Bull Town Bulletins

By Bill Ellis

EARLIER THIS summer, Friona librarian Darla Bracken approached Ye Editor, pointing out the library's emphasis on the Olympics. Her visit reminded me that as a young "cub reporter," I had covered the 1960 Olympic Trials in Palo Alto, California. Darla urged me to write about this.

Less than a month into my first newspaper job, there I was at Stanford Stadium, watching America's top athletes try out for that coveted spot on the Olympic team.

Some of the winners made names for themselves. Others just basked while enjoying their brief claim to fame.

I've always been a pole vault fan, and I particularly enjoyed watching Don Bragg win the event by clearing 15-0. At the Olympics, Bragg set a new record with a jump of 15-5. A sideline to this is the fact that in the intervening years, two Friona boys have cleared 15 feet. Andy Kendrick's top mark this season, 15-3, would have won a silver medal in the 1960 Olympics.

Bragg went on to make a movie or two, in the role of "Tarzan."

Glen Davis won the 400-meter hurdles, both in the trials and later in Rome, setting a new Olympic record. U.S. hurdlers placed 1-2-3. Davis repeated his gold-medal performance of 1956, when the Olympics were in Australia.

Jumper Ralph Boston won the long jump with a new Olympic record of 26 feet, 7-3/4 record. It stood until Bob Beamon topped 29 feet.

Al Oerter won the discus throw when we saw the meet at Palo Alto. He and the other two American qualifers went to Rome and gave Uncle Sam another 1-2-3 sweep. Lee Calhoun had a fight on his hands to win the U.S. trials in the 110-meter hurdles. The two who pushed him, Willie May and Hayes Jones, did likewise in Rome, and again the U.S. placed 1-2-3.

Wilma Rudolph was the "rising star" for the U.S. Women's track and field team. The long-legged Tennessee star easily won her qualifying events that we watched on that clear California afternoon.

A couple of months later in the Olympics at Rome, Miss Rudolph easily won the 100-meter dash (world record of 11.5), the 200meter dash in 24.0:, and then anchored her team to victory in the 4x100 meter relay, where they set a world record of 44.5.

In my mind's eye, I can still picture Miss Rudolph, pulling away from the field, especially in the 200-meter race, winning by ten yards. Tragedy struck down this great U. S. athlete within the last decade, when she was stricken by a rare disease that claimed her life.

At the Olympic trials, we saw high jumper John Thomas lead the United States' contingent. He won with a jump of seven feet. But in the Olympics, two Russian jumpers outdid Thomas, who had to settle for third place.

One of my disappointments at the trials was when Bobby Morrow, the 1956 gold-medal winner in the 100-meter dash at Melbourne, had to give way to younger sprinters. Morrow, the Abilene Christian flash, was the first to crack the tensecond mark in his specialty.

We didn't get to watch the boxing trials, as they were held elsewhere. But when the Olympics got underway, a promising young black fighter established himself as the favorite in his weight division. He went undefeated at the Olympics. His name was Cassius Clay. You may know him better as Muhammed Ali.

Eight years later, Pampa's Randy Matson joined the small number of Panhandle athletes who have won an Olympic gold medal with his win in the shot put. Matson threw the iron ball almost 70 feet.

Speaking of area stars, the 1936 Olympics saw Joe Fortenberry, who attended Happy High School, pace the United States' gold medal in the first Olympic basketball competition. Fortenberry, the brother of former Parmer County Judge Paul Fortenberry, passed away in 1993 at the age of 82.

WHY? THEY ASKED Erma and Carl Schrader survey water damage in their storage house. Vandals left a sprinkler running inside the building and flooded it.

Just Pranks or Vandalism?

BY RON CARR

There is not much to do in the summer in Bovina. Over the past few weeks, some people have found ways to keep busy.

For instance, someone stole a water hose at the school, hooked it up at Carl and Erma Schrader's, ran the hose into the small house in their backyard, attached a sprinkler, and turned it on. The Schraders think it ran for almost 24 hours, destroying the floor and ruining many of their stored possessions.

For instance, someone took the two-inch PVC pipe sprinkler used for the football field, ran it over two fences out into the street, and turned it on. Water ran (and was wasted) for several blocks.

There was a 55-gallon barrel at the bottom of Leon Ware's pool. Durward Bell's backyard had flower pots and birdfeeders turned over.

Graffiti was painted on one end of a duplex. Some fertilizer was taken from a shed and dumped on several yards.

Just pranks to pass a dull summer? Destroying property and upsetting people's lives go beyond pranks. Not to mention the danger of being hurt if you are caught on someone's into an age that I don't understand." It was many years ago when a friend of mine, Gillis Reid, turned 80 and passed on those words of wisdom. At the time they didn't sound like wisdom to me. Now

This weekend in Atlanta, and for the next 16 days, many dreams will be realized, while others are shattered, during the 1996 Summer

There will be more coverage and hype than most of us will care to hear during every nightly

Oh I know, it is the history and ceremony and tradition we should be respectful of, right?

Am I the only person in Parmer County who got tired of that Olympic flame wandering across the country? I know, I know, its an honor of a lifetime.

But to me, it takes some of the tradition away when there is a vehicle with a "back-up" flame in case the one being carried goes out, which it did a couple of times.

To be fair, it seems that if the flame goes out, they should have to go back to Greece and start over. The flame that lights this year's torch in Atlanta ain't going to be the one that left Greece. That's

So who really cares? It is all symbolic anyway. Or is it.

In ancient times, when the Olympic Games competition was held, the tribes stopped fighting each other and for a period of time lived and competed in peace until the games were over and they resumed battle.

Early American athletes like Wilma Rudolph, Jesse Owens, and Jim Thorpe, became legends because of their Olympic achievements.

Their accomplishments influenced countless numbers of Americans for their courage and determination.

No doubt many of this year's Olympic athletes have courage and determination too.

Things do seem to have changed from ancient times though. Modern day Olympics are about money and politics.

Seems to me that something has gone wrong in the spirit of the competition. It is big business now. MONEY!

A recent TV segment gave 3,779 women athletes, 42,500 these statistics: There will be support workers, and most 10,000 athletes, 2 million visitors, and 30,000 security personnel. Security costs alone were said to be $300 million. Who pays for the security anyway?

And did you notice there are three times as many security people as there are athletes?

enlisted several Amarilloans who will visit Atlanta and who. volunteered to call the Globe-News each night during their stay and "report on traffic, costs, and other events" at the Summer Games.

Now wait a minute. First they are going to report on traffic. Next they will talk about costs., And finally they will report on other events at the Summer Games. Do they give gold medals this year for traffic and costs? My heart is pounding to read those reports.

"Traffic was snarled all over Atlanta today, we paid $27 for lunch, and by the way Olga Swamibuhtakajarian won four gold medals but we didn't get to see it because we were busy driving and eating. Maybe soon we will get to see some events. Right now we are looking at T-shirts.....! " So it Atlanta built an 83,500 seat stadium. New sidewalks, new lampposts, along new streets that lead to new parks.

197 countries represented, support workers, and most important, 425,000 orders of french fries will be served.

Atlanta gathered $750 million from 43 corporate underwriters and NBC-TV paid $565 million for domestic television rights.

The Olympic torch relay bore Coca-Cola's name. The torch stopped at Holiday Inns along the way (another sponsor), and the vehicles were GM cars.

Quote from July 14 Amarillo "ACOG (the Globe-News: Olympics committee) imposed ruthless financial discipline on an event known for reveling in its own excess, run by an international body of royalty that alternates its annual meeting between Switzerland and Monte Carlo."

Inside the "grounds" the only thing visitors can bring in is bottled water. Maybe you have seen those TV shots of people dumping their snacks in trash barrels outside the gates, forced to buy food inside at inflated prices.

All of this to see who can run 100 meters the fastest, or row faster, or win a couple of volleyball matches. There is even a 10-meter air rifle competition. Wish I had saved my Red Ryder BB gun.

Competition goes from about 10 a.m. each day until sometime

The Amarillo Globe-News has after 2 a.m. The closing ceremony will be close to midnight on > will go on to fame and riches. Most of the athletes will go back to their relative obscurity around the world.

Atlanta will try to figure out what to do with stadium, parks and buildings they built.

And in the year 2000, Australia will have the problem of what to do with the Olympics.

What is it all for? I don't know. As Gillis Reid said, "The older I get, the less I know."

Cattlemen Report Success 1995-96 Matua In

Even in the midst of the recent drought conditions in the plains states region, cattlemen are reporting some very impressive success stories with Matua bromegrass under irrigation. Interest in Matua is still very high in spite of the recent weather conditions," according to Keith Carmichael of Cutting-Edge Agri Products--the nation's largest seller of Matua.

"We've been surprised at the number of inquiries this year, and because producers are beginning to 'get a handle' on how to manage this grass, we're seeing more large plantings of 1000 acres or more," Carmichael commented.

Although beef prices are in a relentless down cycle, a recent poll done by Cutting-Edge found many producers using Matua very satisfied. Reasons given included: performance of the cattle, cost of gain, animal health and hay quality. "Many producers are getting 40-45 cents per pound on the gain basis," says Carmichael, "and we nearly always have a list of people looking to put cattle on Matua.'

In every part of the country, producers are finding that cattle show a real preference for Matua over other forages, including wheat, and they perform well on it. A producer near Lazbuddie reported average fall gains of 2.89 lbs. per day and one near Muleshoe recorded 3.2 lbs. per day. "These were 'payweights' from the producer," says Carmichael, "after all, those are the only ones that matter anyway."

One feedlot manager polled, who carefully monitors his grazing system, reported 93,000 head days on one circle (120 acres) during an 11 month period ending in October. "I know they grazed it during November to go completely around the calendar," adds Carmichael. "That would be well over 100,000 head-days for the year, and the cattle averaged just over 2 lbs. per day."

Just down the road on the edge of Muleshoe, another producer recorded 40,000 head-days during the fall season on a newly planted 120 acre circle of Matua. In this system, early spring growth was chopped and bagged. Even though the grass was completely "freezedried" and literally "blew away" in February, it was cut twice this spring--yielding 14.4 tons at 62 per cent moisture (5.5 ton DM).

Presently there are 855 head weighing nearly 500 lbs. grazing on the system in 15 acre cells. The cattle, which are "dry-lotted" each evening and fed haylage, go to a new cell every 1-2 days. In this system, the producer is able to maintain these numbers and the same high quality forage "all the way through." In this producer's opinion, "management is the key" to maintaining consumption and animal performance.

In virtually every case, producers grazing Matua have found that some of it must be chopped or hayed at some point in order to stay ahead of its rapid spring growth and maintain forage quality."

Even though Matua is a cool season grass that can provide a lot of "winter grazing" in some aras, it continues to grow through the summer months under irrigation. Research done by Dr. Ed Houston at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center in San Angelo last summer, shows Matua producing a ton per acre every 30 days throughout June, July and August with annual yield of over 8000 lbs. per acre.

During a field day at the station this data, Dr. Houston told the group, "We're trying to be cautious, but I have to admit, we're pretty excited about the Matua."

Events this spring led Dr. Houston to be even more optimis- December next, on the eighth day, tic. Then on April 1, it revived--"every plant came back alive; I I have three horses for to sell, don't believe there was a single A cart and yoke of steers. plant that didn't survive. I couldn't believe it. Matua has passed its first test with me, " he adds, "surviving the summer and dry winter conditions--I believe it deserves a good look in this part of the country."

Some producers seem almost relentless as they try to push this New Zealand brome to try to find what its limits are. One cattleman near Plainview, Texas placed 450 head of cattle weighing 450 lbs. on 90 acres of spring planted Matua in late May. "When we visited at the Farm Show in October," recalls Carmichael, "all but 90 head were Also a loom and sleys. still on that circle. We sat down and calculated that he was running over 3000 lbs. per acre through July and August. We just haven't recommended that, especially on that new of a stand."

Producers were asked to compare Matua to wheat pasture. "The real difference," states one Or if you'd buy at private sale, producer who chops and bags both wheat and Matua, "is from June to And if you pay me on the rail, October. Matua just keeps on going after the wheat is done--that's all bonus, plus you don't have to replant like you do with wheat."

One producer polled, who manages well over 500 acres of Matua near Lazbuddie, put it another way. He said, "We can 'graze-out' wheat or we can graze right on through the summer with Matua--it's really not much of a choice. Besides, I get tired of replanting each fall."

One cattleman in his second year using Matua near Del City, Texas, is "very pleased." "We're running between 2000 and 2300 lbs. per acre now, and the relative feed value is running 150. I would have to say that the cattle are doing as good as they could on anything-even the best wheat pasture you can find," the cattleman commented.

All producers polled seemed to agree--the key is management. "It responds to everything you can do to it," says one Friona, Texas cattleman, "and it has everything we want. Everyone we know who has it--likes it."

Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church on Wednesday for Lawrence Gray, 88, who died of a fatal heart attack at his home Sunday evening.

Lawrence was one of our 'good old boys' and lived here for most of his life. His family was one of the families who first came to Oklahoma Lane from Oklahoma and this is how Oklahoma Lane got it's name. One of the other families was Pat Read's grandparents, the Ayers family. They were Mable Ellison's parents.

We understnd Lawrence was survived by only one cousin who lives at Duncan, Oklahoma.

Justin Brozek's grandfather passed away. He was James Brozek, 89, of Lucas, Kansas. He died after a short illness.

Suezy Smith said all of their family went to Mora, New Mexico and spent a good three days. They went July 4 and stayed until the

While there, one evening they had 47 people from their campground there for a meal and a nice visit.

These were people who have campers and trailers near, and Suezy said some really nice people moved into the trailer where Billy and Paula Whitecotton had a "get-away" place for years, so they were pleased to have them in the campground.

Funeral services were held for Billy McCormick last Saturday. He grew up in Bovina and was survived by two sons, three daughters, three sisters, nieces, nephews and grandchildren. He was also Eldon McCormick's cousin.

Rouel Barron's sister and her daughter, Margaret and Debbie Truitt of the Ft. Wotrth-Dallas area have been guests in their home in recent days.

A. M. Wilson visited with his daughter and family, Suzanne and Rodney Murphy and sons Adam and Kip in Abilene. He spent three days before returning to Bovina.

James and Sandra Clayton made a quick flight to Houston in recent days. They attended their son's fiance's bridal shower. Sandra said they were there only long enough for her to attend the shower and James visited with son, Mark.

Misti and Lindsey Pruitt have had a good summer. First they spent time with their Aunt Lori in Colorado Springs, Colorado, enjoying sightseeing and hiking. Later, they traveled to Lavern, Oklahoma and visited with their aunt, Sally Radford. They attended a family reunion and were able to see lots of relatives.

Congratulations to Roy Lee and Dorothy Stowers on the birth of their third grandchild. Their daughter Robbie and Mike Mersiosky of Georgetown have a new baby girl, Christina Brooke, born Friday, July 12, in Austin.

The baby weighed eight pounds, five ounces, and measured twenty and one-half inches. She has a brother, Brent, who is five and a sister, Regan, two years old.

Other grandparents are Ed and Gloria Mersiosky of Georgetown.

Wayne and Carol Smith went to Colorado a week ago Tuesday. They took granddaughters, Elisa and
