Kriesler Looks at War Down the Years

In the late summer of 1914 an officer, two years retired but recalled in the emergency, came to Leoben, Austria, to take command of a platoon of infantry. Though he was then 39 years old, within a matter of weeks he was on his way to Galicia to fight the Russians. Plunged thus into the earliest fighting of the World War was Fritz Kreisler, a great artist of the violin.

Kriesler's military career was relatively short. Within a few months he was invalided out of service, his shoulder crushed by a Cossack cavalryman's horse in a savage hand-to-hand fight.

A modest little book the following year told of this artist and war. He had been no little thrilled by the comradeship, the more colorful aspects of campaigning that had not yet settled down to the grim attritional slaughter that was to come later. He was able to sleep in the field, his cloak drawn about him, "my soul filled with exaltation and happiness over the beauty around me."

True, on a later night, he recoiled in horror as the Red Cross parties climbed over piles of bodies in front of the Austrian trenches trying to sort out those which still held life. "I felt faint and sick at heart," he wrote, "and near swooning away." But the arrival of an old officer, injured to all that, jerked him to his feet, and "I regretted that my artistic education had over-sharpened and over-strung my nervous system." So a great artist finished his military service, "grateful that I had been permitted to be of any, if ever so little, service to my Fatherland."

The years have passed. Kreisler is now 65, his Fatherland no longer exists as such, and another war desolates the Europe he knew. Worse, the grace and almost-forgotten charm of the Vienna he breathed exists today only in the kind of haunting and nostalgic melodies that still issue from his precious violin.

All those other things are gone. What remains for this man who lived such a full life? Music. Art.

"It seems that now I am living only from day to day, from hour to hour," he told Elliott Arnold of the New York World-Telegram the other day. "There is only one thing I know. That is the indestructibility of music. The world may surrender itself to hatred, but music will outlive the hate. Nothing can hurt art."

German soldiers get two weeks vacation from the Reich. In England they get vacation for the duration of the war.

With the World's Fair closed, we can recall today that it was only yesterday that we were in the world of tomorrow.

If you go through life without accomplishing anything, growing old is an awful waste of time.

"November 11 reminds us that of all the words of mouth or pen we'd like best to hear "armistice" again.

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By BOYCE HOUSE
My friend, Mr. Cohen, makes this comment on the axis powers getting Japan to join up, "Ven a beezness is making money, it don't take in no new partner."

Towns are like people in that they have individuality. It would be difficult to imagine a town with a more complex personality than Huntsville has. It is the home of one of the State teachers' colleges and there are stately buildings and a campus, green and smooth, overhung with grand, wide-spreading trees.

The town is rich with memories of Sam Houston. His home is there; his tomb is there. One of the banks has his picture printed on its checks. One of the main cafes is called "the Raven," the name that the Indians bestowed on Houston.

But when Huntsville is mentioned, almost every Texan thinks—not about the hero of San Jacinto or about Sam Houston State Teachers College—but about the penitentiary. The grim ramparts are only a stone's throw from the business district. And on the eve of an execution, the nearness of "the Walls" and the impending event seem to affect the conversation of the citizenry for they talk in lower voices than usual.

I hunted all over town unsuccessfully for some picture post cards of the penitentiary. There were several friends that I wanted to send them to with the customary vacation greeting, "Wish you were here."

Training School for Peace Officers Is Now In Progress

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—The third peace officers training school is now in progress at Camp Mabry near Austin. The school is conducted under supervision of state police. Sheriff's sheriff-elect, chiefs of police, rangers, state highway patrolmen, many city police officers, deputy sheriffs, one district attorney and one special officer are among the pupils.

R. M. Briggs of Silsbee is the district attorney getting a first hand knowledge of police methods at the Camp Mabry school. Sheriffs-elect of Shackelford, Collingsworth, Ellis, Dickens, Hood, Menard and Howard counties are enrolled. Chiefs of police are attending from Sweetwater, Plainview, Englefield and Palmer.

Deputy sheriffs are listed from Travis, Ellis, Dickens, Milam and Motley County, and city officers from Taylor, Wichita Falls, San Antonio, Dallas, Thorndale, Henderson, Highland Park, Kerrville and Marshall.

Rip Collins, former big league ball player, now a Texas ranger, is giving a course on handling and care of firearms. Sheriff Chris Fox of El Paso is another of the instructors, most of whom come from the headquarters staff of state police. Captain Fred Hickman, assistant director of state police is in charge of the school.

Crime reporting, fingerprinting, leg photography, documents, laboratory methods, moulage, and highway traffic handling and licensing are a few of the courses. Six hours a day the enrolled officers go through a stiff course of lectures and demonstrations.

Getting right down to the seat of one of their problems, American Red Cross issued a call for 7200 diapers for war refugees.

Detective's Manual Points Out An Error

DALLAS, Tex.—Detective Elmer Gatty parked his automobile in a 20-minute zone and dashed into the central police station to get his mail.

He found a book of "rules and regulations" being distributed to all policemen, and spent 30 minutes studying it.

Suddenly he groaned. He pointed to Article 7, Section 6, paragraph 43, which read: "A policeman may be discharged for conviction of violation of any city ordinance."

He rushed to his car. It had a ticket for over-parking.

SERIAL STORY

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Helen suggests they enlist the "people" to get Buck a hearing. Bill will ask the sports editor to help. Bill ponders before mailing the letter. If Buck stays in his chair, remaining fairly quiet, the operation may succeed. If he drives a car, calls on prospects, selling cameras, chances are against him. Bill doesn't mail the letter.

The People Speak; Buck Tells Board Members His Plans

CHAPTER IX BILL MENTOR climbed the stairs to the editorial rooms of the Clarion. He asked for Pat Hurly and was shown a wisp of a man with flaming red hair.

"My name's Mentor, Mr. Hurly."

"Mentor?" He frowned. "Oh, yes, I've got it now. Buck Mentor. You're his son?"

"Yes, sir."

"Good man, Buck. Used to worship him when I was a kid. Well, what is it you want of me?"

Bill said earnestly, "I heard you mention Buck one night in the stadium. You said West would have won if Buck'd been coaching."

"Or anyone else but that idiot, Landis," Hurly growled. "Skelton and Peskin must have picked him up at a bargain counter. I was just urging those gentlemen in my column to go out this time and hire some real brains."

"Buck's got real brains," Bill said.

Hurly straightened in his chair. "So that's why you're here? Want me to push your dad for the job?" He scraped his red bristles. "You're right about Buck Mentor's brains, but a coach should also have legs."

Bill talked then as he'd never talked before. He told Hurly about the movies about Buck's operation, how easy it would be to finish the season, how the team would work for Buck.

For answer, Hurly ripped the copy from his typewriter. "Get a load of tonight's Clarion, Mentor. Now scam out of here and let me get to work!"

BILL was waiting on the porch when the Clarion arrived. He unfolded it with shaking fingers and turned to Hurly's column.

It began, "WHY NOT TRY MENTOR?" And then: "This column doesn't presume to dictate to the board. It does, however, feel that Buck Mentor, a local man, should be among those considered. West-siders, why not call the president of the board and tell him what YOU think of Mentor?"

"Bill dashed into the house. "Hey, Buck, get a load of this!"

Buck Mentor read slowly. When he had finished he said, "How much did you have to do with this, Bill?"

"I talked to Hurly this morning," Bill admitted. "Why, Bill? You know what was in that letter you mailed."

Bill nodded. "Buck, I—I didn't mail the letter."

"You better tell me why, Bill. You've done a rather serious thing."

Bill said stubbornly, "Buck, couldn't I let you do it, not with there's even a small chance of your landing the job at W. H. and I worked out a plan last night and . . ."

Buck listened, shaking his head. "You kids sort of took things in your own hands. May I ask how you squared yourself with Helen?"

Blushing, Bill explained about the letter.

Buck said gently, "Bill, you've been all kinds of a fool. You hurt Helen and you've hurt me. Right now we're in a serious because you didn't mail that letter. But, Bill, I'd rather let things as they are, than let you square yourself with Helen."

HELEN WELCH came to the door after supper. Some was trying to reach Buck on a telephone. Bill went over to take the message. When he returned his voice shook with excitement.

"That was J. Conrad Skelton, Buck. He's been swamped with calls ever since the Clarion hit the street. He wonders—Bill related Skelton's pompous tones—would care to talk to the board tonight?"

Buck grinned. "Pay Mr. Skelton my compliments, Bill, and tell him I shall be delighted."

Bill, with projector and film under his arm, was at the door a half hour before meeting him. He had everything set up with the first member appeared. It was good-natured Jim Hansen as he said smilingly, "Bank night, Bill?"

Julius Peskin arrived and scowled at Bill. "What do you mean, Mentor, sending your friend Peters to work for you? I—I've a good notion to . . ."

"You already have, Mr. Peskin. Peskin sat down, fuming, and was joined by two members Bill didn't know. Presently Skelton arrived.

Using canes, Buck entered the board room. His eyes were grave as he nodded to each member.

"I'm not much of a speaker," he began with a smile. "I'm going to let the pictures talk for me. You will see the various problems that confront our team. With your permission, I'll show you how I propose to meet these problems."

Bill turned off the lights, started the projector. Buck spoke in the darkness.

"This play was in the Clayton game. The break-through occurred on the left side of our line. Notice the position of the tackle and guard. You can see how simple it was for the offensive back to slice through."

"By George, he's right!" Jim Hansen exclaimed.

BILL kept changing the films. Buck talked on steadily with jet confidence and a complete knowledge of his subject. Bill felt thrill of pride run through him. Buck was sure telling them!

Bill ran the last film, turned up the lights. Jim Hansen and the other men didn't know nodded approval. Skelton blinked impassively. Julius Peskin still scowled.

Skelton was the first to speak: our demonstration, Mentor, was impressive, if slightly theatrical, at the question which inevitably occurred to each of us: How a you, in your present condition, such a football squad?"

Buck said quietly, "Bill can be your legs for the rest of the season. I'm familiar with the way I teach you the boys exactly how I want things done."

"Every man on the team loves to play football. The fault has been, not with their efforts—locking and tackling—but with the use of the right play at a right time. Frankly, gentlemen, West's football team needs more than anything else, a give them that!"

"If you hire me," Buck said, "I have my own legs by next fall. He told them about the actor in the east."

"Suppose the operation fails?" skin objected. "They most always do."

"Then I'll gladly release you on your contract," Buck said. "It won't fail."

Again Peskin bent close to Skelton, who said, "We should like to know, Mentor, how you expect to handle a large group of boys when your own son is constantly in trouble?"

Buck's fists knotted. "Bill, like anyone else his age, is liable to do foolish things. But I can assure you that he's not constantly in trouble."

Skelton said, "Thank you, Mentor. I believe that answers all our questions. Naturally, we must discuss this further. We shall inform you as soon as we have reached a decision."

Legislators Considering Putting Duties of Agriculture Department Under Control of A. & M. College

BY GORDON K. SHEARER

United Press Staff Correspondent AUSTIN, Texas—Threats of Texas Legislators to pare appropriations of the State Department of Agriculture and to transfer most of its functions to A. & M. College have turned the limelight on this branch of the state government.

State Senator W. C. Graves of Dallas recalled that the state had abolished the office of tax commissioner in 1939 and turned its duties over to the state comptroller. He proposed that duties of the agriculture department be given to A. & M. College.

The office serves no useful purpose except for the personal benefit of J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture, Graves asserted. McDonald was re-elected Nov. 5 after he had come out for support of the national republican ticket, but ran far behind other democratic nominees. While resentment at McDonald's advocating election of Wendell L. Willkie, while he was a democratic nominee, has instigated the present movement to pare the department, the proposal to abandon the department and place its activities in the college is not new.

The college authorities have been lukewarm to such suggestions, principally because they feel A. & M.'s cordial relations with the farmers and stockgrowers might be harmed if the college had to take on regulatory duties now placed in the department of agriculture. Some of the legislators propose to avoid that by giving enforcement duties to the state livestock sanitary commission, which directs cattle tick eradication.

Under the current state appropriation act, the department of agriculture receives $202,201 annually. The legislature appropriated $254,931 a year but Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel blue-penciled enough items to bring the cost down to a little over $200,000.

On this basis the department is self-sustaining as its last annual report shows receipts totaling $260,424. Most of the income is from fees collected from farmers, marketers, seed dealers or others engaged in agricultural activities.

The commissioner, personally, receives a salary of $4,200 a year. Most of the division heads in the department receive $2,700 a year. Full-time inspectors are paid $1,800 a year and pay of employees with technical knowledge ranges from that up to $3,900 a year.

Travel expense appropriation of the department is $30,000 a year. That much was left after O'Daniel took out separate travel expense appropriations from various fee-earning divisions.

One of the functions of the department of agriculture is like-

HIGH quality lamb is available in the American markets 12 months of the year. It is an excellent source of protein, iron, phosphorus and vitamins essential for growth, appetite and the prevention of certain diseases. When buying lamb, look for meat that is light pink in color with firm white fat.

Lamb being tender, practically every cut may be roasted, broiled or panbroiled. Lamb also makes a good inexpensive stew because its flavor blends well with all vegetables. The leg, loin and rib cuts are in general the less thrifty cuts, but the shoulder, breast and flank are in the low price class.

In roasting lamb, cook the meat uncovered at a low oven temperature (300° F.) on a rack. A leg of lamb will always roast more quickly if the paper-like covering, the "fell," is not removed. For the small family, a cushion shoulder or a rolled shoulder are practical.

LAMB CUSHION SHOULDER WITH MINT STUFFING

Lamb shoulder, 2 cups bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 1/2 cup chopped celery, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/4 cup chopped fresh mint leaves, salt and pepper.

Have a square-cut lamb shoulder boned and sewed on one side at the market, leaving one side open for a stuffing. Cook chopped onion and celery in butter until tender, then add bread crumbs and finely-chopped mint leaves and season with salt and pepper. Moisten with meat broth or hot water. Fill cavity in lamb shoulder with this stuffing and sew or skewer the edges together. Place the lamb shoulder, fat side up, on a rack in an open roasting pan. Season with salt and pepper and roast in a slow oven (300° F.), until done. Allow 40 to 45 minutes per pound for roasting.

Serve with hot, spicy apple chutney. It's a novel and amazingly good relish.

HOT APPLE CHUTNEY (One quart)

One quart chopped apples, 3/4 pound seedless raisins, 1/2 cup finely diced onions, 1/2 cup diced green pepper, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon dry ginger, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 cup vinegar, 3/4 cup lemon juice, 2 cups water.

Stir all ingredients together thoroughly in an open baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven (325° F.) for about 3 1/2 hours or until chutney is thick. Serve hot in the same dish.

Cisco B Team Will Play Pups Tonight

The Cisco B team will play the Ranger Bulldog Pups at Bulldog Stadium tonight at 7:30, it was announced today by H. C. Scruggs, coach of the Pups.

This will likely be the last home game of the season for the Pups, unless the game with the Breckenridge Little Buckies, which was rained out last week, is re-scheduled later in the season.

Coach Scruggs stated today that his team was in good condition, with the exception of Mitchell, and a good game is anticipated.

An admission price of 20 cents for adults and 10 cents for children will be charged.

West Texas Faces Few Problems When Workers Move Out

By United Press
LUBBOCK, Tex.—West Texas communities face only slight economic problems from migration of agricultural workers, a brief prepared by Texas Tech officials at the request of Governor W. Lee O'Daniel indicates.

The survey covered an area of a line from Fort Worth to slightly southeast of El Paso and sought to determine what relief burden was placed upon Texas cities and towns by the interstate migrants.

The only locality in which the transient workers presented a problem, and that only temporary and of a seasonal nature, was around El Paso.

"Many of these (migrants) may originate in Texas but are planning to move to states farther west," the brief pointed out. "El Paso is a sort of gateway at which converge several main travel routes."

McDonald's recommendation of the former congressman asserted that Jones knows agriculture from the bottom up, "he having plowed, hoed and picked cotton, shocked wheat, milked cows and sloped pigs."

The survey found that there is no industrial migration in West Texas, primary because of the few industries centered there, and termed the agricultural migrants, such as fruit and vegetable packers, "no problem."

It suggested that the only area in which this type of transient worker might become a relief problem was in the extreme Southwest Texas during the cantaloupe packing season in late June, July and early August.

The report, which was submitted to a special committee investigating interstate migration of destitute citizens at a hearing in Oklahoma City, Okla., said that 90 per cent of the migrants calling for relief were unmarried men. It speculated that these persons would be affected by national military conscription.

Begin Harvest of A Hot House Crop

By United Press

CLEVELAND, O. — Below-freezing temperatures have ended the growing season and field work has stopped for most American farmers, but in the nation's "greenhouse capital" a $5,000,000 harvest is well started.

The crop, mostly tomatoes, cucumbers, leaf lettuce and radishes, is under glass shelter covering 250 acres, the largest area in the United States devoted to hot-house raising of vegetables.

Marketing of the fall crop, the year's second, has begun.

The five-year-old industry will provide out-of-season vegetables this year for consumers from the Eastern seaboard, the Rockies and south to Florida.

Yields of greenhouse-grown plants are by comparison greater than from vegetables grown out of doors.

Profits, however, are less because expenses are considerable. An atmosphere resembling the tropics must be maintained within the greenhouses. A temperature of 70 degrees is kept at all times during all seasons and a 90-degree

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

CARL SNAVELY, charged with having directed Cornell against Ohio State from the bench, is quick to assert that he would like to be able to say that he never communicated with his players illegally.

And Snavely speaks from experience when he declares that such methods only result in confusing a team, especially when the signaling coach is under the scrutiny of an official.

Five years ago, while drilling North Carolina, Snavely found that he failed to cover high signs with the same dexterity that he teaches his athletes to hide the ball.

"Snavely didn't stop at crossing his legs and swinging his foot to indicate a kick, or putting his hand over an ear to indicate a pass," reveals Dick Dashiell. "He sent in messages by the trainer and waterboy. Many a time the quarterback had his knee reinforced with tape while his brain was reinforced with a couple of rapidly-mumbled signals."

DASHIELL, now the sports columnist of the Asheville, N. C., Times, should know whereof he speaks. He played under Snavely at North Carolina in 1934-35.

"I will never forget Wallace Wade coming out on the field in the early part of the 1935 Duke-North Carolina game to ask officials to stop Snavely's bench tactics," continues Dashiell.

"From that time on, Snavely was unable to use his semaphore system. As a consequence, Harry Montgomery, the Tar Heel field general, was unable to direct the team with the authority and poise exhibited in previous games. Duke won, 25-0, ruining Carolina's Rose Bowl chance.

"I've always believed that the reason Snavely stirred up a hornet's nest by the charge that Duke took movies of Carolina's games previous to their meeting in 1935, was due to the fact that it was in those films that the Duke staff discovered that Coach Snavely also played quarterback. It was quite a sight. "Snavely used pictures of Tennessee's games in preparing for the Volunteers, whom North Carolina beat."

But Dick Dashiell agrees with other football men that it is absurd to say that Snavely or any other coach called play after play from the bench for a team as highly geared as the veteran 1940 Cornell varsity, and with a field general as competent as Walt Matuszak.

He also agrees that Carl Snavely is too good a football coach to make the same mistake twice.

acre. About $150,000 additional is spent annually for fertilizer.

As a result of the near-perfect growing conditions, the "artificial tropics" can produce jungle-like products. Tomato and cucumber vines, tied so they grow perpendicularly and cared for daily, grow from 16 to 20 feet in length.

To reproduce perfect summer-like conditions the year around, the growers keep bees in the hot-houses to spread pollen among the plants.

The annual harvest—in spring and fall—totals about 4,000,000 baskets of tomatoes, 250,000 baskets of cucumbers, 100,000 baskets of radishes and 750,000 baskets of leaf lettuce.
