Senator Clapp's Idea of an Old Fashioned Remedy.

Senator Fairbanks of Indiana and Senator Clapp of Minnesota were coming down from the capitol from a night session. Senator Fairbanks was complaining of the inconvenience which ineffective night sessions have upon senators, capecially if they are threatened with a touch of the prevailing grip. The Indiana senator, turning to Senator Clapp,

"Senator, you are originally from Indiana, and you doubtless remember that old fashioned remedy they used to prescribe for a disease of the grip character down on the Wabash. It was whisky and quinine."

"I don't like your mixture," retorted Senator Clapp, with a scowl upon his Indianlike countenance. "It spoils the whisky and doesn't do the quinine any good."—Washing—Washin

A Little Advice Doys Will Do Well to Follow.

If it becomes necessary for you to leave school for a time and go to work, do it gracefully. Work is honorable. Don't be afraid of it. It would be an excellent idea for everybody to learn a trade. The old Jewsh law made it obligatory, asserting that if a man neglected to teach his son a trade he did the same as make him a thief. The emperor of Germany is a bookbinder. The fact that you have a trade need not make you work at it, but with a good trade at his fingers' ends and good health to back it a man is seldom floored, no matter where he finds himself. If you start to learn a trade, remember that the harder you work and the more closely you apply yourself the sooner you will outstrip all your appetite and induces refreshing sleep.
There is no substitute for "Favorite Prescription," for there is nothing "just ladder where situations are many ladder where situations are many and wages are high. Don't be afraid to work. Don't be content with mercly putting in the allotted time, but try and find out the best way to accomplish the work you have to do in the neatest and most expeditious manner. You may think that effort of this kind is not appreciated, but it is, and when some fine day there is a chance for promotion and when you find yourself singled out from half a dozen of your chums and sent up a step higher lon't attribute it to luck.

On the other hand, if you go fooling along, doing just as little as you can and not even that until you are told repeatedly and then in a slipshod and slovenly manner, don't attribute it to luck when some other fellow is allowed to go several rounds above you on the ladder at Dongers That Follow In the better pay. - J. W. Burgess in American Boy.

HENRY CLAY'S BOYHOOD. Henry Clay, the "millboy of the clashes," was one of the seven children of a widow too poor to send him to any but a common country school, where he was drilled only in the "three R's"—reading, writing, arithmetic-but he used every spare moment to study without a teacher, and in after years he was a king among self made men. The boy, who had learned to speak in a barn, with only a cow and a horse for an audience, became one of the great American orators and statesmen.

Oh, tell me, papa, tell me quick!

Ob, stell me, papa, if you know, What makes the grass and flowers grow? Why do we walk upon our feet. And what has made she sugar sweet? Oh, tell me, papa, tell me quick!

And tell me, papa, tell me how The milk and cream get in the cow? How many scales a fish has got? Oh, tell me, papa, tell me quick!

And tell me, papa—don't forge!— What is it makes the water wet? What holds the sun up in the sky? When you were born, how old was I? Oh, tell me, papa, tell me quick!—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Wake of Too Much Ventilation.

When it comes to the matter of ventilation, the woman theorist shines. If, indeed, she has thought about it enough to have a theory at year from too much fresh air than the record from vitiated atmosphere can show. Not one person in a hundred can sleep in the winter time with an open door in his room without bad consequences, or at J. S. McConnell. least without running dangerous risks. Many more cases of pneumonia may reasonably be said to be due to "ventilation" than to all other causes combined. I recall the death of a trained nurse while on duty in the home of a neighbor from pneumonia contracted from sleeping near an open window. As a graduate of one of the leading training schools she had thoroughly studied the subject of ventilation under supposably intelligent proubject. Ella Morris Kretschmar in Woman's Home Companion.

The Scotch are the greatest dyspepties on earth, largely owing to their use of half cooked oatmeal and soft bread. Next to the Scotch are the Americans, and no single thing has contributed more to American dyspepsia that half cooked oatmeal mush for breakfast. In rural France, where dyspepsia is practically unknown, hard bread and vegetables, with a very moderate amount of meat, comprise the chief items of the bill of fare. Take the center out of a hot biscuit and roll it awhile in your hand, and it soon becomes a solid mass of dough -a "lead pill." That is the thing your stomach wrestles with when it attempts to digest hot bread or biscuit. A good deal of the cold bread is just about as bad. Such food may be nutritious for the chap in the circus who relishes ground glass and cats swords and tenpenny nails, but it shortens the lives of average

THE NEWEST LAMP SHADES. Interesting are the schemes for principal weapon of warfare. When the decoration of "modern style" "The medium says the room is an unarmed man is attacked by one interiors. The parchment lamp too cold," replied some one who of these birds, the chances are very shades, with weird, dark figures of women gowned in clinging predeaux, wandering amid stiff yew trees and cypress hedged gardens, are certainly new and original. Some of the stuffs, specially woven for the artists who designed them, are far beyond the reach of any ordinary purse. Many are chefs d'oeuvres in coloring and design, espetwo electric lamps is a woman's figure in dull silver, slender and half draped, the folds of her bronze hued skirts spreading round her feet. She holds a light in either hand, her eyes cast down.

HOW TO POLISH THE WINDOWS.

The action of the sun, moisture and the carbonic acid in the air on the soda or potash in the glass produces an opaqueness more or less pronounced. To remove this wet the glass with diluted hydrochloric acid, and after a few minutes go over the glass with powdered whiting. Pour the acid slowly into the cold water, using four ounces of the acid to 12 ounces of water (a pint and a half). Polish with chamois or soft paper. It must be remembered that this acid will attack metals and should not be allowed to touch them, nor should the bottle be left open an instant longer than necessary, as the fumes are very destructive.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Cup of Good
Coffee

To get a really good cup,

of coffee you'll have to start

back of the actual making;

you'll have to look to the roasting and the grinding.

In ARBUCKLES' you have a coffee that's scientifically

roasted, and delivered to you
