Not Only the Young Men Are Drafted

The spectacle of 16,500,000 young men registering their names for national service is a stupendous sight.

We ought to think about it—those of us who register, and those who are not yet called.

What does it mean—this overpowering call upon the strength and abilities of young men?

To think rightly about it we have to go way back to what government means.

Government (among free men) is a machinery for doing together what men cannot do for themselves. In the early days of civilization, there was no government in the modern sense. A family, a tribe, gathered together to help one another live, and accepted the leadership of a chief. As human life became more complicated, more complicated forms of government grew up to meet the need of more people to live together, protect each other, help one another.

Today the world is organized on such a scale that only great groups can successfully live together. We call them nations. What is a nation? A nation is a large group of people bound together by geographical nearness, by common customs, language, interdependence in getting their living. To help the group to make rules for living together, to help it to defend itself against outside interference, we establish governments. Free people do it of their own free will.

All benefit by the rules established. The complex industrial life of today would be impossible without order and rules. Government establishes the one and enforces the other. But since all benefit from this order, all must share its burdens.

Today one of the great services that government renders to its people is to provide means to defend themselves jointly against any who would take away their rights.

By the free choice of our own representatives, we have decided that all must share this burden. So our young men set down their names and await the call for whatever service the people have decided to require of them.

It is as simple as that. But let no older man, and no woman forget that, though they are not yet called, they also share the responsibility. In their time, in proportion to their abilities and talents, they also are called by the same obligation that the young men now face. In this sense every man and woman in the country is also drafted.

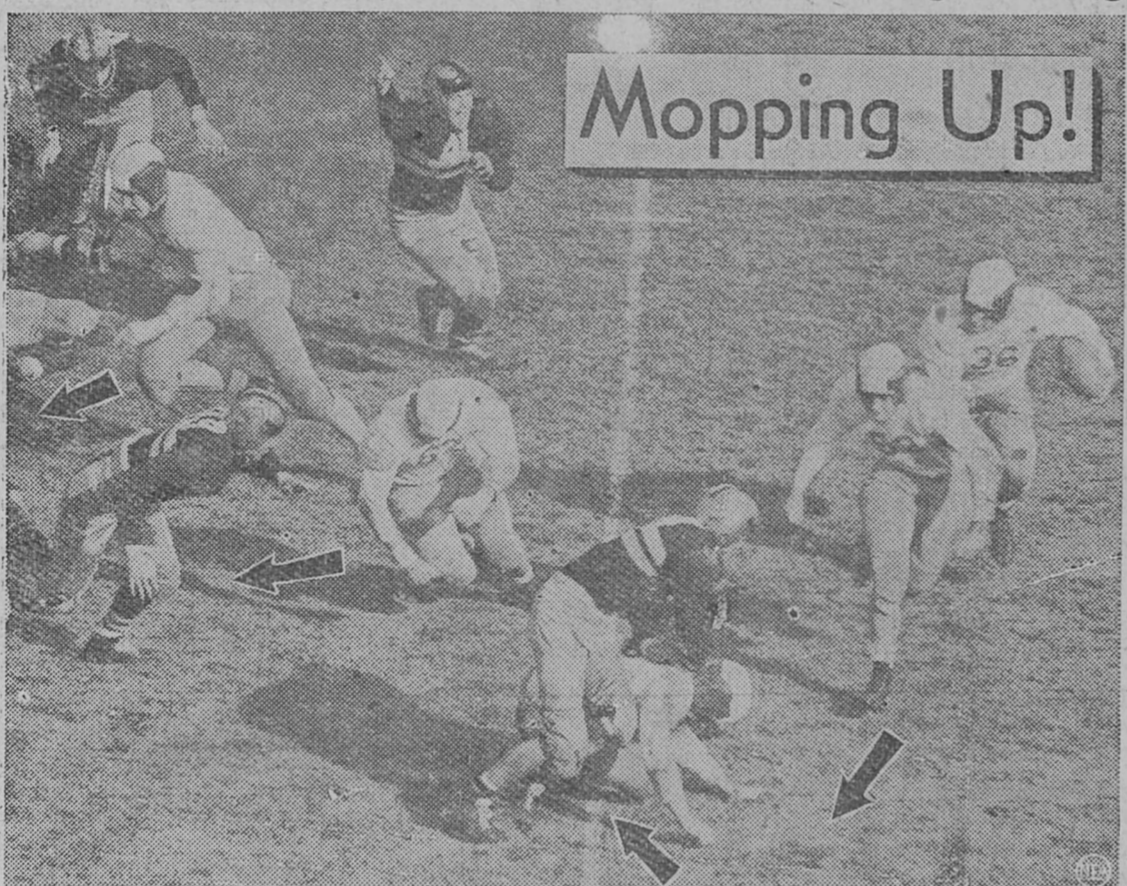

Mind your own business, the Japs warn us, or you'll get back all your scrap metal. In the back, no doubt.

Times have changed dept.: Man named George Washington leaves for England to join British army.

Clipping Bureau's Girls Like To Read The Newspapers

NEW YORK.—If you were to visit Burrelle's Press Clipping Bureau in downtown Manhattan, you'd find a hundred young girls doing nothing but reading newspapers and magazines.

Bureau in downtown Manhattan, you'd find a hundred young girls doing nothing but reading newspapers and magazines. The offices, which overlook the Hudson River, are as quiet as a library reading room, and all you see are newspapers stacked in piles ready to be read and clipped.
