The 'System' Grinds Out A Better Life

Man doesn't live by the things he has, but by the adventures of his spirit and the growth and activity of his mind. Nevertheless, his progress through this vale of tears is made a good deal easier if he has enough material possessions to cushion the rough places.

All this comes to mind through reading a report by a statistician who was ordered recently to round up some figures for an arbitration board considering street railway-men's wages in a middle western city.

The statistician—Howard Whipple Green—one of the best in the business—had checked through the households of the employes to see whether they are now well paid or otherwise. And the interesting part of his report is the assertion that possession of a radio is no longer an indication of a family's economic status.

It used to be so. The family that owned a radio definitely had passed that border line which separates comparative poverty from comparative ease. But now, says Mr. Green, 80 per cent of all families own radios. As an indicator, the radio is no longer useful.

Just now, Mr. Green adds, possession of a mechanical refrigerator is a pretty good indicator. If you own one, you're fairly comfortably fixed; if you don't, you aren't. But even that, he warns, won't last long; mechanical refrigerators will presently become as common as radios, and the statisticians will have to look for some other notch on their yardsticks.

What Mr. Green is really giving us, of course, is a close-range look at a rising standard of living; a standard that seems to have gone on rising right through the depression—for certainly this 80 per cent ownership of radios had not been attained in 1929.

It is a process that has been going on for a long time, and will continue to go on for a long time to come.

It is not very many years since ownership of an automobile definitely marked a man, not merely as "comfortable," but as actually well-to-do. Industry went hunting for profits, found them—and today, literally, almost every-one owns an auto.

Then, as Mr. Green points out, there was the radio. Now it is so widely owned that it signifies nothing. The mechanical refrigerator follows it, and Mr. Green foresees a similar issue. It is easy to think of other things—electric lights, telephones, central heating, bathtubs.

These aids to pleasant living weren't handed down from above by some all-wise and socially-minded government. They came out of American industry in the normal course of industry's hunt for profits.

Today's ordinary man owns, as a matter of course, things which would have stamped him as a rich man a generation ago. He owns them because that much-derided social phenomenon, the American system, has a way of grinding them out for him.

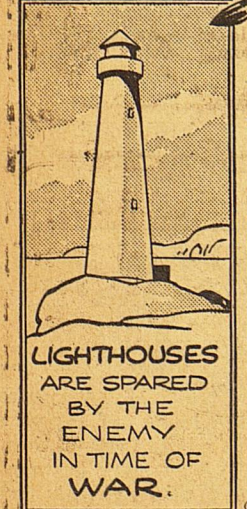

And when you add them all together, you find them making for an easier, happier life.

Among articles left behind in New York subway cars was a radio set, which is an idea.

Solon Claims Allred As His "Constituent"

By United Press
AUSTIN.—Rep. Albert G. Walker, candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives, boasts that the Governor is his "constituent." Walker's legislative district includes Wichita Falls.

where the Governor maintains his legal residence and votes. The governor, however, is backing Rep. Robert Calvert, Hillsboro, for speaker. Walker was proposed two years ago as a compromise when the House was closely divided in the race between Speaker Coke R. Stevenson, Junction, and Calvert. The Governor was supporting Calvert that time, too. When it looked like a deadlock, suggestion was made that Walker would be a good compromise. The Governor remained firm in support of Calvert, who lacked 12 votes of the number case for Stevenson.

TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
KAY DUNN, pretty young nurse, is hired as a stewardess on Overland Airways and, the same day, meets TED GRAHAM, veteran pilot who flies the trans-Pacific route.

Kay is assigned to the western division of the service. MONTY BLAINE, apprentice pilot, pays her marked attentions. Monte is daring, romantic, but Kay is more interested in Ted. She and DICKIE, Ted's adopted 7-year-old son, become close friends.

Ted returns from a trip to the Orient and takes Kay to dinner. Later they have a long talk in which he explains that he thinks marriage to be successful, must be planned scientifically, just as a plane flight. Kay does not agree to all this, but when he asks her to marry him, she says yes.

They plan their honeymoon, an air trip to the Orient.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

KAY and Ted were married a few hours before the Mariner took off for the trip across the Pacific. She wore a dark-green sports suit, severely tailored, and a close-fitting green hat that showed her red-gold curls most becomingly.

With its silver hull dashing up spray, the Mariner skimmed over the surface of the water, bouncing once, before taking to the air. Then the ship began to climb. It soared over the towers of the San Francisco Bay bridge and a few minutes later had passed over the Golden Gate and was out over the blue Pacific. Honeymoon flight!

Some of the passengers slept, but not Kay. She was too excited, too thrilled with the mere thought of the trans-oceanic flight. Twice during the long night Ted took his regular rest period in the compartment to the rear, where the sleeping quarters of the crew were.

Towards dawn he took her up front with him to watch the sun rise up out of the ocean. He showed her the flight and navigation instruments on the board. In the chart room were Ted's and the navigation officer's desks. The rising sun was heralded by a glorious dawn in violet, clashing colors—purple and green and amethyst. It was the most thrilling sight Kay had ever seen. She sat at Ted's side, holding his hand and watching the sun rise on the first day of their marital happiness.

THEY had breakfast together in the chart room, and because it was their first breakfast, the steward had outdone himself. From the refrigerator came fruits from all the tropical islands on the route. As they tasted them Kay experienced all the glamour of the trans-Pacific flight.

Later, pridefully, Ted showed her the whole ship, from cockpit to the storage rooms aft. Particularly, behind locked doors in the chart room, he showed her the gyropilot on which he was working, which promised to revolutionize long distance flight. He was immeasurably proud of this instrument he was developing. She almost resented the loving glances he bestowed on this robot, which, when completed, would be capable of controlling and flying the ship for hours at a stretch without human hands.

He had to guard the precious secret from prying eyes. To Ted possibility of its theft seemed to be the only dangerous feature of the trans-Pacific flight, and he took great pains to guard against such a calamity.

They had comparatively fair weather over the entire course, and towards noon on this same morning, 16 hours after leaving San Francisco, came down in the harbor at Honolulu.

They took a taxi to a hotel on Waikiki Beach, under the shadow of the world-famous Diamond Head. They lunched outdoors, and then lay on the sand in front of their beach cabin, watching the Hawaiian boys on the surfboards.

Kay pinched her nose to be sure it was all true. At this time yesterday she had been dressing for the wedding ceremony. Less than 20 hours later here she was reclining on the beach at Honolulu, almost 3000 miles away!

At this time tomorrow she would be lounging on that coral atoll of Midway, listening to the screams of flaming, tropical birds. On the same day she would see the sun set in a scarlet blaze over the far side of Guam. The third day of her world party over the grim forests of Corregidor in Manila Bay.

She lay on the beach at Honolulu, dreaming a million dreams.

ALL afternoon they stayed in the cabana, lounging on the sand and listening to the strumming of the haunting music on the terrace up there.

"Ted, it's all unreal!" she murmured sleepily. His blue eyes looked out over the Pacific. "To me the flight is intensely real," he said. "And now that you are here, at my side, sharing the experience, my happiness is complete. You and Dickie are my world now."

For a long time Ted was silent. She went on talking, though Ted knew she was sleepy. He stroked her hair gently, then her forehead.

"Ted, when I feel your touch I'm completely at ease. But when you take your hands away I have the most horrible sense of loneliness. Already I am jealous of the trans-Pacific flight. Lying here on the sand, at your side, I know there will be long weeks when you'll be away—sometimes for as long as six weeks at a time! I don't see how I can endure it."

HE laughed. "Darling!" he said. "With your eyes closed—"

"No, don't tell me pretty things," she said. "Not now. I want you to know that I will be lonely at times. Terribly lonely. Ted, I love you so!"

He scooped at her fears. "But you'll have Dickie!"

She opened her eyes, watched his face for an instant. "Yes, I'll have Dickie," she said. "And when you come back each time we'll be there waiting for you, Dickie and I."

"And there are gay parties ashore," he said.

"I shan't enjoy parties when you are not there to share them," she said.

"But when I'm home we'll have good times together. Think about that. Let's not talk of the future; let's talk about now. It's our honeymoon!"

"But we can see the future through such a marvelous perspective now," she said. "There's a roselike glow about it all. I want to talk about the future. In my mind I want to plan. I want to be able to make things as they come, and know them. I want you always to love me as you love me now."

Ted couldn't find anything to say to that. He leaned over and kissed her forehead.

"Sleep," he warned. "And when you wake up we'll go to tea where there are a lot of people to see you. I want them all to see what a lovely wife I have."

She said drowsily, "No, Ted! I don't want to go where there are other people. I simply want to be alone with you."

He said, "Darling!" and watched her fall asleep.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Former Senator Jim Watson of Indiana, a power here for many long years but finally tossed out by the voters and reduced to odd jobs of lobbying here, along with desperate attempts to maintain leadership in the Indiana Republican machine, has been called "a lovable old humbug" and many other names less or more complimentary.

No one, however, ever said Jim couldn't tell a good story and even many of those who detested his political attitudes and actions were fond of him for his friendly geniality. Watson always insisted that he was a thorough "reactionary" and no one disputed him. Some admired him for his frankness.

Now Jim has written an autobiography entitled "As I Knew Them," and in spite of all the things that are glossed over and doubts whether this is a major contribution to political history, Jim's book contains a swell collection of anecdotes and for that if for no other reason is an enjoyable tome. Many of the yarns are already famous. Others are not and some of the latter are produced herewith.

JIM's first political training came at DePauw University, where he fought with Albert J. Beveridge "like a couple of cats" and became president of the Plato literary society. On the eve of a close Plato fight he discovered the opposition had taken five of "our boys" to Eel River hunting and driven away, leaving them there.

That meant defeat for Jim, so he went to Emmons Vest, a student preacher who belonged to his faction and asked:

"How long do you think you can pray?" Emmons said.

"But when I'm home we'll have good times together. Think about that. Let's not talk of the future; let's talk about now. It's our honeymoon!"

"But we can see the future through such a marvelous perspective now," she said. "There's a roselike glow about it all. I want to talk about the future. In my mind I want to plan. I want to be able to make things as they come, and know them. I want you always to love me as you love me now."

Ted couldn't find anything to say to that. He leaned over and kissed her forehead.

"Sleep," he warned. "And when you wake up we'll go to tea where there are a lot of people to see you. I want them all to see what a lovely wife I have."

said he could pray indefinitely, Jim explained. At the opening of the Plato meeting he called on Emmons to pray. DePauw had great respect for prayer, so no one dared interrupt.

"Every time the door opened, Vest looked up, and if it was not our boys coming in, he ducked his head and went at it again. He prayed for an hour and a quarter, till the boys rushed in all bedraggled and covered with mud. It was my first filibuster."

It's typical of Jim Watson when he observes that subsequently, as a member of the Methodist board of trustees in his home town, he rewarded Vest by going to the conference to get him assigned to Rushville "to do our preaching."

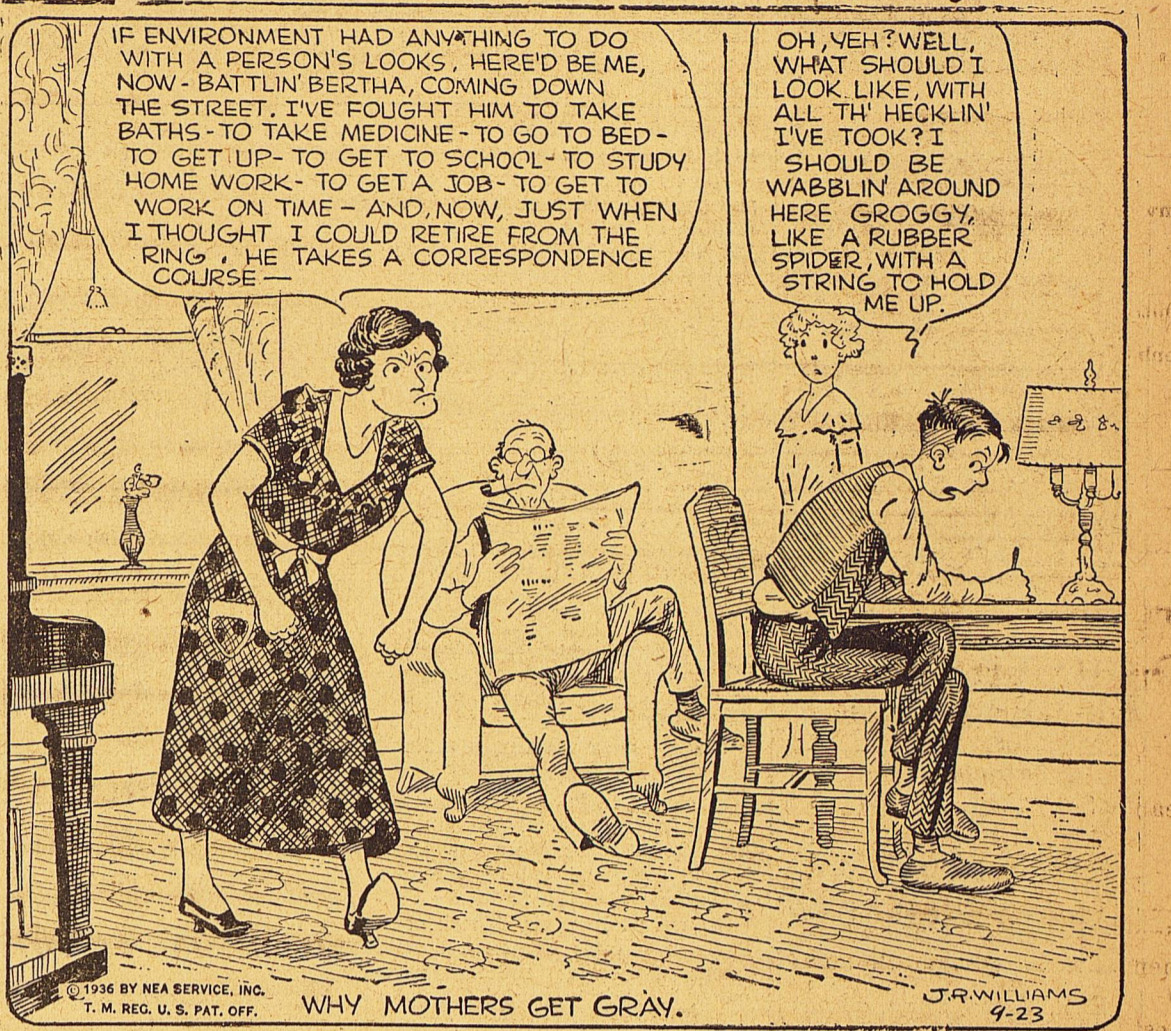

WATSON'S first campaign was at Andersonville. "I took off my coat, vest, collar and necktie and proceeded to orate for a couple of hours." Jack Ross, a country lawyer, presided and on the 14-mile buggy ride home Jim asked him if he had done well. Ross was only mildly enthusiastic.

"Jack, did I miss anything?" "Yes, Jim, you did." "What was it?" "Well, Jim, you missed two damned good places to quit."

"SENATOR JOE BROWN" of Georgia expressed it by saying that the first couple of months he was a senator he looked around with awe on the assembled senators and wondered how in the world he had managed to land in such company. After that, for the next three months, he looked around at them and wondered how the other fellows had ever got in the Senate. And after that they all looked around at one another and wondered how on earth they were all going to stay in the Senate.

Q. Is there any recent precedent for a "lame duck" session of the Texas Legislature, and why the name? K. K.

A. California leads with 3,306,000 gallons per year total capacity, Texas following with 2,736,000 gallons and Oklahoma next with 2,143,000.

Q. What was the cost of the Texas State building at the Centennial Central Exposition? J. J.

A. It is a permanent structure costing $1,000,000 and an additional $200,000 for decoration and furnishing. It is known as the "Texas Hall of State."

Q. What is the total acreage of the Texas prison farms, what per cent is in cultivation and what profits are derived from the farms? B. K.

A. Total acreage is 73,153 acres, of which about 60 per cent is cultivated. Farm products, except cotton, are all used in the prison system or by State eleemosynary in-

NEW YORK.—For better or worse, Cavalcade is back to the races.

For more than two years, Bob Smith has been persevering in what must be a heart-breaking effort to get a great 3-year-old 1934 back into racing condition. Any number of times Cavalcade seemed ready to race and win, but each time a recurring hoof injury once more laid him in the shelf.

In 1934, Cavalcade won six of seven starts and earned more than $111,000, winning among other big numbers, the Chesapeake Stakes, the Kentucky Derby, and the Classic Stakes.

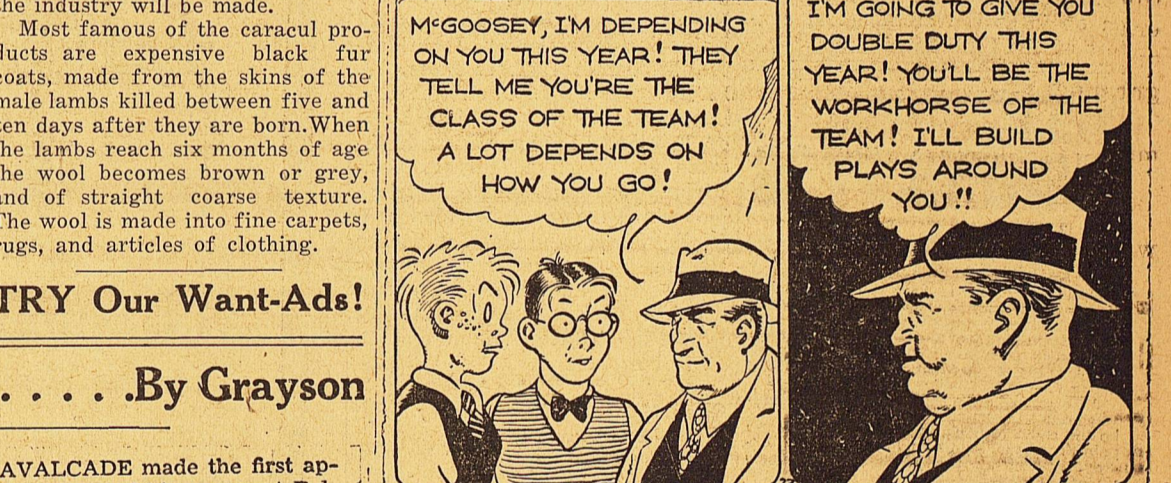

He ran his opposition into the ground in each start. But in the Preakness, a week after his Derby victory, his stablemate, High Quest, defeated him by a nose in a finish that brought nothing but criticism to Mack Garner, his aging jockey.

After his victory in the Classic, Cavalcade was shipped to Saratoga, where it appeared that he would sweep the boards clean. It was while he was training there that Lane's son would not race again for many months.

At the first sign that Cavalcade wasn't in the best of health it was announced that the Brookmeade Stable star would be pointed for the first running of the Santa Anita Handicap. The Brown Bullet was shipped to the west coast amid a great fanfare of publicity. Cavalcade trained phenomenally, according to reports.

But don't always believe reports. He was forced into retirement a few days before the race.

CAVALCADE made the first appearance of his career at Belmont Park in the spring of 1935. Head Play defeated him in an allowance race in which Cavalcade was not tightened up sufficiently to cope with the brilliant Mason horse.

Cavalcade's next start was in the Suburban against Head Play and Discovery. He lost his rider and was injured at the start.

Once more Smith sent the brown horse to California to prepare for the rich Santa Anita Handicap. Once more the horse went wrong.

The amazing part of it all is that Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane kept her aging champion on the training lists. Cavalcade might have gone into the stud two years ago with a reputation as one of the greatest.

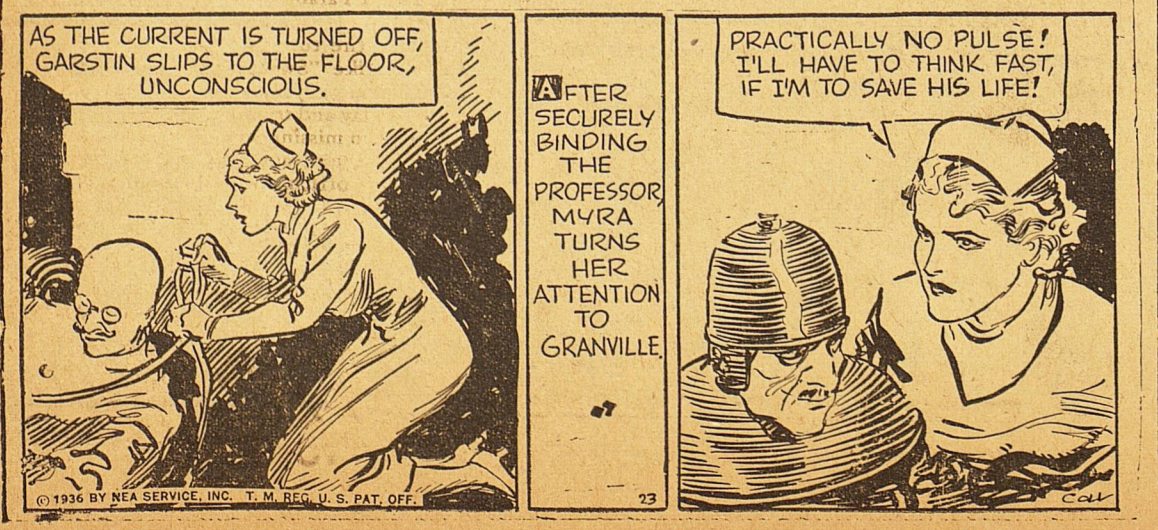

In bringing Cavalcade back the Brookmeade Stable had to risk the tarnishing of a particularly bright record.

SMITH says that Cavalcade once more is ready to race. Granting that he reaches his old height, what has he to look forward to? His only competition can come from a race out of Discovery and the 3-year-old Granville. The only remaining races of any importance this season are the Manhattan Handicap and the Jockey Club Gold Cup, neither a rich fixture.

Brookmeade Stable might be looking ahead to a third shot at the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, plus other rich California specials.

Victory in two or three of these might repay the sacrifice of the last years at stud.

Smart Fashions Displayed at Style Revue by Joseph Store

A new version, a smartly planned one, brought a glamorous coronation of fashion in view to those attending the Style Revue at the Recreation building Wednesday evening, presented by the D. Joseph Dry Goods department store, and sponsored by the women of First Christian church. Typical of the exhilarating new ideas, created for fall and winter, from the first flash one can readily see they are going to prove perfectly fitting for each individual.

There is a marked distinction in the garments for 1936-37, materials well constructed, durable and most of them poisture proof. Snappy lines and becoming ones from our distinguished matrons to the misses' model. A pleasing array of sizes, another splendid feature. All of these clothe hints and more were strikingly offered during the promenade.

A clever little opening scene found Mrs. Leslie Hagaman at home in her living room newly and beautifully furnished from choice selections from the furniture department at Joseph's. A rich combination of pale green and gold formed the living room arrangement, flowers enhanced the color beauty, made up primarily of asters, lilies and marigolds, compliments from the Ranger Floral company. Mrs. Hagaman welcomed a caller, Mrs. Hal Huxler, whose visit in early evening was for the purpose of inviting Mrs. Hagaman to the style show. After a colorful chat centering about the furniture the two were off to the show, both attractively frocked in the latest garments, with smart accessories.

The program proper offered the following numbers: music by Ranger high school orchestra under the direction of band director J. N. Crawford. Welcome address, J. E. Meroney; showing of children's wear, Nelly Don Parade, dance by Dorothy Henry and Margaret Watt, with Mrs. Vera Watt at the piano. Children's coats, ladies coats and suits. Duet by Gaston Dixon and Arthur Deffebach; street and sport wear promenade; dance, Cecelia McDowell, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Welton Webb; dress-up street dresses and fur coats; quartet, Fern Allen Meroney, Fern Taylor, Alice Henry and Betty Sue Blanton, and evening dresses.

The entire selection of garments were beautiful, irresistible, but seeing is believing, and the change is so emphasized only a visit to the departments will enable you to fully appreciate their beauty, and closer inspection of their quality a feature of importance.

The stage setting harmonized completely with the many color tones rounding out a delightful entertainment, one of the most successful and stunning to have been staged by Joseph.

Those contributing to the show with their individual grace and smartness were: Misses Marguerite Adamson, Agnes Brown, Estelle Williams, Doris May, Daisy Woods, Alla Rae Kuykendall, Katherine Jane Conley, Jane Martin, Mesdames Herbert Suits, W. L. Downtain, M. O. Atteberry, Harold Getts, and Virginia Keen of Eastland. Young Misses Katharine and Marilyn Murray, Vera Vivian Cooper, Lonelle Herring, Monetta Fontaine, Waddad and Adelle Hassen, and Masters Anece Hassen, Lester Clemmer, Jimmie Nottingham and Jack Thomas, and Messrs. Foy Saunders, Arthur Deffebach, Gaston Dixon and R. V. Robinson.

Open House at Montgomery Wards Entertains Host of Visitors

The open house held at Montgomery Ward and company Wednesday night offered a cordial welcome to a host of visitors, whose visits to the different departments proved entertaining and at the same time offered a large number of enticing suggestions, not only for home improvement but clothes for personal appearance.

A special dress was in evidence about the entire store, and the windows were of rare attraction with displays well in keeping with the season and trend of fashion for the fall and winter.

Upon entering the store and in coming out an added glance was given the windows, particularly the center one, displaying a Southern California living room suite. If its true colors have their individual effect upon different persons, there's no excuse to be found there, they are smoothly and harmoniously blended and reflect comfort and smartness. The radios and stoves are handsomely lined and the quality is a high-light.

Guests were free in their praise of the complete furnishings, and popular prices which prevail. The evening from 7 until 10 entertained many, a great many Rangerites as well as visitors from out-of-town.

Mineral Wells Meet Discussed District meeting of the Woodman circle chapter to be held in Mineral Wells Friday, October 9, was given full discussion Wednesday afternoon at the session of Julia Alexander grove No. 1954 when the program was presided over by the guardian, Mrs. Edna Williamson.

Ten members were present, and their attention was called to the next meeting, which has been planned to be an interesting one.

Musical Program to Open P. T. A.

Cooper School Parent-Teacher Association announces the opening of their year's work with a social hour, on Friday evening, September 25, at Cooper school auditorium. Mrs. J. B. Robinson will preside. Mrs. Carl Clemmer will deliver an address of welcome. H. L. Baskin will introduce the Cooper school faculty.

Quartet selections will be rendered by Betty Blanton, Fern Allen Meroney, Fern Taylor and Alice Henry. A musical reading will be given by Miss Conley. Miss Evelyn Long will render a violin solo.

A dialogue will be given by Mrs. L. E. White and Mrs. W. W. Jarvis.

The officers of the organization invite and urge all parents to attend this meeting.

Comings and Goings

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Surbrook are in Dallas, where they will attend the flower show which is attracting much attention at Dallas this week. They are guests of Mrs. Surbrook's mother.

Cows' Stomaches Often Hold Some Form of Treasure

By United Press

FORT WORTH — Fort Worth packing plant workers keep their interest whetted by the 'treasures' they often find in the stomachs of slaughtered cattle.

Cows, it seems, have a penchant for picking up stray jewelry, nails, and money in their mouths. The most recent 'find' was a Masonic lodge pin inscribed, "Winters, Texas." An employe of the plant wrote the scribe at the Winters lodge, found that the pin had been lost in 1934, and returned it to its owner.

One day, employes at the plant butchered a cow and found inside her stomach 62 cents—a half dollar, a dime and two pennies. Negro slaughterers more than once have given their wives new wedding rings, found inside butchered animals.

Pocket knives are found often, but most jewelry that cows eat is of inexpensive pattern. The most valuable find to date is a diamond stickpin.

Once workers found a three-inch needle lodged in the heart of an otherwise healthy animal. Iron, bolts, nails, wads of baling wire, and other miscellaneous hardware are common in bovine diets, the evidence shows.

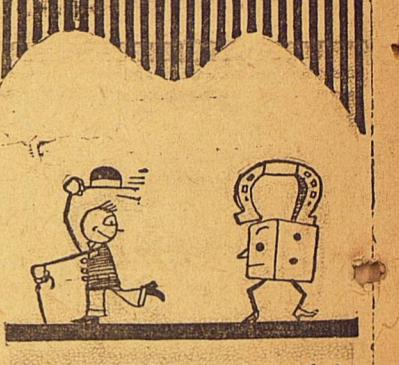

Eight pounds of rock was found in the stomach of one cow. Workers believed she had eaten the rock a bit at a time to make up for some diet deficiency that the owner did not foresee.

No Law Found So Negro Is Freed

By United Press

WICHITA FALLS, Tex.—Roy Dedmore, local negro, explained to police that he wouldn't have driven through a plate glass window if he had not had rheumatism in his right leg, and thus was unable to push down the brake pedal.

Officers were unable to find any law prohibiting anyone from driving a car while under the influence of rheumatism and Dedmore was released. His employer promised to pay for the window.

TALL GIRL WINS TITLE OF VENUS

NEW YORK — America's "venus of the Billboards," adjudged loveliest of all the girls whose faces and figures are reproduced in posters and periodicals throughout the country, is Miss Dorothy Wilson of New York.

With curly red hair, green eyes and a statuesque figure, Miss Wilson is 22 years old and has been modeling for three years. She defeated more than 1400 entries in the preliminary section, but the real test came when the candidates were measured to compare with a perfect composite of 16 of the country's most sought after models. In addition Miss Wilson, according to the judges, Miss Gertrude Meyer, president of the Models' League of New York, the organization which sponsored the contest, and Charles Atlas, physical culturist, "was distinguished by her facial beauty and grace of movement."

Miss Wilson's measurements follow: Height, 5 feet, 8 1-2 inches; weight, 122 pounds; bust, 33; waist, 24; hips, 34; thigh, 19 1-2; calf, 12 1-2; ankle, 8 1-2; foot size, 5-B; hand size, 6 1-2; neck, 12; head size, 21 1-2.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

FLOOD TURNED LOOSE UPON REBEL FORCES

The Madrid government threatened by the advance of the rebels toward Toledo, turned the tide today by unleashing the forces of nature against the attackers.

Inferior in arms, trained men and air forces, the leftists opened the floodgates at the Alberche river, inundating a large area and cutting off the rebels to the west.

The leftists followed up their advantage by a strong attack from three directions. Madrid forces said the rebel forces were demoralized and suffered heavily.

The flood apparently accounted for the sudden cessation of the attack on the Toledo front, which had puzzled the outside world for 24 hours.

Information was still too meagre to judge the full effect of the flood.

On other fronts the rebels still held the upper hand.

BULLDOGS AND GREYHOUNDS READY FOR GRID OPENER AT STRAWN ON FRIDAY AFTERNOON

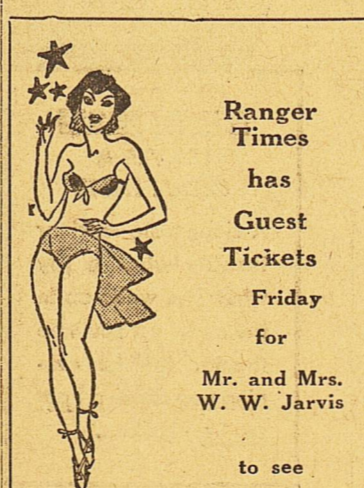

The Bulldogs have gone into the last period of their training for the Strawn game, to be played at Strawn Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, while reports from Strawn are that the Greyhounds are ready for the contest.

Coach H. G. Jennings, while he is not confident of victory, is reported to have stated on numerous occasions that he is going out to try to win from Ranger, Friday, and Coach Baker Wright of the Bulldogs admits that Strawn has a good chance to win, but that he believes his team will make a very credible showing.

Coach Jennings, in stating that his team would be trying to win from Ranger, stated that often a Class A team early in the season with no intention of trying hard to win, but that this would be one case where the Class B team would be putting out everything it had to win.

If the weights given out by the two coaches are accurate the two teams will be fairly evenly matched in weight, with the Bulldogs having a slight edge on their Class B opponents.

Although Coach Wright has not announced his starting lineup, a pretty good guess as to who will start can be made, and using this as a basis for figuring the team's average weight it gives the Bulldogs an average of 152 plus, while the starters announced by Coach Jennings weigh 141. Of course, the Ranger weights may be a little less if Wright should cross up the

Fund to Control Rabbits Established For This County

Ready-mixed poison baits which it is impractical for the average farmer to mix himself, will be kept on hand in the County Agent's office to control Jackrabbits, gophers, rats, prairie dogs, and other rodents. A revolving fund was established for this purpose several weeks ago by the County Commissioners Court and County Agent Cook has announced that he is prepared to assist farmers with rodent problems. The poisoned baits will be sold at cost to those wanting them.

Odds give the Big Spring team the edge. However, at Big Spring the Mavericks were thought to have a slight advantage in weight. It was stated that the Big Spring team members are a little underweight.

The Steer football squad, said a newspaper, has been trimmed to 23 players, "the smallest in the oil belt district."

The Mavericks were reported as suffering few injuries in the first game of the season against Mineral Wells on Welch field last week. Harry Taylor and Billy Blake Woods were reported suffering minor injuries which would preclude their activity.

George Brown, head coach of the Big Spring team, wrote the following for his local fans the other day:

"The Big Spring Steers have by far the best cooperative team spirit of any Big Spring squad since I first became associated with them seven years ago. They played good hard football all during the Wink game last Friday night, and what they lack in weight they make up in fight. I do not believe any team with equal weight and experience can give our boys a drubbing."

"We have a very light set of backs who can really get off their plays behind a welterweight line. The reason for our plays clicking will be two or three nice little ball carriers running behind good blocking guards, a good quarterback and fullback."

"To start with, we had to build our team last spring. We lost five backs who did most of the playing last year. In fact, we started spring training with five lettermen and four regulars—three guards and a tackle.

"At the present time, we have Rayburn, who should make a good center; four better than average guards in Wilson, Hildreth, Phillips and Lockhart; two tackles with experience enough to play—Kasch and Harris. Wheat and Callihan are willing workers for the tackle positions; McCullough and Smith are our leading ends, with Henry, Burris, Adams and Anderson giving their best; Woods, Henninger, Settles, Williams and Gibson make up a list of hard-working but inexperienced halfbacks; at fullback, Bigony, Madison and Trainer are all making progress."
