A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HAVE ALL GOOD: The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger; but they that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.—Psalm 14: 10.

ONE ROBBERY MAN ROBS ANOTHER

There are times when fixing the blame for human actions is a task almost too complicated for human knowledge.

Consider, for example, this little story from Cleveland, O. In that city there lived an unemployed man who had a wife and five small children. He couldn't get a job and he had no money, and the food supplies that were furnished him by an over-taxed city welfare department didn't provide his youngsters with the sort of diet children ought to have.

So, in his back yard, he started a vegetable garden. Since he couldn't find a job he could put in all his time on this garden, and he developed a pretty good one. He developed a lot of fine tomato plants, which was a good thing because his children needed tomatoes.

Then he began to notice that marauders were visiting his garden at night and looting it. His tomato plants got torn up. The green stuffs that were to make his children strong and healthy vanished.

The gardener stayed up nights to watch. One dark night he saw a prowler crawling through his fence. He raised a stick he had and blubbed the prowler on the head with all his strength. The prowler collapsed, was taken to a hospital; a little later he died, and the man who had tried to defend his garden was put in jail.

And it developed that the prowler was himself a jobless man who had been driven almost frantic by his need for food.

Now how are you going to weigh out the blame in a case like that?

Technically, the man who owned the garden committed manslaughter, at the very least.

Technically, the man who lost his life was a sneak thief of the meanest variety.

But the man who wielded the club was simply trying to defend the right of his children to get the food they needed; and the man who tried to steal was simply obeying the demands of an empty stomach—which are about the most imperious demands any mortal ever hears.

Assessing the rightful portions of blame in a case like this seems to call for more wisdom and understanding than most of us will ever possess.

CHANGING PICTURE

Cities have their campaigns over whom shall be made city manager.

Other groups, it seems, also fight their campaigns over the issue of personalities.

American Legionnaires report one of the questions in the state commander's race at Wichita Falls was over retention of the genial E. O. Whiteaker as state adjutant. The adjutant now is appointed by a successful campaign group, rather than elected.

And so it is said that when Commander Van Perkins and the new committee meet for the first time in Austin in October, Adjutant Whiteaker will find a new nominee for the post he has held for several years.

And this involves no criticism of Whiteaker, whom all affirm to have been one of the ablest and most conscientious executive officers the American Legion of Texas has had. Rather, it comes from the feeling that perhaps one dominant group had held on long enough, until enough other groups had gradually merged to overturn the old order of things.

Whiteaker's service at Austin, during terms of several state commanders, has been marked by devoted labor for the organization. No one man is solely fitted to hold a high lace. No pdoubt Legion affairs will be carried on well in future.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK
By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

F. A. MILLER, publisher of the South Bend (Indiana) Tribune, says:

"It is the duty of parents to so rear their children that they will understand and fully appreciate the value of money.

"Teaching them the value of money should begin when the children are very young.

"They should be made to understand that money is not easily made and should not be easily spent.

"Economy in money expenditures does not mean stinginess.

"Money always should be expended wisely.

"Part of an allowance or wage always should be saved that it may serve a good purpose in the future.

"Accumulation of wealth is commendable if done in the right way."

OLDEN

Special Correspondent.

L. V. Ford and J. A. Hunter made a business trip east of Thursday night.

Howard Adams of Roscoe visited friends in Olden the first of the week. He is the son of H. C. Adams, former agent for the T. & P. railway here, who is agent at Roscoe.

The young people of the community held dinners each night during the Methodist revival meetings. They met in the Magnolia clubhouse at 6 p. m. and the affairs were well attended. They chose sides and worked in a contest to determine which side would have the largest percentage of attendance. The "Broadcasters" won and the "Victors" gave them a dinner Monday night, Aug. 28, at the Olden Methodist church. The affair had been planned as a wintery treat, but because of the rainy weather it was necessary to hold it indoors. A nice crowd attended and enjoyed games and fun and a nice dinner. W. H. Howell was in charge of the entertainment for the evening and several novel game were features of the affair. A bean contest, and a "do you like your neighbor" game were played. In an amusing contest to select the best conversationalist, Mrs. V. O. Wyatt won in the ladies' division and Earl Cornell in the boys' division. A quartette sang some excellent numbers that were much appreciated. All who attended the affair reported it one of the most enjoyable events of the season here.

The revival meetings being held in the tabernacle by the Church of Christ were well attended. Their meetings closed with Sunday's services.

C. J. LeClaire of Electra was an Olden business visitor Monday.

W. C. McFadden, better known here as "Uncle Charlie," was pleasantly surprised Saturday, Aug. 26, at 6 p. m., when his children and grandchildren met at his home near Olden for a surprise birthday dinner, in honor of Mr. McFadden's 66th birthday. Those who attended were his daughter, Mrs. Ghent White, her husband and family; W. T. McFadden and wife, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. McFadden and children, I. M. McFadden and family. The only child unable to attend the dinner was Mrs. Frank Clark, who lives in Clarksville, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Collins and family left Thursday morning for Grand Prairie, where they visited relatives, returning to Olden Friday night.

Dorothy McCoy of Arlington was an Olden visitor Saturday.

Olden S. White of Phoenix, Ariz., visited his brother, Ghent White, and family, in Olden from Monday until Thursday of last week.

Claude LeClaire and family are visiting in Electra, guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. LeClaire.

Mr. and Mrs. V. O. Wyatt and Virgie Sue were Desdemona visitors Friday night.

Mr. Tate of Comanche and Mrs. Arlie Fullen of Olden were married Saturday night, Aug. 26, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Kuhn here. Mr. and Mrs. Tate moved into the L. S. Hamilton house, near the schoolhouse, this week. Best wishes of the community are extended them for a long and happy married life.

F. R. Richey closed his dry goods store here this week, following a successful closing out sale which was in progress three weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Richey contemplate moving to Florida.

SNAKE WAS JUST BRIAR

By United Press
 HARRISBURG, Pa.—When A. P. Myers fell over a log, while walking through a wooded section, and felt a sharp sting in his leg, he was certain that he had been struck by a snake. After persuading a neighbor to drive him to a hospital, physicians found that Myers had been scratched by a briar.

● ABOVE—CHARGING DOWN THE MIGHTY HUDSON to a thrilling finish in the long race from Albany to New York, Mrs. Florence Burnham, brilliant woman driver, set a grueling pace! Mrs. Burnham drove her hydroplane superbly over the 132-mile course... to flash by the finish line the winner... in the record time of 3 hours, 37 minutes, 53 seconds!

● RIGHT—SHE TAKES NO CHANCES with her nerves. "I've tried most of the cigarette brands," says Mrs. Burnham, "but for a long time I have been an enthusiastic Camel fan. Camels, being so much milder, never ruffle or disturb my nerves, so I smoke them all I want."

● "I'LL NEVER BE a racing champion, but I love the water. When I'm out on a boat I have a keen zest for smoking. To avoid getting my nerves upset and tasting good smoke Camels. They keep right on tiding my nerves when I go in for smoking in a big way."

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

"I never would have been able to hold my boat at record speed for hours," says Mrs. Florence Burnham, "if I didn't take every precaution to keep my nerves healthy. As a steady smoker, I have tried most of the cigarette brands. But for a long time I have been an enthusiastic Camel fan. Camels, being so much milder, never ruffle or disturb my nerves, so I smoke them all I want."

You are missing a new delight in smoking... an added safeguard of healthy nerves... if you haven't yet switched to Camels. Begin today. Your taste will quickly appreciate the mildness of Camels... and your nerves will firm your taste—bringing you the best of that Camel's costlier tobacco.

Labor Day

11—Unfair trade practices and cut-throat methods of competition are being curbed.

12—Fair price structures are being developed.

13—Governmental statistical services are being coordinated.

14—Certain labor controversies of long standing have been settled.

15—Progress has been made toward eventual adjustment of working hours to the machine gae.

The unfair trade practices which the codes propose to abolish list the giving and taking of bribes, flagrant misrepresentations and other activities which come more within the realm of outright dishonesty than under any possible conception of progressive business methods.

The universal cry against practices of this type has been encouraging to those in government life who believe that the American business man is essentially honest and not given generally to unscrupulous tactics.

President Roosevelt signed the fully we cooperate

and pledge our recovery efforts to the NRA

to help us to get us

back to work

recovery act on June 16. At the time he issued a ringing message to the American people that stands today as the soundest interpretation of the recovery act yet compiled.

On the same day the law was signed the cotton textile industry submitted the first code of fair competition as provided in the act, which opened the way for industrial self-government freed from the shackles of the Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 and the Clayton Act of 1914.

The cotton textile code was swept through hearings and to the President's desk in ruthless cutting away of shibboleths which had plagued the industry for years. Child labor was knocked out almost overnight. Wages were raised and industrial relations set-up and organized. The way was cleared for eventual elimination of mill towns.

One by one the big industries came forward—steel, lumber, oil, clothing, automobiles, bituminous coal—until 80 per cent of America's industrial life was represented before the NRA.

Coal, stubborn problem for decades, has been before the NRA all summer. Hearings began Aug. 9 with open clashes over the company union provisions of the non-union codes and nearly 30 separate sections of the industry clamoring for individual treatment.

The high spot in the coal discussions was the agreement reached Aug. 28 between non-union operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers of America clearing a path for union recognition and settlement of controversies which have led in the past to serious conflicts even bloodshed.

The most spectacular part of the summer's reemployment effort was the "Blue Eagle" drive under the NRA's plan to increase working hours.

The plan, announced the latter part of July—it was a hot, sticky night when Johnson returned from the White House to the dim corridors of the commerce department building and gave the announcement that went hurtling to the far corners of the country—has been successful in enlisting practically all of America under the "Blue Eagle."

The actual results in workers reemployed and increased payrolls is not known and will not be established accurately until a thorough statistical record has been compiled.

Many problems still lie ahead. They are tremendous problems. Among them are the checking up on recalcitrant or "chiseling" industries who attempt to gain the benefits of the national industrial recovery act without contributing an additional penny to their payrolls or improving the working conditions of their employees.

There are gays when people don't like us... do you have them?

And we've spent a great majority of our thinking years wondering why. The sun has at last risen upon our gala discovery...

So with a hey-niney-niney, and a ooglesnops bang, here 'tis. We don't like people. Do you?

Check up on your off days and you'll probably discover yourself in the role of a contortionist...

Bowing and scraping, bending and unbending, swallowing Adam's apples... in a forced and unnatural effort to be nice when old man Insideyou growls everyday slang and Sunday cuss words at the world.

Those are the days nobody likes us. We slouch and slump and gaze in bleary-eyed disappointment at an unfriendly universe... we weep and wail and blame ourselves and accuse the other fellow...

Life, puzzled reader, is not a bowl of cherries. 'Tis first base in a game of give and take... and there are lots more to follow before we slide in home.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY EVE BAYLESS, pretty assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager of Bixby's department store, marries DICK BARNES, a construction superintendent temporarily working in Lake City. Dick wants Eve to give up working but she refuses.

SAB HOLDRIDGE, an advertising man employed by another store, becomes infatuated with ARLENE SMITH, stenographer at Bixby's but she fancies herself in love with GEORGE BLISS. Bliss has been yanked by MONA ALLEN, blond copy writer.

Handsome THIERON REECE has been forcing his attentions on Eve. She and Dick attend the wedding of MARYA VLAD, fashion artist at Bixby's. Later that night Eve receives a telephone call from the Times. Copy for Bixby's advertisement is missing and Eve and Dick leave immediately for the office.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV WICK'S help Eve got the copy for the Tuesday advertisement to the Times office before the deadline, but the excitement gave her a nervous headache. Instead of being sympathetic Dick was plainly irritated by the affair, regarding it as another encroachment of office duties on his wife's leisure and home responsibilities.

Nor was he properly sympathetic next morning when Eve, feeling watched, refused to remain at home in bed.

"Don't you see," she urged, "how especially necessary it is for me to be at my desk today in case Mr. Bixby finds out that I had to call the night watchman to let me into the office last night? It would look as though I were afraid to face the consequences of my carelessness."

Dick did not answer. He left the apartment, shutting the door behind him with unnecessary emphasis.

Arrived at the office, Eve was still unable to account for the fact that she had found the copy for the Times' advertisement underneath the blotter on her desk the night before.

"I have it!" exclaimed Arlene after puzzling over the mystery. "Mona Allen!"

"But why should she do a thing like that?" asked Eve.

"Because you and I had time off to go to Marya's wedding and she had to stay here and work."

"Oh, I'd hate to think anyone could be like that!" Eve protested. "Have it your own way then," declared Arlene, "but I've got that girl's number! Let's not say anything about it to her but let her be darned careful what we let her get away with in the future. She's outguessing us all the time."

ARLENE returned to her typewriter when Mona Allen entered and there was no sound except the rapid clicking of keys until Mona left on an errand to some other department. Then Arlene looked at Eve.

"Do you suppose," she asked, "that anyone with Mona Allen's disposition would be likely to go in for fashion art? I was wondering what sort of person we will draw in Marya's place."

Eve was reading letters of application from artists who wished to be considered for the place. "I didn't dream there were so many 'foot-loose and fancy-free,'" she commented.

She selected a dozen letters and telephoned for those artists to come for an interview with Mr. Barnes. That afternoon they began arriving, laden with samples of their work. It took Barnes but a short time to decide each was unsatisfactory. Eve rounded up another half dozen the next day, but none suited Barnes.

By Thursday his temper was crisp and Eve's nerves were on edge. Twice he snapped at her in answer to questions.

"Why do I suffer such indignities?" she asked herself as she returned to her desk with lowered eyes. It isn't necessary for me to stay here and let Barnes work off his sarcasm on me."

The advertising manager's irritation had transferred itself to Eve and that night, because she was tired, she gave vent to her discontent before Dick. As she took off her French heeled slippers to put on a pair of mules she flung one slipper across the room. It was unintentional but the slipper knocked over a delicate amethyst glass perfume bottle, spilling its contents of the rug.

Dick made no comment. He wiped up the perfume and picked up the broken bits of glass as Eve burst into hysterical tears. Then he asked, "What's the matter with you, Eve?"

"I'm just tired," she sobbed. "Tired to death!"

"Um-m! I was afraid you'd get this way. Well—we'll see that this doesn't happen again."

What did he mean, Eve asked herself wildly. She was not going to give up her career just because Earl Barnes had worked himself into a frenzy over a disruption of the office routine.

THE next morning Eve left for work with a heavy heart. The jostling of other passengers on the trolley irritated her and she used both elbows to keep from being crowded too closely.

At the 55th street intersection a score or more left the car and Eve sank with relief into a vacant seat. Immediately she raised the window to let in the spring morning air and just as quickly someone behind asked her to close it because of the draft.

Eve shot the person a meaning look, then closed the window. She dutifully glanced over the advertising in the morning paper and read the news headlines. However, her thoughts kept returning to Dick and what he had said the night before after she had tossed and turned for several sleepless hours.

He had complained that she was "trying to do the work of two women." What if he realized that her ambition led her to picture herself doing the work of a man, she thought.

More and more, as the weeks passed, Eve had gained new understanding of the importance and responsibility of Barnes' position.

Sometimes she wondered at the temerity of her ambition to take his place if the disagreements between him and Mr. Bixby became irreconcilable.

Arlene mentioned the possibility more than once and seemed genuinely glad for Eve. That the same thought must have occurred to Mona and that Mona would stop at nothing to prevent Eve's promotion Eve was equally sure. She did not mention this to Dick.

A DAY came, however, when Eve approached her work with lack of enthusiasm. Her special column, after the first few weeks, had become more a burden than a pleasure. This was partly because the novelty had worn off and partly because her increased duties and responsibilities left her less time for the column.

"I haven't a single idea this morning!" she admitted to herself, and then found her entire outlook changed by a note on her desk. Barnes had taken an early morning train and would be absent for two days, leaving Eve responsible for the advertising department during that time.

Eve's spirits lifted and she went about her duties with new interest. After the early morning routine was dispatched she went to look at some rugs that had just come in. The buyer was busy when she appeared and referred her to one of the salesmen.

"George Bliss can tell you all about them," he assured her. "He knows more about rugs than anyone else in Lake City. He's read everything that's been written about them. I think he even dreams about rugs when he's asleep!"

Bliss smiled. "Yes, I'm interested in rugs," he admitted. "Why not? There's a lot to know about them and it's a fascinating subject. Forty years ago my father was rug buyer for Bixby's and every year he went abroad and selected a year's supply."

"I guess it's true that I dream about rugs. I used to dream of bazaars and caravans when I was a child and I made up my mind to be a rug buyer when I grew up. I kept that ambition in college and took every course offered dealing in any way with the countries that produce oriental rugs. And the fellows who laughed at me would be surprised to know how much of my college expenses were paid from the sale of gifts my father brought my mother from those trips."

Eve felt new respect for George Bliss after that talk. She had learned dozens of interesting things about the rugs she was to describe. After she returned to the advertising office she sat down at her desk and tried to put into words some of the enthusiasm with which George Bliss had invested the subject of rugs.

So absorbed was she that she forgot everything else and was brought back to routine matters with a guilty start when she heard someone enter the office.

WHERE HARVEY BAILEY MADE HIS ESCAPE

Here is the jail corridor and the cell from which Harvey Bailey escaped at the Dallas county jail in Texas. At the right may be seen the hole thru which Bailey crawled after sawing three bars. On the floor of the corridor is the remains of Bailey's breakfast which a trusty was bringing him when the escape occurred. Below are Jailers Young and Morrow, locked in a padded cell by the escaping convict.

Nick Tresp, jailer, was forced to accompany Harvey Bailey in his own car, and was saved by Ardmore officers who captured the convict. He and Tresp were handcuffed together.

FOR THE LOVE OF EVE By Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY EVE BAYLESS, pretty assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager of Bibby's department store, marries DICK RADER, a construction superintendent temporarily working in Lake City. Dick wants Eve to give up working but she refuses. SAM HOLBRIDGE, an advertising man employed by another store, becomes infatuated with ARLENE SMITH, stenographer at Bibby's, but she jettisons herself in love with GEORGE BLISS. Handsome THERON REECE has been forcing attentions on Eve. Unknown to Dick, Eve has been playing the stock market with borrowed money. She is certain that MONA ALLEN, blond copy writer, is trying to make trouble for her at the office. One night advertising copy fails to reach a newspaper office and Eve barely manages to get it there before the deadline. She suspects that MONA is to blame for this and also a series of minor mishaps, but lacks proof of her suspicions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVI It was Charles, the office boy, who had entered the room. He brought several copies of the home edition of the evening newspaper which he laid on Eve's desk.

She spread the pages open, hoping fervently that Mona had made no mistakes in sending out the copy. First she turned to Bibby's advertisement, studying it to see that each cut accompanied the copy it was to illustrate. Then, with more care, she read the advertisement to make sure she had not overlooked any typographical errors when she read the proof.

The next day was Saturday and the merchandise featured was a group of 700 winter coats marked down to $53.50 each. This lot included many coats that had been much higher priced originally. Barnes had written the copy himself after a consultation with Mr. Bibby and Miss Gordon, the coat buyer.

Fortunately, Eve thought, it would have been practically impossible for an error to occur. It was just then that Miss Gordon burst into the office with a copy of the newspaper in her hand, demanding to know why the proof of the coat advertisement had not been sent to her for an O. K.

"Look at that!" the buyer almost shouted, pointing to the advertisement.

"Why, what's wrong with it?" Eve asked in dismay.

"What's wrong with it? Nothing—except a mistake of $20 in the price! The price on the copy was $59.50 as plain as anything. Look at the carbon of Mr. Barnes' copy and you'll see. And here it's $39.50. It means a loss of $2000 on 100 coats. Just wait until Mr. Bibby hears of this! Why wasn't the proof sent to me for my O. K.?"

"But I did send it to you!" Eve protested. "I sent it by Charles, the office boy."

"Well, he didn't come to me. Look up the copy and you'll see I didn't O. K. it."

MR. BIBBY entered the office at that moment. He, too, carried a copy of the same newspaper, open at the offending advertisement. His face was grim. Eve clutched at her vanishing courage. No matter who was to blame for this error, she would be held responsible because Barnes was absent.

The store owner opened the door of Barnes' office. Eve and Miss Gordon obeyed his unspoken command to enter. He followed and closed the door, for which Eve blessed him. She could not bear that Mona Allen should witness her humiliation. Mona must be at the bottom of this, of course. Eve had corrected the proofs that morning and then sent Charles to take them to the buyers whose departments were represented. Before Charles' return Eve had been called to Mr. Bibby's office—a summons she felt she must obey at once.

She had given Mona explicit directions about returning the proofs to the newspaper office. Mona had blundered in some way. Blundered purposely and maliciously, Eve was sure.

When Mr. Bibby asked for an explanation Eve gave the details, briefly and frankly, making no effort to evade the responsibility.

Charles was called in then and explained that he had been unable to find Miss Gordon though he had returned several times to the department. He had asked Miss Allen, he said, if he should take the advertisement to Mr. Bibby for an O. K., and she had replied that she would attend to the matter herself as she had another errand on the fifth floor and it would be no trouble to take the proofs.

CHARLES was dismissed then and Mona summoned. She came, as Eve knew she would, looking very young and innocent.

"Oh, did I do something wrong?" she exclaimed, lifting wide, appealing eyes to Mr. Bibby. "I'm terribly sorry! You see, I waited and waited for Mrs. Rader to come back—she said she'd only be gone a half hour and I expected her any minute. Then when I was on the point of going up to your office, Mr. Bibby, as Charles had suggested I looked at my watch and saw that it was time for Mrs. Rader's lunch period. I knew she'd be back in time for that and would rather attend to the ad herself, so I thought it was all right for me to go to lunch."

"And of course," Arlene said, "big boss felt for all that—hook, line and sinker! The only reason she didn't grab the chance to go to Bibby's office was that some darned fool man called up and invited her to lunch. You'd think men would see through her wiles but they don't!"

"Well, it was my fault," admitted Eve. "I should have hurried back from Mr. Bibby's office to attend to the proofs myself. Knowing Mona as I do, I might have realized she'd make some mistake if she thought it could possibly get me into difficulties."

"What the error was to cost her, Eve could only guess.

Prominent Men On Piggly Wiggly Operators Program

Albert H. Morrill, G. C. Corbaley and Godfrey M. Lebar will be the three featured speakers at the Piggly Wiggly operators convention to be held in Chicago, on Sept. 6, 7, 8. Mr. Morrill is president of the Piggly Wiggly stores corporation, and president of the Kroger Grocery & Baking company. Mr. Corbaley is special advisor to Charles J. Brand, food administrator of the National Recovery administration, and also president of the American Institute of Food distribution. Mr. Lebar is the editor of Chain Store Age and is a nationally known figure in the chain store world.

Owners of more than three thousand Piggly Wiggly stores are to meet there to discuss business plans for the following year. It is estimated that the three thousand Piggly Wiggly stores sell more than $200,000,000 worth of groceries yearly. Speaking of Piggly Wiggly recently, Mr. Lebar said:

"In perfecting the self service idea and developing it along modern chain store lines, Piggly Wiggly has gone further than any one else in breaking the hallowed past. The self service idea has prospered not because it represents the one and only method of efficient grocery retailing, but because Piggly Wiggly brought into the field a new type of grocery store, for which there was an apparent need and which the old methods failed to meet. Piggly Wiggly covers something new. You believed there was a field for it. You had the courage of your convictions and you were willing to try out a noble experiment, and, in your case the noble experiment proved successful."

Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago will welcome the store owners at the Del Prado hotel ballroom.

W. N. Haraway, vice president of the Safeway Stores will lead a discussion on further the sales and profits in a Piggly Wiggly store.

Albert Eisner Jr., owner of the Piggly Wiggly stores at Champaign, Ill., will lead another discussion on internal management.

HOW TO RECAPTURE BEAUTY

Good looks are often a matter of good health. Sparkling eyes and a smooth complexion are outward signs of an abundant vitality.

To be charming, conserve your health. Guard against constipation. It so often brings wrinkles, sallow skins, dull eyes, pimples.

Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science has proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which helps build up the blood.

The "bulk" in this delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than abusing your system with pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Quick relief from Hay Fever

Recent investigations at a famous medical school confirm what was discovered by actual experience... that a short stay in an air-conditioned room gives relief from the symptoms of hay-fever, rose-fever and kindred maladies.

The irritation which causes wheezing, sneezing and weeping is overcome while the victim remains in an air-conditioned room. And this period of recuperation builds up a resistance which affords relief for a considerable time after the victim leaves the room.

Make this test... if you are afflicted with hay-fever or other distress caused by pollen affection and humidity, go to a dealer who sells air-conditioners and sit for a while in a room where the air is conditioned. The improvement will amaze you.
