W. T. Hall Passes Away

After months of patient fighting with disease, W. T. Hall passed away at the home of his son H. H. Hall of Hedley, early last Friday morning, Aug 26. Their many friends extend deep sympathy.

Mr. Hall was born in Athens, Ga. Nov 12 1868. In early manhood he married Miss Jane Bowens. To this union were born seven children. His wife and two children passed away several years ago. They awaited his coming home where there are no more separations. He was converted at the age of 14 and was an active member of the Baptist church until ill health kept him away. His greatest pleasure was studying the Word of God, discussing it with his friends and hearing it preached. He is happy today experiencing the joys of communion with the Lord he loved.

Funeral services were held at his old home, Slidell, Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. L. J. Crawford of Newlin, assisted by the pastor at Slidell. Songs of his own choice were sung. He leaves five children, Grady Hall of Denton, Toomy Hall of Slidell, Mrs. H. H. Pruitt of Sanger, Wafford Hall of Era and Harrison Hall of Hedley, 29 grandchildren and 8 great grandchildren, and a host of friends who mourn his loss. The beautiful and impressive Masonic ceremony at the open grave, the flowers, all point you, his dear ones, to the home above, where families broken here will be an unbroken circle. Heaven is nearer and dearer because your loved one is there. Those accompanying the family from Hedley were C. B. Johnson, Roscoe Land, W. W. Wiggins, W. G. Payne, Chas. Rains and Leon Reeves, pall bearers, also Mr. and Mrs. Willard Knox of Lella Lake.

May the comforting presence of faith in God and hope of future life be with you.

A Friend

Revival

The revival at the Church of Christ is progressing nicely under the leadership of Tillitt S. Teddlie. Good crowds are attending, and much good is being done. You have a cordial invitation to attend.

Boy Scout News

All Scouts and those who wish to join are urged to meet in the basement of the Methodist Church Monday night Sept 5.

This is the beginning of the work under the new charter. All new members will be inducted and badges or cards issued to those who have passed their tests and paid their dues. Meeting to be from 8 to 9 p. m.

We are soon to have a field representative in this territory and expect a great program for this year.

O. L. Johnson, Scoutmaster

J. S. Gilliam is now employed with the Everett Food Store, and invites all his friends to call on him there.

Miss Emma Lowell Plunk has returned from Canyon, where she attended summer school.

Mrs. Frank Simmons and J. R. Adamson Jr. of Turkey are visiting relatives here this week.

School Opens Monday

A large group of patrons from the several districts gathered in the high school auditorium Monday morning for the opening exercises of the 1928-29 session. The administration was especially pleased because of the large number of parents present and the spirit of cooperation exhibited by them. Such expressions of confidence and desire to help are very encouraging to the teachers.

After the blessing of The Almighty had been invoked by Rev. Wells the following speakers were heard each expressing a word of encouragement: G. W. Kavanaugh, County Superintendent, Charles Kates, Mrs. J. B. Pickett, Bill Clay, Mr. DeBord and Mrs. G. L. Johnson. The Moss family were heard giving a very enjoyable song.

After the close of the assembly, registration was begun. Approximately 160 pupils were enrolled in grade school and 130 were enrolled in high school.

Our hopes are high for a good and profitable year. Your continued encouragement is solicited by all the friends of education.

Oil News

Drilling is expected to be resumed Saturday on the Robinson Jones Kutean No. 1 well south of town. Operations have been shut down for some time to change from rotary to standard rig.

Quilting cotton and cotton sack duck at Hooker's.

J. W. Adamson Elected

In the second primary election Saturday, J. W. Adamson was elected tax assessor-collector of Donley county.

Revival

The revival at the First Baptist Church will close Sunday night. Much interest has been shown in the services, and Bro. Weldon and Berl King have done fine work with their gospel messages and hymns. Be sure to attend the remaining services of the meeting.

Gleaners Class

The Gleaners Sunday School class of the Methodist Church was entertained in the home of Mrs. Ed Todd Friday Aug 26. A very pleasant time was spent and delicious refreshments were served to five members, two visitors and the hostess. We wish all our members would take advantage of these fellowship meetings.

Mrs. R. H. Jones and daughters, Mrs. L. H. McHan of Dallas and Miss Clara Jones of Fort Worth, have returned from a pleasant vacation trip to California. While there they visited Mrs. P. C. Johnson, and her many friends here will be glad to know that she is getting along nicely.

Some new numbers in ladies here at Hooker's.

S. M. Payne and family of Clarendon visited his brother, W. G. Payne, Wednesday.

A Monument to Labor—and Capital

Today our country is the envy of the world. In a large measure this is due to the ability of labor to work shoulder to shoulder with those who furnish the tools.

Next Monday, Labor Day, we salute the man who works for his contribution and cooperation in making our country great. As it continues, so will our prosperity grow.

Too Lure
March Comeback
Bing's Song

by Virginia Vale

MAYBE you, the public, hadn't realized it, but you have been staying away from the movies in such stupendous numbers that the motion picture industry is about to spend 100,000 to lure you back into theaters again.

Producers, distributors and theater men will put up the money. And you will get $250,000 of it, my friends. There will be a contest. At present, although the rules have not yet been decided on, it seems likely that this contest will be in the form of a questionnaire based on pictures released between now and October 31.

Booklets containing rules will be issued only at theater box-offices. Each contestant will have to answer 30 questions about 30 different pictures in order to qualify.

Half of that $1,000,000 will be spent on advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Fredric March is going to try, try again—and if he fails this time, no doubt he'll keep on trying—to make a come-back on the stage. Last year he and his wife, Florence Eldridge, backed a play that was produced in New York, you'll recall, and it failed—not because of their performances, but just because it wasn't an awfully good play.

If they can find a play that they like, they'll do it again, come autumn. In the meantime, he's storing up more of what it takes to produce plays by working in Hal Roach's "There Goes My Heart," and in another picture when that one is finished.

It looks as if Myron Selznick had started something that may result in our having better pictures. He has formed a partnership with various prominent actors, writers and directors—as the best theatrical agent in Hollywood he knew all of them—to make pictures, with a share of the pictures' profits taking the place of salary. Ernst Lubitsch Productions, Inc., is the first of these producing units.

Under this arrangement, a picture will have to be good—or else!

The Stroud twins traveled a long and winding road, so far as their career was concerned, before they reached those Sunday evening broadcasts where they share honors with Charlie McCarthy. They began as acrobats with a circus; ran away from home to do it. Then they went into vaudeville, and switched to dancing. They toured this country, then Australia, New Zealand and the South Seas before returning to Broadway, and switched their act again, this time to the sort of thing you hear them doing on the air.

Here's something new under the sun. Practically all of the big publishers of popular music want a certain song, and can't have it. The song is "Hail KMH," the theme-song introduction to those dialogues between Bing Crosby and Ken Carpenter.

It was written especially for the broadcasts, and that's that, even if it has become such a hit that the song publishers are itching to get it into general circulation.

Bing Crosby

ODDS AND ENDS—Their friends are still hoping that Joan Crawford and Vincent Price may patch up their marriage; at present, though not likely, it seems possible. . . . At least, Joan says she doesn't plan a divorce, ever. . . . Ben Hur and Kay Kyser have been invited to lecture before the New York University Radio Forum. . . . Walt Disney has bought 55 acres of land near Hollywood and will build a $1,000,000 studio there—thanks to Mickey Mouse, Snow White and others. . . . Al Johnson and Edward G. Robinson will be back on the air September 29—meanwhile Al is indulging his passion for seeing fast horses run fast. . . . Eddie Cantor's next picture will be "Mr. Average Man."

PRETTY PACKAGE!

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

The little green package with the cellophane top, and the brightly colored label on a can of soup are daily becoming more important to the country's 31,800,000 farm population.

Initiated by a few foresighted food producers, the use of modern packaging methods to help move food crops has become one of the chief hopes for boosting farm income.

With more than $32,000,000 in farm lands at stake, the more alert farmers throughout the country are watching with keen interest the rate at which new packaging ideas are helping to move farm products off the grocer's shelves, making room for more. These more astute growers are particularly interested in the jump in sales, higher prices and increased acreage of crops which have followed the development of novel packaging methods.

Progressive farmers, many of whom have taken advantage of cooperative movements to bolster the marketability of the crops, are keeping a finger on the pulse of all products moving under a packaging stimulant. They have seen celery acreages jump 12 1/2 per cent in four years, and have seen celery farm values skyrocket from $14,896,000 to $16,846,000 in a single year.

Celery Makes a Noise.

During the past few years groups of the 446,400 growers in the three main celery-producing states have put their heads together on packaging problems. The most recent program was that of the Muskegon Co-operative Celery Growers association, in Michigan. They decided on a trim, decorated can in an easy-to-carry cardboard container, which appeared on the market several months ago.

As an example of what can be accomplished by modernized merchandising methods, agricultural experts point to the growth of 150 per cent in the shipments of Florida limes during three years in which the fruit was available to the public in small, attractive packages.

Tomatoes in Full Dress.

Innumerable devices for getting tomatoes before the public in a dozen different forms have been brought forth recently, and during the past 11 years there has been an increase of tomato production by more than 500,000,000 pounds a year.

One dramatic example of how a neat package can act as a hypodermic on sluggish sales was demonstrated recently in Birmingham, Alabama, under the watchful scrutiny of the 12 main tomato growing states' 2,300,000 farmers. Following an ideal growing season of plentiful rain, Birmingham found its markets overflowing with tomatoes, a highly perishable product. The situation required quick action and growers turned for a solution to an agency which had been employed by farmers elsewhere when faced with a surplus.

Reports indicated that a similar situation had faced California peach growers and showed how the producers there had taken the dilemma by the horns and turned what might have been one of their most ruinous years into a profitable one.

In January, 1936, warehouses were bulging with a carry-over of 6,469,000 cases of peaches—a figure 72 per cent greater than that of the previous year. Canners were offering farmers only $14 to $15 a ton for the oncoming crop, which was less than the cost of production.

Grocers to the Rescue.

The situation required quick disposal of the carry-over in order that the prices of the new crop could be stabilized and farm incomes saved. They turned to the retail stores, to take advantage, if possible, of their mass buying and mass distribution systems.

A stabilization committee was set up and it immediately conferred with the National Association of Food Chains—a group representing 37,000 grocery stores—with a plan for staging a nation-wide canned peach sale. The association agreed and swung into action the vast distribution facilities of the chains. As a result of this unprecedented marketing campaign, the canned peach carry-over was reduced by June of that year from 6,469,000 to 1,343,000 cases—lower than the previous year's stock for the same date—and the growers received $30 a ton—double the original offer from the canners for the new crop.

Dates Go to Market.

The Alabama tomato growers also found the solution of their difficulties in the modern methods of distribution. One firm, the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea company, met the Alabama situation by marketing the surplus product in small, cellophane-topped cartons, each containing four tomatoes. Sales of tomatoes, in the new attire, jumped in the stores where they were featured.

Dates Go to Market.

Dates are almost solely a California product, and yet the success story of one date grower holds much wider attention than just among that state's 150,000 fruit and vegetable producers. In 1928, one R. C. Nicoll moved a tiny shack up to the highway near Hermal, Calif., and began selling dates and date-milk drinks to the public. His stand still might be one of the hundreds along the highway if Mr. Nicoll was a man who lacked ideas.

The date crop is only one of many on which substantial numbers of growers depend for their livelihood. California date growers found that by packaging dates attractively, they could boost sales tremendously.

But he had ideas and, further, he realized the need for an attractive, colorful, useful package for the dates. He began experiments. With the experiments came increased business, and today the dates which he named after his daughter are nationally known.

Through design and decoration, Mr. Nicoll was able to transfer to the containers some of the atmosphere of his subsequent desert home, with its acres of finest date trees. His dates now go out in metal or plain pine boxes, hand-painted gourds, baskets woven by neighboring Indians, metal bowls and even steel-bound, paraffin-sealed kegs.

Dates to Potatoes.

Farmer observers, who are aware of Mr. Nicoll's success, are looking for a parallel, on a much larger scale, in the potato packaging campaign which, in the first full season just completed, widely extended the Maine potato market and returned the highest prices in the country to the growers.

Of considerable importance is the success of the campaign to the 2,500,000 farmers in the 21 states in which potatoes are a principal crop. The lowly spud provides nearly $200,000,000 a year in incomes from the more than 300,000,000 bushels produced each year.

Faced with a bumper crop and the need of developing a larger and better market for Maine potatoes, the Maine development commission a year ago agreed to aid in a solution of the problem. The commission was aroused by the reports of a survey which showed that the per capita consumption of potatoes dropped from 4.2 bushels to 2.8 bushels between 1905 and 1935, due, in part, to "reducing diets." They also found that Maine potatoes were confined to markets in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Spuds Go High-Hat.

Groups and individual growers appeared before the Maine legislature in the spring of 1937 and worked out a plan whereby they volunteered to pay a one-cent tax on every barrel of potatoes shipped.

Coffee for Ginger Cookies.—Try mixing ginger cookies with cold coffee instead of water.

Napkins From Tablecloths.—When tablecloths wear thin in the center, cut up the outside into 12 or 16-inch squares and hemstitch them. These make napkins which will wear for some time.

Beautifulizing Wash Stand.—Rubberized cretonne if pasted around an unsightly wash stand will cover ugly plumbing and make a bathroom attractive.

When Sugar Gets Lumpy.—When sugar gets hard and lumpy, put it in the refrigerator for two or three days and you will find it will become quite soft again.

Onion Absorbs Paint Odor.—If an onion is cut in halves and placed in a room that has been newly painted it will absorb the odor of paint in a few hours.

Don't Soak Brushes.—If clothes and hair brushes become very dirty wash with water in which a little borax has been mixed. Dip brushes into water and wash with another brush covered with a light coating of soap. Never soak in water.

Shoe Health.—If your brown shoes are looking a bit scuffed, give them a dose of castor oil, rubbing it well into the leather and then polishing in the usual way with shoe polish. Castor oil gives brown shoes their color back again, and preserves the leather, too.

For Privacy.—If you live so close to the highway that passers-by can look into your home, try painting the screen doors with a very thin coat of white paint and you can look out, but people passing cannot see into your living room.

Toasted Coconut Ice Cream (Freezer Method)

3 cups milk
1 package unflavored ice cream powder
1 cup heavy cream
8 drops almond extract
1 cup shredded coconut, toasted

Add milk very gradually to ice cream powder, stirring until dissolved; then add cream and flavoring. Pour into freezer can; place in freezer and pack mixture of crushed ice and salt around can (use 8 parts ice to 1 part salt). Turn slowly for 3 minutes, then rapidly. When thick, but not hard add toasted coconut and continue freezing. Makes 1 1/2 quarts ice cream.

Deaf Musicians

Several schools for the deaf have full-fledged military bands, playing standard instruments. . . . The sense of touch is closely related to the sense of hearing. Therefore, with the aid of a highly developed sense of touch, the deaf may learn to distinguish time, intensity, pitch and even melody. . . . By careful training deaf musicians may learn to detect errors in their own playing. . . . Easiest instrument for them is the drum, which, of course, is a vibration instrument.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office.

"I'll have to admit," Brace said, "that you played the game! But if you're going to be so loyal, shouldn't you be specially careful in choosing your friends? Loyalty misplaced is pretty treacherous."

"Johnny always has behaved himself before. I don't care much for cocktails and wild parties; but there are certain things you do when you're on the deb list, you know. Mother wanted me to have one season of it," replied Barbara.

"Big dance at the Somerset, stag lines, all that sort of thing?" His tone was derisive.

"No, I just had a luncheon at home. Father's and mother's friends, and their families. Last March."

"Well, there's some sense to that."

She laughed faintly. "Oh, we're really a pretty sensible family," she assured him. "Perfectly respectable, honestly." There was amusement in her tones. "Of course we're in trade. Father and his father and grandfather before him. Fruit and things. Oranges from Florida and all that. I suppose you professors think business is a pity; but at least we're wholesome. That's something, isn't it?"

He chuckled. "Everything, I should say. And she exclaimed triumphantly. "There, I knew you could laugh if you tried!"

"But it seems such a waste of time for a girl to chase around to drunken parties—"

"Oh, don't be so worthy! Besides, it wasn't a drunken party. Johnny's foot slipped, that's all."

He said thoughtfully: "I know his kind; see them in class right along. But I don't know the girls they run around with. You're a—new breed to me." He looked at her directly. "I come from a small mid-Western town," he explained. "Folks were church people. We didn't drink, or—dance much, or play cards. Of course, I know the standards I learned as a youngster are old-fashioned now. But—what have you put in place of them? What are your likes? Girls your age, I mean? Yourself, and the girls you know?"

"We're a pretty decent lot," she assured him. "The people ten years older than us did run wild; but the girls I know don't drink too much, and they're level-headed and responsible. My older sister works every day in the hospital. She's going to marry a doctor and be a medical missionary. Mother does a lot of club work, things like that. We're the sort of family that doesn't get into the society columns very much. We don't telephone the editor every time we have people to dinner. But we're all right. Doing our jobs, behaving ourselves."

She hesitated, laughed a little. "I don't know why I'm telling you the story of my life—except that I sort of want you to—well, to not be so sure I'm just a crazy kid."

He said: "I don't! I did at first, naturally; but I can see you're—not as bad as I thought." He smiled. "I suppose yours is what we think of as a 'fine old Boston family.' Your father's turning at the next corner. Shall I follow him?"

"Let him go," Barbara directed. "We'll take the next turn. Yes, I suppose we are. I never thought much about it. My sister and I do the usual things. Of course my brother's in Yale instead of Harvard, but the Sentries have been Yale for a good many generations. And mother and father—"

"By the way," the professor suggested, "why not tell your father about this scrape tonight? I expect he'd like to feel that he had your confidence."

"No, he'd just disapprove and be stern," she said. "He's always been pretty strict with himself, and with us too. He keeps telling me how girls behaved when he was young!"

"It wasn't a bad way to behave!" She laughed. "I'll bet as many girls were kissed in buggies then as in automobiles now. Turn here. Our house is two blocks ahead." And then she exclaimed: "That must be father just turning into our drive! He drove awfully slowly, didn't he? Switch off your lights. Stop in the street, and we'll wait till he has gone to bed."

They stopped in front of the house, hidden behind a high hedge, and Professor Brace stilled the engine. In the sudden silence they heard steps on gravel.

"He's coming back from the garage," she whispered; and a moment later: "There! He's opened the front door!" Light shone out, then was dark as the door closed again. "We'll wait till he's gone upstairs," she directed. "Do you mind?"

He did not mind. He asked where Johnny lived, how to get clothes to take him for his appearance in court in the morning. She gave him the number of Johnny's dormitory room. "But probably one of his room-mates will do it," she suggested. Then an upstairs light came on.

"There!" she said. "Father's undressing. He must have gone to the kitchen for something before he went upstairs." And when presently the light went out, "Now he's in bed!" She opened the car door. "You've really been awfully kind. Thanks a lot." She extended her hand.

He said: "See here, Miss Sentry. May I drop in, one of these days? I'd like to know you better."

Her eyes twinkled. "Then you don't think I'm hopeless?"

He chuckled. "Maybe I can reform you!"

"Do come. Sunday evening?"

"Thanks. Count on me. Good-night!"

Their hands clasped. He started the car and drove away; and Barbara, walking for silence's sake on tioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally was only on the surface. Yet they continued to preserve the outward forms, even to sleep in beds side by side, so that not even the servants ever knew . . . Mrs. Sentry thought this morning that her ancient tolerance had been repaid. Their lives had always been outwardly serene; were serene as they grew older now . . .

She rose, leaving Arthur abed; but while she was dressing, she heard him stirring, and called, "Thought you might want to sleep." He said, "No," rather curtly. "Do well last night? Have a good game?"

"Didn't hold any cards." The Thursday night bridge was in the nature of a tournament, four rubbers being played after dinner. He referred to this as he explained now: "They finished us off by half past ten. I hung around for a few minutes, and then came along home." He added: "And I forgot your package from Butler's, Ellen. They delivered it about four o'clock, but I left it on my desk at the office."

"It doesn't matter," she said. "Today will do." She repeated, "It doesn't matter at all," and she wondered why she went to such pains to reassure him, realized that there was something like apprehension in his tone, as though he were afraid what she would say. She asked hurriedly, "Who did you play with?"

"Dean Hare," he said. "Against Carl Bettle and Bob Flood."

She came into his dressing-room, herself ready for the day, and watched him knot his tie, brush his hair, trim his mustache. "What a time you have with that, don't you?" she said, amused at his intensity as he leaned close to the mirror, his jaw depressed to draw his upper lip taut, holding his mustache flat with one finger while with many grimaces he trimmed its ragged edges.

He nodded, and put on coat and vest, stowed odds and ends in his pockets, said, "Well, ready?"

She felt tautness in him, a need for reassurance. "You look about twenty-five," she told him dutifully. "Not a day older than Mary. You make me feel as though I had four children instead of three!" He smiled; and she thought she had succeeded in putting him in better humor for the day. She had always administered praise to him like a medicine, skillfully.

The house was old, of brick, four-square, with a French roof, the slopes broken by gables that admitted light to the servants' quarters and storage rooms on the upper floor. It had been built by Arthur's grandfather, in what was at that time open country; but now it was crowded among others, most of them of a later period, and retained only a narrow area of lawn and garden, with room for a tennis court beside the garage in the rear. A sluggish stream meandered behind the garage at an angle across the rear of the lot; and there was a pergola of brick and stone behind the tennis court, built by Arthur's father, on the bank above the water where ducks came to feed. Rhododendrons ten or twelve feet high screened the house from the street in front, and there were hedges along the lot line on either side. Outside, the house was as it had been built, save for the English ivy which cloaked the walls; but inside there were changes. Arthur's mother, when she was mistress here, had torn out walls, installed bathrooms, dressing-rooms, closets; redecorated again and again.

Mary was at the table when Mr. and Mrs. Sentry entered the dining-room; rose punctiliously to greet them. She was a tall, lovely girl, her cheeks a little hollowed so that her cheekbones and the line of her jaw showed firmly; and her eyes were apt to be grave, even when she smiled. She wore this morning a sort of blue-gray homespun, and her father, seeing this, commented: "Looks as though you're dressed for business."

She nodded. "Yes," she agreed. "I'm going to the hospital." She spent part of every day there as a volunteer, tending convalescent patients, learning something of nursing and medicine in the process. The hospital was Mrs. Sentry's pet charity; but Neil Ray, rather than her mother, was responsible for the fact that Mary's interests were thus directed. Neil was studying medicine, planning to follow his father as a medical missionary in China; and he wanted Mary to marry him.

"I told him," she confessed to her mother the night he proposed to her, "that I was no kind of wife for any kind of missionary!" Yet she had thereafter plunged into this work, as though thus she might deserve him. That was months ago.

Mrs. Sentry had spoken her mind to Mary, with the frankness upon which she prided herself. "Ridiculous!" she said. "To go way off to China! And preposterous for him to let you humble yourself! You've lost your head over this young man."

But the only result of her advice had been to awaken in Mary a defensive and antagonistic attitude, make her increasingly critical toward them all. Thus she said to Mr. Sentry now:

"And speaking of hospitals, you look as though you ought to be in one, father. Been burning the candle at both ends?"

"Had a bad night," he explained. "Lay awake, fighting to get to sleep, for hours."

"You don't look sleepy," Mary commented, in a dry, professional tone. "You look as though—well, as though your nerves were all shot." She smiled. "Probably liverish," she suggested. "Stick out your tongue!"

Mrs. Sentry said in a dry tone, "Mary, I'm beginning to object to this clinical atmosphere in the home."

"You find so many objectionable things about me lately, mother!"

the turf beside the gravel drive, went toward the house.

She wondered why her father had been downtown so late tonight; wondered what time it was; looked at her watch.

It was quarter of one.

Mrs. Sentry, Barbara's mother, roused when her husband turned on the light in their bedroom and got into his bed beside hers. She did not fully wake; just asked drowsily, "Everything all right, Arthur?"

"Of course! Perfect!"

"What time is it?"

"Quarter past eleven," he said, and she heard the rustling of the paper as he began to read. She thought sleepily that he was home early. He always dined at the Club on Thursday evenings, with bridge before and after dinner; but usually he was later than that in coming home. He was still reading when she drifted back to sleep.

When Nellie knocked on the door at seven next morning, Mrs. Sentry had been some time awake, planning her day. The seamstress in the forenoon, lunch at Mrs. Furness's to hear Miss Glen speak, dinner at home this evening. Mr. Sentry did not rouse at Nellie's knock; and Mrs. Sentry saw that he lay on his side, his back toward her; and she noticed with a faint jealousy that his tumbled dark hair was not yet thin even on the top of his head. They had been married almost thirty years. The children, babies so short a time ago, were young men and women now. Mary, so like Mrs. Sentry herself, absorbed in her work at the Hospital, taking it with a severe seriousness. Phil, a Junior at New Haven, closer to Mrs. Sentry than either of his sisters, apt to tease her about her pride, her high head. Barbara . . . Mrs. Sentry reflected now that Barbara, the youngest, was almost like a stranger in the family. Only between Barb and Phil, both with a gift for laughter, was there close abiding sympathy. Mrs. Sentry wondered—lying half asleep—what their other children would have been like if there had been others. But of course there could not be. She had, so far as outward appearances were concerned, forgiven Arthur that old offense readily enough. "At least," she told him icily, that day a few weeks before Barbara was born when he came to her in contrite confession, "there has been no scandal. I could not forgive a scandal. So, since no one knows—unless she—"

And the matter was never mentioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally was only on the surface. Yet they continued to preserve the outward forms, even to sleep in beds side by side, so that not even the servants ever knew . . . WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Food Value of Ice Cream

Nationally Known Food Authority Describes Its Place in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ONE of the most significant contributions of modern nutritional science was the discovery of the importance of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables. These foods abound in the minerals and vitamins that help to insure normal growth and health, and safeguard us against the deficiency diseases.

In this group, milk and dairy products made from it assume a commanding position because milk is the best and most practical source of calcium and vitamins A and G. These substances should be consumed in much greater proportions than at present if we are to increase health and efficiency and improve our chances for longevity.

The first rule in providing adequate amounts of the protective foods is to allow daily a quart of milk for every child and at least a pint for each adult. This amount of milk need not always be consumed as a beverage, however. It may be used in cooked dishes or eaten in the form of cheese and ice cream.

Composition of Ice Cream

Ice cream is often regarded as a confection, but it deserves to be classed among our most nutritious foods. It is composed of varying proportions of cream, milk, sugar, flavoring and frequently a binder or stabilizer such as gelatin. The composition varies somewhat between the home-made and the commercial product, and the commercial product differs in various states. That is because standards governing the butter fat content differ widely so that the requirement ranges from 8 to 14 per cent. Most large commercial companies produce an ice cream with about 12 per cent fat.

Guard Against Contamination

Some states require the pasteurization of the milk or cream used in manufacturing ice cream; others stipulate that the entire mix must be pasteurized before freezing. These measures are desirable, as ice cream requires the same scrupulous care that should be given to milk and cream.

Because of the possibilities for contamination, several precautions should be observed in buying ice cream. Choose cream manufactured by a reputable concern. Be sure to buy from a dealer who keeps it well frozen, for ice cream that has been melted and frozen again may be dangerous, owing to the opportunity for the multiplication of bacteria while it was melted. See to it, also, that the dealer uses sanitary methods in dispensing.

Home-Made Ice Cream

An easy way to make certain of the purity of the ice cream you serve is to make this delicious dessert at home. Motor-driven freezers are available, as well as those that are manually operated. And the homemaker with an automatic refrigerator finds it easier to make ice cream than to prepare many less interesting and nutritious desserts.

Ice cream powders which simplify the preparation of home-made ice cream, can be obtained unflavored, or in a variety of flavors, including lemon and maple. In addition to the popular vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. The ice cream powders may be used with milk or a combination of milk and cream to produce a healthful dessert suitable for every member of the family. They also may be used, for less rich but equally refreshing milk or buttermilk sherbets. A canned freezing mix is likewise available and is especially nice in a fruit flavor as it contains pieces of the whole fruit.

A Comparison With Milk

If we regard one-sixth of a quart of ice cream as an average serving, and compare it with one cup of milk, we make the interesting discovery that there is a close relation between the two. The ice cream provides about 24 more calories and only a trifle less protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamin A. There is considerably less vitamin G, but ice cream is nevertheless considered an excellent source of this important vitamin.

A Healthful Food

It then becomes apparent why ice cream is considered as an excellent food, not only for adults but for children and convalescents, and why one outstanding authority urges the liberal use of ice cream as a means of increasing the vitamin A content of the diet.

Plain ice cream may be used interchangeably with simple milk puddings. Rich mixtures, such as those filled with nuts and crystallized fruits, rank with the heartier desserts and should follow a lighter meal.

Ice cream is so rich in nourishment that it should not be consumed indiscriminately between meals, but should always be considered as part of the day's ration. When that is done, one nutrition authority states that its beneficial effects can hardly be overestimated.

Effect on Digestion

One frequently hears the question, "Doesn't the eating of ice cream retard the digestion of other foods consumed at the same time?" The answer is that it does slow up slightly the emptying time of the stomach but this delay is without significance and is more than compensated for by the important nutrients it provides.

Many people believe that it is injurious to follow ice cream with hot coffee. But it has been demonstrated that just the opposite is true. The coffee raises the temperature of the food in the stomach and thus modifies the cooling effect of the ice cream.

Another common question concerns the effect of cake or pie a la mode. Experiments indicate that eating ice cream with cake or pie produces a more satisfactory gastric juice than when either of these foods is eaten alone. One must take into consideration, however, that cake or pie a la mode is a rich combination and plan the remainder of the meal accordingly.

Use More Ice Cream

It has been estimated that five billion pounds of milk are used each year in the production of commercial ice cream, which provides about three gallons of ice cream per capita. The amounts of ice cream made at home will raise this figure somewhat. But the amount consumed may well be further increased, because when properly made from pure ingredients, ice cream deserves to rank with other dairy products among our most wholesome and nourishing foods.

FAMILY REUNION

On Sunday Aug. 21, 1928 the Tate Grove was the scene of a happy reunion of members and several friends of the DeBord family. This was the third gathering of this family and we hope to have more members of the family with us next year. There were fifty one relatives and eight visitors present.

Our dinner was spread picnic style on the platform, and soon everyone was enjoying a grand feast. Most of the afternoon was spent in sitting around talking, picture taking and writing a letter. This letter was written just a few words at a time to Mrs. Elvin Hiekey of El Paso who was unable to attend.

The relatives present were W. H. DeBord and wife, and daughter, Helen, Lee Jester and family of Leslie, Burk DeBord and wife of Clarendon, Elmer Dishman and family of Lelia Lake, Charlie DeBord and family, Haskell Muncie and family, J. W. DeBord and wife, Fred Tidwell, Dalton Duggins and Conley DeBord and family of Hedley, Mrs. Nannie Watkins and Oswald of Amarillo, Garnet Willingham and family of Quail, Mrs. Mae Roff of San Angelo, Mrs. Tillie Byches and children of San Angelo, Cordwell Duggins and family of Quail, Mack DeBord and sons of Sayre, Okla.; friends were Leon Carter and wife of Quail, Miss Velma Grimes of Amarillo, Bill Adams and family of Albreed.

Card of Thanks

Naturally, I am very happy over the outcome of my race for tax assessor collector.

All the credit goes to my friends and my son, Welcome, known to the citizens of Donley county as my campaign manager who worked so earnestly in my behalf. I enjoyed the race all the way and wish to express my sincere appreciation to the voters of Donley county and assure you that I shall endeavor to serve you faithfully and honestly.

Sincerely
