Ranger Pastor Is Expert at Raising Irish Potato Crop

Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church of Ranger, brought eight Irish potatoes to the Times office Thursday morning, which he had raised on the farm of Tom Adams, near

The preacher said the eight potatoes weighed five pounds, three ounces, and though they were among the best of the 10 bushels raised in the patch, the majority of his spuds were about the same

"I usually save the smaller potatoes and culls for replanting, Rev. Johnson said, "but this year there were so few small ones that I won't have enough to replant.' He said that his success as a po-fact that he fertilized them. "One should use a good commercial fertilizer," he said, "or a small amount of cotton seed meal. On these I used about a tablespoon full of cotton seed meal between each potato cutting I planted and got wonderful results."

WASHINGTON, June 20. -President Roosevelt shifted to congress the responsibility for immediate action on his share the wealth tax program.

The White House indicated that while the president desired early passage of the three point program for increased tax levies on the wealth he preferred to let congress decide when the measure would be taken up. A meeting of the senate finance committee was called to vote if it would go into the broad plan at this time.

The committee voted to report the resolution extending the present "nuisance taxes" but with an amendment continuin them for one year instead of two years.

It was indicated the White House felt the tax pronouncement was one of the most significant since Mr. Roosevelt assumed office and there was no intention of rushing through immediate legis The message provides for:

Dependence Declared Upon the Soil

Byproduct of the recent conference under Henry Ford's wing at Dearborn, Mich., between farming and industry, comes a "Declaration of Dependence on the Soil and of the Right of Self-Maintenance."

This is an illuminated scroll, elaborate in form, and paraphrased from the Declaration of Independence. It re states the principle that all man's basic sustennce come from the soil, to which he must return gain to regain self maintenance, or indeed, self-government. And it restates also the familiar Ford thesis that chemistry and industry must together discover ways of using more farm product (i. e., corn into motor fuel, and soy beans into steering wheels).

All agricultural experts agree that it will be a long time before industry will be able directly to absorb enough farm products to make a dent in the surpluses that have been an increasing menace since the foreign market began to disappear. The "declaration" itself implies this when it says "it is a plan which must develop in persistent and orderly fashion over a span of years. Therein lies its strength."

It may be five, 10, 20 years before chemistry has taught industry how to use enough farm products to make up to the farmer his lost markets abroad.

Which is just why there is no real conflict between the Ford "Chemurgic" movement and the government's AAA program. The AAA recognizes that it is an emergency affair, reducing surpluses temporarily to protect the grower from a fall to starvation prices.

If and when Ford's 'Chemurgists' devise means of using vast quantities of farm products in direct sale to industry, then AAA should, according to its theory, be the first to cheer and remove such acreage restrictions as still remain.

A beginning already has been made. The acreage of soy beans in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana has grown amazingly during the past few years. And you can't get away from this: every acre devoted to soy beans in those states is just one less acre devoted to wheat, corn, and cotton, of which there is too much. Well, let's not argue about that; let's say, of which there is more than can be sold at a reasonable price.

These acreages, and the ones going into tung trees in Louisiana, are small as yet. They make no dent in agricultural surpluses. But they may, some day.

The Dearborn Declaration of Dependence probably never will rank with that other Declaration of Independence signed so long ago at Philadelphia. But it may be highly important as the years pass and the farmer, as well as other classes of people, faces the changes of the future.
