WEST TEXAS—Partly cloudy except probably showers in south-east portion Saturday.

Now that Ethiopians are letting gowns grow dirty for camouflage purposes, the war evidently is one of black shirts versus black nightshirts.

Italian Agents Purchasing Oil in East Texas

PEEPING THRU
The KNOTHOLE

With BILL MAYES

There has been a decided change in the football talk in the last few days, or rather the constant talk of last week, before the Sweetwater game, has completely died, it seems.

Last week everyone was talking football and the changes that were being made in the team, with everyone with whom we came in contact being decidedly in favor of the shakeup. The talk almost supplanted every other topic of conversation, and even the weather was mentioned on very rare occasions.

Then came the Sweetwater game of Saturday, and all football talk seemed to die, for no apparent reason. We heard no one discuss the game, which was very unusual, and no one has been talking about the Ranger-Cisco game, for the first time even in the memory of Bob Norman.

There is no apparent reason, because surely someone is interested but they just won't talk. Usually by Nov. 8 business in Ranger has about come to a standstill because no one wants to waste time that could be used in discussing football for such foolish things as business, and if anyone should go so far as to want to make some foolish purchase like a pair of shoes to keep Roscoe from going barefooted in the rain, he could not attract the attention of a clerk strong enough to enter into negotiations on the transaction. We actually went into several stores today and found customers making purchases and the clerks waiting in them.

But the change has apparently swept over the entire town. The subject seems to be taboo and we haven't even heard anyone make a remark to be almost as forgotten as the Italian invasion of Ethiopia.

We haven't been out to Lillard field, the local graveyard of forlorn hopes, in some time, but no doubt the Bulldogs are still maintaining a lively interest in preparations for the game and are working out in preparation for the conflict, and before game time Monday a frenzy of football fever might sweep the town and bring out a record crowd for the game. Who knows. At any rate it is hoped that it will.

And Abilene is bemoaning the fact that Ray Moser, leading scorer of the district in spite of the fact that he has been out of all Abilene games for nearly five weeks, has suddenly gone lame again and won't be able to play at Breckenridge. Which just about eliminates Abilene's hopes of a victory. As Earl Clark and Spud Taylor are back in top shape Abilene can see nothing but a sweeping victory for Breckenridge, with the Eagles having little hope of stopping the Buckaroos.

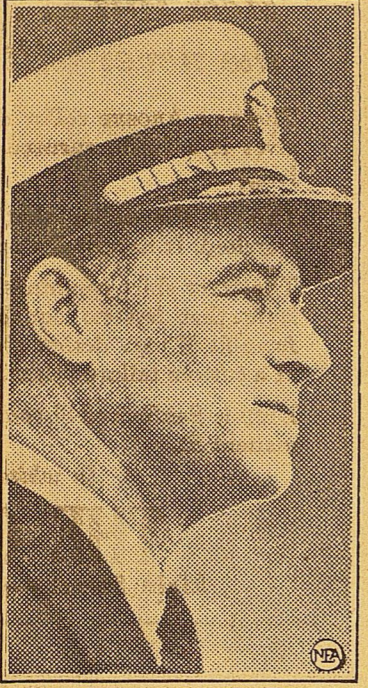

There are no reports on the situation at Cisco, but the last authentic report was that the Lobos were all in good shape and were all keyed up for a victory over the Bulldogs.

Corpus Christi Is Planning Reservoir

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas.—City council has taken an option on 10 acres for the site of a proposed 10,000,000-gallon water reservoir, at $1,000 an acre.

Work on the project, which includes construction of the reservoir and a new pipe line from Callallen to the city at a cost of $163,800, was expected to be started soon. The funds were a part of a PWA loan and grant.

Kenneth Whiting, shown here in a new picture. Whiting is the new commandant at the Pearl Harbor base. The flight will start Nov. 9.

NEW GAS TAX
IS PROPOSED
IN THE SENATE

AUSTIN, Nov. 8.—Sen. Clint Small, Amarillo, today offered the senate a compromise natural gas tax which would place a tax of 3½ per cent on the value of all gas produced and off the first sale of all gas piped into it.

The present tax is 2 per cent. A pending bill passed by the house proposed to add one-eighth of 1 per cent for 1,000 cubic feet. Small argued a percentage tax is more fair than a fixed tax because Panhandle gas sells for about half the price of South Texas gas.

The house voted 70 to 62 to re-convene in Austin Nov. 15 to hear impeachment charges against J. E. McDonald.

The present special session will end Nov. 14, by reconvening immediately no mileage fees will be allowed members.

Kingsford-Smith
Is Long Overdue

SINGAPORE, Nov. 8.—Sir Kingsford-Smith, British aviator, was many hours overdue from Allahabad, India, today and it was feared he was lost in the shark-infested Bay of Bengal.

On his last long flight from England to Australia the conqueror of oceans was seen by a fellow aviator in a storm over the bay 150 miles from shore, flames shooting from the exhaust of his plane.

A search was being conducted by ocean liners, tramp steamers, wireless and Royal Air Force planes over the area in which he was last seen fighting for life.

Kingsford-Smith said this flight would be the last of his flights which have won him fame.

The crop reporting board on Oct. 1 estimated the 1935 cotton harvest at 28,652,000 acres.

ETHIOPIANS
TO START FIGHT

By United Press
The second phase of Italy's occupation of Ethiopia neared completion today with the occupation of Makale, strategic northern point within striking distance of the road leading to Addis Ababa.

As expected, the Ethiopians did not resist. Haile Selassie's strategy is to permit the Italians to penetrate far into the wilderness of his country, hundreds of miles from their bases, before his wild warriors start their attack.

Reports say that this strategy is likely to continue for some time unless the warriors get out of hand and insist on going into battle against orders.

A period of inaction for at least a week can be expected in the north. It will be one of consolidation for the Italians, during which they will move up supplies, artillery and tanks and straighten their entire line from east to west across the country before striking southward in the third phase of the campaign.

As the push into Makale was completed a more significant drive was in progress in the northwest. A strong Italian force pushed southward along the Sudan border toward Lake Tana, the apple of Britain's eye in this country. Lake Tana forms the headwaters of the Blue Nile, which flows around into the Sudan and British territory in Egypt.

Woman Is Killed
In Bus Accident

By United Press
ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Nov. 8.—Miss Mildred Beal, 32, of Kansas City, was burned fatally and several persons were injured when a Southern Kansas Stage Line bus turned over.

The accident occurred 18 miles east of Arkansas City. The bus was west-bound.

Robert Palmer, driver, was among those who suffered injuries. Palmer said he was climbing a hill when he encountered a stalled car. Another car was approaching and in trying to avoid a collision he pulled to the right. A wheel caught in the soft dirt, he said, and the bus plunged into a ditch and caught fire.

Oyster Production
Is Being Studied

By United Press
ROCKPORT, Texas.—Oyster production on the Gulf coast will be studied intensively by the state-owned marine biological laboratory recently established here. Oyster culture is one of the coast's principal industries.

W. W. Boyd, director of coastal operations for the Texas game, fish and oyster commission, said that full equipment would be installed in the laboratory at once. Albert Collier has been placed in charge of the work.

The oyster crop was reduced greatly in the bays along the Texas coast because of inland floods. Fresh water killed approximately 25 per cent of the bivalves last spring and summer.

Texas Corn-Hog
Producers Favor
Adjustment Plan

By United Press
COLLEGE STATION.—Texas corn and hog producers clearly favor a continuance of the corn-hog adjustment program as was shown by 33,373 producers voting "yes" against a small minority of 6,417 "no's" in the corn-hog referendum held Oct. 26. E. M. Regenbrecht, chairman of the state Corn-Hog Review Board, announced.

"One of the most significant angles of the referendum was the increased interest Texas corn and hog producers had in voting over last year," Regenbrecht commented. "A total of 39,790 votes was cast this year which was more than double the number of votes cast last year. Approximately 18,000 votes were cast in 1934."

According to final tabulations, 83.8 per cent of the voting producers were in favor of continuing the corn-hog program.

Of the total votes cast 20,358 were by contract signers and 19,432 were by non-contract signers. Contract signers voted 92.4 per cent in favor of continued adjustment, the final report showing 18,785 for and 1,656 against. Non-signers also favored the program by voting 75 per cent in favor of continued adjustment as shown by 14,572 voting "yes" and 4,860 voting "no." More than 50 per cent of the contract signers cast votes.

Fannin county turned out the largest number of voters with 1,190 voting for the corn-hog program and 110 against it, for a total of 1,300.

The corn-hog referendum was held upon the single question: "Do you favor a corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1935 program which expires Nov. 1, 1935?"

The referendum was held after discussion meetings in all of the 209 Texas counties in which the program is operative. At these meetings, producers discussed the past, present and future corn-hog situation. The balloting in the referendum was in charge of the local community corn-hog association committees.

The Legion Hall will be open at 9:30 and will remain open until the annual celebration closes that night.

MAN CAUGHT IN
30-MILE CHASE
FACES CHARGES

Arthur "Bill" Newton, whom officers caught after a 30-mile chase early this week, was taken to Ballinger by Runnels county officials to answer a theft charge Thursday.

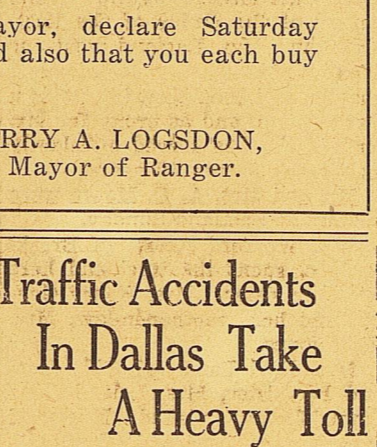

Tipped off by Winters officers, Deputy Sheriff Loss Woods and Constable John Barnes spotted Newton at Ranger Tuesday night.

Newton, 30, was in a late model car and could not throw off his pursuers in a chase which ended near the Stephens county line.

A .38 calibre pistol was taken from Newton, Deputy Woods stated.

Automobile accessories believed stolen at Winters were also found in Newton's automobile, Woods stated.

Pretty Smart

You don't have to look twice to tell that Kathleen Fitz (above), newcomer to the cast of the Broadway success "Three Men on a Horse," is beautiful; but if you assume that therefore she's dumb, you're due to be wrong. Holder of an M. A. degree in psychology formerly an instructor at Wisconsin U. and a Stanford graduate, it takes some good acting for her to fill the dumb role.

Ted Key Admits
He Is Clois Francis

By United Press
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 8.—"R. F. (Ted Key)" erstwhile star U. C. L. A. back, stood exposed today as Clois Francis Key, a "ringer," who played out his eligible college years at the Texas School of Mines.

Key emerged from seclusion to confess his identity. Subsequently his father, James Key, who insisted his son was the person in which he registered, admitted the hoax.

Admission followed reports that Key had been ruled definitely ineligible by Dean of Men Earl Miller of U. C. L. A., who had gone to Amarillo to check up on the player's high school record.

Whether Key will be allowed to remain in schools may be decided at a conference of officials today.

Traffic Accidents
In Dallas Take
A Heavy Toll

DALLAS.—Monthly reports of the Dallas traffic bureau revealed that seven persons had been killed and 114 injured in 344 traffic accidents which occurred in the city of Dallas during the month of October.

Of the 596 drivers that figured in the accidents, 76 were found to have been under the influence of liquor. All except 115 of the drivers were men.

The seven reported killed were in six fatal accidents. The traffic bureau records failed to show the death of one woman, fatally injured while standing on the side of a moving car which side-swiped another. The bureau held that the death was due to the willful intent of the driver.

Three of the persons killed were over 65 years of age. Two of the 49 pedestrians injured were reported to have been intoxicated.

Colorado Officer
Faces Impeachment

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 8.—For the first time in Colorado history an elected state official—James Carr, 32-year-old secretary of state—faced a state senate trial on impeachment charges accusing him of malfeasance in office.

Removal from office would be the penalty on conviction in the senate, where a two-thirds majority is necessary to return a verdict.

By a vote of 48 to 15 the lower house voted last night to lodge the impeachment charges against Carr.

Carr was caught under fire when William O'Toole, unemployed liquor salesman, was arrested in an alleged attempt to "shakedown" a wholesale drug firm for $3,000 in connection with settlement of a state claim against the company for liquor excise taxes.

Five Million Barrels Are Being Sought

DALLAS, Nov. 8.—Agents of the Italian government were reported today seeking to purchase 5,000,000 barrels of East Texas oil. The president of an independent concern in Dallas said no deal had been made because of a disagreement over the price.

He ridiculed the idea the proposed contract calls for 50,000,000 barrels.

"Someone got that idea out of his hat. It would take several major companies combined to purchase East Texas oil in several years under Texas rules, for production of oil.

His concern already has sold several consignments of oil to an agent who shipped it to Italy, he said. Another concern, he added, has sold 500,000 barrels of crude through an agent and the oil is being loaded into six ships at Corpus Christi for transport to Italy.

"Several of the agents are Englishmen and we have had no dealings directly with the Italian government," the oil company president said.

He said President Roosevelt's embargo on shipments to combatants had not been broadened to include oil and he saw no legal impediment to such deals.

BRITAIN AND ITALY REACH NAVAL PLAN

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Great Britain and Italy reached a naval agreement which affects naval construction and armament plans.

As a result of Anglo-Italian naval parleys, Britain has abandoned its opposition to Italian construction of two 35,000-ton battleships. The move was regarded by naval experts as ending for all practical purposes the long British campaign in favor of reducing tonnage but not gun calibres of capital ships.

The naval talks were held preparatory to the December conference to be held on Dec. 4 at the request of the United States.

The British experts intimated their hope that Italy will refrain from further construction of battleships exceeding 25,000 tons.

FRIDAY'S LUCKY DAY FOR WEE JANE WITHERS

Friday is always Jane Withers' lucky day.

She made her stage debut as the star of Atlanta, Georgia's Toyland Revue, at the age of 3 on a Friday; her first radio appearance was made on a Friday night.

Probably the most important event of Jane Withers' life occurred on Friday, Sept. 21, 1934, when she was signed for the role of the little meanie in "Bright Eyes," starring Shirley Temple. She started work on "Bright Eyes" on Friday, Oct. 5, and as a result of her performance, was signed to a long term contract by Fox Film on Friday, Dec. 7, 1934. "Ginger" was produced by Sol M. Wurtzel, directed by Lewis Seiler and features O. P. Heggie and Katherine Alexander in the cast.

"OUT OUR WAY" — By Williams

Congressman Martin Dies On the Political War Path

Representative Martin Dies of the Beaumont district is on the political road again. In a radio address broadcast from Washington he assailed "bureaucracy and extravagance in the American government." He declared that bureaucracy is the immediate state between democracy and dictatorship and that the American debt of 30 billion dollars would cost Americans twice that much when interest is paid. He called for abandonment "as quickly as possible of the artificial methods resorted to in combatting the depression." He advised that "having lived in a glass house for many decades, the republicans are in no position to throw stones at the democrats on this question." He asserted that the government was built on "individualism and competition" and said "I don't believe we can bring prosperity by destroying crops, food or cattle and I do believe that such a course will eventually lead to poverty since it is a violation of a great truth and a great principle."

Statesman Dies is a candidate for re-election. Indeed, there are Texas democrats who saw that a promotion to the United States senate would be to his liking. Well, "turn 'em all loose" and bring on the big parade. Issues are settled at the ballot box—in Texas.

Noted Texas Legionnaire Dies in the Mexican Capital

Hal G. Brennan, former state department commander of the American Legion, is dead in the Mexican capital. He was there on business. His death was wholly unexpected as he had been in excellent health. He conducted a large customs brokerage business in Laredo and maintained a branch in Mexico City. He was a native Texan and born on the banks of the Rio Grande. His father had been chief of police for many years in the wild old days of the border city. Prior to that he had been a customs officer for many years in the service of the federal government in Gulf port cities and was a terror to smugglers on land and sea.

Hal G. Brennan saw service in France. He was one of the organizers of the American Legion. He was widely known the state over and he played his part in state and national politics of his country. He was 46 and he knew his Mexico as well as he knew his native state. He was an aggressive advocate of the bonus proposition and ever active in the affairs of the Texas veterans of the World War. Really the Old Man with the Scythe is Gathering Them In.

PARIS.—The firm belief of wine growers in the influence of a comet on the approaching harvest has been stirred. Observers at Besancon and Charolles saw one recently and in the fine wine regions they are now talking of favorable consequences.

Mild and yet they Satisfy
 —how do you do that?

Well, to start with, we take tobacco from our own Southland—mild ripe tobacco with lots of natural flavor but no harshness or bitterness.

THEN AS A SECOND STEP—
 We blend this home-grown tobacco with spicy, aromatic Turkish tobaccos from across the seas. These Turkish tobaccos, you may know, have a flavor and fragrance entirely different from our own.

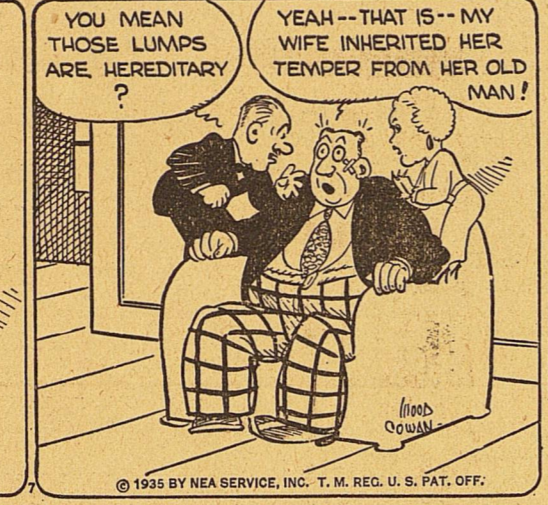

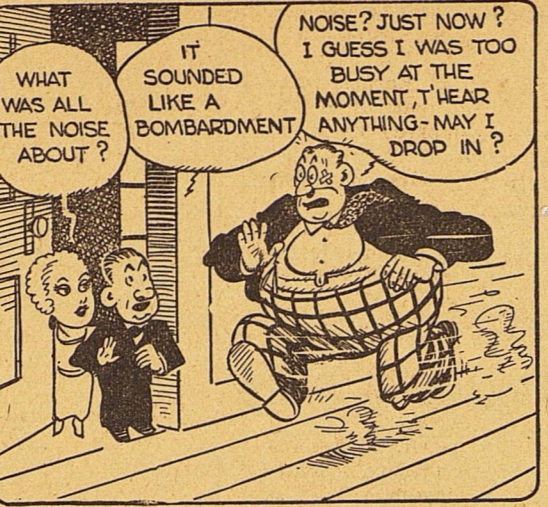

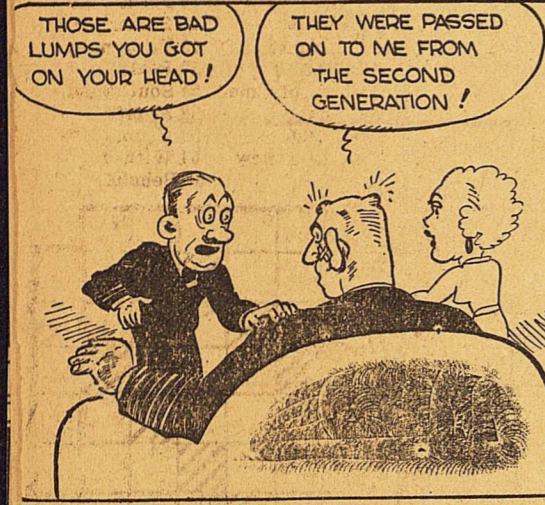

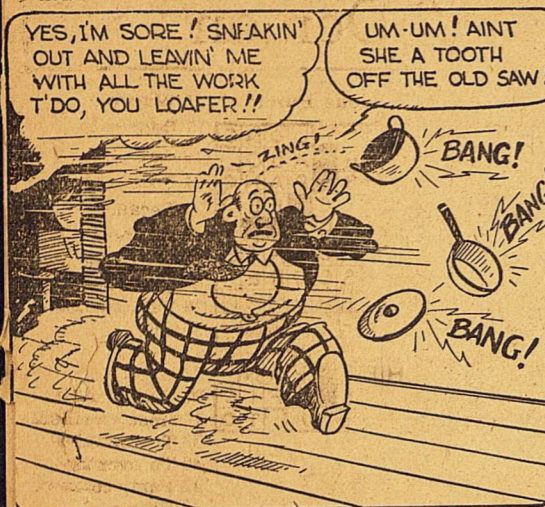

AS A THIRD STEP—
 These tobaccos are cross-blended—welded together—the best way we've found to get a more pleasing flavor and a better taste in a cigarette.

THAT'S WHY CHESTERFIELDS ARE MILD AND YET THEY SATISFY

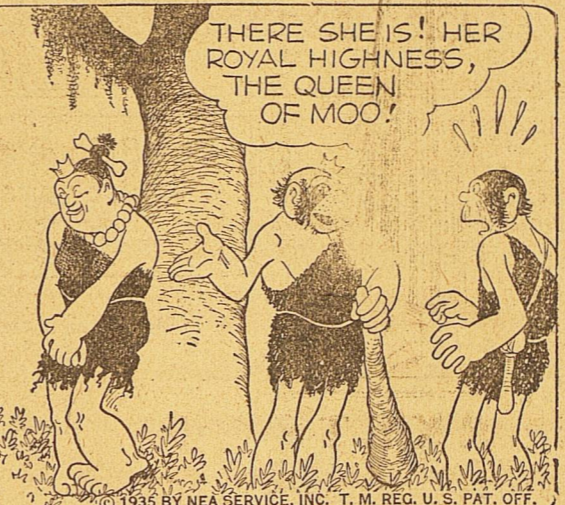

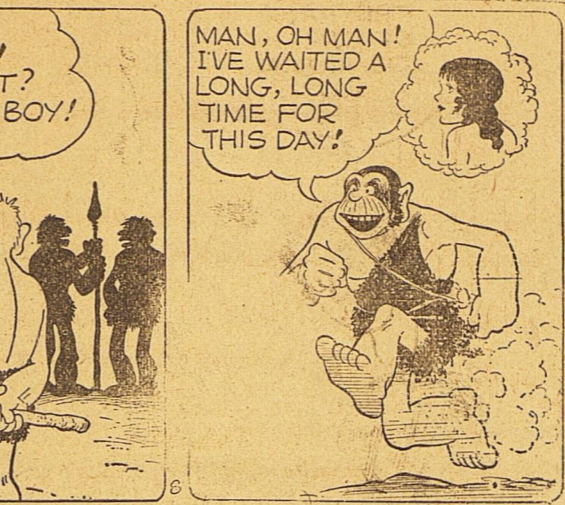

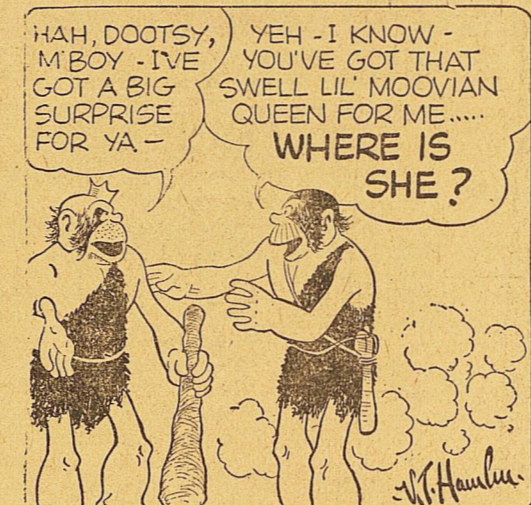

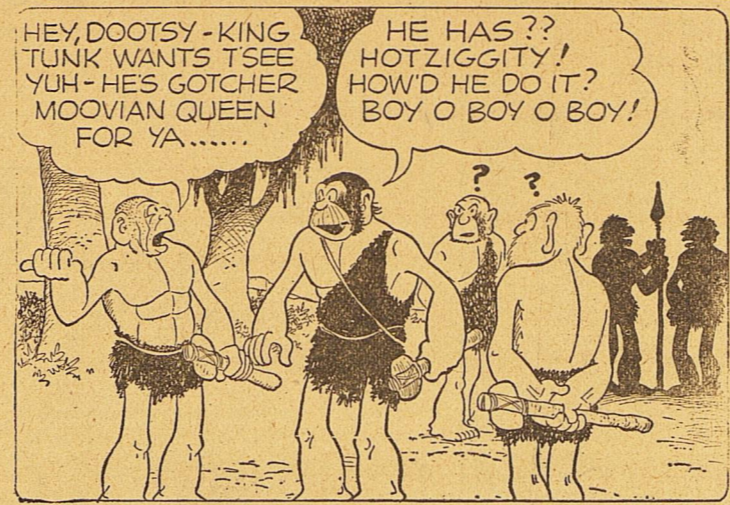

In a single day people from ten different states visited our Chesterfield factories. 8,200 visitors during the past year saw Chesterfields made.

The GOLDEN FEATHER by Robert Bruce

BEGIN HERE TODAY JEAN DUNN, secretary to DON- LD MONTAGUE, lawyer, delays her answer when BOBBY WILSON, automobile salesman, asks her to marry him. At the Golden Feather night club she meets SANDY HARKINS, a business connection of her father's. Sandy introduces Bobby to Jean to a MR. and MRS. WILSON. Bobby sells some bonds to Lewis, who buys a car. MARY GLENN, federal agent, is catching WINGY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby un- dermines to find out. Jean agrees to a secret engage- ment with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed and Larry starts a search for the robbers. Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. Larry learns Sandy was one of the bank robbers. DOC BECK- ERS, who treated one of the rob- bers, says they are the Jameses. A telephone number, written on the wall, leads the federal men to a distant farm.

"I'm just--silly," she told herself. "I've been tired and excited, and I see things wrong. And he's sick, poor boy, and not himself. I mustn't judge him so hastily." Eve Lewis came out and perched on the porch railing. She lit a cigaret, tossed the match on the lawn, and looked down at Jean with a wry smile. "This place is a hole, isn't it?" she said. Jean looked up, smiled, and nodded. "Well, we won't be here long," said Eve. "That's one comfort. The next place'll be better."

room, looking for this strange, subtly menacing person they called Red. To her surprise she found Sandy there, at ease in a big mission chair. He was dressed in gray flannel trousers, tennis shoes, and a white shirt, open at the throat. His bandaged shoulder was visible where the shirt stood open. "Well," he said, "where you off to?" "I wanted to find this man you call Red and see if someone won't drive me to Plainfield," she said. "I talked to Red about it," said Sandy. "I'm afraid you're out of luck for just now. You see, we've only got two cars here, and they're both tied up for the rest of the day. But listen--he hurried on as she started to protest--"first thing tomorrow it'll be different. Red promised--and if you don't want to take his word, I'll give you my promise. Okay?" She hesitated. She wanted to leave now--today--and yet... "Oh, what's one more night?" asked Sandy, laughing. "Nobody'll bite you. There's two married women here to chaperon you--Eve Lewis and Mrs. Engle, the farmer's wife. And I'm crippled, anyhow." His eyes danced with mocking humor. She found herself smiling in tune with him. "You're sure--about tomorrow morning?" "Of course. Come on--it's okay, isn't it?" She gave a little laugh with just a faint note of irritation in it. "I guess it'll have to be," she said. Time seemed to drag, in this farmhouse. Sandy was still weak, unable to walk with her outdoors. Lewis was absent in one of the cars, and the strange "Red" was aloof and unapproachable. Jean took a stroll across the porch--and with Eve, sat in the dusky, old-fashioned living room with Sandy, lounged aimlessly on the porch--and somehow got through the day and the evening, conscious always of a queer feeling of unease, almost of guilt, at her continued presence here. But the day did end, eventually, and the night of broken and unquiet sleep ended also; and at last it was the next morning, and she ate her breakfast at the zinc- ham-checked table in the kitchen. She went out to the porch to wait until the red-headed man came out and surveyed her dourly. "All ready, are you?" he asked. "Got your things packed, and all?" She nodded. "Come on, then," he said. She took her bag--which he permitted her to carry for herself--and fol- lowed him through the back yard, where the big blue sedan was parked. Two men were in the front seat, and Eve Lewis sat in the back. "Get in," said Red. She hesitated. Why were so many people in the car? "Come on, we're in a hurry," said Red. "We're all going for a little ride. Sandy and Wingy've gone on ahead in the other car. Step on it, baby."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV JEAN DUNN sat in an old-fash- ioned rocking chair on the porch of the little farmhouse and looked out at the fields that shimmered in the summer heat. She had been at the farmhouse just a little less than 24 hours, now, and every hour seemed to increase the queer feel- ing of dissatisfaction and uneas- ness that possessed her. To begin with, she told herself, she ought to be getting back to Dover. She had delivered the en- velope which Mr. Montague had asked her to deliver; that part of the job was finished. In addition, she had found Sandy, satisfied her- self that his accident would not have any serious consequences, and thus eased her mind on that score. She could not, then, stay on here indefinitely. She had done all that she set out to do; it was time for her to be leaving.

"This place does give me the will- ies," she added. "But I can't go," said Jean. "You can understand, Eve, can't you? I've got a job to get back to." "Oh, a job--" said Eve, gestur- ing with royal disdain. "Well, I have. And anyway, it's different with me than it is with you. You're with your husband, I'm not--Sandy and I--" Eve smiled a worldly-wise smile. "Why let that bother you?" she asked. Jean flushed, and her shoulders stiffened. "It's too bad, I suppose, but it does bother me," she said coldly.

Eve looked at her in mild sur- prise, then tossed her cigaret butt out onto the lawn. She watched it smoldering there for a moment, then she shrugged and stood up. "It's too hot to have a row," she said. She started to walk to the door, then paused and looked down at Jean. "You really mean you're going back?" "Why, of course." "Well, talk to Red about it then." She started away but Jean caught her hand. "Wait," she begged. "Eve-- there's so much here I don't under- stand. Who is this man Red, any- way? Why does everybody wait for him to decide everything. You, Sandy, everybody--it's always, 'I'll ask Red,' or something. Who is he?" Eve looked down with a strange, indefinable expression on her face. Then she withdrew her hand, forced a laugh, and said, "Why don't you ask Sandy?" and went on in the house. This was hardly the sort of inci- dent that would calm Jean's rising dissatisfaction. She hesitated, un- certain, staring out at the open fields; then she got up and went to the little bedroom she had occu- pied the night before, and pro- ceeded to pack her overnight bag. Having finished, she cast a last glance about the room, stopped be- fore the mirror to powder her face and pat her hair into shape, and then carried the bag downstairs. She deposited it in the front hall- way and then went into the living to that dump farm," he asked her petulantly, as she sat by his bed and explained her desire to return to Dover. "I've just got to go back, whether you understand it or not," she said. "Can't somebody drive me--oh, part way, anyway? To Plainfield, where I can catch a train?" "Don't know if any of the cars are available," said Sandy. "Then I'll have to take the train from Midlothian." He grinned mockingly. "There's only one train a day, in the direction you want, and it's gone already." "But Sandy! Won't you help me? I don't like this." He seemed to become penitent. "Don't worry--I'll fix it," he said, "about it. I'll fix things." On that assurance she had left his bedroom; and now, sitting alone on the porch and reviewing the conversation, she was forced to admit that she did not like the tone of it in the least. Sandy didn't seem like the sympathetic and un- derstanding sweetheart he had been in Dover, and in Maplehurst; some- thing hard and unpleasant was showing through from underneath. World-Wide Peace

On Armistice Day we commemorate an event which none of us likely to forget but as this day comes again and again with the revolving years, there naturally will be students and teachers for whom this day will have lost the vividness of an unforgettable experience.

As we recall Nov. 11, 1918, when the battlefield and training camps were filled with the best youth of the land, whose faces shone with the light of a radiant readiness to die; when we remember the glorious news of the peace which seemed to come from on high; when we say to ourselves again the great words which we then said; and then look out upon the present world, what we see is very far from what we hoped to see.

The world is not at peace, for all our fighting.

Men's hearts are not cleansed, for all the blood that was shed, for war is only a sacrifice for human selfishness—no doubt men are very selfish, but it is true, beyond all doubt that men do not give up their lives for selfish reasons. To die willingly and to die sanely is to die for something more precious than life.

The best way we can remember our dead is, after all, not to remember them, but to remember what inspired them. Their praise is beyond the reach of words; their glory cannot be increased by human speech, but they are not objects for living men to praise, but instead they are judges of what living men do and therefore inspire the question: "Are you living for the things for which we died?"

They died for justice and liberty, and to remember them in the way in which they have a right to be remembered is to deepen within ourselves the convictions that the governments and institutions of men and all their laws and arrangements are powerless to preserve the unity of justice and liberty unless they are vivified and fortified by moral energy.—(By Miss Hines).

War

(By Bert Leston Taylor)
We give our children drums to beat
Before they stand upon their feet;
We give them swords and soldiers,
And at the game of war they play;
We bend the twig of humankind,
Yet marvel if the tree's inclined.

Early we learn that might is right,
That life itself is one long fight;
This world's a battlefield we teach,
Business is war—a common speech.
We bash our brother on the nose,
Yet weep if nations come to blows.

Our poems and pictures, books and plays,
The doughy deeds of warriors praise;
Our mode of speech, our mode of life,
Are echoes of the ancient strife;
The girls dress a la militaire,
Yet—"war is a horrible affair."

EDITORIAL

Life is a picture. Paint it well. Truly, it can be said that all are artists in as far as the painting of life's picture is concerned.

The choice and blend of color is left exclusively to each painter. The finished picture is the product of the numerous colors which enter into its making.

Freedom of choice is the greatest God-given privilege extended to man. Our attitude toward this privilege either means our downfall or success.

Among the factors that enter into a life which endures and lives on are: Love, faith, hope, and truth. A life painted without the preceding abstract qualities can surely be branded as one of defeat and failure.

Let us live not for ourselves, but for others. Love God and defeat His enemies; have faith, for without faith hope is extinguished; be truthful and the truth will make us free.

The preceding words are just a few scattering yet sincere remarks,

Men of the Olden Baptist Church Are Hosts to Ladies

Several months ago the ladies of the Olden Baptist Church gave a turkey banquet in honor of the men of the church and last week the men returned the favor by giving the women a barbecue and chili supper.

The men had arranged a splendid program of several musical numbers by the Olden orchestra and by a group of colored singers from the St. Paul Baptist Church of Ranger.

Rev. H. D. Clair gave a short talk on the Baptist Brotherhood in which he said the Cisco district had the largest and best brotherhood organization in the state and urged that every Baptist church in the district organize a brotherhood.

After the musical numbers Rev. K. C. Edmonds called Rev. Blair back to the platform. Rev. Blair stated that he and Mrs. Blair had been invited to a 'possum feast, and he had prepared a poem especially for the occasion, which he read, as follows:

Here we are at Olden town
With the 'possum baked all good and brown
And taters in the gravy swimming
The men are going to feed the wimmen.

The men are very kind indeed
To give the women such a feed;
'Possum and taters and gravy
It will make you glad you came to town.

This 'possum was not caught by man,
Up a tree, or on the land;
But was chased into a hollow log
By Henry Munn's old-one-eyed dog.

There is plenty of 'possum for all who are here
That each of you may have a share;
It looks like though, the lean and the fat
Are both going to be eaten up by Mat.

Here comes a lady down this way,
I think I hear her loudly say,
Pile up that 'possum on my plate,
I look and saw that it was Kate.

Again I looked, what could it be?
This great big object that I see
Ah, shucks, it's only 'possum bones
Left on the plate of Mrs. Carl Jones.

If some lady should ask me about this feast
And ask why we didn't save her a piece,
There is only one thing I could tell her,
The 'possum was all eaten up by Della.

I shore would like to have a bite of all this 'possum now in sight,
But the only mite I've been offered
Was snatched from my plate by Mrs. Crawford.

Now Mrs. Sulpher and Mrs. Kahr
Has eaten more 'possum than the others by far,
Unless it be Mrs. Richards and Choat,
But they really thought they were eating goat.

Now here comes Ruth, the pastor's wife,
I know this is the biggest feed of her life,
She says eating 'possum would not be so stale
If she could forget his rusty tail.

But the funniest thing that I ever saw
Is watching Mrs. Maxwell chaw
On that 'possum leg so nice and rich
I've never saw the like of sich.

Now ladies if you don't like my rhyme
I'll make apology at any time
But these men all know the things are true
That I have said concerning you.

Star-Studded Film at the Arcadia Saturday

IMPOSING ARRAY OF STARS PERFORM IN RADIO COMEDY

Rarely has such a diversified and imposing array of stars from the radio, stage and screen been assembled in one picture as in Paramount's "The Big Broadcast of 1936," which comes Saturday and Sunday to the Arcadia Theatre, with Jack Oakie, Burns and Allen, and Lyda Roberti in the leading roles.

In addition to the regular cast that appears in the fun-provoking comedy are famous personalities who contribute specialty numbers which form a background to the main theme. Bing Crosby, film and radio star, Amos 'n' Andy, world famous for their daily comic black-face sketch on the air waves, Ethel Merman, star of radio and musical comedy hits, Bill Robinson, internationally known negro tap dancer, Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles, noted stage and screen comedians, the Nicholas Brothers, negro dancing youngsters, Willie West and McGinty, and Ray Noble, renowned English band leader and song writer, with his orchestra, all have important roles in the picture.

Directed by Norman Taurog, with dance ensembles staged by LeRoy Prinz, dance expert, "The Big Broadcast" is an hilarious romantic comedy, with most of the action laid against the colorful background of an Havana hacienda, and centers around the amusing experiences of two radio entertainers when a rich young countess enters their lives. Jack Oakie and Henry Wadsworth, who operate and perform their own radio station are faced with bankruptcy. Their only hope is to win an international broadcasting contest. George Burns, as a radio inventor, with his wife, Gracie Allen, brings the boys his latest invention, the Radio Eye, a television instrument. Suddenly Lyda Roberti, in the role of the countess, enters their lives and whisks both of them to her Cuban estate on her private yacht, to determine which one she wants to marry.

Surrounded by Miss Roberti's villainous henchmen, the boys make a desperate break for freedom, aided by Wendy Barrie, Miss Roberti's social secretary and companion. The high spirited, thrilling chase, packed with uproarious situations and climaxes, is broadcast by Oakie through the Radio Eye in his call for help, in which he unwittingly competes in the radio contest.

"I Wished on the Moon," "It's the Animal in Me," "Why Stars Come Out at Night," "Why Dream," "Miss Brown to You" and "Double Trouble" are the hit tunes. Ralph Rainger, Richard Whiting, Dorothy Parker, Leo Robin, Mack Gordon, Harry Revel and Ray Noble wrote the lyrics and music for the various songs.

TIM MCCOY PORTRAYS "MOUNTIE" ROLE IN "FIGHTING SHADOWS"

"Get your man!" Those are orders that mean death, but they're orders that the members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police have been carrying out for years. The danger these scarlet-coated troopers encounter in the performance of their duties is dramatized in Tim McCoy's latest Columbia picture, "Fighting Shadows," which is due at the Columbia Theatre on Saturday.

Saturday.

As Tim O'Hara, a brawny "Mountie," McCoy is assigned to investigate the machinations of a ruthless band of fur-raiders who are terrorizing trappers of the Indian River country. The last time Tim was in that territory he had run into difficulties with Brad Harrison, the brother of Martha, the girl he loves. Brad still believes the trooper stole a certain silver fox, and is his worst enemy.

When Tim arrives on the scene to see justice done, he is hampered by Harrison. Determinedly overcoming the obstacles presented by the dangerous mission, the "Mountie" follows the culprits until he apprehends them and solves the mystery that has surrounded the case.

Geneva Mitchell, Ward Bond, Robert Rlen, Si Jenks, Otto Hoffman and Edward Le Saint play supporting roles. David Selman directed from a story and screenplay by Ford Beebe.

NEGRO DANCER DOES FAMOUS TAP ROUTINE

Bill Robinson, famous negro tap dancer, won a new hat as a result of a bet with Jack Oakie during the filming of the Paramount comedy, "The Big Broadcast of 1936," Saturday and Sunday at the Arcadia Theatre.

The comedian bet Robinson he couldn't dance for one hour straight without repeating a routine. Robinson, who gets several thousand dollars for a single performance, danced for one hour with Oakie as his one man audience. After he won the bet, Oakie discovered that Robinson had

Worse than the demand for preparation for pension applications, which alone might be good cheap campaigning, they fear the never-ending enmity of those who fail to get the pensions.

Pensions Bring Up Some Novel Ideas

By United Press

AUSTIN.—Old age pension discussion, particularly the talk of what to do with men placed on the shelf, has led to the intriguing suggestion that the state constitution be changed to raise the age requirement for governor and members of the legislature. The suggestion is to require that they be men or women who have acquired the wisdom and experience of 65 years. Now the governor may be only 30; a legislator is qualified as to age at 21.

There is one present senator who could qualify if the age were raised to 65—John Hornsby, Austin. His activity, energy and quickness in debate answers the object that a legislature of men 65 years old would be inert. The house dean is Dr. A. Crossley, Linden, who is 70. Representative J. W. Adamson, Denison, would not be barred by a 65-year minimum age rule. W. W. Fitzwater, Potham, also is over 65 and by the time there is another regular session Representative H. R. Stovall, Waxahachie, will be 65.

Lawyer members of the legislature dread going home after the pension session. They know that when they re-enter their law offices they will find the offices filled from morning to night with old
