois will be completed then. Never before has such a long paved road been possible in this country.

AUTUMN FORECASTS VARIED STYLES IN SUITS

IN THE new suits for fall and winter interest is centered in the coats which are considerably varied in style. Leaving out the box coat, which is a law unto itself in the matter of length, coats are longer than for some seasons, and therefore more dignified. The Russian blouse is welcomed by its devotees in smartly designed models that are bloused at the back and belted at the front with fullness on the hips. There are some trim, semitailored, severely tailored coats with a decided flare in their skirts and notched collars that are distinguished by their lack of trimming, and there are many fur-trimmed and embroidered costume suits that will prove the mainstay of any winter wardrobe that takes them on.

In coats as in gowns, sleeves will hold the center of the stage, playing the leading role opposite collars. In a great many coats sleeves are wide at the bottom and fur is ingeniously used for trimming them. Very deep cuffs of fur matching collars of it, on the longer of the suit coats fit them to play a dual role and to serve as wraps to be worn with frocks as well as their own particular skirts. Chin collars there are in great variety of shapes, wide and either straight or flaring, but they divide honors with the tuxedo collar. Squirrel, kolinsky, beaver, caracul, fox, broadtail and beaver harmonize with the quiet colors and soft fabrics which the season approves. The handsome suit pictured here is typical with its wide sleeves handed with fur and richly embroidered, its eccentric collar of fur, and embroidery emphasizing its low neckline. It has a narrow grille of the cloth with narrow bands of fur on the ends.

It is settled that skirts are not to be much lengthened. After rumors that they were going to the ankles it turns out that they have struck a happy medium and stop at the shoe tops.

PRETTY THINGS WOMEN MAKE FOR THEMSELVES

BEADS and pendants of colorful sealing wax, strung on silk cord or small metallic chains or baby ribbon (in velvet or satin) are having a great vogue. They are easily made and the work is fascinating. Very inexpensive metallic chains and girdles can be made handsomely decorative by applying flowers made of sealing wax to them. They are fashionable with coats and frocks and replace the belts or girdles made of fabrics. In the illustration above a necklace of beads, strung on a silk cord, a gun metal grille with wax roses applied to its metal medallions, slides and tassels, and a long pendant and slide on a strand of baby velvet ribbon, are good examples of fashionable ornaments.

To make the beads and medallions, very simple and inexpensive materials are required. They include a large-sized steel knitting needle, a steel knife, a small alcohol lamp, a little piece of cotton cloth and several sticks of colored sealing wax. A candle or gas flame may take the place of the alcohol lamp, and a glass of cold water completes the worker's outfit.

Select the color wanted and, with a heated knife, cut off two pieces of wax, each half the size of the bead to be made. Heat the steel knitting needle and fasten the pieces of wax to it, one on either side of the needle. Hold the wax above the flame, turning slowly until the bead is formed, then dip it in water to cool. Remove and dry the bead with the cloth. Choose colors to add to the bead. Hit with each stick in turn and drop a little wax on the bead; revolve over the flame again. The colors will flow around the bead, blending in varying designs. Cool the bead again, dry and pass over the flame to give luster. Heat the needle on each side of the bead until it is loosened, slide back and forth on the needle and remove. While the bead is warm it may be pressed by the fingers or knife, or on a piece of glass, into different shapes.

Remove Stain. To remove iodine or greasy stains apply alcohol. When salts of lemon fail to remove iron rust dip in oxalic acid and rinse well in borax water. To remove peach or pear stain leave over night on snow. Dip in oxalic acid and rinse well in borax or ammonia water.

DISTRIBUTE 130 PURE BULLS

Animals Intended for Breeding Purposes in Different Communities in Kentucky.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The first of the "better-sires" sales held in Kentucky this year resulted in the sale of 130 purebred bulls. These animals are being distributed through the state and will be used for breeding purposes. In describing the sale, Wayland Rhoads of the extension division, University of Kentucky, states in a letter to the United States Department of Agriculture that "much improvement will come from it."

Type of Bull Used to Build Up Herds in Kentucky.

Notwithstanding the present excellence of much of the live stock in the state, Kentucky farmers are welcoming the opportunity to obtain, at reasonable prices, purebred sires of superior type. Additional sales are to be held.

VERY FEW REAL RUNTS BORN

Undersized and Unthrifty Animals Are Generally Result of Inadequate Feed and Care.

Emphasizing that runt live stock are generally the result of inadequate feed, housing and care, the editor of a farm paper in the Central West adds to the experiences which nearly 1,000 farmers have already reported to the United States Department of Agriculture on the subject of runt prevention.

"There are very few real runts born," he declares. "They may be a little undersized, perhaps a trifle weaker and sometimes of inferior constitution, brought on by improper breeding systems. But poor housing, limited range, getting rooted away and cheated by the larger and huskier of the litter—these are the agencies by which most so-called runts are formed. Given proper care and feed until they get a start, the runts will prove money-makers."

These comments agree closely with the opinions of others who contributed their experiences in the matter to the department. Particular care needs to be given live stock at weaning time, since this is the time when the dams fail to give the nourishment required by the growing animal and when the young stock is learning to eat other feed.

WAY OF RAISING MULE COLTS

Best Plan Is to Put Them on Feed After Weaning and Never Retard Best Growth.

The older way of raising mules was to turn them out at weaning time and practically let them rough it until three years old, then get them up, wild as deer, for a shearing and then either span them out to break or put them in the pen for fattening as unbroken stuff. Nowadays the mule colt is put on feed almost before weaning and is never allowed to stop his growing until he is ready for the harness, which time is reached a year sooner by the new method than by the old. The mule at two is a good work animal, but care must be taken not to overdo him at that age, and it is best not to put a two-year-old in as a "regular" until he is well accustomed to the work, better still, don't crowd the youngster until he is three, when he will have attained quite a bit of that strength and grit that makes him the marvel of the working world.

FEEDING NEW CORN TO HOGS

Give Few Stalks Just as Plant Reaches Advanced Milk Stage, Gradually Increasing Amount.

A good way to acoustion hogs to the new corn is to cut a few stalks of corn and throw it over the fence to the hogs just as it reaches the advanced milk stage, gradually increasing the amount until in 10 or 12 days, when the corn is well dented, the hogs are getting a full feed. Even then, it is necessary to watch them closely to see that none get off feed because of digestive trouble.

SILLO PAYS LARGE DIVIDENDS

Stands as Sentinel to Successful Cropping and Efficient Feeding—More Are Needed.

The silo has been the difference between success and failure on many farms where cows, beef cattle or sheep are kept. The silo stands as a sentinel to successful cropping and efficient feeding. It should be a monument to thrift and progressive husbandry on more farms. Why not ensile your corn and carry your cattle or sheep through the winter economically?

Home Town Helps

SEES NEED OF "CITY BOOK"

Writer Points Out How Information of Great Value to Community Could Be Spread.

What are the "points" of cities? How shall we compare one with another, and, allowing for geographic, climatic and economic limitations, describe the curve of possible ascent for the one we love best? Here is where we must establish standards.

Vaguely we recognize these types in our common reference to a "factory town," a "mining town" or a "county seat" and so on. But, as to a factory town or any other kind that we want to know about and improve, how does it compare with others?

We need a little book on "What Is a City?" It should be a cheap little book that everybody can buy, a simple little book that everybody can understand, a sort of civic primer.

Suppose we live, as so many of us do, in an ordinary, medium-sized town. Our "city book" should inform us that a normal town, with the number of inhabitants our town has, should have such and such functions, adding to the simple requirements of the small village those other and more varied functions which the larger population of our town requires and can support. Such a list, for our ordinary medium-sized town, might run somewhat as follows:

Smithy, store, postoffice, school, church, dressmaker, milliner, barber, drug store, moving pictures, court house, jail, fire company, hotel, hall.

These are not placed in any dogmatic order of importance, or arranged with great care.

A "pattern town" should be described suggesting the income that should be derived from legitimate taxation of its number of citizens, and showing just what advantages a town with such an income deserves and requires.—Charlotte Perkins Gilman in the Century Magazine.

MAY BE PROUD OF RECORD

Massachusetts Town Has Shown What Can Be Done When Management is Intelligent.

In contrast with the situation at Block Island, where the town came near bankruptcy, is that of Middleton, Mass.

The entire permanent debt of Middleton at the present time is $7,000, of which $1,000 is due in notes which will soon be paid, leaving a balance of $6,000. Here is what the town has to show for the amount and may be timely:

First, and one of the most important, are excellent schools. There is also a fine, free public library, well equipped with the best of books. There is public water with good hydrant service and with which a large portion of the townspeople can be supplied. Electric lights are in all the central streets and a large number of homes are equipped with them. There are good railroad accommodations. Two new bridges have been built over the Ipswich river. The improvements, with the exception of the schools, have all been made during the last 20 years, and are all paid for with the exception of $5,400.

In addition to the above the state and county have expended on the streets in town, under the small town act, for macadam roads, $150,000.—Boston Globe.

City Library and Farmer.

How pleasant relations are maintained between the farmers in the region of Stockton, Cal., and the attendants at the city library of that place, and how the farmers draw heavily upon the facilities of the library to their pleasure and profit, is told in a bulletin of the Department of Agriculture. The library sends out traveling libraries to communities, and it also encourages the country residents to make direct use of the main library. There are 30 communities and 22 school districts that are receiving county free library service from Stockton, and the main library has a direct county circulation of 6,281 volumes.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Photographing From Airplane.

In view of the facility with which objects many feet under water can be photographed from an airplane it is possible that the navigation of such a river as the Mississippi, with its shifting bars, may hereafter be made safe by monthly or weekly mapping from the air. In earthquake regions, such as southern Italy and Japan, the changing coast lines, shallows and safe harbors can easily be photographed from the air after each fresh shock, thus keeping navigation open and safeguarding the lives of mariners.

Calgary Insures Employees.

Group insurance to the amount of $1,500,000 has been taken out by the city of Calgary to cover employees in case of death, sickness, accident, or any other cause. Calgary is at present the largest city in Canada providing this form of protection for employees. A feature of the group plan is that many otherwise uninsurable persons are thus included.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "friendly" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of colic or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives your well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

A Good Logic in Negro's Contentment as to Lion's Probable Change to a Meat Diet.

A negro employed at one of the Hollywood movie studios was drafted by a director to do a novel comedy scene with a lion.

"You get into this bed," ordered the director, "and we'll bring the lion in and put him in bed with you. It will be a scream."

"Put a lion in bed with me!" yelled the dandy. "No, sah! Not a-tall, 'quits right here and now."

"But," protested the director, "the lion won't hurt you. This lion was brought up on milk."

"So was I brung up on milk," yelled the dandy, "but I eats meat now."—Los Angeles Times.

"GO ON—TELL ALL!"

Errollyn—Dyck Calhoun, gifted young Irish gentleman of the time of the French and American revolutions, meets Sheila Lynn, seventeen-year-old girl visiting in the neighborhood. They are mutually attracted. Sheila never knew her mother's father, Errollyn, her mother having divorced him. In Dublin Leonard Mallow and Dyck fight with swords and Dyck is victorious. Errollyn, secretly in French employ, gets Dyck drunk and tries to persuade him to join in revolt against England. They quarrel. While Dyck is overcome with drunken wine, Errollyn's second wife enters the room and stabs her husband to the heart. Dyck is arrested on a charge of murder. He does not know if he killed Errollyn or not. Sheila begs her mother to go to Dublin with her to help Dyck. Mrs. Lynn opposes the idea. A letter from Mrs. Lynn's wealthy brother in America decides them to go and live with him. Dyck refuses to enter any plea except "No Defense." He might have escaped by revealing Errollyn's treachery but refuses on Sheila's account. He is sent to prison for eight years. Sheila writes Dyck, assuring him of her belief in his innocence. Released after serving four years, Dyck finds himself destitute, his father dead. In London Dyck receives a letter from Sheila inviting him to come to America and secure money for the voyage. He feels he cannot in honor go to her. Dyck joins the British navy as an enlisted man. Bad conditions in the fleet result in mutiny. Dyck, joining the mutineers, is chosen by them to command the ship, the Ariadne. Dismantled with the conduct of the other ships' crews, Dyck breaks with them and sails the Ariadne to the West Indies. He arrives in time to turn the tide of victory in a battle between the French and English fleets. Calhoun is arrested for his part in the mutiny but thanked by the admiral for his work in the battle. The British government gives Dyck the freedom of the island of Jamaica, of which his old enemy, Lord Mallow, is governor. With a companion, Dyck secures treasure worth $200,000 from a sunken Spanish ship, and becomes a wealthy and respected planter. Sheila comes to Jamaica. Dyck and Sheila's mother decide that the girl must be told all the truth about her father's death.

Ever since the day when she had seen Dyck Calhoun at Spanish Town she had been disturbed in mind. Dyck had shown a reserve which she felt was not wholly due to his having been imprisoned for manslaughter. In one way he looked little older. His physique was as good or better than when she first saw him on the hills of Playmore. It was athletic, strenuous, elastic. Yet there was about it the abandonment of despair—at least of recklessness. That much was to be said for him, that he had not sought to influence her to his own advantage. She was so surrounded in America by men who knew her wealth and prized her beauty, she was so much a figure in Virginia, that any reserve with regard to herself was noticable. She was though feminine to have pleasure in the fact that she was thought desirable by men; yet it played an insignificant part in her life. It did not give her conceit. It was only like a frill on the skirts of life. It did not play any part in her character. Certainly Dyck Calhoun had not flattered her.

That one to whom she had written, that she had done, should remove himself from the place of the deserving friend, one whom she had not deserted while he was in jail as a criminal—that he should treat her so, gave every nerve a thrill of protest. At the lodgings in Spanish Town, after Dyck Calhoun had left, her mother had briefly told that she had told Dyck he could expect the conditions of the Playmore friendship should be renewed; that, in effect, she had warned him that to this Sheila had said that the killing of a man whose life was bad might be punishable. In any case, that thing was in another land, under normal conditions; and, with utter lack of logic, she saw no reason why she should be socially punished in Jamaica for what he had been legally punished for in Ireland. As for the mutiny, he had done what any honest man of spirit would do; also, he had great bravery and skill brought glory to the king's fleet in West Indian waters.

Then it was she told her mother how she had always disobeyed her commands where Dyck was concerned; that she had written to him while he was in jail; that she had come to Jamaica more to see him than to return to Salem; that she had the old Celtic spirit of brotherhood, and she could not be driven from it. In a sudden burst of anger her mother had argued her with deceit; but the girl had had followed her conscience, and she dismissed it all with a gesture as emphatic as her mother's anger.

That night they had dined with Lord Mallow, and she saw that his attentions had behind them the deep purpose of marriage. Lord Mallow had ability and knew how to use it; and he was never so brilliant as on this afternoon, for they dined while it was still daylight and hardy evening.

"I saw a man's head on a pole on my way back to King's house. You have to use firm methods here," Sheila said. "It is not all a rose garden. You have to apply force."

Lord Mallow smiled grimly. "C'est la force morale toujours."

"Ah, I should not have thought it was moral force always," was the ironical reply.

"We have criminals here," declared the governor with aplomb, "and they need some handling, I assure you. We have in this island one of the worst criminals in the British empire."

"Ah, I thought he was in the United States!" answered the girl, sedately.

"You mean General George Washington," remarked the governor. "No, it is one who was a friend and fellow-countryman of yours before he took to killing unarmed men."

"You refer to Mr. Dyck Calhoun, I don't know, sir? Well, he is still a friend of mine, and I saw him today—this afternoon, before I came here. I understood that the crown had pardoned his mutiny."

The governor was annoyed.

"The crime is there just the same," he replied. "He mutinied, and he stole a king's ship, and took command of it, and brought it out here."

"And saved you and your island, I understand."

"Ah, he said that, did he?"

"He said nothing at all to me about it. I have been reading the Jamaica Cornwall Chronicle the last three years."

"He is ever a source of anxiety to me," declared the governor.

"I knew he was once in Phoenix park years ago," was the demure yet sharp reply, "but I thought he was a good citizen here—a good and well-to-do citizen."

Lord Mallow flushed slightly. "Phoenix park—ah, he was a capable fellow with the sword! I said so always, and I'd back him now against a champion; but many a bad man has been a good swordsman."

"You Refer to Mr. Dyck Calhoun, I Doubt Not, Sir."

"So, that's what good swordsmanship does, is it? I wondered what it was that did it—I hear you fight him still—but with a bludgeon, and he dodges it."

"I do not understand," declared Lord Mallow tartly.

"Ah, wasn't there some difference over his going for the treasure to Haiti? Some one told me, I think, that you were not in favor of his getting his ticket-of-leave, or whatever it is called, and that the provost marshal gave it to him, as he had the right to do."

"You have wide sources of information in this case. I wonder—"

"No, your honor need not wonder. It was told that by a gentleman on the steamer coming here. He was a native of this island, I think—or perhaps it was the captain, or the mate, or the boatswain. I can't recall. Or maybe it came to me from my man-servant, Darius Boland, who hears things wherever he is, one doesn't know how; but he hears them. He is to me what your aide-de-camp is to you. He nodded toward a young man nearby at the table. "You shall see my Darius Boland—indeed you have seen him. He was there today when you gave me the distinction of your presence."

"That dry, lean, cartridge of a fellow, that pair of pincers with a face!"

"And a tongue, your honor. If you did not hear it, yet you will hear it. He is to be my manager here. So he will be under your control—if I permit him."

"If you permit him, mistress?"

"If I permit him, yes. You are a power, but you are not stronger than the laws and rules you make. For instance, there was the case of Mr. Dyck Calhoun. When he came, you were for tying him up in one little corner of the island—the hottest part, I know, near to Kingston, where it averages ninety degrees in the shade at any time of the year. But the king you represent had not restricted his liberties so, and you being the kind 'hat is, yourself, were forced to abide by your own regulations. So it may be the same with Darius Boland. He may want something, and you, high up, looking down, will say, 'What devilry is here!' and decline. He will then turn to your chief justice or provost marshal general, or a deputy of the provost marshal, and they will say that Darius Boland shall have what he wants, because it is the will of the will you represent."

Almost the last words the governor used to her were these: "Those only live at peace here who are at peace with me," and her reply had been: "But Mr. Dyck Calhoun lives at peace, does he not, your honor?"

To that he had replied: "No man is at peace while he has yet desires to satisfy." He paused a minute and then added: "That Errollyn killed by Dyck Calhoun—did you ever see him that you remember?"

"Not that I remember," she replied quickly. "I never lived in Dublin."

"That may be. But did you ever know his history?" She shook her head in negation. His eyes searched her face carefully, and he was astonished when he saw no sign of confusion there. "Good God, she doesn't know. She's never been told," he said to himself. "This is too startling, I'll speak to the mother."

A little later he turned from the mother with astonishment. "It's madness," he remarked to himself. "She will find it out. Some one will tell her. . . . By heaven, I'll tell her first," he hastily said. "When she knows the truth, Calhoun will have no chance on earth. Yes, I'll tell her myself. But I'll tell no one else," he added; for he felt that Sheila, once she knew the truth, would resent his having told abroad the true story of the Errollyn Boyne affair.

So Sheila and her mother had gone to their lodgings with depression, but each with a clear purpose in her mind. Mrs. Lynn was determined to tell her daughter what she ought to have known long before; and Sheila was firm to make the one man who had ever interested her understand that he was losing much that was worth while keeping.

Then had followed the journey to Salem. Yet all the while for Sheila one dark thought kept hovering over everything. Why should life be so complicated? Why should this one man who seemed capable and had the temperament of the Irish hills and vales be the victim of punishment and shame—why should he share her?

Suddenly, without her mother's knowledge, she sent Darius Boland through the hills in the early morning to Enniskillen, Dyck Calhoun's place, with a letter which said only this: "Is it not time that you came to wish us well in our new home? We shall expect you tomorrow."

When Dyck read this note he thought it was written by Sheila, but inspired by the mother; and he lost no time in making his way down across the country to Salem, which he reached a few hours after sunrise. At the doorway of the house he met Mrs. Lynn.

"Have you told her?" he asked in anxiety.

Astonished at his presence, she could make no reply for a moment. "I have told her nothing," she answered. "I meant to do so this morning. I meant to do it—I must."

"She sent me a letter asking if it was not time I came to wish you well in your house, and you and she would expect me today."

"I knew naught of her writing you," was the reply—"naught at all. But now that you are here, will you not tell her all?"

Dyck smiled grimly. "Where is she?" he asked. "I will tell her."

The mother pointed down the garden. "Yonder by the clump of palms I saw her a moment ago. If you go that way you will find her."

"In another moment," Dyck Calhoun was on his way to the clump of palms, and before he reached it the girl came out into the path. When she saw him, she gave a slight start, then stood still, and he came to her.

"I have your letter," he said, "and I came to say what I ought to say about your living here; you will bring blessings to the place."

She looked at him steadfastly. "Shall we talk here," she said, "or inside the house? There is a little shelter here in the trees"—pointing to the right—"a shelter built by the late manager. It has the covering of a hut, but it is open at two sides. Will you come?"

As she went on ahead he could not fail to notice how slim and trim she was, how perfectly her figure seemed to fit her gown—as though she had been poured into it; and yet the folds of her skirt waved and floated like silky clouds around her! Under cover of the shelter she turned and smiled at him.

"You have seen my mother?"

"I have just come from her," he answered. "She bade me tell you what ought to have been told long ago, and she was there today when you gave me the distinction of your presence."

reason that you should. The sorrows that had come to your mother belonged to days when you were scarce out of the cradle. But you did not know. You were not aware that your mother had divorced your father for crime against marital fidelity and great cruelty. You did not know even who that father was. Well, I must tell you. Your father was a handsome man, a friend of mine until I knew the truth about him, and then he died—I killed him, so the court said."

Her face became ghastly pale. After a moment of anguished bewilderment, she said: "You mean that Errollyn Boyne was my father?"

"Yes, I mean that. They say I killed him. They say he was found with no sword drawn, but that my open sword lay on the table beside me while I was asleep, and that it had let out his life-blood."

"They Say I Killed Him."

"Why was he killed?" she asked, horror-stricken and with pale lips.

"I do not know, but if I killed him, it was because I revolted from the proposals he made to me. I—"

He paused, for the look on her face was painful to see, and her body was as that of one who had been struck by lightning. His heart smote him, and he pulled himself together to tell her all.

"Go on," she said. "I want to hear. I want to know all. I ought to have known—long ago; but that can't be helped now. Continue—please."

Her words had come slowly, in gasps almost, and her voice was so frayed he could scarcely recognize it. All the pride of her nature seemed shattered.

"If I killed him," he said presently, "it was because he tried to tempt me from my allegiance to the crown, to become a servant of France, to—"

He stopped short, for a cry came from her lips which appalled him.

"My God—my God!" she said with bloodless lips, her eyes fastened on his face, her every look and motion the infliction of despair. "Go on—tell all," she added presently with more composure.

Swiftly he described what happened in the little room at the traitor's tavern, of the momentary reconciliation and the wine that he drank, drugged wine poured out but not drunk by Errollyn Boyne, and of his later unconsciousness. At last he paused.

"Why did these things not come out at the trial?" she asked in hushed tones.

He made a helpless gesture. "I did not speak of them because I thought of you. I hid it—I did not want you to know what your father was."

Something like a snarl gathered at her pale lips. "You saved me for the moment, and condemned yourself forever," she said in a voice of torture. "If you had told what he was—if you had told that the jury would not have condemned you, they would not have sent you to prison."

"I believe I did the right thing," he said. "If I killed your father, prison was my proper punishment. But I can't remember. There was no other clue, no other guide to judgment. So the law said I killed him, and—he had evidently not drawn his sword. It was clear he was killed defenseless."

"You killed a defenseless man!" Her voice was sharp with agony. "That was mentioned at the trial—but I did not believe it then—in that long ago." She trembled to her feet from the bench where she was sitting. "And I do not believe it now—no, on my soul, I do not."

"But it makes no difference, you see. I was condemned for killing your father, and the world knows that Errollyn Boyne was your father, and here Lord Mallow, the governor, knows it; and there is no chance of friendship between you and me. You dare not be friends with me—"

Her face suddenly suffused and she held herself upright with an effort. She was about to say, "I dare, Dyck—I do dare!" but he stopped her with a reproving gesture.

"No, no, you dare not, and I would not let you if you would. I am an convict. They say I killed your father, and the way to understanding between us is closed."

She made a protesting gesture. "Closed! Closed!—But is it closed? No, no, some one else killed him, not you. You couldn't have done it. You would have fought him—fought him as you did Lord Mallow, and in fighting you might have killed him, but your sword never let out his life when he was defenseless—never."

A look of intense relief, almost of happiness, came to Dyck's face. "That is like you, Sheila, but it does not cure the trouble. You and I are as far apart as noon and midnight. The law has said the only thing that can be said upon it."

She sank down again upon the wooden bench. "Oh, how mad you were, not to tell the whole truth long ago! You would not have been condemned, and then—"

She paused, overcome, and his self-control almost deserted him. With strong feeling he burst out: "And then we might have come together? No, your mother—your friends, myself could not have let that be. See, Sheila, I will tell you the whole truth now—aye, the whole absolute truth. I have loved you since the first day I saw you on the hills. Not a day has passed since then, when you were not more to me than any other woman in all the world."

A new light came into her face, the shadows left her eyes and the pallor fled from her lips. "You loved me?" she said in a voice grown soft—husky still, but soft as the light in a summer heaven. "You loved me—and have always loved me since we first met?"

"I have always loved you, Sheila, and shall do so while I have breath and life. I have always given you the best that is in me, tried to do what was good for us both, since my misfortune—crime, Lord Mallow calls it, as does the world. Never a sunrise that does not find you in the forefront of all the lighted world; never a flower have I seen that does not seem sweeter—it brings thoughts of you; never a crime that does not deepen its shame because you are in the world. In prison, when I used to mop my floor and clean down the walls; when I swept the dust from the corners; when I folded up my convict-clothes; when I ate the prison food and sang the prison-hymns; when I placed myself beside the bench in the workshop to make things that would bring cash to my fellow-prisoners in their need; when I saw a minister of religion or heard the Litany; when I counted up the days, first that I had spent in jail and then the days I had still to spend in jail; when I read the books from the prison library of the land where you had gone, and of the struggle there; when I saw you, in my mind's eye, in the cotton fields or on the veranda of your house in Virginia; I had but one thought, and that was the look in your face at Playmore and Limerick, the sound of your voice as you came singing up the hill just before I first met you, the joyous beauty of your body."

"And at sea?" she whispered with a gesture at once beautiful and pathetic, for it had the motion of helplessness and hopelessness.

"At sea," he answered, with his eyes full of intense feeling—"at sea, I was free at last, doomed as I thought, anguished in spirit, and yet with a wild hope that out of it would come deliverance. I expected to lose my life, and I lived each day as though it would be my last. I was chief rogue in a shipful of rogues, chief sinner in a hell of sinners, and yet I had no remorse and no regret. I had done all with an honest purpose, with the good of the sailors in my mind; and so I lived in daily touch with death, honor and dishonor. Yet I never saw a sailor in the shrouds, or heard the night watch call 'All's well!' In the midst of the night and mutiny, that I did not long for a word from you that would take away the sting of death. Those days at sea for ten long weeks were never free from anxiety, not anxiety for myself, only for the men who had put me where I was, had given me captain's rank, had—"

Suddenly he stopped, and took from his pocket the letter he was writing on the very day she landed in Jamaica. He opened it and studied it for a moment with a dark look in his face.

"This I wrote even as you were landing in Jamaica, and I knew naught of your coming. It was an outbreak of my soul. It was the truth written to you and for you, and yet with the feeling that you would never see it. I was still writing it when Michael Clones came up the drive to tell me you and your mother were here. Here it is with all the truth and terror in it—aye, there was terror, for it gave the soul of my life to one I never thought to see again; and, if seeing, should be compelled to do what I have done—tell her the whole truth at once and so have it over."

"But do not think that in telling it now I repent of my secrecy. I repent of nothing; I would not alter anything. What was to be, and what is, has its place in the book of destiny. No, I repent nothing, yet here now I give you this to read while still my story of the days of which you know is in your ears. Here it is. It will tell the whole story; for when you have read it and do understand, then we part to meet no more as friends. We will go back to Virginia, and I will stay here. You will not regret coming here; but you will desire our friendship to cease; and what has been to be no more, while the tincture of life is in your veins, Sheila, read this thing, for it is the rest of the story until now."

He handed her the papers, and she took them with an inclination of the head which said: "Give it to me. I will read it now while my eyes can still bear to read it. I have laid on my heart the nettle of shame, and while it is still burning there I will read all that you have to teach me."

"I will go out in the garden while you read it," he said. "In a half-hour I will come back, and then we can say good-by," he added, with pain in his voice, but firmly.

"No, do not go," she urged. "Sit here on the bench—at the end of it here," she said, motioning with her hand.

He shook his head in negation. "No, I will go and say to your mother that I have told you, and ease her mind, for I know she herself meant to tell you."

As he went he looked at her face closely. It was so young, so pathetic, so pale, yet so strangely beautiful, and her forehead was serene. That was one of her characteristics. In all her life, her forehead remained untroubled and unlined. Only at her mouth and in her eyes did misery or sorrow show. He looked into her eyes now, and he was pleased with what he saw; for they had in them the glow of understanding and the note of will which said: "You and I are parted, but I believe in you, and I will not show I am a weak woman by futile horror. We shall meet no more, but I shall remember you."

As he turned away, it was with the sharp conviction that he had dealt a blow from which the girl would recover, but would never be the same again. She was rich "beyond the dreams of avarice," but that would not console her. She had resources within herself, had what would keep her steady. Her lips opened as though she would say something, but nothing came from them. She only shook her head sadly, as if to say: "You understand. Go, and when you come again, it will be for us to part in peace—at least in peace."

Out in the garden he found her mother. After the first agitated greeting—agitated on her part—he said: "The story has been told, and she is now reading—"

He told her the story of the manuscript, and added that Sheila had carried herself with courage.

Presently the woman said to him: "She never believed you killed Errollyn Boyne. Well, it may not help the situation, but I say, too, that I do not believe you did. I cannot understand why you did not deny having killed him."

"I could not deny. In any case, the law punished me for it, and the book is closed forever."

"Have you never thought that some one—"

"Yes, I have thought, but who is there? The crowd at the Dublin hotel where the thing was done were secret, and they would hide the apron off a bishop. No, there is no light, and, to tell the truth, I care not now."

"But if you are not guilty—it is not too late; there is my girl! If the real criminal should appear—can you not see?"

The poor woman, distressedly pale, her hair still abundant, her eyes still bright, her pulses aglow, as they had ever been, made a gesture of appeal with hands that were worn and thin. She had charm still, in a way as great as her daughter's.

"I can see; but, Mrs. Lynn, I have no hope. I am a man whom some men fear—"

"Lord Mallow!" she interjected.

"He does not fear me. Why do you say that?"

"I speak with a woman's intuition. I don't know what he fears, but he does fear you. You are a son of history; you had a duel with him, and beat him; you have always beaten him, even here where he has been supreme as governor—from first to last, you have beaten him."

"I hope I shall be even with him at the last—at the very last," was Dyck Calhoun's reply. "We were made to be foes. We were from the first. I felt it when I saw him at Playmore. Nothing has changed since then. He will try to destroy me here, but I will see it through. The man is a fool. I could help him here, but he will have none of it, and he is running great risks. He has been warned that the Maroons are restive, that the black slaves will rise if the Maroons have any initial success, and he will listen to no advice. And up there—he turned and pointed—"up there in Trelawney the Maroons are plotting and planning, and any day an explosion may occur. If it occurs no one will be safe, especially if the blacks rise too—I mean the black slaves. There will be no safety then for any one."

"For us as well, you mean?"

"For you as well as all others, and you are nearer to Trelawney than most others. You are in their path. So be wise, Mrs. Lynn, and get back to Virginia as soon as may be. It is a better place than this."

"My daughter is mistress here," was the sorrowful reply. "She will have her own way."

"I will tell her what I fear, and she may change her mind."

"But the governor may want her to stay," answered Mrs. Lynn none too sagely, but with that in her mind which seemed to justify her.

"Lord Mallow—oh, if you think there is an influence in him to keep her, that is another question," said Dyck with a grim smile. "But, nevertheless, I think you should leave here and go back to Virginia. It is no safe place for two ladies, in all senses. Whatever Lord Mallow thinks or does, this is no place for you. This place is your daughter's, for her to do what she chooses with it, and I think she ought to sell it. There would be no trouble in getting a purchaser. It is a fine property."

"But the governor might not think as you do; he might not wish it sold."

"Good-by—God protect you!" he added, looking into Sheila's eyes.

Make your business adventure today, or tomorrow you will be saying, "what an opportunity I lost." It is a cinch you will never amount to anything or succeed unless you try.

Miami foot ball fans appreciated the large attendance from Pampa to their last Saturdays game. Pampa was pretty strong for Miami, and you know you just can't help liking a fellow when he is for you. Come again Pampa.

A large car containing 55 gallons of whiskey was caught near Hereford last week. Bootlegging in the Panhandle will not be very profitable if everybody went after them and got as much contraband as does the Hereford officers.

Quit wondering what is going to happen, or what things are coming. Just get busy, go after business and keep trading, farming and working. Everything is going right on, no matter what happens, people are going to live, eat and wear clothes. The world never did stop moving, and we don't believe it ever will until the judgement.

It appears now that a showdown is sure coming in the railroad strike. We shall not attempt to say who is right in the matter, but we do know that the American Public have been the goat in a great number of threats the past several years. A threatened strike occurs pretty regular, and the public will welcome the time when someone is recognized as the boss, and they can rest a short while.

Congress says a sick man can have beer, under the doctors direction, with a prescription to his druggist, just as much as he needs, but what does a sick man want with beer, we always thought it was for well people. Alfalfa tea is all a sick man should drink, according to the Plainview News.

The Dallas State Fair is surely in bad standing with the Texas Press Association, and a number of the boys are not failing to take a good lick at them through their papers. We haven't said much, but have done less. In fact we believe in acting, rather than talking so much, so when free plate, free press notices and hundred of other space grafters material reach our desk, it hits the waste basket as soon as soon possible and we try to forget it as quickly as possible, silence is golden when you are dealing with space grafters.

LOOK! LOOK!

Drum will pay you the highest market price for your poultry and eggs at the Wagon Yard.

The Panhandle Herald came to us this week a Semi-Weekly newspaper. This makes the third newspaper in the Panhandle to begin issuing twice per week this summer. You can always count on a country newspaper giving full service for patronage rendered. In fact they oft times give more than the patronage will support. Here is wishing luck to the Semi weekly Panhandle Herald.

Geo Whillkens, we're sorry for McLean's foot ball team. In last weeks McLean News some false profit gave out the score for the Miami game. "SIXTY TO NOTHING" says the McLean booster, and he believed it, but you know false profits still exist. Now the poor fellow will have to tell the News readers this week that the score was 13 to 20 in favor of Miami. But the McLean team put up a strong and clean fight for it anyhow, and their town should know it.

SMALL RAIN MONDAY

Almost the entire Panhandle was visited Monday evening with a light rain, measuring less than half an inch. However some good was done in laying the dust, and making us believe that more was coming.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for colds, croup and whooping cough for almost half a century and has constantly grown in favor and popularity as its good qualities became better known. It is the standard and main reliance for these diseases in thousands of homes. The facts that it can always be depended upon and is safe and pleasant to take are greatly in its favor when it is wanted for children.

600,000 Vets of War Are Jobless

Survey by American Legion Shows Desperate Plight of Men Who Went to Front.

FIGHTING FOR EXISTENCE

Former Service Men Battling Harder Now and Under Greater Odds Than They Fought in the Trenches in France.

Indianapolis.—Between 600,000 and 700,000 veterans of the World war are out of employment and struggling for existence, according to a survey completed by the American Legion.

Many of these men, the survey discloses, are fighting harder now and under greater odds perhaps than they fought in the trenches.

The survey was conducted through the 11,000 posts of the Legion. Pennsylvania alone reported 150,000 ex-service men out of work. The New York Legion department estimated 100,000 veterans jobless in the state, and Illinois and Massachusetts reported respectively 35,000 and 30,000 ex-service men out of work.

Georgia was the only state that reported improvement in the unemployed situation. "Unemployment not general enough to require aid from Legion," was the report from that state. Iowa reported that the industries in that state were showing signs of life, although a serious condition this winter was anticipated.

Situation Is Desperate.
The report from Pennsylvania described conditions as deplorable and the state of Washington advised ex-service men not to go to that state until conditions improved. Michigan's unemployed war veterans were said to number 30,000, but industrial conditions were reported as "better than two months ago."

Commenting on the situation which has come out of the business depression, the American Legion Weekly says:

"Figures alone, however, do not tell the plight of American unemployed veterans, for the greater part of these jobless ex-soldiers and ex-sailors are not only out of work, but are engaged at this moment in a struggle for existence with their backs to the wall of circumstances. They are for the most part men who have been economically on the defensive ever since they left their country's service. Many are men who found their old jobs gone when they took off their uniforms, and no other jobs to be had. Those who succeeded in discovering some work after being discharged from the army or navy found they were pitted in remorseless competition against men who had not been in the service. Many employers dealt with them by the rule of 'last hired, first fired.'

Hard Winter Ahead.
"If they were lucky enough to have savings from before the war awaiting them when they were discharged, those savings have long since disappeared. They found themselves without funds early in the period of industrial depression which set in while this country was getting back to a peace-time basis. Workers who had been employed steadily at high wages during the war were able to coast into the depression period living on their savings, but for many months unemployed ex-service men have been, perforce, little more than industrial scavengers, compelled to seek odds and ends of work desperately to meet their simplest necessities. The more fortunate have been largely dependent upon relatives and kindly friends. Those lacking these, have been roaming from city to city, restlessly seeking work. Many of them have wives and children, fathers and mothers, dependent upon them for support.

"Now that business depression has become intensified and the ranks of the unemployed swelled by the addition of millions of men who had been holding jobs until a few months or even weeks ago, the lot of the long unemployed veteran is such that compassionate Americans need not look to Russia, to Hungary and the other

Plan Big Fight Against Cancer

American Society for Control of Cancer Announces a "National Cancer Week."

SPECIALISTS ARE INTERESTED

Informative Literature Will Be Carried to Every Corner of the Country—Causes 10 Out of 100 Deaths Among Those Over Forty.

New York.—The American Society for the Control of Cancer, which, since its organization in 1913, has been fighting cancer with facts, sent out from its headquarters, 25 West Forty-fifth street, New York, announces an unusual feature of its already remarkable campaign.

This is a "National Cancer week," which will begin October 30 and end November 5.

The purpose of the effort, the most comprehensive and important in the society's career, is intended to carry facts concerning cancer to as many persons in the United States and Canada as can be reached through the professional and lay press, by lectures and by the spread of informative literature. The work will be carried on by the foremost physicians and surgeons in the country who specialize in the control of this dread disease; by state and city health officers and by the public-spirited citizens, who have given much of their time and stricken nations of Europe for human suffering to touch their heartstrings.

"The plight of unemployed veterans is serious enough today. But winter is just around the corner. Open-air work will soon cease. The harvests which have provided temporary work for many will soon be gathered. Park benches and doorways will soon be untenable at night.

"This is the situation that faces the American Legion and the American people today. Scarcely having finished the campaign to relieve the hardships of the physically disabled veterans of the World war, the American Legion is now realizing that it faces another campaign of equal magnitude to save its comrades who have become economic casualties."

Decrease in Deaths.

Those interested in this educational movement are extremely encouraged by the fact that during the last three years deaths from cancer have, for the first time in two decades, shown a slight decrease. It does not claim that all this decrease is due to its campaign, but it believes that its campaign has had something to do with it, and intends to push its work in the future even more vigorously than in the past.

Some idea of the ravages of cancer may be had from the fact that it causes ten out of every hundred deaths in this country where the victims are more than forty years old; that about 85,000 deaths a year are recorded, and that the mortality among women is considerably greater than among men. Women are exceptionally susceptible to this disease, but it is gratifying to know that if the symptoms are early recognized a great majority of cases may be cured. Because people are better informed, early diagnoses are more common now than in the past, and, moreover, the methods of treatment, which now include radium and the X ray, are becoming more and more efficient and effective.

During "National Cancer week" there will be lectures in many cities by the foremost authorities on cancer, the distribution of literature at these lectures, activities by the departments of health throughout the country and by the medical societies, and the publication of numerous articles in the medical and lay press.

considerable of their money to the movement.

Will Spread Message.
The society's organization is an exceptionally efficient one, and the message of the "Cancer week" will be carried to the remotest corners of the country. It includes regional directors, state chairmen and local committees, all working under the direction of Dr. Charles A. Powers, president. Assisting Doctor Powers are such men as Dr. Robert Abbe, one of the foremost authorities on cancer in America; Dr. James Ewing, pathologist of Cornell university; Dr. G. E. Armstrong of Montreal, noted Canadian surgeon; Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore; Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn.; Dr. Clement Cleveland, for many years head of the Woman's hospital in New York; Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Crocker cancer research laboratory, Columbia university, and head of the board of scientists, and many other prominent specialists.

Since its inception the society has maintained that accurate information concerning cancer is the best means known to lower the mortality of this disease. It was believed, and it has since been proved, that a large number of cases can be cured if taken in hand early, and its efforts have been directed toward urging persons to seek competent advice the instant they recognize any of the symptoms made plain by the society's campaign of education. In this policy the society at first met antagonism from that element which considered cancer a disgrace and which believed the less said about it the better.

Fraudulent Alchemists.
Discussing the work of Roger Bacon, regarded as the greatest philosopher of the Thirteenth century, Prof. William Romaine Newbold of the University of Pennsylvania, who has succeeded in finding a key to this wonderful book, speaks of numerous references to alchemy. In Bacon's time alchemy was considered a science and we have records of many workers, some of them honest in their beliefs, but many of them were simply imposters using the desire for gold to obtain large sums of money from their credulous victims, the New York Sun explains.

Every time a man makes love to his wife he makes a profitable investment.

Clever Dog That Keeps a New York Commuter Dry When He Gets Caught in Rain.

"I'll show you a regular dog," said Gardiner to his friend Johnson, whom he had invited to dinner at his home in Long Island, according to the New York Sun. They had alighted from the train and it was raining. Gardiner gazed up and down the street anxiously.

"What are you looking for?" asked Johnson.

"There!" exclaimed Gardiner, ignoring his friend's question and pointing down the street. "There's a regular dog."

A Belgian police dog came running toward the station with an umbrella in its mouth. The dog stopped in front of Gardiner.

"That's my dog," said Gardiner. "On rainy days my wife gives him an umbrella and he brings it down to the station so I don't have to walk home in the wet."

Fraudulent Alchemists.
Discussing the work of Roger Bacon, regarded as the greatest philosopher of the Thirteenth century, Prof. William Romaine Newbold of the University of Pennsylvania, who has succeeded in finding a key to this wonderful book, speaks of numerous references to alchemy. In Bacon's time alchemy was considered a science and we have records of many workers, some of them honest in their beliefs, but many of them were simply imposters using the desire for gold to obtain large sums of money from their credulous victims, the New York Sun explains.

Every time a man makes love to his wife he makes a profitable investment.

There is no obtuseness like that going on "kidding" a man who does like it.

There is little hope for a man who will lie when the truth would do as well.

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful. It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the common ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

THE FAMILY CAR.
"What is your ambition?"
"To be rich enough to own an automobile of my own."
"But you already own a car?"
"I know that, but you don't know I've grown of having to argue with the wife and the daughter and the son every time I want to go to it."

WASH HER SKIRT, DRESS, SWEATER AND DRAPERIES
Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye her own. Wash, soak, dip, dip, wash, rinse, wring, hang, and you are done. If she has never dyed before, "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is sure because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to spot, fade, crack, or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or sized goods.—Advertisement.

A Real Treat.
Mrs. Chatterton—The dentist is only going to take an impression of my teeth. You won't have to go with me. I don't need your help. Her Husband—But, dearie, I do so want to see you with your mouth full of plaster sitting in silence for ten minutes.

If one would see his own faults he should borrow his neighbor's spectacles.

It takes money to make money; and a great deal of something else.

LEGION MAN IS LIFE SAVER

John L. Piazza, Officer 4944, New York Police Force, Well Deserves His Medals.

Saving lives is almost a specialty with officer 4944 of the New York police force, former private and top sergeant of the Three Hundred and Twelfth Infantry, A. E. F., now a member of the General Lafayette Police post, American Legion, in New York City. Patrolman Piazza, John L., wears the Distinguished Service Cross.

It was in the Argonne in October, 1918, near Grand Pre, Piazza, advancing with his platoon, saw a badly wounded officer lying alone in No Man's Land, abandoned when his lines fell back to reform. On his stomach, Piazza crawled out to the spot, slung the wounded man over his shoulder and standing erect, carried him to safety with the shells whistling and exploding.

Discharged from the army, Patrolman Piazza resumed his beat in the far reaches of the borough of the Bronx. It wasn't long after that when he dashed up into a burning building, rescued an invalid woman and carried her to the street. Shortly after that he stopped a runaway horse and saved a group of women and children from injury. Officer 4944 is twenty-nine years old, married and the father of a son.

WAS 62 WHEN HE ENLISTED

Former Train Dispatcher Did Good Service for Uncle Sam—An Enthusiastic Legion Man.

Sixty-two years young he was, H. E. Lamb, Worthington, Minn., told the recruiting officers during the war. So they enlisted him and sent him to a chilly berth in faraway Siberia. He weathered nine months of it to make it a good bargain. Mr. Lamb was living a life of retirement on a farm near Worthington when America entered the war. He had been a train dispatcher and he thought his services would be valuable. The army thought so, too, and enlisted him. It was in the nature of a celebration of his sixty-second birthday.

Returning from service, Mr. Lamb interested himself in the activities of his younger comrades. He has never missed a state or national convention of the American Legion, and with his wife, who is a member of the Women's Auxiliary, he drove 200 miles to attend the last one at Winona, Minn. There the Legion gathering made him a vice commander of the state department. Now he is planning to drive all the way to the national convention at Kansas City this fall.

WOULD GET JOBS FOR MEN

State President of Oregon Women's Auxiliary Plans to Oust Women Who Do Not Need Work.

A movement to oust from employment all married women who are not forced by necessity to work has been started by Mrs. W. A. Elvers, Portland, Ore., recently re-elected state president of the Oregon department of the Women's Auxiliary, the American Legion.

Mrs. Elvers speaks from first-hand information. As trained nurse and more recently as superintendent of the Emergency hospital in Portland, she has been doing a big man's work for years—but her husband has been an invalid for years.

"Women got started in men's work during the war, when it was necessary and laudable," Mrs. Elvers declared. "They are keeping it up now. Those who have husbands supporting them have no right to keep needy men out of employment. They are willing to work for less, too. They are breaking up our homes, all because they want extra pin money. It must stop, and it's going to in Oregon, at least."

THEY'RE GOOD "LEGION MEN"

Washington State Newspaper Pair are Members of the Ex-Service Men's Organizations.

The time honored tradition of violent feeling supposed to exist between the average hard-boiled city editor and the average soft-boiled reporter suffers a relapse in the strange case of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reavis, members of Rainer-Noble post, the American Legion, and its Women's auxiliary, in Seattle, Wash.

Before the war Reavis was a city editor and Dora Deane, a Pacific coast woman newspaper writer, was one of his cub reporters. When Reavis went to war with the 41st Division cavalry, Miss Dora became city editor. Returning after the armistice, the ex-city editor sought to regain the editorial reins by marrying Miss Deane. Finding that as Mrs. Reavis she was the managing editor while he became a cub, Reavis forsook the game and became Associated Press correspondent in Seattle.

"She was pretty good as a cub reporter," Reavis says. "But as managing editor, she is a wonder." Mrs. Reavis continues as Dora Deane of the Seattle Daily Times.

INDIAN, LEGION POST BOSS

Elias Wesley and Sixteen Washington Buddies Also Control Town of White Swan.

Where his fathers once tried to resist the civilization of the white man, Elias Wesley, fullblood Yakima Indian, commander of an American Legion post, and sixteen of his Yakima "buddies" now control the prosperous town of White Swan, Wash.

More than half of the post's members are fullblood Indians. Wesley, the commander, is the village meat cutter. The remainder of the Indians, all members of the Commercial club, are engaged in business in the town. All are graduates of a government school and are better educated than the average American. Because he was a meat cutter, when Wesley enlisted in the United States navy they made him ship's cook on the U. S. S. Western Chief. In the membership of the post there is a Medal of Honor, a Medaille Militaire, a Croix de Guerre and a Victoria cross.

"GRAND OLD MAN" OF 137TH

Kansas Editor Recently Received Distinguished Service Cross for Valor in Action.

A newspaper editor who left off laubastin' the Germans in his column, and went to hunt them in person is John H. O'Connor of the Winfield (Kan.) Courier, who recently received the Distinguished Service Cross for exceptional valor in action. The "grand old man" of the One Hundred and thirty-seventh infantry regiment during its service in France, Editor O'Connor ably commanded a battalion during the heaviest fighting, and won the highest rank of lieutenant colonel. In September, 1918, in Montrebeau Wood he received a note penciled on the back of an old envelope, telling him he was the highest officer left in the regiment. Fortwith he assumed command of his own unit, added on all other troops in the wood, organized a brigade front, beat off two Boche attacks and directed the advance on Exermont.

Mr. O'Connor attended the first caucus of the American Legion in Paris in 1919 and was one of the newspaper men who drew the resolution giving the Legion its name.

FARM, CURE FOR SHELLSHOCK

Thousands of Victims Have Recovered, According to Data Collected by American Legion.

The symphony of droning mowers, cultivators and threshers is a specific cure for shellshock. Of the thousands of World war veterans who turned to agriculture at the termination of hostilities, virtually all have recovered from the effects of shellshock. This is shown by a recent survey which is being studied by the national organization of the American Legion. The report likewise indicates that shellshock victims who settled in the cities have not yet regained their health.

The experiment of sending shellshock cases to the farms was tried with success in Canada, where more than 25,000 soldiers have taken farms under the soldiers' re-establishment act. The government has loaned more than $110,000,000 to these men, and their first year's crop was valued at approximately $14,000,000. Today the average soldier-farmer, the survey concludes, is enjoying ruddy health and sound finances.

"THEY SAID I HAD T. B. AND WOULD NOT LIVE THREE MONTHS"

Mr. Harold W. Schmidt, Box 68, Breese, Clinton Co., Ill., testifies that he has reason to praise Dr. Hartman's Remedy for Catarrhal conditions.

"I used Pe-ru-na eight months for Chronic Bronchial Catarrh. I do not get tired, feel like a giant, am six pounds over normal weight and able to work every day. In March, 1918, I contracted a severe cold with spitting and took to my bed. They said I had T. B. and would not live three months. After taking a couple bottles of Pe-ru-na and a box of Man-tilin Tablets, I could walk around and in seven months went back to work. My trouble was due to Chronic Catarrh of the nose and throat, which I had ten years, extending down into the bronchial tubes. "Pe-ru-na was my life saver."

Hallowe'en Club Party

Hallowe'en season is here and the "spooks" and Mystery that shadowed the house and pervaded every where last Friday afternoon when the Study Club met at the residence of Mrs. Kelley, made this season keenly felt.

Mrs. L. B. Broadus assisted Mrs. Kelley as hostess to the Club the house was decorated from one end to the other with black cats and all kinds of ghostly things. Mrs. Ewing was the leader for the afternoon and gave a very interesting talk on the subject for the afternoon.

Then a "Pot" was passed containing small paper pumpkins and each drew from this black and yellow basin, their fortune some drew wonderful promises and others less fortunate drew smaller promise, but all alike enjoyed it.

Then all were blindfolded and sat still in a darkened room and waited in silence for a word from the hostess the lights were turned on the blind folded folds removed and low right there in the center of the room where they had sat only a few minutes before, was a large table covered with a wonderful dinner, a large brown roast turkey made a center peice and was surrounded by every thing that goes with a turkey dinner.

Place cards of small paper pumpkins enabled each one to find their place at the table.

Eleven members were present and club guests as follows: Mrs. Marrs of Ft. Worth, Mrs. Ray Morrison of Canadian; Mrs. Jno. Webster, Mrs. Clarence Locke, Mrs. Dan Kiviehn, and Mrs. L. B. Broadus.

The afternoon was one of great pleasure and the Club thinks the next year that it will just meet every time with Mrs. Kelley and hopes that Mrs. Broadus will always assist her.

Next meeting will be November 4, with Mrs. Newt Locke. The textbooks are here and every one on the program can get the material at any time.

The hour is 2:30. The President urges that we be prompt at all meeting. More attention should also be given to getting up the answer to Roll Call. Press Reporter.

AT AMARILLO ARMISTICE DAY

Amarillo, Oct. 11.—Vari-colored lights, bunting and banners will supplement the glories of the United States flag in the decorative scheme carried out throughout Amarillo in honor of the World War veterans in their first annual reunion in this city, on the occasion of the third anniversary of the placing of the signatures of the various powers to the Armistice agreement, Friday Nov. 11.

The boys who immortalized themselves and added lustre to American history are to be honored to the fullest degree. They are to have their own way, so to speak, with all civilian citizens doing their utmost to make them know that they are prominently placed in the hearts of all loyal Americans.

There will be a regular mess dinner, a supper of the same variety, with bands, with parades, with short inspirational speeches, with theatrical programs, with everything that can make for the enjoyment of the boys who did not hesitate to be offered as sacrifice on the world's greatest war altar.

One and one-third fare will be given on all railroads, and a special train is to be operated out of Slaton for the accommodation of the men along that line of the Santa Fe and the various branch line connections. It is anticipated that the parade being arranged for the occasion will be by far the greatest ever seen in Amarillo.

All American Legion posts are joining Hanson Post in Amarillo in the arrangements for the entertainment and general celebration, in which at least two thousand World War veterans will participate, according to the estimate of those in charge.

How Better Than Pills?

The question has been asked—In what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is, they are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then, they not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion.
