U. S. Might Try Plan of Gen. MacArthur

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who quit being chief of staff for the U. S. army to become military adviser to the Philippine government...

Under this plan, the Filipinos will spend $8,000,000 a year for 10 years. For this money they will get a fleet of small, fast, coast-defense torpedo boats...

Some of his remarks on the uses of this military outfit are worth listening to. For the general starts by saying that his plan "completely negatives any possibility of employing the army in aggressive action."

What the Filipinos get in the way of a fighting machine will have to be used solely on the islands and in their immediately adjacent waters.

But, adds the general, for home fighting the machine will be incomparable. Indeed, he believes that it will make the Philippines as nearly impregnable, from a military standpoint, as any nation can hope to be.

Neither blockade nor invasion, he is confident, could prevail against it.

Now, if the general knows what he is talking about—and his reputation is that of an exceptionally brilliant soldier—it might be a smart idea to call him back to America and tell him to cook up a similar scheme for his native land.

For the general would seem to have hit upon an idea that a war-frightened world ought to welcome with open arms, to wit: a defense armament that can't be used offensively.

The big trouble with the world armament race is the fact that no such device is at present available.

Nations A and B, let us say are hereditary and traditional enemies. Nation B, having been invaded twice within living memory by Nation A, builds a huge army and navy to attend to things if a third invasion should develop...

But the trouble is that, having built this army and navy, there is nothing in the world to keep Nation B from turning around and using it to invade, harass, and otherwise bedevil Nation A.

So Nation A must build to meet this menace; and Nation B, in turn, must build some more to insure its own security; and Nations C, D, and X must prick up their ears and build to protect themselves against both Nations A and B—and you have as vicious and self-accelerating a spiral as the mind of man can imagine.

If perfect security can be gained in the manner General MacArthur proposes—by supporting a force which is effective only on defense—the world would like to know about it.

It might pay our own government to look into the matter—and, if it pans out, to take a leaf or two from the general's book.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Democrats are all set to cut loose on Governor Landon at Philadelphia.

Admitting that Jim Farley's first blast at the Republican candidate was somewhat unfortunate—at least in its effects—they insist they have a tale to unfold which will assure Alf's permanent residence on his beloved prairies.

Effort will be made to paint Landon, in the words of one party strategist, as a "hypocritical opportunist" who has no fixed principles, but who is willing to abandon or espouse any position when it will aid his political advancement.

A booklet entitled "Landon, the Man Nobody Knows," will serve as a textbook for New Deal orators. For months, ever since it became evident that the governor would be nominated, one of the Democratic national committee's bright boys has been plowing through Landon's record for material.

HERE are some sample charges: Landon's message to the Cleveland convention called for state minimum wage laws even if a constitutional amendment proved necessary.

Landon came out at Cleveland for sound currency and the gold standard. But during the Farm Holiday hysteria of 1933 he joined with other western governors in urging payoff of the Fourth Liberty Loan in greenbacks.

Landon also told the convention he stood for a drastic federal civil service law. But Kansas also has a civil service law, passed when Senator Capper was governor, and it is now defunct because Landon hasn't asked for appropriations for it or tried to carry it out.

FIRST tentative draft of the Democratic platform, recently passed around under the heading "Strictly Confidential," ran true to the worst platform traditions of stodge, evasion, and timidity.

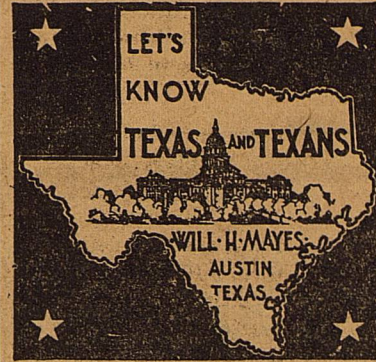

Some hope for a bolder and more statesmanlike document arose from the fact that the draft was certain to be changed considerably and that practically everybody in Washington seemed to be working on one or more pet planks which he hoped to get tangled into the statement.

The preliminary draft, however, was largely a spectacle of the administration patting itself on the back and promising, rather cautiously, to go right ahead with its various programs for creating prosperity and making everybody happy.

NO mention of a possible constitutional amendment was included and the idea was advanced that necessary social and economic reforms can be achieved within limits of the Constitution.

Chief difference between it and the Republican platform was that it recommended federal as well as state wage, hour, and child labor legislation. (Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc.)

Home Building In South Gains

WASHINGTON.—Single-family and two-family homes were largely responsible for the increase in home construction during March and April...

two-family houses accounted for 80 per cent of all dwelling authorized for construction during the two-month period. Construction of apartment buildings to house three or more families amounted to only 20 per cent as compared with 33 per cent for the corresponding period last year.

Every district in the country, the board reported, showed an increase over the corresponding period of 1935. Small home construction in cities of 10,000 population and more was reported better during April than any month since May, 1931.

WPA COMPLETES DIVERSIFIED PUBLIC IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM IN TEXAS

(A) Complete repairs of flood damage to the Lake Trammell dam, vital link in the water system of the city of Sweetwater, were effected by WPA laborers. (B) El Paso's beautiful new municipal golf building was recently completed by WPA workmen as part of the project which provided thorough improvement of the city course. (C) A hangar for one of the 12 airports being built by WPA in Texas is seen here in the process of construction at Fort Stockton. (D) This attractive, native-stone concession house is one of several permanent buildings included in the project which improved 194 acres to create a park at Lake Brownwood, four miles from the city of Brownwood. (E) Workmen spread rock on the first course of asphalt in the Lubbock street-paving program. (F) This concrete low-water bridge, constructed by WPA workmen, now spans the Nueces River ten miles southwest of Uvalde. (G) Chillicothe's new municipal swimming pool provides a recreational center highly popular with citizens of the town. The pool is 60 by 125 feet in size. (H) This handsome meeting house and its surrounding cottages comprise Buffalo Courts, attractive and comfortable dormitories for students at West Texas State Teachers College at Canyon. Low rentals charged by college authorities for these accommodations make attendance possible for many youths who otherwise might be denied educational advantages. (I) A stretch of newly-constructed sidewalk enhances the attractiveness of McAllen streets due to WPA efforts.
