FEMININE FANCIES

By Kathleen Eiland

We've been interested in seeing the newest innovation in coasters for iced-drink glasses. These are rimmed metal ones containing a circle of sponge in the center of which is a tiny suction bowl to hold the coaster securely to the glass. The sponge and rim, of course, hold and absorb the water on the glass so that furniture and table cloths do not bear mute witness of the serving of liquid refreshments. This alone should endear the coasters to the housewife.

What with the thermometer flirting feverishly with the hundredmark, it's time for the triumphant entry of summertime bedspreads. We mean those dainty flounced, ruffled, or plain covers of dimity, swiss, or if you are very practical seersucker.

We can think of few things designed to look more lettuce-cool, as the copy writers would say, and withal more feminine than a ruffled spread in swiss in white, or pale pink or green, yellow or blue. Not to mention lavender or peach or half-a-dozen other shades. And ease of laundering is something not to be sneered at in summer.

Funny what a difference a name makes. We had supposed, in our culinary ignorance, that Viennese coffee was something elaborate. And now we discover it is simply the American variety plus a dab of unsweetened whipped cream.

One case in which elegance is really simplicity.

Naomis Hear Lesson on Alcohol in the Home

"Beverage Alcohol in the Home" was the subject of the lesson which Mrs. C. K. LaGue taught at the meeting of the Naomi class in Hotel Scharbauer Sunday morning.

Mrs. Cotter Hiett presented the lesson reading.

Devotional for the day was presented by Mrs. Carl Covington.

Twenty-one members were in attendance as well as one visitor, Mrs. Addison Wadley.

Miss Frances Farnham played the offertory.

Irish Star Averts Distortion of U. S. A. History

It took an Englishman to avert a glaring "movie boner" in a typically American motion picture.

The Englishman was Errol Flynn, Irish by birth but a citizen of the United Kingdom. The motion picture was "Dodge City," the Warner Bros. production in Technicolor opening today at the Yuca Theatre, which marks Flynn's debut as a western star.

Out near the tiny hamlet of Warnerville, Calif.—and the studio didn't name it that, either—the company was preparing to film a sequence depicting the driving of a golden spike symbolizing the extension of the Santa Fe Railway's tracks from Wichita to Dodge City, Kansas, way back in 1872.

The huts that comprised the Dodge City of the period, the railway water tank in the background and many foreground objects were decorated with bunting and American flags.

Flynn turned to Director Michael Curtiz just about the time filming was scheduled to start.

"If I know my American history," he commented, "those flags are all wrong."

"Wrong?" demanded Curtiz.

"Yes," Flynn explained. "I don't think there were forty-eight states in the United States in 1872. And those flags all have forty-eight stars."

Curtiz called his prop man, told him Flynn's observation and, while Curtiz filmed another scene, the prop man telephoned the public library in Modesto, the nearest city, for information. Sure enough, there were only 37 states in the union in 1872.

Having no substitutes, the prop man arranged the flags so the number of stars couldn't be counted and Curtiz returned to film his original scene.

Pennsylvania has more miles of railroad tracks underground than on the surface.
