Woman's Culture Club

The Woman's Culture Club opened its club year with a luncheon at the home of its president Mrs. Ross Adamson, Sept. 7, 1938. A delicious luncheon was served from tables decorated with vases of rosebuds and place cards made in the form of miniature-houses, carrying out the theme of our year's program, The American Home.

After a short address by Mrs. Adamson, an interesting program on Family Relationship was enjoyed by Mesdames Leon Reeves, George Thompson, Ted Dudley, Floyd Naylor, Truman Caldwell, Ross Adamson, Ray Moreman and Misses Oley Watkins and Hazel Stewart, members; and Mesdames Hugh McKeivey of Lubbock, Clifford Johnson, Harrison Hall and A. F. Harmon, guests.

The Woman's Culture Club met Sept. 21 with Mrs. Lake Dishman. The program was on Homes of Yesterday. At this meeting, Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Harmon were elected to membership. Delicious refreshments were served to Mesdames Harrison Hall, Ross Adamson, A. F. Harmon, George Thompson, Ray Moreman and Miss Oley Watkins.

The Woman's Culture Club met Oct. 5 with Miss Oley Watkins. An enlightening program on Health was presented with Mrs. Ted Dudley as leader. Delicious refreshments were served to Mesdames W. C. Payne, Alva Simmons and Hebert Moffitt, guests; and Mesdames George Thompson, A. F. Harmon, Ross Adamson, Lake Dishman, Ray Moreman and Ted Dudley, members.

Gleaners Class

The Gleaners Class of the First Methodist Church met Friday afternoon, Oct. 14, with Mrs. John Koeninger hostess. The house was called to order by Mrs. Marvin Whitfield. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, after which a business session was held. Business over a very interesting program was given, the theme being on Building Mrs. Masterson brought a most edifying devotional on Building. Talks, papers, and songs comprised the program, after which our hostess served a delectable refreshment to Mesdames M. G. Whitfield, H. L. Whitfield, B. J. Osborn, Mack Shaw, J. B. Masterson, Ed Todd, Richmond Bowlin, Henry Gunn, Frank Kendall, D. K. Hall, John Koeninger and Miss Lucille Koeninger.

Next meeting will be an all day meeting Oct. 28 in the basement of the church and plan to quilt a quilt for Waco Orphans Home. We ask all members to be present, with well filled covered dishes, also needles, thread and thimbles.

Mrs. Richmond Bowlin, reporter

Bowlin Bible Class

The first meeting of the Bowlin Bible Class was held with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Watkins Thursday Oct. 13. A very pleasant evening was spent and refreshments were served.

The class will meet with Mrs. Opal Adamson on the third Thursday in November at 7 p. m. The following program will be rendered:

Hostess, Mrs. Opal Adamson
Devotional, Mrs. Bowlin
Music, Mr. and Mrs. Watkins

Business Sought
Our Law Administrator

Industry of Country as Mainly Decent; and on Citizens, Not Inspectors, to Make
Law Work Warns Against Chiselers.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Mr. James F. Andrews hasn't been in Washington long enough yet to become either widely praised or cordially hated, but he has started on his job as administrator of the new wage and hour law, and so it will be long until the country knows him. He has a tough job; one of the toughest, indeed, since Gen. Hugh Johnson tried to run NRA. Thus, he seems proper to review and examine some of Mr. Andrews' pronouncements since he came into the administration.

His main theory of proceeding with a new and wholly untried policy of law is to gain co-operation of business, the business which the law is to effect. He pictures the industry of the country as mainly decent, as willing to do the right thing, and to that extent certainly he is entitled to commendation. For, all his life in the last five years, all business has been grouped by first one New Dealer and then another, as being crooked. Mr. Andrews feels apparently that business is honest until his records show it to be dishonest, and then to apply the lash of the individuals, and not the whole industry, as wrongdoers.

"We are going to depend on the citizens of the United States, not an army of inspectors from Washington, to make this law work," Mr. Andrews said in a recent speech.

The administrator further espoused the policy of giving the states the job of enforcement within their jurisdictions as far as that can be done. To this, he added that the law enables a worker to sue or double the amount due if any employer fails to pay the minimum wage, explaining that this provision takes one enforcement phase out of the hands of the federal government and creates watchmen of every worker. Since the law, with its minimum of 25 cents an hour becomes effective October 24, (where interstate shipments of products are concerned) Mr. Andrews obviously believes that individual workers will get pretty well acquainted with their rights before the effective date.

Asks for Co-Operation
to Minimize Crookedness

Mr. Andrews warned against chiselers. He took the position in an interview that chiseling was to be expected and added that "chiselers will get rich and fair employers will get broke in the short run" of things, but he seems to believe that there can and will be sufficient co-operation to insure the minimum of crookedness, undercutting and chiseling. At least, it is hoped the condition will work out that way. Although I never have believed that a federal wage and hour law would prove satisfactory, it is entitled to a fair chance to show whether it can or can not be worthwhile as national policy. And Mr. Andrews is surely entitled to the co-operation for which he has asked unless he develops like so many other New Dealers to whom extraordinary power suddenly has been entrusted.

From a quarter of a century of observation, I am inclined to the belief that the great majority of business concerns will "come clean" in their relations with the new federal office. Obviously, some will not, but the bulk will try to abide by the law as they understand it. So, I think it is not from the bulk of business interests that Mr. Andrews will get his load of trouble. There will be cheap skates who try to take advantage of any and every situation to gain an advantage on their competitors. That will be one kind of trouble that can be traced home rather quickly. Then, there will be another kind of trouble that will not be so easily untangled. It will come from "reports" of alleged violations—some from the "watchmen," some from the chiselers who will seek to cause trouble for or suspicion of violation by competitors. There will be some labor racketeers who will try to force union organization by threats of "reports" of violations which reports obviously could not be true. All of these things are due to come, and it is understood that we can best judge Mr. Andrews as a public official.

Value of Watchmen
Enforcement of Law

As to the sources of information upon which the staff of the administrator may subsequently act, there is some reason for doubt. I mentioned some of them above. My doubt as to the value of a "watchman" in enforcement is based upon all saw during the early prohibition. "Stool pigeons" were called then, and they operated everywhere; they were plain busybodies, they were fanatics. There was that gradually a disrespect law grew up, and this disrespect was blamable to a considerable extent upon the fact that the provisions of the law encouraged legal "squealing" more

"Does the Widow Jones live here?"
That was the way he put it,
Telling fellow who broke his husband's

In a way, it's a joke when it's one of those jokes when we laugh out of sympathy because the joke grows out of a bitter reality. Telling a woman her husband has just been killed in an accident is a heart-breaking job, as anybody knows who's ever had the assignment.

Twenty-five years ago, in the factory and on the farm, it was a common story—
"He was caught between the

crane and the wall . . . He was piling sheets of steel when they fell over . . . The horse bolted when he was cleaning the mower . . . Nobody saw, but he must have been oiling it when the ram come down . . .

In something like 35,000 homes during 1913, there came a knock on the door, a man with his hat in hand, not knowing how to break the news.

Aroused by the horrible tragedy of these accidents, and, on the other side of the picture, by their wasteful cost to industry, a small group of men met that year and determined to do something about it. Their determination gave birth to the National Safety Council. With two men, a stenographer and a battered typewriter, the council started out like David against a towering Goliath—Accidents.

Working on the fundamental assumption that for every accident there is a cause—and a cure—they fought inch by inch against the hopeless pessimism of men who thought that wherever there was industry there would be accidents.

That was 25 years ago. This year the largest safety assembly in the history of the world is celebrating the silver anniversary of that founding. Ten thousand men and women from London to Los Angeles are meeting in Chicago for five days beginning October 10 at the National Safety Council's silver jubilee congress.

The Accomplishment

Before them will rise a 13-foot birthday cake, but behind them will stand a greater monument—a record of 285,000 lives saved in those 25 years—a cityful of human beings who would not have been alive today had accidents continued at the 1913 level. Considering industry's tremendous growth since 1913 and the probability that increased technology would otherwise have brought an even greater accident rate, this figure of 285,000 seems very modest indeed.

And this campaign against accidents has not been confined to industry. Gradually the work has spread into every department of human life. Once it was understood that accidents could be prevented by a common-sense safety program, people realized that what was being done in industry could be done in the home, on the streets and highways and in other public places. This development was hastened by business men's realization that quite as many of their men were losing time from injuries at home and going to and from work as from accidents in the plant.

Traffic deaths—around 4,000 in 1913—doubled the following year, tripled the next, and reached a peak 10 times as great before preventive work could pull the curve downward.

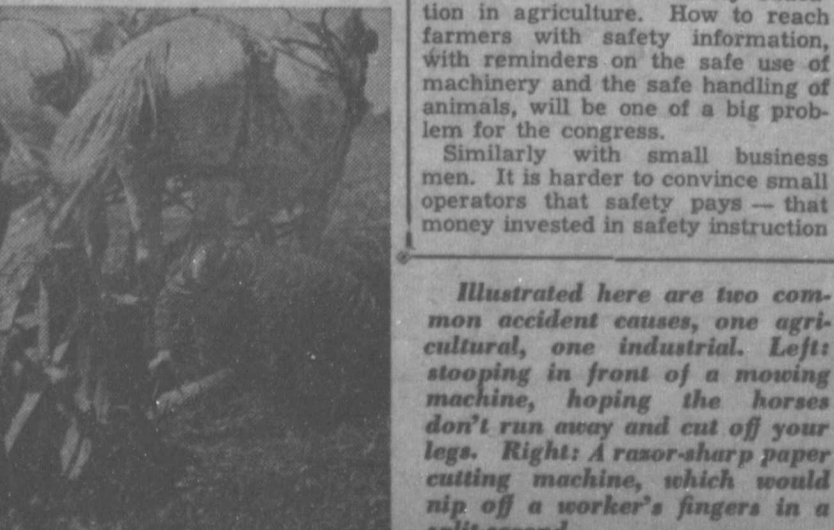

Farm accidents mounted by leaps and bounds to the point where nearly one-fourth of all occupational deaths happened on the farm.

The home—which we think of as a haven of safety—became one of the worst accident locations of all, threatening even to surpass traffic accidents in annual fatalities.

And so the safety movement grew into one of the vital forces of America, entrusted with the responsibility of conserving human life.

But still it has only begun. Members of the council are quick to say their work has only scratched the surface. Last year alone, they point out, accidents took 106,000 lives in America—one in each 300 families, on the average.

The cost of these accidents averaged $115 for each family in the nation—a grand total of $3,500,000,000! And the pain and suffering involved in 106,000 deaths cannot be expressed in any mathematical figure. While accidents continue to disand safety equipment will reduce costs and increase operating efficiency, just as it has been proven in larger industries. This, too, will be a puzzler for delegates.

Other jobs for occupational safety: More research into the causes of occupational accidents and diseases; education of manufacturers to insure that safety be built into every piece of machinery before it is used; and more safety courses in engineering colleges and vocational schools.

Death at the Wheel

Traffic, of course, has become our principal national accident problem. Last year, 39,500 lives were lost in traffic, and an estimated 1,400,000 other citizens of the United States were injured. Council statisticians have estimated that motor vehicle accidents cost us $1,700,000,000 last year.

These are the highest figures ever reached. The death toll is four-fifths as great as American losses in the World War. It is equivalent to the destruction of a city like Waltham, Mass., or Santa Monica, Calif.

The money wasted in 1937 traffic accidents would have built 35 Empire State buildings, or 250 ocean liners like the Normandie.

More and more cities and states, however, are keeping good accident records and thus learning more about how and why accidents occur.

But the traffic problem still is a challenge. The council has proved that accidents can be reduced wherever a state or community is willing to apply a well-rounded, scientific program. And for the first eight and one-half months of 1938 the nation as a whole has experienced a 20 per cent reduction in traffic deaths below the same months for the preceding year, without any decrease in travel as measured by gasoline consumption.

That this reduction is but a small part of what might have been achieved had we been able to apply what we have even thus far learned about traffic accidents, is shown by the experience of cities and states which have, through the application of balanced programs, effected savings of upwards of 50 per cent in their traffic fatalities within the short space of a year. Thus the lag between what we know about accidents and what we are doing about them is costing us something like 13,000 lives this year.

Therefore, one of the principal problems facing the delegates as they look into the future will be getting across to the public information already developed about traffic accidents, and enlisting the public, more than ever before in the war against accidents.

But research—statistical, engineering and psychological—into the cause and cure of accidents must go forward. New developments, like the chemical tests to show when drivers have been drinking, better cars and safer highways, scientific methods of eliminating night hazards, will be one phase of the attack. Another will be a continuation of the campaign for uniform traffic laws, including standard driver's license laws, accident reporting, road rules, signs and signals; for regular inspection of all motor vehicles; and for more safety training in schools, with driving instructions for every high school student.

In home accidents, safety workers face a problem similar to that involved in agriculture. The fact that most home accidents do not come to official notice unless hospitalized makes it difficult to collect accurate data. And like the farmer, the housewife is isolated in her household and cannot easily be reached by broadcast methods of safety education. But in recent years, through women's clubs, through home magazines, women's pages in newspapers and housekeeping broadcasts, an increasing attempt has been made to familiarize housewives with the principal hazards of their own homes. Looking into the future, the delegates must plan how to intensify this campaign, and how to carry the safety idea to contractors and architects so that homes of the future will be built with safety in mind.

Does it sound like a Herculean task? Perhaps it is, but to men and women who have been responsible for an almost continuous drop in accidents in the face of America's tremendous growth during the past quarter century, the accomplishments of the past stand as a challenge for the future.

By Virginia Vale

IF YOU'RE interested in writing—or learning to write—for the movies, take a tip from Hal Roach, who certainly ought to know what he is talking about.

He recently conducted a survey, as a result of which he announces that 72 per cent of the themes of current films have been taken directly from newspaper clippings. Here is his report: General news (including aviation, maritime disasters, divorce court proceedings, depression stories and natural catastrophes) 46 per cent; crime news, 9 per cent; letters to editor, 4 per cent; love-lorn columns, 3 per cent; editorial columns, 2 per cent; sports, 2 per cent; comic strips, 1 per cent.

Mr. Roach, at present, is filming a story called "There Goes My Heart," which concerns an heiress, (played by Virginia Bruce) who runs away from the Riviera in her grandfathers yacht, arrives in this country and goes to work in her own department store; Fredric March is the reporter assigned to cover her story.

Here you have, says Mr. Roach, a romantic comedy, not a straight drama, and it combines general news, society news and lovellorn column material. Better study it with that in mind, if you're interested in seeing how film stories are put together.

Remember Corinne Griffith, you old-timers? Not that your memories need go so very far back; it's not so long since she was a popular star. Corinne is one of the few really happy retired stars. Her husband, George Marshall, owns one of the big professional football teams, and he and she travel with the team during the season.

And she has those two little girls whom she adopted a few years ago, taking them from an orphan asylum, and taking two when she'd meant to adopt just one because they were sisters. Needless to say, she's bringing them up beautifully—or thought she was, until she discovered that their favorite game is "G-man"; that, when left to themselves, they make the nursery ring with "You won't talk, then—you rat! Take that—and that!"

Another young devotee of gangster life is Sabu; remember him in "The Elephant Boy"? This young Indian arrived in New York from London for the opening of his latest picture, "Drums," the new Alexander Korda release. When Robert Flaherty discovered him in India, while searching for a youngster to play the title role in "Elephant Boy," he was just one more young Indian, an orphan, poor; you should see him now!

He loves American slang, which he picked up from the Hollywood technicians in the English movie studio where he worked. And he is wild about the movies, especially American gangster pictures. His enthusiasm also includes war films and any method of traveling fast, particularly planes. And three years ago he was riding elephants and liking it!

Seth Parker, with "Ma" and their Jonesport neighbors, is back on the air on Sunday evenings; people all over the country feel as if old friends had returned to them. Phillips Lord, who is "Seth," plans to revive many of his first successes—the old-fashioned singing school among them. And, of course, there are the Sunday night gatherings in which the Parkers and the neighbors sing hymns.

Fathers all over the country are turning the radio on late in the afternoons so that their sons can listen to "Dick Tracy"—and not admitting that they did it because they wanted to listen themselves. For "Dick" has returned to the air, more energetic than ever in his battle against criminal activities.

ODDS AND ENDS—When Fred Warner finished making "Varsity Show" in Hollywood with his band and returned east he had practically no band left; his singers (Priscilla and Rosemary Lane), his arranger and his hot trumpet, Johnny "Scat" Davis, had abandoned him for movie-making, and others just dropped out on the way home . . . Bert Lahr is spending his spare time trying to look like a lion; has to play the Cowardly Lion in "The Wizard of Oz" without benefit of animal skins or heavy make-up.

Illustrated here are two common accident causes, one agricultural, one industrial. Left: stooping in front of a moving machine, hoping the horses don't run away and cut off your legs. Right: A razor-sharp paper cutting machine, which would nip off a worker's fingers in a split-second.

Telephone
 For a luxury - - it is a necessity. For calling your grocer, butcher or doctor it is indispensable. And remember, one minute's emergency might pay a year's telephone bill.
