WTHA holds annual meeting in Odessa

Hanaba Munn Welch/For The Post Dispatch

Talking Friday about the Quanah Parker Trail at the WTHA annual meeting in Odessa are Linda Puckett, director of the Garza County Museum in Post, Holle Humphries of Lubbock, Quanah Parker Trail facilitator, and Pat Cruse, member of the Garza Museum staff. The three conferred after the women's luncheon at the event. Garza County trail arrows stand near the museum in Post and on a bluff at the edge of town. Wayside arrows mark many other locations significant to the Comanches in and near towns across the region, including Wellington, Turkey, Memphis, Floydada and Benjamin. Childress will soon install a trail arrow.

Texas State Historian Bill O'Neal made history over the weekend at the annual meeting of the West Texas Historical Association (WTHA) in Odessa and Midland. O'Neal coined the term "Historianus herbidus" for grassroots historians everywhere -- not claiming to have discovered a new species but giving an official designation to non-professional historians deserving greater recognition.

No Latin scholar himself, O'Neal proposed the genus-species term in jest, but he's quite serious about the importance of the efforts of grassroots historians in Texas. In his keynote address at Friday night's banquet at the Petroleum Museum in Midland, O'Neal showed pictures and told stories of citizen historians across Texas who research and preserve local history and historic sites. His examples stretched from the old XIT headquarters house in the Texas Panhandle to historic places in East Texas and points between, including Quanah and Medicine Mound.

As for O'Neal's foray into Latin, it's not his first time to invent a term. He's an expert in a field he calls "gunfighterology." His

Cattle raisers take exception to USDA beef imports rules

FT. WORTH – The Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association (TSCRA) submitted comments today in opposition to a recent proposal by the United States Department of Agriculture-Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS) that could put the U.S. cattle herd at a greater risk of foot-and-mouth disease (FMD).

USDA-APHIS has proposed a rule that would allow for the importation of fresh, maturated, deboned beef from a region in Brazil into the United States.

According to TSCRA President Pete Bonds, Brazil has a long history with FMD and lacks strict control measures to properly mitigate the risk of FMD into the United States should certain types of fresh beef be imported.

"Protecting the U.S. cattle industry from a catastrophic foreign animal disease like FMD is a major priority for TSCRA," said Pete Bonds, rancher and TSCRA president. "And although we certainly support free trade with foreign countries that have a proven history of controlling animal diseases, we do not believe Brazil has met, and can consistently guarantee, the standards necessary to keep FMD out of the United States."

Bonds says that many beef producers in Texas and the Southwest remember all too clearly the devastating effects of FMD the last time it was in the United States in 1929.

"Given the extreme level of uncertainty surrounding Brazil's ability to control FMD, and the fact that our national cattle herd is at its lowest since the 1950s, we simply cannot afford to take this large of a risk," Bonds continued.

In addition to the risk analysis USDA-APHIS conducted for the Brazil rule, they also requested public comment on an evaluation that would serve as a decision making tool to determine whether and under what conditions to allow imports of fresh meat and live animals from the Patagonia region of Argentina to the United States.

A new housing development at Lake Alan Henry got approval from the Garza County Commissioners Court at the regular meeting Monday morning. A preliminary subdivision plat for the development on the south side of the lake was approved following modifications for fire truck "turn-arounds". LaWayne Feagin presented in proposed plat, explaining that 11 lots have already been sold, with 10 of those lots located inside Garza County boundaries. Feagin said that lot sales are estimated at approximately 100 and Victims Compensation Fund. When implemented, the computerized system will provide access by an 800 number for victims (or anyone else) to find out the status of individuals incarcerated across the nation. There are approximately 120 Texas counties currently participating.

Rain showers that fell on parts of Garza County last Friday and Saturday provided little more than a temporary respite for the parched soil suffering from the extended dry spell that grips the area. Reports of over an inch to just a trace were recorded at various points across the country. "It looked good, sounded good and smelled good, but as for any long lasting benefits, it just wasn't enough," Garza County Extension agent John Senter. If anyone harbored any doubts to Senter's thinking. The dust storm that covered the area Monday, April 25, put these to rest.

Post Independent School of trustees wrestled with proposals for building improvements during the regular meeting last Tuesday night, finally setting on repairing the stadium press box, extending stadium and adding visitors side concession stand and restroom facilities. Board members Royce Hart, Charles McCook and Don Payne pressed for a bond election to include approved dressing rooms, gymnasium, vocational education building and air conditioning of the schools. Although the discussion continued for two hours, school board members could not agree on a full-scale plan and the proposed bond election issue was not formally introduced.

The newest "thing" R.G. "Wilke" Wilkerson's backyard at 109 East 15th St., is a sturdily-built kiosk that not only is a novelty in these parts, but is causing most everyone who sees it to want to build one like it. In fact a friend of Wilke's from Kokomo, Ind., who saw the kiosk on a recent visit here took pictures of the structure and has gone back home to build one like it. Wilke says he knows of another one that is going up in a suburb of Atlanta, Ga., modeled on the same lines as the one here. Sunday afternoon Wilke took a Dispatch reporter past the home of Dwayne Capps at 107 East 12th st, to show him a kiosk that the Capps are building are his backyard. The dictionary describes a kiosk as "an open summer house or pavilion often having a roof supported by pillars and usually built in gardens or parks".

The new White River Lake water supply will become available within 30 days after the water level of the lake rises another seven to ten feet. That was the announcement of Al O'Brien, manager of the lake project , at the April meeting of the White River district directors he'd last Thursday night in his office in the filtration plant building at the dam site. He reported the water level at the dam is now 18 feet, and is just three feet over the intake for the filtration plant.

The Paperboy

We got rain! Really!

The storm hit just as we were beginning to think it would stay north of town. Instead, we got to witness a couple of strong thunderstorms which resulted in 2.5 inches of rain at the house and hail. A lot of hail.

You know what? It's hard to argue against the high winds and hail when it brings that much rain that fast.

CHRIS BLACKBURN

It's been such a long time since we got to witness such a display. Easter Sunday 2014 will be remembered for answered prayers around here and in other places in the area.

For those of you that missed the rains, let's hope the stormy night is a harbinger of things to come. How wonderful it would be to write about even more rain next week.

I had forgotten about the feeling you get after such heavy rains. I don't know what's stranger. Watching the storms, or forgetting the feeling. Either way, the collective mood around here changed in about three hours Sunday. I really wish I would have been at the coffee shop or down at the Co-op to hear the farmers and ranchers Monday morning...

One other observation regarding the weather: Don't trust weather people or forecasts.

Despite all of the technology and computer models, the weather is very hard to nail down. In fact, I'd say it's impossible. We went from a slight chance of showers to 2.5 inches of rain in 24-hours.

The weather folk have gotten much better through the years of letting us know what is happening in real time, but as far as forecasting from days out, they have a poor batting average.

It's the year 2014 and it amazes me that of all the wrecks that occur, nearly all the fatalities are because the person was not wearing a seatbelt.

Ultimately, that one choice ... that one habit ... will probably be the difference in life or death if you're in a bad wreck.

If you're driving, make your passengers buckle up. Why should you, as the driver, have to live with the guilt of a loss of life?

Tell your passengers that the car doesn't move until everyone is in their seatbelt. If all drivers would do this, there would be a lot fewer fatalities on our roads.

We got our boys a puppy this last weekend. What was I thinking?

This pup - a cross between a Golden Labrador Retriever and a Newfoundland - looks like a promising dog. Lord knows it's going to be pretty big. It might even be very big.

However, at a month old, she's a little crazy. Less than a week in the house and she's already the boss.

Hopefully, before her next round of shots, we settle on a name. Right now we're looking at Betty Davis, Katniss Everdeen, Mrs. Nesbitt and a couple of the usual suspects.

There is something about a dog that seems to complete a household. Even if that dog injects chaos into the situation.

Cream or creamer? Ask any cat

If you want to know if something is OK to eat, it's good to have a test cat. Or a test dog. If your pet eats it and doesn't keel over, chances are the food hasn't been poisoned.

It's a handy trick I learned as a child, circa 1952, when my mother was reading the funny papers to me. In one of the not-so-funny strips, a blue-haired queen of some ancient country wouldn't eat what she was being served until it had been offered first to the palace dogs. I filed away the strategy for future use.

About 40 years later, I decided to see if my cat Isabella would lap up non-dairy creamer. I served it in a saucer to make it look like real milk. She sniffed it and walked away, tail vertical in disdain.

Fake creamer may not be harmful to humans or cats, but I'm taking my cues from Isabella anyway, spurning all synthetic choices and insisting on real half-and-half for my coffee.

In fact, if ever I get a tattoo, it's going to say "strong coffee, no sugar, half-and-half." Then, when senility sets in, the staff of the care facility will know exactly how I like my coffee even if I don't.

I'm not sure where I want that tattoo. But in the nursing home, placement doesn't matter. The staff sees all your tattoos when they give you a bath.

Just in case some don't read English and because I like illustrations, a bag of sugar with an "X" through it will enhance the message.

Come to think of it, I'll need a secondary tattoo to let them know I do want sugar on my oatmeal - brown sugar plus fruit and milk. It gets complicated.

It's all reason enough not to get frivolous tattoos. You could end up without enough skin space for the key infographics and important texts you want to get across to the people who someday will matter most to you - the ones in charge of your coffee and your oatmeal.

Back to half-and-half. Should it be hyphenated? Tattoo artists probably think so. They no doubt get paid per every jot and tittle.

But the more important issue is the exact term anyway. Half what? To me it means half whole milk and half cream, more or less - like heavy cream but a little lighter, nothing against heavy cream.

So guess what I just bought by mistake.

GUESS PAUSE.

A little carton of non-fat half and half. When it comes to food, beware all oxymorons.

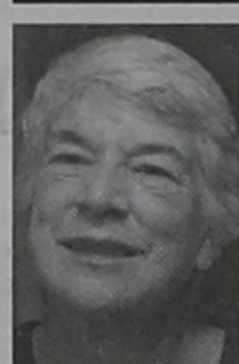

Meanwhile, guess what they substituted for fat.

GUESS PAUSE.

Corn syrup! Does that make sense? They've added insult to injury. It's as if they assume that someone who likes the taste of cream would accept a not-so-healthy sweet substitute in its place. It's the sort of marketing strategy and trickery that leaves me speechless. I feel like saying just one thing:

READ MY TATTOO!

Maybe I'll get it sooner rather than later.

Post playoff bound

By Kent Mahoney
Post Dispatch

CHILDRESS - The Lopes had an unfortunate outing Tuesday, closing out district play with a 9-1 loss here.

They are still going to bi-district play and still have the third place district standing.

However, the loss is the period to a long and sometimes disappointing season.

Post drew first blood with their lone run in the second inning. Braydon Pyles walked to lead off the second inning, took second on a ground out and scored on an error by Childress.

Post pitcher, Aron Lopez held Childress at bay for three innings before the floodgates opened.

Childress pushed across four runs on four hits, none of which were charged to Lopez.

Post went through five pitchers on the night, but the damage in the fourth was credited to Pake Jones' attempted save opportunity.

Childress pitching struck out 10 Post batters.

Post finished the season with a 14-9 record.

Play-off picture

This half of the bi-district picture is pretty much settled with Idalou, Childress, Post and Slaton moving forward.

However, the other half of the equation is still up in the air.

Denver City, Brownfield and Lamesa are all at the top of the heap. Lamesa has finished their season at 6-2 in district play. Denver City and Brownfield are both 5-2, but have already played each other and split their contests.

Brownfield will play Coahoma on Friday, but Denver City will have to wait until late Saturday to play Colorado City, because of the 3A Regional track meet in Odessa.

If there is a three-way tie, then a coin toss will determine the odd man out and a double header will be played on Monday, according to Denver City school sources.

A two-way tie would also see a play off game happen Monday.

Post has non-district splits with both Brownfield and Lamesa and has not played Denver City.

Post 17, Slaton 16 (9 innings)

No season is complete without a donnybrook or two.

Such was the case with the last meeting between Post and rival Slaton last week.

The Lopes pounded out 14 hits with 14 runs batted in and 15 free passes.

They busted loose for 10 of their runs in the fifth inning, nearly batting around the line up twice.

Christian Saucedo went 3-for-5 on the day with four RBI's and a triple. He also walked and scored twice. Post had 40 at-bats on the day.

Lopez also went 3-for-4 on the day with two runs scored. Lopez picked up the win in relief of starter Pake Jones and Auggie Menchaca, who pitched middle relief. Collectively, Post pitchers struck out 13 Slaton batters.

Slaton held an early lead of 6-3 after four innings of play and before Post opened up their barrage in the fifth inning.

Not to be outdone, Slaton got eight of those runs back in the seventh to force extra innings.

Legends

Our friends from Lynn

I think today is a good day to just lighten-up a little bit. Last night I was reading some Lynn County History; you know sometimes I think we forget that they are just down the road a piece, our neighbors. I came across a few funny little stories.

Mrs. Jack (Billie Brandon) Hoskins once wrote about early days on the Singleton Ranch where her father, William T. (Billy) Brandon, worked for many years. They later lived in the O'Donnell-Newmore area after the ranch broke up.

When Willie Singleton and a cook built a shack there in 1892, the never saw a white person for nine months. Their water came from mud hole where the cattle drank. They ate sour-dough bread and meat of wild game, but they were not bothered by flies, almost nonexistent then, but have buffalo gnats.

After Sam Singleton established his ranch six years later the cowboys were not above having a little fun. Once the lonesome cowpokes went to Big Spring and brought back some whiskey.

A "tenderfoot" on the ranch found it, and drank some. Smelling it on his breath, the cowboys began searching for the "dog poison." Finding the whiskey bottle, they told the unsuspecting lad they had put poison in the bottle. The poor feller was beside himself with anguish and begged the men to save his life.

The only remedy, they told him, was cow's milk, where upon he drank a half gallon before he found out the truth.

Frank Hill wrote the following.

"Back in the 1920's and 1930's, and long before Tahoka and Lynn County had its share of characters—all likeable and honorable citizens—who helped make life enjoyable before the days of Radio and television. We recall a lot of pranks, humorous stories and happenings that kept the time from being dull."

Jake Leedy spent a lot of time hatching up practical jokes. One of them backfired. He told this story on himself.

One day in his café, some fellows were taking about local strongmen.

Someone remarked, "There's no one in town as strong as Big-un. Why he could pick up a man like Jake and carry him like a baby across the street." Now, Big-un was a tall, 250 pound giant.

About that time, Big-un walked in the door. A bright idea flashed in Jake's mind, and he whispered his plan to one of the men, Paul Miller.

All of a sudden, Jake lumbered around the center of the room, fell on the floor, and began kicking and flaying his arms.

"Jake's having another one of those spells," Paul Miller declared. "He'll die if we don't get him to Doc Turrentine's office in a hurry. Big-un can you carry him?"

Sure enough, Big-un picked Jake up like he was a baby and started for the doctor's office. Jake had slipped a piece of soap in his mouth, which he wallered around in his mouth until he had a mouth full of lather. When they got out on the sidewalk, Jake threw his head back. Big-un saw the lather all over Jake's face and dropped his cargo right there on the concrete.

Jake's tail bone was broken in the fall. He made a little trip to the doctor's office after all.

A serious story will happen next, see you then.

"Encyclopedia of Western Gunfighters," first published in 1991 by the University of Oklahoma Press, remains popular, and for years he has balanced teaching history at Panola College in Carthage with giving talks on gunfighters and sponsoring a yearly gunfighter conference. Already a traveling lecturer, the state historian's post has given him official reason to go more places than ever.

"Mostly I am an ambassador of Texas history," he said. "Most people do not even know there is a state historian." On the road, he wears his state historian's cap, given him by his daughter, and custom-designed state historian shirts, gifts from his wife. He hands out cards he's had printed himself for his non-salaried position. The travels have deepened his sense of the importance of the work of hometown people who are guardians of their own history, many also unpaid (like his wife Karon, who maintains his blog, lonestarthistorian2.blogspot.com).

Not that O'Neal's job doesn't have its perks. His title gets him places he might not otherwise see—especially in old movie theaters. He mentioned theaters in Mason, Minneola, Daingerfield, Graham and Clifton as examples of old cinemas that either have been restored or have been in continuous operation.

"The owners are proud of their vintage equipment," he said. "They'll show me around if I flash that state historian card. A lot of times, the balconies will be closed in these old theaters and yet they always take me up to them."

O'Neal told about his friendship with fellow historian and Medicine Mound native Bill Neal, whose middle initial is "O," enhancing chances for the cases of mistaken identity they both enjoy.

"Apostrophe, this is period" is what Bill Neal says when he calls his fellow-author, O'Neal said.

He lauded the efforts of Neal and other Mounders, as they are called, to preserve downtown Medicine Mound, where historic markers outnumber the remaining buildings. O'Neal showed pictures of the old rock store, now a museum, and characterized Jeanine Stermer, museum curator, as a "dynamic community-minded woman."

He also complimented Scarlett Daugherty for her work as museum curator in nearby Quanah.

"They've got a wonderful old depot that's been turned into a museum," he said, showing a picture of the Quanah, Acme & Pacific building and the jail behind it. "It's a grand old jail they've got too."

O'Neal expressed his appreciation for small museums and people who keep them intact, even when access must be limited to a few hours a week.

"They're run by people who love their hometowns," he said. "Historians are herbivores. They're all around us."

In fact, the yearly WTHA confab drew historians of all stripes, from scholars with posts in academia to lay researchers who work in the discipline simply for the love of what they do. All shared on common ground.

Holle Humphries of Lubbock, member of the steering committee of the Quanah Parker Trail (www.quanahparkertrail.com), gave a presentation titled "Citizen Historians Create a Trail To Restore to Public Memory the 19th Century Story of the Comanches on the Texas High Plains."

Humphries described how grassroots historians with various skills have managed to work together in the Texas Plains Trail Region (TPTR), a 52-county state heritage tourism jurisdiction, to create a project significant enough to end up on the cover of "Medallion," magazine of the state historical commission.

The Quanah Parker Trail draws special attention to the historic Comanche presence across the region with 22-foot-long steel arrows accented with Comanche colors, now standing tall at significant spots in most TPTR counties, including Collingsworth, Floyd, Garza, Hall and Knox. Childress and Wayside are slated for arrow installations, events sometimes enhanced with dedication ceremonies attended by descendants of Comanche Chief Quanah Parker, most of whom travel from Oklahoma.

"The Quanah Parker family helps to verify family history," Humphries said. "They add a lot to ceremonies when we put arrows into the ground."

Also attending and participating at the event was Barbara Brannon, TPTR director. Brannon displayed information about the Quanah Parker Trail at a display booth and herself presented a paper on the Butterfield Trail, the famous short-lived stage route that cut across Texas in the mid-19th century.

"Death Rides the Range of the Matadors" was the topic of Motley County rancher Marisue Potts, a former WTHA president. Potts shared her research on the lives of people with historical connections to her family ranch, once part of the historic Matador Ranch.

"My family bought out one line camp out of 25," she said. "The ranch has been in our family 60 years. My goal is to record the history in my backyard."

Death in gunfights happened regularly in the earliest years of the ranch. She detailed different incidents.

"Lawlessness prevailed," Potts said. "The code of chivalry required things be settled regarding real or perceived grievances."

The WTHA program is viewable via the WTHA website: www.wtha.org

The WTHA is headquartered at Texas Tech University. Tai Kreidler, executive director, is deputy director of Tech's Southwest Collection and is a member of the Tech faculty.

Papers are selected from the WTHA membership for presentation at the annual meeting, and historical articles from members are also published in a yearbook. Most members are from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico; anyone can belong. Several states were represented at the Odessa meeting.

TSCRA is opposed to both USDA-APHIS risk analyses for Brazil and Argentina based upon third party scientific reviews that acknowledged issues with both risk assessments.

Bonds said that Brazil and Argentina's trend of compliance problems and deficiencies with routine USDA and European Commission food safety audits also present concern. Additionally, APHIS has conducted a number of site visits to verify animal health and disease information; however, the reviews appear to lack transparency since the full results of these site visits have not yet been made public.

"The fact is that neither of these regions can prove they've successfully and continually eradicated FMD," said Bonds. "That's a huge red flag for U.S. cattle producers."

Kent's Korner

Putting on the feedbag is one of my favorite things to do, as evident by my stature. But I digress. I would be remiss if I didn't point out the people who are responsible for this.

I have a pretty active schedule and stopping for lunch, or any meal for that fact, is a real trick.

Let me start with the civic groups.

Post Rotary and Post Lions clubs are great organizations. And they serve good food.

Now, I don't want to shed undue attention on these people, but I know the Miss Mary, who cooks for Rotary and the culinary students at PHS, who cook for Lions have done a fantastic job every time.

KENT MAHONEY

Trail Blazers is another one of my favorite haunts, especially on Fridays. The crew in the kitchen here are top notch as well. (I'm getting an idea here, but I'm holding on to it for now.)

The churches are not to be left out here either. Being the Lenten season, I did three or four Friday night fish fries with the Catholic Church fundraiser. Too many cooks to mention each by name, but you know who you are.

I visited the people over at Family Harvest Church on Palm Sunday and they had a Sunday lunch of fajitas with all the trimmings. It was muy bueno. I wonder if they knew I was coming for a visit?

The Animal Rescue folks put on a nice barbeque dinner recently and I've got to say, it was finger-lickin' good.

Finally, we have had a good run (no pun intended) of track and field meets here in April, too. The folks at PISD made sure the coaches, volunteers and the media (me) were fed in between sessions. My hats off to the food wranglers for those affairs, too.

So here is my idea. What do you say we have a "Best Cooks in Post" contest down at the civic center?

These cooks who have been dishing it out for our local churches and civic organizations could put on a show for the entire town. Keep that in mind.

Circulation

I said I wasn't going to make any sweeping changes and I'm going to hold the line on that statement. But I am going to move one of the circulation racks from McDonalds down to Allsup's on North Broadway.

I look at it this way. The McDonalds location is only generating four or five papers at best and on the average about three sales each week.

Allsup's, because of their internal rules, will not allow counter sales. I know from doing some research, we used to sell the paper there.

So, for the month of May, I'm going to move that rack down the street a bit and see what I can scare up.

To my McDonalds customers, I have plenty of papers at my office rack just across the street and there are 150 papers across the street at United.

Also on this subject, Southland readers, you can pick up The Post Dispatch at the SISD high school office. I've been leaving about 15 of them each week. I'll eventually put a rack out there too. I've just got to find one and paint it yellow.
