School board hires new coach

The Sonora Broncos have a new head coach.

At a special meeting Monday afternoon, the Sonora Independent School District Board of Trustees unanimously approved the hiring of 29-year-old Bob Bellard.

Bellard has been assistant coach at Mayde Creek High School for the past five years.

A former football and baseball player, Bellard attended high school in Bryan before studying three years at Texas A & M University. He then transferred to Mississippi State University where he earned his bachelor's and master of education degrees.

According to school superintendent Charles Russell, Bellard was selected from about 60 applicants.

While waiting for a decision from the school board which was discussing his hiring in executive session, Bellard said it was no surprise that so many applications had been received.

"I think Sonora's got everything that a coach who's looking for his first head coaching position could ask for," the San Angelo native said.

After being told he had been hired on a one-year contract, Bellard said he wanted to meet with the football team before returning to Mayde Creek with his wife and two children.

Bellard is expected to begin his duties as athletic director and head coach later this month.

TRAILER DESTROYED - A woman received minor burns when an oven she attempted to light apparently flashed back Jan. 9 at Buster's Trailer Park in Sonora. Firefighters quickly extinguished the blaze preventing gas cylinders from exploding. The camper was a total loss.

When does the celebration begin?

It was surprising, I thought more than three months ago when I wrote the following piece, that there had been so little interest in celebrating the centennial here:

It may be a premature observation, but it seems there was a lot more spirit around here 100 years ago.

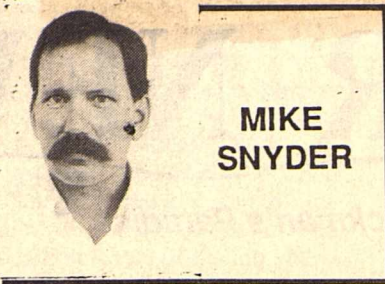

Sure, there's plenty of enthusiasm during regular events like the Bronco games, rodeos and homecomings, but what about a big event that will be upon us in a few months - the Sonora Centennial?

The clock is ticking, and yet there appears to be a general malaise about celebrating what has all the potential of being the biggest, proudest birthday party ever seen in these parts.

Maybe everyone is keeping the excitement well concealed. Maybe the celebration-to-be is one of the best-kept secrets ever.

But maybe we're all waiting for someone else to start the ball rolling.

There's been talk about a cattle drive, about parades, a special Sutton County Days incorporated into the general celebration, a frontier days week of wild west reenactments...

The Devil's River News will also be 100 years old in 1990, and we would like to celebrate in style. We will be honored to be able to assist in whatever way we can, but so far not much has been said...

The surprise still exists, but it is shared with concern, curiosity and more than a little frustration. It seems whoever is in charge of the centennial celebration this year isn't looking very hard for assistance - to the point that offers of help are turned down!

I recently requested to sit in on a monthly meeting of a local organization (which will remain anonymous) that is supposed to promote Sonora (using nearly $40,000 of local tax money), but my request was rudely rejected.

"We aren't required to have open meetings," I was told upon further inquiry.

I checked. Legally, they aren't.

It's a shame that valuable resources aren't being utilized to make a potential centennial celebration something we could all be proud of, and it's rather bizarre that a tax-supported organization is unwilling to do its business in the open.

It's not a question of legality, it's a matter of doing what is good for the entire community.

Closed meetings?

They've spawned disinterest and lack of involvement because no one knows what - if anything - is going on.

It's time to open the meetings to anyone wanting to attend. It's time to generate some interest, and get as many people as possible involved.

Just like we said last Oct. 5,

"...We will be honored to be able to assist in whatever way we can, but so far not much has been said."

The only thing that has changed is something's finally been said: "We don't want you involved."

Now, isn't that something to celebrate about...

Shurley wins National Home Building Award

The National Association of Home Builders has recently announced that native West Texan Jerry Shurley has won the coveted Maxsel Award of Merit in the Marketing Director of the Year category for 1989. Citing his professional excellence, service to the industry and community involvement, the association selected Shurley from sales and marketing professionals throughout the nation. Additionally, Shurley was named Marketing Director of the Year for Texas for the second time in as many years.

As marketing vice president for a Houston Home Builder who started operations in the midst of Houston's downturn, Shurley has had a significant role in the company's success. With over 400 sales in 1989, the company will be listed by Builder Magazine as among the top 400 home builders in the nation by sales volume.

The award will be presented at the National Convention this month in Atlanta, Georgia. Shurley, born in the West Texas city of San Angelo and a native of Sonora, is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin.

4-H livestock shows involve the whole family

by Preston Faris, CEA-Ag

Since youth work comprises a part of the responsibility of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and since we have entered the time of year when many of our 4-Hers will be involved in the "Stock Show Circuit", I thought I'd give a few of my opinions concerning their benefit.

We should note that the livestock project is only a tool to use in youth development. It is no better or worse than any similar project such as foods, clothing, citizenship, leadership, etc. All 4-H projects are aimed at teaching some skill, developing responsibility, developing leadership and in molding character in young people to lead them to be the future positive, contributing citizens of our society.

Stock Shows and livestock projects offer a vast number of learning opportunities. A 4-Her responsible for breaking ice, feeding and caring for a lamb or goat during the dreadful weather which we experienced during the Christmas holidays is bound to learn to be a responsible person. I know that some were robbed of that learning experience because they were allowed to sit by the fire and watch television while mom or dad or a hired hand tended to those animals. Parents have an opportunity to learn too.

Speaking of parents brings to mind perhaps the most beneficial part of stock shows. They are family activities. The show is the culmination of many hours of hard work put forth by the entire family. Dad helps youth by supervising feeding, exercise and training efforts. Mom helps by planning the show wardrobe and making certain junior gets from basketball practice, to piano and back home after dark to feed. Livestock shows offer excellent training in time management. Little brother or sister is always there to ask a few questions to force someone to think and to wonder just when it is that he or she can begin in the program.

The family doesn't end within the household, however. Parents and grandparents all show up to watch the show and help stabilize and strengthen families. Generally the community supports the program financially and by their presence. When attending major shows, the local club travels and works as a large family with everyone doing their part.

Basic animal husbandry and livestock evaluation are stressed but we must remember that placing first is not the real objective. After all, we are not just raising sheep or goats, we are investing in our future. The sheep and goats are tools to use in teaching economics, business management and skills that help us rear better youth.

Another day at the hospital

by Scott Gilmore

"What's happening at the Hospital?" That's a question I hear a lot, but one I don't always answer fully. It's like asking "How are you?" People don't usually answer the question the way they should.

But tonight I got to thinking...Today was really a full day. A day of some successes, some trials, and some tears. All at the hospital. And for those of you who don't know what a day is like at the hospital, I'd like to present it to you.

8 A.M. Morning coffee, talking about what we did yesterday, last night, or what we've got to do today. People start working their day in fits and starts. Housekeeping comes in and empties trash cans; one of the office girls starts inputting the previous day's billing into the computer. Much of the office staff and department heads are working on inventories and getting ready for year-end and audits.

Upstairs, the nurses have finished passing trays to the five patients we're looking after. Two of them are transfers from the nursing home and hope to sent them back soon.

Kathy, Carolyn and Pete are trying to get more done than usual because tomorrow they all go to a seminar in Abilene on indigent care that'll take them away for two days. The last seminar of this type helped save us several thousands of dollars, so it's important to go.

The nursing home is getting ready for three new residents: two today, and another on Thursday. Paperwork to get ready, rooms to get cleaned. Usual stuff: bathe, feed, get up, involve in activities.

Half of the staff is either recovering from or trying not to get the flu.

In the afternoon, Guy Crippin and Scott Gilmore attend a meeting at the EMS along with Brent Gesch, Bill Webster, Carla Fields, Lenora Pool, Treva McReynolds, a spokesman from the Texas Department of Health and others for the purpose of planning a Disaster Drill that will involve much of the city. Disaster drills are good for all emergency services and act as a test and a learning exercise. They're important.

4:30 P. M. Much of the day staff is thinking about going home. Tonight is Guy's birthday and a party is planned at the Steakhouse.

4:31 P. M. Several people come through the Emergency Room door. All of them covered with blood. Plans change. Priorities surface.

There has been a serious traffic accident. A car with five people in it ran into another vehicle on the side of the road. A passing motorist picked up three of them and brought them in. We start to deal with these and wait for the ambulance to bring the rest.

A baby doesn't cry much, but her color is bad. A six-year old girl who has the face of an angel with a broken collarbone. The only time she cries is when we have to cut part of her dress off her for an x-ray. A little boy whose face is cut, covered with blood, and his stomach is very tender to the touch.

Dr. Pajestka arrives and begins to prioritize the problems and the patients. We call in extra nurses. One comes over from the nursing home. The office staff gets extra stretchers, IV poles, blankets, whatever's needed. It's hard to watch so much pain and not be able to help.

The mother and uncle come in on stretchers via the EMS. They're both badly banged up. X-rays. Blood work for everybody. Extra lab personnel come back. We can't get blood on this one. A nurse tries twice. A lab tech tries twice. Finally another nurse gets the specimen.

There's no panic. No frantic rush. It feels calm and efficient. You have to put up a wall to your feelings or the pain of the patients will get to you. The rest of the family comes in. Some use the telephones, others sob.

As soon as possible, the baby and the little boy are sent to a critical care unit in San Angelo. Start putting your efforts on the others. The man needs an EKG. Careful, his chest is hurt. Can he give a urine specimen? Not now. The nursing home nurse has to go back...her two admissions have just arrived!

Dr. Pajestka goes from one to the other. Giving orders. Making decisions. Prioritizing. Who needs the most care first. Next? One of his nurses has come up to help.

7 P. M. Most of the office staff has left. It slows down. Waiting to send the last three. . . A fire breaks out in a mobile trailer. A lady is burned. The ambulance picks up the three we've been working on and the staff starts on the burn. Everything that family owns is in the trailer. . . and it burned to the ground.

Finish with the burn and the ambulance brings in a young girl who stopped breathing. Start working on her. Another nurse from the nursing home comes over to help.

9 P. M. Dr. Pajestka's still here working. So's the lab, x-ray, extra nurses, one new RN who's supposed to be "orienting" to her position has been up to her ears in orient most of the day.

It's not likely to let up for a few more hours. This was not a "typical" day in the hospital, but it wasn't too far off from the norm either.

Idaho is the only state in the U.S. over which no foreign flag has ever flown.

According to the last census, there are 110 million men and 116 million women in the United States.

Kerrville to host Mohair Extravaganza

The first World Mohair Extravaganza has been announced by organizers as the "premiere" event in the angora goat industry. Chairman of the event, Robbie Hurt of Mountain Home, Texas, said "the extravaganza is designed to raise awareness of the importance of Angora goat production in Texas. Producers on the Texas Edwards Plateau raise 40 percent of the world's mohair and 90 percent of the nation's mohair." Mohair is not a well know product in the U. S. domestic market and producers have to depend on foreign countries as consumers of their products.

The event will kick off at noon on Friday, January 26, with a business luncheon where Jimmy Cahill, a prominent Mohair entrepreneur and honorary chairman of the World Mohair Extravaganza, will speak on the promotion and development of the Mohair Industry in the U. S. Reservations can be made by calling (512) 895-5000 (Ext. 457) at a cost of $6.50.

Later that afternoon a fashion show, narrated by former Miss USA Kim Dutton and co-sponsored by the Mohair Council of America and the Inn of the Hills, will take place in the Medallion Room of the inn. New York designers will be represented by their mohair fashions. The Kerrville Convention and Visitors Bureau will sponsor a cocktail buffet at that time, $5.00 cost for non-members. Call (512) 896-1155 for reservations.

At 8 p.m. the same evening, Bruce Carroll, Country Gospel artist, will be in concert at the Kerrville Municipal Auditorium. Bruce has opened for such artists as Michael Martin Murphy, Jerry Jeff Walker, and Barry Manilow. Admission is free.

The doors to the Hill Country Youth Exhibit Center will open to spectators at 10 a.m. on Saturday, January 27. During the day the World Mohair Extravaganza will feature a "world series" of goat shearing, fleece to fabric demonstrations, a fashion show of mohair garments, arts and crafts industry related items and a trade show of commercial exhibits of interest to goat producers.

The world series of goat shearing is patterned after the popular sheep shearing contests and shearers have been invited from every major goat producing nation in the world.

The event will be a fun, informative, family affair and all are invited to attend.

For additional information contact the Kerrville Convention and Visitors Bureau, (Texas wats) 1-800-221-7958, or (512) 896-1155.

Horses for the asking

The trail of the history of horses in America is an intriguing one.

THEN: While the ancient ancestors of the horse roamed this continent almost 50 million years ago, they had long since vanished when the first modern horses were brought here by the Spanish Conquistadors. Some of these escaped to become the wild horses for which the American West is famous.

NOW: Today, wild horses still roam the west. One such was a small and scrawny beast when he was taken in by Chris Williams of Stuart, Virginia through the Bureau of Land Management's Adopt-A-Horse program. Williams named the horse Trigger, for the famous movie mount and turned it into one of the most beautiful horses in the program.

More fine wild horses are available from the government for people who will provide them with good homes. To find out about adopting one, write the Eastern States Office, 911A, Bureau of Land Management, 350 S. Pickett Street, Alexandria, Virginia 22304; or call 703-461-1300 or 1369.

DID YOU KNOW?

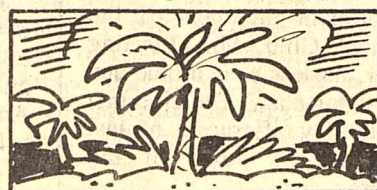

The U.S. flag of 1777 had no official arrangement for the stars. The most popular design was not the circle as many believe but alternate rows of three, two, three, two and three stars. Even back then, the flag served as a symbol of our nation's fundamental freedoms and liberties.

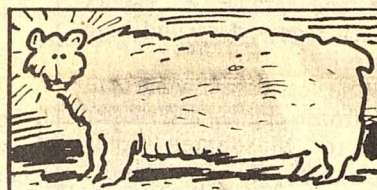

The 90th convention of Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is asking all Americans to raise their collective voice to help adopt legislation calling for a Constitutional Amendment to protect the flag of the United States from desecration and write to the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

The English used to clean the chimney on New Year's Day to bring good luck to the household during the coming year. Today, the expression we use is "cleaning the slate." This means making resolutions to correct faults or bad habits.

One good New Year's resolution many people will make this year will be to give up smoking. That resolution may be easier to keep if you understand why it's so hard to quit. The Surgeon General found that nicotine, an ingredient in cigarettes, is addictive. Your doctor can help you quit by prescribing a gum that releases small amounts of nicotine in the mouth to combat withdrawal symptoms. It could help you stay smoke-free in 1990.

THE DEVIL'S RIVER NEWS

Sonora Sutton County Texas January 18, 1990

Election Monday to close streets carried two to one

Action from residents is not expected

January 17, 1930 - A vote of 135 to 42, the largest vote ever polled here in a city election, was registered Monday in the T. L. Benson office to close Water and Crockett avenues, two rail crossings of the Santa Fe which is building south from San Angelo to this city.

The Santa Fe had asked that the streets be closed in order to give space for depot and switching terminal. However that road has conceded to have Crockett opened after the election. This can be done by the mayor and city commissioners declaring an ordinance to that effect.

There remains some opposition to the election, despite the fact that the election went for the closing by an overwhelming majority.

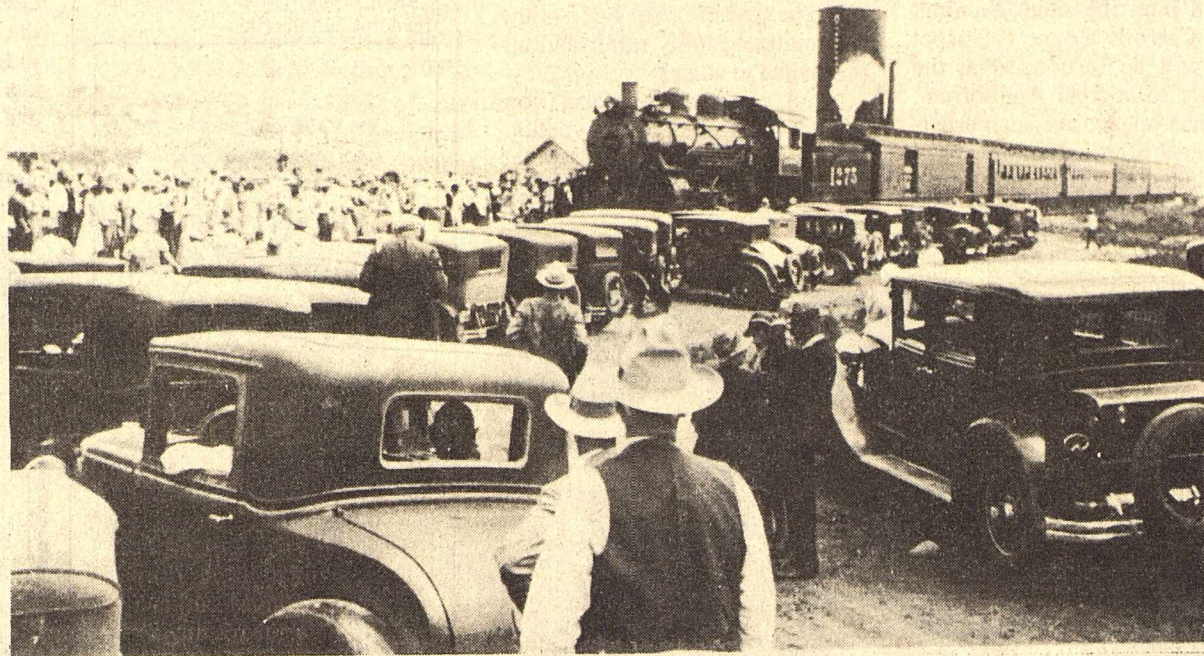

The Santa Fe, City of Sonora and County of Sutton have agreed to improve Water avenue which would make it one of the best and most traveled thoroughfares in the city. It is understood that a bridge will be built at the Lowrey Draw on that avenue, enabling the traffic to go that route during rainy weather.

A neat depot will be built overlapping either side of Water avenue, three or four up-to-date dwellings for its employees, and a 480-foot platform for freight.

Sonora is ready and "cocked" for the first train to whistle in town, and it is understood that a big time will be had here celebrating the advent of the road into town.

Ranchmen will hail the completion of the road for they can save an immense sum on sheep, goats, cattle, wool and mohair. The road will not be completed in time to handle the spring shipment of livestock, wool and mohair clips.

A representative of Lederle Laboratories will be on hand to explain and discuss with ranchmen their work and remedy for clabber billy, a disease for which there has formerly been no cure or immunization.

Coincident with the meeting of ranchmen will be a meeting of members of the Livestock Protective Association. This meeting has been called by the association president G. T. Rodes for the purpose of discussing the organizations future.

It is hoped that a large crowd of ranchmen will be present at this meeting which is geared to their interests.

Pending Lawsuit
The pending lawsuit and the HEW visit in December was discussed at the meeting. In a complaint filed in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, San Angelo Division, members of the school board, principals and the superintendent are named as defendants. The plaintiffs, a group of local Mexican Americans, filed charges in behalf of their children, whom they feel are being discriminated against because of the 98 percent enrollment of Mexican American children in the L. W. Elliott School.

The plaintiffs offer two alternatives they wish the court to direct the defendants to accept: (a) all children in grades kindergarten through three attending the L. W. Elliott School, and all children in grades through six attending the Central Elementary School or; (b) all elementary school children grades kindergarten through six being assigned to the Central schools; and grades seven Elementary and Junior High through eight being assigned to the L. W. Elliott School.

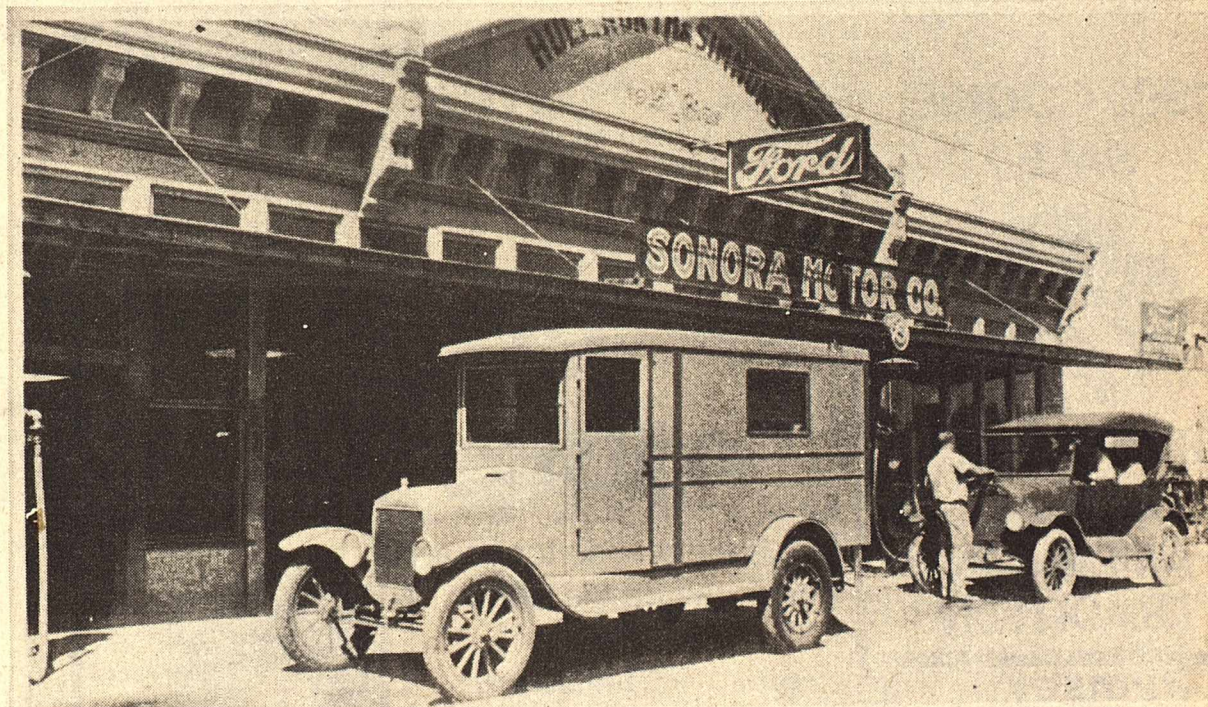

Also discussed at the meeting was employment of additional personnel.

The Magnificent Seven

An Insider's Guide to the Show Caves of Texas

Ahhh, wilderness!

It's a rarity in Texas, limited mostly to the awesome outback of the Big Bend, the high country of the Guadalupe Mountains and the innermost recesses of the Big Thicket.

But most folks don't realize there's plenty of pristine wilderness right underfoot. We're talking about caves, the last unknown, unexplored frontiers on (or rather in) earth.

The Texas Speleological Society, the state's top caving organization, estimates that Texas is honeycombed with more than 2,000 known caves. Perhaps thousands more subterranean passages await discovery by spelunkers—caving enthusiasts who delight in ferreting out even the most remote, constricted, damp, muddy, bat-infested crawlway.

But not to worry. If you want a more palatable taste of caving, visit one of Texas' seven spectacular show caves. Experienced guides will take you along smooth, well-lit paths to see astonishingly beautiful rock formations, subterranean vistas, and the eerie interplay of light and shadow.

As you enter a cave, you feel wafts of cool, moist air. All caves have constant air temperatures, ranging in Texas from the mid-60s to the low-70s. This makes caves ideal places to visit all year round.

Most Texas caves bristle with bizarre speleothems or cave decorations. Stalactites "hang tight" from the ceiling; stalagmites "might" reach the ceiling; columns form when stalactites and stalagmites grow together.

Sculpted from water-soluble limestone, the show caves of Texas are fragile environments that need special protection. Most of the caverns are active and are still producing delicate speleothems, which take many thousands of years to form.

While visiting a Texas show cave, remember the maxim, "Take nothing but pictures, leave nothing but footprints, kill nothing but time."

Cascade Caverns, a water-formed cave that's still 95 percent active, takes its name from a stream-fed waterfall plunging 90 feet into the spectacular Cathedral Room. Open to the public since 1932, the cave has been a refuge for Indians, Union sympathizers, and a legendary German hermit, who may have inhabited the cave's 60-foot-deep entrance pit. Cascade Caverns is three miles east of Boerne on U.S. Highway 87 and IH-10. Open daily. 512/755-8080.

CAMPBELL'S STARS AND STRIPES - A group of third grade students pose with the flag they assembled from soup cans.

Cave Without a Name received its ironic name in 1941 when James L. Horne, the original owner, held a cave-naming contest. A teenage contestant decided, "This cave is too pretty to name" and won a $500 prize. Among the cave's "pretty" formations are "bacon" (translucent, banded drapery) and a 25-foot-tall stalagmite called the "Christmas Tree." The cave is 11 miles northeast of Boerne off Farm Road 474. Open daily except Tuesday. 512/537-4212.

The Caverns of Sonora is "the most indescribably beautiful cavern in the world," according to Bill Stephenson, past-president of the National Speleological Society. He added, "It's beauty can't possibly be exaggerated... even by Texans." Almost every corridor is festooned with speleothems, including soda straws (thin, hollow stalactites), cave crystals, cave coral and helictites—wiry calcite crystals that defy gravity by growing at odd angles. The mile-and-a-half tour is the longest of any Texas show cave. Discovered in 1900, the cave was explored in the mid-50s and opened

News Wheels Keep Spinning

The "wheel" format for news was created on radio, but more and more it's spinning off to home satellite TV. The most recent station of this kind is All News Channel. Running regular reports on news, sports, weather and business on the half hour, the convenient, 24-hour cycle allows you to tune in any time and digest a complete newscast in 30 minutes, or just tune into a specific segment of interest.

All News Channel stops the "wheel" only when a major story occurs, replacing it with continuous coverage. The first station to give the wheel a roll on television was CNN with Headline News.

The Sports News Network is a 24-hour service that will debut by the first of February using the "wheel" pattern. And Movietime, the entertainment information network is also planning to convert to the "wheel."

News and information services that do not use the wheel format include CNN, Financial News Network (FNN) and Consumer News and Business Channel (CNBC).

Besides CNN's regularly scheduled newscasts throughout the day, you'll find shows such as Moneyline, Showbiz Today, Crossfire, Healthweek and This Week in Japan. Although FNN started as a channel for investors, it now airs programs for consumers including Business Tonight, IRS Tax Beat and Jimmy "The Greek's" Who Beat the Spread. And, CNBC has recently added a consumer protection series, Steals & Deals, to its lineup of shows including The Dick Cavett Show.

Superstations, networks and local affiliates can be helpful when you need news or weather from a specific region. But there are over 30 more channels that focus on news and information. If you're interested in the space program, NASA Select television feeds a weekly update show on Thursdays. If you want to check in on the U.S. House or Senate, flip to either of two C-Span channels. Regular sports news is always available through such programs as Hockey Week, Hoop it Up, Ed Randall's Talking Baseball, any of CNN's nine weekly recap shows and ESPN's nightly Sports Center.

The BBC runs one of the most respected news services on the planet. You can listen to the BBC World News Service on satellite radio, along with a dozen other audio news and information services such as KSN public radio news, KSKA Alaska public radio, CNN Radio Service, CKO news from Toronto, and FBN financial news.

There are two CBC Parliamentary Networks that allow you to sit in on the Canadian House of Commons (in English or French), and there's even a Canadian Weather Network—Weather Now.

For satellite industry news and programming information, tune to The Satellite Show (video) or the SBCA Information Network (audio).

If the real thing just isn't enough for you, check out the world premiere of HBO's original movie, The Image. Starring Albert Finney and Marsha Mason, it's a comedy/drama set in the world of network TV news (January 27, HBO).

Tony Imparato covers the television industry from Los Angeles. For specific times and satellite channels, please check your satellite listings.

Exercise care in landscape cleanup

Homeowners in Southwest Texas have already started cleaning up their landscapes after last month's freeze. They should exercise care in their cleanup operations, however, according to a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Obviously, damaged plants are unsightly and it's hard to resist the urge to do something to them," said Dr. Julian Sauls of Weslaco. "Unfortunately, it is usually more difficult and expensive to correct a mistake than to do it right the first time," he said.

Pruning prematurely may lead to having to do the job again when more wood dies, Sauls said.

With few exceptions, most woody plants should not be pruned until the extent of actual damage to the wood and bark can be determine, he said.

"Normally, the full damage won't be evident until spring, as apparently good wood will put out new growth in March, only to have much of that growth die back in April," he said.

Homeowners should delay major pruning of citrus, oleander, bougainvillea, avocado, viburnum and confederate jasmine and similar subtropical woody plants until at least April or May, Sauls said.

Succulent plants such as banana, papaya, aloe, lantana, firebush, climbing fig and poinsettias may be cut off near the ground level, as there is little doubt about those kinds of plants being killed to the ground, he said.

"The only sound advice is to cut what you must, but major pruning of woody plants should be put off until mid-spring," he said.

Ten free trees given to those who join the Arbor Day Foundation

Ten free trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during January, 1990.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

The ten trees are the Sugar Maple, White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, White Pine, Red Maple, Birch, American Redbud, Silver Maple, Red Oak and Colorado Blue Spruce.

"These trees were selected to provide benefits every season of the year: lovely spring flowers, cool summer shade, spectacular autumn colors, and winter berries and nesting sites for songbirds."

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to TEN TREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by January 31, 1990.

John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director, said.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between February 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

to the public in 1960. The cave is eight miles west of Sonora on IH-10. Open daily. 915/387-3105.

Inner Space Cavern is called a "maze cave" because of its complex, interconnected passages. Cave tours begin with the only cable car descent into a Texas cave. The cave is also unique in its wealth of skeletal remains of Ice Age mammals. The most recently commercialized cave in Texas, Inner Space was discovered in 1963 by road crews drilling for core samples. After extensive exploration, the cave was opened to the public in 1965. Located on IH-35 near Georgetown, the cave is open daily May through Labor Day and closed Monday and Tuesday from October through April and for two weeks before Christmas. 512/863-5545.

Longhorn Cavern, carved by an ancient subterranean river, is rich in legend and history. Comanche Indians visited the cave before the arrival of Anglo settlers. Texas Rangers and Comanches skirmished in what's now called the Indian Council Room. Confederate soldiers used the cave as a hideout and munitions dump. According to legend, the notorious outlaw Sam Bass hid a $2-million treasure in the cave. During the 1920s, locals turned a large room into a dance hall. The "rock music" died down well before 1932, when the cave became Longhorn Cavern State Park. The park is 11 miles southwest of Burnet on Park Road 4 off U.S. 281. Open daily except Christmas. 512/756-6976.

Natural Bridge Caverns is the "Carlsbad Caverns" of Texas. Formation names are a testament to the cavern's majesty: Castle of the White Giants, Sherwood Forest, Bomb Burst, Watch Tower, King's Throne and more. Spanning the entrance is a 60-foot natural bridge, the remains of a collapsed sinkhole. Although the bridge and entrance were known since the 19th century, the stunning portions of the caverns were discovered in 1960. Developed by the Heidemann family, the cave was opened for tours in 1964. The cave is located off IH-35 between New Braunfels and San Antonio. Open daily except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. 512/651-6101.

Wonder Cave, open to the public since 1903, is the oldest commercial cave in Texas. It's also the state's only "dry-formed" show cave. Unlike other active water-formed caverns, Wonder Cave is a fault-line cave and is part of the 700-mile-long Balcones Fault zone, a 60-million-year-old fracture in the earth's crust that extends from North Texas to Del Rio. A part of the Wonder World theme park in San Marcos, the cave is located off IH-35 in San Marcos. Open daily. 512/392-3760.

Jan. 11-21 — Boat & Recreation Show, Fort Worth. More than 600 boats, ranging in size from eight to 42 feet, will be represented by 40 of the leading marine dealers from all over Texas. Two thousand square feet of exhibits show off a large variety of fishing and boating accessories. Major gifts to be given away include a wave-jammer and a personal water craft. Discount coupons are available at marine dealers. For more details, contact the Fort Worth Convention Center, 1111 Houston, Fort Worth 76102 (817/332-9222).
